“Protest of Confrontation after Committee Testimony—From Gary Green[,] commissioner from the Presbytery of Grand Canyon: ‘Following my testimony before committee 11 on the evening of Tues. June 24th, 2008, I was followed out of the committee conference room and confronted by a Mr. Glenn Dickson and verbally assaulted with charges of being a liar, but no specifics as to what he thought was a lie were mentioned. I believe that this needs to be brought to the attention of the Stated Clerk.’”

Gary Green was not a commissioner to the assembly.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Changes made by the 219th General Assembly (2010) to overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, communications, recommendations, and resolutions of General Assembly entities appear as text enclosed in brackets. Bracketed text that is underlined was added by the assembly to the original text; bracketed text that is stricken was original text deleted by the assembly. Bracketed text with a gray screen background indicates changes made by plenary.

This format serves to ensure a complete historic record of the actions of the General Assembly by noting both the original recommendation sent to the assembly and the revised text approved by the assembly.
Many of the reports of the General Assembly and the minutes can be found on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Web site. In the Fall of 2010, the Web site will be updated with four reports as approved by the assembly. These reports, can be found at the following address: http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications.htm

THE JOURNAL OF THE
219TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2010)

Saturday, July 3, 2010, 1:30 p.m.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was convened by Bruce Reyes-Chow, Moderator, 218th General Assembly (2008), in Hall B of the Minneapolis Convention Center, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Preceding the convening of the assembly, Alika Galloway, liturgist, and John Lee, song leader, led the assembly in an opening liturgy.

COMMISSIONING OF COMMISSIONERS AND ADVISORY DELEGATES

Moderator Reyes-Chow, Stated Clerk Parsons, Dennis Hughes (moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly), and John Wilkinson (moderator-elect of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly), led the assembly in a Service of Commissioning for Commissioners and Advisory Delegates, which included a litany of enrollment and commitment to faithful fulfillment of their service as commissioners and a charge to commissioners.

ENROLLMENT AND QUORUM

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Stated Clerk Parsons, who advised the Moderator that Standing Rule D.2. permits that the roll be established by registration. Stated Clerk Parsons recommended that the roll of the 219th General Assembly (2010) be established by the list of those who had registered or would register. Based on pre-registration with the General Assembly Meeting Service, there would be present at this assembly:

<table>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Missionary advisory delegates</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ecumenical advisory delegates</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>

The assembly approved that the roll of the 219th General Assembly (2010) be established by the list of those who had registered or would register. Stated Clerk Parsons then informed the Moderator that G-13.0105 of the Book of Order establishes that the “quorum of the General Assembly shall be one hundred commissioners, fifty of whom shall be elders and fifty of whom shall be ministers, representing presbyteries of at least one fourth of its synods.”

Moderator Reyes-Chow informed the assembly that at a later time, before taking any additional votes, a quorum of commissioners present at this assembly would be established by the use of the electronic voting system.

THE ROLL OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The roll of the General Assembly can be found on page 1409.

SEATING OF CORRESPONDING MEMBERS

Stated Clerk Parsons announced that in accordance with Standing Rule B.3., corresponding members are designated and present at the General Assembly. The list of corresponding members can be found on page 1417.

Moderator Reyes-Chow welcomed the corresponding members.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS

The report of the Committee on Local Arrangements (COLA) of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area was presented by Chaz Ruark, executive presbyter of the presbytery, and Sandra Hawley and Manley Olson, co-moderators of the local arrangements committee. Participating in the presentations were Donetta Wickstrom, Presbytery of Northern Waters, and Ralllah Madison, Presbytery of Minnesota Valley.

REPORT OF THE MODERATOR AND VICE-MODERATOR

Moderator Bruce Reyes-Chow called upon Vice-Moderator Byron Wade to assume the chair. Vice-Moderator Wade recognized the Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008), Bruce Reyes-Chow, who presented the report on the work of the Moderator during the last two years. At the conclusion of the report, Moderator Reyes-Chow assumed the chair. Vice-Moderator Byron Wade presented a report of the work of the Vice-Moderator over the last two years.
REPORT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY MISSION COUNCIL

Moderator Reyes-Chow called upon Carol Adcock, chair of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), who provided a report on the work of the GAMC. Linda Valentine, Executive Director of the GAMC, Roger Dermody, deputy executive director of the GAMC, and Curtis Kearns, executive administrator of the GAMC, participated in the report, including the presentation of videos.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY NOMINATING COMMITTEE

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized James Madson, moderator of the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), who described the process by which the GANC places names in nomination and the procedure for making nominations from the floor.

REPORT ON BUDGET CONSIDERATIONS

Moderator Reyes-Chow called upon Joey Bailey, deputy executive director of Mission Support Services, GAMC, who described the process to be used in identifying items with budget implications and how that process can inform decisions made during the assembly.

COMMISSIONER ORIENTATION

Moderator Reyes-Chow and Stated Clerk Parsons led the commissioners through a period of orientation.

COMMITTEE STRUCTURE FOR THE ASSEMBLY

Moderator Reyes-Chow called on Stated Clerk Parsons to recommend a committee structure for the assembly.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) voted to approve Item 00-02. [See p. 97.]

REPORT OF ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRAL

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Heath Rada, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Items 01-04 and 01-08. The assembly approved Items 01-10 and 01-11. The assembly approved Item 01-03 as amended by Items 01-10 and 01-11. The assembly approved Item 01-01.

The committee moved Item 01-02. The assembly removed the final response to referral “F. General Assembly Mission Council, Referral 57” (Redevelop Congregational Resource Materials, on the Subject of Reproductive Options) and then approved Item 01-02 as amended. The response to referral 57 was referred to the Assembly Committee on Health Issues and became Item 19-07.

Aleida Jernigan, vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, presented the remainder of the committee’s report.

The assembly approved Items 01-05, 01-06, and 01-09. Jernigan announced that Item 01-07 was under appeal and would be considered by the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures. [The committee decided, with comment, not to refer Item 01-07.]

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. A summary of the report is as follows:

ELECTION OF THE MODERATOR

Moderator Reyes-Chow called for the election of the Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as required by Book of Order, G-9.0200, and Standing Rule H.

Dennis Hughes, moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, reported on moderatorial candidate expenses. Hughes noted that the expenses comported with the standing rules.

The Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons described the procedure for the election.

Moderator Reyes-Chow announced that six candidates had declared their intention to stand for election. There were no additional nominations from the floor. The most recent past Moderator present, Rick Ufford-Chase, Moderator, 216th General Assembly (2004), met with the candidates backstage and led them in prayer.

Six candidates were placed in nomination: Julia Leeth, Presbytery of Santa Barbara, who was nominated by Hector Reynoso, Presbytery of Mission; Jin S. Kim, Presbytery of the Twin Cities, who was nominated by Rosy Latimore, Presbytery of Detroit; James A. Belle, Presbytery of Philadelphia, who was nominated by John Sweet, Presbytery of Philadelphia; Cynthia Bolbach, Presbytery of National Capital, who was nominated by Danny Murphy, Presbytery of Trinity; Eric G. Nielsen, Presbytery of Northern Waters, who was nominated by Marilyn S. Gamm, Presbytery of The John Knox; and Maggie Palmer Lauterer, Presbytery of Western North Carolina, who was nominated by Heath Rada, Presbytery of Western North Carolina.

Following nominating speeches, each candidate was afforded an opportunity to address the General Assembly for five minutes. Vice-Moderator Byron Wade led the General Assembly in prayer. Stated Clerk Parsons explained the use of the speaker-recognition system. The candidates then responded to questions from the floor. At the expiration of the time allotted for this process, the candidates were escorted from the hall by former Moderator Ufford-Chase. Stated Clerk Parsons explained the electronic voting procedures.

Cynthia Bolbach was elected Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) on the fourth ballot, receiving a total of 325 votes. Of the total votes cast Julia Leeth received 148, James A. Belle received 51, Maggie Palmer Lauterer received 49, Eric G. Nielsen received 37, and Jin S. Kim received 25.

Moderator Reyes-Chow declared that Cynthia Bolbach was duly elected to the office of Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010).

After being escorted back into the hall by former Moderator Ufford-Chase, Moderator-elect Bolbach was accompanied to the platform by family members and friends.

INSTALLATION OF NEWLY ELECTED MODERATOR

Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons and retiring Moderator Bruce Reyes-Chow installed Cynthia Bolbach to the office of Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010). Retiring Moderator Reyes-Chow presented Moderator Bolbach with the moderatorial stole, and with the Celtic crosses that have been worn by all Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Moderators since 1983.

Charlotte Lohrenz led the assembly in prayer for the Moderator.

Moderator Bolbach addressed the assembly briefly.

PRESENTATIONS TO RETIRING MODERATOR AND VICE-MODERATOR

Moderator Bolbach recognized Stated Clerk Parsons for a special presentation. Stated Clerk Parsons presented retiring Moderator Bruce Reyes-Chow with a replica of the Celtic crosses that have been worn by all Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
Moderators since 1983. Stated Clerk Parsons also presented ties to retiring Moderator Reyes-Chow and retiring Vice-Moderator Wade.

That the recommendation is disapproved. (See p. 1193.)

That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 1209.)

Item 16-12. Report of the Special Committee on the Belhar Confession
That the recommendation is approved with amendment. (See p. 1213.)
Amend the recommendation with the addition of the following two paragraphs: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[Scripture references should be added by footnotes, using those references found in earlier versions of the Belhar Confession published by the Uniting Reformed Church in Southern Africa. The “Accompanying Letter” customarily included with the Belhar Confession should be printed in The Book of Confessions as a background document without confessional status.]

“[To direct the General Assembly Mission Council and its Office of Theology and Worship to create a fully inclusive language version of the Belhar Confession for the Web similar to the inclusive language version of The Confession of 1967.]”

Item 16-01. On Commending Confessions that Uphold the Oneness of All Believers, and Discontinuing Efforts to Include the Belhar Confession in The Book of Confessions.

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 16-12. (See p. 1189.)

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Heath Rada, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

Rada moved that the docket for this session be amended to include the report of the Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees since the assembly was running ahead of schedule. The assembly approved the docket as revised.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Kenneth Godshall, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees, for a report from the committee.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Review of GA Permanent Committees. A summary of the report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees

I. For Plenary Action

Report 1: Report on Review of the Committee on Theological Education (COTE).

That the recommendations below are approved. [See self-study on p. 1251.]

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees:

1. Commends the Committee on Theological Education (COTE) for its work, accomplishments, and insights gained in providing a self-study. The Review Committee was impressed with COTE’s discussions, openness, and willingness to listen to ideas and questions, and was also impressed with COTE’s high attendance at review meetings.

2. Urges COTE to continue the important conversation begun in the Raising Leaders document, particularly in the areas of exploring the changing leadership needs of the Presbyterian churches.

3. Encourages COTE to further explore issues involving commissioned lay pastor formation and relations between theological schools and middle governing bodies partnerships.
4. Commends the recent reorientation of the agenda of COTE toward various emerging themes important to the life of the church and theological education as constructive and adaptive to the rapidly changing nature of the world, church, and theological institutions.

5. Encourages COTE to find ways to address issues associated with theological education by and for Presbyterians beyond the Presbyterian seminaries and covenant partners. These issues may include evaluating the educational and formational quality of programs enrolling Presbyterian students. They may also involve opportunities for appropriate ecumenical collaboration.

6. Encourages COTE to continue to explore opportunities to develop additional funding, particularly in support of students and reducing the indebtedness of beginning clergy.

7. Encourages COTE to explore current trends as to where Presbyterian pastors are receiving theological education.

8. Recommends that the following report of the Review of the Committee on Theological Education be approved.

   Report of the Review of the Committee on Theological Education

   Introduction: The review of General Assembly permanent committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.

   Mission: Established in 1986, the Committee on Theological Education has the responsibility for developing and maintaining a comprehensive plan for theological education from the perspective of the whole church. The committee serves as an advocate for theological education, seeking to support seminaries and strengthen them for their mission in the world.

   Membership: Voting members of the committee include thirteen ministers and elders elected to represent the church at large, two of which are liaisons from the General Assembly Mission Council, and a representative, usually the president, from each of the ten seminaries related directly to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Corresponding members include representatives from Auburn Theological Seminary and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico; a representative of the Omaha Seminary Foundation, and representatives of two non-Presbyterian seminaries invited by the committee. The COTE is staffed by the Office of Theological Education in the Theology Worship and Education ministry area of the General Assembly Mission Council.

   Process: The Committee on Theological Education provided a self-study based on their work for the years 2003–2009. The General Assembly Committee to Review Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and interviewed the COTE staff and Self-Study Task Force.

   Findings:

   A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

   1. Does COTE as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does COTE exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC (USA)?

   Based on COTE’s self-study and report, COTE appears to be doing even better now than in the past and exhibits faithfulness to doing even better in the future. The COTE shows increasing faithfulness to their mandate even with strained resources.

   2. Do the basic processes of COTE demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does COTE exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which COTE acts?

   The COTE’s basic operational process demonstrates fidelity to mission and accountability. The COTE has gone “above and beyond” in their accomplishment of their assigned mission. The review committee members were encouraged by the listening approach that the representatives from COTE used. They demonstrated the importance of “raising leaders,” and we encourage that continuation. We appreciate COTE’s many collaborations with ecumenical entities outside of the PC(USA).

   3. Does COTE exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

   The COTE collaborates well with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, General Assembly Mission Council, Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examination of Candidates, Committee on the Office of General Assembly, Presbyterian Tentmakers, Urban Theological Educators Roundtable, Worldwide Ministries, and the National Hispanic Caucus.

4. Does the COTE provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Based on the information we have received, COTE has been fully accountable to assembly requests.

B. Effectiveness of Services

1. Does COTE have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

The COTE has become more collaborative and imaginative, rather than merely responsive in its process. The COTE’s manual of operations and other policies and procedures are a good example of this consistency.

2. Does COTE have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. COTE self-evaluates every year, and the high number of seminary presidents who attended the committee meeting and were engaged and genuinely interested in the review committee’s thoughts was impressive. The COTE is self-reflective.

3. Does COTE employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

The COTE needs to reach the congregations about financial support and the Theological Education Fund (TEF). The review committee would like COTE to continue to pursue support all the way to the individual congregational level every year through any means possible.

4. Does COTE utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

The COTE is increasing the use of digital media to more effectively communicate with congregations. The COTE should continue to explore and use effectively new media. The electronic newsletter is growing in subscriptions and there is increasing interest in COTE’s blog and other social network (e.g. Facebook). We commend COTE’s actions in making thank-you phone calls to TEF donors.

5. Does COTE have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before, and the context of the PC(USA)?

Yes, a collaborative plan is in place that is being guided by forthcoming recommendations from the following projects: Joint Committee on Leadership Needs; a continuing Self-Study Task Force charge to clarify the mission and role of COTE, advise the committee on possible adjustments to the membership and structure of COTE, possible recommendations on stated meeting norms, and new ways to better coordinate seminary resources; a review of the Theological Education Fund; and research conclusions by PC(USA) Research Services and an independent firm contracted by COTE that are each currently conducting research with key constituents.

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees:

1. Commends the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) for its work, accomplishments, and insights gained in providing a self-study. Affirms the GANC for creative thinking, a superior presentation, and its efforts to present the information through a variety of imaginative and experiential learning modes.

2. Shares the concerns expressed in the self study concerning increasing age diversity among nominees, particularly among younger Presbyterians. The Review Committee encourages the GANC to continue its efforts to recruit nominees from the younger cohorts and to explore recruiting opportunities in campus ministries, Presbyterian colleges, and seminaries.

3. Recommends that the GANC include clerks of session and presbytery nominating committees in its communications in order to expand the pool of potential nominees and to increase awareness of service opportunities at the national level.

4. Urges General Assembly entities to consider re-nominations as the exception, rather than the rule and applied only to those members whose continued service is clearly beneficial to on-going or projected work in order to assist the GANC in making its careful nominations.
5. Recommends that the GANC engage the entities it serves in seeking creative and flexible opportunities for Presbyterians to participate in their work beyond the confines of current set terms and work patterns.

6. Recommends that the following report of Review of the General Assembly Nominating Committee be approved.

Report of Review of the General Assembly Nominating Committee

Introduction: The review of General Assembly permanent committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission: The mission of the General Assembly Nominating Committee is to propose nominees to such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate. The GANC’s singular and essential task is to assist the General Assembly in discerning God’s call for particular individuals to serve the church in special ways. The GANC understands through its process of careful nomination and election that it assists the organization and structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to live more faithfully as the Body of Christ.

Membership: The GANC has sixteen members nominated by the Moderator and elected by the General Assembly. One member resides in each of the sixteen synods. They serve six-year terms. The Office of the General Assembly staffs the committee.

Process: The GA Nominating Committee provided a self-study based on their work for the past five years. The General Assembly Committee to Review Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and interviewed the self-study committee of GANC.

Findings:

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the GANC, as it was created by the church, serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the GANC exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

Yes. The GANC does its work faithfully and carefully, seeking to represent the breadth of diversity of the PC(USA).

2. Do the basic processes of the GANC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the GANC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the GANC acts?

Yes. The GANC study shows an awareness of the opportunities and challenges of discerning men and women who are called to service among General Assembly bodies.

3. Does the GANC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

Yes. The committee works closely with the various General Assembly entities and was affirmed in the study and in our meetings.

4. Does the GANC provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Yes.

B. Effectiveness of Service

1. Does the GANC have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The GANC creatively led the committee through an exercise describing the breadth, depth, challenges, and opportunities in the committee’s work, including insight into the complex process of providing nominees for service on General Assembly boards, agencies, and committees.

2. Does the GANC have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes, there is on-going evaluation of GANC nominating processes.

3. Does the GANC employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Yes. The GANC has increased its communication to middle governing bodies and the committee encourages the GANC to continue to improve communication across all levels of the church.
4. Does the GANC utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes. The GANC uses a variety of emerging technological tools including Web pages, texting, Twitter, and more.

5. Does the GANC have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA).

Based on its report, the GANC is deeply aware of its mandate and the challenges and opportunities in recruiting and nominating servant leaders for the denomination.

That the recommendations below are approved. [See self-study on p. 1244.]

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees:

1. Commends the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) for its work, accomplishments, and insights gained in providing a self-study, including the following:

   a. affirming the clear focus of identity and mission in the Reformed tradition and the way it continues to faithfully articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity, while promoting awareness of the unity of the Church catholic;

   b. maintaining positive relationships with other denominations and continuing to seek new ways of building relationships;

   c. remaining true to our history and our calling to live out the biblical and confessional requirements for unity and reconciliation;

   d. having a clear awareness of our changing social context both nationally and globally;

   e. affirming the formation of new partnerships with faith based and secular ministries of compassion and justice;

   f. evidences an awareness of the new context for ministry in terms of immigrant churches and changing demographics;

   g. working collaboratively within the context of General Assembly entities;

   h. being mindful of the funding conditions that currently prevail and is working cooperatively with other General Assembly agencies in sharing what needs to be done to fulfill their collective ecumenical commitments, and

   i. being recognized as leaders in ecumenism by other denominations and councils.

2. Encourages GACER to live constructively with the tension between the academic and the practical in matters pertaining to ecumenical relationships.

3. Encourages an increased programmatic focus, within budgetary constraints.

4. Encourages strengthening ecumenical reception at the local level, within budgetary constraints.

5. Encourages the on-going dialogue between GACER, Office of the General Assembly (OGA), and General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) toward clarifying the work of ecumenical and interreligious relationships as well as strengthening the relationships between these General Assembly entities in the most cost-efficient way possible.

6. Encourages GACER to work to increase an understanding of the difference between ecumenical relationships (Christian to Christian) and interreligious (Christian to other religions) throughout the PC(USA) and within budget constraints.

7. That the following report of the Review of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations be approved.

Report of the Review of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations

Introduction: The review of General Assembly permanent committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.
Mission: The mission of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) is to lift up ecumenical involvement and work as central to the gospel and key to the life of the church. We encourage the church to remain open to the working of God’s Spirit among people of other religious traditions in their individual and corporate lives. The GACER connects the ecumenical efforts of all governing body levels of the church and provides a common point for all ecumenical efforts with those beyond our church.

Membership: The committee is composed of sixteen members elected by the General Assembly, ecumenical members, the Stated Clerk, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council, and other ex officio members.

Process: The GACER provided a self-study based on their work for the past ten years. The General Assembly Committee to Review Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and interviewed the executive committee of the GACER.

Findings:

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the GACER as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the GACER exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

   Yes, GACER serves and supports the PC(USA)’s mission in the area of ecumenism and is faithful to its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

2. Do the basic processes of the GACER demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the GACER exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the GACER acts?

   Yes, GACER has provided leadership and guidance to the General Assembly and its agencies on new opportunities to strengthen the relationships with other faith communities. Yes, GACER is held accountable through regular annual and regular reports to GAMC, which also reviews its minutes. Further GACER submits a biannual agency summary to the General Assembly.

3. Does the GACER exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

   Yes, GACER cooperates and collaborates with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), and other agencies of the General Assembly.

4. Does the GACER provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

   Yes.

B. Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the GACER have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

   Yes.

2. Does the GACER have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

   Yes.

3. Does the GACER employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

   Yes, to an extent, but the committee encourages GACER to work on creative ways to communicate up to the local congregations.

4. Does the GACER utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

   Yes, GACER is continuing to use and explore emerging technologies through the use of its website and staff blog, and is exploring emerging technologies.

5. Does the GACER have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before, and context of, the PC(USA)?

   Yes, GACER has developed numerous dialogues, initiatives, and relationships that conform to its historic mandate and emerging issues.

That the recommendations below are approved. [See self-study on p. 1221.]

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees:

1. Commends the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) for its work, accomplishments, and insights gained in providing a self-study.

2. Affirms that the church’s social witness is an essential part of the church’s identity and that ACSWP plays a key role in equipping us to engage in that social witness.

3. Affirms the effort to strengthen the relationship between ACSWP and General Assembly Mission Council.

4. Recommends training for ACSWP’s committee members and staff as they work with the public and the media to ensure appropriate and accurate communications.

5. Recommends that ACSWP work with Office of Communication of the General Assembly Mission Council to improve communication with the whole church, especially younger people, utilizing emerging technological tools.

6. Although we recognize that it is not the mandate of ACSWP to disseminate information, we recommend that ACSWP work with Research Services to better understand why certain members of the church have a better understanding of ACSWP’s work and use that as a basis for better communication with congregational leaders.

7. Recommends that the following report of Review of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy be approved.

Report of Review of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy

Introduction: The review of General Assembly permanent committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission: The mission of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) is to develop, interpret, and monitor policies that encourage and challenge the church and society to reflect and act in faithful response to God’s call to do justice. The ACSWP serves the leadership of the General Assembly and General Assembly Mission Council by providing carefully reasoned arguments and forceful theological justifications for the church’s response to critical social issues. The ACSWP’s focus on policy development rather than program implementation differentiates it from other ministry areas and brings greater interaction with the Office of General Assembly.

Membership: Twelve members are elected by the General Assembly commissioners upon nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee or from the floor. Three are already elected members of the General Assembly Mission Council, so there is an intentional overlap for strong coordination and communication with the church’s central direction-setting body. In addition to the customary diversity considerations, members are chosen for areas of expertise including social ethics, international affairs, economics/business, science/medicine, law, and biblical studies; usually several members have served or are serving in the pastorate.

Process: The ACSWP provided a self-study based on their work for the past six years. The General Assembly Committee to Review Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and interviewed the executive staff of ACSWP.

Findings:

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the ACSWP as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the ACSWP exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

   Yes. They were able to do this with reduced staff and funding.

2. Do the basic processes of the ACSWP demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the ACSWP exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the ACSWP acts?

   Yes. The ACSWP provides advice and guidance on social issues after consulting many perspectives. They have exhibited leadership on issues impacting the church. Not only have they responded to the requests made of them, they have initiated six resolutions, study papers, and social involvement reports.
3. Does the ACSWP exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

For the most part they have done this. We were impressed with the advice and counsel memos generated. The ACREC (Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns) and ACWC (Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns) gave them high marks. However, in a recent example it might have been beneficial if ACSWP had sought input from an organization related to the work that ACSWP was doing. This would have been beneficial to both groups.

4. Does the ACSWP provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

The ACSWP has responded in a timely manner given the complexity of the subjects and the budget and staff constraints.

B. Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the ACSWP have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. They have a six-step process to complete the work.

2. Does the ACSWP have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. The ACSWP provides a regular update to all General Assemblies. Following each assembly the committee conducts a thorough two-year self-review. They also bring to the General Assembly the minutes of all the meetings that took place during the preceding two years. There is a Review of GA Permanent Committees every six years.

3. Does the ACSWP employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

While it is not in their mandate to disseminate the reports they are asked to create, they do a commendable job of sharing their work with other entities.

4. Does the ACSWP utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes. The ACSWP uses emerging technologies such as a website and multimedia. They have 4,000 members on their e-list who receive regular updates.

5. Does the ACSWP have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA)?

Yes. Although it is difficult to plan for emerging issues, ACSWP has a vision and a process in place that allows them to respond when a need arises.

II. Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Stated Clerk Parsons reminded the assembly that this was the last day that the General Assembly Exhibit Hall would be open.

Moderator Bolbach recognized the Reverend David Baak of the Reformed Church in America, who led the assembly in prayer. The assembly recessed at 5:35 p.m. to reconvene at 7:30 p.m.
The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened by Cynthia Bolbach, Moderator, 219th General Assembly (2010), in Hall B of the Minneapolis Convention Center, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Roy Howard, minister commissioner from the Presbytery of National Capital, led the assembly in the convening prayer.

EUCUMENICAL GREETING

SPEAK-OUT

Commissioners, advisory delegates, and corresponding members were given an opportunity to speak out on issues outside the deliberative mode of the assembly for fifteen minutes, with one-minute limits on individual speeches. Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons instructed the assembly on the procedure to be followed during the time allotted for the speak-out. Moderator Bolbach then recognized persons, who spoke on various concerns.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Aleida Jernigan, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, who recommended an amendment to the docket. The assembly amended the docket to proceed to consider the report from the Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations immediately following the report of the Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revision.

“GROWING THE CHURCH DEEP AND WIDE” VIDEO

Moderator Bolbach recognized Carol Adcock, moderator of the General Assembly Mission Council, to introduce the Growing the Church Deep and Wide video.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON MISSION COORDINATION

Moderator Bolbach recognized Julia Henderson, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination, for a report from the committee. The assembly approved Item 09-10. The report of the committee was arrested. [For the rest of the report, see pp. 71, 80.]

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON FORM OF GOVERNMENT REVISION

Vice Moderator Landon Whitsitt assumed the chair. Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Tim Beal, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revision, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Item 07-01 with amendment and answered Items 07-02, 07-03, 07-04, 07-06, 07-07, 07-09, 07-10, and 07-12 with its action on Item 07-01. The assembly disapproved Item 07-05. In response to Item 07-11, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. [Note: There was no Item 07-08.]

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revision and the committee report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revision

[Items with financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

Item 07-01. Recommendation 1, Form of Government Revision

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 485.]

1. Amend Footnote 1 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

   “Throughout this document and the Form of Government, the capitalized term ‘Church’ refers to the Church Universal, the Church as it is called to be in Christ; [the lower-case term “church” refers to denominations,] except as part of a title (i.e. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)). [In place of the vernacular use of “church” to denote a congregation of believers, the term “congregation” is used.]”
2. Amend the third paragraph of “F-1.0404 Openness” as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘a new openness in its own membership, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions, made one in Christ by the power of the Spirit, as a visible sign of the new humanity;”

3. Amend G-1.0102 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presupposes the fellowship of women[,] [and] men[,] [with] their [and] children united in covenant relationship with one another and with God [through Jesus Christ]. The organization rests on the fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.”

4. Amend the fourth paragraph of G-1.0201 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘[They shall be] At its sole discretion the presbytery may then declare[ed] them an organized congregation of the presbytery[,] [and] The congregation shall [then] proceed to the election of ruling elders and, if they so decide, deacons. The presbytery shall prepare, examine, ordain, and install these newly elected persons. Presbytery shall continue to work closely with the congregation in securing pastoral leadership, in plans for the service and witness of the congregation, in coordinating its work with other congregations, in counseling concerning incorporation and bylaws for the congregation conforming to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and in giving other forms of support and encouragement that will strengthen the mission of the congregation in the larger life of the denomination.”

5. Amend G-1.0303c as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The installed pastor shall ordinarily moderate all meetings of the congregation. If it is impractical for the pastor to preside, he or she shall invite another teaching elder who is a member of the presbytery or a person authorized by the presbytery to serve as moderator. If there is no installed pastor, or the installed pastor is unable to moderate and/or to name another moderator, the presbytery shall make provision for a moderator.”

“It is necessary to the integrity and health of the church that the persons who serve it in ordered ministries shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in this Constitution. So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained. It is to be recognized, however, that in entering the ordered ministries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek, or serve in, ordered ministry. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the council in which he or she is a member.[12]

“[12. Very early in the history of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, even before the General Assembly was established, the plan of reunion of the Synod of New York and Philadelphia contained the following sentences: ‘That when any matter is determined by a majority vote, every member shall either actively concur with or passively submit to such determination; or if his conscience permit him to do neither, he shall, after sufficient liberty modestly to reason and remonstrate, peaceable withdraw from our communion without attempting to make any schism. Provided always that this shall be understood to extend only to such determination as the body shall judge indispensable in doctrine or Presbyterian government.’ (Hist. Dig. (P) p. 1310.) (Plan of Union of 1758, par. II)”

“Ruling elders and deacons are men and women elected by the congregation from among its members. The nomination and election of ruling elders and deacons shall express the rich diversity of the congregation’s membership and shall guarantee participation and inclusiveness (F-1.0403). Ruling elders and deacons shall be nominated by a committee elected by the congregation, drawn from and representative of its membership. Congregations may provide by their own rule for a congregational nominating committee, provided that the committee shall consist of at least three active members of the congregation, and shall include at least one ruling elder who is currently serving on the session. The pastor shall serve ex officio and without vote. When no other provision is made, this committee shall include at least one ruling elder who is currently serving on the session, and the pastor shall serve ex officio without vote. When elections are held, full opportunity shall always be given to the congregation for nomination from the floor of the congregational meeting by any active member of the congregation. A majority of all the active members present and voting shall be required to elect.”

9. Amend G-2.0501 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“Teaching elders (also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament) shall in all things be committed to teaching the faith and equipping the saints for the work of ministry (Eph. 4:12). They may serve in a variety of ministries, as authorized by the presbytery. When they serve as preachers and teachers of the Word, they shall [rightly explain the Word of truth] (2 Tim. 2:15) and shall [preach and] teach the faith of the church, so that the people are shaped by the pattern of the gospel and strengthened for witness and service. When they serve at font and table, they shall interpret the mysteries of grace and lift the people’s vision toward the hope of God’s new creation. When they serve as pastors, they shall support the people in the disciplines of the faith amid the struggles of daily life. When they serve as presbyters, they shall participate in the responsibilities of governance, seeking always to discern the mind of Christ and to build up Christ’s body through devotion, debate, and decision.”

10. Amend G-2.0504a as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The installed pastoral relationships are pastor, co-pastor, and associate pastor. A teaching elder may be installed in a pastoral relationship for an indefinite period or for a designated term determined by the presbytery in consultation with the congregation and specified in the call. When a congregation determines that its strategy for mission under the Word so requires, the congregation may call additional pastors. Such additional pastors shall be called co-pastors or associate pastors, and the duties of each pastor and the relationship between the pastors of the congregation shall be determined by the session with the approval of the presbytery. When a congregation has two pastors serving as co-pastors, the relationship of one of them is dissolved, the other remains as pastor. The relationship of an associate pastor to a congregation is not dependent upon that of a pastor. An associate pastor is ordinarily not eligible to be the next installed pastor of that congregation.”

11. Amend the second paragraph of G-2.0504b as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“Titles and terms of service for temporary relationships shall be determined by the presbytery. A person serving in a temporary pastoral relationship is invited for a specified period not to exceed twelve months in length, which is renewable with the approval of the presbytery. A teaching elder employed in a temporary pastoral relationship is ordinarily not eligible to serve as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor.”

12. Amend G-2.0703 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The order for that service [of worship] [found] in the Directory for Worship [(W-4.4000)] shall be followed.”

13. Amend G-2.0803–.0806 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“According to the process of the presbytery and prior to making its report to the congregation, the pastor nominating committee shall [obtain approval] [receive and consider the presbytery’s counsel] on the merits, suitability, and availability of those considered for the call. When the way is clear for the committee to report to the congregation, the committee shall notify the session, which shall call a congregational meeting.”
2.0804 Dissent

On the election of a pastor, if it appears that a substantial minority of the voters are averse to the nominee who has received a majority of the votes and that they cannot be persuaded to concur in the call, the moderator may recommend to the majority that they not prosecute the call. If the congregation is nearly unanimous, or if the majority insist upon their right to call a pastor, the moderator shall forward the call to the presbytery, certifying the results of the vote and any other facts of importance. The moderator shall also inform the person being called of the nature and circumstances of the decision.

2.0805 Terms of Call

2.0806 Installation Service

When the congregation, the presbytery, and the teaching elder (or candidate) have all concurred in a call to a permanent or designated pastoral position, the presbytery shall complete the call process by organizing and conducting a service of installation. Installation is an act of the presbytery establishing the pastoral relationship. A service of installation occurs in the context of worship. The service of worship [outline found] in the Directory for Worship, [W-4.4000] shall be followed.

14. Amend G-2.0901 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

‘An installed pastoral relationship may be dissolved only by the presbytery. Whether the teaching elder, the congregation, or the presbytery initiates proceedings for dissolution of the relationship, there shall always be a meeting of the congregation to consider the matter and to consent, or decline to consent, to dissolution, unless the presbytery expressly finds that the church’s mission under the Word imperatively demands dissolution of the relationship without such a meeting.’

15. Amend G-2.0905 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

‘After the dissolution of the pastoral relationship, former pastors and associate pastors shall not offer their pastoral services to members of their former congregations without the invitation of the moderator of session.’

16. Amend the title, G-2.10, as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

‘G-2.10 COMMISSIONING RULING ELDERS TO LIMIT PASTORAL SERVICE’

‘A ruling elder who seeks to serve under the terms of G-2.1001 shall receive such preparation and instruction as determined by the presbytery to be appropriate to the particular commission. The ruling elder shall be examined by the presbytery as to personal faith, motives for seeking the commission, and the areas of instruction mentioned previously [determined by presbytery]. A ruling elder who has been commissioned and later ceases to serve in the specified ministry may continue to be listed as available to serve, but is not authorized to perform the functions specified in G-2.1001 until commissioned again to a congregation or ministry by the presbytery.’

18. Amend Paragraph 2 of G-3.0103 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

‘Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation. Councils above the session shall establish by their own rule committees or entities committees on representation to fulfill the following functions: to advise the council regarding the implementation of principles of unity and diversity, to advocate for diversity in leadership, and to consult with the council on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of unity and diversity in F-1.0403. [A committee on representation should not be merged with another committee or made a subcommittee of another committee.]’
19. Amend the sixth paragraph of G-3.0106 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘The funding of mission similarly demonstrates the unity and interdependence of the church. The failure of any part of the church to participate in the stewardship of the mission of the whole church diminishes that unity and interdependence. All mission funding should enable the church to give effective witness in the world to God’s new creation in Jesus Christ, and should strengthen the church’s witness to the mission of God.

“‘Each council above the session shall prepare a budget for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular congregations within its bounds. Presbyteries are responsible for raising their own funds and for raising and timely transmission of [per capita] funds to their respective synods and the General Assembly. Presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to sessions within their bounds, but in no case shall the authority of the session to direct its benevolences be compromised’.”

20. Amend the second paragraph of G-3.0109 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘A committee shall study and recommend action or carry out decisions already made by a council. It shall make a full report to the council that created it, and its recommendations shall require action by that body. Committees of councils higher than the session shall consist of both teaching elders and members of congregations, [in approximately equal proportion] [with at least one half being members of the congregation].’”

21. Amend the second, third, and fourth paragraph of G-3.0109b(6) as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘[Commissions] A commission of presbytery, synod, or General Assembly shall be composed of ruling elders and teaching elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible and sufficient to accomplish their work. A quorum of any commission shall be established by the designating council but in no case shall be less than a majority of its members (except as limited by D-5.0204).

“‘[Commissions] A commission of a session shall be composed of at least two ruling elders, and a teaching elder in an installed or temporary relationship with the congregation governed by that session or a ruling elder commissioned to pastoral service.

“‘[The] A commission shall keep a full record of its proceedings and shall submit that record to the council for incorporation into its records. Actions of a commission shall be regarded as actions of the council that created it. A commission may be assigned additional duties as a committee, which duties shall be reported and handled as the report of a committee.’”

22. Amend the first paragraph of G-3.0201 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘The session is the council for the congregation. It shall be composed of those persons elected by the congregation to active service as ruling elders, together with all installed pastors and associate pastors. All members of the session are entitled to vote. The pastor shall be the moderator of the session, and the session shall not meet without the pastor or designated moderator. If there is no installed pastor, or if the installed pastor is unable to invite another moderator, the presbytery shall make provisions for a moderator.] Presbyteries shall provide by rule for moderators when the session is without a moderator for reasons of vacancy or inconvenience.”

23. Amend G-3.0202f as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘f.send to presbytery and General Assembly requested [financial contributions,] statistics[,] and other information according to the requirements of those bodies[,] as well as voluntary financial contributions.”’

24. Amend G-3.0203 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“‘The session shall hold stated meetings at least quarterly. The moderator shall call a special meeting when he or she deems necessary or when requested in writing by any two members of the session. [The business to be transacted at special meetings shall be limited to items specifically listed in the call for the meeting.] There shall be reasonable notice given of all special meetings. The session shall also meet when directed by presbytery. Sessions shall provide by rule for a quorum for meetings; such quorum shall include the moderator and either a specific number of ruling elders or a specific percentage of those ruling elders in current service on the session.”

“'There shall be rolls of baptized, active, and affiliate members in accordance with G-1.0401, G 1.0402, and G-1.0403. The session [may] [shall] delete names from the roll of the congregation [when requested to issue a certificate of transfer of membership to another congregation; when a member requests that his or her membership be terminated; when a member joins another congregation or otherwise renounces the jurisdiction of the session; when a member has moved or otherwise ceased to participate in the ministry of Christ's Church as defined in G-1.0304 for a period of not less than two years and after efforts on the part of the session to encourage the member to return to meaningful participation have failed, and after provision of written notice; or when a member dies.] [upon the member's death, admission to membership in another congregation or presbytery, or renunciation of jurisdiction. The session may delete names from the roll of the congregation when a member so requests, or has moved or otherwise ceased to participate actively in the work and worship of the congregation for a period of two years. The session shall seek to restore members to active participation and shall provide written notice before deleting names due to member inactivity.”]

26. Amend the first paragraph of G-3.0301 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“'The presbytery is the council serving as a corporate expression of the church within a certain district and is composed of all the congregations and teaching elders within that district. [Teaching elders and ruling elders should be present in numbers as equal as possible.] The presbytery shall adopt and communicate to the sessions a plan for determining how many ruling elders each session should elect as commissioners to presbytery, with a goal of numerical parity of teaching elders and ruling elders]. This plan shall require each session to elect at least one commissioner and shall take into consideration the size of congregations as well as a method to fulfill the principles of participation and representation found in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. Ruling elders elected as officers of the presbytery shall be enrolled as members during the period of their service. A presbytery may provide by its own rule for the enrollment of ruling elders serving as moderators of committees or commissions.”

27. Amend G-3.0301a as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“'a. provide that the Word of God may be truly preached and heard. This responsibility shall include organizing, receiving, [and merging], dismissing, and dissolving] congregations in consultation with their members; overseeing congregations without pastors; establishing pastoral relationships and dissolving them; guiding the preparation of those preparing to become teaching elders; establishing and maintaining those ecumenical relationships that will enlarge the life and mission of the church in its district; providing encouragement, guidance, and resources to congregations in the areas of mission, prophetic witness, leadership development, worship, evangelism, and responsible administration to the end that the church’s witness to the love and grace of God may be heard in the world.”

28. Amend the title, G-6.02, as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“G-6.02 INTERPRETING THE CONSTITUTION [THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE CONSTITUTION]”

29. Amend the third paragraph of G-6.02 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall communicate its report and recommendations to the next session of the General Assembly, no less than sixty days prior to the General Assembly.”

30. Amend G-6.04b as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“'b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposals to amend the Book of Order to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-6.02), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). [At least sixty days prior to the meeting of the General Assembly] [P][the advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendations from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 524.]

1. Amend the “Policies and Procedures Guide for the Work of the Session” by adding a new row nine as follows (to follow the eighth row containing “G-1.05”): [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

In response to Item 07-11, the 219th General Assembly (2010) approved the following resolution: [See p. 566.]

“The Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revision recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) empower the Moderator to appoint a Special Committee on Existing Authoritative Interpretations of the Book of Order. The special committee shall be composed of six members recommended by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC), and the Office of the General Assembly, and charged to make recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012) concerning the status of specific existing authoritative interpretations of the Constitution based on the Status of Authoritative Interpretations as shown below:

“Status of Authoritative Interpretations

“While the status and applicability of any authoritative interpretation is subject to the judgment of the assembly, it is the considered judgment of the ACC that if this proposal to amend the Form of Government were to be approved, generally speaking the status of authoritative interpretations would vary according to the relationship of newly approved language to previous language.

“1. If language approved in the Constitution explicitly restates the content of existing authoritative interpretations, it is no longer an authoritative interpretation but is incorporated into the Constitution.

“2. If language is approved that is identical to, or essentially the same as the language of constitutional provisions that have already been interpreted, current authoritative interpretations would continue in force. The ACC believes this would apply, for example, to authoritative interpretations regarding current G-6.0106b, G-6.0108, G-8.0201, and G-9.0404d.

“3. If language is approved that is substantively different from currently interpreted constitutional language, clarification from the General Assembly would be required as to the status and applicability of existing authoritative interpretations through the provisions of G-13.0103r.

“4. If language is approved that contradicts the substance of an existing authoritative interpretation, the current interpretation would have no effect.

“5. If language is approved that totally removes a constitutional provision that has been authoritatively interpreted, the authoritative interpretations attached to that provision would be removed as well.”

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 07-01, Recommendation 1, of this report. [See p. 570.]

REPORT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY NOMINATING COMMITTEE

Moderator Bolbach recognized Jim Madson, moderator of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, for a report from the committee. Stated Clerk Parsons reviewed the Standing Rules for nomination from the floor and outlined the procedure for considering the nominations.

Madson witheld Items 00-01M.4 and 00-01M.5 until after the report of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination. Madson announced that challenges were presented to 00-01L.9, 00-01N.7, and 00-01T.1. The assembly elected all nominees that were uncontested.

Challenged nominations were considered as follows:

00-01L.9 [General Assembly Committee on Representation]: Madson placed the name of Heather Walchar in nomination for election to the General Assembly Committee on Representation, class of 2014. Commissioner Julie Leveranz nominated Kathryn Dianne Bell from the floor to replace the committee nominee and spoke to the nomination. Lita Simpson spoke to the nomination of Walchar. The assembly elected Walchar.

00-01N.7 [General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission]: Madson placed the name of Arnold Rots in nomination for election to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, class of 2016. Commissioner Faith Jongewaard nominated Margaret MacLeod from the floor to replace the committee nominee and spoke to the nomination. David Bennett spoke to the nomination of Rots. The assembly elected MacLeod.

00-01T.1 [Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Advisory Committee]: Madson placed the name of Pete Berlowitz in nomination for election to the Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Advisory Committee, class of 2012. Commissioner Wells Kilgore nominated Ken McKenzie from the floor to replace the committee nominee and spoke to the nomination. Madson spoke to the nomination of Berlowitz. The assembly elected Berlowitz.

The report was arrested. [For remainder of report, see p. 49.]

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON MIDDLE GOVERNING BODY ISSUES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Cliff Lyda, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Middle Governing Body Issues, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Item 04-06 as amended and with floor amendment. [To see floor amendments, see pp. 274–75.] The assembly answered Item 04-05 with its action on Item 04-06. The assembly voted to disapprove Item 04-02 with comment. The assembly disapproved Item 04-04; approved Item 04-01, Recommendations 1.–2. with amendment, referred Item 04-01, Recommendations 3.–4. to the Office of the General Assembly; and disapproved Item 04-03.

Lyda introduced James Belle, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Middle Governing Body Issues, to present a portion of the report.

The assembly approved Item 04-07 as amended and disapproved Item 04-08.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Middle Governing Body Issues and the committee report is as follows:

   That the recommendation is disapproved. (See p. 262.)

1. Amend Recommendation A.1. as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “1. Create an administrative commission to oversee the work and mission of the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest, and the Southwest (the Synod) and, if necessary, to intervene in that work. [Should the assembly approve Item 04-06, the commission recommended in Item 04-06 shall be designated as the Administrative Commission for this recommendation.]

   2. Amend Recommendation A.2. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “2. [In creating an administrative commission, the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the commission to designate a subcommittee composed largely of the current members of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén (SCARB), with the further ability to supplement that subcommittee with no more than two additional persons, bringing the composition of SCARB to no more than seven members, to work with the Synod in implementing the directions of the administrative commission and providing guidance to the administrative commission in its designated roles] [The charge for SCARB shall be extended for two years, and SCARB shall be reconstituted by the Administrative Commission as a subcommittee of the commission, and the commission shall be empowered to appoint current members of SCARB and sufficient additional members to meet the requirements of G-9.0501b. The subcommittee shall work with the Synod of Boriquen in implementing the directions of the Administrative Commission and shall provide guidance to the Administrative Commission in its designated roles.]

   3. Amend Recommendations B.1. and B.2. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[1. The 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the administrative commission to dissolve the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest, and the Southwest (the Synod), if after further study, and before the next General Assembly, it determines such action to be appropriate.][If, after further study, and before the next General Assembly, the Administrative Commission determines such action to be appropriate, the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the Administrative Commission be granted the authority to assume original jurisdiction of the Synod of Boriquén for the limited purpose of taking actions necessary to merge the Synod of Boriquen with a synod of the PC(USA) on the mainland, including the authority to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing. G-12.0103k.]"
The 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the administrative commission to create a new governing body structure in the Commonwealth under the jurisdiction of a synod on the mainland of the United States of America, should the commission determine that the dissolution of the current governing body structure is no longer tenable or unable to effectively move into the future.

“The 219th General Assembly (2010) grants the administrative commission the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating new, or renewed, leadership in the Synod, particularly the positions of stated clerks and synod executive, should it be determined to retain the current structure. Likewise, should the decision be to create a new middle governing structure, we recommend that the administrative commission be granted the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating persons to fill the leadership positions of stated clerk(s) and executive(s), as appropriate; and, in either instance, further grant the commission the authority and latitude to designate a subcommittee to act on its behalf in these matters.]

5. Amend Recommendation D. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“We recommend that the commission facilitate and oversee a canvass, poll, or survey to determine whether there exists a sufficient movement seeking disaffiliation from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [the PC(USA)]. [Recommend that the Administrative Commission assess the degree of interest within the Synod of Boriquen and its constituent presbyteries and congregations in their continuing relationships with the PC(USA).]

6. Amend Recommendation E. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the PC(USA), as a structure, and primarily the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) [to] explore and develop ways for the denomination to [more effectively] relate with the Synod [of Boriquen and its presbyteries] and its congregations [in a more effective manner].”

Item 04-08. On Organizing a Non-Geographic Korean Language Presbytery.

Amend Recommendations 1 and 2 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. [Postpone the reports] [Refer the report] from the Offices of Interfaith Relations and Theology and Worship entitled: “Christians and Jews: People of God[,”] and “Understanding Christian-Muslim Relations” until such time as funding is provided by the General Assembly for the appointment of a special committee of the church, to be appointed by the moderator, [back to the Office of Interfaith Relations and Theology and Worship] to rewrite [both] [the] report[s] after broader consultation to include the National Middle East Presbyterian Caucus, PC(USA) partner churches and agencies in the Middle East, relevant mission networks of the PC(USA), the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy.

“2. That correspondence about [these two] [this] report[s] between the National Middle East Presbyterian Caucus and the General Assembly Mission Council, and between the Israel-Palestine Mission Network and the General Assembly Mission Council be sent to [this special committee] [these offices and committee working on the revised paper].”

Comment: The committee endorses the intent of “Christians and Jews, People of God” enhancing Christian and Jewish relationships. We also encourage PC(USA) congregations to employ A Theological Understanding of the Relationships Between Christians and Jews (1987, OGA-88-071) as a resource until a better resource is perfected.

Moderator Cindy Bolbach assumed the chair.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH ORDERS AND MINISTRY

Moderator Bolbach recognized Theresa Denton, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry, for a report from the committee.

Denton introduced K.O. Noonoo, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry, to present a portion of the report.

The assembly referred Item 06-19 to the Office of Vocation with a report deadline of at least 180 days before the 220th General Assembly (2012) and approved as amended Item 06-01.

Denton continued presentation of the report and moved the committee recommendation on Item 06-09. A minority report was introduced. The minority report was perfected. The main motion was perfected. Moderator Bolbach put the question to the assembly, “Shall the minority report become the main motion?” The minority report was defeated.
The assembly approved Item 06-09.

The report was arrested. [For the rest of the report, see p. 46.]

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES A: THE PROMOTION OF SOCIAL RIGHTEOUSNESS

Moderator Bolbach recognized Theresa Cho, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues A: The Promotion of Social Righteousness, to present a portion of the report. [Note: Items 10-04 and 10-05 were moved to 11 Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues–B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World as Items 11-09 and 11-10.]

In response to Item 10-01, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. The assembly approved Item 10-09 as amended and approved Item 10-10 as amended.

Cho introduced John Arbuckle Jr., vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues A: The Promotion of Social Righteousness, to present a portion of the report.

The assembly approved Item 10-08, approved Item 10-07 as amended, and approved Item 10-11 as amended and with comment.

Cho presented the remainder of the report.

The assembly approved Item 10-02 as amended, approved Item 10-06 as amended, approved Item 10-03 as amended, approved Item 10-14 as amended, approved Item 10-12 as amended, and approved Item 10-13 as amended.

Cho reported that the committee had taken final action on Item 10-A.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues A: The Promotion of Social Righteousness and the committee report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues A: The Promotion of Social Righteousness

[Items with financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

Item 10-01. On Protesting the Blatant Disregard for the Sanctity of Our Lord’s Name in Motion Pictures and Public Broadcasting.

In response to Item 10-01, the 219th General Assembly (2010) approved the following resolution: [See p. 725.]

“The General Assembly strongly condemns the gratuitous trivialization of the use of the name of the Lord in the media and directs MRTI to communicate this condemnation to any companies in which it owns stock that own media content or media distribution companies and asks the appropriate office of the General Assembly to make available materials for use by local congregations for conversations with children, youth, and adults to help them determine the effects of media content for their lives.”

That the recommendation is approved as amended. [See p. 733.]

Amend Recommendations 1–3 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

“1. That the Stated Clerk be requested to send a copy of this social involvement report to each [pastor] [congregation] in the denomination.

“2. That the appropriate PC(USA) ministry area or areas, including the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), [the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns,] be directed to develop a study for the 220th General Assembly (2012) that assesses the long-term implications of our current economic trends and practices, including their impact on the church itself, and provides appropriate recommendations for consideration by members, congregations, presbyteries, and local, state, and federal government. This assessment should center on the role of fairness and justice in our economy, with particular attention to growing inequality, the decline of the middle class, the tax structure, the shifting makeup of the labor force and its effects on employee rights, the role of regulatory agencies in protecting the public interest, and access to environmental resources that is equitable and sustainable. [The study should also reflect the concern of the impact of the economic crisis on women and incorporate case studies of both women and men.]
“3. That congregations be invited to create within their midst ways of supporting [individual, unemployed persons and, if appropriate, their families] [persons and families impacted by unemployment, under-employment, and economic downturn].”

Item 10-10. Neither Poverty Nor Riches: Compensation, Equity, and the Unity of the Church.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 742.]

Amend Recommendations 2.c.–k. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[c. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), as a matter of justice,]

“(1) to implement in its personnel policies the directive to provide ratios between highest-paid and lowest-paid church employees, both salaried and non-salaried, which was directed to the General Assembly Council by the 207th General Assembly (1995) in the policy statement, God’s Work in Our Hands, (IV. Implementation Action Plans, A.4.b.(1)) (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 438); and

“(2) to establish the goal of achieving, in a reasonable period of time, a 5:1 ratio between highest-paid and lowest-paid church employees beginning with new General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) positions, understanding this to be a partial return to earlier policy and a practical embodiment of missional solidarity.]

“[d.] [c.] Direct the General Assembly Mission Council to convene the leadership of all six agencies related to the General Assembly to review together the fourteen current principles of compensation in the ‘Report from the General Assembly Advisory Committee on Church-wide Compensation’ (213th General Assembly (2001); Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 558–59) and to explore the possibility of setting ratios for compensation [in light of the 5:1 ratio recommended in 2.c.(2) (above)] in order to promote greater covenental unity within our one church and in our mission together.

“[e.] [d.] Request the leadership of the Board of Pensions (BOP), the Presbyterian Foundation (FDN), the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), as well as the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, to join in the interagency consultation of Recommendation 2.[d. ] [c.] above, and to consider the assembly’s action on compensation within their own boards, reporting on such consideration in their agency reports to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Item 10-07. A Resolution to Explore the Intersection of Gender and Race.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 731.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) [direct the Office of General Assembly to] request that presbyteries explore local resources and conduct training in cultural proficiency on the intersection of race with gender, using as a resource the book, Hearing and Singing New Songs to God, in recognition of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s decade of hearing, singing, and celebrating the voices and contributions of women of color.”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment and with comment. [See p. 772.]

Amendment:

1. Amend Recommendation 4.a. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “a. Recommits the PC(USA) to the principle of equal educational opportunity for all children in the United States, [regardless of race, abilities and disabilities, gender, language or socioeconomic status] [different as each child may be], and affirms them all as our children, neighbors in our care.”

2. Insert a new Recommendation 4.n. and re-letter Recommendation 4.n. as Recommendation 4.o as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[n. That books and resources in school and classroom libraries reflect said multiculturalism in content to ensure fair representation and encourage cross-cultural understanding.]”

   “[n.] [o.]”

3. Insert a new Recommendation 5.e. to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[e. To affirm the importance of the active participation of families in the education and development of children in their care.]”

Comment: The Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues (A) advises that the assembly address issues of systemic factors that undermine children’s education. These include:

- The destructive impact of generations of poverty that diminish expectations of success.
- The debilitating impact of socioeconomic conditions such as lead-paint poisoning, fetal alcohol syndrome, drug dependency, and nutritional deficiency.
- The lack of support for families trying to be involved in their children's education.
- The inapplicability of curriculum to the life-settings of those children.

$Item 10-02. On Celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the Passage of the First Social Pronouncement of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 726.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“The Presbytery of Chicago respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the passage of the first social pronouncement of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. at the 1910 General Assembly. The social statement, based on the Social Creed of 1908 passed at the organizing of the Federal Council of Churches, called attention to fourteen social problems related to industrial issues facing the nation. In the light of this precedent, we call for the promotion and education within our congregations and presbyteries of the new Social Creed for the Twenty-first Century passed by our 218th General Assembly (2008), which calls attention to the twenty social problems related to globalization. We also ask the assembly to direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to distribute the resource, Connecting to the Creed, to presbyteries and congregations. We also ask for Connecting the Creed to be posted and provided in digital form by the Office of the General Assembly and printed in limited quantity for presbytery resource centers and other uses. Further, the General Assembly urges the General Assembly Mission Council to include a celebration of the Social Creed for the Twenty-first Century at the next Big Tent.”

$Item 10-06. A Resolution to Study Violence Against Women and Children on the Mexico-U.S. Border.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 729.]
1. Amend Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “1. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) to create a study group to examine the issue of violence against women and children along the United States-Mexico border, and in particular the circumstances in Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, in consultation with Presbyterian Border Ministries, the National Presbyterian Church of Mexico, the Hispanic-Latino National Presbyterian Caucus, Hispanic/Latino-a Congregational Enhancement [Support Office], Presbyterian Women, ACWC, and presbyteries along the border, seeking concrete actions that the PC(USA), its agencies, congregations and partners, both in the U.S. and in Mexico, can implement to effectively impact this tragic issue within our own church and culture, as well as our neighbors, in a timely manner.”

2. Add a new Recommendation 3 to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[3. Direct GAMC to continue their work on the border and denounce violence against women and children on the Mexican-United States border]”

   [Financial Implications: (2010) $10,980; (2011) $24,470; (2012) $0 (Per Capita—GAMC)]

   Item 10-03. On Urging the U.S. Congress to Cap Interest Rates on Credit Card Lending.

   That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 727.]

   Strike the current text of the recommendation and insert new text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[The Presbytery of Salem respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to adopt a statement urging the United States Congress to pass a law to cap interest rates on credit card lending and direct the Stated Clerk to communicate this action to the president of the United States and the U.S. Congress.]”

   “[The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) urges the United States Congress to enact legislation to cap consumer credit interest rates governing credit cards, payday loans, auto title loans, home equity loans, and other frequently usurious practices, to support a consumer finance protection agency independent of banks and other financially interested parties to ensure that such legislation is implemented, and to encourage publicly-owned banks and credit unions to provide more consumer choice and more regional and local investment, and to direct the Stated Clerk and appropriate General Assembly Mission Council offices to communicate this action to the president of the United States, the U.S. Congress, and state governors and state banking commissions.

   “[The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) approved a report, A Reformed Understanding of Usury for the Twenty-First Century, calling for measures including, but not limited to, ‘… efforts to provide more effective and less costly financial services to people who are now forced to utilize high-cost alternative financial resources…’, and advocate ‘… change of state and federal policies and legislation that allow lenders to take advantage of either the naiveté or financial plight of borrowers …’ (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 804–805).

   “[The 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the ACSWP to produce print and interactive online resources (or make available existing resources) that can be used to educate consumers about predatory lending and encourage healthy borrowing practices and actively promote these resources throughout the church.

   “[The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the PC(USA) urges the credit industry to develop specific credit products with low interest rates and appropriate maximums that extend credit and credit counseling to persons in poverty.]”

   That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 793.]

   Amend the first three paragraphs of the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “The 219th General Assembly (2010) calls upon the PC(USA) and its corporate financial entities (Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, Board of Pensions, Funds of the General Assembly Mission Council, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Stated Clerk’s Office), [synods, presbyteries, its local congregations, and members to be a counter voice to usurious practices, and to prayerfully consider moving money out of the [large] financial institutions who exploit consumers and into [community banks] [financial institutions] that practice responsible consumer lending practices. We call upon MRTI to report on their evaluation of this strategy to the 220th General Assembly (2012). We believe that the standards for moving money include “• clearly defined [interest][consumer credit] rate ceilings or caps (pegged to inflation, unemployment, and other factors, already agreed to, in principle, by one major financial institution);

“• reasonable and fully transparent limits on [credit card fees and charges] [financial products and services];”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 790.]

Amend Recommendations 2.–6. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“2. Commits to [no longer responding with impunity when violence against women and girls occurs, whether clergy or laity perpetrates violence, and to first hold the perpetrator accountable rather than rush to forgiveness] [holding perpetrators, whether clergy or laity, responsible for violence against women and girls, rather than rushing to forgiveness,] and encourages Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations, presbyteries, synods, and governing bodies to do likewise.

“[3. Declares the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) a ‘Violence Free Zone for Women and Girls,’ and direct PC(USA) congregations, presbyteries, synods, and governing bodies to refer to domestic physical acts of violence against women and girls as ‘aggravated assault’ rather than ‘domestic violence.’]

“[4.] [3.]

“[5.] [4.]Directs the General Assembly Mission Council’s (GAMC’s) Compassion, Peace and Justice ministry area, through the Presbyterians Against Domestic Violence Network (PADVN), the Peacemaking Program, the Presbyterian United Nations Office, and other entities working on gender justice issues to join with the World Mission ministry area in engaging and collaborating with ecumenical and global partner churches [to establish guidelines for relationships that encourage equal participation of both men and women in ministry and leadership, making it clear] at the same time [making it clear] that impunity from violence and abuse is not acceptable within related Reformed communities.

“[6.] [5.][Text remains unchanged.]”

Item 10-13. Commissioners’ Resolution. On Renewing the Commitment to the Use of Inclusive and Expansive Language for God and the People of God.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 792.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the [Office of Theology Worship and Education, the] Compassion, Peace and Justice ministry area[,] and the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women ministry area to renew efforts throughout the denomination to promote the use of inclusive and expansive language for God and the people of God and to ensure distribution, electronically or otherwise, of the brochure, “Well Chosen Words: Inclusive Language with Reference to the People of God—Expansive Language with Reference to God” (PDS #72-700-99-003).”

II. Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

[The items listed below were acted upon and approved by the assembly committee. No further action is needed, and is here for information only.]

Item 10-A. Minutes, General Assembly Committee on Representation.

That the minutes are approved.
REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES B:
THE EXHIBITION OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN TO THE WORLD

Moderator Bolbach recognized James Bender, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World, to present a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Item 11-01 as amended, approved Item 11-02, approved Item 11-03 as amended, and approved Item 11-04.

Bender introduced Kristen Gerling, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World, to present a portion of the report.

The assembly approved Item 11-06 as amended, disapproved Item 11-07 with comment, approved Item 11-08, and approved Item 11-09 as amended.

Bender resumed the presentation of the report. The assembly approved Item 11-10 as amended.

Bender moved the committee recommendation on Item 11-11. A minority report was introduced.

The report was arrested. [For the rest of the report, see p. 40.]

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Moderator Bolbach called upon Associate Stated Clerk Tom Hay for an announcement.

ECUMENICAL GREETING

Moderator Bolbach called upon Debbie Braaksma, area coordinator for Africa, to introduce an ecumenical greeting. The Reverend Francis Amenu from the Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Ghana brought greetings to the assembly.

CLOSING PRAYER

Moderator Bolbach called upon the Reverend Festus Asana from the Presbyterian Church of Cameroon, who offered the closing prayer for this session of the General Assembly.

RECESS

The assembly recessed at 5:58 p.m.

Thursday, July 8, 2010, 7:30 p.m.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened by Cynthia Bolbach, Moderator, 219th General Assembly (2010), in Hall B of the Minneapolis Convention Center, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Elder Fares Dagher, ecumenical guest from the National Evangelical Synod of Syria, led the assembly in the convening prayer.

ECUMENICAL GREETING

Moderator Bolbach called upon Jon Chapman, area coordinator for Europe, to introduce an ecumenical greeting. The Reverend Siarehi Hardun from the Orthodox Church of Belarus brought greetings to the assembly.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Aleida Jernigan, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, for a report from the committee.

The assembly amended the docket and suspended the Standing Rules to limit the length of speeches to two minutes.

MEMORIAL MINUTE

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Theodore Wardlaw, president of Austin Theological Seminary, who presented a memorial minute for former moderator John F. Anderson Jr., Moderator of the 122nd General Assembly (1982) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.
Memorial Minute Tribute to John Franklin Anderson Jr.

Early in my ministry as president of Austin Seminary, I gave an address about the seminary to a sizable audience of Presbyterians in Dallas; and when that address was over, John Franklin Anderson Junior, by then a long-retired parish pastor and a former Moderator—in fact, the last Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. and one of the architects of our reunited church—came up to me in that large room to offer a charge that I have not forgotten. He said, “Ted, the greatest challenge facing the clergy in this time is not heresy but boredom.” He said, “Go back down to Austin and send us preachers who aren’t boring.”

John Anderson—born in Dallas in 1920, educated at Austin College in Sherman, Texas; formed theologically at Union Theological Seminary in Virginia and Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary—was a lifelong testimony to faithful service. A World War 2 chaplain who served with the Second Marine Division in Japan, he came back to the United States at the end of his service and pastored the First Presbyterian Church of Tyler, Texas; the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas; and the First Presbyterian Church of Orlando, Florida, before becoming the executive secretary of the Board of National Ministries of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. In 1973, John accepted the call to return to the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas—a venerable and deeply-engaged leadership church in deep downtown Dallas composed of all sorts of people, from the highest stations of life to the most humble, from which for decades has emanated the ministry of proclamation and music and beauty and Christian formation and social witness, service and redemption. It was while John was pastor there that second time that he served as Moderator, and represented our communion in trips to Mexico and South Africa and Canada and Russia.

He was a beloved pastor and consummate churchman whose career coincided with some of the most significant social upheavals in the United States, and he shepherded his flocks through those changes with courage, wisdom, and grace. He was a sense-maker in contentious situations, and he lived up to that charge that he gave to me; for he himself was a preacher who was not boring. It is impossible to count the people invited into the faith by John’s pulpit ministry and through his witness in other arenas of engagement.

John and his dear wife Nancy, who was by his side throughout his ministry, were married in 1943, and raised three children—William, Paul, and Rebecca—and they enjoyed six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

In the Fall of 2009, just a short while after his death, Austin Seminary dedicated a new four-story apartment building named for John F. and Nancy Anderson. It had been my desire to have chiseled in stone across the main entrance of Anderson House the words with which John charged me on that day in Dallas. But other forces prevailed, and it was decided that we should choose a Latin inscription instead. And so we did, and now students enter and exit through a door crowned with these words: Praedicatores Taediosi Nobis Non Mittendi Sunt. It’s Latin for “Send Us Preachers Who Aren’t Boring.”

Thanks be to God for the life and witness of John Franklin Anderson Jr. “Christ is the Resurrection and the Life.”

Vice Moderator Landon Whitsitt assumed the chair.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BOARD OF PENSIONS, FOUNDATION, AND PRESBYTERIAN PUBLISHING CORPORATION

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Effie Bynum, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions, Foundation, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, for a report from the committee. Moderator Bynum moved Item 18-03, confirmation of Thomas Taylor as president and executive officer of the Presbyterian Foundation. At Moderator Bynum’s request, Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Eleanor Hite, chairperson of the Presbyterian Foundation Search Committee. Hite addressed the assembly and introduced Thomas Taylor. Taylor addressed the assembly briefly. The assembly approved Item 18-03. The report of the committee was arrested. [For the rest of the report, see p. 54.]

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES B: THE EXHIBITION OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN TO THE WORLD

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized James Bender, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World, to continue the report of the committee. [See p. 39 for first part of report.]

Bender reminded the committee that the consideration of Item 11-11 was in process. The minority report was perfected. The main motion was perfected. Moderator Bolbach put the question to the assembly, “Shall the minority report become the main motion?” The minority report was defeated.

The assembly approved Item 11-11 with a floor amendment to Recommendation 1 to strike “or non-PC(USA) conference centers” and approved Item 11NB with comment. [Note: There was no Item 11-05].

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World and the committee report is as follows:
Thu, Jul 8, 2010

Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues B:
The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World

[Items with financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

Item 11-01. On Lifting up the “Call to Restore the Creation”.

Amend Item 11-01 by adding new Recommendations 4., 5., and 6. to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[4. Affirm that concern for God's creation is, for every Christian, an essential way of living faithfully in Christ’s world that will necessitate personal study of, attention to, and engagement with emerging and new environmental concerns that are persistent, acute, and pressing.

“[5. Affirm that the best available science should inform our care for God’s creation, shaping the direction of responsible programming and policy, especially with respect to public witness concerning emergent environmental issues such as global climate change, desertification, and access to potable water, and wetlands/coastal erosion.

“[6. Affirm that all living creatures require potable water to live; that water, being essential to life, is a human right that must be accessible to all people.]”

Item 11-02. On Endorsing “The Charter for Compassion.”

That the recommendation is approved. [See p. 808.]

$Item 11-03. On Making Resources Available Regarding Destruction and Loss of Coastal Wetlands.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 810.]

1. Amend Recommendation 2 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“2. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Congregational Ministries Publishing, to work in conjunction with the Presbytery of South Louisiana to develop curriculum resources on the implications of coastal wetlands loss for God’s creation and God’s community.”

2. Amend Recommendation 4 as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“4. Direct the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to examine the role of corporations and institutions in the destruction and restoration of the wetlands and report back to the 220th General Assembly (2012).”

That the recommendation is approved. [See p. 812.]

[Note: Item 11-05 became Item 10-11.]

Item 11-06. Gun Violence, Gospel Values: Mobilizing in Response to God’s Call.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 830.]

1. Amend Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Encourage the church at every level—from individual member to congregation, presbytery, synod, and national church—to become informed and active in preventing gun violence, to provide pastoral care for victims of gun violence, and to seek a spiritual response of grief and repentance, grace and courage to resist that violence and celebrate the Lord and Giver of Life. [This proposal does not preclude the legal use of personal firearms for hunting or sports-related purposes.]”
2. Amend Recommendations 11.f.–g. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“f. raise the age for handgun ownership to the [legal drinking] age [of] [(twenty-one)]; and”

“g. eliminate the Tiahrt Amendment to annual appropriations for the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF) [that forbids local law enforcement agencies from receiving any information from gun traces, and to keep data on background checks for at least ninety days for comparative purposes and assist enforcement of ‘11.a.’ above] [that impedes local law enforcement agencies in their use of gun traces and requires the Justice Department to destroy within two hours the record of a buyer whose NICS (National Instant Criminal Background Check System) check was approved].”

Item 11-07. On Living a Human Life before God.

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment. [See p. 847.]

Comment: With thanksgiving for the diligence and hard work of the authors of the study paper, On Living a Human Life Before God, the original paper, The Nature and Value of Human Life (1981), is in many ways superior as a tool for moral discourse. Moreover, the concerns of the overture approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000), Overture 00-95: On Gun Violence, are more adequately addressed by Item 11-06 of this year’s report: “Gun Violence, Gospel Values: Mobilizing in Response to God’s Call.”

That the recommendation is approved. [See p. 855.]

Item 11-09. A Review of Efforts Regarding Cultural Proficiency and Creating a Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 857.]

1. Amend Recommendations 4.c.–d. as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“c. measurable targets and goals that integrate cultural proficiency policy[, training and cultural sensitivity programs] in areas of education for purposes of mobility and advancement, performance, recruitment, hiring, mentoring, and retention;

“d. production of biennial reports giving employment profile (salaries, occupations, separations, new hires, promotions, in terms of race, ethnicity, gender[, and disabilities]).”

“7. [Direct][E][ach entity [must][to] demonstrate affirmative efforts to increase racial ethnic and female employee representation in the senior management categories. When filling vacancies at this level, there must be a racial ethnic person and a female among the final candidates. If they are not among the final candidates, the entity must explain why they were not considered.”

Item 11-10. On Forming a Committee to Study the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 878.]

1. Amend the first paragraph as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[As the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) becomes an increasingly diverse and culturally rich membership,][I][t]he Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to appoint a committee of [nine] [eleven] persons to study the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century. [The intent of this study shall be to seek to increase understanding of the church from a Reformed and Presbyterian perspective and assist current and new members in forming faithful plans for our common future.]”

2. Amend the sixth bulleted item as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“• [Four] [Six] persons at-large”
3. Amend the last paragraph of the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The committee would be charged with bringing a report and making the appropriate recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012), and, if appropriate, preparing [a] study guide [practical resources] for individual and congregational use.”

Item 11-11. Commissioners’ Resolution. Regarding a Call to Stand with Immigrant Presbyterians in Their Hour of Need.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 879.]

“1. Refrain from holding national meetings [at hotels or non-PC(USA) conference centers] in those states where travel by immigrant Presbyterians or Presbyterians of color or Hispanic ancestry might subject them to harassment due to legislation similar to Arizona Law SB 1070/HB2162.

“[a. If individual congregations and camp & conference facilities deem it necessary, the PC(USA) and its staff will offer nonfinancial support for the creation of accompaniment programs to support persons of color who feel that they are at risk when attending church-sponsored worship or programs.

“[b. If such laws are passed in states where the PC(USA) camp & conference centers are located, the 219th General Assembly (2010) encourages those centers to develop ‘sanctuary’ responses that would create safe places for all participants, allowing the denomination to continue to support its own conference centers, and encourages the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the General Assembly Mission Council to offer support to partners across the denomination as they develop a process to train volunteers to document abuses and collect data on those abuses to share with the broader church.]

“2. [Direct the Office of Immigration to] [Develop resources that educate Presbyterians about the history of immigrant policies, the beneficial aspects of immigration in the United States as well as official anti-immigration conduct [in the United States], [including, but not limited to] [such as] the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882 that was not repealed until 1943; the forced migration of persons of Mexican descent from California between 1929 and 1939, 60 percent of whom were U.S. citizens; and the forced relocation of Japanese Americans to detention camps during World War II.

“3. [Direct the Office of Immigration to] [Develop resources that educate Presbyterians about the origins of this most recent legislation, with a special focus on those states that are considering enactment of copycat legislation.

2. Amend Recommendation 5 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“5. Empower the Immigration Office of the PC(USA) to [legally] [provide a legal resource to PC(USA) congregations in states experiencing the introduction of SB 1070 copycat legislation.”

3. Add a new recommendation 6 to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[6. Directs the Stated Clerk to ask the National Council of Churches to request the churches of North America to join our sister churches in Europe in a common day of prayer to commemorate those migrants who have died on their journey.]”

[Financial Implication: (2010) $2,000; (2011) $4,000; (2012) $4,000 (OGA-Per Capita)]

That the recommendation is approved with comment. [See p. 881.]

Recommendation:

In response to the Deep Water Horizon Oil disaster, the Assembly Committee on Social Justice Issues—B: The Exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the World respectfully recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) take the following actions:
1. Direct the Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to send condolences to each of the families of the workers who lost their lives from the Deep Water Horizon oil rig explosion.

2. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council to work in partnership with local impacted communities, and to initiate and support an ecumenical, long-term response to the Deep Water Horizon oil disaster. This response may include a. developing sustainable subsistence food supplies;
   b. developing a peer-to-peer counseling program;
   c. equipping community members with the knowledge and technology to monitor water, air, and soil quality and water currents;
   d. cross-country monitoring of the effects on migratory birds that fly through the Gulf Coast during their migration;
   e. supporting the creation of sustainable green jobs for those who have lost their livelihoods due to the oil disaster; and
   f. supporting an ecumenical, locally based series of summits to discuss issues of dislocation, relocation, and resettlement as a result of communities becoming uninhabitable due to toxins in the environment.

3. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council to make a one-time, special fundraising appeal to support the long-term recovery of communities impacted by the Deep Water Horizon oil disaster.

4. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to write a letter to the chief executive officer of BP, urging BP to ensure the safety of all workers, including oil industry workers and oil cleanup workers, through training, equipping, and monitoring of safety guidelines in compliance with OSHA.

5. Direct the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) to communicate with oil and natural gas companies engaged in offshore exploration, drilling, and production urging them to conduct a thorough review of their operations to make certain that they are in compliance with their own health, safety, and environmental standards and all governmental regulatory requirements so that the general public can be assured that similar disasters will be prevented.

6. Direct the Office of Public Witness in Washington, D.C., to:
   a. Communicate with Congress and the Executive Branch the need to reconstitute a robust program of oversight and compliance to ensure that health, safety, and environmental standards are followed to protect workers, communities, and the environment.
   b. Urge Congress and the Executive Branch to hold BP and other responsible parties morally and financially accountable for this disaster and for the socioeconomic and environmental recovery.

Comment: It is impossible to express adequately the outrage felt by Presbyterians and others at the enduring tragedy unfolding in the Gulf of Mexico region today. While the long-term socioeconomic and spiritual effects of the Deep Water Horizon oil disaster are yet to be determined, urgent action by the PC(USA) is our Christian responsibility.

Moderator Cindy Bolbach assumed the chair.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CIVIL UNION AND MARRIAGE ISSUES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Rick Nutt, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Civil Union and Marriage Issues, for a report from the committee.

Nutt moved the committee recommendation on Item 12-12. A minority report was introduced. The minority report was perfected with the following floor amendment: to insert in section 1 “and the majority report,” after the phrase “minority report,” so that it reads: “Approve the minority report and the majority report.” The main motion was perfected with the following floor amendment: to insert in Recommendation 1.a. “and the minority report from the committee” after the phrase “commend the committee’s report,” so that it reads: “commend the committee’s report and the minority report from the committee to the sessions and presbyteries.” Moderator Bolbach put the question to the assembly, “Shall the minority report become the main motion?” The minority report was defeated.
The assembly approved Item 12-12 as amended, and answered Item 12-13 with its action on Item 12-12. The assembly disapproved Items 12-01, 12-05, and 12-11. A floor motion “that the action taken on Item 12-12 be considered the response to all pending items coming from Committee 12” was approved.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Civil Union and Marriage Issues and the committee report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Civil Union and Marriage Issues

[There are no recommendations contained in this report that will be moved as part of a consent agenda. There are no recommendations contained in this report that have financial implications.]

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 909.]

1. Amend the fourth paragraph of I. Introduction (in the Rationale) as follows:

“In many ways, life in the body of Christ is not unlike a marriage: In the course of our life together, we have good days and bad days, good times and challenging times, great joy and wrenching pain. We talk, we laugh, we cry. We agree and disagree. Occasionally, we get angry and are tempted to walk away. But like Christian marriage, in the body of Christ we know that the One who holds us together is more important than the arguments that threaten to tear us apart. That One is Jesus Christ, who said, “I give you a new commandment, that you love one another. Just as I have loved you, you also should love one another. By this everyone will know that you are my disciples, if you have love for one another” (Jn. 13:34–35). [Included in the mandate of this special committee was a directive that the PC(USA) constitutional definition of Christian marriage not be changed. In our confessions, marriage is consistently defined as a lifelong covenant between God, a man and a woman, and the community of faith.]

2. Amend the third paragraph of Section II.C.1. of the Rationale as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The early Christian church was an underground and often persecuted movement with little ability to influence official policies in the Roman Empire on matters like marriage. Nevertheless, theologians showed a vital interest in the understanding and practice of marriage in the early Christian community. When Christianity became the official religion of the Roman Empire in 313, laws enacted under Constantine and his successors began to reflect the influence of Christian views about marriage. [Text continues unchanged.]

3. Amend the second paragraph of Section III as follows:

[As noted above, included in the mandate of this special committee was a directive that we were not to change the Book of Order’s definition of marriage. [Text continues unchanged.]

4. Amend Recommendation 1.a. by inserting “and the minority report from the committee” after the words “commend the committee report” so that it reads as follows: [Text to be added is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“a. commend the committee’s report [and the minority report from the committee] to sessions and presbyteries, and urge them to engage in study of the issues presented in the report.”

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH ORDERS AND MINISTRY

Vice Moderator Whitsitt assumed the chair.

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Theresa Denton, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Church Orders to continue the report. [For the first part of the report, see p. 33.]

The assembly approved Items 06-02, 06-03, 06-04, 06-05, 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-10, 06-11, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, 06-17, 06-18 on the committee’s consent agenda (all answered by action taken on Item 06-09). Item 06-20 was removed from the consent agenda. Item 06-20 was moved by Denton to be answered by action taken on Item 06-09. A substitute motion was made to approve Item 06-20. The substitute motion was perfected. Vice Moderator Whitsitt put the question to the assembly, “Shall the substitute motion become the main motion? The substitute motion was disapproved. Item 6-20 was answered by the action taken on Item 06-09.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry and the committee report is as follows:
Item 06-19. On Establishing a Process to Evaluate the Current Call System

That the recommendation is referred to the Office of Vocation with a report deadline of at least 180 days before the 220th General Assembly (2012). [See p. 477.]

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 423.]

1. Amend the second paragraph of Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline; text that had been stricken in the original item of business but retained in the assembly committee action is shown with brackets and with a gray screen background.]

   "‘The stated clerk shall maintain [five] [four] rolls, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all the ministers of Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only, and, in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote, [at all presbytery meetings, during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery,] and, in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made.’"

2. Amend the second paragraph of Recommendation 2 as follows:

   "‘b. provide the following support to the [e][C]ertified Christian [e][E]ducators: service of recognition that shall include the constitutional questions at W-4.4003 (G-11.0103n); establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits (G-11.0103n); and access to the committee on ministry (G-11.0503). The presbytery may grant the privilege of the floor to the Certified Christian Educator at all its meetings with voice only, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b, during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery. (G-11.0407) In accordance with G-11.0407, [e][C]ertified Christian [e][E]ducators are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote [during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery].'"

   “2. [Commend the practical and proactive initiatives of the Iraqi churches to serve their neighbors and contribute to the rebuilding of Iraq and] Presbyterian Women for [designating the Kirkuk Church Kindergarten and Child Care Center as a recipient of the 2010 Birthday Offering grant] [helping to provide education for children in Iraq];”

2. Amend Recommendations E.–G. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “[E. Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to study and report back to the General Assembly the relationship between the expenditures for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and the economic conditions in the U.S., including those who benefit from these expenditures, those sectors that are disadvantaged, and providing a theological and practical discussion from the Reformed perspective.*]"

   “[*These assume no additional budget is needed, and that the activities will reflect the priorities of the General Assembly.]

   “[F.][E.] Direct the Stated Clerk to call upon the church, its congregations and presbyteries to:

   “1. pray for the effectiveness of our national leaders in making peace;

   “2. encourage presbyteries to develop linkages between their congregations and agencies that assist in the relocation of Iraqi refugees in the United States;

   “3. commend the U.S. government for [taking necessary steps to protect noncombatant Kurdish and other civilians in Northern Iraq from Turkish and Iranian military action that has resulted in damage to property and persons in that region.]"

   “[a. responding to the massive Iraqi refugee situation;

   “[b. taking steps to return troops from combat;

   “[c. giving support to returned troops and their families;

   “[d. giving political and economic support toward rebuilding Iraq as an independent nation.]

   “4. urge the U.S. government to maintain its commitments to:

   “c. ensure that the U.S. not establish permanent U.S. military bases in Iraq;

   “d. make available sufficient U.S. funds for the repatriation and resettlement of Iraqi refugees and for the postwar reconstruction of Iraq;

   “e. reduce the time that it takes to process refugees coming to the U.S.; [and]
“f. ensure that sufficient funds are provided for medical and psychological treatment of returning military personnel[.]”

“[g. protect civilian populations from harm, particularly in the northern part of Iraq, due to longstanding hostilities among militant, governmental, economic, ethnic, and religious groups; and carry out its stated policy of engaging all sides involved in a conflict by following that policy in order to find peaceful ways to resolve their differences.]”

“[G. F.] Direct the Stated Clerk to send this overture to the synods, presbyteries, and churches in the most practical manner as soon as possible, requesting their concurrence and active participation in these ministries, especially in association with ecumenical and interfaith partners.”

Item 14-03. MRTI Report of Its Engagement with Corporations Involved in Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank.

That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 985.)

“[g.] [h.] [Text remains unchanged.]”

“[h.] [i.] [Text remains unchanged.]”

“[i.] [j.] [Text remains unchanged.]”

“[j.] [k.] [Text remains unchanged.]”

“b. Authorizes the creation of a Monitoring Group on the Middle East for the next two years that will consist of [the members of this study committee] [seven people appointed by the current and immediately past Moderators in consultation with the GAMC staff persons responsible for global mission in the Middle East and for Interreligious Affairs] to assist the appropriate General Assembly Mission Council offices and the Middle East staff team in monitoring progress and guiding actions to ensure adequate implementation of policy directions approved by this General Assembly, given the growing complexity and interrelatedness of issues in the region. (It is the understanding that the group would be convened, as necessary and helpful, via teleconferencing or other means incurring minimal expense.) [This committee shall be appointed by the end of August 2010. The monitoring group shall include at least one but no more than two members of the existing Middle East Study Committee (MESC). New appointees shall be chosen on the basis of demonstrated experience with and knowledge of the complex dynamics of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict within the larger concerns of the Middle East, and shall together comprise an authentic balance representing the fullness of the spectrum of commitments within the PC(USA) toward the people and issues in the region.”

3. Strike the current text of Recommendation 3.f. and insert the following: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“f. [Endorses the Kairos Palestine document (“A Moment of Truth”) in its emphases on hope for liberation, nonviolence, love of enemy, and reconciliation; lifts the document up for study and discussion by Presbyterians; and directs the creation of a study guide for the document through the appropriate channel of the General Assembly Mission Council.] [Commends for study the Kairos Palestine document (“A Moment of Truth”), and endorses the document’s emphases on hope for liberation, nonviolence, love of enemy, and reconciliation. We lift up for study the often neglected voice of Palestinian Christians. We direct the monitoring group for the Middle East to create a study guide for the document].”

4. Amend Recommendation 3.h. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“h. Encourages Presbyterians to travel to the region, especially Israel/Palestine, and when doing so to worship and visit with fellow Palestinian Christians, support Christian businesses, seek to understand the range of narratives engage Israeli Jews, Israeli Arabs, and Palestinian Muslims, and spend dedicated time in Israel and Palestine.”

5. Amend Recommendation 4.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“b. Calls on the U.S. government to exercise strategically its international influence, including [the possible withholding of military aid as a means of bringing Israel to] [making U.S. aid to Israel contingent upon Israel’s] compliance with international law and peacemaking efforts.”

6. Strike the current text of Recommendation 4.d. and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“d. [Calls on the Israeli government to end immediately its blockade of Gaza, and on the U.S. government to end any support it is giving to the blockade, and also calls on the Egyptian government to facilitate the passage of humanitarian supplies into Gaza as well as consumer goods from the strip.] [Calls on the Israeli and Egyptian governments to limit their blockade of Gaza solely to military equipment/devices and to guarantee adequate levels of food, medicine, building supplies, and other humanitarian items, and to allow free commercial exchange in and out of Gaza, and calls on the U.S. government to end any support for the blockade that interferes with the adequacy of such items or such exchange.]”

7. Strike the current text of Recommendations 8.a.–c. and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[a. Approves Part One of the report (Introduction; Letters to Our Church, Partners, and Engaged Parties; Biblical Theological Reflections; ‘What We Have Seen and Heard’).]

“[b. Receives Part Three (I. Notes from a Humanistic, Liberal Zionist: A Personal Narrative; II. A Plea for Justice: A Historical Analysis; and the Appendixes) and commends it to the church for study.]

“[c. Authorizes the creation of a study guide by the monitoring group (see Recommendation 3.b.).]

“[a. Receives Part One of this report (Introduction; Letters to Our Church, Partners, and Engaged Parties; Biblical Theological Reflections: ‘What We Have Seen and Heard’) as rationale for recommendations only, not as policy.]

“[b. Delete Part Three, Items A and B (A. Notes from a Humanistic, Liberal Zionist: A Personal Narrative; B. A Plea for Justice: A Historical Analysis), and replace with a series of eight narratives of comparable length, four arising from the range of authentically Palestinian perspectives (including both Christian and Muslim), and four arising from the range of authentically Israeli perspectives, along with an annotated bibliography for additional understanding about the breadth and depth of both authentically Palestinian and Israeli spectrum of perspectives but above all authentically pro-justice and pro-peace. These narratives and the bibliography will be collected and approved by the Monitoring Group on the Middle East.

Item 14-05. On Commending “A Moment of Truth: A Word of Faith and Hope from the Heart of Palestinian Suffering” as an Advocacy Tool.
That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 14-08 of this report. (See p. 1006.)

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 14-08 of this report with comment. (See p. 994.)

Comment: While we are deeply concerned with the policies implemented by Israel in relation to the Palestine territories and Palestinians under its jurisdiction, we believe that dialogue is hampered by words like “apartheid.”

Item 14-06. On Middle East Peacemaking.
That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 14-08 of this report. (See p. 1016.)

Item 14-09. On Seeking Compliance to U.S. Government Policy in the Use of Military Aid by All Parties in the Middle East.
That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 1120.)

Item 14-10. Toward Peace and Reconciliation in the Middle East.
That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 1123.)

Dissent

The following commissioners filed a dissent from the action taken on Item 14-08 of the Assembly Committee on Middle East Peacemaking Issues: Rosanna P. REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BOARD OF PENSIONS, FOUNDATION, AND PRESBYTERIAN PUBLISHING CORPORATION

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Effie Bynum, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions, Foundation, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, for a report from the committee. [See p. 40 for the first part of the report.]

Bynum reported that the committee took final action on Items 18-A, 18-B, 18-C, 18-D, and 18-E with comment. The assembly approved the consent agenda: Items 18-02 (approved), 18-04 (approved), 18-05 (approved), 18-08 (approved), 18-09 (approved), 18-10 (approved), and 18-11 (approved).

Bynum introduced Donna Misterly, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions, Foundation, and Presbyterian Publishing, to present a portion of the report. Misterly introduced the committee recommendation on Item 18-06. A minority report was introduced. The main motion was perfected. The minority report was perfected. Vice-Moderator Whitsitt put the question to the assembly, “Shall the minority report become the main motion?” The minority report was defeated. In response to Item 18-06, the assembly approved an alternate resolution with comment.

The assembly disapproved Items 18-01. Bynum presented the remainder of the report. Item 18-07 was disapproved. In response to Item 18-12, the assembly approved an alternate resolution.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions, Foundation, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation and the committee report is as follows:

Item 18-06. On Directing the Board of Pensions to Extend Benefits to Same-Gender Spouses and Domestic Partners.

In response to Item 18-06, the assembly approved an alternate resolution with comment. (See p. 1301.)

Alternate Resolution:

That the 219th General Assembly (2010):

1. Urge the Board of Pensions to adopt amendments to the Benefits Plan to extend eligibility for spousal and dependent benefits under the Plan to Benefits Plan members, their same-gender domestic partners, and the children of their same-gender domestic partners, on the same basis as, and equivalent to, benefits made available to Benefits Plan members, their spouses, and the children of their spouses.

2. Approve an increase in dues for the Benefits Plan of up to 1 percent, effective January 1, 2012, to be allocated among the plans of the Board of Pensions, including but not limited to the Pension Plan, as the Board, in its sole discretion, deems necessary to fund the cost of the additional benefits. Should the Board not implement these benefits for any reason, approval of the increase in dues is rescinded.

Comment: That the Board of Pensions be highly urged to provide relief of conscience, to be implemented simultaneously with these actions, for those congregations for whom these actions cause a moral dilemma.

Item 18-07. On the Medical Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church and Medications Requiring Pre-Authorization.

That the recommendation is disapproved. (See p. 1305.)

In response to Item 18-12, the assembly approved the following alternate resolution: (See p. 1313.)

The 219th General Assembly (2010) urges the Board of Pensions to develop a plan to ensure that funds from any Relief of Conscience churches do not go to fund abortions through any avenue.

Amendment:

1. Amend the second paragraph of Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline; text that had been stricken in the original item of business but retained in the assembly committee action is shown with brackets and with a gray screen background.]

   “The stated clerk shall maintain [four] [five] rolls, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, and one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made. The stated clerk shall also maintain two registers, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and one listing all Commissioned Lay Pastors within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice and vote at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in a church or other validated ministry.”

2. Strike Recommendations 2 and 3 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

   “[G-14.0560 — Commissioned Lay Pastor]

   “[The commissioned lay pastor is an elder of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who is granted a local commission by the presbytery to lead worship and preach the gospel, watch over the people, and provide for their nurture and service. This commission is valid only in one or more congregations, new church development, or other validated ministries of the presbytery designated by the presbytery. Such an elder is selected by and receives training approved by the presbytery. The elder shall be instructed in Bible, Reformed Theology and Sacraments, Presbyterian Polity, preaching, leading worship, pastoral care, and teaching. The elder shall be examined by the appropriate committee of presbytery as to personal faith, motives for seeking the commission, and the areas of instruction mentioned previously. An elder who has been commissioned and later ceases to serve in a particular congregation or validated ministry may continue to be listed as available to serve, but is not authorized to perform the functions of a commissioned lay pastor again until appointed to a particular congregation or validated ministry by the presbytery.]”

219TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2010)
“[G-11.0408a. Validated Ministries]

“A minister of the Word and Sacrament who is an active member of presbytery may be engaged (1) in a validated ministry within congregations of this church, (2) in a validated ministry in other service of this church, (3) in a validated ministry in service beyond the jurisdiction of this church, or may be (4) honorably retired.

“[G-11.0408b. Kinds of Validated Ministries of Commissioned Lay Pastors]

“A commissioned lay pastor may be engaged in a validated ministry within congregations or governing bodies of this church. [Current Sections G-11.0408b–c shall be re-lettered as G-11.0408c–d. The text of these sections remains unchanged.]”

Comment: That the Office of the General Assembly is instructed to devise a means of discovery and reporting the work of all commissioned lay pastors in the presbyteries and that all references in the Book of Order be updated to reflect this.

Item 05-07. On Amending G-14.0553c to Allow an Interim Associate Pastor to Become the Next Installed Associate Pastor with Two-Thirds Vote—From the Presbytery of Muskingum Valley.

That the recommendation is disapproved. (See p. 322.)

Item 05-27. On Adopting a Gracious Dismissal Policy—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. (See p. 351.)

Amend the recommendation by adding a new Recommendation to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[4. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to invite other presbyteries who have established gracious dismissal policies to submit their policy to be posted on the middle governing bodies website along with the San Francisco policy.]”

Item 05-12. On Amending G-7.0400, Articles of Incorporation Be Provided to Presbytery—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Western North Carolina—ACC.

That the recommendation is approved with comment. (See p. 330.)

Comment: Please make the following editorial change: Recommendation 1 remains as it is and Recommendations 2–5 should be listed as sub-items a.–d. under Recommendation 1.

Item 05-21. Responsibility of General Assembly to Provide Authoritative Interpretations of Book of Order (G-13.0103r)—From Member, Presbytery of St Augustine—ACC.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. (See p. 341.)

Amend the recommendation by striking the tenth paragraph, which reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

“[More subtle, however, is the question of whether the act of interpreting wording of the Constitution changes the meaning of the Constitution. In truth, any interpretation of a text shapes the meaning of that text by addressing its provisions to circumstances perhaps not anticipated when the text was created. It is for this reason that we regard the church’s Constitution as a living document in that by the act of interpretation we mold the meaning of our Constitution to fit the ever-changing landscape of the church’s life and witness. This interpretive work is therefore essential to the vitality of the church, lest the Constitution become a lifeless conglomeration of words without reference to reality.]”

Commission—From the Presbytery of Arkansas.
That the recommendation is disapproved. (See p. 345.)

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 05-21 of this report. (See p. 356.)

Item 05-22. Section G-7.0306. Pastor Moderator of All Meetings of Congregation—From the Stated Clerk, Synod of Southern California & Hawaii—ACC.
That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 343.)

[Item 05-29 became Item 07-12. There is no Item 05-29.]

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Moderator Bolbach called upon Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons for an announcement.

CLOSING PRAYER
Moderator Bolbach called upon Eric Hinderliter, missionary advisory delegate serving in Lithuania, who offered the closing prayer for this session of the General Assembly.

RECESS
The assembly recessed at 6:05 p.m.
The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened by Landon Whitsitt, Vice-Moderator, 219th General Assembly (2010), in Hall B of the Minneapolis Convention Center, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Darlene Figgs, theological student advisory delegate from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, led the assembly in the convening prayer.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Vice-Moderator Whitsitt recognized Heath Rada, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, for a report from the committee.

BIG TENT PROMOTION

Vice-Moderator Whitsitt recognized Linda Valentine, Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council, and Gradye Parsons, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, who shared information about the next Big Tent event and introduced a video.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON PEACEMAKING AND INTERNATIONAL ISSUES

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized George Lynch, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Item 13-10 and approved Item 13-04 as amended. The assembly approved Item 13-02 as amended and with the following floor amendments:

To amend Recommendation 2 by inserting a new “c” and re-lettering “c.–g” as “d.–h.” The new “c.” reads as follows: “encourage congregations and individual Presbyterians to pray for the people who lost loved ones in the attacks of September 11, 2001, and to pray for those first responders and volunteers who are ill as a result of their service and dedication.”

To add a preamble before Item 13-02: “We of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have deep appreciation for the patriotic loyalty of our nation’s citizens and service personnel for the extreme sacrifice they paid and will continue to pay to support our effort to achieve peace and stability in Iraq and Afghanistan, and to protect the citizens of our nation. However, we believe further sacrifices and services will not serve the purposes for which we have been engaged. Therefore, the Peacemaking and International Issues Committee recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010).”

The assembly answered Items 13-01, 13-03, and 13-09 with its action on Item 13-02.

The assembly approved Item 13-11 as amended and with comment and answered Items 13-06 and 13-07 with its action on Item 13-11.

Moderator Lynch introduced Sue Trei-Conrad, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues to continue the report. The assembly approved Item 13-13 as amended, approved Item 13-12 as amended, approved Item 13-08 as amended, approved Item 13-05 as amended, and approved Item 13-14 as amended.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues and the committee report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues

[There are recommendations contained in this report that have financial implications and are indicated with a “$” sign next to the item.]

I. For Plenary Action

Item 13-10. Commitment to Peacemaking.

That the recommendation is approved. [See p. 965.]

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 952]

Amend Recommendations 1.–2. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]
“1. Support intercessory prayer and advocacy by the churches regarding (a) renewed international commitment to the full and timely implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 2005 (CPA), including international protection in Southern Sudan for the referendum on whether to secede; (b) increased private investment for the economic development of Southern Sudan and other areas affected by conflict; (c) increased development assistance by the United States government, including assistance in restoring security for the citizens of Southern Sudan and other areas affected by violence and proliferation of arms; and (d) renewed efforts by all parties to end hostilities in Darfur and elsewhere in Sudan, including full access by humanitarian organizations to provide care and resettlement assistance to refugees and the internally displaced, all for the purposes of the shelter, nurture, and spiritual fellowship of the children of God and the promotion of social righteousness.”

“2. Support the formation of new covenant-based partnerships by PC(USA) presbyteries with presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church of Sudan (PCOS) or the Sudan Presbyterian Evangelical Church (SPEC), making arrangements through the PC(USA) [Sudan Mission Network] [General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), World Mission ministry area], with presbyteries reporting results to the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council by July 1, 2011, for review by the General Assembly Mission Council and thereafter, publication on appropriate web sites, all for the purposes of the proclamation of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ for the salvation of humankind, the preservation of the truth, and the maintenance of divine worship.”

Item 13-02. On the War in Afghanistan.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 946.]

1. Amend Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Call upon the United States government to

“a. [take only non-combative actions in vigorous pursuit of] [pursue non-combat actions that will support] stability, prosperity, and peace in Afghanistan and [in] the [surrounding] region;

“[b. cease direct combat operations, except those to protect coalition troops remaining, Afghani security force troops, and humanitarian efforts;]

“[b. ] [c. cooperate with the United Nations and the neighbors of Afghanistan in the stabilization process;

“[e. ] [d. cooperate with the United Nations in providing and overseeing greatly expanded aid to Afghanistan for the delivery of humanitarian and economic development assistance;

“[e. engage directly with and among the Afghani people in a process of peacemaking by]

“(1) creating a multilevel, participatory, consensus building process that seeks input from every sector and level of society and does not exclude from participation any group of stakeholders;

“(2) building a broad base of civil support that makes peacemaking cost-effective;

“(3) engaging in a public process involving consultation with leaders of civil society, a representative process, and open media communication among the populace;

“(4) incentivizing peace by focusing on security, economic stability and justice, political access and participation, and identity associated with territory through both culturally identified internal and external incentives;

“(5) practicing consistent and intensive diplomatic engagement at multiple levels that is culturally knowledgeable and sensitive, language fluent, and skilled in mediation; and

“(6) allocating resources that link mediation with implementation.]

[1. These principles are modified from the 3D Security Initiative: Development, Diplomacy, Defense; Center for Justice and Peacebuilding, Eastern Mennonite University.]

2. Amend Recommendations 2.a.–b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“a. communicate to the United States president and Congress [the position of this General Assembly as set forth in Recommendation 1. Above] [that the PC(USA) opposes the war in Afghanistan]

“b. further urge the president of the United States and Congress to commit the U.S. government to the use of peaceful means in the pursuit of national interests, concentrating upon diplomacy, international collaboration, [interfaith dialogue], material aid for education, reduction of poverty, and the broadening of political enfranchisement in Afghanistan [and elsewhere];”
3. Amend Recommendation 2.g. by striking the current text and inserting new text in its place to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline; text added by plenary is shown with brackets and with a gray screen background.]

“g. [direct the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Peacemaking Program and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), to convene a seminary- and college-wide review of peace studies, including peacemaking opportunities focusing on the need to demilitarize U.S. international relations, and to report the results of this study to the 221st General Assembly (2014)] [recognize the vulnerability of women and girls to gender-based violence as a weapon of war and affirm the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peace-building, and stress the importance of their equal participation and full involvement in all efforts for the maintenance of peace and security, and the need to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution].”

4. Amend Recommendation 2 by inserting the following as a new d. following c. (and renumbering subsequent sections: [Text to be added is shown with brackets and with underline.]

“[d. encourage congregations and individual Presbyterians to pray for the people who lost loved ones in the attacks of September 11, 2001, and to pray for those first responders and volunteers who are ill as a result of their service and dedication.]”

5. Add a preamble before Item 13-02 to read as follows:

“[We of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have deep appreciation for the patriotic loyalty of our nation’s citizens and service personnel for the extreme sacrifice they paid and will continue to pay to support our effort to achieve peace and stability in Iraq and Afghanistan, and to protect the citizens of our nation. However, we believe further sacrifices and services will not serve the purposes for which we have been engaged. Therefore, the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010)]”

$Item 13-11. On Strengthening the Peacemaking Program.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment and with comment. [See p. 966.]

Amendment:

Strike the existing text and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“|The Presbytery of Pittsburgh respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to strengthen the Peacemaking Program by the following actions:|

“|1. Recognize and celebrate the 30th anniversary of Peacemaking: The Believers’ Calling and the Peacemaking Program.|

“|2. Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACWSP) to create a nine-person task force (as specified below) to|

“|a. review Peacemaking: The Believers’ Calling and its action recommendations and report the results to the 220th General Assembly (2012), with the intent of updating the engagement of Presbyterians in peacemaking; and|

3. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council, with the advice of the Peacemaking Program and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), to create an advisory committee of six expert persons to meet quarterly to counsel the Peacemaking Program on issues regarding weapons of mass destruction (WMD) and other emerging issues.

4. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Peacemaking Program and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), to convene a seminary and college-wide review of peace studies and peacemaking opportunities appropriate to the major shifts in the approach of the United States international relations and to report the results of the study to the 220th General Assembly (2012). The goal of the review is to engage students in active peacemaking and to share the wisdom of faculty among our church-related educational institutions.

Lifting the example of Jesus as the model of our behavior and beliefs in love and peacemaking exemplified in Luke 6: 27–38 as our policy for Presbyterians now and in the future, the 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the General Assembly Mission Council, through the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and the Peacemaking Program, to appoint a five-person steering team, at least one of whom shall be a college student or other young adult, to work with ACSWP and Peacemaking Program representatives to design and implement a broadly participatory four-year process to do the following:

1. Seek clarity as to God's call to the church to embrace nonviolence as its fundamental response to the challenges of violence, terror, and war;

2. Identify, explore, and nurture new approaches to active peacemaking and nonviolence, reporting to the 221st General Assembly (2014) with recommendations for policy and action. This process shall include the following elements:

   b. The steering team is encouraged to consult with ministries of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), particularly Compassion, Peace and Justice, World Mission, and Presbyterian Women; Office of the General Assembly; college chaplains and campus ministers; middle governing body staff; and the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship in the design and implementation of the proposed policies and process.

   c. The steering team is encouraged to consult with national and international ecumenical and interfaith partners and draw on the experience and learnings from the International Ecumenical Peacemaking Convocation of the World Council of Churches (2011), and other initiatives of the broader Christian and interfaith community.

   d. The process shall help Presbyterians on all levels of the church to recognize and focus upon updated policies and actions that

      1. consider the new realities, challenges, and opportunities for working for peace and seeking justice, including the dangers currently posed by weapons of mass destruction, globalization, pluralism, the implications of U.S. foreign policy (including two current wars), impact of climate change, and an increasing competition for natural resources by developing nations as they affect the worldwide mission of the church and promotion of peacemaking;

      2. explore new thinking on nonviolence, reconciliation (including the role of truth-telling, forgiveness, confession, and public apology), human rights, security strategies, genocide and terrorism prevention, economic conversion, development, and the violence of poverty;

      3. explore new models for engaging in active peacemaking and working for justice, including new technology for advocacy and organizing, communication and decision-making, accompaniment, conflict-resolution, artistic expressions, church-based community organizing, and nonviolent direct action;

      4. respond to and prevent violence on the local level (e.g., action and advocacy concerning gang violence, gun violence, and family violence), the national level (e.g., action and advocacy on budget priorities, and decisions about investments in dependent industries), and the international level (e.g., action and advocacy on issues of war and peace) through prayer, direct action, and advocacy; and

      5. address sexism, racism, and other patterns of oppression as tasks of peacemaking and justice seeking.

“(1) consider at least two gatherings of individuals who are engaged in action and reflection on peacemaking and justice seeking, including faculty and students from Presbyterian colleges, universities, and seminaries (“… to engage students in active peacemaking and to share the wisdom of faculty among our church-related educational institutions”), activists, individuals engaged in nonviolent witness, grassroots persons working for justice and peace, and others engaged in peacemaking in congregations, middle governing bodies, Presbyterian Women, and other Presbyterian-related entities;

“(2) invite Presbyterians, individually and corporately, across the church into a time of study and reflection on the root causes of violence and responses to it, and on peace, justice, and ministries of peacemaking and justice—seeking that honor the gospel, the history of the church, and the movement of the Holy Spirit as the church attempts to live out Christ’s command to love one another, even those we call our enemies; and

“(3) create new resources or identify existing resources, working ecumenically when appropriate, that will help Presbyterians pray and study Scripture for guidance about how to respond faithfully to Jesus’ call to be peacemakers in this time.

“f. The steering team, in consultation with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and Presbyterian Peacemaking Program staff, would recruit additional writer(s) or team members as necessary to help create a report with recommendations to bring to the 221st General Assembly (2014).

“g. An interim report shall be made to the 220th General Assembly (2012). The interim report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) will include specific recommendations of strategy and policy to invite the broader church into the time of discernment, framing the conversation, naming the best partners, and laying out a process to help our congregations to wrestle with these important ethical questions.

“h. The steering team will offer its recommendation for action to the 221st General Assembly (2014), asking for that assembly to receive the report for a two-year period of study before final action in 2016.”

Comment: The committee advises that the funding of Item 13-11 be shared equally between the GAMC and the per capita budgets. This action also answers Items 13-01 (Recommendation 3.g.), 13-02 (Recommendation 2.g.), 13-03 (Recommendation 3.g.), 13-06, 13-07, and 13-09 (Recommendation 3.g. [now 3.h.]).

Item 13-06. On Entering a Six-Year Term of Discernment to Seek Clarity on Whether God is Calling Us to Embrace Nonviolence as Our Response to War and Terror.

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 13-11 of this report. [See p. 956.]

Item 13-07. Twenty-first Century Peacemaking and Seminaries, Colleges, and Congregations.

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 13-11 of this report. [See p. 959.]

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 976.]

Amend the recommendation by adding a new Recommendation 7 to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“7. Directs the Stated Clerk of the PC(USA) to convey our convictions to the president of the United States, the Congress, the United Nations, the governments of North and South Korea, the Presbyterian Churches of Korea, and our ecumenical partners.”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 973.]

Amend Recommendations 1–6 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. [Call upon the leadership of the church and particularly on] [Direct] the Stated Clerk and [on] the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) to write
FRIDAY, JULY 9, 2010

“[a.] to the administrator of [the] United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to convey the [some ears] [reservations] of Presbyterians regarding the [vision and initiatives of the strategy adopted by the] USAID [in relation with plans for the restoration of sustainability] [to restore sustainable agriculture in Haiti], and to request that USAID (i) involve hired Haitian horticultural students, Haitian farmers, and small farmer associations in the planning of local agricultural projects; and (ii) prioritize support to grassroots farmers’ associations, including women’s associations, designed to establish a sustainable small farm agriculture in preference to the introduction of commercial and/or industrial farming practices;

“[2.] [b.] [Call upon the leadership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to contact] [to] former President Bill Clinton [and Prime Minister Jean-Max Bellerive] to request that the Interim Commission for the Reconstruction of Haiti (ICRH) adopt more transparent [and accountable] processes [and greater accountability] [in relation] to the people of Haiti; and that the Haitian people deserve no less than to be consulted systematically before developing [, including systematic consultation with the Haitian people regarding development] plans that will affect their lives and the future of [the] [their] country.

“[3.] Call upon the leadership of PC(USA) to request from USAID that support be given to efforts by grassroots farmers associations towards strengthening sustainable agriculture in the context of subsistence farming instead of focusing principally on introducing commercial and/or industrial farming practices to Haiti.

“[4.] [2.] Alert [Inform] the PC(USA) membership and the leadership of the church to the [potentially] problematic nature of agro-business initiatives [aimed at using] being planned for Haitian land, including so-called marginal land, [in] [based on] bio-fuel production schemes, especially [those] relying on foreign hybrid and/or GMO seeds[, and] or the [unproven] industrial plantation of Jatropha [or any other agro-business export schemes].

“[5.] [3.] Urge [Request] the Executive Director of the GAMC to [commit Presbyterian responses to post-earthquake reconstruction in Haiti not only to emergency assistance but also to] solicit supplemental funds to complement emergency assistance by supporting medium and long-term development [assistance] [efforts] to strengthen Haitian nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and grassroots farmers’ groups [and enable them to] [so that they can] implement and manage rehabilitation programs of their own conception and design, including small scale, sustainable [agriculture] [agricultural] activities, and to provide them with short- and long-term technical assistance [in the form of mission personnel] to help them upon request.

“[6.] [4.] Commit [Direct] the PC(USA) to work collaboratively with other [churches] [denominations] and ecumenical institutions [in ensuring] [to ensure] that a. Haiti is [increasingly] able to feed itself [first];

  b. the value of reinstating tariffs as transitional protection for recovering local agriculture is given due consideration;

  [b.] [c. Exports are secondary to creating viable food economies for Haitians; and]

  “[d. Emergency food aid to Haiti is monitored and managed in such a way that it provides incentives (and not disincentives) for local food production;]

  “[e. [c. Platforms are secured] [mechanisms are created] for Haitian farmers to [get] [make] their voices heard as they advocate [before] [for themselves to] the Haitian government, the ICRH, USAID, and other international organizations [that are directly involved in the Haitian reconstruction].”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 960.]

1. Amend the first bulleted item of Recommendation 1 as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “increase violence [and displacement] within Colombia, and be perceived by many Colombians as a violation of Colombia’s national sovereignty; and”

2. Amend Recommendation 2 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “2. [Request that] [Direct] the Stated Clerk [ask] [to request] President Barack Obama and the Congress to assist with a process for the negotiation of a peace accord in Colombia [instead,] in order to end Colombia’s internal armed conflict which has lasted more than fifty years and which is a threat to the entire Andean region.”
3. Add a new Recommendation 5 to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[5. Direct appropriate offices of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) to work with ecumenical partners to monitor and post periodic updates on the impact of United States military use of seven military bases in Colombia.]”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 954.]

1. Amend the title as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“On [Protecting Christians in the Muslim World] [the Protection of Religious Minorities]—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.”

2. Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010), through its proper offices singly, or in conjunction with other denominations and faiths, through our appeal to them, to jointly encourage the United Nations to use its valuable influence, and through its diplomatic channels, to exhort the religious and political leaders of [Muslim nations] [nations with Christian and other religious minorities] to moderate extreme behavior and protect its religious minorities from such harm, and encourage [mutual respect and forbearance] [brotherly harmony between each other].”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 977.]

1. Amend Recommendations 1.a.–f as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

2. Amend Recommendation 3.c. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“c. press for the release of political prisoners; the end of intimidation, harassment, and violence against opponents of the new regime; and the free use of airwaves by church-related and other radio stations. ([The FJKM radio station, Radio Fahazavana, was closed and key staff arrested.])”

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON MISSION COORDINATION

Vice Moderator Whitsitt recognized Julia Henderson, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination, to continue the report from the committee. [For the first part of the report, see p. 18.]

The consent agenda was approved (09-12, 09-13, 09-14, 09-21 [Recommendations a.1., b., c.1., and c.2.]). The assembly disapproved Items 09-02 and 09-03.

Henderson introduced Robert Baker, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination, to present a portion of the report.

Baker introduced Hunter Farrell, director of World Mission for the General Assembly Mission Council, who spoke briefly about the work of Presbyterian mission worldwide. Farrell introduced a video to the assembly.
The assembly approved Item 09-04 as amended and disapproved Item 09-05.

The assembly approved Item 09-07 as amended and with the following floor amendment: To insert in Recommendation 2 after the words “as an entity of networks”: “[. and report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) the results]” and to insert a new Recommendation 3, and re-number current “3” as “4”, to read: “[3. That an extra commitment opportunity fund account be earmarked to provide salary and support for the position of executive director of PHEWA as described in the historic covenant of shared ministry partnership agreement that outlines our collaborative ministry]”

The assembly approved Item 09-06, approved Item 09-09 as amended, approved Item 09-NB, approved Item 09-08 as amended, and approved Item 09-11.

Henderson continued presentation of the report. The assembly approved Item 09-15 as amended, approved Item 09-16 as amended, approved Item 09-17, approved Item 09-19 as amended, and approved Item 09-20 as amended.

The report was arrested. [For the rest of the report, see p. 80.]

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON HEALTH ISSUES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Wells Kilgore, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Item 19-01 as amended. The assembly approved Item 19-05 as amended and with the following amendment from the floor: To insert as a new Recommendation 3 (and renumbering the following sections): “[3. Encourage the PC(USA) to advocate on behalf of, create, and engage in educational programs that reduce the stigma, discrimination, and fear of persons who have been diagnosed as HIV positive as a method to encourage honest disclosure and prevent the further spread of the virus.]”

The assembly voted to answer Item 19-02 with its action on Item 19-05. In response to Item 19-03, the assembly approved an alternate resolution.

Kilgore introduced Bonnie Brown, vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues, to present a portion of the report.

The assembly approved 19-04 as amended and approved Item 19-06 and Item 19-07 with a floor amendment as follows: “Future editions of resource materials on the subject of reproductive options will be revised by the Office of Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries to include additional related and appropriate scriptural references to assist those using the resources to be guided into prayer and discernment for faithful life decisions.”

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues and the committee report is as follows:

Assembly Committee on Health Issues

[There are recommendations contained in this report that have financial implications and are indicated with a “$” sign next to the item.]

I. For Plenary Action

Item 19-01. On Designating May 1 Every Year as a Day of Prayer for Healing.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 1361.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Presbytery of Upper Ohio Valley overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to set aside [May 1st] every year [as] a day of prayer for healing [and wholeness and suggests that this be done in conjunction with the day currently designated on the Presbyterian Planning Calendar as Health Awareness Sunday]. Local churches and communities are encouraged to gather together and offer prayer for the discovery of ever more effective means of treatment. These gatherings may be an occasion to give thanks for the lives of saints who have died; prayers for healing for those who are currently receiving treatment; as well as prayers for doctors, nurses, and scientists who are seeking to bring healing and hope.”

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [Text added by plenary action is show with brackets, with an underline, and with a gray screen background.] [See p. 1370.]

1. Insert as a new Recommendation 3 (and renumber the following recommendations) to read as follows:
“[3. Encourage the PC(USA) to advocate on behalf of, create, and engage in educational programs that reduce the stigma, discrimination, and fear of persons who have been diagnosed as HIV positive as a method to encourage honest disclosure and prevent the further spread of the virus.]”

2. Amend current Recommendation 3.a.(1) (new Recommendation 4.a.(1)) as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“(1) knowledgeable about the root causes and social determinants of HIV and AIDS risk and vulnerability[, including encouraging all Presbyterians, especially ministers of Word and Sacrament and church leaders, to be tested in order to be a visible example to all people and help eliminate the stigma associated with HIV and AIDS testing];

3. Strike current Recommendation 3.g. (new Recommendation 4.g.) and re-letter current Recommendations 3.h.–k. as 3.g.–j. (new recommendations 4.h.–k. as 4.g.–j.): [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text added by plenary is shown with brackets and with a gray screen background.]

“[g. Urge the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to critically assess the profit margins of drug companies that develop drugs for treating HIV and AIDS and include in its report to the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) a recommendation on appropriate percent margins the church may want to consider when investing its resources with companies that profit from drugs designed to treat HIV and AIDS.”

[4. Strike “HIV and AIDS” and insert “HIV, AIDS, Hepatitis B and Hepatitis C” wherever it appears in the text of the recommendation.]

Item 19-02. On Encouraging All Presbyterians to Know Their HIV Status.
That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 19-05 of this report. [See p. 1362.]

Item 19-03. On Making a Statement Regarding Violence Against Pregnant Women.
In response to this overture, the 219th General Assembly (2010) approved the following alternate resolution: [See p. 1363.]

“The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms females’ right and capacity to make responsible decisions regarding their sexual lives, including the right to use contraception, to reject sexual activity, to continue a pregnancy, or when necessary to end a pregnancy; condemns the injustice of any force, coercion, or violence against females to compel pregnancy, the continuation of pregnancy, sterilization, or abortion; commends and encourages those who provide shelter, medical care, and counseling for females subject to domestic violence and coercion in reproductive issues; and instructs the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate this concern and commitment to the Congress of the United States and the state legislatures, urging them to expand support for women’s shelters and transitional housing for women and children fleeing domestic and all other acts of violence, and to adopt legislation that provides adequate means of prosecuting those who perpetrate violence against females.

“In light of the many forms of violence perpetuated against women, the 219th General Assembly (2010) condemns violence against women in all forms and under all circumstances as violations of God’s will for women and men, whether that violence is perpetrated by a stranger or by an intimate partner, and commends and encourages all persons who provide shelter, counseling, and other forms of assistance for women experiencing coercion and violence.”

Item 19-04. On Taking a Stand Against Forced and Coerced Abortions.[Decisions on Ending or Continuing a Pregnancy.]
That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 1369.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Presbytery of Prospect Hill overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the PC(USA) to declare that we stand with all women against the injustice of any forced or coerced abortions [and the injustice of any forced or coerced decisions to carry a pregnancy to term].”

That the recommendation is approved. [See p. 1405.]

[Financial Implications: 2010: $0; 2011: $56,000; 2012: $0 (Unrestricted—GAMC)]

That the response is approved with amendment. [See p. 1406.]

Amend the response by adding the following text: [Text to be added by floor amendment is shown with brackets, with an underline, and with a gray screen background.]

“Future editions of resource materials on the subject of reproductive options will be revised by the Office of Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries to include additional related and appropriate scriptural references to assist those using the resources to be guided into prayer and discernment for faithful life decisions.”

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Moderator Bolbach called upon Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons for announcements.

At Parsons’ recommendation, the assembly dismissed three special committees or task forces: the Form of Government Revision Task Force, the Special Committee to Study Issues of Civil Union and Christian Marriage, and the Middle East Study Committee, with the grateful thanks of the 219th General Assembly (2010).

CLOSING PRAYER

Moderator Bolbach called upon Doris Mabrey, commissioner from the Presbytery of National Capital, who offered the closing prayer for this session of the General Assembly.

RECESS

The assembly recessed at 10:35 p.m.

Saturday, July 10, 2010, 9 A.M.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened by Cynthia Bolbach, Moderator, 219th General Assembly (2010), in Hall B of the Minneapolis Convention Center, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Michel Nseir, program executive for the Middle East with the World Council of Churches, led the assembly in the convening prayer. Nseir then brought greetings to the assembly.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Bolbach recognized Heath Rada, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, for a report from the committee.

The assembly approved Items 02-14, and 02-15. [See p.189.]

Minutes of later business sessions will be approved by a subcommittee of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

Protests found to be in decorous language are recorded in the Minutes as follows:

Protest of assembly action on Item 06-09—From Tim Leslie, commissioner from the Presbytery of Foothills: “The Assembly action on item 06–09 sending a proposed change to the Book of Order which seeks to radically change the language contained in the section is an affront to the express witness of the Scriptures which specifically call all disciples of Christ to sexual purity, ‘It is God’s will that you should be sanctified: that you should avoid sexual immorality; that each of you should learn to control his own body in a way that is holy and honorable, not in passionate lust like the heathen, who do not know God …’. (1 Thessalonians 4:3–5, NIV). This action will threaten the peace and unity of the church.”

Protest of assembly action on Item 06-09—From Marie A. Bowen, commissioner from the Presbytery of Pittsburgh; Harry W. Hughes, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Castle; Darryl Evans, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Hope; David A. Bell, commissioner from the Presbytery of East Tennessee; L. Raymond Cobb II, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Hope: “I (we—others join me in this protest) protest the adoption of the change in G-6.0106b which would remove the biblical and confessional, historical requirement of fidelity in the marriage of a man and a woman and chastity in singleness. I (we) find the 219th General Assembly in grave error. We join our voices with the whole church everywhere and always and with all who have voted in their presbyteries four times to establish and uphold the standard.”

Protest of assembly action on Item 06-09—From Barry W. Garrison, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charlotte: “I wish to protest the adoption change in G–6.0106b to remove our ordination standards. Our God is not honored when we remove our biblically centered fidelity and chastity standards. May God forgive us.”

Protest of assembly action on Item 06-09 and Item 18-06—From Rosanna P. Anderson, commissioner from the Presbytery of Monmouth: “I am not in agreement with the actions of the 219th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the decision to reverse G-6.0106b which upheld the biblical and confessionally bold standards of fidelity in the covenant of marriage and chastity in singleness for all ordained leaders in the church. I am also in disagreement with the 219th GA’s approval of the extension of medial/pension benefits to same-sex partners of PC(USA) church employees. I do not believe that the church is in agreement about this issue according to the witness of scripture and the historic confessions and the presbyteries will not have the opportunity to ratify this mandate or register their disapproval.”

Protest of assembly actions on Items 12-02, 12-03, 12-04, 12-06, 12-07, 12-08, 12-09, and 12-10—From Jeff Falter, commissioner from the Presbytery of Geneva: “I protest the blanket action of the General Assembly in responding to Items 12-02, 03, 04, 06, 07, 08, 09, 10. The report adopted as Item 12-12 does not address the issues presented in these items, nor offer guidance in states where same-sex marriage is now legal. Further, parliamentary procedure was used to silence people’s voices, mine included. (While the motion to end debate may have been technically correct, it was used inappropriately to silence people.) As I read Acts 15, the leaders of the church did not discern God’s will by silencing debate but by hearing all voices, then discerning God’s spirit through those voices. Stifling debate does not promote justice, nor further the spirit of ‘mutual forbearance’ called for in the marriage report. The action of the assembly claims to answer the above-mentioned items with the marriage report by violating that very same report. (I intended to file this as a dissent, but missed the deadline.) Thank you for the opportunity to file this protest.”

Protest assembly action on Item 18-06—From Marie A. Bowen, commissioner from the Presbytery of Pittsburgh; Harry W. Hughes, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Castle; Darryl Evans, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Hope: “I protest the approval by the 219th General Assembly of the PC(USA) of same sex benefits (both pension and medical) through the Benefits Plan of the PC(USA). I object to participate both financial and moral in providing coverage of persons not eligible under the biblical and constitutional standards of the PC(USA). Through the offerings in our churches the adopted provision coerces the unwilling acceptance of sexual relationships outside the bounds of the marriage of a man and a woman. We (others join me in this protest) find this action repugnant to our theological convictions and a Christian practice and corrosive of relations within the PC(USA).”

Protest assembly action on Item 18-06—From L. Raymond Cobb II, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Hope: “I protest the approval by the 219th General Assembly of the PC(USA) of both pension and medical benefits to same sex couples through the Benefits Plan of the PC(USA). I object to participation, both financial and moral, in providing coverage of persons not eligible under the biblical and constitutional standards of the PC(USA). Through the offerings in our churches the adopted provision requires the unwilling participation in accepting of sexual relationships which fall outside the bounds of the biblical standard of marriage between a man and a woman. This action goes against my theological convictions and sense of Christian practice observed through the ages and will create further division in the PC(USA).”

Protest of assembly action on Item 18-06—From Tim Leslie, commissioner from the Presbytery of Foothills: “The Assembly action on item 18-06 providing benefits to same sex partners through the Pension Board of the PC(USA) is an affront to the Scriptures which to not sanction such sexual relationships or identify such relationships as equal to marriage. Therefore God gave them over in the sinful desires of their hearts to sexual impurity for the degrading of their bodies with one another. They exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshiped and served created things rather than the Creator—who is forever praised. Amen. Because of this, God gave them over to shameful lusts. Even their women exchanged natural relations with women and were inflamed with lust for one another. Men committed indecent acts with other men, and received in themselves the due penalty for their perversion.’ (Romans 1: 24–27, NIV) This action will add to the actions this Assembly has taken which threaten the peace and unity of our beloved church.”

Protest of assembly action on Item 18-06—From Hector Reynoso, commissioner from the Presbytery of Mission: “I lovingly want to express my protest on the actions taken by the GA on the above overture. Granting benefits to same sex couples is a violation of our constitution since it takes for granted that a marriage can be between 2 people and not between a man and a woman. Furthermore it ignores our confessions on this issue. Finally, it is an imposition on our congregations with a financial strain in time of great financial difficulty.”

Protest of assembly action on Item 18-06—From Barry W. Garrison, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charlotte: “I would like to protest our recent action in approving same sex benefits, pension, and medical, through the Benefits Plan in PC(USA). I do this on both financial and especially moral grounds. I am literally sickened to see how far from our Presbyterian roots we have fallen.”

Protest assembly action on Item 18-06—From J. David Moody, commissioner from the Presbytery of Southeastern Illinois: “I protest the approval of same sex benefits (both medical & pension) through the benefits plan of the PC(USA) by the 219th General Assembly. In the strongest way possible I object to participating both financially & ethically in providing coverage for persons not eligible for leadership under the biblical and constitutional standards of our denomination. This mandate is coercive to our churches—requiring their participation through their offerings to unwilling accept sexual relationships outside the bonds of marriage between a woman and a man. I think this action is unjust, forcing congregations to participate in something contrary to deeply held theological & Christian convictions. I also think it corrodes even further the tenuous relationships we hold together as a covenant community.”

Protest assembly action on Item 18-06—From Carolyn Poteet, commissioner from the Presbytery of Western North Carolina: “I am writing to protest the decision made on overture 18-06 during the 219th General Assembly of the PC(USA). As I said in my testimony on the floor of plenary, I believe that for churches who would like to provide benefits for domestic partners, they have the means. Because we have passed this overture, the cost will be borne by our smallest churches, who will no longer have the means to support full-time ordained ministers of word and sacrament. For my own congregation, this will also present a grievous violation of conscience. Although the Board of Pensions speaks of ‘relief of conscience’ provisions, they were not able to offer specifics. In addition, when asked in private, one BOP staff person said he could not absolutely guarantee that our money would not be comingled with funds for domestic partner benefits. I would implore the BOP to find a middle way. One possibility would be to develop an official relationship with another insurance provider, through which churches could get insurance for domestic partners. This would provide BOTH justice AND guaranteed relief of conscience. Let us all pursue, with all our hearts, all possible means to stay together, to bless each other, and to glorify God forever. Amen.”

FINAL REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

Moderator Bolbach called on Patricia Valentine, moderator of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures, to continue the report. [See p. 56 for the first part of this report.]

Valentine reported that the total financial implications to the per capita budget of actions approved to date by the assembly were $141,275 for 2010; $381,228 for 2011; and $96,878 for 2012.

The assembly approved Item 03-25 (Recommendations 2.a., 2.a.(1), 2.c, and 3.) as amended.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures and the committee report is as follows:

II. Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

Item 03-A. Minutes, Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.
That the minutes are approved.

Item 03-B. Minutes, Presbyterian Historical Society.
That the minutes are approved.

FINAL REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON MISSION COORDINATION

Moderator Bolbach called on Julia Henderson, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination, to continue the report. [For the first part of the report, see pp. 18, 71.]

Henderson reported that the total financial implications to the mission budget of actions approved to date by the assembly were $52,087 for 2010; $295,861 for 2011; and $207,683 for 2012. Upon the recommendation of the General Assembly Mission Council, the Mission Coordination Committee now recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the 2011 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $82,097,234 and the 2012 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $80,550,613.

[The charts that are found in Budget Charts A-2.pdf under “Additional Resources” show the 2011 and 2012 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program. See pp. 710–13.]

The Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination further recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the General Assembly Mission Council to make the adjustments necessary to incorporate into the General Assembly Mission budgets for 2010, 2011 and 2012 the items with financial implications that have been approved by the 219th General Assembly. The necessary adjustments may include identifying additional sources of revenue, redirecting existing budget; or a combination of both.

The assembly rejected a motion to rescind its previous action on Item 11-03 and rejected a motion to reconsider its previous action on Item 11-03.

The assembly approved Item 09-21 as amended.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and the committee report is as follows:

II. Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

Item 09-A. Audit.
That the audit is received. [For a copy of the audit, see p. 1495.]

Item 09-B. Minutes, GAMC.
That the minutes are approved with comment.

Comment: General Assembly Mission Council Minutes: Pages are not numbered; blank spaces aren’t crossed out consistently; on May 6, 2008 meeting, GAC and GAMC were used inconsistently; no indication was made about absences—unclear whether that meant no one was absent; December 3, 2008 “Appendix” was labeled “Attachment.” April 23, 2008, under action 12, the MRTI was not defined. GAMC Executive Committee Minutes: never note whether a quorum was present; no mention of members present, absent, or excused: were there no persons absent or excused?; a little hard to determine when previous minutes were approved.

Item 09-C. Minutes, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corp.
That the minutes are approved with comment.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 660.]
1. Amend Recommendation 2 as follows: [Text added by plenary is shown with brackets, with underline, and with a gray screen background.]

“2. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council to develop and apply a funding strategy for the continuing life of PHEWA before the end of the fiscal year 2012 so that it may continue to implement GA-mandated ministries as an entity of networks [and report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) the results]; and”

“[3. Direct that an impact study be conducted before the next General Assembly, in 2012, to ascertain whether the GAMC termination strategy (due to lack of funding) has had a disproportionate impact on programs and structures within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that served the value of justice; and if so a method of remediation be designed, and that such study be reported in full to the commissioners of the 220th General Assembly (2012) for their consideration, recommendation, and action. [That an extra commitment opportunity fund account be earmarked to provide salary and support for the position of executive director of PHEWA as described in the historic covenant of shared ministry partnership agreement that outlines our collaborative ministry.]”

Item 09-08. On Supporting Mission and Ministry in North Korea.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 662.]

Amend the recommendation with the following changes: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

“[4. Affirm the work of the Lighthouse Foundation, which was established in 2004 by U.S. Presbyterian mission personnel, including PC(USA) Mission Co-Worker Sue Kinsler, to spread God’s love to the impoverished and suffering in North Korea and other nations.

[5. Instruct the GAMC, in its strategy to minister to the vulnerable population in North Korea, to continue its cooperation with the Lighthouse Foundation, whose programs of providing food for orphans and others at risk from hunger and providing rehabilitative services to persons with disabilities have proven remarkably successful in what is considered a “closed” country, and through whom the PC(USA) contributed emergency food aid in 2008.

[6. Commend Sue Kinsler as she continues ministry in North Korea through the Lighthouse Foundation. Sue has provided visionary leadership and been the primary force for ministry through the Lighthouse Foundation. In this ministry, she has earned a special trust and privilege in North Korea, making her one of the most effective agents for God’s work in this mission field.

[7. Support the Lighthouse Foundation by setting a goal of raising $150,000, outside of the budget, to match the $150,000 being provided by Pyongyang Presbytery (Presbyterian Church of Korea), which has an international partnership with the Presbytery of Cayuga-Syracuse. This would be done by appropriately appealing to congregations, presbyteries, synods, and entities such as the Presbyterian Hunger Program, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, the Medical Benevolence Foundation, and Presbyterian Women.]

[8.] [4.] Inform the PC(USA)’s national and global ecumenical partners of this action and encourage them, and PC(USA) congregations and entities, to participate in praying for, raising awareness of, and contributing funds [for this ministry] to feed the hungry and bring hope to the disabled in this reclusive country.”]

$Item 09-09. On Reinstating “Criminal Justice Sunday” in the PC(USA) Calendar, and Establishing an Office of Criminal Justice Issues.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. [See p. 666.]

Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Reestablish Criminal Justice Sunday ([second] [a] Sunday [of] [in] February) in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Planning Calendar, and within all calendar and schedule instruments.”

[Financial Implications: 2010: $0; 2011: $4,773; 2012: $4,773 (GAMC)]
2. Create an Office of Criminal Justice Issues, informed by the example of the Office of Immigration Issues—its education and networking function, and located in the appropriate mission area, e.g., Compassion, Peace, and Justice. This office is to be staffed by at least one full-time staff person. The responsibilities of this office would be to:

[a. Educate members of our churches and presbyteries concerning the criminal justice crisis in the United States—the U.S. incarcerates a larger percentage of its population than any other country in the world, and incarcerated individuals come from disproportionately large percentages of communities of color. Content of this education would include (but not be limited to):

- current trends in criminal justice in the United States: patterns of incarceration, sentencing, probation, and parole; the role of race in the exercise of criminal justice policies in the United States; the role of for-profit prisons in the formation of criminal justice policies in the United States;

- models for ministry to currently and formerly incarcerated people—including those ministries oriented towards helping formerly incarcerated people find sufficient support and resources for life after incarceration such that they do not return to prison;

- policy engagement in areas that impact the lives of people living in prison, and those who have come home—at the federal, state, county, and local levels—such as those related to judicial discretion, alternatives to incarceration, parole reform, and housing and employment policies that apply to formerly incarcerated people.

[b. Educate members of our churches and presbyteries concerning Presbyterian positions—dating back to 1959—on various aspects of criminal justice, including restorative justice, particularly as outlined in the paper, Resolution on Restorative Justice, passed by the 214th General Assembly (2002); in the Resolution on the Abolition of For-Profit Prisons—approving the Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Prisons, passed by the 217th General Assembly (2006); and in repeated resolutions in opposition to the death penalty, summarized in On Seeking an Immediate Moratorium on All Executions in All Jurisdictions That Impose Capital Punishment, approved by the 212th General Assembly (2002).

[c. Link synods, presbyteries, and churches to ecumenical and civil society organizations that are working on criminal justice issues, services, and policies, in a manner that reflects the values of restorative justice as outlined in the Resolution on Restorative Justice passed by the 214th General Assembly (2002).

[3. Formulate an initial funding strategy for the Office of Criminal Justice Issues with consultation from all appropriate parties within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as identified by the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC). While the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has faced financial difficulties and these seem likely to continue, the incarceration crisis in the United States must prey upon our conscience, our hearts, and our spirits—as it has for many years, as visible in the many criminal justice resolutions passed since before reunion. If need be, after two or more years of initial funding, this office may be required to raise its own budget: through use of designated giving; appeals to synods, presbyteries, churches, and individuals; and through foundations.]

Item 09-New Bus. Convocation on Criminal Justice.

That the following recommendation is approved. [See p. 705.]

That the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provide up to $10,000 in 2011 to support a broad convocation of interested individuals, to be called by PHEWA, to consider and propose the creation of a Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association (PHEWA) network on criminal justice for education and advocacy ministries to the 220th General Assembly (2012) and recommend a funding strategy.

[Financial Implications: 2010: $0; 2011: $10,000; 2012: $0 (GAMC)]

Item 09-10. Confirm the Election of Linda B. Valentine.

That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 670.)

That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 671.)

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. (See p. 679.)
Amend the recommendation as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to appoint a task force of nine to review mission funding and the development of new ways to raise and sustain for the mission of the whole church.

“The task force shall consist of the following:

• Three persons from the racial ethnic and emerging communities and networks;
• Two persons from the stewardship/mission funding programs in presbyteries;
• One person from a synod stewardship/mission funding program;
• One person from the 219th General Assembly (2010) Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination;
• Two persons at-large.

This task force would be staffed by one (1) person from the Mission Funding area of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

Advise GAMC and the Presbyterian Foundation to consult with ACREC and its constituencies to develop new ways to raise and sustain mission funding.]”

Item 09-16. Extension of Time Regarding Renaming ACREC.

Amend Recommendations 2 and 3 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[2.Enable ACREC to form a special study group of five people that includes ACREC member(s), a theologian, and a sociologist who have a deep understanding on racial, cultural, ethnic, and growing diverse demographic issues in the United States and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).]

“[3.Request that ACREC bring a report on the study and recommendation of a new name of ACREC to the 220th General Assembly (2012).]”

$Item 09-17. That Unused Funds Designated for the Status of Women Task Force Be Re-designated.

That the recommendation is approved. (See p. 682.)

Item 09-18. WITHDRAWN-5/11/10

That the recommendation is approved with amendment. (See pp. 682–83.)

Amend the recommendation by deleting Recommendation 4 as follows, and renumbering Recommendations 5–9 to 4–8: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

“[4.Direct the GAMC to amend its policy on closed meetings (GAMC Manual of Operations, Appendix 1) to provide that corresponding members to the GAMC from the advisory and advocacy committees be included in all closed sessions of the GAMC with the understanding that they are bound by confidentiality.]”

$Item 09-20. On Supporting Young Adults in Mission and Leadership Development in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“The Presbytery de Cristo overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the General Assembly Mission Council to provide budgetary support in the amount of $100,000 ($50,000 for 2011 and $50,000 for 2012) for scholarships for [each] Young Adult Volunteer\(\text{s}\), above and beyond currently budgeted support for the Young Adult Volunteer (YAV) program, for the costs of their service internationally and nationally through the Young Adult Volunteer Program (YAV) of the World Mission Office. These funds would help cover the cost of living expenses for [each] YAV\(\text{s}\), which include housing and utilities, health insurance, and stipends for food and local transportation. (YAV\(\text{s}\) would continue to raise support for their year of service at a lesser, more attainable amount.)

“This request for funds is for up to 100 volunteers per year, not to exceed $1,000,000 total per YAV calendar term (August-August). The GAMC should review and evaluate this funding mandate every second General Assembly year (every fourth year).

“[Site coordinators should be treated as mission coworkers and GAMC should invite presbyteries to financially support them.]”

[Financial Implications: 2010: $0; 2011: $50,000; 2012: $50,000 (GAMC)]

Item 09-21. Budgetary and Financial Concerns—Mission Budget [as reported on Saturday, July 10, 2010].

That Recommendation A.2. is approved with amendment. [See p. 693.]

Expressions of Appreciation to the Committee on Local Arrangements

Moderator Bolbach recognized young adult advisory delegates from the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures, to offer the appreciation of the assembly to the Committee on Local Arrangements.

Moderator Bolbach recognized Assistant Stated Clerks Deborah Davies and Kerry Rice to make a presentation to the Committee on Local Arrangements from the Presbyteries of the Twin Cities Area, Northern Waters, and Minnesota Valleys, and the Synod of Lakes and Prairies.

Introduction of the Presbytery of Pittsburgh Committee on Local Arrangements

Moderator Bolbach introduced a video welcoming the church to Pittsburgh, host city for the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Thanks to Staff

Moderator Bolbach called upon Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons for a moment of personal privilege, in which he expressed his appreciation to OGA staff, volunteers, vendor staff, elected members and staff of other General Assembly agencies, student assistants, and others.

Announcements

Moderator Bolbach called upon Stated Clerk Parsons for announcements on various topics.

Closing Prayer

Moderator Bolbach called upon Leslieanne Braunstein, minister member of the Presbytery of National Capital, who offered the closing prayer for this session of the General Assembly.

Adjournment

The assembly was adjourned at 10:15 a.m., to be dissolved upon the convening of the 220th General Assembly (2012) on June 30, 2012, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Rationale

The Book of Order (G-13.0111) mandates the following for the General Assembly Nominating Committee: “… The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. … Within thirty days prior to the regular meeting of the General Assembly, the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly shall [nominate] persons for election by the General Assembly to fill the vacancies occurring at the adjournment of the ensuing General Assembly. …”
There are five vacancies on the General Assembly Nominating Committee. This slate of nominees represents the greater diversity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as mandated by G-4.0403 in the Book of Order.

If this slate is elected, the full membership of the General Assembly Nominating Committee will consist of 5 female church members, 5 male elders or church members, 6 ministers of the Word and Sacrament (2 female and 4 male).

The racial ethnic breakdown will be: 2 Asian Americans, 2 African Americans, 2 Hispanics/Latinas/Latinos, 1 Latina/Native American, 9 Caucasians.

One member of the General Assembly Nominating Committee is living with a disability.

I. REFERRALS IN PROGRESS

A. Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy

   Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

   Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).
B. Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns

Progress Report: The permanent working group was charged with the following recommendations:

- In addition to the ACWC and ACREC members, the working group may appoint two to four members at-large, one of which should be a young woman of color between the ages of 18–35, to provide representation and expertise, as needed.
- The ACWC and ACREC shall meet jointly at least once a year, at which time an extra meeting day will be provided for the joint working group.
- The joint working group shall monitor the church’s response to issues and concerns raised in the initial Women of Color Consultation, advise ACREC and ACWC on new and emerging issues impacting women of color, and consult with the General Assembly [Mission] Council in planning for future consultations. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 964–65)

The Permanent Joint Working Group on Women of Color in the Church, made up of two members of ACREC and two members of ACWC (appointed by the leadership of each advocacy committee) plus three other racial ethnic women (two of whom are ages 18–35), had their first meeting in July of 2009 in conjunction with a joint meeting of ACWC and ACREC. They met again in January 2010, and have begun and continue to do the work of monitoring the church’s response to issues and concerns raised in the initial Women of Color Consultation.

While the Permanent Joint Working Group on Women of Color in the Church has felt some frustration at the lack of or inadequate responses to their referral monitoring inquiries, they continue to be diligent in the task assigned them by the 218th General Assembly (2008). The group has several recommendations coming to the 219th General Assembly (2009) via ACWC and ACREC that pertain particularly to concerns of women of color in the church. With the help of the advocacy committees, they have also requested that the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) and the Moderator and Stated Clerk of the General Assembly make a stronger effort to publicize the fact that the church is now in the decade of “Hearing and Singing New Songs to God,” lifting up and celebrating the voices and contributions of women of color in the church (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 964).

With the help of Research Services of the GAMC, the joint working group created a survey to collect disaggregated data within the six entities of the GAMC on age, gender, race/ethnicity, and level of employment. With the information gathered, the group hopes to move forward advocating for women of color in positions of leadership, especially younger women of color. The group has begun and hopes to continue to work in collaboration with the Office of Cultural Proficiency of the GAMC, as well as the Women of Color Consultation Committee.

2. 2004 Referral: Item 05-03. Recommendation 4. That the General Assembly Request the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, Following Review of Resources Currently Available to Meet the Needs of Clergywomen in the Call Process and in Pastorates, to Make Recommendations That Contribute to a Pro-active, Health-giving Ministry to and Relationship with Our Clergywomen—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2004, Part I., pp. 77, 38990).

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

C. General Assembly Mission Council

1. 2008 Referral: Item 09-12. Resolution to Explore the Study of the Status of Women at All Levels in the PC(USA), Recommendation 1. Create a Task Force to Design a Mechanism for the Study of the Status of Women at All Levels in the Church That Will (a) Assess the Presence, Participation, and Effectiveness of Women at All Levels of the PC(USA), Both Elected and Employed, (b) Explore and Analyze Attitudes About Women in Leadership, and (c) Describe the Treatment of Women in Leadership Positions, Including How They Are Compensated as Compared with Men—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 961–64).

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Interim Report: An Advisory Task Force for Special Offerings has been commissioned by the General Assembly Mission Council. Members of the Advisory Task Force for Special Offerings include: The Reverend Karl Travis (chair), the Reverend Sarah Butter, the Reverend Sidney Davis, Jorge Gonzales, Taylor Lewis Guthrie, Helen Morrison, and Cathryn Piekarski.

The interim report of the Advisory Task Force for Special Offerings includes a report of activity during 2009. There is also a recommendation to revise the Criteria and Guidelines for Special Offerings as found in the Organization for Mission, Appendix A (Item 09-12).

The task force met for their first meeting in Fort Worth in May 2009. The group reviewed twenty-year giving trends of the offerings in the context of church membership and giving to denominational mission through other funding streams. (See General Assembly Mission Council Charts for Special Offerings, pp. 182–83.) Members conducted an initial analysis of print and web resources related to the four special offerings noting at least three major elements to all of the offerings: a theological/liturgical moment, an educational/inspirational moment, and an asking/giving moment. These three aspects combine to give the offerings their individual and collective identity and help serve as the “connective tissue” of congregations across the denominations as they participate in the offerings.

It was discovered that two separate actions of the 218th General Assembly (2008) resulted in minor inconsistencies in regard to the guidelines for the church-wide special offerings (from “Funding Christ’s Mission” and from the previous Special Offerings Review Task Force). A document that reconciles these differences has been reviewed, affirmed by the task force, and submitted as a separate action item through the GAMC entitled, “Revised Criteria and Guidelines for Special Offerings.”

The chair and vice chair were appointed to work on behalf of the entire task force to explore parallel evaluation projects that relate to the offerings—one being a ministry effectiveness (effectiveness usually means costs/spending so might you want to say ministry impact) study of the program recipients of two of the offerings, the other being a materials cost-effectiveness study. Both of these projects are being managed by GAMC staff with close cooperation and communication with the task force.

An annual report of revenue and expenditures was generated and reviewed by the task force, including information regarding use of the offering receipts by congregations and middle governing bodies. It has been noted as an item of concern that some congregations use the offering materials and collect the offerings, but retain the receipts for local use. Likewise, there are some inconsistencies between what congregations submit to presbyteries and the disbursement of those funds in a timely and accurate manner to the intended programs. These concerns are lifted up as concerns that the task force will continue to explore as they seek recommendations to address these issues. It is also noted that in some instances the portion of the Peacemaking Offering designed to be used by presbyteries and synods are on occasion not being put to use, but placed in savings or in rare circumstances used to cover administrative and staff expenses of the middle governing bodies. These are items of concern that warrant further study or evaluation.

The task force met again in February 2011 with the chief item of business to be that of developing a methodology and process for evaluating the marketing effectiveness of the offering resources and tactics used to interpret and promote the participation and fund-raising capacity of the offerings. The task force will work with a consultant to conduct a thorough review of the marketing effectiveness of special offerings (marketing or promotion or materials or potential). It is believed that there exists great untapped promise and potential for the offerings to cultivate wider participation and increased financial support of Presbyterians for the funding of the church’s mission. This project will include numerous interviews, focus groups, and online surveys over the course of the next eighteen months, resulting in information that will shape recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

This project has been deferred until final action on the proposed Form of Government has been taken.

Progress Report: Single Payer Seminars

Seven very successful regional, one-day seminars supporting Single Payer Universal Healthcare Reform have been provided with funding, toward implementation of this action of the 218th General Assembly (2008). The funding remaining for three seminars is projected to be completed in 2010 with a final report to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

a. Basic Information

Of the ten seminars that were mandated by General Assembly action, seven have been held:

- In Pasadena, California, at the First Presbyterian Church on May 9, 2009; 375 persons in attendance.
- In Albany, New York, at the Westminster Presbyterian Church on March 31, 2009; 325 persons attended.
- In Princeton, New Jersey, at the Mackay Center of Princeton Theological Seminary on May 31, 2009; 175 persons attended.
- In metro Louisville, Kentucky, in New Albany, Indiana, at Indiana University Southeast on May 31, 2009; 175 persons attended.
- In Towson, Maryland, at the Towson Presbyterian Church on May 30, 2009; 100 persons attended.
- In Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary on June 14, 2009; 200 persons attended.
- In Houston, Texas, at St. Paul’s United Methodist Church on September 13, 2009; 100 persons attended.

b. Programs and Budgets

The local expense budgets for these seminars ranged from $1,900 to almost $6,000, not including in-kind assistance such as the use of hosts’ facilities. Our grants ranged from $1,900 to $2,500. In two instances the latter amount included sending a member of a committee to participate in the program (Houston and Pasadena). For the most part, programs featured well-known single payer advocates as speakers, plus panel presentations or discussion periods either with the attendees as a whole or splitting up into small groups. Some took up the better part of the day and included a meal (breakfast or lunch) while one was a three-hour program. Representative John Conyers (Michigan-14), the author of the main single payer bill in Congress spoke at three of the seminars, expressing gratitude for this prophetic action by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Federal, state, and local elected officials were invited to each seminar, with gratifying results. Seminar presentations were made by several, including Representative Eric Massa (New York-29), Representative Paul Tonko (New York-21), Representative John Yarmuth (Kentucky-3), two Pennsylvania state representatives at the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, seminar, a city councilman at one seminar, and more. The Roman Catholic Archbishop of the Galveston-Houston Archdiocese was among presenters for the Houston, Texas, seminar. In every seminar, representatives of Physicians for a National Health Plan were involved in speaking, planning, or both. In several, persons connected to Healthcare-Now were involved. After the endorsement of the PC(USA) General Assembly, these two latter groups officially offered their support as well as the California Nurses Association—all prominent single payer advocacy groups.

c. Impact

We are still collecting information about the impact of these seminars and so this part of the report is incomplete. The endorsement of a single payer Medicare-for-all plan by the General Assembly did, itself, have considerable impact as the Episcopal and United Church of Christ denominations followed with their own endorsements, specifically citing the Presbyterian action as exemplary. Most of the seminars ended with an opportunity for participants to send cards or letters to state and national legislators on behalf of single payer national health insurance. Surveys of participants indicated that the seminars attracted large numbers of people who had never attended a single payer event before. Media presence was actively solicited and obtained by all, some receiving extensive print, internet, and local television coverage. Preliminary indications are that at least some of the seminars generated considerable impact, but we will have specifics at a later date. One site (Princeton, New Jersey) has already sent in an impact statement that we attach herewith.

d. Coming Events and Challenges

We anticipate arranging for three more seminars as per the General Assembly mandate. We are in slow-moving conversations with Presbyterians in Minneapolis, Colorado, and Montana. We are finding that many locations are just not aware of the availability of these grants. Presbyterian organs of communications have not been cooperative in this respect. Published summaries of General Assembly actions have omitted any mention of this action. Even after expressing our frustration over this, General Assembly agencies and staff have not really paid any attention to (or attended) seminars. The national staff at the PHEWA Office is the exception, both having attended the local seminar and provided exemplary staff assistance and support in implementation of this General Assembly action. The Stated Clerk, however, did send a forceful letter on behalf of single payer to national legislators and offices. There has been no coverage of these seminars by the denomination. I think this lack is at least partly why we have not had more applications. Just recently we had a group in Dayton inquire about the grants; they only lately discovered the program through indirect contacts. Considering that this proposal passed the health committee of the General Assembly by an overwhelming majority and the General Assembly itself by a 60-40 split (which is only slightly lower, in terms of support, than national polls), it is a bit disconcerting to have so little support from General Assembly communications and staff. We think some explanation is in order and ought to be forthcoming.

Other challenges include the attempt of groups that are not interested in advocating for the single payer solution to obtain these grants where we have had to reiterate our purpose and the General Assembly mandate. Also we have had to negotiate with groups that wanted to advocate for a state-based single payer plan and were not as interested in educating about and advocating for a national single payer health insurance plan.

Impact Statement from Planning Committee, Princeton, New Jersey, Seminar
Educating About and Advocating for Single Payer Universal Healthcare Reform

Good News: About the consequences of the “Single Payer” G.A. Overture from Pittsburgh Presbytery, adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008), Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

1. This Overture, and the resulting G.A. action, have been used as curriculum at Cornell Medical School.

2. Our mission monies, through these seminars, multiplied energy, intelligence, imagination and love.

3. Our PC(USA) mission presence is encouraging statewide organizing in New Jersey.

Note related to Point # 1 above: At a reception for Physicians for a National Health Plan in Manhattan in the spring of 2009, Dr. Oliver Fein, of the Cornell Medical School, was introduced to a guest, the Rev. Bebb Stone. When he learned that she was a Presbyterian, Dr. Fein thanked the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for their 2008 General Assembly Overture on “single payer” healthcare reform. He said that he was using it on Grand Rounds with medical students. Evangelism!
Note related to Point #2 above: The mission monies that backed up that 2008 Overture, which named single payer as the best method for achieving healthcare reform which is a ‘moral imperative,’ were shared regionally. In New Jersey, that $2500 leveraged the members of a nascent organization (New Jersey One Plan, One Nation) into action and additional donations were forthcoming. The Coalition included churches, Healthcare-Now, Physicians for a National Health Plan, labor, the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), the National Organization for Women (NOW), Peoples Organization for Progress, and other activists. This coalition organized a May 31, 2009 conference at Princeton Theological Seminary, which was attended by 175 people. Rep. John Conyers, author of House Resolution 676, supporting universal healthcare reform, came and spoke. Moderated by Presbyterian minister, the Rev. Kate Killebrew, there was a panel of individuals who told why, from their perspective, single payer was a necessity. Those individuals included a small business owner (who had been identified by his Letter to the Editor in the New York Times); an uninsured, working single mom, a young urban community organizer from Newark, and a new U.S. citizen with no health insurance, who had to return to India for treatment of his life threatening condition. At the “Presbyterian table” 120 postcards reading, “As a person of faith, I support single payer healthcare reform” were signed and addressed for mailing to their legislators. Another donation covered postage.

Note related to Point #3 above: The New Jersey One Plan, One Nation has continued its efforts. There was a lobbying day in Washington D.C. in the summer with two busloads of folks going to visit Senators and Representatives in support of single payer universal healthcare reform.

We, here in New Jersey, thank the Commissioners of the 218th General Assembly (2008) for their faithfulness.

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Progress Report: These referrals are partially answered by the “Report of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment of Its Engagement with Corporations Involved in Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank,” refer to Item 14-03.

29. 2008 Referral: Item 11-18. Report on Human Rights in Colombia, Recommendation 2. Direct the World Mission’s Ministry Area, in Consultation with the Appropriate Entities of the General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly, to Continue to Monitor the Situation in Colombia, and to Keep the Whole Church Abridge of These Findings; and to Offer Advice and Counsel, as Needed, About How This Denomination Can Continue to Support the Peacekeeping Efforts of Our Partners in Colombia—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 45, 47, 1180–85).

Progress Report: A task force was appointed by the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/PW ministry area to monitor the progress of African American church growth as directed by the 218th General Assembly (2008). The National Black Presbyterian Caucus held its biennial meeting in July 2009, and a major focus of the meeting was to consider implementation of the African American Church Growth Strategy. An Implementation Team was appointed by the board of the National Black Presbyterian Caucus in consultation with the African American Congregational Support Office. The task force appointed by the Racial Ethnic and the Women’s Ministries/PW ministry area will present a final response to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Interim Report: This interim report is submitted by the Creating a Climate for Change Task Force.

The church has long established its mission to speak prophetically for justice, equity, and full inclusion in the human community, and its responsibility in its own life to practice policies of non-discrimination, affirmative action, and cultural proficiency, both as a witness to the abundant diversity of God’s creation and as a means of equipping the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to minister and do mission effectively in the world today.

The church’s policies and practices relating to its own employment and purchasing practices have evolved with societal practices and changes in the church’s own institutions and structures. However, the development of this policy has not been a smooth progression and there are places where there are overlapping responsibilities and/or policy guidance that is no longer with existing practices.

The Climate for Change Task Force was created by the 218th General Assembly to: “review the current Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Affirmative Action/Equal Employment Opportunity (AA/EEO), contracting and purchasing policies; and recommend revisions” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 1010, Recommendation 3.a.).

The task force is charged with responsibility to consider and recommend changes to the following:

1. Update churchwide AA/EEO policies to reflect the church’s commitment to using the tools of cultural proficiency for organizational change;
2. Provide guidance and standards for consistent application of the Minority Vendor Policy in the six corporate entities related to the General Assembly;
3. In consultation with staff, develop new guidelines and procedures to be used in lieu of services formerly provided by Project Equality; and
4. Revise and update AA/EEO and Minority Vendor policies to reflect changes in the agencies related to the General Assembly and the changing business environment created by emerging technology. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 1010, Recommendation 3.b.)

The General Assembly directed the task force to submit “an interim report to the 219th General Assembly (2010), and a final report to the 220th General Assembly (2012)” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 1010, Recommendation 3.d.).
The task force was appointed in 2009. The members include: Diane Givens Moffet (chair), Yvonne Armstrong, Colby Anderson, Catherine Chang, Hardy Kim, Albert Masters, Sarah Moore-Nokes, and José Olagues. They have had two meetings, both in Louisville, Kentucky: October 8–10, 2009, and May 12–14, 2010; and are scheduled to meet September 9–12, 2010, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

At its first meeting, the task force consulted with agency executives of the five agencies located in the Louisville area, along with other appropriate staff, including the associate for Cultural Proficiency and the manager for Purchasing. At its May meeting, the task force consulted with representatives of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and the Advisory Committee on Cultural Proficiency. The task force will consult with the Board of Pensions at its September 2010 meeting. The task force will meet twice in 2011 to draft its report and hold a final meeting in January of 2012 for final consultation and preparation for General Assembly.

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

D. Office of the General Assembly

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Final Response will be presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

II. FINAL RESPONSES TO REFERRALS

A. Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy

Response: This study guide will be available at the General Assembly. Its preparation has involved three elements: (a) two consultations with presentations by economists, development specialists, and justice advocates of a wide range of opinions, looking at economic, cultural, and spiritual aspects of globalization; (b) ecumenical coordination, particularly within the Reformed family; (c) the preparation of a version of the study guide for young people going on mission trips.

Response: This referral is answered by Item 10-11, “Loving Our Neighbors: Equity and Quality in Public Education (K–12),” being presented to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Response: This referral is answered in the Human Rights Update, Item 11-04, prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. This report focuses on significant trends in each two-year period. More extensive treatment of the sit-Response: This referral is answered by Item 11-06, “Gun Violence and Gospel Values: Mobilizing in Response to God’s Call,” being presented to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

5. 2008 Referral: Item 09-06. That the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in Partnership with the Office of Child Advocacy and in Consultation with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, Create a Resolution Team to Study the Church’s Policies on Public Education in Relationship to the Issues of Desegregation, Affirmative Action, Faith-Based Initiatives, Home Schooling, Charter Schools, and the No Child Left Behind Law, with Attention to Class as Well as Race; Making Appropriate Recommendations to the 219th General Assembly (2010) and, if Appropriate, Subsequently Preparing a Study Guide for Individual and Congregation Use—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 53, 55, 865–66).

Response: This referral is answered by Item 10-11, “Loving Our Neighbors: Equity and Quality in Public Education (K–12),” being presented to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Response: This referral is answered by Item 10-10, “Neither Poverty Nor Riches: Compensation, Equity, and the Unity of the Church,” being presented to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Response: This referral is answered in the Human Rights Update, Item 11-04, prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

Response: With the help of justice-oriented Presbyterians in both New Hope and Coastal Carolina presbyteries, this monitoring has continued. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly wrote both company and union upon the certification of election victory by workers choosing to form a union in late 2008, affirming the result and encouraging both management and labor to negotiate constructively toward an equitable contract. Concern was also expressed that difficulties with the employment of immigrant workers could be resolved without government intervention.

See Referral 8 above (this also has to do with the Smithfield labor situation).

Response: This referral is answered by Item 19-05, “Becoming an HIV and AIDS Competent Church: Prophetic Witness and Compassionate Action,” being presented to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Response: This referral is answered by a section in the Human Rights Update, Item 11-04, prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

Response: Monitoring has continued, noting continued U.S. investment in seven military bases, continued funding for anti-narcotics operations, and the transfer of some alleged drug traffickers and human rights violators for prosecution in the United States. The Peacemaking Program and the Peace Fellowship continue a very important accompaniment program that pairs U.S. Presbyterian volunteers with Colombian church leaders, especially in the areas and camps where approximately 3 million displaced Colombians live. Note is made of this in the Human Rights Update, Item 11-04.

B. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns

Response: In preparation for interviews the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) held with the chief executive officers for the six General Assembly agencies in 2009, a report format was developed and distributed for use. The form inquired about the agencies’ plans, strategies, and execution with regard to cultural proficiency goals set forth in report Creating a Climate for Change within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), which was approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004). For information on the results of the form and the findings from the interviews, see the committee’s report, “A Review of Efforts Regarding Cultural Proficiency and Creating a Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” Item # 11-09.

C. Committee on the Office of the General Assembly/General Assembly Mission Council

Response: The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) respond to these referrals as follows:

Recommendation 2 reads as follows:

The COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table met on January 28, 2010, in Louisville, Kentucky, to carry out the General Assembly’s self-referral review in regards to the per capita offering and how its expenses and programs are allocated.

The COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table is composed of three elected members from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and three elected members from the General Assembly Mission Council.
The group reviewed the statistical history of per capita and the uncollected per capita statements from 1988 through 2008. The group also reviewed the itemized Statement of Activities, beginning with the year 2008, as well as the proposed 2011–2012 Per Capita Budget. Further, the COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table reviewed the report submitted by the Office of the General Assembly to the 218th General Assembly (2008). This report (Item 03-16) was overwhelmingly approved by the General Assembly by a voice vote. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 34, 35, 164–75).

The results of the review of allocations of expenses and programs to per capita funds are listed below.

The group unanimously affirmed the following:

- The COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table acknowledged the value of “the interdependent nature of Presbyterian polity” (Book of Order, G-9.0404) as the responsible way of sharing the costs that equitably belong to the whole Presbyterian church community expressing the essential unity of the church, giving tangible witness to the unity and wholeness promised to us in Jesus Christ: “all believers are, therefore, under obligation to sustain the ordinances of the Christian religion where they are already established, and to contribute by their prayers, gifts, and personal efforts to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ throughout the whole earth” (The Book of Confessions, The Westminster Confession of Faith, 6.058).

- That Presbyterians have a deep concern for good stewardship, the decent and orderly administration of funds, and the most responsible and economic uses for financial resources. The COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table reaffirmed the significance of the per capita offering to the welfare of the ministries properly funded by it.

- The table affirmed that while every funding system in the church is under stress, the per capita system is working! Hard work has been done at the General Assembly level to keep the increase in the per capita rate below the rate of inflation. At the same time, in spite of the fact that many congregations and governing bodies are facing financial stress, the level of per capita payments received has remained remarkably high (more than 95 percent). Both COGA and GAMC are grateful for the faithful support of Presbyterians for these core ecclesiastical responsibilities.

- The table reaffirmed the basic functions outlined by the 207th General Assembly (1995) and the 218th General Assembly (2008) that are critical for holding us together as a Presbyterian Covenant community and are funded appropriately from per capita at the General Assembly level. Therefore, the COGA/GAMC Joint Per Capita Table reaffirmed the following as core ecclesiastical expenses to which per capita funds shall be allocated:

  —The General Assembly session, including commissioners’ expenses, where elders and ministers come together to seek to discern the mind of Christ.

  —The Office of the General Assembly, which is responsible for the planning and the execution of the General Assembly; upholding our Constitution; communicating the actions of the assembly to the church and the world; supporting our governing body system and providing training for elders and church officers; training our committees on preparation of ministers (CPMs) and committees on ministry (COMs); maintaining our minutes, records, and statistics; publishing essential resources to uphold our faith and polity such as the Book of Order and The Book of Confessions; giving staff support to our military chaplains; promoting Christian vocation, the ordering of ministry, and the certification of Christian educators.

  —The General Assembly permanent and special committees and commissions (such as the General Assembly Nominating Committee, Advisory Committee on the Constitution, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, the Form of Government Task Force, and so forth) that carry out the work of the assembly between meetings.

  —The Presbyterian Historical Society, which collects, preserves, and shares the historic record of American Presbyterianism.

  —Our membership and core support in the ecumenical bodies in which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is a member (their “per capita” costs), and our participation in interdenominational conversations, which give expression to our basic ecclesiological conviction that we alone are not the church but only one part of the body of Christ, so we “might be a more effective instrument of mission in the world” (Book of Order, G-3.0401d), thus expressing our Presbyterian identity through our ecumenical participation and connections.

  —The meetings of the General Assembly Mission Council, and the expenses for legal services and for the planning and evaluation of mission (but not the mission programs), which makes it possible to coordinate our mission as Presbyterians, and connect it with fidelity to the governing bodies and the whole church.

Therefore, the Per Capita Table agrees that the proposed Per Capita Budget for 2011–2012 is responsibly allocated and administered. It is a fundamental way in which all of the nearly 11,000 congregations and governing bodies of the PC(USA) are connected, and the way it allows its members and leaders the support and the training needed to participate in the work of General Assembly committees, commissions, and the General Assembly itself. It is how Presbyterians discern God’s call to service and it is how Presbyterians preserve our heritage. It is how Presbyterians participate in the life of the wider church, as we commit ourselves to share the Gospel, and work and live in fellowship with “all persons in every nation” (Book of Order, G-4.0101).

Recommendation 3. reads as follows:

3. ... the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly [Mission] Council to share, in partnership with the middle governing bodies, educational materials with the whole church, so that all will have a better understanding of the history, values, and uses of the per capita budget. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 167)

In preparation for producing and sharing educational materials on per capita with the whole church, the Department of Communication, Technology, and Development of the Office of the General Assembly took steps to plan and implement a per capita summit in October 2009. Immediately following the Fall Polity Conference, the summit gathered approximately twenty people to look at the history of per capita, at current trends across the church, and to share thoughts and ideas for the future of per capita. The group included leadership from middle governing bodies and national staff. The ideas generated from the two-day summit were extremely helpful as plans for educational materials became more focused. The multilayered dimensions of per capita, as well as the changing nature of the church in the twenty-first century, are being taken into consideration in this process.

As this project progresses, it is apparent that “one size fits all” is not the case when it comes to interpreting per capita across the church. Therefore, multiple approaches will be necessary. The per capita Web site is a source of interpretive materials. The new Web design for OGA, which will come in the latter half of 2010, will be an effective way for congregations and middle governing bodies to share their “best practices” in interpreting per capita in their contexts. An easy link to MGB Connect is included in the plans.

In addition, a new per capita brochure will be available by the 219th General Assembly (2010). General in nature, the brochure will provide biblical and historical foundations for this funding stream, all in a language and approach that resonates with the church of today. A church-wide distribution of the brochure is planned, beginning with the assembly and extending to every session and middle governing body in the denomination.

Response: While the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) provide a combination of staff and resources to assist in prevention of sexual misconduct and to support middle governing bodies and local churches when a minister of the Word and Sacrament controlled or employed by them is accused of sexual misconduct, this approach may have been perceived to be reactive rather than responsive, and could be more proactive. The approach should be expanded and strengthened to ensure appropriate resources are easily accessible to middle governing bodies and local particular churches. At the same time, survivors must receive information to enable them to access pastoral care and access advocacy assistance regardless of whether the perpetrator is a minister of the Word and Sacrament, member, elder, deacon, commissioned lay pastor, volunteer, or non-ordained staff doing ministry, including Christian educators and youth leaders of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

To strengthen and improve resourcing for middle governing bodies and local particular churches, the OGA/GAC will:

a. Better coordinate and develop resources by forming a joint OGA/GAMC staff advisory team that will meet regularly to review existing resources and recommend development of additional resources; review the hotline response to ensure it includes appropriate pastoral and advocacy elements; review and recommend Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) “best practices” to be included in a revised Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Sexual Misconduct Policy and Guidelines to be recommended as guidelines to middle governing bodies and local churches, which is being sent as a report to the 219th General Assembly (2010) (Item 03-26); and to review the training resources for needed updates and enhancements.

STATUS: An Office of the General Assembly/General Assembly Mission Council (OGA/GAMC) staff advisory team met regularly in 2008–2010 to address the ongoing work associated with 2008 General Assembly referrals, to collectively complete a draft of the revised Sexual Misconduct Policy, and to review and evaluate ongoing prevention and response needs related to sexual misconduct policies and procedures. The OGA and the GAMC jointly recommend to the 219th General Assembly (2010) a revised General Assembly Sexual Misconduct Policy for its approval as a model with guidelines to be urged for use by all governing bodies and related entities. (See Item 03-26.)

b. Train three to four people to answer the hotline in the absence of the Sexual Misconduct Ombudsperson.

STATUS: The Sexual Misconduct Ombudsperson, Pat Hendrix, has trained two staff persons to answer the hotline. This brings the total staff available and trained to support the hotline to four people.
c. Survey, through the Office of Middle Governing Body Relations, to determine what resources presbyteries need for the prevention of and response to incidents of sexual misconduct and, if needed, to develop and distribute at reasonable cost to middle governing bodies and local particular churches, a training on the topic of preventing and responding to sexual misconduct by ministers of the Word and Sacrament, member, elder, deacon, commissioned lay pastor, volunteer, or non-ordained staff doing ministry, including Christian educators and youth leaders. This training could be available on DVD and available for order on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Website at reasonable cost. The advisory staff team could investigate online training and train-the-trainer educational programs to be provided through third party vendors at a reasonable fee per participant.

STATUS: A survey regarding prevention and response resources for sexual misconduct was prepared and sent to the middle governing bodies. Unfortunately the responses to the survey were not enough to prepare a statistical analysis of the overall need. The OGA and GAMC will continue to gather information as possible regarding the ongoing needs for prevention and response resources.

d. Place resources currently available on the PC(USA) website in one easily accessible area of the website, and develop and distribute a brochure to promote the available resources on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) website to middle governing bodies and local churches and available opportunities for training.

STATUS: There is a website at http://www.pcusa.org/sexualmisconduct where people can go to learn about keeping their congregation safe. The website also contains a wealth of information for victims seeking to know the position of the PC(USA) regarding sexual misconduct and how to make a report of sexual misconduct. There are resources for prevention and for responding to incidences of sexual abuse and misconduct available on the website as well as links to resources created by other denominations and entities that also have as their goal creating and keeping safe and healthy congregations. This website is linked from the front page of the PC(USA) website and will be featured on the front page of the PC(USA) website one week per year.

e. Increase middle governing body and local particular church awareness of the availability of these resources through MGB Connect, OGA website, and GAC website by sending online communications.

STATUS: Communications regarding the resources on www.pcusa.org/sexualmisconduct are sent periodically to middle governing bodies and are available through other PC(USA) websites and networks such as Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, Fall Polity Conference, etc.

D. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation

Response: The Foundation has elected not to charter an insurance company.

E. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations

Response: This referral is answered by Item 08-10, GACER recommendations regarding Christian Churches Together.

F. General Assembly Mission Council

Response: The Office of Environmental Ministries opened in April 2009. A mission study was completed in the summer of 2009 to guide the work of the office. The office inspires and equips congregations and presbyteries to work for eco-justice for all of God’s earth; implements the Restoring Creation for Ecology and Justice policy and other environmental policies; and works with and connects other General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) offices and networks including the Stewardship for Creation Enablers, Presbyterians for Earth Care, and the National Council of Churches Eco-Justice Program to educate the wider church on environmental issues including climate change, water issues, and sustainable agriculture.

3. 2008 Referral: Item 08-16. That the General Assembly Council Create a Review Committee, with Each Agency Reviewed Having a Voice on the Review Committee, to Review the Service of the Whole of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and Its Permanent and Advisory Committees as Related to the General Assembly Council by Doing Items 1.–3.—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 23, 24, 709–11).

Response: The chair of the General Assembly Mission Council appointed the Advisory and Advocacy Committees Review Committee, which is reporting to this General Assembly. Refer to Item 09-19.

Response: This referral is answered by the Report of the Six Agency Review Committee, Item 18-B. A communication sent by Linda Valentine, Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council, and Richard Clay, then interim president of the PC(USA) Foundation, to the committee is Appendix III of the Six Agency Review Committee Report.

Response: The Office of Cultural Proficiency serves as a resource to the PC(USA) and provides primary support for the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) in developing and implementing a strategic plan for cultural proficiency, including a long-term communication plan. The associate for Cultural Proficiency is available to consult and coordinate with the management teams of the GAMC as requested, to interface and integrate cultural proficiency goals with the implementation of the GAMC Mission Work Plan, and other diversity and inclusion efforts, as appropriate.

In an effort to promote continual organizational education and subsequent implementation of cultural proficiency, the Office of Cultural Proficiency will continue to provide and/or offer the following:

- Consultation to General Assembly committees (Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns [ACREC] and General Assembly Committee on Representation [COR]) in assessing “Creating a Climate for Change” implementation, and to others across the PC(USA) working with issues of diversity and inclusion including but not limited to race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, language, and geography.
- Identify environmental barriers and threats, particularly within the GAMC, that inhibit the development of an authentic sense of community, that supports mutual respect, workplace and personal integrity, and a willingness to be culturally proficient.
- Provide managers and supervisors with educational sessions to support the development of a culturally proficient lens in the employee evaluation process, particularly as it relates to the item addressing cultural proficiency in the workplace and/or job performance.
• Periodic engagement of the Executive Leadership Team (ELT) and Ministries Leadership Team (MLT) and the Office of Cultural Proficiency in the continued development and assessment of the communication strategy for the implementation of cultural proficiency within the GAMC. The associate for Cultural Proficiency has identified the Cultural Proficiency Continuum as an assessment tool to measure the implementation of cultural proficiency and to establish accountability for cultural proficiency across the GAMC.

• Consultation and review of all agencies’ written plans to assist in establishing support of and developing congruence with aspects of the implementation of cultural proficiency within and across agencies and with the cultural proficiency communication strategic plan.

• Utilization of Cultural Proficiency Advisory Committee members as a resource to the GAMC and others, providing opportunities for collaboration in implementation of cultural proficiency.

Response: Communications and Funds Development has worked in partnership with the Cultural Proficiency office to increase the cultural competence of stories and images used in communicating the work of General Assembly mission. In addition, the Cultural Proficiency office has equipped members of the Executive Leadership Team with tools such as the Cultural Proficiency Continuum chart and Culturally Proficient Leadership: The Personal Journey by Raymond D. Terrell and Randall B. Lindsey.

Response: The General Assembly Mission Council approved a final narrative report for “Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands,” in September 2008 (submitted by Communications and Funds Development). This report is presented for information. Current quarterly reports of receipts and disbursements are posted online at http://www.pcusa.org/financials/missioninitiative.htm. Future reports will also be posted to this web address.

Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands, Final Narrative Report

Executive Summary

The Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands campaign began as a five-year campaign to raise $40 million for church growth and international mission personnel. The campaign faced a variety of challenges from its very beginning in 2002, which limited its ability to raise pledges to meet the campaign goals.

Despite the challenges, the campaign had a number of successes, including the focused effort of its final year, which brought in $10 million in pledges, raising the total amount pledged through the campaign to more than $30 million.

The journey of the past six years, with its challenges and successes, has provided the church with the valuable opportunity to learn lessons from the campaign.

This report seeks to document the challenges, successes, and lessons, so that future efforts might be strengthened.

I. Background

A. Purpose

The strategic vision of the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands (MIJHH) was to raise $40 million in pledges during a five-year campaign for the funding of church growth and international mission support.

B. Origins

The Mission Initiative originated with actions taken by General Assemblies between 1996 and 1999 to call attention to the need for additional strength in two key areas—new-church development/redevelopment in the United States and mission support overseas. The 1998 General Assembly approved an overture calling for the investment of $80 million.

In August 2001, GAC staff, after consulting throughout the church, and with area experts, identified a need for about $200 million, between 2003 and 2010, to impact the pressing needs of the church and to offset the loss of revenue from spendable endowments, but felt that this level of giving was not feasible in the next few years. A first phase targeting nearly $40 million was proposed for the years 2003–2006. Based on the results of Phase I, it was hoped that additional phases would follow, eventually realizing the total challenge of the growth needed in this mission work.

In the original report, several campaign parameters were proposed, based on the collection of General Assembly comments that gave rise to the campaign, including:

1. The funding plan would include, but not be limited to, endowments.
2. Costs related to implementing the funding plan should be paid from the proceeds of the campaign.
3. “Up-front” money would be needed to cover initial planning and start-up costs. (The GAC set aside $1 million for this purpose.)
4. A national campaign, similar to previous efforts, was not anticipated. Instead, this creative funding plan would include a number of targeted components that would be tested during the feasibility study.
5. In order to facilitate responses from donors, six Extra Commitment Opportunity accounts were created to cover three specific areas of mission in each of the two causes.
6. A decade-long period for interpretation, cultivation, and solicitation would be developed as part of a creative new mission funding effort.
7. Intentional efforts would be made to encourage presbyteries that would be conducting campaigns for their own needs to include these causes and to assist those presbyteries with funds development counsel, inasmuch as such shared efforts may provide resources for these causes in their own regions.

C. Feasibility Study

A feasibility study was commissioned from the consulting firm of Marts & Lundy, in order to determine if the proposed campaign was realistic for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at this time in the life of the church.

Ninety individuals were identified as potential and desirable participants in the feasibility study and seventy-four individuals were subsequently interviewed. Based on the research, it was determined that the campaign should be styled as a capital campaign and focus on major prospective donors, individual and corporate (with pledges of $25,000 or more, per gift), rather than be directed to the church at large. Marts & Lundy found that “a campaign might be feasible for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the near future, but only if some significant moves are made to articulate the value of the denomination and to work in concert with local churches involving the members in those pews.”

Other criteria included:

1. “The key leadership of the GAC, Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD), and National Ministries Division (NMD) must commit a significant amount of their time to this funding effort over the five-year period.” (“a significant amount of time” was defined by “as much as 30 percent”)
2. “New and creative partnerships with governing bodies and congregations must be developed.”
3. “Adequate staffing and a budget approaching $5 million for this five-year effort must be identified. Expert funds development counsel must be retained.”
4. “List of 1,000 major gift prospects for research and cultivation must be identified, and a campaign committee comprised of key denominational leaders and major gift prospects must be established” (“major gift prospects” were defined as those who might contribute $25,000 or more).

The majority of respondents said, “2003 could be the right time for a campaign, as long as the next 12 months was spent in preparation for the effort.” Marts & Lundy drew the conclusion that “taking that position and attending to a longer view and to the fundamental mission of your organization, it may happen that in the next 12–18 months the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) could move into a capital campaign. In fact, such a campaign might be used as a tool to leverage a reorientation to [a renewal of] the true mission of the church. This is certainly the direction in which the interviewees seemed to be leading.”

Marts & Lundy proposed a five year total time horizon for the Phase I of the campaign. Their report, presented in December 2001, proposed twelve or more months to prepare for the campaign, a public kick-off in spring 2003, followed by four years focused on raising the dollars needed for the goal.

The feasibility study concluded with the voice of prospective donors: “Give us something that’s worth working for and we can make it happen with God’s help.”
D. Initial GAMC Approval

The General Assembly Council (GAC) gave initial provisional support for the campaign in February 2002, describing the effort as:

… a funds development campaign to support international mission personnel and church growth, particularly racial-ethnic church growth. The campaign will target major donors (individuals and congregations) that have an interest in mission personnel and church growth. Phase 1 of the Mission Initiative Campaign will raise $40 million over the next five years.

Final approval by the GAC was made contingent upon the following:

1. Completion of the case statement including specific examples of the mission.
2. Recruitment of the campaign committee including a campaign committee chairperson.
3. The GAC participation in the identification of potential donors.
4. Pledges to the campaign by at least 90 percent of members of GAC.
5. Presentation of a staffing plan for the administration of the campaign.

E. Case Statement

In June 2002, the five contingencies for the approval of MIJHH were addressed by the GAC.

The completed case statement addressed the two goals of the campaign:

1. Church Growth—According to the case statement, “Without new funds, we will not be able to reverse the trend of annual net losses in our denomination’s membership, nor will we be in a position to meet the opportunities to grow churches in areas of increased racial-ethnic and immigrant populations. In the last 40 years, no new endowments for new church development and redevelopment have been established. While primary responsibility for church development resides with the presbyteries, the national church has the responsibility to ensure that vital church-wide resources are developed and shared throughout the whole nation.” Therefore the campaign proposed:
   a. Grants to Presbyteries
      (1) New church development grants for new opportunities, especially in racial ethnic, immigrant, and Gen-X new church developments—$8.1 million.
      (2) Church redevelopment grants for existing congregations—$2.5 million.
      (3) Racial ethnic and immigrant fellowships—$359,000.
      (4) Grants for specialized ministries such as day-care centers, youth outreach programs, and parish nurses—$800,000.
   b. Loans to Congregations

Loans to new and existing churches to support property acquisition and building construction and expansion for racial ethnic, new immigrant, and Anglo congregations. The loans would also help congregations upgrade their technological capabilities to assist in worship—$6.5 million.

2. International Mission Personnel
   a. Support for Current Mission Personnel. At the time, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) supported more than 600 mission workers in the field. A significant portion of the campaign was designed to sustain this level and replace lost funding from the Bicentennial Fund campaign—“Without new funds, we will no longer be able to support our current level of international mission personnel”—$9.4 million.
   b. New Mission Personnel. The GAC, in consultation with partner churches, mission personnel, and staff, also identified needs for new mission personnel, in categories such as: regional experts, replacement personnel, international volunteers, frontier workers, health consultants, and many others—$11.5 million.

F. General Assembly Approval

The GAC adopted the recommendation and sent it to the General Assembly for approval. The 214th General Assembly (2002) reviewed the GAC recommendation and approved it, launching MIJHH as a five year, $40 million funds development effort for international mission personnel and church growth, with an additional provision: “that the proceeds from this campaign be considered over and above the budget and not be used to weaken the church’s commitment to missions from its unrestricted budget.”

The General Assembly directed the GAC to “implement the Mission Initiative and report on its progress” to future General Assembly meetings.

II. Campaign Challenges

A. Mission Personnel as a Focus of Campaign

The change added by the 214th General Assembly (2002) was very significant. As interpreted by the General Assembly Council, the provision specified that no Mission Initiative gifts could be allocated in support of existing mission personnel, since existing personnel were already within the budget. The General Assembly Council had been clear that it could not sustain the current number of mission personnel without additional funds, and had designated 25 percent of the total campaign for support of current mission personnel, but the revisions to the case statement on the floor of the assembly made this impossible.

To meet the requirement that the Mission Initiative not diminish the level of undesignated mission budget support for mission personnel, the GAC determined a percentage of the budget, based on the previous year, that would be representative of the church’s commitment to mission from the unrestricted budget, and made that percentage constant over the life of the campaign. But as each year passed, the level of restricted funds available for mission personnel support decreased, and they could not be replaced by new gifts to the Mission Initiative.

The General Assembly was aware of the funding needs for current mission personnel, and had approved an additional funds development effort to meet those needs: The General Assembly Council was directed to “communicate to the particular churches of the denomination an extra commitment opportunity (ECO) to support a ‘faith factor’ increase in the 2003 budget of sufficient size to permit continuity in the recruiting, placement, and support of worldwide missionaries.”

With this effort, two simultaneous funds development campaigns were launched:

1. The Mission Initiative, in part, for new mission personnel, in addition to the mission budget, and

2. The “Faith Factor” extra commitment opportunity to increase the 2003 budget to permit continuity of existing number of mission personnel.

With these two funds development efforts underway, at times competition between a priority for existing personnel and a priority for new personnel developed and prevented the degree of collaboration that was necessary to make either effort successful. Therefore, ironically, during the course of the campaign designed to increase the number of mission personnel, the number actually decreased.

The campaign would face this issue again when new mission personnel, appointed through gifts to the Mission Initiative, reached the end of their first three-year term of service. At this point, they were no longer considered new mission personnel, and therefore could not remain in the field funded by the Mission Initiative, and funds were also not available within the mission budget to keep them in place.

B. Nature of the Campaign

The campaign also faltered initially due to confusion over the nature of the campaign. It was originally designed as a major gifts campaign, similar to a capital campaign, with specifically targeted appeals to individual donors who could make significant pledges.

Campaigns of this nature generally begin with a quiet phase, with advance gifts from several substantial donors. Then, once the campaign has passed a tipping point, a public phase finishes off the pledges, using the advance gifts as leverage. According to a story in the Presbyterian Outlook, at the first meeting of the Steering Committee, the campaign director said that the first step should be a strong effort to attract major gifts. The first gift, he said, must be at least $5 million, the next two in the range of $2.5 million, the next five at least $1 million each. The textbook says you stop there, “you stay in this room until you’ve found those eight gifts,” to give the big-hitters a chance up front to start off the campaign with real momentum.

But, this first meeting of the Steering Committee was in November of 2002, several months after the campaign had been approved by the General Assembly. The approval process for the Mission Initiative had required pledges from at least 90 percent of General Assembly Council members. This round of GAC pledges became the “quiet phase” of the campaign.
Upon approval by the General Assembly, two additional motions were approved from the floor of the assembly, launching the campaign with two supplemental funding efforts:

1. A motion to take up an offering for missions at close of the assembly. Baskets were placed at the back of the assembly hall at the close of the assembly to receive cash donations and pledge cards. (This offering, from a General Assembly audience of about 2,500 participants, totaled just over $17,000.)

2. A motion, in the wake of approving a move to biennial assemblies, encouraging “presbyteries, synods, exhibitors, and affiliated groups to apply the savings realized from biennial assemblies to the Mission Initiative,” and pledging as individual commissioners to “to celebrate the hope in our Lord Jesus Christ by interpreting and advocating for the Mission Initiative” in their presbyteries.

From the start, therefore, the campaign, originally designed as a “major gifts” effort, was evolving into a mass appeal for contributions. The mass audience approach differed sharply from a targeted campaign for special gifts, but the assembly approval process, and the genuine excitement of commissioners toward addressing these heartfelt needs for the church, created confusion around the proper way to carry out the campaign. After the assembly, presbyteries and congregations also followed suit and took up collections for the Mission Initiative, but without the campaign discipline that would be required to cultivate special gifts from major donors.

Members of the Steering Committee wanted to tap into the passion for mission that they saw at the General Assembly and in members of congregations. In the article from the first Steering Committee meeting, published by the Presbyterian Outlook, one of the steering committee members is paraphrased as saying, “The denomination needs to find a way to capture that populist energy, to make sure it’s not seen as a campaign for ‘just a bunch of fat cats.’”

This tension between the original direction of the campaign, in line with the feasibility study, and a broader appeal that tapped existing passions within congregations and middle governing bodies, continued throughout the campaign—in part driven by the lack of a major gift donor database, and in part by the developing sense of energy within governing bodies. At times significant effort was focused on individuals, and at other times the best prospects were governing bodies who had demonstrated a strong vision for mission that would qualify as a Mission Initiative cause, and a desire to raise funds to implement that vision.

The campaign was also challenged by its implementation as a one-time funding effort. Efforts such as capital campaigns are generally conducted for one-time expenses that will advance the organization’s capacity to serve. In the case of the Mission Initiative, the campaign’s causes were ongoing ministries, not one-time expenses. The case statement had clearly stated that the effort was necessary in order to offset the final disbursements from several spendable endowments. One-time funding would not be sufficient to continue these ministries into the future, instead they would need replacement funding every year into the future that the ministry continued. A donor might make a five-year pledge, which would enable mission personnel to go into the field for a three-year term, but at the end of the term, there was no mechanism for funding that would continue the ministry beyond its initial term. A capital campaign model may not have been the best way to create renewable resources for funding these causes.

C. Dearth of Major Gift Prospects

In 2002, the General Assembly Council was not equipped as a funds development organization. The denomination’s mission agency typically spent most of its efforts properly managing funds, and allocating those funds in the pursuit of mission, but was not equipped to launch a donor-specific funds development appeal.

One of the original criteria for successfully launching the campaign was GAC identification of potential donors. The feasibility study indicated that the campaign would require the identification of 1,000 “major gift prospects” (capable of making gifts of $100,000 or more). At this level, the campaign would need fewer than 400 gifts to meet the goal.

While the GAC had a record of considerable success in the promotion of special offerings, directed mission giving, and extra commitment opportunities, most of these efforts had focused on promoting through, and providing resources for, congregations and presbyteries. The GAC had not cultivated individual donors, and in 2002 did not have the names of 1,000 “major gift prospects” as required by the feasibility study.

In its statement to the General Assembly, the GAC had committed to “participate in the identification of potential donors,” and the GAC fulfilled this commitment, but the numbers were very small. The first campaign director was quoted in a November 2002 article saying, “To raise $40 million will take 10,000 qualified prospects, and the Mission Initiative team so far has identified only 100 to 200” adding that there is no “master list” of the denomination’s 2.5 million Presbyterians.
Fortuitously, the campaign director reported growing interest on the part of the presbyteries in the campaign in the weeks leading up to the May 2003 meeting of the Steering Committee. He reported that one executive presbyter had even chased him down in an airport to request a meeting to discuss a potential future partnership in the campaign.

The interest of presbyteries and congregations had not been anticipated in the planning to this point, but the opportunities were welcomed. At a later meeting of the Steering Committee, the director would report that there were relatively few individuals, known to campaign staff—twenty or fewer, rather than the anticipated 200—who had the capacity to make major gifts.

But during the first year of the effort, the campaign was not yet ready to abandon the original design. In May of 2003, the Steering Committee heard a presentation from outside funds development counsel regarding the principles of fundraising as it applied to the campaign:

• In successful fundraising efforts, 10 percent of donors provide 90 percent of the funds.
• Lead gifts provide 25 percent or more of the total campaign goal.
• Lead gifts are important because your chances of taking less time with the overall campaign increases with lead major gifts in the beginning.
• If you “stretch the timetable,” negative aspects can occur within the campaign—people get tired, people wander away, costs skyrocket.
• It takes less money to raise major gifts than it does to raise gifts broadly. For that reason, we need to look at individuals within presbyteries who can give up to the $10 million mark.
• All campaigns are volunteer driven—people give to people.
• People are needed from around the Steering Committee table, both to give major gifts and to provide names of others that are able.
• It is important to keep the campaign in a very tight timeframe—approximately forty-eight months.
• “Lead donors” will give in the $5 to $10 million range.

Questions regarding the dual nature of the campaign were openly discussed by the Steering Committee at this meeting. The meeting notes contain the direct question, “Are we pushing over to the presbyteries and away from individuals?” along with two responses:

• We currently have very limited major donor prospects and time is critical.
• Work with presbyteries must never be a way of getting around the major donor but a way to find major donors.
  We can assume at this time that pastors are not going to rush to bring their major donors to the table and that the timeline with presbyteries is very different from that of individuals.

The notes conclude with an observation about presbytery campaigns: “Fundraising is a volunteer driven process.
The staff in Louisville should be positioned to support and assist volunteers. As we move toward the presbytery model, in some cases, we need to ensure that there is a campaign manager positioned in each presbytery who will ‘take home the project every night.’”

By the next month, June of 2003, the Steering Committee realized that to be successful in reaching the goal, it would have to develop funds through presbytery efforts. The Steering Committee made two decisions:

• “The campaign will continue to focus on major donors and will include a limited number of presbyteries who will be major donors.”
• “…money that is kept in presbyteries for the same purposes as the Mission Initiative will be counted as part of the total.”

The evolution continued, and by 2004, the campaign director was quoted as saying, “I don’t want anyone to think this is just a ‘major gifts campaign.’ We’re doing a campaign, and right now we’re in a deliberate phase of nurturing larger gifts to propel us forward, but by 2007 we’ll certainly want every Presbyterian involved.” One of the campaign chairs said, “We’re still focused on major donors, but frankly, the response from presbyteries has been overwhelming.”
Two presbyteries had launched multimillion dollar campaigns. Two others who had approved MIJHH-related campaigns were conducting feasibility studies to determine the amounts they intended to raise.
The campaign was therefore challenged by multiple forces driving the implementation:

- the strength of the feasibility study and the campaign’s weakness with respect to a list of prospective donors, and
- the latent energy within presbyteries and congregations for the purposes of the campaign matched against the limited ability of staff to support a large number of campaigns.

D. Campaign Leadership

The campaign began in June 2002, and was designed to run for five years. Early reports suggested that it might not need the entire five-year period to raise the number of pledges needed, but the switch to biennial General Assemblies disrupted the flow of the campaign, and therefore it was extended through the close of the 218th General Assembly (2008). In total the campaign comprised six years, rather than five.

Through the six years of the campaign, the campaign experienced the leadership of four different directors, in addition to being without a director for eight months.

- June 2002—January 2003—no director
- January 2003—July 2003—director #1
- July 2003—September 2003—no director
- September 2003—February 2004—interim director
- February 2004—October 2006—director #2 (after serving as interim director)
- October 2006—July 2007—acting director
- July 2007—June 2008—interim director #2

During this same period, there were two GAC executive directors, and the two other senior positions that were to spend 30 percent of their time on the campaign were eliminated in a GAC restructure four years into the campaign. The evangelism office, central to the denomination’s leadership efforts for new church development and transformation, was also in the midst of transition throughout the campaign period.

Changes in GAC staff leadership contributed to the development of weak case statements describing the specific ministries that could be launched through the major gifts.

Leadership transitions within the national campaign staff also affected the presbytery-level campaigns. One presbytery reported that over the course of their unsuccessful campaign, five different campaign consultants from the national staff worked with the presbytery—each with a different funds development philosophy or focus, and none had previous experience with a presbytery-level campaign.

Relationship-building is central to a funds development campaign, particularly one focused on major gifts. The lack of long-term continuity in leadership, therefore, presented challenges for donor development.

The strong final months of the campaign can be significantly attributed to competent and effective leadership by the campaign director who was experienced, good on process and follow-through, and relational. He was able to enlist a number of fund-raisers, from within staff and part-time contractors, which leveraged and expanded the capacity of the campaign effort and the campaign leadership.

III. Successes of the Campaign

A. Mobilization Around a Theme

When the Mission Initiative began it was a concept to raise funds for mission by cultivating major gifts from donors toward two primary causes: church growth and international mission personnel. Even with such attractive causes, the Steering Committee and staff felt that to be successful, the campaign would need to have a more identifiable “brand” in order to capture the imagination of Presbyterians.

Taglines for the campaign were discussed at the first Steering Committee meeting, and at the next meeting in early 2003, the promotional identity for the campaign was approved. “The Mission Initiative” became “The Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands” with a tagline of “A Campaign to Renew the Church for Mission.”
In the years since early 2003, no effort in national church life could have been more successful than a “campaign to renew the church for mission.” While not all of the transformation can be directly linked to the Mission Initiative, the church has been renewed for mission in many ways during this period:

- Dallas consultation—Presbyterians gathered in Dallas, Texas, January 16–18, 2008, in response to an invitation from the Moderator of the General Assembly and the vote of commissioners to the 217th General Assembly (2006), to discuss the current state of international mission in the evolving context of denominational mission outreaches and the future of the worldwide mission work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the twenty-first century.

Participants in the consultation came together to outline a covenant of agreement to live and serve together and a commitment to work cooperatively. The participants also pledged to celebrate diverse Presbyterian approaches to mission, to share responsibility for education and preparation of all Presbyterians for mission, and to seek and support more mission personnel. Each of the sixty-four consultation participants signed the document titled, “An Invitation to Expanding Partnership in God’s Mission” and agreed to take the document back to other mission-related organizations and seek their approval.

Since the consultation, earlier this year, the “Invitation” has been endorsed by more than 100 other Presbyterians and the:

- 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
- Association of Presbyterians for Cross-Cultural Mission
- Association of Presbyterian Mission Pastors (APMP)
- Bel Air Presbyterian Church
- Council on Witness to Society and World of New York Presbytery
- First Presbyterian Church, Audubon, Iowa
- General Assembly Council
- Ghana Mission Network
- Giddings-Lovejoy Joining Hands Coordinating Team
- Grace Presbytery
- Israel/Palestine Mission Network
- Living Waters for the World
- Medical Benevolence Foundation
- New Wilmington Mission Conference
- Outreach Foundation of the Presbyterian Church
- Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship
- Presbyterian Global Fellowship
- Presbyterian Peace Fellowship
- Presbyterian Women Churchwide Coordinating Team
- Presbyterian Women of the Synod of Alaska/Northwest Coordinating Team
- Presbyterian Women Synod of the Sun Coordinating Team
- Presbyterians for Renewal
- Presbytery of Central Washington
- Tres Rios Presbytery
- Tres Rios Presbytery Presbyterian Women Coordinating Team
- Witherspoon Society
- World Mission Initiative

The Dallas consultation caps a renewal of interest in mission in recent years, and a remarkable display of unity around one of the central callings of the Christian life.
• World Mission ‘07: A Celebration of Grace—About 700 Presbyterians attended this world mission conference in Louisville in October 2007. They heard insights about the future of world mission, gained new resources for mission participation, shared their thoughts on mission engagement, and listened to inspirational speakers. The event was described in the church press as one aspect of “twin events that mark the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s most concerted effort to enlist support for the denomination’s global mission in decades.”

• Mission Challenge ‘07—Following the World Mission ‘07 event, forty-eight PC(USA) mission workers began a month-long period of intensive itineration, visiting 144 of the PC(USA)’s 173 presbyteries. The itinerating mission personnel told their story of international mission, and asked congregations in these presbyteries to select at least one mission worker and build a relationship with him or her through prayer, correspondence, and financial support. They also challenged presbyteries to seek 100 percent participation by all of their congregations in support of at least one PC(USA) mission worker.

As a result of the itineration visits and a direct mail campaign to persons who had previously expressed an interest in PC(USA) mission, more than $1.5 million has been raised in support of international mission personnel.

• Missional identity increasingly a focus of church life—Over the last decade, the phrase “missional church” has taken on a life of its own within North American contexts. While there is not a universal agreement on what it means, Alan J. Roxburgh, in his article “The Missional Church” written in 2004, finds these traits, which have had a part in renewing the church:

—”Western society as a mission field.”
—”Mission as missio dei.”
—”Missional church is about the nature and purpose of the church.”
—The church as a “contrast society.”

The Mission Initiative is not directly responsible for any of these efforts, but within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) we give thanks to God for the campaign’s part in renewing the church for mission, and pray that this renewal continues.

B. Funds Development Capacity at the General Assembly Level

When the campaign started, most GA level activities were focused as funds management, or funds distribution; but few areas had an expertise in funds development. An increasing number of Presbyterians had moved toward donating directly to mission causes through the denomination, (based largely on the success of disaster relief efforts and extra commitment opportunities), but the General Assembly itself had not developed a competency at nurturing those donors.

This structural weakness for funds development significantly impacted the early success of the Mission Initiative. There was no capacity for coordinated donor relations or cultivation, and therefore the GAC did not have information on donor prospects.

One of the first efforts of the campaign, within staff in Louisville, was to increase usage of donor management software. On a small-scale basis, software had been in use since the late 1990s, but it was not widely used. Over the course of the campaign, the difficult challenge of bringing together the various databases of contacts who were interested in the ministries of the General Assembly was addressed.

Today, that donor management software is at the core of the General Assembly Council’s accounting and contact management infrastructure. The software creates a capacity for improved communication with donors and interested others, and allows GAC staff to customize appeals based on the constituent’s demonstrated interests. Unlike the situation in 2002, an infrastructure for funds development, as well as staffing to resource that information, is now in place.

The infrastructure was tested most extensively with the overwhelming response of Presbyterians and others to the needs created by 2005 Hurricanes Katrina, Wilma, and Rita, and the Indonesian tsunami of 2004, as more than $38 million in donations from almost 30,000 donors was received. Of these 30,000 donors, 18,000 had not previously made a gift to General Assembly mission.

The benefits of this infrastructure may also been seen in the increased success as the campaign continued. Once the infrastructure was built, donors received better information, solicitation, and acknowledgement.

As the campaign started, the GAC Executive Director repeatedly referred to the campaign as “phase one” of a fundamental shift in the way PC(USA) mission is funded. “We’ve been passive, waiting for folks to give,” he said. “We need to learn to be more interactive and proactive. This campaign will help us learn, while we raise money for two specific parts of our work.” Part of the success of the Mission Initiative has been the learning of these lessons.

C. Thirty-four Mission Personnel Fully Funded and Deployed

The campaign has generated pledges and gifts that have enabled thirty-four individuals to be appointed into new international mission service positions, including several that were deployed in January 2009:

- Stacy and Bob Bronkema (Russia)—to serve with the Moscow Protestant Chaplaincy, an international faith community composed primarily of students and refugees from the developing world.
- David Dierksen (Mexico)—to serve as Puentes de Cristo U.S. coordinator for Presbyterian Border Ministries in Mexico.
- Carol Dolezal-Ng (Lebanon)—to serve as development associate for interpretation and support with the Near East School of Theology (NEST).
- Brett and Shelly Faucett (India, Thailand, and China)—to serve as regional consultants for HIV/AIDS in Asia.
- Gwenda and John Fletcher (Democratic Republic of Congo)—to serve in education with the Presbyterian Church of Kinshasa and as a physician with the Presbyterian Community of the Congo.
- Jacob Goad (Peru)—to serve as coordinator for receiving PC(USA) mission teams and delegations in Peru.
- Shirley Hill (Cameroon)—to serve as registered nurse, pastor, and chaplain, providing training and support to the public health (HIV/AIDS) program of the Presbyterian Church of Cameroon.
- Jane Holslag (Lithuania)—to serve as a professor of theology and English at the LCC International University (formerly Lithuania Christian College).
- Tracey King (Nicaragua)—to serve as regional liaison for Central America, creating better communication between the Worldwide Ministries Division, mission personnel, partner churches, and PC(USA) congregations interested in ministry in Central America.
- Matt Middleton (Palestine/Israel)—to serve as a music teacher in Bethlehem, Palestinian territory currently occupied by the state of Israel. He was chair of music at Dar Al-Kalima College and music coordinator for Lutheran ministries in Bethlehem. Matt also directed Bethlehem Star Music, a joint program of the Evangelical Lutheran Christmas Church and International Center of Bethlehem, which has five ensembles: band, chamber ensemble, choristers, chorus, and handbells.
- Shannon O’Donnell (Palestine/Israel)—to serve as assistant to the director for the Sabeel Liberation Theology Center in Jerusalem.
- Ingrid Reneau (Sudan)—to serve as an educator in Sudan, and to help the Sudanese, who have lived through such unimaginable horrors, know the peace and love of Christ.
- Bill Richter (Mexico and Texas)—to serve as U.S. coordinator of the bi-national ministry, Puentes de Cristo, helping PC(USA) delegations and mission teams be engaged in meaningful ministry along the U.S./Mexico border.
- Doug and Liz Searles (Poland)—to serve as consultants and evangelists working with church leaders in church growth, small group development, music ministry, and teacher training in English as a second language, all in order to assist church renewal and growth in the Evangelical-Reformed Church in Poland in the post-communist environment.
- Vicki Smith (Jamaica)—to serve as educator in music and art with children ages three to twelve at Iona Preparatory School in Tower Isle, Jamaica.
- Scott and Melanie Smith (India)—to serve with the Emmanuel Hospital Association (EHA). Scott is helping the EHA take a community-organizing approach to community health work, and Melanie is office manager for a “struggling but growing” fair trade company.
- Stacey Steck (Costa Rica)—to serve as associate for development and congregational growth with the Costa Rican Presbyterian Church
- Marcia Towers (Guatemala)—to serve as site coordinator for the Young Adult Volunteer Program, placing young adult volunteers in Guatemalan church communities. She also works with the Central American Evangelical Center for Pastoral Studies.
• Bruce and Lora Whearty (Ethiopia)—to serve in an outreach program of the Ethiopian Evangelical Church Mekane Yesus teaching English as well as mentoring and training teachers.

An additional nine mission workers were deployed in the fields of education, evangelism, and health in four countries that are not listed here due to security concerns.

D. Presbyteries and Congregations Have Connected with General Assembly Mission

As campaign staff visited with prospects (presbyteries, congregations, and members), it often formed a first encounter for those prospects with representatives of General Assembly mission. Time after time, visit reports revealed that the prospective donors had no awareness of the range of mission being engaged by the General Assembly.

In addition, the visits opened lines of communication between General Assembly offices and many congregations actively engaged in other mission, where previously there had been a disconnect. Campaign staff had no awareness of the range of mission being engaged by presbyteries and congregations as well.

The fruit of these visits will be borne out over the years to come. In some cases, the prospect was already committed to causes for the near term, but indicated a willingness to consider General Assembly mission options in the future. The value of the campaign cannot be stated solely in the number of pledges that came in during the six-year life of the campaign. Future gifts will not be counted in the Mission Initiative totals, but the inspiration for the gift will have come from the initial cultivation of the donor that occurred during the campaign.

E. More Than $30 Million in Pledges Despite the Challenges

Despite the campaign’s uneven start, and the lack of a database of prospective donors, the Mission Initiative raised more than $30 million in pledges, including:

Mission Personnel
- GAC Administered $4.7 million
- Presbytery Administered $0.02 million
- Congregation Administered $1.0 million

Church Growth
- GAC Administered $0.1 million
- Presbytery Administered $16.2 million
- Congregation Administered 4.0 million

Unrestricted/Undesignated
- GAC Administered $3.2 million

A complete report was made available at the September 2008 General Assembly Council meeting.

More than $10 million in pledges and gifts were produced in the campaign’s final quarter (April–June 2008), following a refocusing of campaign energy in the campaign’s final year, which included:

• Adopting campaign parameters—providing reasonable definition for acceptable Mission Initiative contributions.

• Creating a written plan for contacting the “top 200” congregations and the top presbyteries—defining a critical path for a comprehensive fund-raising strategy.

• Implementing “user-friendly” commitment forms (pledge and gift instruments) for churches, presbyteries, and individuals—eliminating much of the complication involved in record-keeping and determining donor intent.

• New leadership and the recruitment of a staff team of six, part-time, experienced, relational, and process-oriented Presbyterian fundraising professionals who were assigned specific church and presbytery prospects—bringing the basic principles of effective fund-raising into play.

• Enlisting, and getting the commitment of, an ad hoc Leadership Task Force of Steering Committee members to assume the responsibility for contacting selected “Top 200” churches where they had a personal relationship with the pastor to set the stage for staff team members to schedule visits and discuss participation in mission initiative. Without this effort, the campaign would not have made the forward progress that it did over the final year. The Leadership Task
01 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRALS

Force was comprised of Joanna Adams, Tim Hart-Andersen, John Huffman, Dave Peterson, and Linda Valentine under the leadership of Tom Gillespie. Adams and Peterson also served as campaign co-chairs over the campaign’s final two years.

Additional gifts and pledges were signed by donors before the end of the campaign on June 30, 2008, but were not received in the campaign office until July or August. These gifts/pledges will be noted on future campaign reports.

The energy of the campaign’s final year provides a platform for continued successful funds development efforts. In many of these “top 200” congregations, once the renewed set of contacts were explored there wasn’t enough time left in the campaign to cultivate the relationship and find the best way to link mission opportunities with mission interest, but the relationships will continue to develop within the Funds Development office.

F. Leadership within the Steering Committee

1. Early Successes

When the campaign was launched in June of 2002, a Steering Committee had not yet been formed, but the two campaign co-chairs were in place, Bill Saul, of Long Beach, California, and Lucimarian Roberts, of Biloxi, Mississippi. The leadership provided by Roberts and Saul in the initial phases were central to the recruitment of the Steering Committee, the selection of campaign staffing, and the initial pledges that were secured. It was also under the leadership of Saul and Roberts that the campaign responded to the interest expressed in presbyteries and created the category of “presbytery administered” funds. Saul’s presbytery, Los Ranchos, was one of the campaigns first large donors, pledging $4.5 million.

2. Thomas Gillespie

Thomas Gillespie, a member of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, became an outspoken advocate for the successful completion of the Mission Initiative late in 2006. The campaign had raised about $26 million in pledges, but lacked the momentum to raise the final $14 million that would be necessary to complete the effort. In addition, several of the pledges included in the $26 million were overly optimistic estimates of what might be possible within several governing bodies.

Gillespie gave energy to the campaign, both through verbal support, and a willingness to assist the effort through all means possible. As a result, he was named honorary campaign chair, and rallied the Steering Committee through its final eighteen months of work with an extraordinary vigor.

3. The Steering Committee

Members of the Steering Committee agreed to serve a five-year term on a committee that would seek to do a new thing: effectively raise a significant amount of funds for critical mission needs within a denomination that was finding its unity challenged at each step of the way. Through it all, they sought “to renew the church for mission.”

At the end of six years, the Steering Committee was thanked for its efforts and dismissed, with most of the church knowing little about the extent of the commitment that the members had given. Members of the Steering Committee led the way in early pledges, as 85 percent of its members made financial commitments to the campaign. Steering Committee members have described their work as one of the most difficult challenges in their careers of church service.

Through these challenges they were led by the unity of Christ’s mission. In February 2003, the committee released a statement regarding their common convictions for the unity of mission that would guide their efforts throughout the rest of the campaign:

We, the members of the Steering Committee of the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands, reaffirm our unequivocal and unanimous support of the goals for the PC(USA) $40 million campaign: expanding global mission and developing churches. We represent a range of theological positions and differing perspectives on some matters that are divisive in the life of the church, including ordination issues and questions of biblical authority and interpretation. Yet, we remain united behind the Mission Initiative. We trust that God will work through the church to resolve these matters in God’s own time and way. In the meantime, we call all members of the PC(USA) to step forward and join us in fully supporting the Joining Hearts and Hands campaign. Together, by the grace of God, the church will be renewed for the mission of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

G. Generosity of Individuals

1. Mary Lee Dayton of Minneapolis

In January of 2006, Mary Lee Dayton created a permanent endowment for the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Cameroon, through a $1 million gift. Dayton, and her congregation, Westminster Presbyterian Church in Minneapolis, had a special connection with Cameroon. Her father, the late Arnold Lowe, began his ministry there in 1912 as a Presbyterian missionary. At that time Cameroon was a German colony. When World War I broke out, Lowe was one of three missionaries who remained and courageously led an effort to protect thousands of Cameroonians from the warring Europeans. Later, he served as pastor of Westminster Church from 1941–1965. Dayton’s gift created an endowment through the Presbyterian Foundation, and will provide support for the seminary in Cameroon for future generations.

2. Chuck Ford, Huntington Beach, California

Chuck Ford, a lifelong Presbyterian, and member of the Mission Initiative Steering Committee, has been instrumental in starting fifteen new and redeveloped congregations in southern California. His contributions to the campaign have been numerous and multifaceted. In addition to his own pledges of more than $680,000, he has been active in the campaign of his congregation (St. Andrews Presbyterian Church in Newport Beach, California), his presbytery (Los Ranchos), and other presbyteries.

3. Anonymous

In June of 2008, an anonymous donor, citing deep concerns for the health, education, and well-being of the world’s children, made a gift of $510,456 to the Mission Initiative. The funds ensured that six new mission co-workers would be sent to serve in positions in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Poland, Pakistan, and Costa Rica.

H. Presbytery Campaigns

Several presbyteries have been actively involved in campaigns to raise funds within the scope of the Mission Initiative, but none have been as active and energetic as the campaign of the Presbytery of Los Ranchos. In July of 2003, the presbytery announced that it had committed to raise $4.5 million to extend its ministry at home and around the world. The presbytery worked with its congregations and sessions follow-through on its pledge and celebrated the accomplishment at its November 2008 meeting. Projects sponsored included: Chinese Presbyterian Church of Orange County, Village Presbyterian Church of Ladera Ranch, Mission workers in Thailand, and Mission workers in Pakistan.

I. Congregational Campaigns Over $1 Million

In addition to presbytery campaigns, several congregations have responded to the twin challenges of raising support for church growth and international mission personnel by engaging campaigns that have pledged more than $1 million each. The mission commitment of these congregations has been extraordinary: Memorial Drive, Houston, Tex.; Grace First, Long Beach, Calif.; Madison Avenue, New York City; Fourth Presbyterian, Chicago; and St. Andrews, Newport Beach, Calif.

J. New Church Development Efforts

Many new church developments have been nurtured through the support of the Mission Initiative campaign, including:

- Iglesia Fuente de Esperanza—a new church in Houston, which is attracting and serving primarily Mexican, Salvadoran, and Guatemalan immigrants who are new to the faith.

- Highlands—an exciting new church development in Paso Robles, California, which has moved in only a year and a half’s time from one service of worship with an average attendance of 180 to three services with an average attendance of 550.

- Peace New Church Development—a missional church with an intentional, outward focus that is making a real difference in the community in Lakewood Ranch, Florida.

- Word of Life—a new church in Port Hueneme, California, an area characterized by extreme poverty and gang culture, which is comprised primarily of new Christians between the ages of twenty-three and forty-five, who had never been formally involved in a church before.
K. Administrative Cost of Campaign

Previous campaigns have often faced difficulty in covering the administrative cost of conducting the campaign. The Mission Initiative was set out in a different manner. The original staff-led study proposed that costs for the funding plan be paid from the proceeds of the campaign and estimated that an up-front investment would be required of the GAC.

The feasibility study was more specific about those estimates, calling for a budget of nearly $5 million to implement the campaign over five years.

The General Assembly Council budgeted $1 million for 2003 to cover the upfront costs of the campaign, ensuring that the campaign had the resources needed to launch the effort. In addition, the GAC covered campaign operating expenses for 2004 and half of 2005. At this point, the Mission Initiative campaign was charged with covering campaign expenses.

As of the end of June 2008, six years into the campaign, due to the careful stewardship of campaign resources, the total administrative cost has been $4.3 million, easily under the initial estimate of nearly $5 million for five years. At the same time, of the more than $30 million in campaign pledges and gifts, only $2 million has been allocated toward campaign expenses, since the GAC separately invested $2.3 million into the campaign.

IV. Lessons Learned

A. Donors Seek Involvement in the Mission They Fund

The Mission Initiative campaign was designed to focus resources on two of the most commonly cited priorities for General Assembly mission: international mission personnel and church growth. A variety of giving opportunities were created so that donors could participate in the campaign through a number of options. Donor response to the variety of accounts taught the campaign a mixed set of lessons.

When Presbyterian churches are open to investing in PC(USA) mission projects, they are increasingly determined to know where the money is going, who the mission workers are, what the purpose of the mission is, and how they might have some interaction with the mission workers.

Donors are much less interested in giving undesignated funds to international mission, instead they want to share in the mission. Therefore they seek a direct connection and a meaningful relationship with a mission worker and with a part of the world that resonates with their congregation’s own missional interests.

Each of the major pledges to the campaign were made in a region of the world where the donor, whether an individual, congregation, or presbytery, had previously existing relationships. It was that involvement in mission that inspired the donor to make an even greater gift.

The same lessons can be found in the church growth side of the campaign. A large majority of the funds committed to church growth as part of the campaign were committed to specific causes within the donor’s congregation or presbytery.

Unrestricted pledges, for either primary cause of the campaign, were relatively rare, comprising less than only 10 percent of the total pledges committed.

The designation of a pledge, however, does not have to be tightly defined. As Mission Challenge ‘07 (a related effort that during 2007 and 2008 raised more than $1 million for World Mission) demonstrated, when given an option, donors prefer some restriction on the gift in order to gain involvement in the mission, but they do not want to micro-manage the causes they pledge to support.

B. Campaigns Must Hit the Ground Running

The feasibility study for the Mission Initiative called for a twelve-to-eighteen month period of preparation prior to launching the campaign. However, once active consideration of a campaign began, the process gathered momentum and moved more quickly than the feasibility study had recommended, condensing the time allotted for preparation.

While the idea of a campaign, in response to Overture 98-47, had been circulating for several years, the sequence of events began to move quickly with the internal report (August 2001), the feasibility study (December 2001), GAC provisional approval (February 2002), and GAC final approval, along with General Assembly approval, in June 2002.

Despite this ten-month period, campaign preparations were not occurring, instead the focus was on demonstrating a commitment to meet the criteria that had been proposed for the campaign. When the campaign was launched in June 2002, a five-month period passed before a Steering Committee was selected, and six months passed before there a campaign director was in place.

During this period, the original strategy for the campaign lost momentum, and a grassroots approach to raising funds stepped into the vacuum, with a $17,000 offering at General Assembly, several presbytery collections, and a general encouragement to apply savings from biennial assemblies toward the campaign. This made it impossible to fulfill the campaign strategy of having a “quiet phase” in which the bulk of the major pledges would be developed.

In addition, this timeline left little room for consultation with the GAC, middle governing bodies, or large congregations, apart from the feasibility study itself, prior to seeking approval for the campaign from the General Assembly.

Once campaign leadership was in place, several additional months of planning and preparation were needed to reo-rient the campaign toward its purposes, to interpret the campaign, and to build relationships with the necessary partners across the church.

Future campaigns would benefit from additional consultation and planning with GAC elected leaders, presbyteries, and congregations; and a longer quiet phase before launching the campaign into a public process. Careful planning is required to find a way to balance the General Assembly timelines for approval, while also allowing campaigns to hit the ground running—one launched, they don’t have time to go back and invent the rules, they need to be equipped to begin working as soon as they are approved.

In addition, the staff organization must be equipped with the ingredients for a successful campaign, before a campaign is launched:

- A donor base with meaningful relationships, based on prior giving history with some connection to GAC and GAC mission, must be developed.
- Qualified staff with time dedicated to fund-raising.
- Volunteers with relationships to donors.

C. Applying Criteria from the Feasibility Study

The feasibility study for any campaign is a very significant document, as it sets out under what conditions a proposed campaign might be successful. The Mission Initiative campaign was backed by two significant documents: the internal preliminary case study document, and the feasibility study. Each was carefully developed to elaborate on the style and substance of a campaign that could be successful within the mission life of the General Assembly from 2003 through 2007.

In many instances, the criteria are very clear about what should and should not be done within the campaign. In other areas, Steering Committee members report that they wished the document would also have discussed campaign strategies, necessary campaign leadership, and the campaign resources required to sustain such strategies.

D. A Comprehensive Plan for Fund-Raising

There was no comprehensive plan for fund-raising for the first five years of the campaign. This shortcoming resulted in most of what would be considered the “Top 200” churches and most of the higher budget presbyteries either not being contacted at all, or lacking any follow-up after a perfunctory initial contact. This scenario changed in September of 2007, the sixth year of the campaign, bringing energy and direction to the campaign, a surge of contacts within the last nine months, and more than $10 million in pledges and gifts in the final quarter of the campaign. Unfortunately, the increased number of contacts came very late in the campaign, and found many prospects without sufficient reaction time to be able to make a commitment within the campaign period.

The success of future campaigns will be enhanced if a comprehensive plan is put into place at the beginning of the campaign, and then adjusted based on implementation results.

E. Much of the Mission Work of Presbyterians Is “Off The Radar”

In the campaign’s final one-year push, the strategy was revised to approach the largest congregations in the PC(USA). Presbyterians and Presbyterian churches are very “mission-minded.” In the contacts that were made by staff team members, time and again it was revealed that there were significant “mission projects” and significant dollars devote to projects that had no connection to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a denomination. At first there was an attempt to document and record those initiatives, but this was not kept up because of the sheer volume. At least the very least, the $30 million attributed to the Mission Initiative is matched by another $30 million worth of church initiatives that are under the radar of the denomination. These funds sponsor and support mission workers overseas, support schools and hospitals, and collaborate with other organizations in a myriad of projects.
F. Perception of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) “Brand” of Mission

Research done in 2005 indicated that a large majority of Presbyterians were either little informed or not informed about the range and scope of PC(USA) mission beyond their congregation. The study showed that this was also true of Presbyterian elders.

When individual prospects with the possible potential for major gifts were contacted, for the most part, they evidenced very little interest in the Mission Initiative campaign. Lack of sufficient interpretation and cultivation may have been a determining factor in these cases, but it also raises the larger question of how “brand” awareness relates to mission funding.

For many donors, there is a lack of history for direct giving in support of the twin causes of the Mission Initiative: church growth and international mission personnel. Funding support for these causes has traditionally been provided within the context of support for the larger church (beyond the congregation), through gifts to the congregation. Therefore, the causes never had to provide specific promotional materials for funds development.

As patterns of mission, service, and funding have changed, the denomination has not kept pace. Organizations that can promote their “brand” attributes have generally shown an ability to raise the necessary funds to implement their mission.

Future campaigns will need to develop stronger presentations for the denomination’s approach to its mission, and the unique attributes that it brings, so that prospective donors can better understand the strategic importance of funding this kind of work. Relying upon the traditional legacy of Presbyterian mission effectiveness alone will not be sufficient.

G. The Time Required to Cultivate a Gift

Presbyteries, for the most part, are the bodies that initiate and follow through on new church development projects. It takes years to move from the decision to start a new church, through the planning phases, and then to conduct the campaign, if it is feasible, to begin the new congregation.

One common scenario that the staff team encountered was presbytery planning for new church developments that was not yet sufficiently developed enough to have dollars counted toward the campaign total, and not enough campaign time remaining to wait for specific definition.

A second common scenario was new church development projects that were well down the road to completion and that could not be counted because there was no prior Mission Initiative contact. Earlier contact, as opposed to final year contact, could have brought more presbyteries into the campaign.

While five or six years is a significant period for a campaign, the timelines for potential donors can be even longer, particularly when the effort begins without an active ongoing process of donor cultivation. Future campaigns will need to take those longer timelines into account, or be based on existing relationships with potential donors.

H. Pastors and Congregations Are Central

Pastors and congregations are central to Presbyterian funds development campaigns. While many Presbyterians are eager to participate in the mission and ministry of the denomination, they do so generally at the encouragement of those whom they most trust—their congregational colleagues and leaders. Each of the major gifts developed through this campaign occurred because of the encouragement of someone within their congregation or the encouragement of pastoral leadership. Future campaigns will need to draw upon the strength of the relationship between pastors, congregations, and the General Assembly.

I. Accountability and Collaboration

The Mission Initiative was a new approach to funds development for mission within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The campaign’s integration, with existing mission programs as well as presbytery and congregational campaigns, required tight collaboration. When this collaboration was lacking, the campaign’s progress suffered.

Similarly, in creating a new style of funds development, lines of accountability were not always clearly delineated. The campaign was initiated by the General Assembly Council, approved by the General Assembly, and overseen by the Steering Committee, with only brief clarifications as to ongoing roles:

- The General Assembly directed the GAC “to implement the Mission Initiative and report on its progress” to future General Assembly meetings.
• The campaign guidelines, proposed by the GAC and approved by the General Assembly, describe the role of the Steering Committee: “Under the direction of the General Assembly Council, the Mission Initiative Steering Committee will provide leadership for the Mission Initiative Funds Development effort.”

• A few months into the campaign, the GAC Executive Director sought to clarify the roles of the GAC and the Steering Committee by saying, “[The Steering Committee is] to lead the campaign and set the policies, and the Council will determine the utilization of the funds.”

There is a point at which too many changes in the game plan, and the rules, and the players, and the way of keeping score becomes highly detrimental to presenting a clear and understandable invitation to participation; not to mention the effect on the morale of those responsible for carrying out the mandate.

Future campaigns would be wise to build in clear principles of accountability and collaboration, so that there is no confusion, and so that communication between stakeholders can flow more freely.

V. Next Steps

The pledge reception phase of the Mission Initiative campaign came to a close on June 28, 2008, but payments on those pledges will continue to be received through December 31, 2012. A final financial report will be submitted to the 220th General Assembly (2014). Until that time, the following activities will be undertaken:

• The GAC director of funds development will create a collection system for outstanding pledges, and make quarterly reports via the website, regarding the fulfillment of pledges.

• World Mission will provide continuing feedback to donors regarding the projects for which pledges have been made.

• Presbyteries and congregations will be queried regarding the status of cash received toward pledges administered at the presbytery or congregation level.

Response: This project has been deferred due to lack of funds. A resource for teens, Fossils and Faith Leader’s Guide: Finding Our Way Through the Creation Controversy, by Thea Leunk is available. Theology Worship and Education ministries will continue to look for avenues to explore this important issue.

Response: This referral is answered by the “Native American Ministry Supplemental Report,” found below. The Office of Native American Congregational Support, in consultation with the Native American Consulting Committee, has studied, reviewed, and submitted this report focusing on the implementation of strategies for Native American Ministry using the Native American Churchwide Policy Statement of 1979 as a standard of measurement.

Native American Ministry Supplemental Report

Background

Previous reports deriving from this referral include a report on the Native American Churchwide Consultation, held in Albuquerque, New Mexico, April 22–24, 2005, and a report from the Office of Native American Congregational Enhancement, which focused on pertinent statistics regarding Native Americans from both the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the 2000 Census; both reports were presented to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The Churchwide Policy Statement for Native American Ministry, adopted by the 191st General Assembly (1979) of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1979, Part 1, pp. 91, 401–4), is the current PC(USA) mandate for Native American Ministries. It continues to be an important guide for Native American ministries, for its policy directions are basic and achievable. Another critical document, “Comprehensive Strategy for Ministry with Native Americans,” approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000) (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 206ff), developed strategies to support and supplement this policy. Under current PC(USA) policy, the Native American Consulting Committee (NACC) is the primary consultative body on Native American ministries in the PC(USA). The NACC periodically reviews the 1979 churchwide policy statement to identify progress being made in the areas identified in that report and those that provide continuing challenges. This report represents the NACC’s continuing effort to assist the PC(USA) in implementing and supporting this policy.

The 1979 policy statement identified ten critical areas that needed to be addressed by the church as it went forward in ministry with Native Americans. They are:

- Mutuality in Mission: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will seek to understand Native American culture and respect the philosophy, values, and heritage of Native Americans in order that Presbyterians may learn from Native American lifestyles and benefit from fellowship with them.

- Preparation for Native American Ministry: Native American ministerial candidates and non-Native American pastors engaged in ministries with Native Americans must be oriented to Native American culture, heritage, history, and religious thought.

- Leadership: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to a ministry that is trained, ordained, and installed according to certain prescribed standards. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will work toward the provision of a competent ministry in every Native American congregation.

- Continuing Education: Continuing education opportunities are important to Native Americans in the professional ministry. Cooperative efforts by national agencies, governing bodies, and church education institutions should be undertaken to develop special programs designed to address specific and current concerns in Native American communities.

- Pastoral Support: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) commits itself to the principle of adequate financial compensation and benefits for pastors and their families serving Native American congregations.

- Lay Leadership: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through its presbyteries, will provide resources to train elders and other lay leader for witness and service in both church and community.

- Facilities, Buildings, and Land: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will encourage the use of criteria set for constructing and maintaining church buildings, facilities, land, and equipment utilized in Native American ministries that conform to the highest possible standards for promotion of their ministries.

- National Agency, Council, and Committee Relations: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will promote and effect through the General Assembly Committee on Nominations the membership of Native Americans on agencies, councils, and committees at the national level.

- Ecumenical Relationships: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will support and promote ecumenical participation and development of endeavors among Native Americans, particularly on the reservation and in urban areas where denominational differences impede Christian witness.

- Secular Relationships: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will affirm, assist, and be an advocate for the efforts of Native American people for the betterment of Native American life, both on and off the reservation.

Since then, the 212th General Assembly (2000) approved a comprehensive strategy developed by a Special Task Force on Native American Ministries, which recommended the addition of three more areas. They are:

- Urban Ministries: As more and more American Indian people move from reservations and many move to cities, urban ministry with American Indians become critically important to the church.

- Youth Ministry: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will assist and support Native American Youth Ministries in developing programs that will encourage Native American youth to learn about, develop skills in, and deepen a commitment to Native American Indian ministry.

- Economics: The Native American Consulting Committee will advocate and promote Native American economic development on reservations and in urban areas through appropriate bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The basis for these areas of concern lies in the history of Native American ministries within various Presbyterian bodies now represented as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). For a more complete version of this history, see Appendix A at the end of this report or “Summary of the Historic Relationship Between the Presbyterian Church and Native American Peoples” at www.pcusa.org/nativeamerican (click on Reports and Policies).
Prior to the 1970s, Native American ministries in the Presbyterian church functioned through either a “Foreign Missions” approach (in which missionaries were sent to evangelize the non-Christian natives on the American frontier) or a “Home Missions” approach (in which ministries and their properties were coordinated and funded through a centralized national board). In the early 1970s, however, through a major restructuring of the denominational offices, Native churches were moved from the umbrella of the Board of National Missions to being part of the presbyteries and synods in which they were physically located. Thus, approximately 100 congregations, for many of whom “the Presbyterian church” was represented by a national missions field staff person, experienced an abrupt transition. To be Presbyterian suddenly meant being part of new, unfamiliar, and often uncertain, relationships with presbyteries with whom they had few, if any, prior dealings and vice-versa.

In 1969, as this reorganization was being anticipated, the General Assembly provided seed money to be used for projects on Native American Indian reservations. An ad hoc committee, the Indian Consulting Panel, was created to review proposals for the use of those funds. It soon became apparent, however, that a permanent consultative body was needed.

The Native American Consulting Committee was formally established in 1977, with authority to evaluate and recommend programs seeking national funding and to provide counsel to the General Assembly agencies and synods on matters affecting Native peoples. The 1983 reunion resulted in a total of 109 Native American congregations in the newly formed Presbyterian Church (USA).

a. Office for Native American Congregational Support (NACS)

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) policy and commitment supports the principle of self-determination for Native American congregations. However, as is often the case with small congregations throughout the denomination, Native American congregations are reliant upon partnerships within and beyond the denomination in order to function and survive. The office for Native American Congregational Support (NACS), as part of the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women ministry area within the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), is the “connection” between Native American ministries and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The purpose of the office for Native American Congregational Support is to enable the PC(USA) to respond to Native American congregational issues and to enable Native American Presbyterians to participate actively and effectively within the PC(USA) at all levels. The office serves as the voice of these congregations and provides a sounding board for their concerns. It is also the link to critical information such as leadership development opportunities. The office is a key partner as presbyteries and synods strive to support Native American ministries within their bounds. It also serves as an important source of information and orientation for national and middle governing body staff in the PC(USA) as well as other denominations, particularly as these bodies experience restructuring and staff transitions.

The reliance of Native American congregations and pastors on the national office and its associate staff person cannot be overstated.

b. Native American Consulting Committee

Working closely with the Native American Congregational Support (NACS) office, the Native American Consulting Committee (NACC) is the other critical link in sustaining Presbyterian commitment to Native American ministries and implementing churchwide policies and strategies in this area.

The NACC began as a consulting body during the 1960s–1970s transition from the top-down model, through which the Board of National Missions had jurisdiction over Native American congregations and ministries, to the current model in which Native American ministries are part of presbyteries and synods based on geography. (The Presbytery of Dakota, a non-geographical presbytery, which serves Native American congregations in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Montana, is an exception.)

The concept was one of consultation; decisions would not be made about Native American people without their presence and their participation. Over time, NACC has become the voice of Native American people within the denomination, as well as the voice of the denomination with regard to matters of importance to Native American people, their congregations, and their communities. The concept of consultation is so important that when other racial ethnic advocacy groups took the name caucus, Native American representation within the PC(USA) chose to retain the “Consulting Committee” title.

Funding for many areas of church life has diminished in recent years. Support for the NACC is no exception. We now do most of our work by email and conference call, with one face-to-face meeting a year. As our members are from diverse parts of the country, we are able, however, to provide consultation to presbyteries and synods close to our own base. This ability to travel, to meet, and to dialogue with Native American congregations and their presbyteries, makes a critical difference in sustaining vital ministry and enhancing the congregational revitalization process.
Several of the strategies highlighted in the comprehensive strategy paper (2000) are of particular importance at this time and require particular attention from the church, Native American and non-Native American alike. First and foremost is the need for a broad-based consultation on Native American ministry through which the many areas of concern can be addressed and discussed, and new vision for implementing the strategies can be developed and communicated. Plans for this consultation are underway.

Native Americans work through relationship, and meeting together is critical to our being able to learn from the past in order to envision the future. One of the important ways this has happened in the past was through “Eight Synod” consultations, which brought together Native American clergy and leaders, as well as middle governing body staff and leadership, from throughout the synods where Native American congregations are located. Though initially held every three years, the last such consultation was held in 2005. A report on this consultation was prepared for the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 108–113).

It is critical that another consultation be held soon, with an even broader complement of participation. Given the increasing numbers of non-reservation Native American Indians, the next consultation must include persons from presbyteries and urban areas with strong, non-reservation Native American populations. There are persons who have expressed interest and willingness to engage in Native American ministry even though they do not live in a presbytery that currently engages in Native American ministry. And there are institutions and agencies that have offered to help resource Native American congregations. Through such broad participation we can better generate continuing vision for Native American ministry through the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The consultation will provide opportunity for conversation and dialogue in all the areas highlighted by the 2000 paper. It will also provide an opportunity to educate and strategize in the areas that are of special importance to us at this point, namely Urban and Off-Reservation Ministry, Youth Ministry and Leadership Development, Preparation for Ministry and Congregational Leadership Development, and Economic Development. A consultation is a critical tool by which implementation of the strategies for Native American ministry in the PC(USA) could be carried into the next decade.

We plan to hold a churchwide consultation no later than 2012.

Native American ministries in urban areas provide the spiritual base necessary for people to deal with the issues of daily life. One off-reservation Native American church is Central Presbyterian Church in Phoenix, Arizona, which has historically served Native American people. In other cities, Native American ministries are nurtured within existing Presbyterian churches. This is the case in Albuquerque and the Los Angeles area. In Anchorage, the newly chartered Anchor Presbyterian Church serves Native American people in the surrounding area. In Spokane, a Native American ministry is working towards having its first ordained pastor. The NACC is involved in ongoing consultation with presbyteries who have generated and/or hope to generate off-reservation ministries.

We lift up for special commendation these urban Native American Indian congregations for their leadership in serving the social and spiritual needs of Native American people, often across tribal lines. As with other Native American ministry, they are built on relationship, and they invite partnerships with other congregations and individual friends. Visit, participate, and learn: urban Native American Indian congregations seek your partnership.

In areas where there currently is no off-reservation Native American ministry, NACC is available to assist presbyteries in exploring ways existing congregations might extend outreach and welcome to Native American people, either through the formation of a Native American fellowship or through the development of a multicultural congregation that would include Native American people.
f. Youth Ministry and Leadership Development

Fostering youth work is important to the life of the church regardless of the setting. In the context of Native American ministry, it is especially critical. Native American youth ministry has evolved over the years to the current model of the American Indian Youth Council (AIYC), which was formed in 1994. The council brings together a group of eight youth representing the eight synods with Native American ministries within their bounds. The AIYC is supported by two to four adults who serve as advisors as well as the staff of the Native American Congregational Support office. Every three years a new council is organized with new representatives from the eight synods. Each newly formed council participates in an organizational meeting with a focus on developing leadership skills; it also represents Native American youth at PC(USA) gatherings in order to increase their experience of organized conferences. In their third year, council members plan, organize, and implement a national conference directed toward youth from Native American churches. Through these events, Native American youth find connection with others like themselves, which strengthens and encourages them to continue their faith journey despite their physical isolation from one another.

The Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy Report, approved by the 210th General Assembly (1998), recognized the need to give emphasis to Native American youth work and included it in its recommendations. The NACC supports this strategy and is supported by it.

g. Leadership Development and Preparation for Native American Ministry

The number of Native American congregations, chapels, and ministries within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) fluctuates as churches are closed and new urban fellowships begin. The number, however, remains about 109, spread over twenty presbyteries and eight synods.

The 2004 Session Annual Statistical Report indicated a Native American membership of more than 10,000 within the denomination (1,133 congregations have one or more Native Americans, and 97 congregations have 50 percent or more Native American membership). The year of organization for these congregations ranged from 1640 to 2002.

A key concern, however, is that very few Native American ministries can sustain a full-time, installed pastor, and the membership in many of the congregations is less than fifty. On average, worship attendance is about 25 persons, and the average operating income is less than $27,000.

Native American congregations are rarely led by ordained ministers. Congregations that are led by Native American ordained ministers are even rarer. Of the forty persons identified as Native American clergy within the denomination, one-third serves as pastor in a congregation, one-third serves in other capacities within the church, and one-third is retired from active service.

Part of the issue is that ordained clergy are reluctant to serve on isolated reservations or are unwilling or unable to accept the financial package available from these congregations. With assistance from presbytery, synod, or mission partnership grants, some Native American churches have been able to provide at least presbytery-minimum salaries, but these are the exception.

Ironically, as “missions” of the national church years ago, Native American churches more often had the benefit of full-time ordained leadership than is now the case. The transition of Native American ministries, from “missions” to self-determining congregations within presbyteries, put the onus on the congregations to provide salary support, despite the demographics that made this virtually impossible. Recruitment of more Native Americans for the ministry is certainly needed, but the larger problem is that of providing them with a livable wage upon ordination and call. For that, partnership through presbyteries and synods will continue to be essential.

In order to enhance the training, equipping, and development of leadership for Native American ministries, NACC works with presbyteries and synods to identify and nurture potential candidates for both ordained and lay leadership in the church.

The future of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) lies in its ability to develop and sustain racial ethnic and multicultural congregations. This is dependent on the identification of potential candidates, the availability of culturally sensitive curricula and learning environments, and the development of scholarship assistance. At the national level, the office for Preparation for Ministry and the office for Church Leadership Connection, particularly through its Racial Ethnic Referral Program, have been exceptionally helpful in providing information and making referrals as needed. We note the continued need for watchfulness in this key area when Native American candidates are engaged in seminary studies and preparation for ministry.

The NACC provides ongoing consultation with presbyteries and synods regarding their key role as a resource for continuing education for ordained clergy as well as leadership development for congregations in such areas as Christian education, stewardship, and clerk of session and treasurer training. While distance and cost are problems, assuring the participation of Native Americans in such programs is essential in order to meet the leadership development needs of Native American congregations. Training programs that are either on-site or on-line are critical to meeting the needs of many Native American congregations that are far removed from other churches and have limited funds to address leadership development needs. The Joint Session of the six Nez Perce Presbyterian churches in Idaho has been able to secure funding that will bring Native American church leaders and presbytery staff to them to conduct elder training.

The Commissioned Lay Pastor program is an opportunity to meet both the needs of Native American congregations, which are often hard-pressed to support even a part-time pastor, and the hopes of people who feel called to ministry even as they retire from careers in other fields. Native Americans frequently dream of and plan on returning to their reservation homes upon retirement. They also see retirement as an opportunity to serve the church in new ways. Non-Native American church leaders also see retirement as an opportunity to serve the church in new ways, including time with Native American ministry.

A highly recommended new resource is available for both interested individuals and presbyteries that may be able to provide pastoral support to Native American congregations through the Commissioned Lay Pastor program. It is: Commissioned Lay Pastors in the Presbyterian Church (PDS 72-213-03-003) $7.50. It contains a brief history of the development of the CLP program in the PC(USA) and provides sample curricula as well as information on mentoring, examination procedures, and issues facing racial ethnic congregations that often lead them to utilize a commissioned lay pastor.

Internet-based courses, such as those offered to prepare commissioned lay pastors through the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, allow students to remain in their communities and serve their churches while undertaking their training. In conjunction with the Presbytery of Grand Canyon, Cook Native American Ministries has developed a program for Native American CLP candidates. This program has also been utilized by non-Presbyterian candidates and non-Native Americans who need orientation to Native American culture, heritage, and religiosity before serving in a Native American ministry. The continuation of these programs is essential.

The NACC affirms the continuation of specialized curriculum for the training of commissioned lay pastors (Native American and non-Native American alike) to serve Native American congregations and the continued exploration of an agreed-upon source for all such training.

h. Economic Development

Native American people are the indigenous peoples of the land now known as the Americas. They are an ancient people who have lived and evolved in these lands over many centuries. The “discovery” of these lands by Europeans and the westward expansion of Euro-Americans into Native American Indian lands, however, forced Native American people onto smaller and smaller portions of their historic lands with little access to employment or other means of economic development.

The primary economic development strategy of tribal organizations in recent years has been centered on the development of casino-centered resorts, which cater to the entertainment and recreation interests and demands of nearby populations. Some of these enterprises do well and provide significant income to tribal organizations for needed infrastructure and direct payment to members of the tribe. Others do not. Despite the large roles that casinos play in the life of many tribes, some tribal organizations have taken steps to explore other economic development options, such as expanded agriculture, clean energy development, and selling reservation water rights to nearby water-starved urban areas. Presbyterian General Assemblies have recognized that gaming is a tribal sovereignty issue, and Native American congregations represent a variety of opinions and responses to casinos as a means to economic development in their communities. For the long-term welfare of Native American communities and Presbyterian congregations located on tribal land, NACC supports and encourages the church’s involvement in the exploration and support of alternative strategies for economic development.

The Self-Development of People Fund (SDOP) is a means through which Native American people and other groups can organize a project and seek support through existing Presbyterian resources at the presbytery, synod, or national level. Funds become available annually through the One Great Hour of Sharing offering. While SDOP is ideally suited to serve small-scale projects that might well emerge on reservations or among non-reservation Native American people in urban areas, it is not well known among Native American congregations. Native American people are underrepresented among SDOP decision makers at all levels of the church as well as among the applicants for and recipients of funds from Self-Development of People.

The NACC will continue to consult with the office for SDOP, to develop strategies to increase awareness of and access to SDOP resources by Native American communities and organizations, and with presbyteries and synods with Native American populations about the need to undertake vigorous education and outreach to congregations and other organizations for whom SDOP may be of assistance.
A critical resource to help the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) bring its mission priorities and its financial strategies together is the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee. As the church recommits to Native American ministry, we are called to explore ways that the economic resources of the denomination may be utilized to enhance the economic development of reservation communities through clean energy and the development of sustainable resources that are consistent with Native American people’s connection with and commitment to the land.

The NACC will continue to pursue this question, in consultation with the Office for Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), with the goal of creating a conversation that would enhance clean energy development and other appropriate industries for Native American lands and lay the groundwork for church partnership in such endeavors.

i. Property Concerns

Many of the reservation churches were built during the time of Euro-American westward expansion, well over 100 years ago, and in many cases the last major maintenance on the buildings was done under the Board of National Missions (pre-1973). Reservation churches have few financial resources, and the cost of repairs can be prohibitive. While not the case in all situations, most Native American churches are built on tribal land, and if the congregation ceases to exist, the building, by law, reverts to the tribe. Some tribes have been responsive to the needs of reservation congregations, and some congregations have been able to do fundraising, both locally and through “children” of the congregation now living in urban areas.

Presbyteries too have a significant role regarding the properties of Native American churches. They are often the source of mission connections that can help provide assistance and/or direct contributions of labor and materials, whether to help with ongoing maintenance or to respond to a crisis situation when a building becomes unusable as a result of age or natural disaster such as wind, flooding, or fire. The NACC celebrates as well the significant trend toward broad partnership in response to these situations, with non-Presbyterian church groups as well as tribal and other secular organizations. The NACC has been engaged with Dakota Presbytery, among others, in the ongoing inventory of Native American church properties and the issues they present.

j. Recent Developments in Native American Ministry

While there are many challenges in Native American ministry, NACC is pleased to report that there are also many positive signs that Native American ministry is being revitalized, through consultation and collaboration between appropriate governing body staff and members of the Native American constituency, in keeping with the comprehensive strategy paper (2000). Here are some examples:

(1) The Laguna congregation in the Presbytery of Santa Fe began a program of teaching children how to do traditional pottery painting; the program enrolled as many adults as children! This is a small step in overcoming the past in which the church was negative about preserving and maintaining the culture and traditions of the people. While the congregation remains very small, the average age has dropped dramatically from over age sixty to more than half now being under age 40. The congregation is seeing new life with young adults coming into membership and several who attend but have not yet become members.

(2) The Ute Mountain Ute congregation in Colorado is a joint ministry of the Presbytery of Western Colorado and the Rocky Mountain Conference of the United Methodist Church. Two years ago, vandals broke into the church and started a fire that caused major damage to the sanctuary. Fortunately, the damage was covered by insurance, held by the presbytery, and the payout was sufficient to allow them to do a major rehabilitation of the interior space. As a result, they now have a new sanctuary, kitchen, and restrooms—improvements to the building that were needed prior to the fire but would not have been possible, given financial constraints. The church also did local fundraising, and the Tribal Council provided assistance as well. “The church has always been here; it is the church for the community,” said the council. “It needs to continue.” Increasingly, partnership is able to go beyond the connections within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to include community members and tribal organizations.

(3) The North Fork Presbyterian Church on the Nez Perce reservation in Idaho experienced a fire on Christmas Eve in 2008. This too brought people from throughout the area, both churches and civic organizations, together. The new building was dedicated in September 2009, a testament to the spirit of rebirth that can come alive in the face of disaster, even in a community where there has been a long history of discrimination and racism against Native American people.

(4) On the Navajo reservation in Arizona, the Leupp Presbyterian church was located on a flood plain and faced serious damage from seasonal rains. Deciding that their future depended on moving to higher ground, the church raised the necessary funds and then proceeded to construct a new sanctuary and fellowship hall with their own skills and labor.
(5) In Sells, Arizona, vandals destroyed the pulpit of the Papago Presbyterian Church when it was being used as the outdoor chapel during the annual camp meeting in September 2008. An appeal to the Presbytery of de Cristo resulted in a carpenter in one of the congregations donating the materials and his skilled labor to construct a beautiful new pulpit that is now in place in the church.

(6) La Mesa Presbyterian Church in Albuquerque called a Native American pastor to focus her ministry on developing both a Native American fellowship to meet the spiritual needs of off-reservation Native American people in Albuquerque and an outreach and organizing project to address their critical social needs. Through community-oriented potlucks, a focus on the behavioral health needs of Native American families has emerged. A formal group has been organized to represent off-reservation Native Americans in the state Local Collaboratives system that addresses health issues and wellness. A member of the fellowship has stepped forward to address the needs of Native American women who are experiencing or have experienced domestic violence. Many urban Native Americans’ experience of church is one of judgment; this ministry is centered on letting people know that “somebody cares.”

(7) Church of the Indian Fellowship (Presbytery of Olympia), which continues ministry begun by missionaries in 1876, is now in its eighth year with a called Native American pastor. They are in their third year of having a ministry to children, and a Vacation Bible School attracted more than thirty-five children. In their final year of support through PC(USA) Mission Partnership Funds, they have negotiated partial funding for the church’s programs through the Puyallup Tribe. All this is in part due to the extension of the redevelopment period beyond the traditional five-year period.

(8) In response to the call for new patterns of connection, the Presbytery of Western New York has formed a Strategy Team for Native American Ministry to assist the three Native American congregations in that presbytery. Worship leadership is currently shared by a Native American who is training to be a commissioned lay pastor (CLP), other CLPs in the presbytery, and elders of the Native American congregations. Indian Nations Presbytery in Oklahoma has formed a committee on Native American ministry. Presbytery de Cristo created a mentoring team to support a new pastor and assist in leadership development for session members and others in the congregation. It continues to be available to assist as the congregation goes through an upcoming leadership transition in 2010.

(9) A variety of new partnerships have emerged between Native American congregations and their presbyteries, neighboring congregations of non-Presbyterian denominations, and congregations and presbyteries in other parts of the country. Many of these are centered on one-time mission trips, but some are ongoing, with significant degrees of mutuality and two-way exchanges. Increasingly, mission work groups are undergoing orientation to the culture of Native American communities before undertaking the trip. University of Dubuque Theological Seminary faculty have provided immersion experiences for some groups planning mission trips to Native American communities.

(10) Trinity Church in Chinle, Arizona, installed a new pastor in November 2008, soon after an arson fire destroyed the communion table, baptismal font, and part of the sanctuary. With the insurance money and the assistance of mission volunteers, they were able to remodel the sanctuary and other rooms. In the process they also were able to deal with other property issues such as demolishing an old manse. The process of rebuilding the sanctuary provided an opportunity to think about God’s call to them as a Navajo congregation, and they decided to use symbols that have significance in both Christian and Navajo culture, such as mountains and eagles. There is also discussion about developing a community garden on the church grounds.

(11) There have been several instances where presbyteries have created commissions to consider the future of Native American congregations. In more than one case, a NACC representative raised the question of how many members of a decision-making committee had been to the reservation and had met the people they were making decisions about. In those cases, the decision making was put on hold until the committee could go to the churches and meet the people. In most cases, the results of these conversations have been very positive, leading to the issues being resolved and funding being continued. They have also led to the Native American congregations becoming more involved in the life of the presbytery.

(12) In the Synod of Alaska/Northwest, two important developments have been made possible through the synod’s Self-Development of People fund. The Makah Tribe was seeking ways to restore their lost skills and renew the connection with their traditional crafts. To do so, however, they needed to know if the necessary natural materials were still available. A grant from the synod’s SDOP fund made an inventory of these materials possible. The Haida Heritage Group wished to make their own ceremonial regalia, but the cost of even the basic materials was prohibitive for this island-based congregational group. They applied to the SDOP committee and were given a grant that permitted members of the group to make two sets each, one for themselves and one to sell. These stories demonstrate how new patterns of connection within the church have opened pathways for Native American ministries through access to existing funds.

k. Conclusion

Since the last meeting of the General Assembly, the United States has gone through a cataclysmic economic crisis. The church, as a part of this country and its economy, has been deeply affected. Congregations are struggling; presbyte-ries are struggling; the national structures are struggling. For many in the church, this is a new experience, but Native American ministries have functioned on limited funds for decades. We have learned to be faithful in ways that do not depend on large budgets. We have learned to be flexible and creative. We honor relationship and value community life, however small the community may become. Perhaps Native American ministries have wisdom that can be shared with the wider church in these hard times.

However, as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at all levels learns to live with fewer financial resources, it must remember and retain its commitments, including the commitment to Native American ministry. Native American Presbyterians must retain our place at the table. While our numbers may be small, our voice is necessary, and it must continue to be present. Together we are the body of Christ, and working in partnership, we are members one of another.

Appendix A

Brief Historical Summary

There has been a Presbyterian presence in Native American communities and reservations in the United States since the late 1600s. When the first presbytery in this country was formed in 1706, it is believed that there were thirty-seven Native American Indian Protestant ministers in Eastern America. A major portion of the comprehensive strategy paper approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000) was devoted to a “Summary of the Historic Relationship Between the Presbyterian Church and Native American Peoples” (pcusa.org/nativeamerican, click on “Reports and Policies”). While the history is complex as well as long, one thing is clear: Presbyterians have had a long connection to Native American ministry, and Native Americans have long identified as Presbyterians.

Evangelization of Indians was initially treated in the Presbyterian church, and other early American denominations, as a matter of “foreign missions.” An American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (“the American Board”) was established in 1810, and the United Foreign Missionary Society (Presbyterian, Reformed, and Associate Reformed) was organized in 1816. The two merged in 1826. The Presbyterian church transferred “Indian missions” to its Home Mission Board in 1883. Throughout the nineteenth century, the geographic expansion of Presbyterian mission work often coincided with the movement of Euro-Americans to Native American lands. Missionaries frequently served dual roles, as agents of the gospel and as agents of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, with responsibilities to supervise reservation communities. Church and government cooperated as well in the management of “Indian schools,” which were designed to “Christianize and civilize the Indians” through a curriculum aimed at breaking the connection between Indian children and their tribal roots, including their language.

A distinguishing mark of American evangelism was its insistence on individual salvation. The conversion and reformation of individuals, it was felt, would correct the evils of society. This emphasis on individualism was in direct conflict with the principles of communal life and the strong emphasis on relationship within Native American communities. The church’s approach was to work for the individuation of the Indians and to break the cultural bonds to tribal life. Many Native American congregations still reflect both their roots in the evangelical period and the church’s negation of tribal culture and traditions.

In the early twentieth century, sweeping change in federal Indian policy came about. The Indian Reorganization Act, passed in 1934, offered protection for the land base of tribes and permitted tribes to set up legal structures designed to aid in self-government. Many tribes adopted a constitutional form of government. A new approach, based in the social sciences, encouraged the recognition and affirmation of Indian culture, language, and heritage.

In the period following World War II, Presbyterian General Assemblies consistently took positions supportive of Native American land rights and other issues affecting Native American peoples. By 1983, both Presbyterian bodies that came together to form the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) supported the concepts of tribal sovereignty and self-determination, as well as the freedom for Native Americans to practice their traditional religion.

Structurally, however, Native American ministries in the Presbyterian church functioned through a “Home Missions” approach well into the twentieth century. Through a major restructuring of the denominational offices, which was fully realized in the early 1970s, Native American churches were moved from the umbrella of the Board of National Missions to being part of the presbyteries and synods in which they were physically located. Thus, approximately 100 congregations, for many of whom “the Presbyterian church” was represented by a national missions field staff person, experienced an abrupt transition. To be Presbyterian suddenly meant being part of new, unfamiliar, and often uncertain, relationships with presbyteries with whom they had few, if any, prior dealings, and vice versa.

In 1969, as this reorganization was being anticipated, the General Assembly provided seed money to be used for projects on Indian reservations. An ad hoc committee, the Indian Consulting Panel, was created to review proposals for the use of those funds. It soon became apparent, however, that a permanent consultative body was needed.

The Native American Consulting Committee was formally established in 1977, with authority to evaluate and recommend programs seeking national funding and to provide counsel to the General Assembly agencies and synods on matters affecting Native American peoples. The 1983 Reunion resulted in a total of 109 Native American congregations in the newly formed Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

10. 2003 Referral: Item 09-01. Reclaiming the Vision: A Mission Strategy to Strengthen the Partnership Between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and Its Related Schools, Colleges, and Universities, Recommendation 9. That the General Assembly Require the National Ministries Division, Higher Education Program Area, to Return to the General Assembly with a Response: Due to the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) restructure, the dissolution of the National Ministries Division in the fall of 2006, and the closure of the Higher Education program area in 2002, the final report was delayed. Progress has been made by the GAMC in renewal of the covenant with the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities (APCU) and by reasserting an emphasis by GAMC leadership to visit the Presbyterian-related colleges and universities in 2009. The Executive Director of GAMC, Linda Valentine, has made numerous visits to related colleges and universities in the last two years and was in attendance at the APCU annual meetings in 2007 and 2008.

From the 2003 Referral: Item 09-01, Recommendations 1, 4, 5, and 6 were referred to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and will not be addressed in this response. Recommendations 2, 3, 7, and 8 were fully answered for the 218th General Assembly (2008) and will not be addressed in this response. Part of Recommendation 9 was to return to the assembly with a full assessment, which will be addressed in this response.

Responsible entities in this referral were the National Ministries Division and the Office of Higher Education. As stated earlier, the National Ministries Division was dissolved three years after this referral (2006) and the Office of Higher Education was closed a year prior to the referral (2002). From the outset this created the challenge of where the work would be lodged and what staff was available to complete the work.

There were more specific sub-points to the recommendations, but they were mostly aimed at having the institutions themselves make changes to the way they educated students, related to the church, hired their staff, and funded their schools. The assembly intended that the GAMC offices would assist with all these initiatives, but the ultimate responsibility, and subsequent implications, rested on the institutions. At this point in history it is difficult for the denomination to dictate such programs for two reasons:

- The institutions operate quite independently of the denomination.
- At the General Assembly level there are not enough staff or resources to carry out this work.

However, there are offices and associations that continue to do work with and for our related institutions. Namely, the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities, which has a covenant with the General Assembly Mission Council; the Presbyterian College Chaplain’s Association, and the Office of Youth and Collegiate Ministries. The schools, colleges, and universities that are affiliated with the PC(USA) continue to excel in academics as well as in the area of student life. The national office, without the proper staffing structure and adequate resources, does its best to assist some of the more vulnerable schools with their financial and accreditation issues. Ministry and connection to our denomination’s related institutions, college-age members, and other affiliated college and campus ministries is a huge challenge in the overall mission of the PC(USA).

Response: In May 2008 the Office of Theology and Worship published Common Ministry, Shared Celebration, encouraging presbyteries to organize weekly celebrations of the Lord’s Supper in congregations across the presbytery. Theology and Worship also created a website, www.pcusa.org/sharedcelebration/, to support congregations and presbyteries in this endeavor; the website includes a theological and historical rationale for the initiative, suggestions for establishing this practice at the presbytery and congregational level, liturgical resources for presbytery-wide celebrations of the Lord’s Supper, historical background on Calvin’s attempts to establish weekly Eucharist in Geneva, ideas for creating a presbytery chalice and paten, a place to share stories about presbytery-wide celebrations of the Lord’s Supper, and the link to a Facebook group devoted to this effort.

No presbytery has communicated to the Office of Theology and Worship that they are committed to this practice. The organization of presbytery-wide celebrations of the Lord’s Supper in local congregations is a worthy endeavor; however, it is clear that more time is needed for this groundbreaking initiative to take root and grow. Nevertheless, the office remains convinced that “these celebrations, in which we proclaim and enact the unity of the body of Christ, can serve to strengthen and sustain our common ministry and mission, drawing members, ministers and churches together in deeper relationship through our shared participation in the Sacrament.”

At the next available opportunity, a question regarding presbytery-wide celebrations will be added to the Clerk’s Annual Questionnaire Survey.

Response: This referral is answered by the report “Christians and Jews: People of God.” Refer to Item 08-03.

Response: The Office of National Health Ministries was closed in 2009. The Website is no longer available and workshops and training on Congregational Care, Healthful Living, and Health Care Access for All People are no longer offered.

Response: Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) has worked in cooperation with other religious shareholders to encourage the big pharmaceutical companies to make drugs available, and not oppose efforts by developing countries to produce drugs needed to address pandemic diseases. The MRTI has also encouraged high-tech companies to adopt “open-source” policies on their technologies such as Sun Microsystems has done.

The Presbyterian Washington Office has advocated for a provision in the climate bill that would include clean technology transfer to developing nations to help the most vulnerable communities mitigate and adapt to the effects of climate change. Such technology transfer is seen as a very important support necessary for global mitigation and adaptation.

The Stated Clerk has sent a letter to the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) of the United States Department of Commerce.

Response: Education, training, research, and advocacy for people living with disabilities and their families in the church and in society are at the core of the ongoing work of the PC(USA) Disability Consultants and the volunteer network of PHEWA, Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC). Examples of resources developed by PDC and disseminated in print form and downloadable from their website, http://www.pcusa.org/phewa/pdc, are their “Congregational Audit of Disability Accessibility and Inclusion” and guidelines for “Establishing a Presbytery Committee on Disability Concerns.” Intentionally working with middle governing bodies in the development of guidelines and training procedures has been done effectively on a limited basis.

Response: The Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment monitored corporate involvement in Sudan. All U.S. companies are forbidden to do business in the country unless exempted for providing medical supplies or food. International companies are researched by the Sudan Divestment Task Force, and divided into categories according to the strategic or sizeable nature of their involvement. Some companies that remain unresponsive are recommended for divestment. This is a process similar to the procedure of “phased, selective divestment” followed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). None of the companies in this category are owned by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, New Covenant Trust Company, or the Board of Pensions. The MRTI will continue to monitor the situation as part of its ongoing work.

Response: Recognizing that a number of nonviolence training programs already exist, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program has determined to identify and create resource materials grounded in the Reformed tradition. The use of nonviolence was addressed in workshops at the 2008 and 2009 Peacemaking Conferences. A Web page of resources related to nonviolence, including nonviolence training opportunities, has been created at http://www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/nonviolence.htm. Resources will be added to this page and publicized as they are created.

   Response: This referral is answered by the report “On Baptism and the Lord’s Supper.” Refer to Item 16-06.

   Response: The Office of Theology and Worship has made these available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service since July 2008. They can be ordered thru the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Marketplace website at http://www.pcusa.org/marketplace/index.jsp.

   Response: This is being included in the development of the new Presbyterian hymnal that is currently underway.

   Response: In September 2009, the Presbyterian Washington Office sent letters containing this overture’s contents to all members of the United States Congress and to President Barack Obama.

   Response: These referrals are answered by the report, “Toward an Understanding of Christian-Muslim Relations.” Refer to Item 08-04.

Response: This referral will be answered by the response of the Office of General Assembly.

Response: The Interfaith Relations Office is working to improve national and international relations between Presbyterians and Muslims through:

- An ecumenical Christian-Muslim initiative that brings representatives of seven churches and seven Muslim organizations together twice each year to build understanding and develop cooperative projects.
- A four-year conversation, meeting twice each year, between Presbyterians and African American Muslims following the late Imam W.D. Mohammed. Both of these gatherings regularly include a program bringing together Presbyterians and Muslims in the local areas where the meetings are held.

New resources for local congregations seeking understanding or engagement with their Muslim neighbors have been created and made available through the Interfaith Toolkit, a web-based collection of guidelines, studies, and other materials that may be found at http://www.pcusa.org/interfaith/toolkit/.

Endnote

1. The Muslim organizations are the Islamic Society of North America; the mosques associated with Imam Warith Deen Mohammed; the Islamic Circle of North America; the Muslim Public Affairs Council; the Universal Muslim Association of America; the Muslim American Society; the Muslim Alliance of North America. The Christian communions involved are the Alliance of Baptists; the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ); the Episcopal Church; the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the U.S.A.; the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); the United Church of Christ; the United Methodist Church; with the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

Response: Presbyterian Hunger Program’s national associate, in his role as board member of SweatFree Communities, has helped in the formation and shaping of the Sweatfree Purchasing Consortium, whose purpose is to increase non-sweatshop products purchasing by government and nonprofit entities to improve the conditions, wages, and relative power of workers in the industry. Eight cities and states (including New York) have joined the consortium and the endorsement of the PC(USA) provides added legitimacy to the effort.

Response: Since the “Invitation to Expanding Partnership in God’s Mission” was ratified by the participants in the January 2008 consultation and affirmed by the 218th General Assembly (2008), a Continuation Committee of representatives of the invitation signees has worked to communicate broadly to the church about the agreements reached at the consultation: letters have been sent to all middle governing bodies, seminaries, General Assembly Mission Council ministry areas, and all PC(USA)-related mission organizations, inviting them to affirm and adopt the invitation. In addition, the special web page designed by the GAMC (http://www.pcusa.org/calltomiission/) invites all sessions, middle governing bodies, seminaries, General Assembly Mission Council ministry areas, and all PC(USA)-related mission organizations to affirm and adopt the invitation.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has incorporated this concern of intergenerational injustice into many of its advocacy efforts. In particular, in drafting the interfaith community’s annual “Faith Reflection on the [Federal] Budget,” the WO lifted up the concern of deficit spending in the following way: “Our mismanagement of our nation’s resources has brought us to the regrettable position where we must borrow from the future to meet current needs. As we increase near-term deficits through borrowing, we must use that money to address long-term human needs deficits to build a stronger, more just world for our children. Proper use of these borrowed resources can and should leave future generations not simply a legacy of debt, but rather a legacy of life and abundance.” The Washington Office has also been attentive to this outcry in supporting that the new government funding be fully offset, or “paid for,” though it has stopped short of requiring offsets at the cost of poor communities in need of aid. Further, the WO has worked to lift up the moral dimensions of the economic crisis and recession by trying to ensure that stimulus funds support those who are most vulnerable in society, supporting financial services reform, and supporting remedies to the foreclosure crisis.

Response: Presbyterian Disaster Assistance has worked intimately with the presbyteries affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma. We continue to work with the Presbyteries of Mississippi, South Louisiana, and New Covenant in long-term recovery through conference calls, visits, and Gulf staff interaction. Examples of our close collaboration include: Project Homecoming in New Orleans, FLAPDAN (Florida Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Network), and our opening of two villages in the Presbytery of New Covenant in response to Hurricanes Gustav and Ike last year.

Response: In 2009, worship and educational resources were created on the theme of “a day of ceasefire in the United States” for the International Day of Peace. Educational resources from the Gun Violence and Gospel Values have been shared via the Web and in Presbyterian Peacemaking Program publications. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program will continue to create such resources.

Response: In consultation with the Peacemaking Program, the Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has engaged in numerous advocacy initiatives relating to the tragedy of gun violence. In particular, the WO joined with the interfaith and ecumenical community to oppose numerous attempts to weaken the District of Columbia’s gun laws. Weakening D.C. gun laws is a popular poison pill amendment offered to any number of federal bills. From September 2008 to August 2009, there have been three attempts to weaken D.C.’s gun laws and the WO has signed eight letters to protect them. The WO also signed a letter to Congress in support of closing the gun show loophole by requiring background checks at gun shows and similar events.

The Presbyterian Washington Office and the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, working in some instances in partnership with other General Assembly Mission Council programs, arranged for Presbyterian speakers on gun violence at Ecumenical Advocacy Days, helped offer a colloquium on Gun Violence and Gospel Values, provided worship resources and identified educational resources, and offered opportunities for advocacy on issues related to addressing gun violence, particularly in relation to closing the gun show loophole.

Response: The Small Church and Community Ministry Office, along with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), have posted the report, From Homelessness to Hope: Constructing Just, Sustainable Communities for All God’s People, on their respective WebPages at www.pcusa.org/smallchurch and http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/homelessness_report2008.pdf. This report provides information, resources, and advocacy suggestions related to homelessness and affordable housing issues. The Small Church and Community Ministry Office also produced a worship and resource packet for Affordable Housing and Homelessness Sunday. This resource packet is posted on its webpage. The Small Church and Community Ministry Office also posted on its webpage stories of congregations engaged with affordable housing and/or homelessness ministries.

35. 2008 Referral: Item 09-08. Report, God’s Work in Women’s Hands: Pay Equity and Just Compensation, Recommendation 2.f. That the Office of Vocation, in Consultation with the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), Presbyteries, and Congregations, Participate in the PC(USA)’s Goal of Assuring Gender Equity in Pay for Clergy by Developing by 2010 a Tool to Enable Presbyteries’ Committees on Ministry to Analyze Clergy Terms of Call and Compensation Offers for Pay Equity Purposes; and That This Tool Be Placed on the PC(USA) Website That Would Include a Place for Presbyteries’ Committees on Ministry Accessing the Tool to Register Their Interest; and That the Office of Vocation Report on the Use of This Tool to Each General Assembly Through 2020—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 897–923).

Response: Tool to enable presbyteries’ committees on ministry to analyze clergy terms of call and compensation offers for pay equity purposes and supporting resources is posted at www.pcusa.org/ministers.

Response: The first of these training modules for presbytery committees on ministry and councils of presbyteries and synods is posted at www.pcusa.org/clc.

37. 2008 Referral: Item 09-08. Report, God’s Work in Women’s Hands: Pay Equity and Just Compensation, Recommendation 2.h. That the Office of Vocation and Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women, in Consultation with the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), Participate in the PC(USA)’s Goal of Assuring Gender Pay Equity by Designing a Program for Women Clergy Interested in Preparing to Serve as Heads of Staff; and the Office of Vocation Report on This Process to the 219th General Assembly (2010)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 897–923).

Response: Program cosponsored with Auburn Theological Seminary Center for Church Life, led by experts in organizational dynamics and vocational counseling, will be offered in late 2010.

Response: The Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) regularly meets and communicates with companies in which stock is owned. These interactions frequently involve employment practices including pay equity and workplace diversity. Companies are encouraged to include basic equal employment opportunity data in public corporate social responsibility reports. In addition, MRTI has recommended proxy voting support for resolutions on these issues.

cated for Ratification of the Equal Remuneration Convention—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 897–923).

Response: In September 2009, the Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) sent a letter to all members of the U.S. Senate urging that they ratify the Equal Remuneration Convention, 1951. The letter also commended the 11th Congress for enacting the Lily Ledbetter Fair Pay Act, which is a step toward pay equity for women in the United States. The bill encodes “equal pay for equal work,” rather than the General Assembly’s call for “equal pay for comparable work,” but remains the most significant stride toward pay equity in the U.S. for some time.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has woven the themes of A Social Creed for the 21st Century into a number of its advocacy efforts, in particular those concerning justice for workers. The WO also highlighted the Social Creed by devoting the entire issue of the November-December 2009 Washington Report to Presbyterians, the bi-monthly print and e-mail newsletter, to the promotion and interpretation of the Social Creed.

Response: The Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), in collaboration with more than 200 partners, expanded its work to engage companies and industry groups around energy efficiency and conservation policies and practices. This included filing shareholder resolutions with ConocoPhillips, Norfolk Southern, and Time Warner Cable, and dialogues as part of stakeholder teams with American Electric Power, McDonalds, Sun Microsystems, and Timberland. In addition, working with Ceres, MRTI supported the development of a corporate group called BICEP (Business for Innovative Climate and Energy Policy) that advocated for U.S. climate and energy policy legislation, and an international agreement on climate change.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has been working very closely on this issue. In 2008, the WO worked to improve the Lieberman-Warner Senate climate change bill, the first comprehensive climate bill to reach the floor of the U.S. Senate. The WO has also been involved in what has become an annual process to pass new energy policy, giving the WO the chance to lift up the particular energy-production and usage-related concerns expressed in this referral. Furthermore, in 2009, the WO, together with ecumenical partners, was closely engaged in both House and Senate efforts to enact comprehensive climate change legislation. The bill that passed the House, though not as strong as the General Assembly policy demands, contains several good provisions, including a good program to help low-income energy consumers in the U.S. cope with increased costs related to global warming, and a robust International Adaptation program designed to provide much-needed assistance to the communities/countries around the world that are most vulnerable to climate change.

Working with the NCC and NCC-member communions, the WO helped to provide testimony to the House Energy & Commerce Committee on the faith perspective calling for climate change legislation, and in particular International Adaptation, four times in 2009. The WO also participated in numerous meetings with Congressional staff, both House and Senate, to emphasize the faith community’s priorities in a comprehensive climate bill.

The WO published eight articles in the Witness in Washington Weekly from June 2008–Aug. 2009 and one article in the May–April 2009 Washington Report to Presbyterians. The WO helped to draft the Stated Clerk’s letter to Congress in response to this referral. The WO also promoted climate change as a topic for worship on Earth Day Sunday and worked with interfaith partners to publish “Faith Principles on Global Warming.” The WO signed numerous letters to Congress and the Administration on the subject of creation care, sustainable energy use, and a U.S. response to climate change. Finally, the WO has provided numerous resources to individuals and congregations, by responding to correspondence on the subject, both phone and email, and providing workshops and adult Sunday School class events in local churches.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office brought in an intern who worked with the Interfaith Working Group on Immigration, a coalition working on fair immigration policies and alternatives to detention. The intern advocated through work with the coalition for alternatives to detention.

44. 2008 Referral: Item 09-12. Resolution to Explore the Study of the Status of Women at All Levels in the PC(USA), Recommendation 3. Equip All General Assembly Council Staff and Members to Be Responsive to the Needs of All Women as Part of Their Continuing Commitment to Valuing the Gifts That All Persons Bring to the PC(USA), to Continue to Encourage General Assembly Council Staff and Members to Reflect on and Incorporate the Values Articulated in the “Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” as Approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 540ff) —From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 961–64).

Response: The Racial Ethnic and the Women’s Ministries/PW ministry area has encouraged all GAMC staff and members to reflect on and incorporate the values articulated in the report on Creating a Climate for Change within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004). A Creating a Climate for Change Task Force has been formed, continuing this important work. The task force held its first meeting in October 2009, with staff support provided through Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries. The General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) staff and elected members will continue to be informed about the task force’s progress and work.

Response: The General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly have provided support to equip presbyteries and synods, utilizing the tools of cultural proficiency, to work for equitable participation of women of color in all aspects of the life and ministry of presbyteries and synods. Workshops and training in antiracism and cultural proficiency were held at national conferences, including the National Multicultural Church Conference, the Big Tent, and the Peacemaking Conference. We have also provided workshops and training to particular presbyteries at their invitation. The GAMC is also developing the PC(USA) National Persons of Color Recruiting Network in the Office of Cultural Proficiency in collaboration with others working on issues of diversity and inclusion across the PC(USA).

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has promoted this new policy through publications and public outreach. The Witness in Washington Weekly published an action alert related to this item and the July–August 2009 Washington Report to Presbyterians contained an article on voting rights that lifted up this new policy statement. The WO helped the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to deliver this policy to all members of Congress before the November 2008 elections, which allowed the WO to promote the policy statement in its entirety. In addition, the WO has responded by phone and email to questions on the subject from Presbyterians.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has promoted these policies where there has been legislative opportunity. The WO commended the Bush Administration and Congress for extending the Voting Rights Act, though, as described in the Winter 2008 Wrap-Up in the Washington Report to Presbyterians, Congress will be required to revisit the VRA before its next expiration in 2031, due to a recent [at publication time, expected] decision by the U.S. Supreme Court. When Congress takes up the law again, it will provide another opportunity to speak from this policy statement.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has promoted these policies where there has been legislative opportunity. In particular, the WO joined with interfaith partners twice in 2009 to support the bill to enfranchise District of Columbia residents by giving them a voting member of the House of Representatives. Unfortunately, due to poison pill amendments, that bill has yet to pass Congress. The WO also joined with interfaith colleagues to support the Democracy Restoration Act, which seeks to restore federal voting rights to millions of Americans who have been disenfranchised because a criminal conviction in their past. The letter further expressed concern that state disenfranchisement laws continue to deprive citizens who have paid their debt to society their fundamental right to vote.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) promoted these policy recommendations when it delivered the policy document in its entirety to members of Congress, but there has been no opportunity during the 111th Congress to advocate on particular bills that would accomplish these ends. The Administration of President Obama, however, has put in place rules based on former lobbying activities, governing who may work for the president. There has not been, however, a legislative opportunity to codify such policy for members of Congress and their staff.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) promoted these policy recommendations when it delivered the policy document in its entirety to members of Congress, but there has been no opportunity during the 111th Congress to advocate on particular bills that would accomplish these ends. During the 2008 election cycle, however, the WO provided resources to congregations pertaining to nonpartisan free speech by religious organizations, helping churches to understand what is and is not permissible for a 501(c)3 organization during an election cycle.

Response: Beginning with the Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association (PHEWA) Biennial in 2007, PHEWA, through its Presbyterian Association for Community Transformation (PACT) network, established and carried on an ongoing relationship with local ministry in New Orleans based in a commitment to “rebuilding with justice.” To that end, PHEWA developed a relationship the Covenant Presbyterian Urban Ministry Institute (CPUMI) in the Central City neighborhood. The CPUMI is connected with the Berean Presbyterian Church, the only traditionally African American Presbyterian church in the city. A grant was secured to provide funds for training board members in congregational based community organizing through the People Improving Communities through Organizing (PICO) network. A primary goal was to help move the ministry from a needs model to a transformation model.

Throughout 2008 and 2009, PHEWA conducted consultations on an every six months basis, assisting in negotiations with presbytery and helping with the development of a new job description that combined the roles of CPUMI director and pastor of Berean Presbyterian. The PHEWA also conducted a consultation with the new pastor/director soon after his arrival.

In 2008–09, PHEWA also worked closely with the interim PICO director to secure a direct grant to PICO for $10,000 to support organizing efforts in the Central City neighborhood. The PHEWA is planning another consultation in the first quarter of 2010 to assess where CPUMI is now and what aspect of their work will need continued support.

The PHEWA’s Presbyterian Association of Specialized Pastoral Ministries (PASPM) network, in conjunction with the American Association of Pastoral Chaplains (AAPC), developed a music based project, “Winds of Hope, Winds of Healing,” created to raise awareness of the mental health issues following Katrina and to raise funds for a pastoral counseling/mental health outreach project on the Gulf Coast, especially in Mississippi.

Response: Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, along with partners and volunteer recovery workers, encourages the “Green” building process by providing recommended materials when available and encourages the use of items that do not require recycling.

Response: The Small Church and Community Ministry Office served as a staff resource with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ASCWP) in the development of its report Struck Down, But Not Destroyed: From Hurricane Katrina to a More Equitable Future. The Small Church and Community Ministry Office worked with the Presbytery of South Louisiana in the development of its housing development plan for the Gulf Coast region.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has been engaged in the ongoing concerns of rebuilding the Gulf Coast. In particular, in consultation with Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, the WO has supported the Gulf Coast Civic Works Act, HR 2269 (in the 111th Congress) that deals with a number of the concerns addressed by this policy, including maintenance of prevailing wage levels, compliance with environmental laws, and developing local self-determination plans and re-developing the local work force. The WO has signed four letters in support of this bill. The WO has also been monitoring the situation of affordable housing in the Gulf Coast region, participating in a working group with other housing advocates whose concern is Gulf Coast housing.

In addition, the WO, together with interfaith colleagues, has met with the Department of Homeland Security federal coordinator of Gulf Coast Rebuilding and representatives of several other federal agencies, in order to express our particular concerns with the ongoing rebuilding process. Agencies involved in these meetings included the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Department of Commerce, and the White House Domestic Policy Council.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) publishes a resource, “How to Be an Effective Advocate,” which is a good resource for doing advocacy at all levels of government. The WO also published an article in the September–October 2009 Washington Report to Presbyterian on the topic of Gulf Coast recovery.

Response: The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program has created several worship resources related to the themes of opposition to torture, a commitment to ethical standards in interrogation, and a commitment to human rights. These resources are available on the Web and have been publicized through the program’s communication tools. Hard copies have been made available at peacemaking conferences and other events.

[This item has been pulled from the Plenary Consent Agenda and has been assigned as Item 19-07.]

In addition to providing the opportunity for congregations engaged in ministries with persons and families affected by serious mental illness to identify themselves here, this web-based directory allows congregations to register their ministries in area parish nursing and/or having a congregational health committee, substance abuse and addiction, domestic violence, twelve-step programs, HIV/AIDS, disability inclusion, older adult ministry, serving as a nutrition site and/or food pantry, free clinic, homelessness, with space to fill in “other ministry.”

Denomination-wide assistance will be appreciated in spreading the word about and promoting this new resource opportunity.

Response: In October 2008, members of Congress attached the bill to require parity in the coverage of mental health and general health care to the Toxic Assets Relief Program (TARP) bill. While the Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) did not take a position on the overall TARP legislation, it did support the inclusion of mental health parity on a must-pass bill. Further, the WO included an action alert in favor of mental health parity in the Witness in Washington Weekly in September 2008 and invited Presbyterians to celebrate the passage of mental health parity in the 2008 Wrap-Up edition of the Washington Report to Presbyterians.

The WO has also included increased access to high-quality mental health care in its work on the comprehensive health system overall considered by Congress in 2009. Further, the WO has advocated for the reauthorization and expansion of Indian Health Care, the federal system that provides health services to native populations in the U.S. Expansion of these services would include increased access to mental health and substance abuse services, as Native Americans are a particularly high-risk population for these health issues.

Response: The Presbyterian United Nations Office, whenever appropriate, has diligently worked to advocate for improvement in mental health care as it lifts up and speaks out for comprehensive human rights for all people, especially the most vulnerable.

Response: This action of the 218th General Assembly (2008) has been communicated to the appropriate entities and conferences, and conversations are in process.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) has been very engaged in the national debate about health care reform. In particular, the WO has frequently iterated support for a single-payer system, and further expressed the General Assembly’s historic commitment to health reform that will provide accessible, affordable, high-quality health care to all persons residing in this nation. This single-payer referral item has informed all of the Washington Office’s health care reform advocacy in the 111th Congress.

In September 2009, the House of Representatives took a vote on an amendment to substitute the larger health reform package developed by the three committees of jurisdiction with a single-payer approach. The WO sent letters in support of the amendment to its cosponsors and also sent a letter to each member of the House of Representatives urging them to vote for the substitute amendment.

Response: Resources, and links to resources, are available on the Web pages of a number of programs including the Office on the Middle East, Presbyterian Washington Office, Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, Presbyterian Assistance, Mission Responsibility Through Investment, Presbyterian Women, and the Presbyterian Hunger Program.

Response: The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, in partnership with the Washington Office and other programs, provides regular opportunities for Presbyterians to advocate with the United States government, calling the government to work for peace.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) published articles in both the Washington Report to Presbyterians and Witness in Washington Weekly on the plight of Iraqi refugees and called for Presbyterians to support legislation that would assist the refugees. The WO advocated forcefully with both congress and the administration for more assistance for Iraqi refugees. Through sign on letters and advocacy visits on the hill and with the administration, the WO conveyed the message that the U.S. ought to have a comprehensive, regional, multiyear plan for protecting and assisting Iraqi refugees, IDPs, and other vulnerable Iraqis: a plan with the full authorization and funding of congress.

Response: A letter was sent to both congress and the administration calling on our government to support our military personnel by granting speedy discharges to conscientious objectors; fully funding veteran’s benefits; ensuring that injured service personnel and veterans have the best medical, mental health, and rehabilitation care available; and providing generous benefits to surviving family members.

Response: Through articles published in the Washington Report to Presbyterians and Witness in Washington Weekly the Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) urged Presbyterians to advocate for a lasting peaceful solution for Iraq. A 2nd Tuesday briefing was held for Presbyterians on the situation in Iraq with a former Gulf War Veteran. The WO advocated, along with the Iraq Policy Development Working Group, for humanitarian assistance to refugees and internally displaced people and for increased development assistance for the rebuilding of Iraq.

Response: The Presbyterian United Nations Office has transmitted to the United Nations Security Council member states a letter to raise the visibility of continued violence in Iraq. The UN office also continues to work for the establishment of peace in Iraq, in partnership with the UN nongovernmental community and UN agencies.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO), on its own and in coalition with other denominations in the National Religious Coalition Against Torture, advocated for the full investigation of war crimes including torture and mistreatment of prisoners and to cooperate with any international investigations. This was done through sign-on letters, phone calls, direct visits with members of congress and the administration, as well as action alerts sent out to our Witness in Washington Weekly email list. Through the Iraq Policy Development Working Group, the WO on its own and in partnership with other organizations advocated for adequate development funds for the rebuilding of Iraq.

Response: A letter was sent to Congress and the administration calling on the United States to remove all weapons, mines, depleted uranium, and other military waste products from Iraq. The letter urged funding to repair the damage that had been caused.

Response: A letter was sent to Congress and the administration calling on the United States to return full, direct control of Iraq’s oil resources and oil revenues to Iraq.

Response: The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program promotes the Peace Fund for Solidarity with the Churches of Iraq (E051722). This ECO (Extra Commitment Opportunity) supports assistance and training for doctors, nurses, community health workers, counselors, and therapists; development work among women and children, especially those widowed/orphaned by the wars; and more.

Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, working in collaboration with our ecumenical partners, has been providing assistance to about 5,000 of the most vulnerable people inside Iraq and to refugees in Syria, Jordan, and Lebanon.

In addition to basic humanitarian assistance of food, water, and sanitation, assistance has included a number of additional components, such as education, literacy programs, and vocational training. Activities aimed at mitigating the psychological effects of children between the ages of seven and fourteen includes recreational activities, art, and drama therapy.

A key component has also included providing training to Syrians—a way of showing solidarity with the “host community.”

Working with Church World Service, one of nine voluntary agencies that resettle refugees in the United States, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance is assisting with the resettlement of Iraqi refugees that have been admitted to the United States and helping Iraqi refugees adjust to life in the United States. The Kreutz Creek Presbyterian Church in Hellam, Pennsylvania, hosted the first class to help Iraqi refugees introduce some of their traditional dishes to the U.S.

Response: Communication was sent to the Iraqi government expressing our concern for the status of women in the country. The communication cited the increase in abuses since 2004 and urged the government to take steps to improve the situation.

Response: Communication was sent to the president of the United States, the Congress, and the secretary of state expressing our concern for equal rights and justice for the women of Iraq. The communication encouraged them to work with the Iraqi government to address this situation.

Response: The following letter was sent in response to the referral:

To:
The Leaders of the Evangelical Presbyterian Churches in Iraq
President and General Secretary, World Alliance of Reformed Churches Programme Director, Middle East Office, World Council of Churches
Programme Director Inter-religious Relations and Dialogue, World Council of Churches; General Secretariat, Middle East Council of Churches;
General Secretariat, Fellowship of Middle East Evangelical Churches
President, Forum for Development, Culture and Dialogue
General Secretariat, Arab Group for Christian-Muslim Relations

Dear Friends:

Through an action of its 218th General Assembly, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) addressed the issue of “Violence and Suffering Inflicted on Iraqi Women During the Current Prolonged War” (GA Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp.45, 46, 1162–64). The Assembly has directed that we express solidarity with our partner churches in Iraq, which the PC(USA) has continued to do since the U.S.-led international sanctions, then war, were launched against that country. Through a variety of programs, Presbyterians have accompanied the people of Iraq, particularly the churches, through prayers, encouragement, and support through opportunities for consultation, fellowship and training, as well as support for ministries with those who have been displaced or become refugees.

The assembly has also requested that we communicate with the WCC, WARC, MECC, FMEEC, partner organizations engaged in Christian-Muslim relations for the purpose of communicating with leaders of the Muslim World, to express our continuing solidarity, and to assist in any way possible in attempts to address particularly violence and suffering inflicted on Iraqi women.

We are aware, as you are, that women and children experience the greater share of suffering during times of hardship. We are also aware, and grateful, that your own organizations have stood in solidarity with those who suffer, and have been diligent in working for peace in that beleaguered situation.
Lest, because of a situation that has become all-too-common in the news reports, or because of other distractions, we forget the people of Iraq, we write to encourage you in your efforts, and to assure you of our prayers as together we seek to be instruments of God’s peace to those who suffer.

Victor Makari, Coordinator for the Middle East & Asia Minor (Signed)

2008 Referral: Item 11-13. Resolution to Expand the Church’s Ministry with and Advocacy Against Human Trafficking, Recommendation 3. Encourage the Presbyterian Hunger Program, Self-Development of People, Presbyterian Women, and Other Grant Making Entities in the PC(USA) to Fund Partner Congregations, Presbyteries, and Synods, in Order to Provide Safe Housing, Medical and Psychological Help for Trafficked Persons; Support Efforts to Obtain Appropriate Documentation; and/or Assist Trafficked Persons, Especially Women, in Safely Returning to Their Country of Origin—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 45, 47, 1167–70).

2008 Referral: Item 11-13. Resolution to Expand the Church’s Ministry with and Advocacy Against Human Trafficking, Recommendation 4. Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office and the United Nations Office to Express Concern for the Escalation of Trafficking Within the U.S. and Use the Public Witness Channels Available to Them to Raise Issues with Appropriate National and International Representatives; and Partner with Ecumenical and Interfaith Entities to Build Coalitions Against Trafficking and Participate in Activities Such as the National Day of Human Trafficking Awareness (January 11) and the Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking (UN)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 45, 47, 1167–70).

Response: These referrals are answered by the report, “The Work of the Human Trafficking Roundtable,” found below.

The Work of the Human Trafficking Roundtable

The trafficking of human beings, modern-day slavery, is a multidimensional threat that deprives men, women, and children both in the United States and around the world of their human rights. This global scourge increases health risks and fuels the growth of organized crime. Since the 217th General Assembly (2006) spoke out about child sex trafficking, General Assembly Mission Council staff have been working together to coordinate their work. With the 218th General Assembly (2008) action calling for an expanded focus on human trafficking, the Human Trafficking Roundtable was constituted. The roundtable is made up of staff persons from the ministries of Compassion, Peace and Justice; World Mission; Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries; Presbyterian Women; the manager of Immigration Services in the Office of the General Assembly; staff from the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Concerns and from the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns; the Presbyterian Men volunteer; and a member of the leadership team of PADVN, the Presbyterians Against Domestic Violence Network (a network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association). The roundtable has been working collaboratively to expand the church’s ministry with and advocacy against human trafficking, meeting regularly both to coordinate the efforts of individual offices and to plan joint efforts around trafficking, including launching a new webpage, www.pcusa.org/humantrafficking.

a. Expanding Awareness and Advocacy

While the Roundtable continues to lift up issues related to trafficking that particularly impact children through the Associate for Child Advocacy, the associate for Mission Responsibility Through Investment, and our partner ECPAT-USA, the roundtable has been working to broaden the scope of awareness and advocacy about trafficking of adults by means of the following:

- Through the associate for Fair Food Concerns in the Presbyterian Hunger Program and the manager of Immigration Services in the Office of the General Assembly providing educational resources and advocacy tools on the web, through presentations and in articles about modern-day slavery in the fields and about immigration issues.

- Through the manager of Immigration Services in the Office of the General Assembly facilitating communications from the Stated Clerk to express the concerns of the PC(USA) to the United States Justice Department and the Department of Homeland Security about the issue of human trafficking and to urge effective action.

- Through ministry area booths at the Presbyterian Women’s Gathering and the annual Association of Presbyterian Church Educators’ event and in a Human Trafficking Roundtable booth at the World Mission Celebration, providing resource materials.

- Through Presbyterian Women, in plenary presentations at the Presbyterian Women’s Gathering, lifting up the issue of trafficking to raise awareness with members of Presbyterian Women across the country. Presbyterian Women has adopted human trafficking as an initiative and its Global Exchange for 2010 to India will offer opportunities for participants to see firsthand the effects of trafficking in that country.

- Through the work of the Presbyterian Men Volunteer, resourcing that organization in its emphasis on human trafficking.

- Through input from a member of the leadership team of PADVN (Presbyterians Against Domestic Violence Network), a network of PHEWA, exploring the connections between human trafficking and domestic violence in the United States as victims of trafficking come to domestic violence shelters.

b. Funding for Work that Addresses Human Trafficking

Although most funding entities of the PC(USA) are already aware of the intersection between human trafficking and such root causes as hunger, disempowerment, and disaster situations, the Human Trafficking Roundtable sent letters to the Presbyterian Hunger Program, Presbyterian Women, and Self-Development of People encouraging them to fund such programs through their grant-making mechanisms. Through the work of the associate for Fair Food Concerns, the roundtable is promoting partnerships with Freedom Network USA, an organization that provides trainings for people in churches as well as those working in law enforcement, social services, and businesses in order to build capacity for responding to human trafficking victims in their midst. One such training has already been held, co-sponsored by the Presbytery of Charlotte and Church World Service. The Self-Development of People program is open to receiving applications dealing with this very serious issue if they meet the criteria of being owned and controlled by the direct beneficiaries.

c. Legislation to Combat Trafficking

There is comprehensive federal legislation in place to address human trafficking, first enacted in 2000 as the Trafficking Victims Prevention Act (TVPA) and most recently reauthorized as the William Wilburforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008. As a provision of this act, the Department of Justice publishes an annual Trafficking in Persons Report, available as a link from the human trafficking website. This report details the monitoring of 170 countries in terms of their compliance with anti-trafficking efforts, highlights efforts of the international community to combat trafficking, and encourages governments to take effective action. Work is underway through web resources and by means of promoting more training events by Freedom Network USA to educate Presbyterians about the need for state legislation to address trafficking.

d. Educational Resources

The Human Trafficking website, www.pcusa.org/humantrafficking, is the primary source for educational resources on human trafficking and will be updated with links to new resources on an ongoing basis. The website promotes a four-session study, Sex Trafficking, available for purchase from The Thoughtful Christian, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation’s web-based resource center, and provides a link to The Thoughtful Christian website where the resource can be purchased for download.

e. Promoting Initiatives That Address Human Trafficking and Its Root Causes

As a part of its ongoing work, the Human Trafficking Roundtable has collaborated with the World Missions Ministry and its area offices in exchanging information about and providing resources that address incidents of human trafficking, forced servitude, and sex trafficking in the six regions in which the PC(USA) has mission partnerships. Through the associate for Fair Food Concerns, the roundtable worked with Freedom Network USA, Presbytery of Charlotte, and Church World Service (see www.pcusa.org/humantrafficking) to provide the event held in the Presbytery of Charlotte to train participants in identifying the victims of trafficking and addressing their needs in appropriate ways. The roundtable stands ready to facilitate other such trainings in other presbyteries or with other groups. The Human Trafficking website, www.pcusa.org/humantrafficking, will continue to be a source for information about initiatives that address trafficking and will be updated with new information on an ongoing basis.

Response: The Stated Clerk encouraged President Barak Obama, by letter, to support Publish What You Pay legislation.

Thirty presbyteries—including the eleven Joining Hands presbyteries—are engaged at various levels to urge congressional representatives to cosponsor the Energy Security Through Transparency Act in the Senate and the Extractive Industries Transparency Act in the House.

The coordinator of the Presbyterian Hunger Program (PHP) and director of Reseau de Lutte contre la Faim (RELUFA), PHP’s Cameroonian partner, met with Senator Richard Lugar to urge his support for addressing the petroleum/poverty paradox. Senator Lugar became one of the original cosponsors of the Senate bill.

Also, Presbyterian Hunger Program staff worked closely with the staff of Senator Mitch McConnell, requesting assistance to release transparency activists arrested in several African countries, bringing both the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and a local pastor into that conversation.

Presbyterian Hunger Program staff has provided advocacy opportunities since January 2009 for the release of seven transparency activists in African nations through letter-writing campaigns developed within the Joining Hands networks.

Staff of the Presbyterian Hunger Program coordinated several media campaigns on the petroleum/poverty paradox both in Chicago and in Louisville, involving local Presbyterians and Cameroonian partners, as well as the Publish What You Pay executive director, in largely broadcast media. Print media has engaged the issue in Chicago and in a blog in Sojourners magazine. More press is anticipated as the legislation comes closer to a vote.

Presbyterian Hunger Program staff provided a January 2009 seminar on Publish What Pay for Presbyterian seminarians and a smaller session for the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky pastors, as well as pastors and congregants in Monmouth and New Brunswick presbyteries.

The director of Publish What You Pay U.S. Coalition has taught in numerous Presbyterian gatherings in both presbyteries and congregations and has accompanied Presbyterians on visits to Capitol Hill.

Response: The Presbyterian UN Office has transmitted a letter to the Southern African Development Community (SADC) to be transmitted to its member states and the SADC secretary general. The letter addresses election monitoring and the humanitarian impact of political and economic crises in Zimbabwe. The Presbyterian UN Office may also arrange meetings with the UN Missions of SADC member states in an effort to further raise visibility of the crises in Zimbabwe.

Response: A letter was sent to Congress and the administration urging the United States to increase humanitarian aid to Zimbabwe and continue support for the Zimbabwean people. The letter also condemned the human rights abuses currently taking place in the country.

The Presbyterian United Nations Office worked with the ecumenical community at the United Nations to host a briefing with a Zimbabwe representative of Maryknoll missioners.

Response: The Stated Clerk has communicated with the president and Congress calling for the creation of such legislation. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program and the Washington Office monitor proposed legislation for opportunities to engage in further advocacy on this issue.

82. 2008 Referral: Item 11-17. Overture on War, Mercenaries, and Profiteering, Recommendation 4. Direct the Stated Clerk, and Appropriate General Assembly Council Offices to Petition and Otherwise Advocate That the Congress and the Attorney General of the United States Investigate War Profiteering in the Wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, Both by Private Military Contractors and Others, and That the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Further Requests That, as in the American Civil War, World War I, World War II, and the Korean War, an Excess Profits Tax Be Assessed Against Any Company Found to Be Engaged in War Profiteering, Recognizing That It Is Immoral to Use a Time of War or National Emergency to Expand Profits While Many Soldiers’ Families Live in Poverty and All Official U.S. Personnel Bear the Primary Risks and Sacrifices of the War—From the Presbytery of Scioto Valley (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 45, 47, 1177–80).

Response: A letter was sent by the Washington Office to Congress and the attorney general calling for the investigation of war profiteering in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office (WO) published articles in Washington Report to Presbyterians and Witness in Washington Weekly about the situation in Colombia and the effects of current U.S. policy—particularly military assistance and the Colombia Free Trade Agreement. The WO signed on to a variety of letters to Congress and the administration expressing our concern about the Colombia Free Trade Agreement and Plan Colombia. We had face-to-face meetings with congressional offices as well as the Department of Treasury. The WO cosponsored a hill briefing on the effects of Plan Colombia and hosted a mission co-worker from Colombia who spoke in the 2nd Tuesday briefing to Presbyterians on the situation in Colombia.

Response: The Presbyterian United Nations Office hosted International Peacemaker Diego Higuita-Arango in the fall of 2008 for a briefing on the human rights situation in Colombia. The Presbyterian UN Office worked with the World Council of Churches (WCC) and other ecumenical colleagues to organize a day-long session on Colombia during the WCC United Nations Advocacy Week in November 2009. The presentations during the session included reflections from Colombian churches, the New York ecumenical community, and the United Nations.

Response: The “Commitment to Peacemaking” equips Presbyterians as they seek to implement the Mission Work Plan justice and compassion goal, “Advocate for peace and nonviolence in accord with General Assembly policy and direction, and aid other governing bodies in peacemaking efforts.”

As of January 5, 2010, the number of congregations affirming the “Commitment to Peacemaking” was 4,521. Additionally, three presbyteries have made the “Commitment to Peacemaking.” This information will be updated and reported to the 220th General Assembly (2012).
Response: A list of resources is posted on the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program’s Web page at http://www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/. Resources will be added as they are identified or created. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program worked with the Office of the Stated Clerk to notify the congregations and middle governing bodies of the Web page.

Response: As instructed by the General Assembly, the Moderator and his two predecessors appointed a Committee of Nine, representing diverse backgrounds and perspectives. The General Assembly Mission Council, through its Executive Director, named the following staff persons to serve as resources: the area coordinator for the Middle East, the Regional Liaison (mission co-worker) for Israel/Palestine and Jordan, and the coordinator of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. The Office of the General Assembly’s (OGA’s) director of Communication, Development, and Technology, and the regional liaison (mission co-worker) for Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, and the Gulf facilitated committee meeting arrangements.

Response: A Special Fund, H333333, was set up and promoted through Monthly Fast, Presbyterian Hunger Program website, and written pieces. Through November 30, 2009, $10,999 had been received. This provided funds for two grants totaling $10,706.40 for a grain mill in Haiti and support for more cereal banks in Senegal, two of the populations hardest hit by the Global Food Crisis. Special Fund H333333 will continue to be promoted and funds will be awarded based on donations.

Response: The Monthly Fast was launched as a way to focus Presbyterians on relevant resources (video and print) and raise their awareness of the global food crisis and its various causes. The integration of a Christian spiritual practice with education as well as personal and collective action was appreciated and positively received around the church. Twelve fasts are available at www.pcusa.org/foodcrisis and each highlights a different country in the world where PC(USA) has partners, who in most cases contributed to the materials.

Media: Articles have been published in a few major and many smaller newspapers; dozens of blogs; many PC(USA) congregational and presbytery websites. Radio interviews have been done with individual fasters.

Radio: WFPL 89.3 with Rick Howlett, Louisville NPR; Dec. 7, 2008.

Legislation and Advocacy:

- Fasters and other Presbyterians have been encouraged to contact their representatives on related legislation, e.g. the Trade Act, Jubilee Act and agricultural policy in support of sustainable approaches to agriculture and development.
b. The Stated Clerk has signed letters expressing these concerns to the presidents of Mexico, Canada, and the U.S. before the Summit of the Americas. He has signed a letter against the U.S.-Columbia Free Trade Agreement.

c. The PC(USA) has not endorsed the Global Food Security Act because of its orientation on biotechnology, with its mandated GMO (Genetically Modified Organisms) research, and is working with other organizations to get the wording changed.

Response: In 2008 we mobilized support for Jubilee Act, which passed committees but wasn’t voted on the floors of the House and Senate. It was slated to be re-introduced late in 2009. Also:

a. Jubilee USA launched a postcard campaign Change, Not Chains, which the PC(USA) helped promote.

b. The November Global Food Crisis monthly fast focused on Haiti and encouraged congregations to become Jubilee Congregations.

c. Sent out e-alerts urging support of Stop the Vulture Funds Act (House).

d. Met with members of Congress and the administration in order to galvanize support for further debt relief for the most impoverished countries as well as to support the Stop the Vulture Funds Act.

e. Sent letter and mobilized around Haiti’s debt, which was cancelled (June 2009).

f. Participated in calls and response to U.N. with other church entities on IMF (International Monetary Fund) reform.

Response: In consideration of the above, the World Mission Office on Asia and the Pacific has worked with the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program and other agencies to support existing partnerships between PC(USA) and United Church of Christ of the Philippines (UCCP) presbyteries, to itinerate a team of International Peacemakers from the UCCP and a PC(USA) mission co-worker from the Philippines during the World Mission Challenge 2009, and to explore the creation of a Philippines Mission Network. The Reverend Bruce Reyes-Chow, PC(USA) Moderator, visited the Philippines twice during 2009 to engage with and strengthen our partnership with the United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP). During one of his visits a UCCP pastor was abducted and Rev. Reyes-Chow participated in an ecumenical news conference to heighten awareness of these human rights violations. Conversations of possible travel/study opportunities to the Philippines are underway. The Asia Office is in the process of redefining the work of one of our mission co-workers towards advocacy/interpretation/education around human rights, peace, and justice issues.

92. 2008 Referral: Item 11-31. Commissioners’ Resolution. Concerning Human Rights Violations in the Philippines, Recommendation 3. Directs the Appropriate Agencies Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to Advocate That the United States Congress and the Department of State Reduce U. S. Funding of the Philippine Military and to Condition All Future Aid on: (a) Concrete Signs That the Human Rights of Unarmed Citizens and Groups Within Civil Society Are Respected by All Levels of Government, Including the Philippine Military; and (b) Evidence That Those Elements of the Philippine Military That Are Implicated in Murder, Abduction, Torture, and Other Gross Human Rights Violations Are Held Accountable by the Government—(Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 45, 47, 1229–32).

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office, the Presbyterian United Nations Office, the Office on Asia and the Pacific, and the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program have arranged visits for PC(USA) leaders to elected officials, facilitated the signing of ecumenical advocacy letters by denominational leaders, helped provide written testimony to the Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations of the House of Representatives’ Committee on Appropriations by the director of the Compassion, Peace and Justice ministry, and made opportunities for Presbyterians to advocate with their elected officials.

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office, the Presbyterian United Nations Office, the Office on Asia and the Pacific, and the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program have worked collaboratively and with other ecumenical partners at the United Nations to advocate for human rights in the Philippines.

Response: We have supported the Lighthouse Foundation and the Brethren in food aid projects in North Korea. One of Presbyterian Hunger Program’s Monthly Fasts on the Global Food Crisis focused on Korea and one of the take actions was to give funds earmarked for Korea.

Response: A wealth of resources has been produced and is still available to churches on seeking God through solemn assemblies. A website at http://www.pcusa.org/theologyandworship/worship/assemblies.htm includes a lengthy biblical and historical exploration of solemn assemblies, practical and prayer resources for preparation teams, theological and practical considerations, and liturgical resources for congregations. New resources continue to be added to this site. Those without web access have been sent these materials by mail. In addition, HungryHearts dedicated an issue to solemn assemblies, which can be accessed at http://www.pcusa.org/spiritualformation/hungryhearts/archive/winter09/.

96. 2008 Referral: Item 17-1NB. Direct the Office of Ministry with Youth to Provide the Resource Center or Resource Contact Person of Each Presbytery with a Copy of the DVD Soul Searching to Enhance Outreach to Teens and to Prepare a Study Guide to Accompany the DVD—From the 218th General Assembly (2008) (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 16, 1404).

Response: The DVD and study guide were sent to all PC(USA) presbyteries offices, to the attention of the stated clerks, with an enclosed study guide and cover memo in Fall 2009.

97. 2008 Referral: Item 17-2NB. Recommendation 2. Direct the Office of Youth Ministries to (a) Affirm the Importance of the Use of Mentors in the Spiritual Formation of Youth, with Attention to “Tweens” (Ages 9–12), Teenagers (Ages 13–18), and Also to Young Adults (Ages 18+); (b) Create and/or Identify, and to Disseminate Tools and Appropriate Educational Materials for Training Mentors and Emphasizing Active Listening; (c) Develop Worship and Programmatic Resources to Celebrate the Rites of Passage for “Tweens,” “Teens,” and Young Adults, and to Commission Their Mentors; and (d) Include on the PC(USA) Website a Page to Report on the Experiences of Mentors—From the 218th General Assembly (2008) (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 16, 1404–05).

Response: The Office of Ministries with Youth published and continues to promote the resource BeTween: Exploring Faith and Christian Life with Older Elementary Children and Youth. BeTweeen includes two tracks—one for youth and one for parents/families. In particular, the parent/family track explores the role of adult mentors, parents as spiritual leaders, and intergenerational friendships. In addition, the Office of Ministries with Youth commissioned several “Quick Sheet” resources to be created and posted on the Ministries with Youth website at www.pcusa.org/youthministry/quicksheets that are focused on the topics of mentoring. The first of the mentor focused Quick Sheets were written, edited, and posted on the website in fall 2009. Quick Sheets focused on celebrating tween and teen rites of passage, mentor program development, and ways to “plug in” adults with youth in a congregation, will be written and posted on the website in 2010 as funding is available. It is important to mention that Quick Sheets are free resources. They are pdfs that can be downloaded and used by anyone who wishes to use them. The electronic vehicle enables the Office of Ministries with Youth to increase, update, and promote the collection of articles in an economical and expedient manner that a print resource does not often allow. In spring 2010, a section entitled “Youth Accompaniers” will launch. This link will be a lodging site for mentor stories, suggestions, and resources.

The Youth Task Force, in its reporting back to the 219th General Assembly (2010), has included several examples of programs that are centered around mentors and adult accompaniers of youth.

Response: The General Assembly Mission Council, office of Purchasing Services, has worked with the Presbyterian Hunger Program in the past on sweatshop-free purchases from the Fair Trade Zone (a sweatshop-free women’s sewing cooperative) in Nicaragua that partners with Enough for Everyone, a ministry of the Presbyterian Hunger Program.

The GAMC Purchasing office continues to work with the Hunger Program in improving a responsible purchasing process that includes the purchasing of Sweatshop-free, ecologically-sound products that meets the minority vendor policy. This provides resources that assist in evaluating current suppliers to ensure they meet acceptable environmental standards and establish new sources of ecologically sound products.

Response: Information has been presented to the God’s Work in Women’s Hands: Pay Equity and Just Compensation Joint Working Group with the data requested, and available, for all PC(USA) entities. Initial analysis has been submitted, and additional analysis will be contributed as developed.

Response:

a. The General Assembly Mission Council, Presbyterian Center, Louisville, Kentucky

The Presbyterian Center began its quest to become more energy efficient in 1998 after an energy audit performed by a local engineering firm showed areas of potential savings on energy costs. These items included the installation of an energy management system (EMS) for controlled heating and cooling, changing lamps from T12’s to T8’s, and changing incandescent lamps to fluorescent lamps wherever possible.

Other items listed in the audit that have been completed were: changing exit lights to LED, turning off lights in vending machines to conserve energy, and putting timers on several outside lights.

After the installation of a state-of-the-art EMS in 1998, additional energy-saving changes were implemented through the years as new energy efficient products became available and affordable. To this end, the Presbyterian Center was honored in April 2009 with an ENERGY STAR award for positive changes made to conserve energy. The federal ENERGY STAR program recognizes buildings that rate among the top 25 percent of facilities of similar use across the country for energy performance. The Center was one of only nine Louisville buildings to earn the award in 2008.

A recycling program was started in 1998 that consisted of aluminum cans and white paper only. Since 2000, the program has grown to include ALL paper, magazines, books, plastic, glass, and batteries. Employees are encouraged to bring items from home if they are not already involved in a recycling program.

The Center has begun to concentrate on water conservation. Our facility is using more “green” chemical, recycled, and biodegradable paper products, low-flush mechanisms, and other products.
The Presbyterian Foundation has always strived to be a good steward of all of God’s resources. The Foundation takes seriously its obligation to conserve and recycle where appropriate. Programs to recycle paper, cans, and other items have been in place for many years. The Foundation has recycle bins in every area, by every copier, and in the break room by the vending machines. Even computer equipment is recycled. At times past, the Foundation has given computer equipment to another Presbyterian ministry for use. If there are no ministries that can benefit from its use, the Foundation takes the equipment to the local environment recycling program. The Foundation continues to encourage recycling and proper disposal and continues to research new and improved ways to dispose of waste.

All light fixtures in the building have been upgraded to conserve more power. That includes replacing the types of light bulbs used in the light fixtures that are more energy efficient. All exterior lighting is on timers such that areas are lighted only when needed, which substantially reduces power consumption.

All heating and air conditioning units have been replaced in the last five years. Each time a unit is replaced priority is given to choosing units with the highest efficiency ratings. To take this a step further, thermostats have locks on them to prevent changes and spiking demands in power consumption.

The Foundation has made a commitment to be environmentally friendly and energy efficient with its computer infrastructure and workstations. To this end, the Foundation is migrating to a virtual server environment. The result is reducing the number of servers from twelve to four with an estimated savings of component waste, landfill materials, and power consumption of 40–60 percent. While this incurs substantial capital cost, the resulting benefits to the environment and the bottom line are well worth the investment. The Foundation is developing plans for workstation virtualization that will result in similar savings as the server virtualization.

Finally, the Foundation strives to maintain its property a in manner befitting of the church. In 2007, the Foundation was recognized with the “CityPride” award from the city of Jeffersonville, Indiana, for the Foundation’s contribution to the pride and appearance to the city of Jeffersonville.

Over the years the Foundation has made a tremendous investment to ensure the ongoing efficiency of its building and operations and to ensure they are environmentally friendly. The Foundation stands ready to make this investment in the future as we strive to good be stewards of God’s blessings.

c. The Board of Pensions, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

As a guide in its efforts to conserve and responsibly use God’s resources, the Board of Pensions has joined the Greater Philadelphia Green Business Commitment Program. The Board of Pensions was a founding member of the program and has been certified by the Pennsylvania Environmental Council as a “Green” business. This measuring stick allows the Board of Pensions to ensure that it is living up to the church’s commitment to make the most of what God has entrusted to us.

In its effort to improve the energy efficiency of its rented Philadelphia offices, the Board of Pensions has installed thermal window blinds to reduce solar heat gain and the air conditioning load, purchased and installed compact computer servers, reduced the number of computer servers running through the use of “virtual” computer servers, set office equipment to a power-saving standby mode when not in use, and committed to purchase certified energy efficient office equipment.

As part of its broader commitment to becoming a “Green” organization, the Board of Pensions has expanded its recycling efforts; replaced standard fluorescent bulbs with high-efficiency, low mercury bulbs; purchased low VOC (volatile organic compound) carpet and paint; and reduced paper usage.

All of this is in an effort to minimize the impact of operations on the environment, serve as an example of a responsible corporate citizen, and maximize the Board of Pensions’ stewardship of God’s resources.

103.2008 Referral: Item 09-12. Resolution to Explore the Study of the Status of Women At All Levels in the PC(USA), Recommendation 2. That the General Assembly Council Provide Sufficient Funding and Staff Support for the Task Force to Study the Status of Women at All Levels of the PC(USA), to Explore Additional Funding for Research, Data Collection, and Analysis, and to Report to the 219th General Assembly (2010)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54–55, 961–64).

Response: The necessary funds for the Task Force to Study the Status of Women at All Levels of the PC(USA) were provided at the 218th General Assembly (2008) by increasing the Per Capita Budget for 2009–2010 to cover the expected expenses of this task force. The 2009 expenses were not incurred. Should the task force wish to spend more money than allotted for 2010 and/or extend their work beyond 2010, those requests would need to be made of the 219th General Assembly (2010). No additional funding is available for research, data collection, and analysis.

G. Office of the General Assembly

   Response: In response to this referral from the 218th General Assembly (2008), Item 04-07, to address the issue of limiting abuse in disciplinary process by the filing of multiple complaints and/or allegations with a possible amendment to the PC(USA) Constitution, the Office of the General Assembly issued Constitutional Musing 23 (http://www.pcusa.org/constitutionalservices/musings/note23.pdf).

   In addition, the Office of the General Assembly is proposing an amendment to D-2.0203b, which can be found as Item 05-25, Recommendation 4.

   Response: Models were collected from a number of presbyteries. A sample of those models are available at http://www.pcusa.org/ministers/com/sampling.htm and presbyteries have been notified.

   Response: The Report on the Review of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) brought to the 218th General Assembly (2008) included a recommendation that the GAPJC and the Office of the Stated Clerk compile an electronic digest of all cases adjudicated from 1983 to the present. This recommendation was referred to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). An electronic Topical Digest is being developed to gather GAPJC cases under overarching or recurring topics.

   In response to this referral, the OGA reviewed what is already available electronically relating to GAPJC adjudicated cases. All the GAPJC cases since reunion (1983) are available on-line (www.pcusa.org/oga; then under the Annotated Book of Order topic listing on that web page) and in electronic disc format. Since March 2003, head notes highlighting the key points of the decision have been prepared for each case.

   The cases and head notes are electronically searchable by key words and phrases. The search tool allows a wide variety of search parameters to be used.

   Additionally, cases relating to specific section(s) of the Book of Order are cross referenced in the Annotated Book of Order under that section(s). The Annotated Book of Order is on-line and in disc format. The cross references for a given section also include General Assembly authoritative interpretations, if any.

   Further, there are already two sources of periodic commentary on constitutional topics. Under Section IV.B.2.b. of the Organization for Mission, the Stated Clerk issues advisory opinions on the meaning of particular provisions of the Book of Order. These opinions are found and indexed on the PC(USA) web site (pcusa.org/constitutionalservices/advisory-opinions). The Office of Constitutional Services offers comments on constitutional topics in Constitutional Musings. These are also found and indexed on the PC(USA) web site (pcusa.org/constitutionalservices/musings).

   In view of the existing electronic search capabilities for the GAPJC cases and Annotated Book of Order, an electronic digest of all adjudicated GAPJC cases seems unnecessary. However, as a compliment to the electronic subject matter search tools and the periodic commentary in the Advisory Opinions and Constitutional Musings, the OGA is developing an electronic digest (Topical Digest) of overarching or recurring, substantive or procedural topics, e.g., Governing Body Responsibility and Authority, Due Process in Disciplinary Cases, Ordination Issues. Gathered under each topic are selected GAPJC cases relevant to the topic, particularly cases where the GAPJC has taken the opportunity to provide significant background and rational for the decision. By its nature, the Topical Digest can be expanded as new cases are adjudicated. An initial edition of the Topical Digest will be available on line and in disc format later this year.

The Rules of Discipline of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (hereinafter referred to as PC(USA)) provide clear processes for resolving two very specific forms of conflict that may arise within the context of PC(USA). The PC(USA) Constitution in the Form of Government allows for the church community to resolve most all conflicts that arise within the context of the PC(USA) by utilizing creative means through committees and commissions of governing bodies to bring the conflicted parties together to resolve their conflict. Congregations, sessions, presbyteries, synods, and even the General Assembly use these creative means to resolve conflicts on an ongoing basis.

For the two specific types of conflict, the Rules of Discipline provides a process of resolution that is fair and reasonable to all parties involved and allows for a neutral third party to resolve the conflicted issue. This process looks similar to the secular judicial process in that all parties are accorded due process to present their “side” of the conflict to a neutral entity that ultimately decides or resolves the conflict on behalf of the parties and the broader church.

These Rules of Discipline delineate this process for situations where a governing body has taken an action it is not empowered to take under the PC(USA) Constitution or has failed to take an action that it has a duty to take. The process to resolve and correct this type of conflict is called Remedial and provides a mechanism for a member of the governing body or sister governing body to challenge the actions or inactions of a particular governing body. It is a means for the minority to challenge the action of the majority if the majority action is not in accord with the PC(USA) Constitution.

The Rules of Discipline further delineate a process for resolving those instances where individuals act outside the boundaries created by Scripture or the PC(USA) Constitution. The process to resolve and correct individual behavior within the context of the PC(USA) is called Disciplinary and provides a mechanism for the community to first inquire into whether the individual engaged in the prohibited behavior, then gives the individual a process to defend either whether they engaged in the behavior or their right to engage in the behavior, then finally gives the community a process to correct the behavior if the individual wants to continue in relationship either as member or officer with the PC(USA). Disciplinary correction of this behavior, also called “offense,” ranges from public rebuke to temporary removal from office to removal from membership and can include a supervised rehabilitation.

Both of the processes delineated in the Rules of Discipline are intended to provide a fair and economical means of resolving the correction of governing body behavior or the correction of individual behavior. If in the context of using these processes, the persons involved would prefer not to use the specific process, but rather be more creative in the resolution of the correction of governing body behavior or the correction of individual behavior, there is opportunity to use Alternate Forms of Resolution.

In the Disciplinary procedure, the Rules of Discipline state that prior to charges against an individual that the individual has committed an offense, a committee is formed to investigate allegations of offensive behavior by an individual member or officer. Once this committee determines that there is probable cause to believe the individual member or officer committed an offense, the committee determines whether they could reasonably prove and then prove beyond a reasonable doubt to a neutral body that the individual committed the offensive behavior. If the committee believes that it can prove beyond a reasonable doubt then it will file charges against the individual and the individual has the right to challenge or defend those charges in front of the neutral body (session or a permanent judicial commission). This precludes any coercion of an individual by a group of other individuals within the church and gives the right to any individual to defend their behavior.

Prior to the filing of charges, the committee formed to investigate the allegations could choose under the Rules of Discipline to begin alternative forms of resolving correction of the behavior of an individual rather than filing charges to the neutral body, session, or permanent judicial commission. This alternative form of resolution could result in an agreement between the committee and the individual who committed the behavior that includes the agreed upon correction. Any agreement must still go to the neutral body, session, or permanent judicial commission, for approval (again to prevent coercion). This process of Alternative Form of Resolution is a means of resolving the correction of individual behavior without going through a full trial. The same sort of resolution without going through a full trial can also be accomplished by the neutral body, session, or permanent judicial commission, if the individual is willing to admit to the behavior and show repentance (in the form of guilty plea). How the settlement agreement is procured may take the form of negotiation or mediation between the individual and the committee. The Rules of Discipline also seem to allow the committee and the individual accused to employ arbitration. However, binding arbitration requires an outside third party to make a decision for both the parties since the rest of the rules require the permanent judicial commission (PJC) to approve any settlement agreement. This has never been used for fear of being contrary to the rest of the Rules of Discipline.

In the Remedial procedure, a person or persons with standing may challenge a governing body through the filing of a complaint. Those persons who have standing are usually a member of the governing body, a sister governing body, or an employee of the governing body if the action he/she is challenging has allegedly harmed them in their employment. The responding party will always be a governing body that is being challenged such as a session, presbytery, synod, or entity of the General Assembly. When a complaint has been filed against a governing body, the governing body appoints a committee to represent them and then files an answer or a response. The neutral body that will hear the case is the permanent judicial commission of the next higher governing body. Under the Rules of Discipline, that permanent judicial commission (PJC) may initiate and facilitate a conference between the parties that occurs prior to any trial on the issues within the complaint. During the pretrial conference, the PJC may encourage the parties to resolve the issues raised in the complaint between themselves. If the parties agree, the PJC may encourage the parties to use any alternative form of resolution such as negotiation or mediation to resolve the issues raised rather than use the process delineated by the Rules of Discipline. However, either party has the right to engage in the process delineated by the Rules of Discipline, which provides a fair process for the resolution of the complaint in front of a neutral body that will decide the issue for the parties.

These processes are available within the context of the Discipline and Remedial and need no further action of the General Assembly.

Response: This referral is answered by Item 05-26, Office of the General Assembly recommendation to amend D-6.0103.

H. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc (PILP)

1. 2008 Referral. Item 09-08. Report, God’s Work in Women’s Hands: Pay Equity and Just Compensation, Recommendation 2.d. That the Presbyterian Foundation (FDN), Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), and Board of Pensions (BOP) Participate in the PC(USA)’s Goal of Assuring Gender Equity in Pay for its Employees By Providing the following Data to Entities of the PC(USA) as Requested for Pay Equity Studies: Salary, Position Help, Part-Time or Full-Time, Gender and Race/Ethnicity, Date of Hire, and Highest Level of Educational Achievement—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, Part I, 2008, pp. 54, 55, 897–923).

Response: The PILP has provided data by race and ethnicity, gender, age, and pay grade to the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns and PILP participated in the annual consultation process.

Response: The PILP has provided data by race and ethnicity, gender, age, and pay grade to the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns and PILP participated in the annual consultation process.

Response: The PILP is committed to the cultural proficiency initiative and prepared a written report of our plan for continuing implementation for the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns on March 31, 2009.

I. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC)

1. 2008 Referral: Item 09-08. Report, God’s Work in Women’s Hands: Pay Equity and Just Compensation, Recommendation 2.d. That the Presbyterian Foundation (FDN), Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), and Board of Pensions (BOP) Participate in the PC(USA)’s Goal of Assuring Gender Equity in Pay for its Employees By Providing the following Data to Entities of the PC(USA) as Requested for Pay Equity Studies: Salary, Position Help, Part-Time or Full-Time, Gender and Race/Ethnicity, Date of Hire, and Highest Level of Educational Achievement—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, Part I, 2008, pp. 54, 55, 897–923).

Response: The PPC provided data by race and ethnicity, gender, age, and pay grade to the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns and PPC participated in the annual consultation process in the spring of 2009. In addition, PPC participated in a conversation on the “Theology of Compensation in the PC(USA)” with a study team appointed by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.
2. 2008 Referral. Item 09-13, Report, Hearing and Singing New Songs to God: Shunning Old Discords and Sharing New Harmonies, Recommendation 8. That All Agencies Collect, Organize, and Report Data for All Research in the Church in a Disaggregated Form by Race, Ethnicity, Gender, and Age, so That Data on Women of Color and Young Adult Women of Color May Be Identified Separately for Analysis, Where Possible and As Permissible by Law--From the Women of Color Consultation Task Force (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 54–55, 964–77).

Response: The PPC has provided data by race and ethnicity, gender, age, and pay grade to the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns and PPC participated in the annual consultation process.

3. 2008 Referral: Item 09-16, Report, Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Recommendation 1. That All Agencies Prepare a Written Plan for the Continuing Implementation of Cultural Proficiency--From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, Part I, pp. 54, 55, 1009–055).

Response: The PPC is committed to the cultural proficiency initiative and prepared a written report of its plan for continuing implementation for the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns on March 31, 2009. Representatives from the PPC management team also met with the Climate for Change Task Force in October 2009.

[The assembly approved Item 01-05. See p. 2.]

The 219th General Assembly (2010) approves that the Opening Worship Service on Sunday, July 4, 2010, include a baptism, authorized by the session of Kwanzaa Presbyterian Church, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

[The assembly approved Item 01-06. See p. 2.]

The 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the celebration of Communion during the Opening Worship Service on Sunday, July 4, 2010.

Item 01-07

[The assembly approved with comment that this item not be referred for consideration by the assembly. See p. 2.]

Comment: In accordance with the authoritative interpretation of G-18.0301a, the committee voted that the late overture from the Presbytery of San Diego not be referred for consideration by this General Assembly.

The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals recommends that the approval of the Reverend Paul T. Roberts as the new president and dean of Johnson C. Smith Seminary be referred to the Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions (16) as Item 16-14, and that the approval of the Reverend Michael Jinkins as the new president of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary be referred to the Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions (16) as Item 16-15.

Rationale

The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) has requested that these recent selections (inside the forty-five-day deadline) of seminary presidents be received for assembly consideration rather than wait until the next assembly. The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals met on Friday, July 2, 2010, and approved this recommendation.

[The assembly approved Item 01-09. See p. 2.]

The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals recommends that the General Assembly invite and seat a representative from the National Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Guatemala as an ecumenical advisory delegate.

Rationale

The 218th General Assembly (2008) invited the Presbyterian Church of Nicaragua to send an ecumenical advisory delegate to the 219th General Assembly (2010). The Presbyterian Church of Nicaragua has since disbanded. The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommended that a representative of the National Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Guatemala be invited to send an ecumenical advisory delegate to fill that position. The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals met on Friday, July 2, 2010, in order to make this recommendation in time for the representative to participate in the assembly.

[The assembly approved Item 01-10. See p. 2.]

The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals recommends that Item 05-29 be referred to the Assembly Committee on the Form of Government Revision (07) as Item 07-12.

Rationale

Item 01-03 indicates that this overture from the Presbytery of Mississippi was originally assigned to the Assembly Committee on the Form of Government Revision (07), but was shifted to the Assembly Committee on Church Polity (05) with the agreement of both committees at an earlier meeting of the Assembly Committee on Business Referrals. Upon communicating this decision to the Presbytery of Mississippi, a clear enough explanation of the overture’s intent was presented to warrant moving it back to the Assembly Committee on the Form of Government Revision (07). This action was taken in a meeting of the Assembly Committee on Business Referrals on July 2, 2010.

[The assembly approved Item 01-11. See p. 2.]

The Assembly Committee on Business Referrals recommends that Item 03-29 be referred to the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures (03).

Rationale

This item was inadvertently left off the list of referrals in 01-03. It has to do with authorizing the Office of the General Assembly to make adjustments to the Annual Session Statistical Report in keeping with the Revised Form of Government if the revision passed the assembly and sufficient presbyteries to be adopted. This recommendation was approved by the Assembly Committee on Business Referrals at a meeting on July 2, 2010.

The Presbytery of Detroit overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to amend Section H.2.b.(4) of Standing Rules of the General Assembly, which govern the election of the Stated Clerk, by deleting paragraphs (m), (n), (o), and (p) by adding a new paragraph (m), as follows:

“(m) The candidates may not distribute any other materials, print or electronic, including flyers, buttons, tokens or other objects that would denote a campaign for the office of Stated Clerk.

“(n) Other organizations supporting the candidacy of a particular candidate may not distribute materials electronically, through the mail, or at the General Assembly with the knowledge, support, or permission of that candidate. Should a candidate discover that an organization is advocating or campaigning for him or her, it is expected that the candidate will request that organization to cease its activities. The same expectation will be true of organizations that are critical of a particular candidate for Stated Clerk.

“(o) Each candidate will be provided a place to meet and talk with commissioners and advisory delegates two days before the election. Only information provided by the Office of the General Assembly may be distributed in those rooms. Other materials, apart from that packet, are not permitted. Each candidate for Stated Clerk will be allowed to post the times when he/she will be available for conversation in that room.

“(p) Any questions concerning interpretation of the election process outlined in H.2.b. shall be determined by the Stated Clerk Nominating Committee.

“(m) The Stated Clerk Nominating Committee shall monitor the activities of those standing for election to ensure the election is open, and fair, and that information given by the candidates is accurate and within the bounds of decorum. The Committee shall direct candidates who violate the spirit of the election process to amend their ways. Where a candidate does not properly respond, the Nominating Committee, after giving notice to all the candidates, may inform the General Assembly when the election occurs that in its opinion the named candidate(s) has violated the ideals and principles of the election process. The candidate may in his speech to the General Assembly address the allegations made by the Stated Clerk Nominating Committee.”

Rationale

After a difficult Stated Clerk election in 2004, the Office of the General Assembly was directed to “… investigate the integrity, openness, and fairness of the Stated Clerk’s electoral process…” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 191). With the following rationale, Paragraphs H.2.b.4 (m)–(p) were added to the rules: “The following changes are in recognition of the fact that the position of Stated Clerk is a calling, and not a popularity contest. Commissioners are entitled to and should receive the same unbiased information for each candidate” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 190).

The reasons for amending the rules are:

It rescinds an attempt to ensure that the bad things that happened in the election of 2004 never happen again. The resolution, proposed after a difficult time, had the effect of preventing the perceived problems, but unintended consequences: it severely limited the ability of any candidate to communicate his or her vision to the General Assembly and the church.

The church and the General Assembly have come to expect communication by leaders using all manner of communication strategies: e-mail, web sites, social networking systems, blogs, and such. To prevent candidates from using these means of communicating their visions to the church is out of synch with the times.

Prohibiting organizations not under the control of the candidate from taking stands is beyond the power of the assembly, and it limits the kind of advocacies that are permitted in other areas.

Limiting the ability of candidates in their expression of vision gives additional weight to the candidate brought forward by the Stated Clerk Nominating Committee. The effect is to leave to speculation the competence, motivation, and vision of those nominated from the floor, while the committee nominee has been vetted by and met the test of knowledgeable and wise members of the committee.

Where there is a problem of trust, the better way of addressing the matter is by open and unfettered process rather than by the dictate of rules that limit activity.

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is one of the most important and powerful people in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). To prohibit the General Assembly and the church from learning of the beliefs, positions, and vision of the candidates is unwise and does not well serve the church in these times of great stress and change.

Protecting the integrity of the election process can better be accomplished by public disclosure rather than authoritarian rules.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-02

Comment on Item 03-02—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-02.

Rationale

This overture seeks to delete several sections of SR H.2.b. on the Election of the Stated Clerk. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) conducted a thorough review of SR H.2.b. in the year 2005. The amended SR H.2.b. was approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 188–199), two years before the last Stated Clerk’s election.

The COGA believes that the current Standing Rules provide plenty of opportunity for the commissioners to know about the candidates for Stated Clerk, such as:

1. A press release announcement of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee’s nominee and a press release for any candidate who has gone through the application process and decides to stand against the nominee.

2. A written statement and answers to the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee’s questions printed in a booklet that is available to commissioners, delegates, and General Assembly participants.

3. Any church press interviews of the candidates.

4. A nomination speech is given for all candidates at the beginning of the General Assembly.

5. All candidates participate in a meet and talk with commissioners and advisory delegates two days before the election.

6. A speech by all candidates on the day of the election.

7. Responses to commissioners’ questions before the election.

The members of the last Stated Clerk Nomination Committee were very satisfied working under the amended Standing Rules since it gave the right balance of opportunity for the candidates to get their message out versus burdening the commissioners with extra communications from the candidates and other organizations.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Stewardship of Time During Plenary Sessions of the General Assembly—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

The Presbytery of Santa Barbara respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to give voice during plenary session of General Assembly only to those who also have a vote. All advisory delegates would continue to voice their opinions, thoughts, and questions at the committee level, where they also have a vote; but on the plenary floor, only voting commissioners could speak to the issues.
Rationale

Advisory delegates are youth, theological seminary students, mission workers, and ecumenical partners who add diverse and valuable perspectives to the General Assembly. There are currently more than three hundred advisory delegates at General Assembly. They are assigned to committees and attend all plenary sessions like their commissioner counterparts. In committee, advisory delegates have full “voice and vote” during deliberations. In plenary session they have voice, but vote in a separate tally that serves in an advisory role.

Over three hundred items of business are deliberated and processed at each General Assembly. This requires each elder, clergy, and advisory delegate to seek the mind of Christ to be faithful to their calling. While General Assembly lasts one week, commissioners have found that they are rushed through many decisions due to serious time constraints. The opportunity for over three hundred people to continue to debate the issues, when their voice has already been heard at the committee level, would seem to be a time management area that is currently being squandered. The voices of the voting delegates need to be given full priority for more efficient use of plenary time. This would go a long way toward ameliorating the frustrations felt by so many commissioners to past General Assemblies. Good stewardship of valuable plenary time means allowing only the clergy and elder commissioners directly elected by the presbyteries to fulfill their mission by allowing them alone to debate the issues on which they alone cast the deciding vote.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-03

Comment on Item 03-03—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-03.

Rationale

This overture seeks to limit the participation of advisory delegates in the plenary sessions of the General Assembly meeting.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly provide for the participation of advisory delegates in the GA. “Advisory delegates are persons who are active members in one of the constituent churches or governing bodies of the General Assembly (or, in the case of ecumenical advisory delegates, of a denomination of Christians designated by the General Assembly) who are selected to attend the meeting of the General Assembly in an advisory role so that the assembly may be assured of hearing and taking cognizance of their special viewpoints” (Manual of the General Assembly, B.2.a.).

The role of each of the categories of advisory delegates is to make certain that particular groups are heard by the commissioners (e.g., young adults, theological students, and missionaries). Each of their perspectives contributes to the discernment of the whole church. Ecumenical advisory delegates are present as a witness that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) understands itself to be part of the one holy catholic and apostolic church and that its decisions are both informed by and influence ecumenical partners. While the ultimate responsibility for decision making rests upon elder and minister commissioners, each category of advisory delegates offers the assembly perspectives not otherwise available.

To limit the advisory delegates’ participation in plenary debate as proposed, particularly on floor amendments, would not save time. With the current electronic notification system at the microphones, which indicates whether a person is an advisory delegate or commissioner, the Moderator of the General Assembly already has the flexibility to choose in a fair and balanced way among all those who wish to speak.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-03

Comment on Item 03-03—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly to disapprove this overture.

Rationale

When we gather in community to discern God’s will for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), one facet of our discernment is to provide an opportunity for underrepresented groups to be heard. To facilitate this, we elect Young Adult Advisory Delegates (YAAD), Theological Student Advisory Delegates (TSAD), Mission Advisory Delegates (MAD), and invite Ecu cal Advisory Delegates (EAD). These voices connect us to the contexts in which the church is called, and in which it ministers in the present. It aids commissioners in visioning for the future.

The process of giving voice on the floor of the plenary sessions is important. To exclude the Young Adult Advisory Delegates from active participation in the work of the full body, we deprive ourselves of the valuable insights of younger members who will inherit the structures being designed today. We also send the message that the church does not have ears for young people and is not willing to listen to what is being said. Doing this we risk turning those young adults who are already active in the life of the church (called through baptism, confirmation, and participation in their congregations and presbyteries) into outsiders. To exclude the Theological Student Advisory Delegates means we deprive ourselves of the insights that come from their in-depth study, and of the interaction with those God has called to leadership in the church. To exclude the Mission Advisory Delegates is to cut ourselves off from the voices of those who are actively involved in ministry beyond the borders of the United States and can give us personal insight into the needs of communities beyond our nation and connect us to the joys of our wider mission work. To exclude the Ecumenical Advisory Delegates means that we risk closing the church off to the voices of willing partners in ministry who are dealing with similar issues and join in our parallel struggles.

Throughout the witness of Scripture, God chooses prophets and apostles from individuals who would ordinarily not be listened to by the culture of the day. When Samuel was but a child, God awakened him repeatedly until Eli recognized that it was God calling Samuel to hear God’s word and become a prophet (1 Sam. 3). Jesus discerned a new thing when he encountered the Syrophoenician woman, whom Jesus himself acknowledged that he would not have ordinarily helped (Mark 7:24–30). God worked through Cornelius, a Roman soldier, to awaken the fledgling church to a new ministry among the Gentiles (Acts 10). Then, with a blinding light and the voice of Jesus speaking to him, Saul was changed from a zealous persecutor of the early Christians into an advocate whose words have spoken to all Christians for the same Christ he once persecuted (Acts 9).

If we Presbyterians trust that our commissioners and advisory delegates have been chosen by God to come together and discover with one another the discernment of God’s will for the Presbyterian church, then what right do we have to limit those voices to only those times when we are gathered in smaller, disparate groups? The young adults (youth), theological seminary students, mission coworkers, and ecumenical partners have been chosen to enter the assembly community and bring voices that inform the discussion of the whole body. The church may need to hear God’s word through these particular voices in order to discern from the many voices what new, or old, thing God is calling the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be and do. These advisory delegates, while speaking in plenary, may also bring to the full discussion perspectives that may have been mentioned and discussed in committee, but are not reflected in the recommendations that the full body will be voting on.

While some may argue that limiting the opportunities for advisory delegates to participation in committees could save time and perhaps money, the comment from the COGA demonstrates this impression is in error. Such a limitation excludes a generation from the discussion of how to be the body of Christ in this time and place, perhaps to the peril of the PC(USA), losing a generation of leaders and members of our denomination, making the discussions more insular, and interfering with the fulfillment of God’s vision of the ministry of the church.

_on Amending G-13.0102b Concerning the Number of General Assembly Commissioners—from the Presbytery of San Diego._

The Presbytery of San Diego overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Amend G-13.0102b as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. When the General Assembly meets biennially, it shall consist of equal numbers of elders and ministers from each presbytery, in the following proportion: Each presbytery consisting of not more than 15,000 members shall elect one elder and one minister. Presbyteries consisting of more than 15,000 members shall elect one additional elder and one additional minister for each additional 15,000 members, so that:

Presbyteries of 15,001 to 30,000 members shall elect 2 elders and 2 ministers;

Presbyteries of 30,001 to 45,000 members shall elect 3 elders and 3 ministers;

Presbyteries of 45,001 to 60,000 members shall elect 4 elders and 4 ministers;

194 219TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2010)
“Presbyteries of 32,001 to 40,000 members shall elect 5 elders and 5 ministers;
“Presbyteries of 40,001 to 48,000 members shall elect 6 elders and 6 ministers;
“Presbyteries of 48,001 to 56,000 members shall elect 7 elders and 7 ministers;
“Presbyteries of 45,001 or more members shall elect 4 elders and 4 ministers.

“These persons, so elected, shall be called commissioners of the General Assembly.”

Rationale

When the General Assembly voted to move from annual assemblies to biennial assemblies, one of the reasons given to make the change was to save the denomination money. However, the move to biennial assemblies was also accompanied by an increase in the number of commissioners. The extra expense in paying for these additional commissioners meant that no financial savings were ever realized. The promise of reducing expenses never materialized. In the economy in which we live, we must continually look for ways to save money. While it may be nice to have extra commissioners, we can no longer afford this unnecessary luxury. It is time to return to the original, yet never realized, promise. As the income of the church continues to decline, we must look to reduce costs in unnecessary areas, so that funds can be directed toward more necessary areas. Because we live in the worst economy since the Great Depression, it is time to return to a leaner number of commissioners.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-04

Advice on Item 03-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 03-04 presents the following issues that the assembly should consider.

Rationale

This proposal for reducing the number of commissioners at a meeting of General Assembly is consistent with our historic practice of directing presbyteries to elect pairs of commissioners in number proportionate to the presbytery’s membership. That being said, it is inevitable that a change in the rule determining the number of commissioners a presbytery is to elect would increase the relative voting influence of some presbyteries and decrease the relative voting influence of others. These variations are a proper matter to be evaluated through a proposed amendment to the Form of Government approved by the General Assembly, which would then need to receive the affirmative votes of a majority of the presbyteries.

Reducing the total number of commissioners according to this proposal would cause the quorum of the assembly (defined in G-13.0105 as fifty elder commissioners and fifty minister commissioners representing presbyteries from at least one fourth of the synods) to constitute a larger percentage of the total number of commissioners. This change would increase the risk of an assembly being incapacitated by the absence or loss of a quorum. The General Assembly’s deliberation on approving this proposed amendment for submission to the presbyteries is the appropriate forum to determine whether this risk of losing a quorum would be acceptable.

There is no constitutional requirement for a General Assembly to enroll advisory delegates as the General Assembly’s Manual provides. If the General Assembly’s Manual is not simultaneously amended to reduce the number of advisory delegates, this proposal would increase the influence of advisory delegates within the assembly’s committees. The potential increase in voting influence within the General Assembly’s committees is a policy matter that the assembly is competent to evaluate for itself.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution takes no position on the advisability of Item 03-04.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) believes that the intent of Item 03-04 is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 03-4 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-04

Comment on Item 03-04—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The COGA respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove this overture.
This overture seeks to reduce the number of commissioners attending the meetings of the General Assembly by amending G-13.0102b.

Currently a presbytery with 8,000 or fewer members elects one elder and one minister. One elder and one minister are added for each additional 8,000 members, so that a presbytery having between 8,001 and 16,000 elects two elders and two ministers and continuing that ratio for each additional 8,000 members.

The overture substitutes the number 15,000 for 8,000 in each instance.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly opposes this change for several reasons:

- Under the current system, only 35 percent of presbyteries elect the minimum number of commissioners. Under the proposed system, 72 percent of the presbyteries would elect just one commissioner and one minister every two years.
- Limiting almost three quarters of the presbyteries to electing just one minister and one commissioner makes it more difficult to provide a diverse, dynamic representation of the church in commissioners.
- The current system keeps the ratio of advisory delegates to commissioners lower than 25 percent of those in attendance. The proposal would increase that to nearly a third of all participants being advisory delegates.
- The overture gives as its rationale the conclusion that there has been no savings in biennial assemblies. Our experience and simple logic go counter to that conclusion. The cost of bringing commissioners to a biennial assembly and providing lodging and meals is only a part of the cost of the assembly. The costs of staff resources, facility rental, and business management would be little reduced by the reduction in the number of commissioners proposed by this overture.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Eliminating G-13.0103q Concerning the Responsibilities of the General Assembly—From the Presbytery of San Diego.

The Presbytery of San Diego overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Strike the text of G-13.0103q and re-letter items “r.” through “x.” as “q.” through “w.”:

“q. to decide controversies brought before it and to give advice and instruction in cases submitted to it, in conformity with the Constitution.”

Rationale

Section G-13.0103 lists twenty-four responsibilities of the General Assembly. One of these responsibilities, letter “q.,” has become overly dominant and has expanded way beyond the intent of the Constitution. Most General Assemblies spend an inordinate amount of time on trying to decide controversies, and not enough time on its more important responsibilities, such as “[setting] priorities for the work of the church in keeping with the church’s mission under Christ … [and developing] overall objectives for mission …” (Book of Order, G-13.0103a–b).

Our General Assembly process, procedures, and responsibilities are in need of reform. More and more commissioners return from the assembly experience frustrated, confused, and unfulfilled. The General Assembly can no longer successfully decide controversies that are brought before it. In fact, in its attempts to decide controversies, the assembly often creates more or bigger controversies. This drives members and congregations farther away from the national church, in a time where more and closer connections are needed.

As a part of the necessary reform of the General Assembly process and procedures, it is time for the assembly to shift its time and energy to more important matters. What congregations need now are not more and more ill-fated and unsuccessful attempts to decide controversies, but a body that will study Scripture together, pray together, seek the will of God and the mind of Christ together. We need an assembly that focuses on theology, relationships, and mission. It is time to begin shifting to a new and more fulfilling paradigm of a national assembly. One key step in this process is the elimination of G-13.0103q.
Advice on Item 03-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-05.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that deciding matters of controversy is a basic responsibility of all governing bodies, including the General Assembly. The Book of Order provides that “[g]overning bodies] may … bear testimony against evil in doctrine and immorality in life, resolve questions of doctrine and discipline, give counsel in matters of conscience …” (Book of Order, G-9.0102b), and that among the Great Ends of the Church are “the preservation of the truth” and “the promotion of social righteousness” (G-1.0200). Thus the stated aim of the overture to relieve the General Assembly from spending “… an inordinate amount of time on trying to decide controversies” (03-05) would not necessarily be accomplished through the deletion of G-13.0103q.

Section G-13.0103q stands as the General Assembly’s warrant to speak to the church and to society on matters of question and debate, whether social, political, economic, or ecclesiastical in nature. As the “highest governing body of this church” that is “representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations” (G-13.0101) of the church, the General Assembly is the appropriate and necessary forum to address matters affecting the whole church. Within this forum should be brought to bear the resources of Scripture, the confessional traditions of the church, and the best and clearest theological thinking available on matters that concern or divide us. Such endeavor seems to us to be among the most important matters to which the General Assembly must and should attend, precisely because it addresses matters of “theology, relationships, and mission.”

While pronouncements of the General Assembly on matters of conscience and controversy are not binding, except as delivered under the provisions of G-13.0103r and G-13.0112, they do deserve the careful and prayerful consideration of all members and governing bodies of the church, because they represent the guidance of the only body elected from the whole church. The deletion of this paragraph would weaken the General Assembly by hampering or removing a crucial venue in which the whole church seeks together for the “will of God and the mind of Christ.”

In 1983, the 194th General Assembly of the now unified Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) adopted the report of the Special Committee on Historic Principles, Conscience, and Church Government. This significant document meditated at length on the dynamic relationship between the freedom of the individual conscience and the responsibility of governance within the life and history of the church. It offered these prescient thoughts about the presence and role of controversy in the church’s life:

> There is always a necessary tension between freedom of one’s individual conscience and belonging to any organization. One’s personal point of view will most likely not always be that of the larger body. Every person who participates in a governing body must accept the fact that compromise is necessary for any body to function. The church cannot always express the will of each individual member and still take corporate action. Many decisions will involve saying “yes” to some, and “no” to others. The only alternative is for the governing body to delay or avoid making a decision. There are times when delay is a valuable way of avoiding premature decisions, especially when the minority position is held by a fairly large number of people. At other times, however, a decision must be made and the consequences of the decision may be painful… (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 149)

> As in 1788, so today, the church is called upon to deal with diversity both within itself and within the culture beyond itself. Now as then, there are persons who wish that the church were more explicit about matters of faith and practice so that it might have clearer identity and less diversity. There are also those who seek for greater breadth of opinion and practice and who are fearful of a narrow point of view which limits freedom. Whenever the church seeks to clarify its own position, there will be those who are disturbed and believe that they are being forced into compliance against their will and may feel that, for the sake of their integrity, they need to withdraw. Every time the church seeks to resolve ambiguity or conflict, it does, in fact, close doors to other options. Painful conflict over the definition of who we are and how we function continues to be a central part of our history… (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 147)

> Presbyteranism, with its insistence on individual responsibility and its tradition of educated leadership, has always known controversy, conflict and rigorous dissent. Conflict is often the result of different perspectives which people have and these differences may be important. Agreement may not necessarily be a sign of faithfulness, but may instead be a sign that we do not care very deeply about the particular issue. The more we care, the more likely it is that we may disagree. (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 147)

> The people of God in Scripture are often engaged in conflict. There is no such thing as a biblical picture of serenity as the reality of God’s covenant people. The three different values which must always be before us—peace, purity, and unity—will always be in tension. Those who seek a church free of conflict are seeking something that cannot be had in this world except at the price of disobedience, avoidance of difficult issues, or subservience to the will of a few. The diversity of the church is its strongest asset in seeking to discover God’s will and that diversity will be expressed in very different opinions. (Ibid., p. 147)

> This biblical perspective on God’s will for the church means that Presbyterians are willing to be uncomfortable, uneasy, disturbed, as these experiences are required. If God’s will could be neatly circumscribed or limited to “religious” questions, it might be somewhat easier to achieve a kind of peace within the church. Because God’s will is so all encompassing, however, the church is thrust into questions which are confusing, about which there is no absolute clarity, and over which there will be heated differences. (Ibid., p. 147)

> Spiritual questions have to do with all of life, and spiritual solutions will never come without conflict. Unity is not something which can be had at the price of forced consensus or avoidance. Our unity is best expressed by our continued willingness to hang in when the going is tough. (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p.147)
Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 03-05 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 03-05 be disapproved.

Rationale

Item 03-05 seeks to reduce the amount of time that General Assemblies spend on controversial matters. It encourages the use of Bible study, prayer, and seeking the will of God and the mind of Christ, which are all essential components of discernment. Item 03-05 also calls, commendably, for the General Assembly to focus on theology, relationships, and mission. Here, however, is where the overture unravels. A review of the issues brought to the last several General Assemblies shows that the controversies that have stirred heated debate actually grow out of discussions about the theology, relationships, and mission of the church.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-05

Comment on Item 03-05—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove this overture.

Rationale

This overture seeks to eliminate some of the responsibilities of the General Assembly.

While the COGA is deeply committed to helping the church think through ways in which the business of General Assemblies is conducted in this new season, it is difficult to differentiate “controversial issues” and the “mission of the church.” Our mission and theology are inextricably linked, and our polity serves as the mechanism through which each are discerned. Further, as the church gathers in its General Assembly, it is called to give witness to its theology and mission in the world, what the Great Ends of the Church call “the promotion of social righteousness” (Book of Order, G-1.0200).

For a further explication of this recommendation we urge commissioners to see the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) that highlights one of the primary reasons for the church to gather in General Assembly: discerning and then giving voice to the world of the church’s concerns.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Amending G-18.0301 c. and d. to Require Two-Thirds Affirmative Vote—From the Presbytery of San Diego.

The Presbytery of San Diego overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the State Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

1. Amend G-18.0301c as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “c. Proposed amendments must be approved by a two-thirds vote by the General Assembly and transmitted to the presbyteries for their vote. Presbyteries shall transmit their votes to the Stated Clerk by the next ensuing stated meeting of the General Assembly, but no later than one year following adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendments.”

2. Amend G-18.0301d as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]
"d. When the Stated Clerk has received written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority of all two-thirds of the presbyteries, said amendment shall become effective as of one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment."

Rationale

Many of the controversial issues in the denomination today are being “decided” by very close votes, which while they may gain a little more than a majority, certainly do not indicate that a consensus, or a broad section of the church is in favor. On issues where emotions run hot, moving forward with a slight majority can do more harm than good. There are some issues that unless they have the support of a larger majority of the church, will end up splitting and dividing the church.

Many presbyteries across the denomination get increasingly frustrated and irritated with a General Assembly process that allows issues to continue to be sent to the presbyteries for repeated votes by a slim majority, only to see them get voted down again and again at the local level. A simple solution to the problem is that changes to the Book of Order would not be sent to presbyteries unless the assembly approved them with a two-thirds vote. We already require a two-thirds vote on amending The Book of Confessions. It is time we require a two-thirds vote on amending the Book of Order, as well. Instead of having a majority vote for one part of the Constitution and a two-thirds vote for another part of the Constitution, it is time to make both amendment processes equal, and require a two-thirds vote for both parts.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-06

Advice on Item 03-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-06.

Rationale

The overture seeks to amend the threshold for approval of overtures to a two-thirds vote of the General Assembly, and to amend the threshold for approval of amendments to the affirmative votes of two-thirds of the presbyteries. Presently, simple majorities are required in both cases. Similar overtures were addressed by the 205th General Assembly (1993) in Overtures 93-23 and 93-44, and by the 212th General Assembly (2000) in Overture 98-7.

The principle of majority rule is foundational to Presbyterian polity. The Historic Principles of Church Government, adopted in the 1790s, established this principle: “… a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern …” (Book of Order, G-1.4000). This historic principle is repeated in G-4.0301e: “Decisions shall be reached in governing bodies by vote, following opportunity for discussion, and a majority shall govern …” (Book of Order, G-4.0301e). The 10th edition of Robert’s Rules of Order (Newly Revised) defines a majority as “more than half” (p. 387), that is, a simple majority.

In 1983, the newly united PC(USA) General Assembly received the report of the Special Committee on Historic Principles, Conscience, and Church Government, which states in part,

The responsibility of the majority to govern must be seen in the context of the requirement that the whole governs the parts. Majority rule is not a mystical or abstract concept. It is simply a reflection of the fact that the whole church, as it acts, can do only that which most of the church is willing to do. When through the violation or short circuit of proper procedure the will of a minority is imposed on a judicatory or on the church, seriously divisive conflict is often the result…. (Minutes, 1983, part I, p. 153)

The clear intent of the rule of the majority is to preserve, except in the most foundational matters, the judgment and will of the simple majority against that of an unwilling minority. To amend this principle would involve a substantial change in the governing philosophy of the Presbyterian church, and should not be adopted without considerable study and review.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that in the deliberations of the General Assembly, parliamentary procedure provides a mechanism by which minorities can seek to persuade the majority that a particular action would be injurious to the church, or to modify the action in order to increase support in the church. In addition, the Manual of the General Assembly provides for consensus processes prior to a vote that may persuade a majority to amend or defer an action in view of the concerns of the minority.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution also notes with particular concern that the proposed amendment would empower a slim majority to enshrine its will against future amendment, even should that majority erode to as little as one-third. It is contrary to the principles of Presbyterian polity for one particular assembly to adopt a rule that would allow a future minority to thwart the will of a majority of a future assembly or for the church in one age to enshrine its judgment as inherently wiser than that of future ages.

Should the assembly concur with the intent of the overture, the language proposed is clear and adequate to achieve its intent. However, it should be noted that currently the Book of Order contains no specific provision requiring a majority vote of the assembly to approve an overture, but is governed by G-9.0302, which states, “Meetings of governing bodies, commissions, and committees shall be conducted in accordance with the most recent edition of Robert’s Rules of Order, except in those cases where this Constitution provides otherwise” (Book of Order, G-9.0302).

If both are adopted, this overture would have the effect of amending the proposed Form of Government at G-6.04c and
G-6.04e: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“c. The same General Assembly approves the proposal by a two-thirds vote to amend and transmits the proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their vote.”

“e. The Stated Clerk receives written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmavive votes of a majority two-thirds of all the presbyteries. The proposed amendment so approved shall become effective one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.”

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 03-06 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Comment on Item 03-06—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concurs with the recommendation and advice of the to disapprove Item 03-06.

On Amending Standing Rule A.3. by Outlining a Procedure for Dealing with Overtures That Request Amendment to the Book of Order That Have Been Dealt with By One of Two Previous GAs—From the Presbytery of New Harmony.

The Presbytery of New Harmony overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to amend Standing Rule A.3. of the General Assembly by adding a new section “A.3.b.” and renumbering the remaining existing sections (A.3.b.–e.) sequentially as A.3.c.–f. The new A.3.b. would read as follows:

“b. Should an overture require an amendment to the Constitution that proposes substantially the same action as that which was approved by one of the two previous session of the General Assembly and subsequently failed to receive the necessary number of affirmative votes for enactment when transmitted to the presbyteries, it shall not be considered as an item of business unless and until 75 percent of the commissioners present and voting vote to do so.”

Rationale

This amendment to the Standing Rules is intended to relieve the commissioners to each General Assembly of the burden of having to consider, debate, and take action on proposed amendments to the Constitution that have been addressed by previous General Assemblies and voted down by the presbyteries. It is similar in purpose and content to Standing Rule A.8.f. dealing with repetitious commissioners’ resolutions.

Unlike that Standing Rule that delegates the authority for the decision to just one individual, the Stated Clerk, this proposal would allow the commissioners themselves to make it an item of business, albeit by a super-majority. Because this addresses items of constitutional import and, therefore, necessarily entails submission to the presbyteries, the entire General Assembly should be empowered to address this threshold issue, but more than a simple majority vote should be required before mandating the repeated expenditure of time and resources on actions that have already been thoroughly vetted and rejected.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-07 requests that General Assemblies not re-consider matters that have been considered in the past one of two as-semblies.
The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that Item 03-07 be disapproved.

Rationale

This overture neglects that we are “reformed and always reforming” and assumes that conserving the status quo, especially on a matter that has been up for debate recently, is the best way forward. The overture also assumes that the make-up of the General Assembly does not change significantly from assembly to assembly and leaves no room for major changes in public opinion that might occur due to large societal events. With growth in the church occurring mostly in racial ethnic congregations, the overture does not acknowledge the changing nature of the church and God’s action in “doing a new thing” in emerging faith communities.

On Amending Standing Rule C.4.a. to Give Priority to Controversial Items—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

The Presbytery of Santa Barbara respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to amend its “Standing Rules of the General Assembly,” Section C.4.a., to read as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown as italics.]

“a. The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a tentative docket. In establishing the docket, the Stated Clerk and all subsequent committees who shape the docket shall give priority of order and time to those items of the most controversial nature. After making any necessary adjustments, this committee shall present a proposed docket to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral so that it may recommend the docket to the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business.”

Rationale

The current scheduling of the docket sometimes results in controversial or difficult overtures being debated and voted on late in the evening or late in the week when delegates are tired and have less energy to devote to thought, prayer, and deliberation.

When controversial matters are debated and deliberated late at night or late in the week, it can give commissioners the sense that matters are being manipulated.

It seems reasonable that debate and deliberation on the most difficult and controversial matters should occur when delegates are fresh and not dulled by fatigue.

With this new format, General Assembly meetings are more likely to end on a positive, unifying note thus promoting the peace and unity of the church.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-08

Comment on Item 03-08—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-08.

Rationale

This overture seeks to amend the Standing Rules to require the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and subsequent committees responsible for shaping the docket to give priority of order and time to those items of the “most controversial” nature. The COGA offers the following comments:

Under Standing Rule C.4.a, the Stated Clerk presents a tentative docket that includes blocks of time for plenary sessions of the General Assembly following committee meetings. However, no items of business that will come out of committee sessions are slotted into those blocks of time. The General Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures (B&O) is responsible for proposing to the General Assembly the docket for each plenary session (Standing Rule F.1.a and b).

The B&O Committee works closely with the moderators of the various committees, the Stated Clerk, and the Moderator of the General Assembly in preparing the order and time for items of business for a particular session. They take into account such things as items which may be controversial and require lengthy debate; which committees are ready to report, still meeting, or still in the process of preparing their reports; and what the best order for the most effective and efficient flow of business before the assembly might be. The report of the B&O Committee given at the beginning of each plenary session can be approved or changed by the General Assembly.
Therefore, we believe the current Standing Rules already provide for priority consideration of controversial items in the context of the total business of the assembly. The assembly itself can reprioritize its business at the beginning of, or even during, each plenary session if it should feel that particular item(s) of business are not being considered in a timely manner.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

The Presbytery of Great Rivers respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to amend the Manual of the General Assembly, Standing Rule K.1.b. as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall be notified by any assembly committee whenever there is discussion about the creation of a special committee. In discussing the possible creation of a special committee, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall hear from related corporation or entity representatives as well as representatives from the assembly committee considering the proposal. Financial implications of special committees should accompany any recommendation for action by the assembly. The written comment of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures must be incorporated as background in the report of the assembly committee containing a recommendation to create a special committee. Special committees and commissions should be appointed only in very rare and exceptional circumstances, i.e. national or denominational crisis.

Rationale

The General Assembly has a procedure for nominating members of standing committees and other entities, which is detailed both in the Book of Order and in the Manual of the General Assembly. This process is designed to provide for balance among the members of the committees and entities with regard to geography, ethnicity, age, and so on. The process for nomination to and election by the General Assembly also gives the whole church, through its elected commissioners, a voice in naming the members of groups that recommend policy to the whole church. Only in very rare circumstances should this careful procedure for nomination and open method of election, with the possibility of nominations from the body at-large, be set aside in favor of some time-sensitive or emergency decision to be made.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-09

Comment on Item 03-09—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove this overture.

Rationale

This overture seeks to restrict the General Assembly from creating a special committee and commissions.

The process for the creation of special committees already provides for the rigorous review of criteria for their establishment. It is difficult to anticipate beforehand the nature of the need for any such committee or commission, or the proportions of such business at any particular General Assembly. It is important to preserve the right of a General Assembly to establish, or decline to establish, such an entity, based on the specific case presented to it.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-10
[The assembly referred Item 03-10 to the Biennial Review Committee. See pp. 56, 76.]

On Amending the Standing Rules Regarding General Assembly Timelines—From the Presbytery of Flint River.

The Presbytery of Flint River overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to amend the Manual of the General Assembly, the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, as follows:
1. Amend Standing Rule B.1.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “b. Presbyteries shall elect commissioners in sufficient time to permit the list of commissioners to be delivered to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days six months prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are commissioned.”

2. Amend Standing Rule C.2.a. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “a. Forty Five months before the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall assign each commissioner and advisory delegate to one of the assembly committees by the random selection process described in this standing rule.”

3. Amend Standing Rule C.2.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “b. No later than thirty days four months before the convening of the assembly, commissioners shall receive the number and designation of committees. At the same time that the number and designation of committees is communicated, the Stated Clerk shall notify each person of the assignment, the time of their first electronic meeting, and the necessity to confirm appropriate housing and travel arrangements.”

Rationale

Under current rules, it is impossible for commissioners to fully digest the materials they must discuss and vote on. There are simply too many pages. With biennial assemblies it is not unreasonable to expect presbyteries to elect their commissioners at least six months prior to the assembly; and with the electronic communication tools we have today it would greatly enhance the decision-making process if committee members were to begin communicating with each other in regard to these issues well before the formal beginning of General Assembly. Each committee moderator could be given a secure site within PC-biz for conversation. All commissioners could have access, but only committee members could post notes.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-10—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly to refer Item 03-10 to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

Rationale

While we believe that a longer timeline might assist commissioners in their preparation for General Assembly by allowing a longer period for reflection, these changes have implications for a number of other deadlines (e.g. overtures and commissioner resolutions) that would all require adjustment. Whether twice the amount of time is the right amount is a practical question. What we commend is the presbytery’s concern that substantial reports on substantial topics receive careful reading by prepared commissioners. We also note the increase in the number of committees at this General Assembly, allowing for more concentration on fewer items in each committee. Hence, our advice that this recommendation be referred to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to evaluate the necessity and/or the feasibility of extending these deadlines.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-10

Comment on Item 03-10—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-10.

Rationale

This overture seeks to amend the Standing Rules to change the election of General Assembly (GA) commissioners and their assignment to GA committees to a much earlier time prior to the meeting of the General Assembly: election would occur six months ahead, instead of 120 days; committee assignment would occur five months ahead, instead of forty-five days; and notification of committee assignment would be four months ahead, instead of thirty days.

The COGA offers the following comments:

The current timetable for selection of commissioners and assignment to committees dovetails with the timetable in the Standing Rules for the submission of business (overtures and reports) to the General Assembly. Although some overtures and reports are required to be submitted by 120 days before the start of the assembly, many overtures and reports can be submitted up to forty-five days before (Standing Rules A.1., A.2.a., and A.3.c.(1)). Although some committees are “standard” from assembly to assembly, there are committees unique to each General Assembly depending on the business coming to that assembly.

Currently assembly committees are proposed and committee leadership appointed by about sixty days before the start of the General Assembly when most of the business of the assembly is known. Commissioner assignments to committees are made forty-five days before the start of the General Assembly.

To elect commissioners prior to 120 days before the start of the assembly is unnecessary and would not give commissioners more time to review reports and overtures since items of business are not required to be submitted before that time. It is impractical to move the timetable for the formation of committees and assignment of commissioners to those committees to a time months before the business placed before a particular General Assembly is known. It would undoubtedly require reformation of committees and commissioner assignments.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Adding Standing Rule F.5.h. Regarding Timing of Committee Reports—From the Presbytery of Flint River.

The Presbytery of Flint River overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to amend the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, F.5. by adding a section “h.” to read as follows:

“h. All committee reports and votes upon committee motions shall be scheduled to be completed prior to the dinner recess on the days of plenary sessions of the assembly.”

Rationale

Time after time, commissioners have been required to debate and vote on highly controversial issues late into the evening. They are exhausted, unable to fully focus, and eager to move on to the next batch of issues before them. Hours of prime time during assembly meetings are devoted to greetings, local advocacy presentations, and video messages… These are all well-intended, but far less critical to the work at hand. All of these non-business items should be scheduled ONLY after adequate provision is made for timely discussion of business coming before the commissioners. If the volume of business requires evening reports and voting, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may always move that this Standing Rule be set aside; but this should always be a deliberate action, taken out of necessity, and not for convenience.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-11

Comment on Item 03-11—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-11.

Rationale

This overture seeks to change the Standing Rules to limit the duration of plenary sessions of the General Assembly during which committee reports and recommendations can be acted upon, i.e. prior to the dinner recess each day.

The COGA offers the following comments:

The COGA acknowledges the challenge of acting on all of the committee reports and recommendations as well as the rest of the business during the plenary sessions of a General Assembly (Wednesday afternoon to Saturday noon under the current format) that has in many cases required evening sessions on two evenings (Wednesday and Thursday).

In the recent assemblies, efforts have been successfully made to schedule non-committee report business in the evening sessions. For example, in 2008, consideration of committee recommendations on ordination issues was taken up at on Friday morning, and committee recommendations on Middle East issues were acted on during the Friday afternoon session. Also, although evening sessions have been held during GA, all evening sessions at the last two assemblies adjourned no later than 12:36 a.m. (2006) or 11:40 p.m. (2008).
The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures proposes the docket at the beginning of each session. Current Standing Rules allow the General Assembly itself to adjust the docket of any given session to take into account the scheduling of committee reports prior to the dinner recess, if that is the will of the body (majority vote to change the docket).

To require such a limitation as proposed by putting it in the Standing Rules would restrict the flexibility of the assembly to get its work done. Suspending such a rule would require a 2/3 vote of the commissioners (instead of the majority vote to change the docket). If the vote to suspend the rule is not sustained, it could lead to further restrictions on debate of important issues, and actually increase pressure to move on to the next item in order to get done before dinner each day of plenary sessions.

Most importantly, the expenses of commissioners’ and delegates’ housing and per diem, and the rental of the facilities are already obligated. It would be poor stewardship not to use space that has already been paid for.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Amending Standing Rule E.2.e.–g. Regarding Privilege of the Floor—From the Presbytery of Shenandoah.

The Presbytery of Shenandoah respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to amend the General Assembly Standing Rules E.2.e., E.2.f., and E.2.g., as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Privilege of Floor to Speak

“e. During the deliberations of the committee, in contrast to public hearings, only the following persons, having been recognized by the moderator, may speak:

“(1) Members of the committee;

“(2) Committee assistant, when recognized by the committee moderator;

“(3) Persons with special expertise, including elected members or staff members of General Assembly entities;

“(4) Overture advocates and signers of commissioners’ resolutions; (see below in this standing rule) who [shall be entitled to] speak address the background and intent of an overture or resolution when the overture or resolution or response to the referral of an overture is first considered by the committee and may be asked to provide additional information to the committee to correct misunderstandings or to clarify and then shall have the same privilege of the floor as other persons with special expertise listed in Standing Rule E.2.e.(3) above;

“(5) Persons invited by the committee through a majority vote of the committee; and

“(6) Representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, who may speak to overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, or other business on which the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has presented advice or recommendations, or matters that propose amendments to the Constitution, or that affect compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution.

“(7) In the event that business being considered by an assembly committee has been referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for advice, representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall be entitled to speak.

“(8) The committee moderator shall provide that the total time allotted to persons, other than members of the committee, who speak for or against a recommendation be equal so far as possible.

“Overture Advocates Signer of Commissioners’ Resolution

“f. Overture advocates and one signer of each commissioners’ resolution shall be responsible for being available at the time selected by any assembly committee considering the matter. The overture advocate or one of the signers of a commissioners’ resolution shall be entitled to speak, *as an individual (or in cooperation with other overture advocates in a pre-arranged presentation), to the background and intent of the overture or resolution immediately after the motion is made and seconded, placing the overture or resolution on the floor of the committee or subcommittee, or immediately after any motion that might logically be expected to affect the overture or resolution is moved and seconded, and during debate of such motions to correct misunderstandings or to clarify.

“|Responsibilities of Overture Advocate

|g. Overture advocates who have been designated by their presbytery or synod to speak to the response from a General Assembly entity to a referral of an overture shall be responsible for being available at the time selected by the assembly committee considering the response. The overture advocate shall be entitled to speak to the background and intent of the overture]—immediately after the motion is made and seconded, placing the response to the referral of the overture on the floor of the committee or subcommittee, or immediately after any motion that might logically be expected to affect the response is moved and seconded, and during debate of such motions to correct misunderstandings or to clarify.” [or as asked for clarification by the committee concerning the original intent of the overture].

Rationale

The idea of privilege of the floor is a part of parliamentary process that is often misunderstood. Incorrectly cast as allowing a person the opportunity to speak during a meeting, this phrase actually means only that a person is permitted to enter the meeting area. (See Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised (RONR), §3, p. 28, footnote referenced in line 27). This imprecise language is used in sections E.2.e and following of the General Assembly’s Standing Rules.

It is clear that the Standing Rules intend to state guidelines for obtaining (or having) the floor in a committee setting during a General Assembly meeting. RONR is clear that obtaining the floor begins with being recognized by the chair or moderator, before beginning to speak. Although RONR is the parliamentary authority for meetings (G-9.0302 and S.R. E.2.b), this standing rule would be strengthened by stating this procedure.

Over the years, a matter of great concern has been the fair and equitable treatment of those who are permitted to speak to assembly committees, particularly in regards to the balance of time afforded to overture advocates, persons with special expertise (who often are members of General Assembly entities or are staff persons), and others the committee may ask to speak. The participation of these persons is still governed by section (8) of S.R. E.2.e, “The committee moderator shall provide that the total time allotted to persons, other than members of the committee, who speak for or against a recommendation be equal so far as possible.” This part of the Standing Rule makes redundant and unnecessary the phrase, in E.2.e.(4) “…
shall have the same privilege of the floor [sic] as other persons with special expertise listed in Standing Rule E.2.e.(3) above.” The committee moderator rightly is given the authority to see that this rule is implemented, subject to the standard parliamentary options available to the committee, such as to appeal the decision of the chair.

The other proposed amendments to E.2.e.(4) seek to bring clarity to the role of overture advocates by harmonizing this section with E.2.f., which immediately follows. The amendments clarify to what the overture advocate is permitted to initially speak (to the background and intent of an overture, as provided in E.2.f), and that the committee may ask or permit the overture advocate to address misunderstandings or bring additional clarity to the issue.

In this latter matter, it is important to note that once an overture or resolution has been submitted to the General Assembly and, according to the assembly’s rules and procedures, assigned to a committee, it is no longer the presbytery’s overture or commissioners’ resolution. It is an item of business that belongs to the General Assembly, and to the committee to which it has been assigned. RONR expects a committee to fully examine the business assigned to it in drafting its recommendations to the full General Assembly.

Paragraph E.2.g. should be struck out completely as it is essentially the same paragraph as E.2.f. If it is not stricken, then the same amendments applied to E.2.f should be applied to E.2.g.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-12

Comment on Item 03-12 – From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 210th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 03-12.

Rationale

This overture seeks to amend the Standing Rules (E.2.g), in order to re-establish basic parliamentary procedure in committee deliberations. Once an overture is before the committee, the overture advocate would have the privilege to speak to it.
But after that, committee members would have the priority of the right to speak and debate. Overture advocates could be invited by the committee to give additional information.

This would create the proper balance between the right of the committee members to debate and the opportunity for overture advocates to give information.
The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-13

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the PC(USA) do the following:

[The assembly approved Item 03-13, Recommendation 1. See pp. 56, 77.]

1. Amend Standing Rule D.1.g. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “Access to Commissioner and Advisory Delegate Seating

   “g. The only persons who shall be permitted access to the commissioner and advisory delegate seating area during plenary sessions are commissioners, advisory delegates, assistants enrolled by the Stated Clerk to assist commissioners having a disability warranting assistance, the Stated Clerk, Associate and Assistant Stated Clerks, and other staff and assembly assistants who are assigned responsibilities that require access to this area, including assisting at the floor microphones, delivery of official messages to commissioner and advisory delegates, and locating commissioners who are needed on the platform. The Stated Clerk will provide special credentials for the particular staff and assembly assistants who are authorized to enter the commissioner/advisory delegate seating area. Registered presbytery staff may have access to the seating area to contact their commissioners and advisory delegates during breaks in business.”

2. Amend Standing Rule B.2.d. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “d. Young Adult Advisory Delegates

   “(1) Each presbytery shall appoint an active member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who shall be between the ages of seventeen and twenty-three years on the date the General Assembly convenes, to be a young adult advisory delegate.

   “(2) Each presbytery will request each candidate for young adult advisory delegate to submit an application/questionnaire and be interviewed by an appropriate presbytery committee in order to ensure the selection of the best qualified person to serve as young adult advisory delegate. The youth ministries staff shall prepare and distribute to each presbytery a sample/suggested questionnaire for use in reviewing candidates for election as young adult advisory delegates.

   “(3) Presbyteries shall elect young adult advisory delegates in sufficient time to permit the list of advisory delegates to be delivered to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected.”

3. Amend Standing Rule B.2.e. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “e. Theological Student Advisory Delegates

   “There shall be a delegation of theological student advisory delegates each year: two from each of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); one from each of the theological institutions in a covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and one each from three selected other theological seminaries. The selection process for these delegates is as follows:

“(1) Each theological institution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate three students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. Two of these students shall be designated by the institution as delegates and the other student shall be designated as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery, or a student nominated by the Presbyterian School of Christian Education. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the names of the two students to be delegates to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(2) Each theological institution in covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate two students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. One of these students shall be designated by the institution as the delegate and the other student as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(3) All non-Presbyterian theological schools represented by corresponding members on the Committee on Theological Education and one additional non-Presbyterian theological seminary shall be asked to nominate one theological student advisory delegate and one alternate. The additional non-Presbyterian seminary shall be chosen on a rotating basis, descending alphabetically, from those that have at least twelve Presbyterian enrollees (either inquirers or candidates under the care of a presbytery) as of October 1 in the year preceding the assembly. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(4) Nominated students shall have at least one more year of study following the assembly remaining in their degree program. The Stated Clerk shall forward the name of the nominated students to the presbyteries of jurisdiction for election and confirmation.”

Rationale

Same as the Rationale for Recommendation 2. above. It provides consistency for reporting advisory delegates and commissioners.

[The assembly approved Item 03-14. See pp. 56, 77.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following amendment to Standing Rule K.1.c. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Appointed by Moderator

“c. Any commission or special committee authorized by the General Assembly, unless otherwise designated, shall be appointed by the Moderator in collaboration with the General Assembly Nominating Committee. The Moderator is also authorized to fill by appointment any vacancies that may occur in any of such commissions or committees. No minister, elder, or other person shall be appointed to serve on more than one such commission or committee except by consent of the General Assembly.”

Rationale

The General Assembly Nominating Committee has a pool of almost 300 Presbyterian persons who wish to be considered for service at the General Assembly level. The General Assembly Moderator(s) and the church will benefit from a process of collaboration between the General Assembly Moderator(s) and the General Assembly Nominating Committee as members for special committees and commissions are considered and appointed.
Comment on Item 03-14—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

Item 03-14 recommends amending Standing Rule K.1.c., about Commissions and Special Committees to consult with the GA Nominating Committee.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 03-14.

The Book of Order outlines the functions of the Committee on Representation. It serves “... both as an advocate for the representation of racial ethnic members, women, different age groups, and persons with disabilities, and as a continuing resource to the particular governing body in these areas. ...The committee on representation shall consult with the nominating committee of its own governing body” (Book of Order, G-9.0105c.). In addition, the committee on representation is to consult with those groups prior to nomination to discover potential members (Book of Order, G-9.0105d.). It would be appropriate for the consultation to include GACOR, but there is remedy in the current Book of Order for this function. The committee on representation often has names of qualified persons who have not yet completed an application in the nomination process.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following amendments to Section IV.C.1. of the Organization for Mission: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“IV.C. Committees of the General Assembly

“1. Serving on Assembly Entities

“a. Each person nominated shall be an active member of a congregation, or a continuing member of a presbytery, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with the exception of nominees for election to the Presbyterian National Committee on the Fund for the Self-Development of People and the Women Employed by the Church Committee.

“c. Persons nominated for election by the General Assembly shall ordinarily be eligible to serve a four-year term, and be eligible for election to one additional term. No person may serve more than two consecutive terms, full or partial. After serving as a member of a General Assembly entity for two terms, full or partial At the conclusion of their term of service, a person shall not be eligible for nomination or re-nomination to a General Assembly entity until two years have elapsed.”

Rationale

The General Assembly Nominating Committee requests amendment of this section of the Organization for Mission to correct the name of the Presbyterian Committee on the Self-Development of People and to remove the Women Employed by the Church Committee that is no longer in existence.

In addition, the General Assembly Nominating Committee wishes to clarify the amount of time persons completing service on a General Assembly entity must wait before they are eligible again for nomination for service.

[The assembly approved Item 03-16 with amendment. See pp. 56, 77.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) make the following change in the Organization for Mission, Section IV.C.7., related to the name and mandate of the Committee on Ecumenical Relations. [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“7. Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations

“a. The Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations shall function to give a high profile to the vision of the ecumenical and interreligious involvement and work as central to the gospel and key to the life of the church; plan and coordinate, in consultation with the agencies and governing bodies of the church, the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical and interreligious relations and work; connect the ecumenical and interreligious efforts of all governing body levels of the church; provide a common point for all ecumenical and interreligious efforts connecting us with those outside our church; keep a unity of vision that includes the ecclesiastical, programmatic, ecumenical, and denominational (organizational) parts of our ministries and commitments; articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity in the midst of our ecumenical commitments; and promote awareness of the role of the unity of all humankind in the search for the unity of the church; and promote the unity of the church as an exhibition of the kingdom to the world.

“b. The Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations shall be composed of twenty members. Twelve shall be members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) nominated for at-large positions by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and elected by the General Assembly in as nearly equal classes as possible. Four shall be members of four churches invited by the Stated Clerk to appoint one member each from their communion to serve as voting members of the committee. One of the four churches shall be one of our ecumenical church partners. The other three shall be our full communion partners. One member shall be appointed by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. One member shall be appointed by the General Assembly Mission Council. The other members of the committee shall be the Stated Clerk or the Associate Stated Clerk for Ecumenical Relations and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council or designee.

“In addition, the following GAMC persons may be corresponding members: the Deputy Executive Director for Mission and up to three ministry directors appointed by the Deputy Executive Director for Mission.

c. Elected members of the committee shall be elected to a four-year term, and be eligible for election to one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial. Appointed members from ecumenical church partners shall serve for four years and be eligible for appointment to one additional term.

d. The Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations will meet twice annually and shall have the responsibility to do the following:

“(1) Envision, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, how the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) leads and participates in the search for the unity of Christ’s Church within this nation and worldwide, and propose appropriate strategies to the General Assembly, its agencies, and other governing bodies;

“(2) Provide oversight to the implementation of the responsibilities given to the General Assembly in Book of Order, Form of Government, Chapter XV. Relationships, G-15.0000-.0302;

“(3) Act on and process recommendations and proposals addressing ecclesiastical ecumenical work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);

“(4) Propose to the General Assembly, for election, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) members to serve on ecumenical delegations to the National Council of Churches of Christ (USA), the World Council of Churches, the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, and the Caribbean and North American Area Council assemblies;

“(5) Represent the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in negotiation and coordination of the search for Christian unity with other communions as authorized by the General Assembly;

“(6) Select Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) representatives to serve on ecumenical dialogues, ecumenical negotiations on church unions, multilateral and bilateral dialogues, and representatives from the PC(USA) ecumenical representatives to other church assemblies;

“(7) Oversee the implementation of “A Formula of Agreement” (Full Communion) with the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, the Reformed Church in America, and the United Churches of Christ, and represent the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in planning and coordinating structures to carry this out;

“(8) Give guidance to the nurturing of unity among Presbyterian and Reformed churches in the U.S.A., with one another and with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);

“(9) Empower all agencies of the General Assembly and governing bodies to carry out their mission program with an ecumenical consciousness and in close coordination with one another and to model this consciousness in their own work;

“(10) Propose and advocate to appropriate bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that they share in funding ecumenical and conciliar ministry;

“(11) Propose to the General Assembly names of churches to be invited to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the General Assembly meeting (see Standing Rule B.2.g.);
“(12) Select three religious traditions to be invited to send representatives to the General Assembly as interfaith [representatives] [observers] (see Standing Rule B.2.f.);

“(12) (13) Give guidance to the Stated Clerk and General Assembly agencies on ecclesial (church-to-church) ecumenical relations, helping to carry out the General Assembly’s G-13.0103s and t responsibilities;

“(13) (14) Give guidance to General Assembly agencies on new opportunities to strengthen the relationships with other faith communities and on strategies for fulfilling the General Assembly mandates on [interfaith] [interreligious] relationships;

“(14) (15) Give guidance to the Mission Agency on ecumenical mission opportunities in partnership with churches in the United States and around the world; and “(15) (16) Give guidance to program entities on ecumenical formation of Presbyterians, both ministers and lay members.

“e. The committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly. The co-chairs of the Ecumenical Staff Team will have primary staffing responsibilities. The Ecumenical Staff Team shall be a staff resource to the committee.”

Rationale

During the self-study process, the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) considered the adequacy of its mandate. It noted,

Since the formation of GACER, the complexity of interreligious relations in the world, and the need for more attention to interreligious cooperation, and relationship-building in the wider ecumenical arena, have dramatically increased. Currently, particular interreligious matters that require attention are cared for by the General Assembly Mission Council. There is a need for an elected body to oversee the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in interreligious relations and work; to connect the interreligious efforts of all governing body levels of the church; and to provide a common point for all interreligious efforts connecting us with those outside our church; and to articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity in the midst of our interreligious. GACER is positioned well to do this work in the wider context of our ecumenical mandate; it would be appropriate to include responsibilities for both ecumenical and interreligious relationships in the overall mandate of GACER. With this change it would be appropriate to change the name of GACER to the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relationships.

“Interreligious Relations” is proposed, rather than the former “Interfaith Relations” for two reasons. First, this is the terminology used by many of our ecumenical partners. More importantly, this change shifts the focus, and basis for relationship, away from belief and the particularly Christian understanding of “faith,” to the whole life and practice of religious communities.

Item 03-17

On Establishing an Annual General Convocation Meeting and Moving Meetings of the General Assembly to Every Six Years—From the Presbytery of Foothills.

The Presbytery of Foothills overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to amend the appropriate sections of the Book of Order to

[The assembly referred Item 03-17, Recommendation 1, to the General Assembly Mission Council. See pp. 57, 79.]

1. establish an annual General Convocation meeting for the purposes of worship, mission celebration, and building up relationships within the Body of Christ; and

[The assembly referred Item 03-17, Recommendation 2, to the Biennial Review Committee. See pp. 57, 79.]

2. move meetings of the General Assembly Governing Body to every six years.

Rationale

1. We believe the following:

   - The vast majority of Presbyterians are happy with their congregations, their presbyteries, their synods, and the ongoing work of General Assembly staff to ensure the smooth day-by-day running of the mission of the denomination.

   - On the other hand, we believe that Presbyterians of all theological perspectives find themselves frustrated with the manner in which discussions occur and decisions are made by the General Assembly, and that General Assembly in its present functioning, presents a significant threat in our beloved church and to its peace, unity, and purity.¹
2. Further, based on our experience, and reports of General Assembly commissioners, we believe that

- the volume of information presented to commissioners at the assembly, including, but not limited to annual reports, denominational positions on particular issues, repeated actions to amend the constitution, etc.,
- the committee structure and process employed to introduce business to the floor of the assembly,
- the lack of relationships between commissioners,
- the lack of time to process issues that are often enormously complicated and multifaceted,
- the consequent pressure to give in to the emotion of the moment,
- the disparity of knowledge about specific subjects between commissioners, General Assembly staff, special interest groups;

all often

- lead to confrontation without reconciliation, (2 Cor. 5:18–197),
- contribute to a heightened emphasis on winners and losers, rather than winners and winners (see 1 Cor. 6:7–88),
- lead to a tendency for our national body to act legislatively rather than pastorally (see Paul’s approach to meat offered to idols in 1 Cor. 10:23–339),
- promote stagnation rather than growth in our common life together (Eph. 4:15–165),
- lead to the predominance of single-issue thinking (party-spirit, see Gal. 5:206)
- reinforce a growing sense of anxiety in a significant number of our congregations every time assembly meets, (see John 14:277)
- and erode denominational pride, loyalty, and commitment.

We propose this change to truly support the peace, unity, and purity of the denomination; to upbuild the historic Presbyterian polity of connectionalism between congregations and presbyteries; to reinvigorate the work of synods; to transform the diversity-within-unity of our denomination into a powerful positive force that increasingly stimulates the creative proclamation of the Gospel in our nation’s diverse regions and cultures; to modernize our operations; and to provide time for wise reflection and broad discussion on matters central to us all.

This overture will require fresh thinking on the church’s operation in many areas. For example, the title “Moderator of the General Assembly” can be changed simply to “Moderator of the National Assembly”—whether the assembly is the General Assembly, or the annual General Convocation.

Endnotes

2. 2 Corinthians 5:18–19—“All this is from God, who reconciled us to himself through Christ, and has given us the ministry of reconciliation; that is, in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting the message of reconciliation to us.”

3. 1 Corinthians 6:7–8—In fact, to have lawsuits at all with one another is already a defeat for you. Why not rather be wronged? Why not rather be defrauded? But you yourselves wrong and defraud—and believers at that.

4. 1 Corinthians 10:23–33—‘All things are lawful,’ but not all things are beneficial. ‘All things are lawful,’ but not all things build up. Do not seek your own advantage, but that of others. Eat whatever is sold in the meat market without raising any question on the ground of conscience, for ‘the earth and its fullness are the Lord’s.’ If an unbeliever invites you to a meal and you are disposed to go, eat whatever is set before you without raising any question on the ground of conscience. But if someone says to you, ‘This has been offered in sacrifice,’ then do not eat it, out of consideration for the one who informed you, and for the sake of conscience—I mean the other’s conscience, not your own. For why should my liberty be subject to the judgment of someone else’s conscience? If I partake with thankfulness, why should I be denounced because of that for which I give thanks? So, whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do everything for the glory of God. Give no offense to Jews or to Greeks or to the church of God, just as I try to please everyone in everything I do, not seeking my own advantage, but that of many, so that they may be saved.”

5. Ephesians 4:15–16—“But speaking the truth in love, we must grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ, from whom the whole body, joined and knit together by every ligament with which it is equipped, as each part is working properly, promotes the body’s growth in building itself up in love.”
6. Galatians 5:20—“The works of the flesh are “idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousy, anger, quarrels, dissensions, factions,”
7. John 14:27—“Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you. I do not give to you as the world gives. Do not let your hearts be troubled, and do not let them be afraid.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-17

Advice on Item 03-17—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-17.

Rationale

The overture makes two proposals which shall be addressed separately:

1. The request to establish an annual general convocation meeting.

This does not require constitutional amendment. The General Assembly has the authority to establish such an annual meeting under G-13.0103c, f, and j. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that if the General Assembly concurs with the intent of this amendment, that intent would better be accomplished by a resolution instructing the appropriate entity or entities than by constitutional amendment.

Nevertheless, should the assembly wish to enact such a requirement, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends the following amendment be proposed:

Shall section G-13.0103 be amended to include a new subsection as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

y. to convene annually a general convocation for the purposes of worship, mission celebration, and building up relationships within the Body of Christ.

2. The request to change the frequency of meetings of the General Assembly.

a. The overture does not specify which amendments would be necessary to accomplish its intent. An analysis of the Book of Order indicates at least the following amendments would be required: [Text to be added is shown with brackets and with an underline; text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with strike-through.]

G-13.0104: “The General Assembly shall hold a stated meeting [at least biennially] [every six years]. [The rest of the section remains unchanged.]”

G-13.0111a: “… Members shall be elected by the General Assembly for a term of six years[... and the terms shall be so arranged as to provide that one third of the members shall complete their service at the conclusion of each regular meeting of the General Assembly]. [The rest of the section remains unchanged.]”

G-13.0111b: “The committee shall elect its own officers [at the last meeting prior to the regular meeting of the General Assembly]. [The rest of the section remains unchanged.]”

G-13.0112a: “…Voting members shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly and shall serve a term of six years [in three classes].… [The rest of the section remains unchanged.]”

D-5.0102: “The term of each member of a permanent judicial commission shall be six years, with the exception that membership on the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly shall end when that member transfers membership to a church or presbytery outside the synod from which nominated. [In each even-numbered year, the General Assembly shall elect members for a term of six years to fill the vacancies then occurring. Their terms of office will begin with the dissolution of the General Assembly at which they are elected.]”

Comment: The constitutional provisions regarding establishment of classes for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, General Assembly Nominating Committee, and General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission are designed to provide for sufficient institutional continuity so as to ensure the effective performance of tasks and to safeguard these bodies from excessive influence by and reliance on non-elected staff. Without rotation of classes, membership of these bodies would change completely with each General Assembly. Vacancies could not be filled in the interim without a called meeting or other mechanism. This would create the greatest stress on the work of these groups at the very time when the work is most intense. Similarly, there would be a loss of institutional memory and knowledge in these groups resulting in greater reliance on General Assembly staff.

b. In addition, the proposal would render difficult or impossible the exercise of the following rights, responsibilities, and requirements of the General Assembly:
• The authorization of services of the Lord’s Supper by entities under the jurisdiction of the General Assembly as noted in G-9.0102b and W-3.6204
• Granting exceptions to the composition of a Committee on Representation as detailed in G-9.0106b.
• Exercising accountable oversight of councils, boards, agencies, commissions, and committees as in G-9.0403.
• Developing the budget of the General Assembly as instructed in G-9.0404d and G-13.0103i.
• Reviewing the biennial reports of the moderator, stated clerk, the councils, commissions, committees, boards, agencies, and organizations of the General Assembly as in G-9.0407c.
• Reviewing the records of synods at least biennially, as instructed in: G-9.0407d(3), G-12.0304; and G-13.0103k and l.
• Exercising special administrative review over lower governing bodies in a timely manner as instructed in G-9.0408.
• Timely approval of executives of General Assembly agencies as in G-9.0703.
• Approving new presbyteries or changes in the configuration or boundaries of existing presbyteries as detailed in G-12.0102k and G-13.0103n.
• Providing recommendations to synods regarding the adoption of budgets as in G-12.0303.
• Establishing and superintending the agencies and task forces necessary for its work, including a General Assembly Mission Council, providing for the regular review of the functional relationship between the General Assembly’s structure and its mission as instructed in G-13.0103h.
• Warning or bearing witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in or outside the church as instructed in G-13.0103p.
• Deciding controversies brought before it and giving advice and instruction in cases submitted to it, in conformity with the Constitution as instructed in G-13.0103q.
• Providing authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order which is binding on the governing bodies of the church as instructed in G-13.0103r.
• Authorizing synods to exercise similar power in receiving ecclesiastical bodies suited to become constituents of those governing bodies and lying within their geographic bounds as instructed in G-13.0103v.
• Reviewing the work of the Office of the General Assembly in consultation with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly as instructed in G-13.0103x
• Approving changes in the descriptions of standardized ordination examinations, the subjects, the schedule, and the procedures for their administration as in G-14.0432.
• Resolving conflicts in the constitutions governing Union churches as in G-16.0201v and G-16.0401p.
• Consenting to the union of particular churches with churches of non-Reformed bodies as in G-16.0301.
• Resolving conflicts in the constitutions governing Union governing bodies as in G-17.0201c(7).

Comment: At the heart of our connectional system are the foundational principles of Presbyterian polity that “… presbyters shall come together in governing bodies (traditionally called judicatories or courts) in regular gradation” (Book of Order, G-4.0301c); “[e]cclesiastical jurisdiction is a shared power, to be exercised jointly by presbyters gathered in governing bodies ” (Book of Order, G-4.0301h); and “[a] higher governing body shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal” (Book of Order, G-4.0301f). Essential to the exercise of these principles is a process for regular and timely discernment of the will of God for the church’s governance and mission. When the time between the convening of representative assemblies increases, the effectiveness of any timely discernment process will inevitably diminish, and the connectional unity of the church will suffer.

In addition to reducing the ability of the General Assembly to exercise its oversight and control of General Assembly entities, agencies, councils, and other bodies, the proposed overture would increase the church’s reliance on elected and non-elected staff during the period between assemblies. Moreover, the extended period between General Assemblies will affect the constitutional checks and balances between judicial and administrative processes of authoritatively interpreting the Constitution, and could increase the case load and influence of judicial commissions under G-9.0411.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 03-17 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.
Advice and Counsel on Item 03-17—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-17 requests General Assemblies be held every six years.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that Item 03-17 be disapproved.

Rationale

Approval of this overture would impede the work of the General Assembly and the church at-large and lessen the power of the voice from the pews. By centralizing decision-making in the offices and permanent General Assembly committees that handle the work and decisions between assemblies, this overture would take power from the assembly and give it to a small, centralized group. Further, in a six-year cycle, the church at-large would lose its ability to come together and be in community.

Permanent General Assembly committees such as ACREC would find it practically impossible to implement any work with which they are mandated. The ACREC’s work includes monitoring the work of GAMC in between assemblies, identifying new policy needs, and reporting its findings to General Assembly for implementation. If this were done in a six-year cycle, ACREC could not report to the GAMC in between assemblies because of its monitoring role that would be a conflict of interest. The pace of change would make implementation of recommended new policy nearly impossible. Growth in the church is occurring most noticeably in the racial ethnic communities and it is imperative for the church to be nimble enough to implement change and keep up with the needs of these emerging churches. Going to a six-year cycle would make help arrive too late, if at all, for these new congregations.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-17

Comment on Item 03-17—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-17.

Rationale

This overture seeks to move the regular meeting of the General Assembly from every two years to every six years.

To move the adoption, review, oversight, and possible revision of the mission and ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by the broadest cross-section of the church to once every six years would undermine the connectional nature of our church and leave such actions to a much smaller group of elected members (the General Assembly Mission Council has forty elected members).

In addition, the General Assembly commissioners’ evaluations have and continue to reinforce a positive experience, greater knowledge and understanding of the PC(USA)’s polity and mission, deep sense of connection to the denomination, and increased participation in the ministry of their local congregations and middle governing bodies.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Expanding the Scope of the Review of Biennial Assemblies—From the Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy.

The Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to lead the church in considering the form and function of our General Assembly meetings by expanding the action of the 214th General Assembly (2002) that charged the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to prepare an evaluation of biennial assemblies after the 219th General Assembly (2010) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 159–64, Item 02-01) and instructing this study committee to consider the whole of the General Assembly meeting in its form and function.

This review is to include, but is not limited to, matters of financial stewardship, the use of alternative forms of discernment, the number of commissioners and advisory delegates as well as the role of advisory delegates, the schedule for moderational elections, the environmental impact of assemblies, the frequency of meetings, and models for governance for future generations.
In appointing the members of the special task group or committee (outlined in the 2002 action), the Stated Clerk and Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council shall pay particular attention to appointing a generous representation of members younger than age forty.

[Five additional persons will be added to the Review Committee as outlined in the 2002 action, three of whom will be commissioners or advisory delegates from the 219th General Assembly (2010) under the age of 40, and two from the church at large.]

[Financial Implications: 2010: $17,720; 2011: $26,705; 2012: $8,735 (Per Capita—OGA)]

The report of this study and any recommendations shall come to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Rationale

The Committee on the General Assembly was charged by the 214th General Assembly (2002) to prepare an evaluation of biennial assemblies, instructing the committee to consider the whole of the General Assembly meeting in its form and function. This group was asked to review the following:

The assigned task shall be to ascertain the impact of biennial assemblies on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in terms of its ministry and mission; stewardship including per capita apportionment, mission dollars, and special offerings; communication including knowledge of the General Assembly and its work in the church, on governance of the church; the Form of Government and overtures sent to the General Assembly; use of judicial process and ways of dealing with conflictual issues, as well as addressing the theology of our Form of Government and how it has been impacted by biennial assemblies; and bring a report to the 220th General Assembly (2012). (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 159)

Since the charge was given to COGA to review biennial General Assemblies, the church has benefited from the work of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, which modeled decision making utilizing discernment and consensus and challenged the church to adopt new methods of decision making at all governing body levels. Sessions, presbyteries, and synods across the church have experimented with different ways of making decisions. The General Assembly, as the most formal governing body, has been less adaptive and slower to respond to the growing enthusiasm for alternative methods of discernment in decision making. This is a conversation that needs to occur at the General Assembly level. The review of biennial assemblies provides an opportunity for it to occur within a larger conversation about the form and function of the General Assembly.

The expanded review should address the effectiveness of the current standing committee model and whether a different organizational model might better facilitate the use of discernment as a core value. It should consider the effectiveness of the current overture process and potential alternatives to it that could free the assembly to spend more time on larger, more strategic questions of vision and mission that will shape the future of the church. The review should address the number and role of commissioners and advisory delegates and how the General Assembly might engage the wisdom of middle governing body leaders (staff and officers). The review should assess the environmental impact of General Assembly meetings and whether there are ways to increase efficiency and reduce the overall environmental impact. Because this review will affect the General Assembly’s function in the foreseeable future, the review team should intentionally include many members under the age of forty.

This proposed expansion of the review functions of the committee would allow the church to have more than just a tweaking of the existing biennial model; it would allow a vehicle to explore a new way of being the church when we meet in assembly.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-18

Comment on Item 03-18—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 03-18.

Rationale

This overture seeks to expand the scope of the review of biennial General Assemblies.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concurs with the request the overture makes regarding expanding the scope of the review of biennial General Assemblies. Given the expanded scope of the review committee, the COGA recommends that five additional persons be added to the review committee, three of which will be commissioners from the 219th General Assembly (2010) under forty years of age, and two to be elected from the church-at-large.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Accountability for Presbyterian Organizations at General Assembly Sponsored Meetings and Events—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

The Presbytery of Santa Barbara respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to do the following:

1. Require events sponsored by PC(USA) aligned groups taking place at General Assembly or other General Assembly-sponsored gatherings to be evaluated by the Office of the General Assembly in advance of all General Assemblies or other General Assembly-sponsored events to assure that the activities of all PC(USA) aligned groups are conducted in a manner that honor the constitutional standards of the church.

2. Direct the Office of the General Assembly to establish a Board of Oversight and Review whose task will be to hold accountable any Presbyterian organization conducting its affairs or events in violation of current constitutional standards. We also advise that this board be available to receive complaints from commissioners at General Assembly.

3. Direct that after a process of review is completed, a violation of the church’s standards of behavior or Constitution shall result in the denial of the privilege of exhibiting at future General Assembly-sponsored meetings and events. Such violation shall also result in denied access to commissioner’s mailboxes at future General Assemblies.

4. Advocate that a process of recourse be established for organizations charged with such violations. In order to be reinstated, the organization so charged would be required to go through an appeal process. The Office of the General Assembly would form a committee of the most recent General Assembly commissioners to hear appeals. This committee would be composed of a theologically balanced group within the denomination.

Rationale

On June 21, 2008, during the General Assembly that took place in San Jose, More Light Presbyterians held their traditional reception and dinner, advertised to all General Assembly attendees. At that gathering, a planned “wedding” took place between two gay men officiated by an ordained Presbyterian pastor.

The Directory for Worship, W-4.9001, was violated at that event, as “Marriage is a civil contract between a woman and a man.” Also, since the officiating pastor proclaimed the couple “married,” this violated the GAPJC’s ruling that church officers authorized to perform marriages “shall not state, imply, or represent that a same-sex ceremony is a marriage” (http://www.pcusa.org/gapjc/decisions/pjc21812withconcurrences.pdf; Presbyterian Outlook, Sat, June 21, 2008, Katie Pate, Correspondent).

The fabric of our denomination includes and sanctions coalitions of like-minded Presbyterians for the purposes of strengthening the community of the PC(USA) and promoting dialogue between us as we seek to live together in our diversity. Thus, we have such groups within our church as Presbyterians for Renewal, More Light Presbyterians, Presbyterian Forum, Presbyterian Writers’ Guild, and more.

These, and many others groups all fall under the banner of the PC(USA). These organizations identify themselves within the PC(USA) and seek to work within the denomination to further their particular ideas and concerns.

It is, therefore, of common interest to the denomination as a whole that each group conducts its endeavors in a manner that honors the constitutional standards of the church. While each coalition may seek to change the Constitution, it is nonetheless incumbent upon each to uphold the standards until such a time as they are legally modified. To do otherwise is divisive and undermines the unity and trust that we value in our church. This singular event of a homosexual wedding at the 218th General Assembly (2008), which was reported in various media, indicates the need for a new level of oversight.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-19

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-19—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 03-19 be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) for review and that any subsequent recommendations be submitted to the 220th General Assembly (2012) for consideration.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) understands some of the concerns of the presbytery and, without endorsing their remedies, has itself considered several approaches, if the item is not simply disapproved.
1. The Standing Rules of the General Assembly, as amended by the 218th General Assembly (2008), suggest that the proposed action may not be necessary. Standing Rule I. 2. d. Sponsorship of Events states “An event scheduled before, during, or immediately following a session of the General Assembly and extending an invitation to any or all participants of the assembly shall clearly identify the sponsor or sponsoring organization(s) in any invitations, announcements, or other publicity about the event” (Manual, p. 42). On this basis, a requirement for transparency and imputed accountability by all event sponsors would seem to be already in place.

2. Standing Rule E. 6.d. Requests to Schedule Events, invests the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures with the responsibility to review requests to hold events from entities related to the PC(USA) in any way. Thus, a mechanism for reviewing the appropriateness of such requests would appear to be already in existence.

3. The creation of a new organizational entity within the Office of General Assembly (i.e. a Board of Oversight) and the investment of that entity with certain powers is a matter that would require an amendment to the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has been charged with the responsibility for reviewing such proposals in light of existing arrangements and advising the General Assembly on an appropriate course of action (Standing Rule A. 5. a. Report; see also the Book of Order, G-13.0112.d).

4. Instead of referral to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the General Assembly could also consider referral to the Office of General Assembly. A somewhat similar action was taken by the 207th General Assembly (1995) on Item 95-11. The 207th General Assembly (1995) referred Commissioners’ Resolution 95-11 to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). The resolution asked that the OGA continue to make exhibit space available to organizations that have a history of relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and whose membership consists entirely of those who are members of the PC(USA); and that those groups with “a history of relationship with the PC(USA)” have priority for exhibit space over new organizations. (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 725–26, 70)

The Office of the General Assembly responded in 1996, noting that the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) approves and regularly updates “Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly Exhibit Hall” to clarify the oversight and management of the exhibit hall, establish eligibility for display space, and define additional responsibilities of exhibitors. “These guidelines are reconsidered and revised annually in light of circumstances at a particular assembly site, evaluations from the previous assembly, and other factors” (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 144). At the time, the COGA expressed concern that if such regulations were approved by the General Assembly, then any subsequent “… revisions would also require GA approval. This would hamper the ability of the Stated Clerk or exhibit committee to be responsive to new circumstances or information…” (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 144).

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-19

Comment on Item 03-19—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove this overture.

Rationale

This overture seeks to make an elected committee accountable for the behavior of Presbyterian organizations when constitutional standards are not upheld at General Assembly sponsored meetings and events.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly gives oversight to the biennial meeting of the General Assembly. While it is true that it is hoped that all activities at a particular General Assembly meeting honor the constitutional standards of the church, it is difficult to anticipate beforehand the consequences of any particular action, or to exercise control over any particular group.

General Assembly commissioners already have the means to register complaints or concerns. Additionally, all Presbyterians have access to the church’s judicial process, which may be utilized if it is perceived that constitutional standards have not been upheld.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office General Assembly.

On Young Adult Advisory Delegate Participation—From the Presbytery of Central Washington.

The Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to approve the following:
1. That young adult advisory delegates to the General Assembly not be polled for procedural votes and omnibus motions during plenary sessions. This would include, but is not limited to: motions to end debate, motions to adjourn or recess, motions to limit or extend debate, and motions to change the docket.

2. That young adult advisory delegates be allowed two opportunities to speak during plenary session debates on each topic of discussion or amendment that comes to the floor. One speaker shall speak in favor of the motion, the other shall speak against.

3. When a known issue will be coming to the floor, young adult advisory delegates (YAADs) shall be given an opportunity to caucus among themselves and select who will represent the caucus for each side of the motion, for and against. In such an occurrence, the young adult advisory delegates will be given the opportunity to speak first in the debate; and, if there is a time limit given to each speaker, the YAADs will be given an additional 50 percent allotment of time for their comments.

Rationale

With the General Assembly now meeting biennially, it finds there is more work and more commissioners than in past years. Using time wisely during the plenary sessions is more important than ever to be sure all of the voting commissioners are able to fully discuss and debate the motions at hand.

Advisory delegates play an important role in the process, but their advisory votes on procedural elements of the plenary sessions seldom have any real effect on how business transpires. While the sixty seconds it takes to record their votes is individually insignificant, these repeated votes add up and take away time needed for actual discussion and debate. The General Assembly could easily streamline the sessions by making this simple change.

Young adult advisory delegates are an important part of the General Assembly, but also need to play a role that facilitates the work of the commissioners, not one that prevents commissioners from fully participating. It should be remembered that in the recent past, YAADs did not vote on all matters of debate and had to selectively choose which motions they wanted to be polled on.

There is approximately one YAAD for every four voting commissioners on the floor of the General Assembly, but YAADs represent only about 3 percent of the Presbyterian church membership (712 elder/minister commissioners and 173 YAADs are on record for 2010). The YAADs will still have full voice and vote in committees, where much of the work of the General Assembly is done. Drawing reasonable limits during debates will still allow youth opinions to be fully voiced in a proportional manner, while providing more opportunity for voting commissioners to participate in the plenary discussions that they have the deciding votes on.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-20

Comment on Item 03-20—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

Rationale

This overture seeks to limit the participation of young adult advisory delegates (YAADs) in the plenary sessions of the General Assembly meeting—no polling for procedural votes and only two YAADs to be allowed to speak on a given item of business.

The COGA offers the following comments:

Under Standing Rule B.2., there are four groups of advisory delegates to the General Assembly (GA): young adult (YAADs), theological student (TSADs), missionary (MADs), and ecumenical representatives (EADs). All advisory delegates currently have privilege of the floor during plenary sessions without vote. The advisory delegates may be polled prior to the vote of commissioners on particular issues to determine their advice (SR B.2.c).

The overture seeks to restrict the privilege of the floor and the advisory polling of one group advisory delegates—YAADs—creating two levels of advisory delegates. Adopting this overture would require amending Standing Rule B.2. Amendment to the Standing Rules requires a 2/3 vote.

To limit the advisory polling of the YAADs on procedural votes would not save any time since, to the extent the General Assembly seeks advice of advisory delegates on a given procedural matter, advisory delegates other than YAADs would still be polled.

To limit the YAADs participation in plenary debate as proposed, particularly on such matters as floor amendments, seems impractical. With the current electronic notification system at the microphones that indicates whether a person is an advisory delegate or commissioner, the Moderator of the General Assembly already has the flexibility to choose, in a fair and balanced way, among all those who wish to speak.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-20

Comment on Item 03-20—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 03-20.

Attending and participating in the General Assembly is an important experience for youth and young adults, who are integral in the future of the church. There are many congregations where youth and young adults already serve in important leadership positions: on session, as young ministers, and more. The “hands on” experience gives YAADS the opportunity to gain confidence with and experience in the governing processes of the PC(USA) in ways rarely experienced by most church members, and this experience is of life-long value. YAAD participation is a value in the event and makes an investment for future engagement by those young people, influencing others in the process. People find passion for the work of the church in the experience of a General Assembly.

Often when youth and young adults are involved and engaged in the workings of any church governance, they are more tuned in, knowledgeable, and passionate about the issues at hand in the community of faith. Thus, they should have the opportunity to speak to and voice their thoughts not only in committee but in full plenary. Already, this small contingent has limited access to speak during plenary sessions. Only two microphones are available to them and there is much difficulty in reaching microphones to speak.

The YAADS are in an advisory role, yes, but it is critical that they are able to advise the entire assembly.

We long for our young people, with their energy and imaginations, to be an important part of our church. We long for them to be ready to take leadership roles as current members age and find themselves unable or unwilling to continue to do so. If we desire young people to be part of this church in a meaningful way, their voices must be heard wherever possible. This includes both in committee and at plenary sessions of the General Assembly.

The GACOR commented on Item 03-03 with additional rationale and suggests linking these items if it be the will of the body to do so.

[The assembly approved Item 03-21 with amendment. See pp. 56, 78.]

A Resolution to Adapt the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) do the following:

1. Direct the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to adapt the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR) to collect disaggregated data on age, gender, race, and ethnicity.

2. Direct the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to incorporate into the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR) specifically by name the categories of [African,] African American, Black, and Middle Eastern.

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) instructed the Office of the General Assembly to gather information regarding racial ethnic composition in the church (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 282). The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a commitment to being an inclusive representation of the body of Christ. For this reason, the Book of Order states that, “The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life” (G-4.0403).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) directed the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) “to collect, organize, and report data for all research in the church (such as … the Stated Clerk’s annual statistical report, etc.) in a disaggregated form by race, ethnicity, gender and age, so that data on women of color and young adult women of color may be identified separately for analysis, where possible and permissible by law” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 965). The Women of Color Joint Working Group made this request to the OGA in a letter dated September 2009, but they were told that further approval was needed from the General Assembly.

Given that the 218th General Assembly (2008) already approved this, and given that the SASR is completed online and already collects information separately on age, gender, race, and ethnicity, it seems that adding to the reporting form or slightly adjusting it to gather disaggregated data on these same variables would be a simple and straightforward process. Whether the process is simple or not, the information that would be gleaned from such a change is essential to the church if we are indeed to move forward in our commitment to hearing and singing the songs of women of color (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 964ff.).

While the United States government does not break down race and ethnicity as far as we are requesting, given our Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) caucuses and the racial ethnic identification of women and men in the church, we would request the categories be expanded to be more inclusive of the membership of our church. The church can and should lead the way toward being wholly inclusive of all people. Those who identify as African American in this country do not necessarily identify as Black. The two terms do not have the same meaning. In the same vein, those who identify as Middle Eastern most often do not identify themselves as white. Given the current cultural climate in our country for those of Middle Eastern heritage, this is understandable. To fail to offer these categories is to render many members of the body of Christ invisible.

Making these changes would allow the church to regularly assess the presence and participation of women of color and young women of color. In light of this decade of “Hearing and Singing New Songs to God” in which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is lifting up and celebrating the voices and contributions of women of color in the church (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 964), now is an appropriate time to make such an adaptation to the way in which we gather this information.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-21

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-21—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that Item 03-21 be approved.

Rationale

The ACREC agrees that data needs to be collected in a more detailed way, especially as the U.S. Census is now being collected with more detail. Middle Easterners are now a recognized group within our church membership structure and we believe this category needs to be added to the church’s data collection.

Regarding labeling of groups, as illustrated by the controversy over the use of “African American” and “Black,” ACREC believes that further study is needed to arrive at the right “labels” to use as consensus is difficult to find even within a particular racial ethnic community.

Comment on Item 03-21—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The Committee on the Office of General Assembly (COGA) convenes a table currently reviewing the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR). The GACOR respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to refer this item and its rationale to the COGA for consideration. Increasing the accuracy of the data from this instrument assists in planning for full participation and representation at all levels of the church.

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, with the concurrence of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) do the following:

1. Elect the Reverend Thomas Hay to a first, four-year term as Associate Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

2. Elect Elder Loyda P. Aja, the Reverend Kerry Clements, the Reverend Mark Tammen, and the Reverend Robina Winbush to a third, four-year term as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

3. Elect Elder Frederick Heuser to a fourth, four-year term as Associate Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.
Rationale

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly at H.2.d. states the following:

The General Assembly may elect one or more Associate Stated Clerks as the General Assembly shall determine. The Stated Clerk shall nominate persons to fill each such office after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The term of office shall be four years, subject to reelection at the pleasure of the General Assembly.

These six people give exemplary service as leaders of the major departments of the General Assembly, are in good standing as elders or ministers of Word and Sacrament, and are faithful Christian leaders who serve the church with “energy, intelligence, imagination and love.” The Stated Clerk enthusiastically nominates these six persons for reelection as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

[The assembly approved Item 03-23. See pp. 56, 78.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) confirm the election of the following persons as members of the Board of the Presbyterian Historical Society:

Class of 2012
Bergstrom, Betty—(Chicago, Illinois)—1st term—(2-year term)

Class of 2013
Ellis, Margaret Hoben (New York, New York)—2nd term
Tobyn, Myra L. (New York, New York)—2nd term
Mecray, Paul (Radnor, Pennsylvania)—1st term
Leonard, William L. (Philadelphia, Pennsylvania)—1st term
Roberts, Raymond R. (Westfield, New Jersey)—1st term
Satterfield, Shirley (Princeton, New Jersey)—1st term

Class of 2014
Grace, Steve (Midland, Michigan)—1st term
Chai, Kew (Skoakie, Illinois)—1st term
Asher, John (Philadelphia, Pennsylvania)—1st term
Easley, Charles (Atlanta, Georgia)—1st term (elected for a three-year term beginning in 2011)
Bradford, Robert (Charlotte, North Carolina)—1st term
Bergsteinsson, Joan (Radnor, Pennsylvania)—1st term

[The assembly approved Item 03-24 with amendment. See pp. 56, 78.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the PC(USA) amend the “Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies,” as found in “Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly” in the Manual of the General Assembly, as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“STANDARDS FOR REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY AGENCIES

“PURPOSE

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to the understanding that ‘the unity of the Church is a gift of its Lord and finds expression in its faithfulness to the mission to which Christ calls it’ (G-4.0201). The basic principles of Presbyterian polity include the responsibility of a higher governing body to review those ministries for which it is accountable (G-4.0301f). The purpose of the review process is to provide an equitable evaluation of the ministry of the agencies of the General Assembly. The review will focus on the quality of the relationship of the agencies’ ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the agencies’ collaborative efforts with other agencies, and the quality of the agencies’ program based on the standards for review.”
"THE ROLE OF THE COMMITTEE"

"The General Assembly Nominating Committee will nominate to each meeting of the General Assembly for election two committees and its moderators for each committee to review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly based on a six-year schedule. The agency review committee's responsibility is to provide an objective report to the General Assembly as to the agency's compliance to the standards of review and the quality and acceptability of the agency's self-study. The agency review committee may provide advice on areas of program improvement. The agency review committee's role will be to examine the agency's church relations, its policies and practice, history of collaboration with other agencies, and its program effectiveness. The agency review committee will review the agency's self-study report and other documents. It will visit the agency and talk personally with leadership staff and the governing board or committee. The agency review committee is to conduct its work within the context of the General Assembly's concern for the strong vital connections within the agencies of the General Assembly and the whole church. The governing board of the agency is responsible for the internal management of the agency and its operational details. The agency review committee's role is to strengthen the bonds of the agencies to the General Assembly, the essential mission of the church, and the basic accountability of the governing board and executive leadership of the agency to the PC(USA). The agency review committee should celebrate with the whole church the successful ministries of the agency it is reviewing, and to consult with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding representation of employees. The agency review committee will report to the General Assembly through the General Assembly committee to which the agency annually reports.

"STAFFING AND FUNDING"

"The Office of the General Assembly will provide adequate staffing for the agency review committee to complete its task. Staffing will be provided by the General Assembly Mission Council in the year the Office of the General Assembly is reviewed. The funding for the review process will be paid from per capita income.

"MANUAL"

"A manual will be maintained to provide guidance in the review process to the agency review committee and the agencies. The manual will contain information on the process for self-study by the agency, the visit with the agency, and the report format for the agency review committee. The format will outline the opportunities for dialogue between the agency review committee and the agency in preparation of the final report. The manual will provide guidance for the whole agency review committee on its organization and the role of individual members in the review process.

"STANDARDS"

"A. Church Relatedness"

"1. Each agency was created by the church, and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. The agency is expected to have the expertise necessary to accomplish the work it has been assigned, and is also expected to exhibit a constant awareness of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

"2. The basic work, programs, and services of the agency should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The agency should also exhibit leadership in guiding the church in its engagement with the work and resources in which the agency acts as the church's expert.

"3. The agency should exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity.

"4. When appropriate, printed materials of the agency should clearly identify the agency as a part of the PC(USA).

"5. The agency honors the policy statements of the General Assembly of the PC(USA) and the Constitution.

"6. The agency includes in its administrative officers, and in its governing board in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, persons who understand and respect the relationship with the PC(USA).

"7. The agency provides responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

"B. Policies and Practice Program Effectiveness"

"1. The agency understands that its responsibility is to manage its assets for the good of the whole of the PC(USA)."
“2. The governing board is properly constituted, clearly identified, and fully conversant with (a) the mission of the agency, (b) the current overall condition of the agency, (c) its specific responsibilities as directors, (d) the legal relationship of the agency to the church, and (e) its relationship to the president or chief officer.

“3. The agency exhibits full compliance with all appropriate external regulatory and accrediting agencies, including consultation and review with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding principles of participation and representation in the employment of personnel, and conformity with ‘A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action’ or subsequent guidelines.

“4. An annual audit of the financial affairs of the agency is conducted by qualified and disinterested parties.

“5. The governing board of the agency has a process for the selection and review of its chief officer or president.

“6. The president or chief officer and the governing board have policies and procedures by which they assure that the agency staff hold the necessary and appropriate skills, licenses, and experience to make it reasonable to anticipate that they can perform their work satisfactorily and a functioning policy with expectations of staff development.

“6. The agency has in place and operating a long-range and short-range planning process and a process for measuring its delivery of services and of monitoring the effectiveness of those services with its constituencies.

“C. Program Effectiveness

“1. The programs and services of the agency are consistent with its assembly mandate.

“2. The agency has a regular process for measuring its delivery of services and monitoring the effectiveness of those services with its constituencies.

“3. The president or chief officer and the governing board have policies and procedures by which they assure that the agency staff hold the necessary and appropriate skills, licenses, and experience to make it reasonable to anticipate that they can perform their work satisfactorily.

“4. The agency has a functioning policy and expectations of staff development.

“5. The agency exhibits an effective strategy for producing high-quality communication with its constituencies.

“6. The agency is currently structured to face effectively the challenges of the future and demonstrates appropriate attention to current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

“C. Collaboration

“1. The agency presses beyond communication and consultation to genuine collaboration and, where appropriate and/or directed by General Assembly, shares agendas and work with other agencies toward fulfillment of shared goals.

“2. The agency maintains open and regular communication with, and provides timely and appropriate access to information to, other agencies and PC(USA) constituencies, including middle governing bodies.

“3. The agency has conducted an evaluation of the potential gains and risks associated with collaborative endeavours with other agencies whenever new programs are initiated.

“4. The agency seeks pragmatic solutions to operational challenges by relying on the assets, resources, and strengths of other agencies.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2008 Referral: Item 08-23, Recommendation 1. That CO-GA Evaluate the “Standards for Review” Before the Next Cycle of Review Commences (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 25, 728).

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-24

Comment on Item 03-24—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

In the review of agencies, the submission, for regular review and accountability, of implementation plans for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action have been missing. This is an already assigned, but often neglected function that each entity has. It makes sense to include it in the review process to assure it happens in an efficient manner.
The GACOR respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 03-24, with the following two additional amendments to the text: [Text to be added is in italic.]

1. Under the section “The Role of the Committee”:

“The General Assembly Nominating Committee will nominate to each meeting of the General Assembly for election two committees and moderators for each committee to review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly based on a six-year schedule. The agency review committee’s responsibility is to provide an objective report to the General Assembly as to the agency’s compliance to the standards of review. The agency review committee may provide advice on areas of program improvement. The agency review committee’s role will be to examine the agency’s church relations, its policies and practice, history of collaboration with other agencies, and its program effectiveness, and to consult with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding representation of employees. The agency review committee will review the agency’s self-study report and other documents...[rest of the paragraph remains the same].

“3. The agency exhibits full compliance with all appropriate external regulatory and accrediting agencies, including consultation and review with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding principles of participation and representation in the employment of personnel, and conformity with “A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action” or subsequent guidelines.”

Rationale

According to the Book of Order, G-9.0105c:

The committee on representation shall advise the governing body on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of participation and representation (G-4.0403), and in conformity with a churchwide plan for equal employment opportunity (G-13.0201b)

By amending the recommendation to include these two additions, the review standards will be brought into compliance with the current Book of Order. In light of the pattern of restructuring and its impact on these capacities, we remain concerned about the accountability of each entity with regard to these employment practices. In May 2010, there was a reduction in staff of the Human Resources department of the General Assembly Mission Council. The effects of the elimination of these positions on the organizational capacity have yet to be understood, but the Human Resources Department of the General Assembly Mission Council does provide functions to other entities. The GACOR is concerned about the effect on AA/EEO issues and how these functions will be provided. Assuring accountability by reflecting it in the review by the General Assembly, reminds all involved of their roles and responsibilities.

The GACOR wishes to direct the attention of the assembly to a similar action before the assembly, Item 11-09 proposed by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The methods suggested with regard to the cultural proficiency review are sound and may suggest a model for dealing with the consultation process with COR regarding each entity’s implementation plan and action steps in response to their constitutional responsibilities and “A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action.”

Item 03-25

Joint COGA/GAC Budget Proposals

[The assembly approved Item 03-25, Recommendation 2, with amendment. See pp. 56, 76, 78.]

2. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Mission Council approve and recommend that the 219th General Assembly (2010):

   a. approve the proposed 2011 expenditure budget totaling [$13,719,940] [$14,101,168] and a proposed 2012 expenditure budget totaling [$14,047,690] [$14,144,568];
[(1) That the Presbyterian Historical Society develop a five-year plan to reduce their annual per capita budget by 10 percent.]

b. approve that $1,428,241 be designated from the 2011 per capita budget (about half the cost of the General Assembly meeting), and be reserved for use in the year of the General Assembly meeting (2012) (see attachment B, pp. 248–49);

c. approve the proposed revised 2010 expenditure budget totaling [[$13,483,826] [$13,625,101]] (which includes half the cost of General Assembly $1,273,120 carried over from 2009).

[The assembly approved Item 03-25, Recommendation 3, with amendment. See pp. 56, 76, 78.]

3. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Mission Council approve and recommend that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve an increase in the per capita apportionment rate from $6.15 to [[$6.35] [$6.50]] per active member for 2011, and from $6.35 to [[$6.55] [$6.63]] for 2012.

Rationale

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) continue to be grateful to the whole church for its faithfulness in meeting per capita obligations (about 95 percent collection rate for 2008). We believe these funds have enabled the General Assembly to carry out its core ecclesial functions so that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can carry out its ministry in faithfulness to Scripture and the PC(USA) Constitution.

Building the per capita budgets for 2011 and 2012 was both a challenge and an opportunity, since the total revenue level is impacted by variables as diverse as stock market fluctuations, value of assets held, levels of membership loss, the ability of presbyteries to fully meet their per capita obligations, as well as the staff’s commitment to be faithful stewards in spite of less available resources.

In order to hold to a minimal increase in the per capita rate, hard choices had to be made relative to reductions in the overall budget, personnel reductions, and withholding salary increases to staff in 2010. Moreover, the OGA reduced the previously approved budget for 2010 by almost $870,000, which includes a total reduction of about $180,000 by GAMC (Total Net Reduction $608,179).

As a result, we are able to propose a per capita budget for 2011–12 that is slightly less than the total budgets previously approved for 2009–10. Consequently, we are proposing an increase of 20 cents (3.3 percent) in the per capita rate in 2011 and 20 cents (3.2 percent) in 2012. The details behind these calculations can be found on the attached sheets.

To balance the budget, we have included the planned use of reserves accumulated from prior year income in 2010, 2011, and 2012, in the amounts of $119,621, $245,619, and $483,252 respectively. Such use of prior income from available funds (in excess of the General Assembly mandated minimum reserve of 30 percent of current budget), minimizes the increase necessary to the per capita apportionment rate. We believe that such restraint in the increase of the per capita rate and the expenditure level are necessary for the well being of the church and the fiscal integrity of the per capita budget. We would encourage a similar spirit of restraint by commissioners as other proposals are considered that might have financial implications at the 219th General Assembly (2010).

[The assembly approved Item 03-25, Recommendation 4. See pp. 56, 78.]

Rationale

The allocation of designated funds are reserved for specified expenditures planned to augment the per capita budget, so that steep increases to the per capita apportionment rate may be minimized. These include the General Assembly session, Vocation resources and exams, the production and distribution of OGA publications, part of the Presbyterian Historical Society operations, revenue and expense for conducting some conferences, and GAMC task forces. The sources of these funds are mostly from independently generated revenue, including gifts and endowments. The beginning balances indicated are a result of the unused carryover from the previous year reserved for use in subsequent year (see attachment C, p. 251).

[The assembly approved Item 03-26 with amendment and with comment. See pp. 56, 79.]

[Comment: The General Assembly strongly recommends that prior to vote on this amendment, presbyteries take time to educate the presbytery on the reasons for and value of a sexual misconduct policy. Resources are available on the PC(USA) Website.]

Joint COGA/GAMC Sexual Misconduct Policy and Procedures Recommendation

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Mission Council recommend that the 219th General Assembly (2010) do the following:

1. Approve the Sexual Misconduct Policy and Procedures, as shown below, for employees and committee members of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Mission Council.

2. [Strongly] [U] [u]rg[e a]ll [employees] [employers] of governing bodies and related entities to update or establish policies, procedures, and practices related to sexual misconduct using the guidelines set out in the following Sexual Misconduct Manual, published by the Office of the General Assembly.

3. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

   [Insert a new paragraph G-9.0404e to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

   “e. All governing bodies shall adopt and implement a sexual misconduct policy.”]

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.) SEXUAL MISCONDUCT POLICY AND ITS PROCEDURES

I. Policy Statement

It is the policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (hereinafter referred to as PC(USA)) that all church members, church officers, nonmember employees, and volunteers of congregations, governing bodies, and entities of the church are to maintain the integrity of the ministerial, employment, and professional relationship at all times. Persons who engage in sexual misconduct are in violation of the principles set forth in Scripture, and also of the ministerial, pastoral, employment, and professional relationship. It is never permissible or acceptable for a church member, officer, employee, or volunteer to engage in sexual misconduct.

Distribution

Copies of this policy and its procedures shall be made available to all governing body and entity offices. It is intended as guidance for churches, middle governing bodies, and related entities and if properly implemented by them can be used by church members, church officers, employees, and volunteers. This is a policy of the General Assembly of the PC(USA), which governs and protects employees of the General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly. This policy and its procedures should be made available to persons who accuse others of misconduct, including those who are or claim to be victims of sexual misconduct and their families. Other governing bodies of the PC(USA) may use this policy as a guide to develop their own policies and procedures related to sexual misconduct.

II. Standards of Conduct

   … As [God] who called you is holy,
   be holy yourselves in all your conduct;
   … Tend the flock of God that is in your charge, …
   not under compulsion but willingly, …
   not for sordid gain but eagerly. …
   not lord it over those in your charge, but be examples to the flock.
   … You know that we who teach will be judged with greater strictness.
   1 Pet. 1:15; 5:2–3; Jas. 3:1, NRSV

The ethical conduct of all who minister in the name of Jesus Christ is of vital importance to the church because through these representatives an understanding of God and the gospel’s good news is conveyed. “Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world” (Book of Order, G-6.0106a).

The basic principles of conduct guiding this policy are as follows:
1. Sexual misconduct is a violation of the role of pastors, employees, volunteers, counselors, supervisors, teachers, and advisors of any kind who are called upon to exercise integrity, sensitivity, and caring in a trust relationship. It breaks the covenant to act in the best interests of parishioners, clients, co-workers, and students.

2. Sexual misconduct is a misuse of authority and power that breaches Christian ethical principles by misusing a trust relation to gain advantage over another for personal pleasure in an abusive, exploitative, and unjust manner. If the parishioner, student, client, or employee initiates or invites sexual content in the relationship, it is the pastor’s, counselor’s, officer’s, or supervisor’s responsibility to maintain the appropriate role and prohibit a sexual relationship.

3. Sexual misconduct takes advantage of the vulnerability of persons who are less powerful to act for their own welfare, including children. It is antithetical to the gospel call to work as God’s servant in the struggle to bring wholeness to a broken world. It violates the mandate to protect the vulnerable from harm.

Definitions

Sexual Misconduct is the comprehensive term used in this policy to include:

1. Child sexual abuse; including, but is not limited to, any contact or interaction between a child and an adult when the child is being used for the sexual stimulation of the adult person or of a third person. The behavior may or may not involve touching. Sexual behavior between a child and an adult is always considered forced whether or not consented to by the child. In the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the sexual abuse definition of a child is anyone under age eighteen.

2. Sexual abuse as defined in the Book of Order: “Sexual abuse of another person is any offense involving sexual conduct in relation to (1) any person under the age of eighteen years or anyone over the age of eighteen years without the mental capacity to consent; or (2) any person when the conduct includes force, threat, coercion, intimidation, or misuse of office or position” (Book of Order, D-10.0401c).

3. Sexual harassment; defined for this policy is as follows: unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature constitute sexual harassment when
   a. submission to such conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual’s employment, or their continued status in an institution;
   b. submission to or rejection of such conduct is used as the basis for employment decisions affecting such an individual;
   c. such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual’s work performance by creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment; or
   d. an individual is subjected to unwelcome sexual jokes, unwelcome or inappropriate touching, or display of sexual visuals that insult, degrade, and/or sexually exploit men, women, or children.

4. Rape or sexual contact by force, threat, or intimidation.

5. Sexual conduct (such as offensive, obsessive or suggestive language or behavior, unacceptable visual contact, unwelcome touching or fondling) that is injurious to the physical or emotional health of another.

6. Sexual Malfeasance; as defined by the broken trust resulting from sexual activities within a professional ministerial relationship that results in misuse of office or position arising from the professional ministerial relationship.

7. Misuse of technology; use of technology that results in sexually harassing or abusing another person, including texting or emailing suggestive messages and images to persons with whom one has a ministerial relationship. It is never appropriate to view pornography on church property. When this includes a person under the age of eighteen, it is considered child abuse. There is never an expectation of personal privacy when using technological equipment owned by a church or church entity or within the context of ministry.

III. Church Response to Allegations of Sexual Misconduct

A. Principles

In responding to allegations of sexual misconduct, members, officers, and employees of the church should seek healing and assure the protection of all persons. Where possible, the privacy of persons should be respected and confidentiality of communications should be maintained.

In responding to allegations of sexual misconduct, members, officers, and employees of the church should seek to uphold the dignity of all persons involved, including persons who are alleging harm, persons who are accused of sexual misconduct, and the families and communities of each.
The PC(USA) has jurisdiction over its members, officers, and employees such that if a member, officer, or employee is alleged to have committed an offense against Scripture or the PC(USA) Constitution, the church has the duty to inquire into the allegations and, if the allegations are proven, to correct the behavior of the member, officer, or employee and ensure the safety of others in the community. Allegations of sexual misconduct are always considered allegations of offense against Scripture or the PC(USA) Constitution that trigger the disciplinary processes of the PC(USA) set forth in the Book of Order. In the case of an active non-member who is employed or volunteers with the church, the individual will be covered by the procedures of the written personnel policies of the governing body or entity.

If the person accused of sexual misconduct is no longer a member, officer, or employee of the PC(USA), but the conduct occurred while the person was acting on behalf of the PC(USA), the church does not have jurisdiction to correct the behavior, but it does have a duty to hear the allegations of offense and to take measures to prevent future occurrences of harm. The governing body may appoint an administrative committee or commission to hear the allegations of sexual misconduct. The governing body may also take measures to prevent future occurrences of harm through education and policy.

B. Reporting Requirements

1. Reporting Sexual Misconduct

A person needing to report that a member, officer, employee, or volunteer of the PC(USA) has committed sexual misconduct is encouraged to seek guidance from a PC(USA) minister or elder regarding filing the report.

Congregation: If the person who is accused of committing sexual misconduct is a member, elder, deacon, volunteer, or employee of a congregation, the report of allegations should be made to the pastor, the clerk of session, or the chair of the personnel committee. If the accused is a member or officer of the church, the church will respond by using the procedures set forth in the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order. If the accused is a nonmember employee or volunteer, the church will respond by using procedures set forth by the session of the congregation.

Presbytery: If the person who is accused of committing sexual misconduct is a minister member, the report of allegations should be made to the stated clerk of the presbytery. If the report of allegations is placed in writing, the presbytery will respond by using the procedures set forth in the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order. If the person who is accused of committing sexual misconduct is a volunteer or nonmember employee of the presbytery, the report of allegations may be made to any of the staff or volunteers of the presbytery. The presbytery will respond by using procedures set forth by policy or bylaws of the presbytery.

Higher Governing Body or Entity of the General Assembly: If the person who is accused of committing sexual misconduct is an employee or volunteer of the higher governing body or entity, contact the governing body or entity directly for the appropriate person to receive the report of allegations. The report of allegations may be made to any person with supervising capacity. The entity will respond by using procedures set forth by policy or bylaws of the entity.

2. Receiving Reports of Sexual Misconduct

Reports of allegations of sexual misconduct will occur in a variety of ways.

Because a governing body or entity cannot control to whom the victim of sexual misconduct will speak first, it is important that officers, employees, and persons highly visible to church members and visitors understand how reports of incidents are channeled to the proper person. The allegations may come from persons who have or who do not have a formal relationship with the PC(USA) and may be made to a variety of officers or leaders within the PC(USA). It is the duty of these officers to see that any allegation of sexual misconduct is reported appropriately keeping in mind the mandatory reporting requirements for allegations of child abuse.

Reports of allegations of sexual misconduct should never be taken lightly or disregarded and allowed to circulate without concern for the integrity and reputation of the victim, the accused, and the church. Reports of allegations should be dealt with as matters of highest confidentiality, both before and after they have been submitted to appropriate authorities as outlined below.

The first person to learn of an incident of sexual misconduct should not undertake an inquiry alone or question either the victim or the accused unless the incident is divulged in the process of pastoral care, counseling, or a therapy session. If the victim is hesitant to talk to “higher authorities,” the person who has received the initial report has a special pastoral responsibility to build trust and willingness to speak with the accuser, lest the church be unable to respond because no one is able to give firsthand information.

The person receiving the initial report of allegations of sexual misconduct shall analyze the relationship of the person accused of sexual misconduct with the PC(USA) and shall make sure that the allegations of offense are filed with the governing body with jurisdiction over the person accused. This may be done by the person alleging harm or by any member of the PC(USA).
If the report is made orally, the person receiving the report of allegations should request that the person making the report of allegations place it in writing. A report of allegations of sexual misconduct in writing from a member of the PC(USA) alleging another member or officer of the PC(USA) committed an offense must be acted on according to the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order. If a clerk or stated clerk receives a report of allegations in writing from a nonmember of the PC(USA) alleging another member or officer of the PC(USA) committed sexual misconduct, the report also should be acted on according to the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order. If the person who makes the report is unwilling or unable to place it in writing, any member of the PC(USA) may make the written statement that will automatically trigger the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order.

3. Mandatory Reporting of Child Abuse
   a. Elders and Deacons

   All elders and deacons are required to report knowledge of child abuse to the civil and ecclesiastical authorities according to the Book of Order. The Book of Order requires that

   • “An elder shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge, gained in the course of service to the church, of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse” (G-6.0304b).

   • “A deacon shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge, gained in the course of service to the church, of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse” (G-6.0402b).

   b. Certified Christian Educators

   All certified Christian educators are required to report knowledge of child abuse to the civil and ecclesiastical authorities according to the Book of Order. The Book of Order requires that Certified Christian educators [and certified associate Christian educators] shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge gained in the course of service to the church, of harm, or risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication; or (2) he or she reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse (G-14.0732).

   c. Ministers

   All ministers of Word and Sacrament are required to report knowledge of child abuse to the civil and ecclesiastical authorities according to the Book of Order. The Book of Order requires that:

   “A minister of the Word and Sacrament shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of a confidential communication as defined in G-6.0204a; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse” (G-6.0204b).

   All persons covered by this policy have an additional duty to report knowledge of child sexual abuse to the employing entity, supervisor, or governing body representative. All persons should be informed of and must comply with state and local laws regarding incidents of actual or suspected child sexual abuse. These reports should be made within a reasonable time of receiving the information.

   These provisions of the Book of Order attempt to balance conflicting moral duties for officers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

   For ministers of the Word and Sacrament, the provision strives to balance the duty to protect children from future harm with the duty of a minister to hold in confidence any information revealed to them during the exercise of pastoral care in any ministry setting as defined in G-6.0204a in the Book of Order.

   For elders, deacons, and certified Christian educators, the provisions strive to balance the duty of an officer of the church to protect children from harm and any secular duty the officer may have to hold in confidence any information revealed as a result of a secular relationship such as attorney/client, counselor/client, or physician/patient. The secular duties will be a function of secular law and may vary from state to state.

C. Responding

The appropriate governing body or entity response will vary according to the relationship of the PC(USA) with the person who is accused of sexual misconduct. Church members and officers are subject to inquiry and discipline (censure and correction) under the Book of Order. Non church member employees and volunteers are subject to oversight and correction by the governing body or entity that employs them.

1. Accused Covered by Book of Order

When an allegation of offense of sexual misconduct has been received by the clerk of session or stated clerk of the presbytery, the clerk of the governing body will report to the governing body that an offense has been alleged and that the governing body will proceed according to the procedures set forth in the Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order. The governing body should appoint an investigating committee to inquire into the allegations. The investigating committee must promptly begin its inquiry into the allegations. Delay may cause further harm to the victim and/or the accused.

Governing bodies and entities must cooperate with civil authorities in an investigation of child sexual abuse or other criminal sexual misconduct. Church disciplinary proceedings cannot interfere with a criminal investigation by civil authorities and may have to be suspended until these are completed.

The session has original jurisdiction in disciplinary cases involving members, elders, and deacons of the church, each congregation having jurisdiction only over its own members.

A presbytery has original jurisdiction in disciplinary cases involving ministers of Word and Sacrament. A presbytery may dissolve a pastoral relationship when the “Word imperatively demands it” (G-11.0103o). However, a presbytery may only place a minister on administrative leave when allegations of child abuse have been received and the presbytery has followed the Book of Order procedures to conduct its risk evaluation to determine whether or not a minister member accused of child abuse should be placed on administrative leave (D-10.0106). It is recommended that the permanent judicial commission (PJC) members who will conduct this risk evaluation based upon the allegations and a hearing should also take into account secular legal advice.

When a church officer renounces jurisdiction, the clerk or stated clerk shall report the renunciation at the next meeting of the governing body and shall record the renunciation in the minutes of the governing body. The status of any pending charges may be shared with the governing body at that time.

2. Accused Not Covered by Book of Order

When a governing body or entity of the General Assembly receives an accusation of offense of sexual misconduct against a nonmember employee or volunteer, the procedural response of the governing body or entity will be guided by the written personnel policies of the governing body or entity. Usually the governing body or entity will have a personnel committee that will be responsible for the inquiry. If a governing body does not have a personnel committee, it may appoint either a committee or administrative commission for the review of the allegation.

The committee or commission that will respond to the allegation of offense of sexual misconduct will do the following:

a. Determine whether or not the allegation gives rise to a reasonable suspicion of sexual misconduct by the accused.

b. If so, gather additional information necessary to make a decision about correcting the behavior.

c. Determine any remedies, including limiting ministry, suspension, or termination necessary and advisable under the circumstances. If the accused is a member of another denomination, that denomination will be notified of the allegations and the response.

d. Inform the victim and the accused of the remedy.

e. In all cases, the personnel committee shall prepare a written report, which shall be included in the accused’s permanent personnel file. The accused shall be allowed to attach any written statements to said documents, also for permanent inclusion in the permanent file.

All procedures shall follow the guidelines set forth by the governing body, employing agency, or entity of the General Assembly.

3. Governing Body or Entity Record Keeping

The governing body or entity should keep detailed records of its actions and minutes of its deliberations and its conversations with the accuser, the accused, and other parties involved, correspondence, and copies of the reports received from committees or commissions. Such records will be kept confidential as far as possible. In Case # 208-6, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) interpreted the Rules of Discipline to say that a governing body or entity may share the contents of inquiry reports with other governing bodies or entities of the PC(USA) when necessary. The clerk of the governing body or director of the entity will maintain the records while the inquiry is in process.
A. Implementation

The General Assembly urges all governing bodies and related entities including colleges, universities, and theological institutions, to establish policies and procedures that make it a violation of the employer’s work rules to engage in sexual misconduct and that encourage reporting of sexual misconduct. Governing bodies and entities are strongly encouraged to take appropriate steps to inform members, employees, volunteers, and students of the standards of conduct and the procedures for effective response when receiving a report of sexual misconduct.

B. Liability and Insurance

A governing body or entity can be held liable for harm caused by sexual misconduct of an officer, minister, or employee based on a number of legal theories. Governing bodies and entities should take such potential liability into consideration when establishing hiring and supervisory practices.

Governing bodies and entities should regularly inform their liability insurance carriers of the activities and programs they operate or sponsor and of the duties and responsibilities of officers, employees, and volunteers. The standard insurance policy should usually be enhanced by endorsements to cover specific exposures such as camps, day-care operations, shelters, or other outreach programs.

It is also recommended that governing bodies and entities obtain an endorsement to their general liability insurance policy specifically covering sexual abuse and molestation. Such coverage may provide for legal defense expenses and judgments in civil suits brought against the governing body or entity, its officers, directors, or employees.

C. Employment Practices

1. Record Keeping

Accurate record keeping is an essential part of hiring and supervision practices of churches, middle governing bodies, and related entities. Every governing body and entity should maintain a personnel file on every employee, including ministers. The file should contain the application for employment, any employment questionnaires, background checks, references responses, and all other documents related to an employee’s employment, except records that may be required, by law, to be kept in separate files.

2. Prescreening Applicants

Governing bodies and entities are urged to establish thorough and consistent hiring practices. If an applicant is unknown to the employer, the employer should confirm the applicant’s identity by requiring photographic identification such as a driver’s license. The governing body should perform a background check, including a national criminal background check, on all applicants that may have interaction with children and youth.

Part of pre-employment screening should include specific questions related to discovering previous complaints of sexual misconduct. See Appendix B: Sample Exhibit E.

3. References

The employing governing body or entity is responsible for contacting references for prospective ministers, employees, or volunteers. A written record of conversations or correspondence with references should be kept in the minister or employee’s personnel file. (See Appendix B: Sample Exhibit B for a sample reference form.)

In dealing with ministers when transferring from one position to another, the governing body could delegate responsibility for previous employer reference checks to the synod executive, executive presbyter, or to the authorized persons who would report to the committee on ministry or committee on preparation for ministry.

The person within the governing body or entity authorized to give a reference is obligated to give truthful information regarding allegations, inquiries, and administrative or disciplinary action related to sexual misconduct of the applicant.

If false or misleading information is given by the applicant, or relevant information is withheld, the applicant should be eliminated from consideration.

Applicants should be informed of negative comments regarding sexual misconduct and shall be given an opportunity to submit additional references or to give other evidence to correct or respond to harmful information obtained from a reference.
Since the issue of sexual misconduct has become a more present reality, there is an emerging need to educate and train a wide variety of persons. Persons needing this specific education include: ministers; volunteers; officers; nonprofessional and professional staff; ministerial candidates; professionals who will be working with this issue within the denomination; members of the congregation; and governing body staff including supervisors, employees, and stated clerks.

Education for these persons and groups will be different on a group-by-group basis. A primary requirement for all persons should be common knowledge regarding professional and ministerial boundaries, the General Assembly Sexual Misconduct Policy, and their own specific governing body or entity policy.

Theological institutions should include material in their existing curriculum on sexual ethics including the appropriate use of ministerial power, the General Assembly policy and its procedures on sexual misconduct, and other resources. It is further urged that the appropriate presbytery committee(s) include training for inquirers, candidates, newly ordained pastors, and new pastors to their presbyteries regarding sexual misconduct, especially including education on their specific policy and procedures.

Much of a congregation’s education currently happens in response to an actual case of sexual misconduct. However, it is recommended that the congregation be as proactive in this area as possible offering education in a variety of settings. There are already numerous resource materials available that could be adapted to a congregation’s setting.

Employing entities need to make sure all employees are well acquainted with, understand, and abide by their policy and procedures. Employing entities should offer additional training and resources, such as: a workshop during staff meeting; lunchtime discussion group; articles and books made available; etc.

Any professional (therapists, attorneys, advocates, mediators, arbitrators) used by a governing body should have access to experts qualified in the field of sexual misconduct if they themselves are not.

Appendix A
Definitions

Accused is the term used to represent the person against whom a claim of sexual misconduct is made.

Accuser is a term used to represent the person claiming knowledge of sexual misconduct by a person covered by this policy. The accuser may or may not have been the victim of the alleged sexual misconduct. A person such as a family member, friend, or colleague may be the accuser.

Church when spelled with the initial capitalized refers to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Church when spelled with the initial in lowercase refers to local churches. The word congregation is used loosely for members and participants.

Employee is the comprehensive term used to cover individuals who are hired or called to work for the Church for salary or wages.

Entity is the term used to refer to any program or office managed by a board, committee, council, or other body whose membership is elected by a governing body.

Governing Body is a representative body composed of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament: sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly. A governing body may establish entities such as day-care centers, conference centers, camps, or homes for the aged. A governing body may have both church members and nonmembers as employees.

Inquiry is the term used in the Rules of Discipline to determine whether charges should be filed based upon allegations of an offense received by a governing body. See Book of Order, D-10.0000.

Mandated Reporter is described by some states’ laws as a person who is required to report any and all suspected incidents of child abuse, including child sexual abuse that come to their attention. State laws vary from defining “all persons having knowledge” as mandated reporters to specifying very limited lists of professions whose members are required to report.

Persons Covered by this policy includes church members, church officers, ministers, and nonmembers who are employees or volunteers of the General Assembly of the PC(USA). All other governing bodies or entities of the General Assembly are urged to create a sexual misconduct policy using the guidelines set out in this policy.

Response is the action taken by the governing body or entity when a report of sexual misconduct is received. It may include (1) inquiry into facts and circumstances, (2) possible disciplinary action (administrative or judicial or both), (3) pastoral care for victims and their families and others, and (4) pastoral care and rehabilitation for the accused and care for their families.

Secular Authorities are the governmental bodies, whether city, county, state, or federal, who are given the responsibility to investigate, criminally prosecute, and/or bring civil charges against individuals accused of sexual crimes or offenses against adults and children.

Secular Law is the body of municipal, state, and federal laws and is often referred to collectively as civil and criminal law. Prohibited behavior addressed by this policy may result in criminal and/or civil charges filed under secular law.
Victim is a person claiming to have been harmed and/or abused by a person covered under this policy.

Volunteer is the term used for those who provide services for the General Assembly of the PC(USA). Volunteers include persons elected or appointed to serve on boards, committees, and other groups. For purposes of this policy, volunteers are treated the same as employees.

Appendix B

Employment Procedures—With Forms

Each “Employing Entity” should have already established and implemented entity personnel policies that include employment procedures for the search, selection, and call of entity staff. The employment procedures should spell out the process to be followed during the election of chief administrative officers and other staff, the appointment of exempt and nonexempt staff, and the call of ministers of the Word and Sacrament, chief administrative officers, and elected staff. These employment procedures should also include candidate/applicant reference checks prior to employment. Employing entity personnel policies should contain a clearly defined grievance process, a periodic performance review process, and a section that prohibits sexual misconduct (including sexual harassment). These provisions should be applicable to all full-time, part-time, temporary, and interim staff. The personnel policies should also provide for confidential communication channels whereby staff members can voice concerns or apprehensions without fear of retribution.

Churchwide and public advertisement of vacant positions as a part of an employing entity’s search procedures to fill vacant positions is required of General Assembly entities and related bodies and is recommended as a guideline for governing bodies by the churchwide personnel policies as well as the Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment and Affirmative Action. In support of this policy and its procedures on sexual misconduct, all vacant positions of religious leadership forwarded to publications for advertisement, distributed to units of the church, as well as posted on local bulletin boards, will include the following statement: “The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is an equal opportunity employer. In addition the church has a strong policy opposing sexual harassment or abuse. References and records will be checked during the employment process.”

This statement will also be included in all information distributed through the Personnel Referral Services of the Office of Vocation.

The following forms are included in this appendix: Exhibit A, Employee Questionnaire; and Exhibit B, Confidential Employee References. These two forms will be used by General Assembly entities and institutions, and are recommended for use by all other employing units of the church. Exhibit C, a form for Implementing Policy of Sexual Misconduct, is to be used by each employing entity as it distributes its sexual misconduct policy to employees and others. Exhibit D, Report of Suspected Sexual Misconduct, is for gathering basic information to be passed along to the appropriate person or group handling sexual misconduct cases for a unit or other entity.

As required by acceptable personnel procedures, an employee handbook should be written, published, and distributed to each employee of church employing entities. All existing personnel policies and employee handbooks should be updated to include a sexual misconduct policy.

It is advisable to seek legal advice as other governing bodies, related bodies, and entities develop and publish policy and procedures on sexual misconduct using this General Assembly policy as a guide.

All forms should be checked for compliance with state laws.

Sample Exhibit D

This exhibit provides entities with a sample Report of Suspected Sexual Misconduct. It provides space for the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of victims, the accused, possible witnesses, and others involved. It also provides space for a description of the offending behavior as well as other pertinent information. This form or a revision of it should be filed with the appropriate supervisor, office, or administrator of an entity who is required to file this with the constituting authority or its response coordination team. Sample Exhibit E

Employment Questions to Ask of Potential Employees

Governing bodies and entities should ask persons seeking ministerial calls or employment in non-ordained positions questions such as:

1. Has a civil, criminal, or ecclesiastical complaint ever been sustained against you involving sexual misconduct by you?
2. Have you ever resigned or been terminated from a position for reasons relating to allegations of sexual misconduct by you?
3. If so, indicate the date, nature, and place of these allegations, and the name, address, and telephone number of your employer at that time.
4. Have you been required to receive professional treatment, physical or psychological, for reasons related to sexual misconduct to you?
5. If so, please give a short description of the treatment including the date, nature of treatment, place, and name, address, and telephone number of the treating physician or other professional.

A sample employment questionnaire is attached as Exhibit A for adaptation by governing bodies and entities. The questions included in this sample may be integrated into a standard employment questionnaire along with other necessary questions.

Appendix C

Meeting the Needs of All Involved

In cases of sexual misconduct there are needs that have to be met for the good of all persons, groups, and entities. To ensure that the governing body is ready to meet the variety of needs present, an independent response coordination team may be named. This team will not investigate the allegation or in any way function as an investigating committee for disciplining members or officers, but should confine itself to coordinating a process that will meet the specific needs of victims and their families (if any), the accused and family (if any), employing entities, congregations, and governing bodies:

A. The Needs of the Victim

The governing body, employing entity, and response coordination team should assure that adequate treatment and care are available for alleged victims of sexual misconduct and their families. Sometimes, the victim or family is so angry and alienated from the church, that offers of help may be perceived as insincere or as attempts of a cover-up. If the victim or family at first refuses, the church should continue to offer help. Above all the church should not act in a self-protective manner by ignoring the victim and their families.

The extent of the damage to the victims of sexual misconduct will vary from person to person, and is influenced by such factors as the degree or severity of abuse, the age and emotional condition of the victim, human dynamics, and the importance of one’s religious faith. The governing body, entity, and response coordination team is to assume in all cases that the victim has been wounded by the experience.

Feelings of guilt, shame, anger, mistrust, lowered self-esteem, unworthiness, and feelings of alienation from God, self, the religious community, and family are frequent injuries suffered by victims. It is important for the response coordination team to be sensitive to the victim’s pain and need for healing, and to act by making appropriate pastoral care available.

The following are some of the needs of the victim:

1. To be heard and taken seriously. From the time that the victim is first able to indicate that sexual misconduct has occurred, that person should receive immediate attention and serious consideration from all church representatives.

2. To receive pastoral and therapeutic support. The victim may require spiritual and professional assistance as a result of sexual misconduct. The response coordination team should offer to help arrange for such support from a pastor and therapist, if the victim desires. Discussions with such people would be confidential, privileged conversations.

3. To be informed about church process and progress with regard to the accusation. One member of the response coordination team should be the church contact person for the victim. Frequently, this contact person will give the victim information as to what is happening in the church as a result of the accusation.

4. To receive legal advice. The response coordination team should suggest that the victim might benefit from independent legal advice. (Legitimate claims might be more effectively pursued and flimsy or false claims discouraged.) If requested, the response coordination team should suggest ways in which independent legal advice can be obtained.

5. To be assured of an advocate of one’s own choosing. A victim may need continuing moral support from one individual who is present while the church process deals with the accusation. This advocate may be a relative, friend, or someone suggested by the response coordination team. This advocate could speak for the victim, if necessary.

   • To be assured that justice will be pursued. The victim needs to be told by the response coordination team, and shown by the processes of the church, that justice is being pursued through fact-finding, truth-telling, confrontation, and agreement that may include removal or temporary exclusion of the accused from office or adjudication of the complaint.

   • To receive healing and reconciliation. In addition to specific forms of restitution mentioned above, the victim needs to receive a sense of healing and reconciliation with all concerned—the self, the family, the church and, ideally, the accused. The response coordination team can help bring this about using the church’s processes and resources. While the above are needs of the victim, one recognizes that all of these needs may also not be met through a reasonable handling of a specific case, but may only occur over a lengthier period of time. All of these needs, however, should be taken seriously and compassionately, and the rights of the victim respected.

B. The Needs of the Accused

The governing body or entity shall offer treatment and care for the accused as well as alleged victims and families. If the accused is a minister, this is the primary responsibility of the committee on ministry (Book of Order, G-I.0501).

Feelings of guilt, shame, anger, mistrust, lowered self-esteem, depression, unworthiness, and feelings of alienation from God, self, the religious community, and family are often experienced by the accused. In addition, there may be fear of job loss, incarceration, and indignation if an allegation is false.

When a person is found not guilty of charges of sexual misconduct, it is important for the governing body or entity to see that the decision is disseminated as widely as possible within their power, unless doing so would further injure the person accused.

1. Personal Care

   Whether the allegations about the accused are eventually found to be true or not, the accused deserves to be treated with Christian kindness and respect.

   The response coordination team may suggest that the accused seek spiritual support or professional counseling. People in staff positions, such as presbytery executives or stated clerks, should not engage in personal counseling of the accused because of their potential involvement in disciplinary process.

2. Economic Security and Care for Family of Accused

   When an allegation of sexual misconduct has been made against a minister, the economic security of the accused is directly threatened, along with reputation, career, and family relationships. Again, the committee on ministry can be of assistance.

   The response coordination team may alert the committee on ministry to the possible spiritual, emotional, and financial needs of the family of the accused and recommend expert resources.
C. The Needs of a Congregation in a Context of Sexual Misconduct

The governing body, employing entity, and response coordination team should be aware of the problems a congregation or employing entity may experience following allegations of sexual misconduct by a minister, employee, or volunteer. The allegations may polarize the congregation or organization, damage morale, create serious internal problems, and even limit the trust a congregation may place in succeeding pastors. Efforts should be taken to recognize and identify the problems and heal any damage that may be done to the congregation or organization.

When there is sexual misconduct on the part of a minister, non-ordained staff, or volunteer in a particular congregation, a number of needs unique to that congregation will emerge since sexual misconduct impacts congregations in different ways. Therefore, these needs will not necessarily emerge in the same sequence in each situation. Depending on the parties involved in the sexual misconduct, some of the needs may not emerge. In any event, those managing the church’s response to the sexual misconduct will want to know that the following needs may emerge:

1. Pastoral Care

Members and staff of the congregation will need pastoral care. If it is the pastor who is involved in the sexual misconduct, care will need to be provided by another member of the ordained staff (if the church is a multiple-staff church) or by a trained interim pastor. If the pastor leaves as a result of sexual misconduct, in extreme cases a trained interim pastor or consultant in sexual misconduct may need to work with the congregation for an extended period of time.

If it is not a pastor who is involved in the sexual misconduct, then the pastor will provide the needed care for the congregation. The pastor, if not previously trained in this specialty area, will need to consult with denominational specialists who will advise him or her how to proceed and any anticipated problems.

2. Information About the Case

Members of the congregation will need opportunities both to receive and give information. If a case of sexual misconduct becomes a matter of public knowledge within a congregation and if a pastor has been found guilty of sexual misconduct, the interim pastor or consultant may hold appropriate meetings with individuals, small groups, or with the whole congregation. Such meetings should provide information about sexual misconduct in general, Presbyterian polity and our judicial process, and how others who may have been victimized may be heard and ministered to. If the offender is not the pastor, then the pastor may perform these functions. At such meetings, one may expect members to vent their feelings. An opportunity for this to happen should be provided. If this venting does not take place, then it may create serious problems for the future of the congregation, for future pastors, and for the governing body. Dynamics may differ somewhat in racial ethnic churches, but no empirical studies have yet demonstrated different dynamics.

3. Resource Persons

In light of the above needs, the following are several resource persons whose services would be valuable to a congregation in the context of sexual misconduct: a trained interim pastor, a committee on ministry representative knowledgeable in polity and the effects of sexual misconduct in the church, a consultant or therapist with knowledge and experience in dealing with sexual misconduct, an attorney who can discuss legal aspects of a case, an insurance agent who can advise the congregation about their exposure to liability or coverage.

It is the responsibility of the governing body to establish policy and its procedures governing cases of sexual misconduct in that jurisdiction. The PC(USA) policy and its procedures are intended to guide the development of governing body policy and procedures.

Item 03-27

Rationale

Standing Rule I.1.d gives instructions for rotating the place of the meetings of the General Assembly between four areas of the United States. This rotation places the 222nd General Assembly in Area A, which includes the synods of Alaska/Northwest; Pacific; Southern California and Hawaii; Rocky Mountains; and the Southwest. Possible convention cities were identified in this area and the presbyteries represented by those cities were contacted about invitations.

The Department of General Assembly Meeting Services (GAMS) then sent requests for proposals to the convention bureaus of those cities. After review, two cities provided opportunities worth further investigation: Portland and Phoenix. Both cities offered very attractive possibilities.

After site visits were made, ten criteria for evaluation were developed, including financial commitments, ease of facility use, hotel convenience, and the spiritual and emotional impact of a particular site on commissioners and advisory delegates.
The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly heard a recommendation from GAMS and is excited to recommend Portland for much that it offers. Mid-June is reputed to be one of the best times to visit the city as it explodes with roses and celebrations. The Oregon Convention Center was recently remodeled and is a leader in green technology. The convention center will meet all of the needs of the assembly for meeting space as well as exhibit hall, communal meals, and daily worship.

About half of the hotel rooms necessary for the assembly are within two short blocks of the convention center. The remaining rooms are accessible for free by a short (fifteen minute) light rail transit ride and are located in the heart of the vibrant city’s center.

The Presbytery of the Cascades has been seeking this opportunity for several years as a way of celebrating the 50th Anniversary of the Confession of 1967 which was adopted in Portland. That was also the last time Portland hosted a meeting of the General Assembly.

Overall, we believe that Portland and the Presbytery of the Cascades offer the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) an outstanding location for holding a General Assembly and that commissioners, advisory delegates, staff, and visitors will be excited to be in Portland.

Item 03-28

Regarding Per Capita—From Manager of Budgets, Office of the General Assembly.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-9.0404d:

A presbytery is required to remit to the General Assembly and the synod per capita funds remitted by the session of member churches for per capita, even if the presbytery lacks sufficient funds to pay its own expenses.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the budget manager, Office of the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Question Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

   Is a presbytery permitted to withhold per capita funds, remitted by the session of member churches for per capita obligations, to pay presbytery expenses when the presbytery lacks sufficient funds, instead of forwarding to GA?

2. Findings

   The General Assembly has previously interpreted G-9.0404d to place a responsibility on presbyteries “to remit per capita allocations to synod and General Assembly, even though a congregation does not pay the per capita allocated to it by the presbytery” (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 107). Further, even if one or more sessions in the presbytery refuse to pay their portion of the per capita apportionment, the presbytery has the responsibility to pay the full amount irrespective to the specific collection from churches, as long as funds are available within the presbytery (Ibid.). Given this responsibility to pay even uncollected per capita, a presbytery can have no right not to pay the appropriate portion of the funds remitted by a session to pay for its per capita obligations to the higher governing bodies of the church to the General Assembly and synod.

   This conclusion is confirmed by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission’s decision in Von Norman v. Synod of California:

   Whether or not a court would call [an] arrangement a trust is quite unimportant to our conclusion. It is in any case an unmistakable direction which it would be morally unconscionable not to follow. After all, this is an ecclesiastical court. Therefore, quite apart from any question of civil law, we are not free to disregard the clearly expressed wishes of a donor (Minutes, PCUSA 1954, Part I, p. 170).

   On the other hand, if a session remits per capita to a presbytery but withholds the per capita apportionment directed by the General Assembly or synod, the presbytery is not obligated to remit the General Assembly and/or synod per capita apportionment unless funds are available to the presbytery to do so. If a session makes a partial payment of per capita to a presbytery, the presbytery may remit on a pro rata basis the portions of that payment to General Assembly and synod if funds are not available to the presbytery to remit the full amount to the General Assembly and synod.
The Advisory Committee on the Constitution therefore recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the authoritative interpretation of G-9.0404d set forth above to clarify that a presbytery may not withhold from the General Assembly or synod per capita funds remitted by the session of member churches for per capita obligations, even for the purposes of satisfying its other budgetary needs.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 03-28 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorize the Office of the General Assembly to make the necessary changes to the Session Annual Statistics Report (SASR) form as may be needed to conform with the revised Form of Government, should the revised Form of Government be approved by the assembly and adopted by a majority of the presbyteries, and that the OGA report such changes to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Rationale

The Session Annual Statistics Report (SASR) has fields based on Book of Order requirements. The membership section of the report deals with the rolls churches are required to maintain and the reporting of those rolls to their presbytery. The revised Form of Government would necessitate changes to the SASR. The revised form would be used to collect the 2011 information, which would be collected in the spring of 2012.

Item 03-30

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-30. See pp. 57, 80.]

Commissioners Resolution. On Theological Diversity in General Assembly Nominations.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) instructs:

1. The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) to add to its nomination form, beginning in 2010, questions (both multiple choice and narrative) specifically designed to indicate the theological position of its nominees, questions that
   a. provide the opportunity for potential nominees to self-identify their theological positions;
   b. allow the GANC to evaluate those theological positions for consistency within the Reformed Tradition;
   c. provide a means for the GANC to gather the necessary information to balance every slate of nominees to permanent entities of the General Assembly in order to comply with the requirements of G-4.0403 regarding theological diversity; and
   d. distinguish the theological positions of nominees to the end that PC(USA) entities may more closely reflect the demographics of the denomination as a whole, as indicated in the most recent Presbyterian Panel polling statistics.

2. The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) to
   a. survey current and newly elected members of advisory and advocacy committees of the General Assembly regarding their theological positions in order to determine that they are consistent with the Reformed Tradition, and in order to determine whether the existing committees are theologically balanced according to G-4.0403;
   b. make recommendations to the GANC regarding needed balance for the next cycle of nominations relative to theological diversity;
   c. report their findings to the 220th General Assembly (2012); and
   d. continue to review future nominations of the GANC for compliance with the intentions of G-4.0403 regarding theological diversity.

3. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) to amend its Manual of Operations to include all the diversity provisions represented in G-4.0403, including a diversity of “theological positions consistent with the Reformed Tradition.”
1. Our present system of nominations lacks a ready means to populate permanent committees and elected positions in our denomination with persons whose theological positions accurately reflect the spectrum of beliefs within the denomination as a whole. As a result, true theological diversity is sorely lacking in many places, especially the diversity of “theological positions consistent with the Reformed Tradition,” that is mandated in the Form of Government (G-4.0403).

2. The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the Report on the Review of the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), which included the following recommendation:

   Recognizing that G-4.0403 encourages full participation of persons of diverse theological perspectives, and that the ACWC committee membership requirements, according to the ACWC Manual of Operations, do not specifically require theological diversity, we recommend that the desirability of theological diversity in the membership composition of the ACWC be referred to the GANC for report back to the 218th General Assembly (2007). (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 1164). [Note: at the time the report was written, biennial assemblies had not been ratified.]

In reporting its response to that referral to the 218th General Assembly (2008), the GANC affirmed its commitment to the diversity represented in G-4.0403, but stated that of the constitutional categories of inclusiveness, “different theological positions consistent with the Reformed traditions” is the most difficult to determine. The GANC relies upon a careful reading of applications and appraisal forms to assess theological convictions and commitments. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 119).

In effect, the GANC report expresses the committee’s struggle to perform the task of theological evaluation that was asked of it, which helps explain the present theological imbalance in various entities. This commissioners’ resolution asks the 219th General Assembly (2010) to provide a means by which to rectify this deficiency.

   It should also be noted that the General Assembly Committee on Representation has an affirmative obligation to monitor diversity in support of the GANC. The function of GACOR is “to advise the governing bodies … in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church” (Book of Order, G-9.0105b).

3. An indication of one committee’s current lack of theological balance is the Advice and Counsel of the ACWC to the Assembly Committee on Civil Union and Marriage Issues relative to Item 12-07. In their statement they say:

   The practice of excluding people who are gay and lesbian from marriage has its roots in the persistence of patriarchal standards for the lives of women and men. The notion that men and maleness is superior dictates that men and women behave in particular ways that abide by the rules their sex dictates. For this reason, same-gender loving women and men are perceived as a direct threat to the norms that patriarchy lays out, as they, in their loving, challenge the models of prescribed masculinity and femininity that patriarchy determines. Gay men are a threat as they are perceived as “too feminine,” and lesbian women are perceived as “too masculine.”

   In withholding the right to marry from same-gender loving people, the church is upholding this patriarchal standard for humanity. As a group committed to standing against patriarchy and its effects within the world and the church, ACWC advocates that same-gender loving women and men be allowed to participate in the commitment of marriage. The ACWC draws particular attention to the vulnerability of lesbian women in this exclusion, as these particular members of the body of Christ find themselves excluded and marginalized both for their gender identity and sexual orientation.

   Such a statement, which departs radically from the historical theology and practice of the PC(USA), could not come from a committee that is theologically balanced. The ideology of radical feminism expressed by these comments is a reflection more of secular culture than a theology consistent with the historic Reformed Tradition.

4. The GANC failed to answer the basic question raised by the review report on whether theological diversity is desirable. Instead, it said that it would monitor whether or not that diversity is happening, yet it seems to find itself ill-equipped to do even that task adequately. The provisions of this commissioners’ resolution would equip the GANC to finally accomplish the balancing task recommended by the review report and mandated by the Constitution of our church.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-30

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-30—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises that Item 03-30 be disapproved for the following reasons:

1. The measures suggested for labeling theological positions are both flawed and represent an approach to theological testing that has been repeatedly declined by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Five times in the twentieth century, the idea of fixing a specific set of “essentials” has been declined. The other measure, self-definition on Presbyterian Panel surveys, suggests much inconsistency and generality in positions taken.
2. The use of theological litmus tests also makes rigid divisions in the church weakening the unity-in-diversity and diminishes valuable space for personal difference that all bodies and councils of the church should have in their membership. Litmus tests tend to lock people into theological positions and do not allow for personal growth and change.

3. The General Assembly Nominating Committee is not a theological examination committee.

4. The criteria for nominations for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the advocacy committees focus on areas of ministry concern and have included “evangelicals,” “mainliners,” and many who do not self-describe other than as followers of Jesus Christ. Membership in these committees overlaps other committees and councils also, so that to accept the categories of this commissioners’ resolution would be to invite a spreading process of labeling.

5. The surveys of the Presbyterian Panel are blunt instruments asking people to self-identify with generalized and undefined terms, that is terms that do not have specific meaning for all people.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-30

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-30—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Item 03-30 be disapproved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) is a diverse committee whose membership consists of

- two clergy women,
- one woman church lay employee,
- the Presbyterian Women’s/Churchwide Coordinating Team’s (CCT) vice moderator for Peace and Justice, elected by the CCT,
- seven at-large members, chosen to balance the committee geographically, racially, and ethnically, and with consideration to age and expertise, and
- one General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) member who is elected by the GAMC and serves as a liaison between GAMC and ACWC.

- At least four of the twelve members must be racial ethnic women, and at least two, but not more than three of the twelve must be men.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) is ultimately responsible for accepting nominations for women and men to serve on ACWC and presenting names to the General Assembly for election.

The ACWC has historically and consistently been composed of people with a variety of theological positions, but works together to come to consensus in accomplishing its call to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the PC(USA) and around the world.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-30

Comment on Item 03-30—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

Item 03-30 raises several issues of concern.

Historically the ordaining body determines the theological fitness for office, or adherence to the Reformed tradition. Item 03-30 asks the GACOR to provide an additional assessment for over 250 persons serving on entities nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC).

Item 03-30 seeks theological balance (assessed and reported, then included in advice to GANC) and that nominees “reflect the demographics of the denomination as a whole, as indicated in the most recent Presbyterian Panel polling statistics.” These requests seem to be in conflict. The Panel does not necessarily ask questions that could evaluate adherence to the Reformed tradition. An additional Panel report would have financial implications and need significant development efforts to achieve the measurement desired.

There are bodies, for which the nominating committee recommends nominees, that may include non-Presbyterians. This item does not allow for exceptions. Does this item restrict the nominating committee to only persons with theological perspectives consistent with the Reformed family? This would conflict with those entities’ make-up.
The GA Committee on Representation consults regularly with the GA Nominating Committee regarding the diversity of the pools of candidates and on selected slates. The report of the representational statistics appears in the nominating committee’s report of the slate of nominees and not currently in a report from the GA Committee on Representation. GACOR advises the GANC, but does not alter their work.

According to the GA Nominating Committee’s website, there are 290 positions they provide nominations for, with an average of seventy-nine positions filled each year. The pool of candidates is between three and four hundred persons at any one time.

Diversity of theological perspectives is already sought in the pools of candidates. It is achieved by the GA Nominating Committee evaluating the narrative responses on the applications and in conversations with candidates.

Surveying the persons currently serving may be accomplished electronically, but the analysis will have financial implications. The means to survey all persons in the pool of candidates may also have privacy implications and would need to be evaluated. Evaluation of the slate after selection would not provide an opportunity to alter the slate.

Item 03-31

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Ministries Honored at General Assemblies.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) recommends the following guidance for future local arrangements committees:

That a broad range of ministers and others serving in harm’s way be considered for particular recognition during opening worship services of the General Assembly, such as those working with victims of domestic violence, prison and hospital chaplains, and those who serve in nonviolent accompaniment programs in dangerous circumstances.

Rationale

Many chaplains serve the church in harm’s way and difficult contexts, yet only military chaplains have received special recognition at opening worship at General Assembly. If military chaplains continue to receive special recognition for their service at the opening worship of the General Assembly, then a broader representative group of pastors and chaplains who serve the church in harm’s way and in very challenging contexts would appear to deserve equal recognition from our denomination in opening worship. In addition to those ministries suggested as examples, local arrangements committees may know of particular ministries in their areas that include significant risks and sacrifices for the Gospel, possibly including those in partner relationships.

Item 03-Info

A. Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008) Report

Then the LORD said to Abraham, “Why did Sarah laugh and say, ‘Will I really have a child, now that I am old?’ Is anything too hard for the LORD? I will return to you at the appointed time next year and Sarah will have a son.” Genesis 18:13–14 (TNIV, © 2001, 2005 by Biblica)

It is hard to believe how quickly the past two years have flown by. As I reflect back on the past twenty-four months, I am both humbled and inspired by the faithfulness, passion, and vigor with which our denomination is seeking to be faithful to God’s call on our collective lives. As this journey began, both Byron and I understood that we would have a unique vantage point from which we would experience the church, but until one travels this journey it is hard to imagine.

With over 150 events attended between Byron and myself over these past two years, there are too many amazing communities to mention them all. Still, here is a sampling of the breadth and depth of the communities that inspired me as I attended events and gatherings as the Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2010):

- Presbyteries that are looking at creative ways to move into the future: the South Carolina presbyteries, New Castle, Los Ranchos, Carlisle and others.

• All those engaged in the ministry with and for college-aged and young adults. Specifically, Montreat Collegiate Conference, Atlanta Area Campus ministries, Warren Wilson College, Young Adult Ministries Jam, National Network of Presbyterian College Women, and numerous campus pastors and chaplains.

• For congregations striving to be church faithfully in their communities: The Phoenix Project, Cleveland, Ohio; Steele Creek Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, North Carolina; First Presbyterian Church, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa; Pullman Presbyterian Church, Chicago, Illinois; Calvary Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, California; and First Presbyterian Church, Fenton, Michigan.

• For mission co-workers, young adult volunteers, military chaplains, church educators, seminary students, commissioned lay pastors, General Assembly Mission Council staff, and those working with immigrant communities.

• For our brothers and sisters around the world, especially those who showed some hospitality to the office: the Presbyterian Church in Taiwan, the Ecumenical Council in Hong Kong, the United Church of Christ in the Philippines, and the Episcopal Church of Haiti.

• For those who have engaged with the Office of Moderator through such social media platforms at Twitter, Facebook, Skype, and more. It is a new day indeed.

From this brief sampling, it is not difficult to see that God is poking and prodding us to trust that there is something new being birthed in the world. It is my hope that we will embrace that calling no matter how frightening and unbelievable it may be. After all, this is where we may best discover who God intends us to be.

I also need to thank the many people who have supported the Moderator’s office these past two years in more ways that can be measured and acknowledged especially the Office of the General Assembly, the Moderator’s assistants, and all who have held Byron and I in prayer. And finally, thanks to my family and communities of support, especially my wife, Robin, and three daughters: Evelyn, Abby, and Analise; and the Mission Bay Community Church in San Francisco, California.

B. Vice-Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008) Report

“I hereby command you: Be strong and courageous; do not be frightened or dismayed, for the LORD your God is with you wherever you go.” Josh. 1:9

I am very thankful and humbled for the privilege of serving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as the Vice-Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008). Undoubtedly it has been an excellent experience witnessing the vast breadth and depth of ministry and mission that God’s people are engaged in their local communities. Below is a small sampling of my experiences the past two years:

• Interpreting General Assembly actions for various congregations in numerous states.

• Preaching Young Adult Sunday services at New Life Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Georgia and being the keynote speaker at the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta’s Symposium on Youth and Young Adults.

• Leading Bible study and spending time with young adults during the orientation for the PC(USA) National Young Adult Volunteers at Ghost Ranch Conference Center in Abiquiu, New Mexico.

• Living with coffee farmers and picking coffee beans in the rain in the hills of Buaco, Nicaragua as a member of the Presbyterian Hunger Program/Equal Exchange delegation trip.

• Meeting with students of the Presbyterian Campus Ministries at East Carolina University (Greenville, North Carolina) and Maryville College (Maryville, Tennessee).

• Discussing what it means to be Reformed as a member of the Jewish-Presbyterian Consultation at Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, New Jersey.

• Attending the very first gatherings of the Presbyterian Youth Workers Association (PYWA) conference in New Orleans, Louisiana and the Big Tent event in Atlanta, Georgia.

• Co-leading a workshop entitled “The Pastor as Public Figure” at the Lilly Endowment/Fund for Theological Education (FTE) Transition into Ministry Conference in Indianapolis, Indiana.

• Having the opportunity to see and hear about the Riverside Church, a new church development in the Presbytery of Detroit (Michigan).

• Witnessing the ministry and mission of our Presbyterian brothers and sisters in Colombia, Venezuela, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo.
• Visiting and speaking at the Women’s Empowerment Initiative of the Presbytery of Philadelphia (Pennsylvania).

In addition, I have had the opportunity to communicate to the church-at-large through writing monthly church-wide letters, submissions for the Mission Yearbook for Prayer & Study; the worship resource for the 2009 Peacemaking Offering, and many others.

Along the way I have met wonderful people who were very gracious and hospitable. They have a love of the church and want to see it grow and prosper in faith as well as mission and church growth. There are also many people who are in continual discernment, listening to God’s direction whether or not to stay in this denomination.

Most of all I have been connected to a community of people that you do not see—these are people who for one reason or another are not a part of a worshipping community but keep a connection to the church through virtual means (Facebook, Twitter, blogging, etc.). I have been richly blessed being in conversation with a variety of people as we seek to understand where we are and whose we are as the Body of Christ in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

As I come to the end of my term, I want to thank my wife, Regina Wade, my son Andrew, and the congregation I serve, Davie Street Presbyterian Church, for their prayers, patience, and support over my seventy-two trips, 213 travel days over the last two years. I am indebted to the many people who have open their doors and hearts, providing excellent hospitality and great conversation and allowing me to be a part of their lives. I am thankful to the leaders, staff, and members of the Office of the General Assembly and General Assembly Mission Council. Last, but not least, I want to thank two people in particular: the Rev. Abigail King Kaiser, the assistant to the Moderator/Vice-Moderator for her tireless work arranging flights and itineraries; and my friend for the last twenty years, Moderator Bruce Reyes Chow for asking me to share in this incredible journey.

Lastly, many of you may be aware that our society and world are in a state of continual change from many angles (socially, technologically, economically, and theologically) that are also affecting the church. We have many challenges before us as we try to live out being disciples of Jesus Christ in today’s world. However, I do believe that God is preparing us to cross over into a new land as in the example of Joshua. Whatever happens in the future, I hope that we will take God’s word to heart to be strong and courageous and not be afraid. God will be with us wherever we go as members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

C. General Assembly Per Capita Payments by Presbytery

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is grateful to the presbyteries for their continued level of faithfulness in the payment of per capita apportionments. During the year 2007 the percentage of total per capita paid to the General Assembly was about 95.5 percent, and during 2008, 95.0 percent. Improvement of the level of giving is encouraged in the current and future years.

“Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301).

Full participation in per capita giving preserves the connectional nature of our Presbyterian system and provides a strong witness to the faithfulness of our covenantal community as believers of the Reformed Theology, based on the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The following pages contain a statement of all per capita payments to the General Assembly, for the last five years (2004–2008) by presbytery, indicating the total annual per capita apportionment, the amount paid, and the unpaid balance. The total unpaid per capita for 2009 (as of April 30, 2010) stands at about $952,000. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) will continue to receive further payments for 2009 from presbyteries during the year 2010, which will hopefully reduce the level of unpaid per capita to be closer to last year’s level.

We are grateful that the vast majority of our congregations continue to be faithful and support our denomination by participating in per-capita giving, even when they may have disagreements with our governing bodies. Each member’s share of these costs for the year (2010) is $6.15.

For charts showing per capita payments by synods and presbyteries for the past five years, see pp. 252–56.

Using the Following Assumptions:

- Projected Rev and Exp for 2009 and beyond
- Annual revenue remains the same as in 2008.
- Projected revenue is based on the membership reported in the current year that is 2009 appointment revenue is based on membership reported at the end of 2007.

2011 and 2012 assume a membership reduction of 50,000 each year.

Opportunities
- Expenditures less than budgeted
- Income in membership is less than expected

Issues
- Actual membership declines more than projected
- Actual expenditures exceed budgeted expenses
- Church and economic related issues impacting revenue & investment values
- General Assembly financial implications

Item 04-01

On Amending G-12.0100 and D-5.0101 Regarding Synod Function—From the Synod of the Rocky Mountains.

The Synod of the Rocky Mountains overturs the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

[The assembly approved Item 04-01, Recommendations 1.–2. with amendment. See pp. 28–29.]

1. Shall a new section, G-12.0103, be added to the Form of Government to read as follows:

   “A synod may decide, with the approval of a two-thirds majority of its presbyteries, to reduce its function. In no case shall synod function be less than the provision of judicial process and administrative review of the work of the presbyteries. Such a synod shall meet at least every two years for the purposes of setting budget, electing members to its permanent judicial commission, and admitting to record the actions of its permanent judicial commission and administrative commissions. Presbyteries of such a synod shall assume for themselves, by mutual agreement, such other synod functions as may be deemed necessary by the presbyteries for the fulfillment of their missions.”

2. Shall a new section, G-12.0104, be added to the Form of Government to read as follows:

   “Two or more synods sharing common boundaries, with the approval of a two-thirds majority of the presbyteries in each of the synods, may share administrative services and form a shared permanent judicial commission, with the membership of the commission being proportional to the number of presbyteries within each participating synod. Each synod shall pay the costs for processing a judicial case arising within its bounds.”

3. That the following phrase “and form a shared permanent judicial commission, with the membership of the commission being proportional to the number of presbyteries within each participating synod. Each synod shall pay the costs for processing a judicial case arising within its bounds” be referred to the Office of the General Assembly for revision and report back with recommendation to the 220th General Assembly (2012).]

   “The General Assembly, each synod or cooperating synods (G-12.0104), and each presbytery shall elect a permanent judicial commission from the ministers and elders subject to its jurisdiction. Each commission shall be composed of ministers and elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible. When the commission consists of an odd number of members, the additional member may be either a minister or an elder. The General Assembly commission shall be composed of one member from each of its constituent synods. The synod commission shall be composed of no fewer than eleven members distributed equally, insofar as possible, among the constituent presbyteries. In those synods with fewer than eleven presbyteries, each presbytery shall have at least one member. When two or more synods form a shared permanent judicial commission, the commission shall be composed of no fewer than twelve members, with each synod electing members proportional to the number of the presbyteries in each synod. One of the stated clerks of the synods (ordinarily the stated clerk of the synod in which the case arises, but one not having a conflict of interest) shall process a case filed with the synod. The presbytery commission shall be composed of no fewer than seven members, with no more than one of its elder members from any one of its constituent churches. Two of the members of the presbytery commission shall be designated to review any petition for review of the procedures of the investigating committee while the investigation in a disciplinary case is in process (D-10.0204) and to review any petition for review of the decision not to file charges (D-10.0303). These two members shall not take part in any subsequent trial. A session shall refer either form of petition to the presbytery commission.”

Rationale

In the various conversations that have occurred across the church during the consideration of various drafts proposing revision of the Form of Government, the function of synods has been a recurring topic. While one option under consideration was the elimination of synods as one of the governing bodies or councils of the church, the practical solution seems to be to allow each synod to meet the needs of its region.

It seems clear that emerging practice has led to sixteen very different operating styles in the current synods. With synods having presbyteries in number from three to twenty-two, the current extensive list of functions for synods is unlikely to fit more than a few of the synods well.

The wording in the first requested change (new section G-12.0103) is taken directly from the Draft for Study (October 2008) produced by the current Form of Government Task Force, with a small addition. Whether or not the FOG project is approved by the 219th General Assembly (2010) and a majority of presbyteries, it will be helpful to have the language about reduced function in Chapter XII of the Form of Government.

The second requested change (new section G-12.0104) follows the logic proposed by the FOG Task Force. If it is reasonable for the presbyteries within a synod to decide cooperatively which functions to assume, two or more synods can also decide cooperatively (with the consent of their presbyteries) which administrative or judicial functions to share. The other changes are proposed so that the Rules of Discipline are consistent with the language proposed for Chapter XII of the Form of Government.

Action was taken by the Synod Assembly of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains in an annual assembly, meeting in Salt Lake City, Utah, April 23–25, 2009.

Concurrence to Item 04-01 from the Presbytery of Eastminster and the Synod of Mid-America.

Concurrence to Item 04-01 from the Presbytery of Muskingum Valley (with Additional Rationale).

The overture from the Presbytery of Rocky Mountains recognizes the intrinsic worth of synods as a middle governing body. Whether we like it or not, our system was designed more for effectiveness than for efficiency. This overture offers a model that is flexible and that allows synods to work, either individually or cooperatively, to find models that serve best the congregations and the larger church in their particular areas. It is permissive rather than restrictive in a manner that is consistent with our Presbyterian tradition of finding the middle way between purely hierarchical and purely congregational models.
And it allows for broad visioning in the role for synod while preserving the core functions of accountability and review.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-01

Advice on Item 04-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to refer Item 04-01 to a task force, special committee, or commission to study it, develop specific proposals for implementation and report back to the General Assembly.

The Advisory Committee advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that this item raises issues that it should consider (see Rationale).

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution considered the proposal of the Task Force on the Form of Government in G-3.0404 that “A synod may decide … to reduce its function” (Proposed Form of Government, G-3.0404). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution found that:

The proposed Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and Form of Government are coherent from a constitutional perspective to function as a replacement for the existing Form of Government.

The proposal in this overture for synods with reduced function is virtually identical to the provision in the proposed Form of Government. As a distinct proposal for inserting a new section G-12.0303, this language is clear and coherent from a constitutional perspective, and maintains appropriate constitutional limitations on the reduction of function, if the General Assembly wishes to propose an amendment that would allow synods to reduce their functions.

The part of the overture that would allow contiguous synods to share administrative services also does not raise constitutional issues.

However, the proposal to insert a new section G-12.0304 goes further than the proposal of the Task Force on the Form of Government.

The provision for a shared permanent judicial commission would not mandate that any two synods must agree to share a permanent judicial commission. However the fact that two-thirds of the presbyteries of each synod must agree in order to form such a shared permanent judicial commission would mean that it is conceivable that parties in matters before the joint commission would be subject to the judgment of a commission composed in part of persons not under the jurisdiction of their own synod.

If two synods wished to share a permanent judicial commission, they would need to have negotiations about the total size of the commission, the corresponding proportionate representation on the commission, and the election process for the commission. It is difficult to conceive of an election process that would be fair to any presbytery that opposed the synods’ forming a shared permanent judicial commission.

Under our current system of permanent judicial commissions, appeals from a decision of a presbytery permanent judicial commission are heard by a synod permanent judicial commission composed of ministers and elders from the same synod. If two contiguous synods agree to share a permanent judicial commission, such an appeal could be heard at a significantly greater distance, by a commission composed of individuals who also travelled significantly greater distances.

One of the possible benefits of synods sharing a larger permanent judicial commission would be that the volunteers who serve on the commission would be more likely to gain experience and produce a better work-product.

One of the possible risks of sharing a joint permanent judicial commission would be that the case load of the commission might not originate proportionately from within the two synods.

There are other constitutional issues raised in the part of the overture that would allow synods to share a permanent judicial commission. A permanent judicial commission is a commission within the meaning of G-9.0502, which says:

A commission is empowered to consider and conclude matters referred to it by a governing body. The appointing body shall state specifically the scope of power given to a commission. A commission shall keep a full record of its proceedings, which shall be submitted to its governing body to be incorporated in its minutes and to be regarded as the actions of the governing body itself. (Book of Order, G-9.0502).

This definition is written in language that assumes that any commission is appointed by and reports to a single governing body.

If the General Assembly determines that it would be appropriate to amend the Form of Government and the Rules of Discipline to allow certain synods to share a permanent judicial commission, the proposed addition of G-12.0304 and the proposed amendment to D-5.0101 do not identify all of the amendments necessary to accomplish the desired goal. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that further amendments to G-9.0502 would be required as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“A commission is empowered to consider and conclude matters referred to it by a governing body or bodies. The appointing body or bodies shall state specifically the scope of power given to a commission. A commission shall keep a full record of its proceedings, which shall be submitted to its governing body or bodies to be incorporated in its/their minutes and to be regarded as the actions of the governing body or bodies itself/themselves.”

Section G-9.0503b would also need to be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The functions of a judicial commission are to consider and decide a case of process for the governing body or bodies according to the Rules of Discipline. (See D-5.0000 on Permanent Judicial Commissions.)”

---

Item 04-02

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-02 with comment. See p. 28.]

[Comment: The commissioners are referred to the action taken on Item 04-06.]

On Amending the Book of Order by Deleting Chapter 12 to Eliminate the Middle Governing Body of the Synod—From the Presbytery of New Hope.

The Presbytery of New Hope overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the PC(USA) to move the PC(USA) from a four-tiered to a three-tiered mission/governance system by eliminating the middle governing body of synod by December 31, 2012, in the following manner:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

   Shall Chapter XII, The Synod, of the Form of Government and all references to synod found in the Book of Order be deleted from the Book of Order.

   [Note: Should the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the proposed Form of Government to be sent to the presbyteries, direct the Stated Clerk to also send an amendment deleting G-3.4 and all references to synod in the proposed Form of Government to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes.]

2. If the presbyteries concur in removing synods from the Book of Order or proposed Form of Government, that the Stated Clerk and Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) be authorized to appoint a Synod Transition Administrative Commission by July 2011 to ensure that all matters related to the elimination of synods be addressed. This includes review of presbytery minutes, permanent judicial commissions, or other constitutional functions assigned to synods. The commission would be authorized to resolve all fiduciary functions related to synods and any regional groups that are currently functioning as part of synods.

3. Recognize with gratitude the historically valuable role that synods have played.

4. Encourage presbyteries to cooperate and work among themselves on programs or support activities to further the PC(USA)’s mission and ministry.

Rationale

We recognize and appreciate the diversity of ways in which presbyteries and synods have evolved and function, resulting from a combination of tradition, circumstances such as geography, Book of Order mandates, and other factors. Synods, however, are essentially upper middle management governing bodies no longer needed in the PC(USA).

The historical and demographic conditions under which synods were organized in 1983 have changed dramatically and no longer apply.

Regional permanent judicial commissions, if genuinely deemed necessary, could replace synod judicial commissions.

Funds development is critical to the future of the PC(USA). New funding streams are needed at all levels of the church, and synods are perceived to be hindrances in credibly promoting and telling the Presbyterian story for today’s church.

The common wisdom of sessions, pastors, presbytery staff, and many retired or retiring synod executives is that synods have long since outlived their usefulness.

The cost of synod infrastructures is expensive and inefficient, especially when measured in relationship to actual mission funds disbursed or ministry delivered.

Synods of the PC(USA) receive a percentage of undesignated funds contributed to the General Assembly, a practice that has repeatedly been scheduled for closure yet reinstated for more than twenty years.

Some synods hold assets in money and property that can be as effectively and efficiently managed without synods.

Synods are not necessary players in partnerships between presbyteries, congregations, and other organizations.

Large synod per capita reserves, maintained by some synods through their standing rules, allow synods to remain solvent at the expense of presbyteries and congregations.

Concurrence to Item 04-02 from the Presbyteries of Eastern Virginia and The James.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-02

Advice on Item 04-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 04-02. This overture does not propose language for amending the constitution that is clear and consistent with its intent.

Rationale

This overture advocates a major change in our system of government. Since colonial times synods have been part of the expression of Presbyterianism on this continent. The Presbytery of Philadelphia was formed in 1706, the first presbytery of what would become the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In 1716 the Synod of Philadelphia was formed, the first synod of what would become our church. The General Assembly was formed in 1789. Synods, predating the General Assembly by seventy-three years, clearly played an important role in the formation and development of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The roles of synods have changed and developed as the missonal needs of the church have changed.

Since at least 1969, General Assemblies have had before them questions about the necessity and role of synods. In its report that year, the Standing Committee on Regional Synods & Church Administration (UPCUS) said,

Early within the Committee’s deliberations it wrestled with the question, “Can synods be eliminated from our polity?” After exploring alternative possibilities, the Committee reached the conclusion that the synod is needed. For if the number of presbyteries (190) were reduced by one half or even two thirds, there would still be needed some kind of a unit to facilitate the joint effort of a cluster of presbyteries in a region and to provide an orderly channel between those presbyteries and General Assembly agencies. In the Committee’s judgment such a unit should be a judicatory composed of representatives elected by the presbyteries with its own moderator and stated clerk and should fulfill the role of coordinating the efforts of presbyteries. (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1969, Part I, p. 485)

That committee also said:

The synod has three basic roles to fulfill. The synod should be designed: (a) to assist and guide its presbyteries; (b) to be a basic unit of mission with responsibility for ministries which are appropriate to it; and (c) “generally, to take such order with respect to the presbyteries, sessions, and people under their care, as may be in conformity with the Word of God and the established rules, and may tend to promote the edification of the Church.” (G. XIII, 5), 45.05

In order to serve as the facilitator of mission and in order that there might be an effective and orderly relationship among the presbyteries of a synod and between the presbyteries and the General Assembly, the synod should fulfill the following functions: (1) provide a channel of communication among its presbyteries and with the General Assembly and its agencies; (2) provide a channel through which resources of the General Assembly and its agencies may flow according to priority; (3) develop a comprehensive strategy to serve as the basis for the coordination of the work of the presbyteries; and (4) develop an adequate and equitable system of administrative services to meet the mission responsibilities of its area.

In the development of strategy and resources for mission, the General Assembly agencies should consult and negotiate with synods rather than with presbyteries, and synods should operate through presbyteries or through synod structure established for this purpose, according to policy determined by each synod. (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1969, Part I, pp. 485–486)

In 1993, the General Assembly disapproved an overture from the Presbytery of Southern New England asking the General Assembly to appoint a special committee to present a plan to eliminate synods as a level of governance. Instead the assembly asked the General Assembly Council to study the role of synods and report to the 208th General Assembly (1996).

In 1996, the General Assembly disapproved an overture from the Presbytery of the James asking the General Assembly:

… to conduct a study as to whether the governing layer of synod continues to be a necessary and effective part of our church structure (considering, as well, the monetary savings if this layer of governance is discontinued), and report to the General Assembly, at the earliest opportunity, recommendations, including the necessary changes in the Book of Order, to address this important issue within our church. (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 715)

In 1999 the report of the Special Committee on Middle Governing Body Relationships in the Joint Report of the Committee on the Office of the General and the General Assembly Council said:

The committee strongly recommends that the PC(USA) move to a three-governing-body system. The committee is convinced that a flexible and simplified three-governing-body system will offer more opportunities and incentives for direct linkage between and among General Assembly, presbyteries, and congregations. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 526)

At the 211th General Assembly (1999), acting upon a joint recommendation from the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly voted to:

Instruct the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to proceed with the consultation process that examines and encourages relationships within and among the General Assembly, synods, and presbyteries, and bring a report and any necessary or desirable recommendations to the 213th General Assembly (2001). (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 521)

At the 211th General Assembly (1999), the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the General Assembly jointly said:

We recognize that very careful work will need to be done in developing any constitutional text, particularly with regard to ensuring accountability throughout the governing body system. (Ibid., p. 521)

The overture before the 219th General Assembly (2010) is clear in its proposal to remove Chapter 12 from the Form of Government, and in its proposal to remove section G-3.04 from the proposal of the Form of Government Task Force. Prior to the creation of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the church did use systems of governance with two tiers and three tiers. A shift to a three-tiered system of governance would be a significant change, but one that could be described in constitutional language consistent with our polity. The overture does not offer the General Assembly such language.

This overture is not sufficiently clear when it speaks of removing “all references to the Synod found in the Book of Order.” The reader is left to guess how much of any provision that refers to the synod constitutes the language to be deleted. Additionally, some historical references to the synod should be retained, and some uses of the word “synod” in our constitution do not refer to the same entity.

More significantly, the mere removal of references to the synod would radically disconnect the General Assembly from the presbyteries, unless new constitutional language is inserted to establish and define new relationships between the remaining governing bodies.

In many current provisions of the Book of Order, “synod” stands for the church’s presence and activity in particular geographic regions; some requirements that refer to synods ensure geographic diversity in governing bodies or entities that make decisions. Even a quorum of the General Assembly is defined in terms of commissioners from a certain number of synods. If synods are removed, there will be a need for some other way to ensure geographic diversity at the General Assembly level.
In the recent history of proposals for the elimination of synods, there has not been a request that describes how the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) would function without synods and that offers specific constitutional amendments. These are questions that must be answered in order for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to be able to advise the assembly on the proposed constitutional amendments, and, more importantly, for the commissioners of a General Assembly to be able to give full and reasoned consideration to a shift to a three-governing-body system.

This item proposes that all of the details of the elimination of synods could be handled by an administrative commission, but does not offer a charter for the administrative commission identifying with specificity each of the powers to be assigned to the administrative commission.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) agrees with the intent of this overture, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the General Assembly that it should form a task force, special committee, or commission broadly representative of the church to review the role and function of synods, to study the practice of other communions, to draft constitutional amendments, and to develop a plan for the transition to a three-governing-body system. Two other items before the 219th General Assembly (2010) (Item 04-05 from the Synod of Southwest, and Item 04-06 from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly) recommend the formation of an entity that could meet this need.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 04-02 would have similar impact on the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 04-03

On Amending G-12.0000 Regarding Creation of a “New Synod”—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

The Presbytery of Santa Barbara respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

“Shall a new section, G-12.0400, be added to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“G-12.0400 New Synod

“G-12.0401

“New Synod is the unit of the church’s life and mission, which consists of not fewer than three presbyteries, which are admitted into New Synod as provided in this section. New Synod is the intermediate government unit responsible for the mission of the church throughout its presbyteries. New Synod has the same responsibilities and powers of all other synods with the additional responsibilities and powers set forth in this section.

“G-12.0402

“New Synod has the responsibility and power to maintain the standards for ordination and continuing ministry as set forth below. The standards for ordination, installation, and continuing ministry set forth in this section shall be binding upon all presbyteries, sessions, and officers of New Synod. All those called to office within New Synod are to lead a life and engage in ministry in conformity with these standards and the governing bodies of New Synod shall examine qualifications for ordination and installation of officers based on adherence to these standards. These standards shall be strictly interpreted, followed, and enforced in any judicial process involving New Synod or a governing body or ordained leader within New Synod.

“a. New Synod and its constituent presbyteries will structure themselves to facilitate the missional identity of their congregations. Although there are numerous ways to give expression to a missional intent, the congregations of New Synod will emphasize:

“• the singular saving work of Jesus Christ,

“• the unique and authoritative witness of Scripture,

“• the calling to live not for themselves and institutional interests, but for others by engaging in loving service locally and beyond, “• intentional efforts to learn from others within the global church, build relationships, and partner in various ministry endeavors.

“b. The presbyteries and sessions of New Synod will conduct examinations of candidates for church office in a way that preserves the integrity of our common ordination vow:

“Do you sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church as authentic and reliable expositions of what Scripture leads us to believe and do, and will you be instructed and led by those confessions as you lead the people of God?’ (W-4.4003)

“To that end New Synod will offer its presbyteries and congregations the use of a statement regarding ‘essential tenets’ to assist them in their examination. While the statement will not purport to identify the essential tenets, it will emphasize several areas of doctrine that must not be overlooked in any such examination. If the examining body is to assure that a particular candidate does indeed affirm the essential tenets of the Reformed faith, then she or he must be able to affirm these important doctrines. New Synod will compose its own statement for this purpose. It may be guided by previous efforts, such as the ‘Essential Tenets and Reformed Distinctives’ tool adopted by the Presbytery of San Diego in 2003. New Synod will also offer this statement to its congregations for the purpose of education and discipleship of members.

c. The presbyteries and sessions of New Synod will also use the following statement to examine candidates for church office with regard to their manner of life:

“Along with the broader constitutional standards for manner of life (e.g., G-6.0106a), New Synod also holds to the standard that its officers will live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness.

“Those who cannot make this affirmation for their own manner of life will not be approved for ordination or installation in an office, or for membership in a presbytery

“While this standard is certainly not the most important manner of life for one who would serve as an officer in the church, it is an area that has been contested in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). For the sake of clarity in its standards, and consistency in its various governing bodies, this New Synod expects that all of its officers will be able to make this affirmation about their own manner of life.

d. Congregations and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within New Synod will celebrate marriages only between a man and woman. They will not celebrate marriages between members of the same sex in those states whose laws allow such marriages, nor will they celebrate marriage-like unions between members of the same sex.

e. Congregations of New Synod, in welcoming all God’s children with the unconditional love of Jesus Christ, will also endeavor to teach biblical sexual ethics according to the traditional understandings (i.e., fidelity in marriage between a man and woman, and chastity in singleness). In this, as in all areas of church teaching and discipleship, Christ’s forgiveness, redemption, and healing shall be emphasized.

“f. Presbyteries and congregations within New Synod will give deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament regular opportunities to renew their ordination vows and reaffirm these additional standards.

“G-12.0403

“After the first meeting of New Synod, any presbytery shall have the right to transfer into or out of New Synod. A presbytery may request to transfer its synod membership by a two-thirds vote of the presbytery at a regularly called meeting. The change in membership shall become effective upon the vote of the receiving synod to accept the presbytery into its membership.

“G-12.0404

“Any presbytery that becomes a part of New Synod will consist of its member churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament on the date it becomes a member of New Synod. New Synod has the power to determine the geographical boundaries of its presbyteries without the need for approval from General Assembly. The presbyteries of New Synod will have boundaries that overlap with the presbyteries of other synods. A minister called by a church within a particular presbytery shall be a member of the calling presbytery and permission of any other presbytery with which it has overlapping boundaries shall not be needed to issue the call. The calling presbytery shall have the right to permit a minister to labor within the geographical boundaries of both without the consent of the other presbytery.

“G-12.0405

“A congregation shall have the right to vote on dismissal to a presbytery not in New Synod at a duly called congregational meeting. Such dismissal, with real property and all other property, shall be effective upon the vote of the receiving presbytery to accept the church into its membership.
A congregation shall have the right to vote on dismissal to a presbytery within New Synod at a duly called congregational meeting. Such dismissal, with real property and all other property, shall be effective upon the vote by the receiving presbytery to accept the church into its membership.

The provisions of this section, G-12.0400, supersede and control any other provisions of the Book of Order to the contrary.

The provisions of this section, G-12.0400, may not be amended without the consent of New Synod. A majority vote of each of its presbyteries is required to give this consent.

Within 180 days of the vote of the General Assembly to send this amendment to the presbyteries for consideration, any presbytery shall have the right to become one of the originating presbyteries of New Synod by a two-thirds vote of its members. The creation of New Synod authorized by this section shall become effective upon the convening of its first meeting, which may be called by any of the originating presbyteries after the effective date of this amendment. When New Synod meets it shall be composed of commissioners elected by its presbyteries. The ratio of commissioners to members at a New Synod meeting shall be the same as for General Assembly. At the first meeting, a majority vote of the commissioners is required to confirm each of the originating presbyteries as members. If an originating presbytery does not receive a majority vote, it shall remain a member of its current geographic synod.

At the first meeting of New Synod, the commissioners will adopt a name for New Synod and advise the Office of the General Assembly. Upon receipt of written notice by the Office of General Assembly, all references within the Book of Order, as amended, to the “new synod” shall reflect this change.

[W]e believe that the most important issue is always Jesus Christ, yet the pressing issues over sexuality and ordination continue to consume the time and resources of many in our church. There is a need to offer a way to preserve the unity of the church without violating the conscience of its members.

Our denomination already has nongeographic presbyteries that exist for missional reasons. We ask that a New Synod be created, identified by particular theological and missional commitments rather than by a geographic region.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-03

Advice on Item 04-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 04-03.

Rationale

Item 04-03 seeks to add to Chapter XII of the Form of Government an extensive section establishing a non-geographical synod that would promote a particular theological and missional identity. The synod would be governed by special provisions regarding the theological and behavioral standards of ministers, the reception and dismissal of congregations and whole presbyteries, the use of quasi-confessional statements, and veto power over further amendment of this section of the Constitution. Its presbyteries would overlap the bounds of existing presbyteries. It would also grant all congregations in the church the right and power to transfer into a presbytery of the synod. It would have the power even to name itself without the concurrence of the General Assembly. In short, it proposes to establish a second denomination within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The overture directly challenges foundational principles of our polity. Foremost among these is the unity of the church envisioned by our polity.

The unity of the church is the living expression of what it means to be the Body of Christ (as in 1 Cor. 12, Eph. 2:11–22, and Eph. 4:1–16). As the Confession of 1967 affirms, “… The Holy Spirit creates and renews the church as the community in which men are reconciled to God and to one another” (The Book of Confessions, 9.20), and “… The unity of the church is compatible with a wide variety of forms, but it is hidden and distorted when variant forms are allowed to harden into sectarian divisions, exclusive denominations, and rival factions” (Ibid., 9.34).

To establish one synod or presbytery with unique rights and powers violates the essential unity of the church by which a greater part shall govern a lesser part, and that a majority thereof shall govern (G-1.0400; G-4.0301). It undermines the principle constitutional governance affirmed in G-4.0104: “Each particular church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by this Constitution …” (Book of Order, G-4.0104). And, it ruptures the visible oneness of the church, “… by which a diversity of persons, gifts, and understandings is brought together, [which] is an important sign of the unity of God’s people …” (Book of Order, G-4.0203).

Analysis

Because of its size and scope, specific constitutional issues raised by the overture will be addressed section by section.

“G-12.0402

“New Synod has the responsibility and power to maintain the standards for ordination and continuing ministry as set forth below …” (Item 04-03)

This section grants the “New Synod” the authority to interpret and enforce a unique set of standards for ordination. It would effectively create a separate judicial system that would not be subject to appeal to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission since (a) the provision grants the New Synod the power to interpret and enforce its own standards and (b) as Item 04-03 states: “The provisions … [shall] supersede and control any other provisions of the Book of Order to the contrary” (Item 04-03, proposed G-12.0407).

“a. New Synod and its constituent presbyteries will structure themselves to facilitate the missional identity of their congregations …” (Ibid.)

This imposition of a missional identity on constituent congregations of a presbytery within the synod violates the rights of sessions “to lead the congregation in participation in the mission of the whole Church in the world, in accordance with G-3.0000” (Book of Order, G-10.0102.c.); and “to lead the congregation continually to discover what God is doing in the world and to plan for change, renewal, and reformation under the Word of God” (Book of Order, G-10.0102j).

“b. The presbyteries and sessions of New Synod will conduct examinations of candidates for church office in a way that preserves the integrity of our common ordination vow:

“Do you sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church as authentic and reliable expositions of what Scripture leads us to believe and do, and will you be instructed and led by those confessions as you lead the people of God?” (W-4.4003)

“To that end New Synod will offer its presbyteries and congregations the use of a statement regarding ‘essential tenets’ to assist them in their examination…” (Item 04-03).

Additional documents of a quasi-confessional nature are not required to ensure that governing bodies “… conduct examinations of candidates… in a way that preserves the integrity of our common ordination vow…” (Item 04-03, proposed G-12.0402b). Candidates must affirm the constitutional questions for office. Governing bodies are not free to ordain or install candidates who do not affirm all of the constitutional questions for office, and therefore should not approve the examinations of such candidates. Moreover, a governing body is free to make its determination that a particular candidate fails to affirm essential tenets of the Reformed faith, and therefore, to deny ordination to that candidate. The examination of each candidate must be performed individually and may not be constrained by any prior action of the body or any statement of faith that does not have confessional status in the church. Creating such a rule for part of the church directly violates the right of the whole church to establish confessional standards and standards for ordination. It also violates the rights of sessions and presbyteries to exercise their own judgment and to appeal contrary judgments of higher governing bodies “… till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church” (Book of Order, G-1.0400).

“G-12.0402

c. The presbyteries and sessions of New Synod will also use the following statement to examine candidates for church office with regard to their manner of life:

“Along with the broader constitutional standards for manner of life (e.g., G-6.0106a), New Synod also holds to the standard that its officers will live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness.

“Those who cannot make this affirmation for their own manner of life will not be approved for ordination or installation in an office, or for membership in a presbytery …” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0402c)

The standard proposed by the overture for the New Synod is currently part of the Constitution of the church (G-6.0106b).
No special statement of this standard is required. Should the constitutional standard change, it would be up to the examining and ordaining body to determine whether a particular candidate satisfied the constitutional standards of office then in effect.
A governing body could not adopt a unique standard that would bind the right of another governing body, or a subsequent assembly of the same governing body, to exercise its judgment of a particular candidate by imposing an extra-constitutional restriction on that assembly.

“G-12.0402

d. Congregations and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within New Synod will celebrate marriages only between a man and woman…” (Ibid., proposed changes to G-12.-0402d).

Actions of an officer or member of the church that violate the Constitution are subject to discipline through judicial process. Actions of governing bodies are subject to remedial action. An individual or governing body so accused has the right to appeal the judgment of a lower governing body to a higher governing body as to whether their actions are or are not constitutional, “… till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church” (Book of Order, G-1.4000). This provision would, potentially, give special exemption to one part of the church from the collective wisdom of the whole church in discerning the mind and will of Christ, and thereby violates the essential unity of the church expressed by a single Constitution.

“G-12.0402

e. Congregations of New Synod, in welcoming all God’s children with the unconditional love of Jesus Christ, will also endeavor to teach biblical sexual ethics according to the traditional understandings …” (Ibid., proposed changes to G-12.0402e).

This provision violates the rights of a session “to develop and supervise the church school and the educational program of the church” (Book of Order, G-10.0102f) by requiring a particular curriculum and to imposing a particular interpretation of Scripture and the confessions.

“G-12.0402

f. “Presbyteries and congregations within New Synod will give deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament regular opportunities to renew their ordination vows and reaffirm these additional standards.” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12/0402f).

The affirmations required of officers of the church are limited to those explicitly required by the Constitution. Any required affirmation of another standard, or of an additional standard is a violation of the essential right of conscience of the individual. Ministers are required to affirm the constitutional questions of office when they are ordained, and whenever they are installed to a new call. To require a reaffirmation at other times has the effect of turning affirmations of faith into a loyalty oath. The effect of such a provision would be to allow presbyteries and congregations to purge from office persons who were ordained on behalf of the whole church, but who do not conform to the unique standards for ordination of one part of the church.

“G-12.0403

“After the first meeting of New Synod, any presbytery shall have the right to transfer into or out of New Synod…” (Ibid, proposed changes to G-12.0403).
This provision violates the connectional nature of our polity by allowing presbyteries to transfer between synods without the consultation or approval of higher governing bodies (i.e., the synod of origin and the General Assembly). As the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission ruled in Johnston, et al. v Heartland Presbytery, “… Our unity in Christ and the relational nature of our governance require dialogue between and among governing bodies, thus giving life to the mutuality and reciprocity between [governing bodies] in furthering the great ends of the church” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 462).

“Any presbytery that becomes a part of New Synod will consist of its member churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament on the date it becomes a member of New Synod. New Synod has the power to determine the geographical boundaries of its presbyteries without the need for approval from General Assembly…” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0404).

While it is rare, the constitution does allow for the transfer of whole presbyteries from one synod to another. However, the unique aspects of the New Synod create a constitutional issue by requiring all congregations (both sessions and members) to become part of a synod with a polity that is fundamentally different from that which they assented to in membership and/or ordination. This imposes a special burden on the conscience of members and officers.

In addition, this provision gives New Synod the right to determine the bounds of its constituent presbyteries without the consent of either the General Assembly, or, potentially, its own existing presbyteries in violation of G-13.0103n. This would potentially allow the synod, through maximizing the number of presbyteries in its jurisdiction, to have inordinate and non-proportional representation in the General Assembly.

“A congregation shall have the right to vote on dismissal to a presbytery not in New Synod at a duly called congregational meeting. Such dismissal, with real property and all other property, shall be effective upon the vote of the receiving presbytery to accept the church into its membership” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0405).

First, this provision overrides the rights and powers of presbyteries. Per G-11.0103i, only the presbytery has the right to divide, dissolve, or dismiss a congregation. Similarly, per G-8.0601 only the presbytery has the right to determine which faction of a congregation in schism represents the true church for purposes of property control and ecclesiastical governance.

Second, by failing to restrict the dismissal of congregations to presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), this provision effectively nullifies the property trust clause found in G-8.0201 for congregations of the New Synod. This not only affects the property rights of the denomination relative to particular churches of the New Synod, but could have the consequence of affecting the validity of the property trust clause of the denomination in civil courts for the whole denomination.

“A congregation shall have the right to vote on dismissal to a presbytery within New Synod at a duly called congregational meeting…” (Ibid., proposed changes to G-12.0406).

This provision is subject to the same criticisms applied to proposed G-12.0403 and G-12.0405. Moreover, it stands in contradiction with proposed G-12.0404, in that it fails to distinguish between congregations already in the New Synod and those that are not. Thus, the New Synod itself would be unable to enforce its own geographic boundaries were a congregation in one presbytery of the New Synod to vote to be dismissed another presbytery of the New Synod.

“The provisions of this section, G-12.0400, supersedes and control any other provisions of the Book of Order to the contrary” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0407).

This provision effectively admits that the purpose of the overture is to create two churches with two constitutions. A provision that allows one part of the church to override the Constitution is de facto unconstitutional.

“The provisions of this section, G-12.0400, may not be amended without the consent of New Synod. A majority vote of each of its presbyteries is required to give this consent” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0408).

This provision effectively admits that the purpose of the overture is to create two churches with two constitutions. It also inverts the principle of hierarchical governance found in G-1.4000 and G-4.0301. Moreover, it gives the power to individual presbyteries to veto amendments voted on by the whole church.
“G-12.0409

“Within 180 days of the vote of the General Assembly to send this amendment to the presbyteries for consideration, any presbytery shall have the right to become one of the originating presbyteries of New Synod by a two-thirds vote of its members...” (Ibid., proposed changes to G-12.0409).

It is unadvisable to allow presbyteries to make binding decisions regarding their affiliations before the amendment is approved and enacted by the church, as it shortcuts the opportunity for knowledgeable deliberation and wise judgment by the presbytery.

“G-12.0410

“At the first meeting of New Synod, the commissioners will adopt a name for New Synod and advise the Office of the General Assembly...” (Item 04-03, proposed changes to G-12.0410).

The naming of synods is regulated by the General Assembly and requires the approval of the General Assembly, not only for purposes of order but also to avoid unnecessary civil legal complications.

In sum, the effect of this overture will be to exacerbate the proclivity of the church to dissolve itself into associations based on affinity. This proclivity is antithetical to the call of God to engage Christ’s mission together, to honor the critiques of brothers and sisters of faith who disagree, and to plan and work together to live out our calling to be “… the sign in and for the world of the new reality which God has made available to people in Jesus Christ” (Book of Order, G-3.0200).

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 04-03 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 04-03 deals with amending G-12.0000 regarding creation of a “new synod.”

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) disapprove this overture.

Rationale

Overtures that affirm “new synod” structures and “flexibility in presbytery membership” make it too easy to exclude others on the basis of theological or experiential differences, are inconsistent with the Reformed tradition and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s representational form of governance, and threaten to dissolve the unity of the body of Christ to which we are all called as people of faith. The PC(USA) is a connectional church with representational governance.

Overtures that allow churches and presbyteries to choose their membership on the basis of “theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those congregations” threaten to dissolve the unity of the church as a whole, to diminish financial resources that could be available for joint mission projects, and to create community of uniformity and likenessness as opposed to a community of faith representing the full body of Christ.

In Reformed tradition and the history of Reformed communities of faith, theological disagreements, faithful discussion, diversity of views, and honest debate have provided the occasion for creativity. Think about the reformers, abolitionists, and civil rights activists: What if difference had prevailed over the call to live and act as part of Christ’s body? Political issues may be temporarily side-stepped by creating a “new synod” or “flexibility in presbytery membership,” but it will come at the expense of our communal call to live as the body of Christ, each one of us an integral part of it.

On Amending G-11.0000 to Provide Flexibility in Presbytery Membership—From the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler.

In order to accommodate the diverse belief systems, theological positions, and mission designs that currently exist within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and to encourage a kind of flexible equilibrium. the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
1. Shall the first paragraph of G-11.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-11.0101 Membership

“Presbytery is a corporate expression of the church consisting of all the churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within a certain district. Presbytery is a corporate expression of the church consisting of churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament who have chosen to affiliate based on geographic, theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those congregations. When a presbytery meets, each church shall be represented by an elder commissioned by the session with the following additional provisions:”

2. Shall G-11.0103 be amended by striking “j.” and re-lettering section headings for current “k.” through “aa.” As “j.” through “z.”

“j. to control the location of new churches and of churches desiring to move;”

3. Shall a new section, “G-11.0600,” be inserted after G-11.0504, which would read as follows:

“G-11.0600 Changes in Membership

“a. Congregations may choose membership in a particular presbytery based on geographic, theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those congregations.

“b. A congregation may seek to change presbytery membership by a two-thirds vote at a properly called congregational meeting.

“c. The receiving presbytery will accept the congregation’s request for membership by a majority vote at a properly called presbytery meeting.

“d. The minister(s) of Word and Sacrament of the joining congregation become members of the receiving presbytery when it is determined by the committee on ministry of the receiving presbytery that their call is in order (G-14.0532–.0534).

“e. A church may only transfer its membership to another presbytery within one day’s reasonable travel.

“f. Upon transferring to another presbytery, a church may not change its presbytery membership for at least four years and shall covenant to not seek dismissal from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for at least five years.”

Rationale

It is by following Jesus Christ, as attested for us in Scripture, that the unity of our faith will be made visible today as it has in the past.

Jesus Christ alone is head of the church. Jesus alone is the source of the church’s unity.

Section G-1.0100c affirms that “Christ gives to his Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its officers and ordinances.” Our unity is rooted in Christ. The church’s purity does not spring from technical or legal means, but from Jesus Christ. Attempting to keep the church unified and pure without providing freedom for Christ’s Spirit to move is not helpful.

Section G-1.0301(1) (a) affirms that “God alone is Lord of the conscience, and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in anything contrary to his Word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship.” Flexibility in presbytery membership provides options for theological and missional partnerships not possible under the rigid geographical criteria that worked well in other times.

Section G-3.0401d affirms that God is calling us “to a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be a more effective instrument of mission in the world.” There are many signs that, on a changing cultural landscape, old models are breaking down and new forms of denominationalism in the United States are developing at local, regional, and national levels. These new forms cannot emerge from strict adherence to existing structures; they must be permitted and nurtured by a denomination willing to seek flexibility and equilibrium.

The intended purpose of flexible equilibrium in presbytery membership is to provide safe opportunity for congregations and judicatories to express shared, deeply held convictions. To seek flexibility regarding essential belief, without providing a corresponding freedom of association based on those very convictions, is contradictory and ultimately self-defeating.

Under a more flexible system of presbytery membership, the power of the upper judicatories is diminished (for example, in discipline and enforcement) and that of lower judicatories (congregations and presbyteries) increases.
A flexible plan of presbytery membership provides an affirmation of the Missional Church’s understanding of non-hierarchical structures and ministries. It affirms the congregation as the primary agent of mission and ministry and the presbytery as secondary agent for the support, encouragement, and accountability of congregations and pastors. Any other judicatories are tertiary agents for the support, encouragement, and accountability of the presbytery.

Allowing congregations flexibility in their presbytery membership provides the basis for mission and ministry under a generous and broad orthodox creedal Reformed Christianity. Membership flexibility acknowledges the current era of diverse styles and forms while maintaining the historic unity of the church.

Competing factions within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) appeal to Historic Presbyterianism. Flexible equilibrium is, by contrast, future-oriented while at the same time providing an affirmation of Presbyterianism in its connectional-accountable sense. It acknowledges the need for one another while rejecting both institutional coercion and radical ecclesiastical autonomy.

A flexible plan for presbytery membership allows congregations and judicatories to work for reformation and renewal in local congregations and in presbyteries only as they serve the local congregation. This flexibility allows the denomination to focus on positive change rather than defensive battles.

Finally, this overture grants a relief of conscience to those churches within a presbytery where the majority has chosen a theological path in which the minority cannot continue because of conscience. Rather than leaving the denomination, this overture offers a measure of grace through freedom of affiliation within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

For these reasons, the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler urges the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve this overture.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-04

Advice on Item 04-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 04-04.

Rationale

The overture seeks to change the nature of a presbytery from a geographical expression of the church to one based on theological or missional affinity, or “other considerations of importance.” In so doing, it radically alters not only the nature of the presbytery, but fundamental affirmations of Presbyterian polity.

One of the core affirmations of our ecclesiology is the first “mark of the church” found in the Nicene Creed: the church is one. The connectional unity among congregations and governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) contained in our theology and expressed in our polity is organic in nature. That is, the parts are connected to the whole not on a covenantal or voluntary basis, but as parts of a single body. As G-1.0400 states, “… the several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ …” and “… that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united …” (Book of Order, G-1.0400).

The proposed amendment to G-11.0101 strikes at the heart of this organic connectionalism by affirming (1) that membership in a particular presbytery is primarily the choice of the individual congregation; and therefore (2) that participation of congregations in the connectional church is a function of “affiliation” from below rather than an inherent quality. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that not only is this contrary to our historic understanding of the unity of the church, but may subvert the ability of the whole church to govern the individual parts.

The advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to Overture 05-23 submitted to the 217th General Assembly (2006) is still relevant to the present overture:

This overture represents a dramatic departure from basic assumptions of the Constitution about the way the church is organized in three ways. First, the overture assumes that lower governing bodies should be able to choose their affiliation with higher governing bodies. By contrast, our polity has understood that the creation of lower governing bodies (sessions, presbyteries, and synods) is the responsibility of higher governing bodies (presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly, respectively). By allowing lower governing bodies to select their places of membership, the overture fundamentally reverses the understanding of this relationship.

Second, this overture would permit congregations … to select governing body affiliation on grounds of theological and missional concerns, as well as “other considerations of importance” … Under the terms of this overture, it would become possible for congregations … to affiliate with presbyteries … with whom they find persons of similar mind on whatever is the controversial issue of the day. While the church has found value in the de-development of affinity groups and networks of like-minded individuals, they form an insufficient foundation on which to build a system of governance.

Indeed, the foundations of our polity insist that the church “as it gathers for worship and orders its corporate life will display a rich variety of form, practice, language, program, nurture, and service…” (G-4.0401).

… [T]he effect of this overture could be significantly to increase the number of congregations whose presbytery membership lies outside their geographical location. This will make it difficult for the presbytery to fulfill its mandate to “… be responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district…” (G-11.0103), to “develop strategy for the mission of the church in its area…” (G-11.0103a), and to carry out such geographically defined tasks as “to control the location of new churches and … churches desiring to move” (G-11.0103j).

At stake here is not merely a style of polity but a central ecclesiological question: is the church finally a voluntary association of the like-minded, or is it called into being by the sovereign God through the grace of Jesus Christ, who gathered to himself persons of vastly different persuasion, background, and lifestyle? (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 437)

The formation of non-geographic presbyteries is currently governed by G-12.0103k, which gives the synod responsibility, “… to create non-geographic presbyteries in order to meet the mission needs (G-11.0103a; G-12.0102a) of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations; subject to the approval of the General Assembly” (Book of Order, G-12-0102k). The present overture would violate that right and responsibility of the synod and General Assembly.

The overture is unclear as to whether a transfer could be accomplished without the consent of (or even consultation with) the presbytery of membership. As G-11.0103i would not be amended by this overture, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that under the proposed amendment, any transfer of a congregation between presbyteries would require appropriate consultation and action of the dismissing presbytery.

The overture cites obsolete references to chapter XIV of the Form of Government regarding the reception of ministers. The correct provision is found in G-11.0402:

The presbytery, through its appropriate committee, shall examine each minister or candidate who seeks membership in it on his or her Christian faith and views in theology, the Sacraments, and the government of this church, except as provided in G-14.0481. Every minister seeking membership in a presbytery shall have a call to a pastoral relation within the presbytery, or from a governing body or agency as defined in G-11.0410, or be entering a work defined in G-11.0411, for which the receiving presbytery shall give its permission, or shall be honorably retired as defined in G-11.0412. (Book of Order, G-11.0402)

Every minister entering the presbytery, whether by accepting a new call, or by the transfer of a congregation where a call currently exists, shall be subject to the examination of the receiving presbytery. For ministers previously ordained, this responsibility may be delegated by a presbytery to its committee on ministry.

The proposed G-11.0600e, limiting church transfers to another presbytery “within one day’s reasonable travel” is insufficiently defined, and potentially creates a double standard for congregations in populous areas and those in isolated areas.

The proposed G-11.0600f, which requires a four-year wait before a second transfer and a five-year wait before dismissal to another denomination, does not provide sufficient stability to presbyteries to carry out the mandated functions.

Finally, as stated in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice to the similar overture submitted to the 218th General Assembly (2008):

The effect of this overture will be to exacerbate the proclivity of the church to dissolve itself into associations based on affinity. This proclivity is antithetical to the call of God to engage Christ’s mission together, to honor the critiques of brothers and sisters of faith who disagree, and to plan and work together to live out our calling to be “the sign in and for the world of the new reality God is making available to people in Jesus Christ” (G-3.0200). Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 144)

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: If both recommendations are approved, the proposed changes would have the effect of amending the proposed Form of Government at G-3.0301 and G-3.0303.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-04 – From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 04-04 deals with amending G-11.0000 to provide flexibility in presbytery membership.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) disapprove this overture.

Rationale

See ACWC’s rationale for Item 04-03.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-04

Comment on Item 04-04—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 04-04.
Rationale

When the PCUS and UPCUSA reunited in 1983, the Articles of Agreement established a process for determining presbytery boundaries. The decision to use geographic boundaries, rather than other criteria (i.e. racial/ethnic presbyteries), was stated as follows:

On the principle that a geographically related area makes possible greater fellowship and ease in the conduct of the business of a governing body, it shall be the further goal of the Special Committee that the resulting governing bodies shall be of sufficient strength and geographical proximity to enhance the total mission of the Church... (Book of Order, Articles of Agreement, 7.4)

Thus, the then-existing racial/ethnic presbyteries were to be dissolved and incorporated into their local geographical areas, with the understanding that committees on representation would be established to ensure that racial/ethnic leadership within the new presbyteries would be encouraged, retained, and monitored. The PC(USA) currently has five non-geographic presbyteries (Dakota, Hanmi, Midwest Hanmi, Eastern Korean, and Atlantic Korean American). At the 218th General Assembly (2010), the General Assembly reaffirmed, and the presbyteries concurred, that geographic presbyteries would be the norm by the adoption of amended language to G-12.0102k:

...When such mission needs arise inside a congregation that lies within a synod lacking such a nongeographic presbytery, that synod may permit, with the approval of the General Assembly and unless some legal or ecclesiastical issue would prohibit, that congregation to join a nongeographic presbytery inside the bounds of another synod with the consent of that other synod, the geographic presbytery, and the nongeographic presbytery; such presbyteries should be formed only on the basis of language, and there should be a sunset clause (end date) added at the formation of each nongeographic presbytery. (Book of Order, G-12.0102k)

To shift the establishment of presbyteries to a format based on “theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those congregations” would ultimately reduce the PC(USA) to a ‘separate, but equal’ kind of denomination, which denies the call that Christians are to be one, as Christ prayed in John 17.

To exhibit the kingdom to the world, we need to find ways to work together and lift each other up in leadership and discipleship, not send each other to our separate corners. With our current model of presbytery, rooted in Christ’s prayer that we “may be one” and Paul’s vision that “[t]here is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female...” (Gal. 3:28), we are called to work together and not seek to establish presbyteries of only like-minded congregations. This is an important part of what is meant by the PC(USA)’s commitment to full participation of diversity and inclusiveness in G-4.0403: “The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life...” (Book of Order, G-4.0403).

While GACOR believes that the above considerations are sufficient for disapproval of this overture, there is an additional aspect of representation that should be considered. From a strictly demographic perspective, the proposed amendment to the Book of Order discriminates against congregations in geographical areas where it would not be possible to transfer membership to a presbytery “within one day’s reasonable travel,” such as Utah or much of the western United States.

Item 04-05

[The assembly answered Item 04-05 by the action taken on Item 04-06. See p. 28.]

On Creating a Special Committee to Explore the Roles and Relationships of Synods and Presbyteries to Each Other, to the Agencies, and to Congregations—From the Synod of the Southwest.

The Synod of the Southwest overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct that a special committee be created to explore and examine the roles and relationships of synods and presbyteries within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [the “PC(USA)”]—to each other, to the agencies of the General Assembly (GA), and to congregations.

Such a process should include:

1. Current diversity in the role and function of middle governing bodies.
2. Demographics and financial realities that affect the role and function of synods and presbyteries.
3. The role of each governing body in its oversight role—presbyteries of congregations, synods of presbyteries, and General Assembly of synods—both historically and in present experience.
4. Relationships with General Assembly agencies in role and function.
5. Recommendations for future roles and responsibilities to be made to a subsequent General Assembly about changes in middle governing bodies that may best serve the PC(USA) in the 21st century.
Rationale

Jesus Christ has given the church preaching and teaching, praise and prayer, and Baptism and the Lord’s Supper as means of fulfilling its service of God among men [and women]. These gifts remain, but the church is obliged to change the forms of its service in ways appropriate to different generations and cultures. (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.48)

The church thus orders its life as an institution with a constitution, government, officers, finances, and administrative rules. These are instruments of mission, not ends in themselves. Different orders have served the gospel, and none can claim exclusive validity. A presbyterian polity recognizes the responsibility of all members for ministry and maintains the organic relation of all congregations in the church. It seeks to protect the church from exploitation by ecclesiastical or secular power and ambition. Every church order must be open to such reformation as may be required to make it a more effective instrument of the mission of reconciliation. (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.40)

1. The question of the future of middle governing bodies is not a question about only one type of governing body but about the governance and mission system of the entire PC(USA). To make deliberate changes to any one part of the system will have implications for the other current partners. Such change urges serious conversation about historic practices as well as present and future needs.

2. Many presbyteries and synods are involved, and have been involved in major change due to demographics, financial realities, changing understandings of their capacities, roles, and responsibilities. However, the PC(USA) has not undertaken a study of roles and responsibilities of middle governing bodies (presbyteries and synods) since the early 1970s. That study and subsequent action resulted primarily in broad regional synods and the presbyteries with individual staff structure we have today. General Assembly structure has changed significantly in those years but the organizational understandings that facilitate relationships with middle governing bodies have remained essentially the same.

3. It is the responsibility of the General Assembly to oversee synods, but there has been no review process of synods in almost forty years. There has, however, been a review of each General Assembly agency and the relationship of the agencies to one another.

4. The roles and responsibilities of each one of the General Assembly agencies have evolved over the last forty years but there has been no study of the relationships between middle governing bodies and the agencies.

5. Following Reunion in 1983, the General Assembly appointed a special committee on boundaries. The work of that committee was solely to adjust boundaries with overlapping presbyteries of the two former churches. The committee was not given the task of addressing roles and responsibilities, and did not do so.

6. Synods and presbyteries have evolved significantly over the last forty years. No two synods or presbyteries operate in identical fashion, nor do they relate to each other in identical ways. The similarities are often most recognizable by ecclesiastical process, not by mission priorities or programs. Each has sought to find a way to be flexible and responsive to a particular context for ministry and the data is not either summarized or understood across governing body lines, and sometimes not in relationship to the General Assembly agencies.

7. The role of presbyteries and synods is both missional and ecclesiastical. A more comprehensive review of the existing roles and responsibilities of governing bodies and the implications of church organizational shifts would carefully consider the implications of such change and will assist the PC(USA) in planning for its future ministry both regionally and nationally.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-05

Advice on Item 04-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 04-05 with the following advice:

Because Item 04-05 and Item 04-06 (a COGA recommendation) share common concerns and similar recommendations, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is structuring its advice so as to be applicable should either request—or a combination of both—be approved by committee and brought to the floor of the assembly.

Both Item 04-05 and the Item 04-06 would be constitutionally permissible and present no immediate constitutional changes requiring an ACC opinion. Both present actions the General Assembly already has the power to undertake.

The most definitive constitutional issue is the distinction between a “committee” and a “commission” (G-9.0500). A “special committee” would be charged with study, consultation, and reporting recommendations for changes in middle governing bodies that would best serve the denomination. A “commission on middle governing bodies” would be charged not only with study, consultation, and bringing recommendations that may include changes to the Constitution, but also with the authority to implement certain actions of the 219th General Assembly (2010), including, but not limited to, organizing, dividing or combining synods and presbyteries upon their request.

If a “special committee” is formed, there are no immediate constitutional issues involved.
If a “General Assembly Commission on Middle Governing Bodies” is formed, the tasks, responsibilities, and powers of the commission must be enumerated clearly and in detail—and the boundaries and limits of such a commission clearly indentified.

Both recommendations could create bodies with the charge and authority to bring potential recommendations that could result in substantial changes to the Constitution—either the existing constitution or the proposed new Form of Government. For this reason, the ACC advises that any such committee or commission include at least one member with substantial training and experience in constitutional/polity matters.

[Item 10-05 has a similar objective to the above and the committee may want to review that recommendation as part of the discussion on the above.]

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 04-05 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) concurs with the issues raised by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) on Item 04-05 and advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 04-05 be approved and that it direct the ACC to create a special sub-committee (of the ACC) to study and bring to the 220th General Assembly (2012) a report on the roles and relationships of synods and presbyteries to each other, to General Assembly agencies, and to congregations.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recognizes that pressures on synods and presbyteries caused by demographic changes and financial limitations during the past twenty years have resulted in varying adjustments in governing body relationships across the PC(USA), and that there is need for review of these relationships and possible recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012). Having the special committee be a sub-committee of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) will insure that the expertise on constitutional and structural issues will be available to the process.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-05

Comment on Item 04-05—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) recommends that this overture be answered by approving COGA’s recommendation, Item 04-06, regarding the formation of an administrative commission on middle governing body mission and function.

Rationale

This overture calls for the formation of a special committee to review the role and function of middle governing bodies and to bring any recommendations to a subsequent General Assembly.

The process proposed in recommendations 1–5 would be included within the responsibilities of the administrative commission in the COGA recommendation (1–3). Further, having an administrative commission with some limited authority would be more effective in moving forward with General Assembly approved actions than a special committee, which studies and reports its recommendations to a future General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the OGA.

Item 04-06

[The assembly approved Item 04-06 with amendment. See p. 28.] [Floor amendments are shown with a gray screen background.]

The [Assembly] Committee on [the Office of the General Assembly] [Middle Governing Body Issues] recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Moderators of the 218th and 219th General Assemblies (2008 and 2010), in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, to appoint twenty-one persons to a General Assembly Commission on Middle Governing Bodies with the understanding that the Moderators, as they make their appointments, shall make an intentional effort for theological diversity. The commission shall have the following focus and powers:

1. The commission will consult with sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the wider church on the mission and function of middle governing bodies. [Such a process should include:}
The commission is authorized to act as the General Assembly

Rationale

Many perceive this age as one of great transition for the Body of Christ. Our congregations and governing bodies are changing worship styles, devotional practices, their forms and functions to meet new needs and to position themselves for the future. Although some modifications have been motivated by financial necessity, the majority of these shifts are the result of the prayerful deliberations of presbyteries and synods struggling to be more faithful, more missional, and more effective stewards of their resources.

The principles of our Presbyterian Polity trust in the fundamental work of the Spirit of Christ expressed when presbyters are gathered together in governing bodies. But how are those governing bodies best organized to be responsive both to the Spirit of Christ and the changing opportunities for discipleship? Are our historical structures the best platforms for carrying our mission into the future? Where can the General Assembly carefully discern the wider scope of middle governing body form, function, and mission?

The last major examinations of the structure and purpose of middle governing bodies occurred before Reunion. Studies by the former United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. (UPCUSA) resulted in the passage of Overture H (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1969, Part I, pp. 459 ff) and the creation of regional synods, new presbytery boundaries, and redefined relationships between governing bodies. In 1968, the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) convened the “Conference on Restructuring Synods and Presbyteries” whose recommendations on the meaning of middle governing bodies were adopted by the General Assembly later that year and resulted in similar restructuring (Minutes, PCUS, 1968, Appendix, pp. 251 ff). The Reunion of the streams that occurred in 1983 rearranged some boundaries but basically preserved the work of these two former studies. Thus it is fair to say that no significant study of middle governing bodies has taken place for the past four decades. The changing cultural context, the shifts that middle governing bodies are themselves already making, and a new domestic mission frontier all make this the right time, God’s time for us to examine the role, function and form of presbyteries and synods.

The General Assembly Moderator appointed this special committee of five members in July 2009, after various communications were received by OGA from members of the synod in Puerto Rico describing conflict and dissension within the synod and presbyteries. The committee met with ten leaders (stated clerks and moderators of the four governing bodies, plus the synod executive and council moderator) within the Synod of Boriquén in August 2009, and then attended the synod’s three-day November meeting in Puerto Rico. The committee has asked for feedback from all Boriquén ministers and elders through a short written survey administered by Research Services. The committee has also received numerous written communications from presbyteries and individuals about the situation in the church in Puerto Rico.

The committee believes that it is important for them to continue to function as a committee in dialogue with the church in Puerto Rico. They foresee the distinct possibility that the General Assembly may be asked to implement recommendations that the committee may make in the months ahead. For this reason, the special committee will request the General Assembly to appoint an administrative commission that would have power to act between assemblies on the special committee’s recommendation, which are likely to include the exploration of combining the three presbyteries into one and putting that presbytery into a different synod.

Therefore, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly believes it will be important to coordinate the General Assembly’s commission work (implementing directives from the assembly), with its work as a deliberative committee (studying the future form and function of middle governing bodies), by naming this commission. The lessons learned implementing the recommendations of the Special Committee on Administrative Review and any other initiatives of the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding middle governing bodies will positively inform the larger examination of middle governing bodies that the commission is also conducting.

The General Assembly has received numerous overtures, reports, and other concerns about the life and health of the middle governing body system. The limited time of the General Assembly does not allow for a focused and thoughtful approach to the future of middle governing bodies. A commission with the limited authority of the General Assembly can empower solutions and create new opportunities for middle governing bodies to flourish while it considers models for middle governing bodies and makes proposals to the 220th General Assembly (2012). The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly believes that the creation of this commission will provide the consultation, the leadership, and the time for these critical issues.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-06

Comment on Item 04-06—from the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) offers the following comment for the General Assembly’s consideration regarding Item 04-06. If the will of the body is to accept Item 04-06, the General Assembly Committee on Representation respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct that a member of the GACOR be one of the twenty-one persons appointed to the proposed administrative commission.

Rationale

The creation of a commission on Middle Governing Bodies directly affects the work of committees on representation at all levels of the church.

1. According to the Book of Order, the committee on representation’s “... main function shall be to advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies, and other units in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church” (Book of Order, G-9.0105b). The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) have complimentary and parallel, but different, roles and responsibilities. For a commission with such broad responsibilities, it is important that both the GANC and the GACOR be involved in the consultation process: the GANC with regard to recommendation of persons as candidates to serve and the GACOR to the representation and participation.

2. The commission, as it has been recommended, has broad powers, range, and scope of responsibilities that must be enumerated for faithful and informed actions. It is an unusual and unique response to a perceived need of the denomination. The GACOR had a variety of reactions to this recommendation, with some members recommending disapproval. It has struggled with its response. Having a member of the GACOR serve on the commission is a middle way to address concerns about participation and representation as well as the affect actions of the commission may have on the work of committees on representation.

Item 04-06 proposes one of the responsibilities assigned to the commission would be powers to review and recommend changes to the functions of the middle governing bodies. As a commission, the implied power would be to act on behalf of the General Assembly, if not constrained by the original action. Synods relate to the General Assembly Committee on Representation. Any changes to their make-up would affect the number of persons serving on GACOR as well as then number of entities reporting to the committee. As a locus for justice concerns for under-represented persons, synods have often been the level of church structure that deals with diversity and inclusion issues and accountability. The commission’s power to address the church’s mission and mandate, adjusting synod responsibilities and/or eliminating synods, raises concern for the GACOR that the synod work of dealing with representational and participation issues may be shifted primarily to the presbyteries.

The GACOR currently engages with sixteen synods in a ministry of mutual accountability and review. Any change to the number or functions of synods would produce significant changes in the ability of the GACOR to function. Implications for retaining this function are also changed if it moves to presbyteries. There are 173 presbyteries today. Even if this is reduced by twenty, GACOR might be asked to receive, review, and respond to over 150 annual reports in addition to the tasks it has to resource, advise, and advocate with General Assembly and its agencies. If the GACOR continued to only have the number of members equal to the number of synods, the task of encouraging the denomination to more fully “exhibit the kingdom to the world” by becoming more fully representational in its decision-making and achieving more full participation in leadership would become daunting, if not impossible.

At reunion, the new denomination made a commitment to groups historically underrepresented in the leadership of the church that the structure would dedicate resources to being intentional about representation and inclusion, and advocate for ensuring fair representation. Historically excluded groups have a lot of history with the denomination. They have experienced and witnessed injustice, and finds difficulty trusting. It is imperative that the Presbyterian church continue to uphold its commitment to diversity in the leadership of decision-making bodies and to representing the full bounty of the gifts of our members within that leadership. Without intentionality it is far too easy to pass on the opportunity to hear voices different from the dominant group. The GACOR believes that it is essential that someone whose experiences, skills, and direct interest are to “ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church” be a part of the proposed commission if created, and be at the table as a full voting member in the process of reviewing the structure and responsibilities of middle governing bodies.

[The assembly approved Item 04-07 with amendment. See pp. 28, 29-30.]

Report of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén in Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries (SCARB).

The Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén in Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries (SCARB) recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) do the following:

A. Creation of an Administrative Commission

1. Create an administrative commission to oversee the work and mission of the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest, and the Southwest (the Synod) and, if necessary, to intervene in that work. [Should the assembly approve Item 04-06, the commission recommended in Item 04-06 shall be designated as the Administrative Commission for this recommendation.]

Rationale for Recommendation A.1.

As the Special Administrative Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén (SCARB) did its work of assessing the issues that exist in the Synod, it became evident that the Synod is rife with power struggles among individuals, groups, and the middle governing bodies of the Synod itself that undermine the ability of the church in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico to focus on Christ’s Great Commission to “[g]o … and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you” (Mt. 28: 19, 20 NRSV). This situation, though apparent to many in leadership within the Synod, continues to escalate rather than plateau or lessen.

Further, it has been the experience of the committee that suggestions it has made to the leadership of the Synod have gone unheeded (e.g. recommendation that the Synod’s personnel committee begin functioning immediately and engage in a process of evaluating all paid staff before the end of 2009) and we believe that only when a body is created with the authority to mandate and implement needed changes and actions will such changes and actions be addressed.

2. [In creating an administrative commission, the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the commission to designate a subcommittee composed largely of the current members of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén (SCARB), with the further ability to supplement that subcommittee with no more than two additional persons, bringing the composition of SCARB to no more than seven members, to work with the]
Synod in implementing the directions of the administrative commission and providing guidance to the administrative commission in its designated roles] [The charge for SCARB shall be extended for two years, and SCARB shall be reconstituted by the Administrative Commission as a subcommittee of the commission, and the commission shall be empowered to appoint current members of SCARB and sufficient additional members to meet the requirements of G-9.0501b. The subcommittee shall work with the Synod of Boriquen in implementing the directions of the Administrative Commission and shall provide guidance to the Administrative Commission in its designated roles.]

Rationale for Recommendation A.2.

The SCARB has, over the period of its existence, been able to create some sense of trust among the leadership of the Synod. Further, SCARB is composed of individuals who are impartial in their relationship to and understanding of the issues that plague the Synod and, for the most part, are conversant in the language (Spanish), which is the language in which business is conducted in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico (the “Commonwealth”). At a critical time in the life of the Synod, we believe that introducing a new set of individuals and personalities unfamiliar with the issues, the leaders of the Synod, the Synod’s dynamics, and the language of the Commonwealth will only serve to engender distrust and undermine the ability of the commission to carry out its mandate in the most compassionate and Christian spirit possible.

Further, SCARB is painfully aware that issues of distrust permeate the current power struggles that undermine the effectiveness of the work and mission of the church in the Commonwealth. The special committee’s members believe that mitigating further distrust, particularly relative to the oversight of the General Assembly through an administrative commission, will better facilitate the just and proper administration of the commission’s mandate.

3. In creating an administrative commission, the 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the commission to conduct a study for the purpose of determining whether and how the work and mission of Jesus Christ may best be carried out in the Commonwealth.

Rationale for Recommendation A.3.

We believe that the current middle governing body structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) (the PC(USA)) in the Commonwealth does not enable the Synod to coalesce around strategies that will move it forward into the future, carrying out Christ’s Great Commission.

We are aware that part of this impasse may be a result of the rural vs. metropolitan populations, aggregation of current membership within a specific geographical part of the Commonwealth, and economic differences concentrated within specific geographical areas; all of which we believe may be contributing factors in the inability of the church in the Commonwealth to coalesce around common strategies and emphases.

Therefore, we believe that further study is necessary, including a review of the previous incarnation of the church in Puerto Rico as a presbytery tied to a synod in the continental United States (the “mainland”), to learn how past successes and mistakes under such a structure impacted and influenced the current impasse in the Synod’s apparent inability to move forward. Likewise, such a study would necessarily review whether and how the current impasse might best be addressed.

Such a period of additional study will, perhaps, also provide an opportunity for the Presbyterian church in the Commonwealth to find common ground and engage in meaningful self-examination, taking into account strengths and weaknesses that could lead to creation, in whatever form, of a stronger, healthier, and more united church, able to more effectively witness to the Good News in Jesus Christ. Already we see evidence of such self-examination, and efforts at reconciliation have occurred and apparently are being pursued as a result, at least in part, of SCARB’s engagement with the Boriquén Synod and presbyteries. Of note, the Presbytery of San Juan on January 30, 2010, adopted a resolution calling for reconciliation and the Presbytery of the Northwest followed with a resolution of its own calling on the Presbytery of San Juan to join them in efforts of reconciliation. See Appendices E and F (for Appendix E, see scarb-appendixes.pdf; Appendix F can be found at the end of this document).

B. Middle Governing Body Restructure—Commonwealth of Puerto Rico (the Commonwealth)

[1. The 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the administrative commission to dissolve the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest, and the Southwest (the Synod), if after further study, and before the next General Assembly, it determines such action to be appropriate.] [If, after further study, and before the next General Assembly, the Administrative Commission determines such action to be appropriate, the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the Administrative Commission to assume original jurisdiction of the Synod of Boriquen for the limited purpose of taking actions necessary to merge the Synod of Boriquen with a synod of the PC(USA) on the mainland, including the authority to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing, G-12.0103k.]
Rationale for Recommendation B.1.

As previously noted, we believe that the current middle governing body structure of the PC(USA) in the Commonwealth does not enable the Synod to coalesce around strategies that will move it forward into the future, carrying out Christ’s Great Commission.

Likewise, the Synod seems to be limited in its ability to effectively support the work it could be doing to spread the Gospel, due to a shortage of financial resources that will be exacerbated by the probable dismantling, recommended date of December 31, 2013, of the current National Mission Partnership funding stream upon which the Synod relies, in large part, to maintain its current middle governing structure. This change in its funding stream, we believe, will significantly impact the ability of the Synod to operate in both its missional and ecclesiastical roles.

It may be that upon further study, and given the limited financial resources that currently exist and that are anticipated in the near future, an alternative middle governing body structure would better be able to effectively use the talents of its membership, spread the power and responsibility among many individuals, instead of spreading such talent and energy among four middle governing bodies, which has the effect of diluting the talent pool and aggregating power and authority within a few people in each body and enable the church to find common ground to enable it to move forward.

[2. The 219th General Assembly (2010) authorizes the administrative commission to create a new governing body structure in the Commonwealth under the jurisdiction of a synod on the mainland of the United States of America, should the commission determine that the dissolution of the current governing body structure is no longer tenable or unable to effectively move into the future.]

Rationale for Recommendation B.2.

Though we are not clear or certain whether the power struggles that currently exist within and among the current governing body structures will be dissolved, we do believe that such struggles may be mitigated with the creation of a new middle governing body structure that is related to a synod on the mainland that is not engaged in the power struggles that currently exist. Likewise, it is conceivable that a restructured system might provide the Commonwealth’s Presbyterian leadership and members alike the ability to better work together in common cause rather than finding themselves at odds with one another for what are certainly limited human and financial resources.

In addition, we believe that a review of the previous incarnation of the church in Puerto Rico as a presbytery might enable us all to learn from past mistakes and successes, to minimize the former and maximize the latter, should the dissolution of the current middle governing body structures be warranted and a new middle governing body structure be created that would relate to a synod on the mainland.

C. Leadership

[The 219th General Assembly (2010) grants the administrative commission the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating new, or renewed, leadership in the Synod, particularly the positions of stated clerk(s) and synod executive, should it be determined to retain the current structure. Likewise, should the decision be to create a new middle governing structure, we recommend that the administrative commission be granted the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating persons to fill the leadership positions of stated clerk(s) and executive(s), as appropriate; and, in either instance, further grant the commission the authority and latitude to designate a subcommittee to act on its behalf in these matters.] [The 219th General Assembly (2010) grants the Administrative Commission the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating new or renewed temporary leadership in the Synod of Boriquen and/or its constituent presbyteries. In replacing current leadership, the Administrative Commission shall afford fundamental fairness and due process in the spirit of G-9.0705.]

Rationale for Recommendation C.

The members of the special committee believe that given the power struggles that currently exist within and among the various levels of the Synod, an independent commission with the authority to direct, facilitate, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating the missional and ecclesial leaders of the existing, or newly formed, governing body(ies) will better serve that process and ensure its timely administration and completion.

We also believe this will provide an opportunity for a new and/or renewed class of leaders to emerge that reflects the worth and value of the various and diverse segments of the Presbyterian church in the Commonwealth (for example, age, gender, geography, theology) in helping to move the church into the future.
D. Determination of Desire to Remain Part of PC(USA)

We recommend that the commission facilitate and oversee a canvass, poll, or survey to determine whether there exists a sufficient movement seeking disaffiliation from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (the PC(USA)). [Recommend that the Administrative Commission assess the degree of interest within the Synod of Boriquen and its constituent presbyteries and congregations in their continuing relationships with the PC(USA).]

Rationale for Recommendation D.

One of the undercurrents that exists within the Synod is the sense that there is a movement within the Synod seeking independence from the PC(USA). Though time and again in our discussions with church leaders within the Synod it has been stated that independence is not at the root of the discord within the Synod, the fact is that the issue of whether there is a viable and significant movement within the congregations and members of the Synod who would prefer independence from the PC(USA) is a matter that remains unsettled and unquantified.

As in most societies, issues that affect the secular community often are reflected within the church community. Since 1948, when the government of the United States of America granted the people of Puerto Rico the right to elect their own government, the issue of independence has been a wedge driven between the people of Puerto Rico. There are those who would seek statehood, those who would prefer that the current political status remain in place, and those that would seek independence. In 1967, 1993, and 1998, plebiscites were held in which the question of independence was put before the people. In each instance, the voters chose not to alter the existing political status. Nonetheless, the issue remains unresolved for many. In this regard, pro-independence persons and organizations continue to seek independence and have targeted institutions and organizations within Puerto Rican society as means of legitimizing the pro-independence cause. As such, it is not unexpected that the church in general, and the Synod in particular, might be the target of such a strategy.

Likewise, there are within the Synod voices that would seek a denomination independent of the PC(USA) as have their sisters and brothers in other Protestant Christian traditions (e.g. Methodists and Lutherans) even though they are not in fact among those also seeking political independence from the United States.

Nonetheless, the combination of these voices, both those Presbyterians seeking only a denomination independent of the PC(USA) and those Presbyterians seeking independence from the PC(USA) and from the United States government, though perhaps a minority, should be taken into account in any considerations related to the PC(USA) presence in the Commonwealth.

Therefore, we believe that addressing this issue directly might ease some of the discord within the Synod community. Should a significant segment of the Synod indicate a desire to declare its independence from the PC(USA), we are of the opinion that efforts should be made to facilitate such an action. There would, of course, be a variety of scenarios that might revolve around independence, including creation of an independent, island-wide Presbyterian/Reformed denomination or some transnational Presbyterian/Reformed denomination. Such a process would be a next step should independence be desired and we have chosen not to make recommendations on the type and character of such a process, believing that in the first instance it must be determined whether such a process would be necessary. If independence from the PC(USA) is not significantly desired by the congregations and members of the Synod, we feel that the issue then becomes much less of an issue around which discord can be fomented, allowing the newly formed presbytery or presbyteries to move forward.

E. Relationship Between the PC(USA), as a Structure, and the Synod

The 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the PC(USA), as a structure, and primarily the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) [to] explore and develop ways for the denomination to [more effectively] relate with the Synod [of Boriquen and its presbyteries] and its congregations [in a more effective manner].

Rationale for Recommendation E.

Unfortunately, the perception and, indeed, sometimes the actions, of the power structure of the PC(USA), as manifested in the OGA and the GAMC, cause the people and structures of the PC(USA) in the Commonwealth to have a sense of being second-class citizens removed from true full participation in the life of the PC(USA). On an island physically separated from the mainland and in which the principal and “official” language is Spanish, alienation and marginalization are easily manifested, oftentimes without recognition on the part of the Commonwealth’s sisters and brothers on the mainland. This requires the exploration and development of intentional steps to foster meaningful relationships in which we are all seen as equal partners in the life and governance of the PC(USA) and that facilitate and encourage full participation in that life and governance by our sisters and brothers in the Commonwealth. Further, it is not and should not be the goal of such steps to “assimilate” our sisters and brothers in the Commonwealth in the ways and processes of the dominant culture of the PC(USA), but to recognize and celebrate the culture and people in the Commonwealth and to appreciate their value and the differences that add to the rich flavor and diversity of the PC(USA).
No matter what course we embark upon in assisting our PC(USA) brothers and sisters in the Commonwealth in dealing with the irregularities and delinquencies we have identified within the Synod, it must be done in such a way that respects and is considerate of our differences. We firmly believe that this will help us all move together into the future in serving our Lord and Savior and in carrying out His Great Commission, in the Commonwealth, the mainland, and throughout God’s Kingdom.

F. Report

The administrative commission is directed to report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) any actions it may have taken on behalf of the General Assembly and the progress it has made in working with the Synod of Boriquén. The report would include any further recommendations for action that the General Assembly itself may need to approve.

Overall Rationale

Report of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries. (SCARB)

I. Executive Summary

The Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and its constituent presbyteries (SCARB) sought in earnest to carry out its charge, as outlined below. However, given the scope of the charge and the limited time available between the formation of SCARB and the time necessary to prepare its final report to the 219th General Assembly (2010), we were not able to complete the research and studies necessary to make definitive recommendations. However, we were able to arrive at a consensus that the effectiveness of the leadership and relationship among and between the Synod and its constituent presbyteries are seriously compromised and that actions must be taken to remedy those irregularities and delinquencies if the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and, more importantly, the work and witness of Jesus Christ in that special part of God’s world is to move forward into the future.

Of principal note is our belief that an administrative commission with the power and authority to act on behalf of the General Assembly to study how best to address those irregularities and delinquencies and then to act to remedy them is imperative.

Further we concluded that some instrument, be it a canvass, poll, or survey, be formulated to address the question of whether the Presbyterians in the Commonwealth desire to disaffiliate with the PC(USA). We are also of the belief that based on the answer to that question further action may be necessary to honor the will of the Presbyterians in the Commonwealth relative to such disaffiliation, though we have made no recommendations how such disaffiliation would be facilitated and what type of response would trigger such actions. We leave such decisions for future consideration by the assembly based on recommendations from the administrative commission we have asked be put in place to address the irregularities and delinquencies we believe exist in the Commonwealth.

II. Creation of Committee—Powers, Responsibilities, and Charge

A. Creation of, and Rationale for, a Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries (SCARB)

1. The Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), having been informed by multiple parties, including an action of one of the presbyteries in Puerto Rico (see Appendix D [for Appendix D, see scarb-appendixes.pdf]), that certain irregularities and delinquencies had occurred and were occurring in the Synod of Puerto Rico including, but not limited to:

   - The effectiveness of the stated clerk of the Synod and effectiveness of the Synod Council;
   - The effectiveness of the leadership of the three presbyteries;
   - The relationship among the presbyteries within the Synod;
   - The Synod’s financial practices and those financial practices of presbyteries;
   - Whether there is significant desire in Puerto Rico for a national Puerto Rico Presbyterian Church.

2. The Stated Clerk was further informed that the Synod had been unable to provide a forum for open and safe discussions among the constituent presbyteries.

3. With the request from the Presbytery of San Juan through its Mission Council, the Stated Clerk deemed that it was necessary to invoke Standing Rule K.2.b. The moderators of the General Assembly Mission Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly concurred with the Stated Clerk’s determination and authorized the Moderator of the General Assembly to appoint a five-person special committee to undertake Special Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and its constituent presbyteries.

As a result, the Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008) appointed the following persons to undertake Special Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and its constituent presbyteries:

The Reverend Mauricio Chacón, Presbytery of New Covenant;
The Reverend Lemuel García, Presbytery of Salem;
Elder Conrad Rocha, Presbytery of Santa Fe;
The Reverend Carmen Rosales, Presbytery of San Francisco;
The Reverend Gustavo Vásquez, Presbytery of Palisades.

B. Powers and Responsibilities of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén in Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries (SCARB)

Pursuant to the powers vested in the Moderator under Standing Rule K.2.b, the Moderator gave the special committee the following powers and responsibilities to

1. call meetings with the officers of each of the governing bodies;
2. call meetings of each governing body and its council;
3. review the effectiveness of the stated clerk of the Synod;
4. require all records (minutes, financial, personnel) of each of the constituent bodies;
5. give directives and advice to each of the governing bodies related to the correction of any irregularities or delinquencies discovered in the course of review; and,
6. correspond directly with congregations and pastors should the special committee learn that there is significant interest in a National Puerto Rico Presbyterian Church.

C. Charge to the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Puerto Rico and Its Constituent Presbyteries (SCARB)

1. The special committee shall exercise its powers and responsibilities in order to
   a. determine the causes of discord among Presbyterians in Puerto Rico;
   b. evaluate the effectiveness of the current synod and presbytery leadership; and
   c. evaluate whether there is any significant interest on the part of a significant majority of Presbyterians in Puerto Rico to create a Partner Puerto Rico Presbyterian denomination.

2. As a result of the exercise of its powers and responsibilities in addressing the issues of discord, effectiveness of leadership, and interest in creating a new Puerto Rican Presbyterian denomination, SCARB shall report all actions and proposals to the 219th General Assembly (2010) by the 120-day deadline, March 5, 2010, including:
   a. Proposed changes made to the Synod and to the presbyteries that might facilitate better working relationships among all the leadership of the governing bodies.
   b. Proposed changes to the Synod in leadership, structure, and personnel for its consideration.
   c. Proposed changes to the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding the reorganization of the Synod and its constituent presbyteries.
   d. Proposed changes to the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding the creation of a national Puerto Rico Presbyterian Church if it finds significant interest on the part of a significant majority. If such a proposal is made, the special committee shall propose to the 220th General Assembly (2012) a process for creating such a new denomination, along with steps necessary to maintain relationship with those congregations/pastors who wish to remain in the PC(USA).

III. Meetings and Mailings

July 1, 2009 Letter sent from Gradye Parsons to moderators and stated clerks of the Synod and three presbyteries, plus the synod executive and synod council moderator
IV. Proposals Made by SCARB to the Synod (with Commentary)

A. That the Synod and its constituent presbyteries engage in a review of their staff, particularly those occupying stated clerk positions and the position of interim synod executive.

We have learned that the work of the synod stated clerk was reviewed on February 28, 2010. We have also been informed that he had resigned from this office, effective February 28, 2010.

B. That the Synod call a specially called meeting for the purpose of submitting to the synod commissioners a proposal to build a parking garage in Mayagüez.

This recommendation resulted in a specially called meeting of the synod to address the issue and, ultimately, the Synod at its regular November meeting taking steps to address and vote on this proposal.

C. That the interim synod executive avail himself of a mentor in the person of the Reverend José Luis Casal for the purpose of becoming more familiar with the role, responsibilities, and pitfalls of being an interim middle governing body presbyter.
The special committee has been informed that this suggestion has not been acted on by the interim executive presbyter of the Synod.

History of Puerto Rican Church Based on Information in the Anuario de Misión 2002

When the English arrived on the island of Puerto Rico in the 1500s, the first Protestant religious service was celebrated in San Juan Bay. The Dutch also celebrated services on the island, following the Reformed tradition, but the predominant religion was Roman Catholic.

About 1860, Antonio Badillo learned from a Dane named Heyliger about Christian principles and received a Bible from him. Don Antonio began to read and study the Bible and began preaching the Good News; his followers were called los Bíblicos. By 1868, Badillo and Heyliger had extended their preaching and teaching to the mountains in the west of the island.

In 1898, the Treaty of Paris transferred the sovereignty of Puerto Rico from Spain to the United States. Within the year, North American Presbyterian missionaries started arriving in Puerto Rico, sent by the Board of National Missions. Los Bíblicos worked alongside these Presbyterians and formed the roots of the Presbyterian church in Puerto Rico. The Reverends J.M. Greene and Milton E. Caldwell began working as missionaries in Santurce and Mayaguez on April 1, 1899. The First Presbyterian Church in Mayagüez was officially formed with eleven members. In Santurce, the second Presbyterian church was formed, along with a clinic that is today the Presbyterian Hospital. Clara Hazen directed Marina Neighborhood House in Aguadilla, which included a medical dispensary and a school.

In 1902, missionaries were sent by the Board of National Missions into certain other districts, including Mayagüez, Aguadilla, and San Juan; other denominations went elsewhere. The Presbytery of Puerto Rico was formed on October 28, 1902, as part of the Synod of Iowa, where the missionaries held their membership. In 1904, the Presbytery of Puerto Rico became part of the Synod of New York.

During this time the presbytery made three important agreements:
1. The official language of the body would be Spanish.
2. Theological education would be put into the reach of the nationals.
3. The preparation of Puerto Rican ministers would be promoted.

The first seminary in Puerto Rico was organized in Mayagüez by Dr. Underwood and José López was the first candidate for the Holy Ministry. In 1919, this seminary joined with other denominations’ theological schools to become the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico. José Vélez Ortiz was the first Puerto Rican minister to be called to a church, the Presbyterian Church in Isabela.

By 1912, Dr. John Harris had organized eight churches and founded the Polytechnic Institute in San German, now known as the Inter-American University of Puerto Rico. In 1945, land was purchased to create El Guacico de San Sebastián, now used as a conference and retreat center of the Synod. In 1968, the Reverend Jorge Acevedo Cruz was elected general presbyter of the Presbytery of Puerto Rico.

In 1971, the General Assembly in Denver created the Synod of Puerto Rico and its three presbyteries. On January 7, 1973, el Sínodo de Boriquén was officially organized, moderated by the Reverend Pablo Casasús. In 1983, Elder Ana Inés Braulio Flores became the first... woman executive of the synod, now a part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), which was formed from the former two denominations. The Synod of Puerto Rico now (2009) includes 73 congregations and 106 ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

Saludos en Cristo Jesús.

A nombre del Presbiterio del Noroeste agradezco su presencia en nuestra reunión ordinaria del sábado, 27 de febrero de 2010. De igual manera reconocemos vuestras palabras de perdón, reconciliación para iniciar los pasos necesarios restableciendo la fraternal visión y misión a la que estamos llamados/as. No podemos pasar por alto vuestra participación en la conversación que fue fundamental para el acuerdo que se somete a continuación.

Informo lo que el Presbiterio del Noroeste acordó

1. Solicitar que los Concilios del PSJ y el PNO se reúnan. Esta gestión será responsabilidad de los dos moderadores de los respectivos concilios; Rev. Nelson Gutiérrez Pagán y el Anc. José A. Rodríguez Robles.

2. La reunión acordada será en la más completa intención reconciliadora.

3. Que los acuerdos afirmativos a los fines antes expuestos sean informados a todos los cuerpos constituyentes de la IP en Puerto Rico así como el Comité de Revisión de la AG y la Oficina del Secretario Permanente de la AG.

4. Que ambos cuerpos programen, sin limitarse a ellos;
   a. Reuniones de oración
   b. Diseñar, participar en eventos de aprendizaje y capacitación en las áreas relacionadas al interés reconciliatorio.
   c. Reuniones y eventos de adoración de los dos presbiterios cuerpos
      (1) Se propone la celebración del Día de Pentecostés.

5. Que los Moderadores del PNO y del PSJ consideren invitar al Concilio del PSJ cuando lo crean oportuno.

Es nuestra seguridad usted como el Anc. José A. Rodríguez Robles entienden la importancia de esta intención e igualmente se han comprometido a colaborar para tales fines.

Atentamente,
Rev. Gerardo López Vigo
Secretario Permanente Presbiterio del Noroeste

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly that Item 04-07 presents the following matters that the assembly should consider (recommendations of the special committee are shown in italic, followed by ACC advice):

A. Relative to the Creation of an Administrative Commission

1. That the 219th General Assembly (2010) create an administrative commission to oversee the work and mission of the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest (del Noroeste), and the Southwest (del Suroeste) (the Synod) and, if necessary, to intervene in that work.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that it may create a commission such as is envisioned in Recommendation A.1. under the provisions of G-9.0500 and G-13.0103k, l, m, and n of the Book of Order.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further advises the General Assembly that it is permissible to combine the commission envisioned in this recommendation with that envisioned in the COGA recommendation, Item 04-06, dealing with matters related to middle governing bodies. The committee refers the assembly to its advice on that item. It draws special attention to the differences between committees and commissions and to the requirements for specifying the powers and duties of a commission (see G-9.0500).

2. That the 219th General Assembly (2010), in creating an administrative commission, authorize the commission to designate a subcommittee composed largely of the current members of the Special Committee on the Administrative Review of the Synod of Boriquén (SCARB), with the further ability to supplement that subcommittee with no more than two additional persons, bringing the composition of SCARB to no more than seven members, to work with the Synod in implementing the directions of the administrative commission and providing guidance to the administrative commission in its designated roles.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that it may authorize its commission to create a subcommittee as envisioned in Recommendation A.2. under the provisions of G-9.0500.

The language authorizing the creation of the subcommittee is, however, unclear. The SCARB is currently composed of four ministers and one layperson, which fails to meet the requirement that committees of governing bodies consist of at least one-half laypersons (G-9.0501b). If a new subcommittee of seven were to be created, it would be necessary to add at least three new lay members and carry over not more than three of the four ministers currently on SCARB (and the one lay member). If this does not reflect the wisdom of the assembly, more specific language should be used to describe the subcommittee’s composition.

3. That the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the administrative commission to conduct a study for the purpose of determining whether and how the work and mission of Jesus Christ may best be carried out in Puerto Rico.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that it may direct the administrative commission to take the action envisioned in Recommendation A.3. under the provisions of G-13.0103a and k.

B. Relative to Middle Governing Body Restructure in Puerto Rico

1. That the 219th General Assembly (2010) authorize the administrative commission to dissolve the Synod of Boriquén and the Presbyteries of San Juan, the Northwest (del Noroeste), and the Southwest (del Suroeste) (the Synod), if after further study, and before the next General Assembly, it determines such action to be appropriate.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that the actions envisioned in Recommendation B.1. and 2. raise constitutional issues. The provisions of G-13.0103m and G-13.0103n empower the General Assembly to “divide, unite, or otherwise combine synods or portions of synods” and to “approve the organization, division, uniting, or combining of presbyteries … by synods.” They do not explicitly provide that the assembly may “dissolve” a synod. Similarly, G-12.0102k lodges the responsibility to “organize, … divide, unite, or otherwise combine” presbyteries in the synod. There is no mention of a power to dissolve a presbytery without provision of a successor entity.
More significant, perhaps, is the question of whether, in authorizing a commission of the General Assembly to dissolve presbyteries, the assembly is transgressing on powers constitutionally allocated to the synods. The ACC believes that a dangerous precedent might be set by such an authorization, and that a wiser course of action would be to limit the language of the commission’s authorization to those powers already given to the General Assembly. The ACC advises that the charge to the commission would be improved by authorizing the commission to create a new synod, successor to the current Synod of Boriquén, or to combine the current Synod of Boriquén with another existing synod, and then to approve the creation, division, union, or combination of the presbyteries of San Juan, del Noroeste, and del Suroeste according to the decision of the new or combined synod.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the action in Recommendation B.2. does not specify the particular governing body structure to be created by action of the commission, or which synod on the “mainland of the United States of America” would have jurisdiction. If the action is left in its present form, the effect would be to empower this commission to create this unspecified structure and assign jurisdiction over it to an unspecified synod. If the General Assembly wishes to be more specific in its instructions, the language of Recommendation B.2. should be more precise.

C. Relative to Leadership

That the 219th General Assembly (2010) grant the administrative commission the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating new, or renewed, leadership in the Synod, particularly the positions of stated clerks and synod executive, should it be determined to retain the current structure. Likewise, should the decision be to create a new middle governing structure, we recommend that the administrative commission be granted the authority to facilitate, direct, and oversee the process of identifying and nominating persons to fill the leadership positions of stated clerk(s) and executive(s), as appropriate; and, in either instance, further grant the commission the authority and latitude to designate a subcommittee to act on its behalf in these matters.

While the recommendation does not so specify, the identification and nomination of new staff for both synods and presbyteries may also involve the termination of the employment of existing staff. The ACC advises the General Assembly that there are separate processes for terminating executive staff and stated clerks. The form is specified in G-9.0705 and involves notification of the staff person whose employment is to be terminated and a hearing prior to the adoption of the recommendation to terminate. Provisions for the termination of a stated clerk are not explicit in the Book of Order; the ACC refers the General Assembly to its recommendations in Item 05-14.

D. Relative to Determination of Desire to Remain Part of PC(USA)

We recommend that the administrative commission facilitate and oversee a canvass, poll, or survey to determine whether there exists a sufficient movement seeking disaffiliation from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [the PC(USA)].

The purpose of this recommendation is to suggest a process by which the administrative commission might determine the degree of support in the Synod of Boriquén to seek “disaffiliation” from the PC(USA). The ACC finds that the process envisioned raises constitutional issues. A “canvass, poll, or survey” suggests a process that lacks constitutional support. Section G-4.0301e states as a principle of Presbyterian government that “Decisions shall be reached in governing bodies by vote, following opportunity for discussion, and a majority shall govern.” While this does not directly apply to an assessment of support for or against a particular action, it does suggest that any process used to discern the will of Christ for the church should be through a deliberative assembly where different points of view may be evaluated in a spirit of prayer. Moreover, the term “disaffiliation” lacks constitutional definition, and lacks sufficient context to interpret what specific action might be envisioned by “disaffiliation,” were it constitutionally permitted. “Disaffiliate” suggests a prior act of “affiliation.” Congregations do not “affiliate” with the church as if the relationship of a particular church with the denomination were at the will of the particular church. Presbyteries have the sole right to organize, receive, or unite churches (G-11.0103b) and, similarly, to “divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members” (G-11.0103i).

Nevertheless, this recommendation assumes that such an administrative commission could be granted the authority to “disaffiliate” congregations, presbyteries, or the whole synod. Neither the General Assembly (or a commission thereof) nor a synod (or a commission exercising original jurisdiction over a synod) has the authority to “disaffiliate” (or even to dismiss) a synod, presbytery, or a congregation of the PC(USA). Section G-13.0103m grants the General Assembly power “to organize new synods and to divide, unite, or otherwise combine synods or portions of synods previously existing” and G-13.0103n grants the General Assembly authority “to approve the organization, division, uniting, or combining of presbyteries or portions of presbyteries by synods.” Similarly, G-12.0102k gives synods the authority “to organize new presbyteries [and] to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing,” and to create racial ethnic non-geographic presbyteries. However, there is no constitutional authority for a General Assembly or synod to dismiss a congregation or presbytery to another denomination or to independence. The Constitution envisions dismissal of congregations singly, rather than the dismissal of whole governing bodies with their constituent congregations.

Accordingly, the request to seek disaffiliation or dismissal properly comes before a presbytery by the session of a church, in consultation with its members and the presbytery. Processes already exist to dismiss a congregation to another Reformed body. No provision exists to “disaffiliate” a congregation to independent status. Should there be sufficient interest to warrant the creation of “an independent, island-wide Presbyterian/Reformed denomination or some transnational Presbyterian/Reformed denomination” that denomination must be established first, and congregations dismissed to it individually by the presbytery in consultation with the members of each particular congregation. Should a presbytery fall beneath the requisite number of churches, the synod should unite the presbytery with another presbytery in the synod.

The purpose of this process is to preserve the organic unity of the church under G-1.4000 and G-4.3000, and to recognize the right of presbyteries to exercise authority for mission and governance of churches within their bounds (G-11.0103).

E. Relative to the Relationship Between the PC(USA), as a Structure, and the Synod

The 219th General Assembly (2010) directs the PC(U.S.A.), as a structure, and primarily the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) to explore and develop ways for the denomination to more effectively relate with the Synod and its congregations.

This recommendation requires no constitutional interpretation.

F. Report

The administrative commission is directed to report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) any actions it may have taken on behalf of the General Assembly and the progress it has made in working with the Synod of Boriquén. The report would include any further recommendations for action that the General Assembly itself may need to approve.

This recommendation requires no constitutional interpretation.

On Organizing a Non-Geographic Korean Language Presbytery—From the Synod of the South Atlantic.

The Synod of South Atlantic overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve the organization of a new non-geographic Korean language presbytery pursuant to its powers under G-13.0103n.

Rationale

The Synod of South Atlantic met Thursday and Friday, March 4–5, 2010 at the First Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Florida where the synod office is located.

Synod Moderator, Elder Jane Miller put the question to the synod assembly of commissioners to vote on the request to form a new Korean-American Presbytery in the Synod of South Atlantic. The vote was unanimous in favor of forming the new presbytery and sending this request to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for action at the 219th General Assembly (2010) meeting July 3–10.

The Rev. Gradye Parson

The Presbyterian Church (USA)

Louisville, KY 40202-1396

Dear Sir:

Greetings in the name of our Lord, from the Presbytery of San Juan.

It is my understanding that your are in some degree aware of recent developments in the Synod of Puerto Rico, as some information must have transcended, perhaps through our friend and collaborator, Ms. Loyda Aja, whom, I am told, is very concerned about the situation. It is my understanding also, that several high officers of our denomination will be present at the next meeting of the Synod of Puerto Rico Council, early in July.

I myself, being very surprised and preoccupied at the speedy development of events, have called the matter to the attention of Presbytery Council. We are particularly preoccupied with the possibility that a relatively small group of proponents of a National Puerto Rican Presbyterian Church, may be attempting to assume absolute control of the Synod, and trying to speedily implement their project, before the majority of church members in Puerto Rico are fully aware of their intentions and the serious consequences resulting thereof.

We are concerned about the integrity of the Presbytery of San Juan, and about the possibility that there may be an intention to seize financial and property resources by the two presbyteries which appear to be in critical financial conditions.

As things are moving so fast, the Presbytery of San Juan has adopted a resolution which accompanies this document. In essence, it describes the actions of Southwest and Northwest Presbytery as damaging to the mutual trust necessary for joint work among presbyteries, and in fact a rebellion against our PC(USA) Constitution. It reaffirms the commitment of our Presbytery to the doctrine, principles and polity of our denomination. It furthermore requests of GAC that it name a administrative commission for the Synod, while its future course is determined. It requests that the Synod be dissolved, as the Presbytery of San Juan cannot remain in a relationship where we understand the two other presbyteries are underhandedly trying to exclude us from the decision-making processes, and to monopolize the authority. As the Synod requires at least three presbyteries, our further request to be reassigned to another Synod, implies the dissolution of the Synod of Puerto Rico, and the distribution of its property.

This is our position at this time. Our intention is to preserve our dignity, property and rights, and to collaborate with the national leadership of the denomination in the rapid solution of this severe problem. Therefore we request your advice, and desire to provide the Office of the Stated Clerk with the tools necessary to take adequate and prompt action. to defend the integrity of the PC (USA). We are aware that there are many committed members in the two fore mentioned presbyteries, and that the dissidents are probably in a minority. But the dangers involved in the unreasonable actions of the leadership of said presbyteries requires of us definitive actions that may be functional in the worse case scenario.

I request that you study our position, advise us in this matter, and take with the greatest seriousness this matter, as the main difficulty seems to be the inconsistency and apparent wantonness of their actions. It is this fact which has lead us to believe they are not to be trusted. As I said, this is the case with the present leadership of Southwest and Northwest Presbyteries, not the rest of the leadership or membership. But as they have not been effective in asserting their loyalty or in countering the actions of their leaders, we cannot rely on politics as usual as a way out of this mess.

Our hopes and prayers are that this matter may be solved to the greater benefit of God’s Kingdom, the edification of the Church and the progress of the Gospel in Puerto Rico.

Sincerely,

Presbytery of San Juan

Presbyterian Church (USA)

The Presbytery of San Juan, through its Mission Council, decides and determines:

1. To declare that the recent actions of the Southwest and Northwest presbyteries, requesting the resignation of all members of the Mission Council of the Boriquen Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico, and promoting the restructuring of said body with the officers of the three presbyteries constitutes a breaking off of mutual trust among presbyteries, a dissolution of the relationship necessary for the common life of the presbyteries within the Synod, a rejection of the Reformed principle of doing everything decently and in order, and in fact a rebellion against the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

2. To affirm the intention of the Presbytery of San Juan to be loyal to the doctrine, principles, and polity of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

3. To request of the General Assembly that it appoint an Administrative Commission for the Boriquen Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico, until the future of the Synod is decided, and which governing bodies and structures may succeed it, as well as the destiny of the jurisdiction and properties of the Presbyterian Church (USA) in Puerto Rico, whether they be under the direct governance of the Synod or of lower governing bodies.

4. To request of the General Assembly the dissolution of the Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico, and the equitable distribution of its property among its presbyteries.

5. To request that the Presbytery of San Juan be transferred in its integrity to another synod of the denomination.

6. To determine, meanwhile, not to participate in any manner in the structures, committees, agencies and activities of the Boriquen Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico, until the General Assembly assumes jurisdiction and reorganized it. Without the participation of our presbytery, the Synod is in fact rendered not functional, and has no legal quorum. Any attempt to assemble such body and to deliberate or to take decisions will be seen as an illegal usurpation of jurisdiction, and will be impugned by the Presbytery of San Juan both in ecclesiastical and civil courts.

Approved by the Presbytery of San Juan on June 24, 2009.

I thus certify,

Secretario Permanente del PBPR

Saludos fraternales.

Le refiero para consideración del Concilio del SPBPR el acuerdo tomado el pasado sábado 13 de junio de 2009 por el Concilio del PNO. El mismo es una respuesta a una solicitud del PSO.

1. Se escriba al Secretario Permanente, el Moderador, la Presidenta del Concilio y al Ejecutivo Interino una carta expresando nuestras inquietudes y preocupaciones por la forma y manera pobres en la que el Concilio de Sínodo y el Secretario Permanente del SPBPR han ejecutado sus acciones constitucionales impidiendo los trabajos apropiados.

2. Se solicite la próxima Asamblea del SPBPR que se declare vacante al Concilio del Sínodo y en su defecto se nombre un concilio especial compuesto por quince personas, a saber: Moderador/a, Presidente/a del Concilio, Secretario/a Permanente y Tesorero/a de cada presbiterio y el/la Moderador/a, Secretario/a Permanente y Tesorero/a del Sínodo. Este Concilio Especial estará en funciones hasta que se apruebe una nueva estructura.

3. Se solicite que se declare vacante la Secretaría Permanente de Sínodo y se proceda a nombrar un/a nuevo/a incumiente que pueda cumplir adecuadamente con estas responsabilidades de acuerdo a la misión y objetivos del SPBPR.

El Concilio del PNO acordó añadir al inciso #2 se incluya al Presidente del Concilio 2009 según Reglamento.

Se acordó que este asunto se llevará a la próxima reunión del PNO sea oficial o extraoficial. Se le informará de la misma al liderato de los cuerpos, Sínodo y presbiterios. La carta certificada con acuse de recibo le llegará al apartado postal del SPBPR.

Louisville, KY 40202-1396

Estimado Rev. Parson:

Saludos en nombre de Nuestro Señor, desde el Presbiterio de San Juan.

Tengo entendido que usted conoce hasta cierto punto los acontecimientos que han ocurrido recientemente en el Sinodo de Puerto Rico, ya que alguna información debe haber trascendido, quizás a través de nuestra amiga y colaboradora, la Sra. Loyda Aja, a quien, según se me ha dicho, le preocupa mucho la situación. También tengo entendido de que varios altos funcionarios de nuestra denominación están presentes en la siguiente reunión del Concilio del Sinodo de Puerto Rico que se celebrará a principios de julio.

Por mi parte, estoy sintiéndome muy sorprendido y preocupado por la rapidez con que han transcurrido los eventos, por lo cual he referido el asunto al Concilio del Presbiterio. Nos preocupa particularmente la posibilidad de que un grupo relativamente pequeño de proponentes de una Iglesia Presbiteriana Nacional Puertorriqueña podría estar intentando asumir el control absoluto del Sinodo, y de tratar de implementar su proyecto aceleradamente antes de que la mayoría de los miembros de la Iglesia en Puerto Rico se dé plena cuenta de sus intenciones y de las graves consecuencias de las mismas.

Nos preocupa la integridad del Presbiterio de San Juan, así como de la posibilidad de que exista la intención de apoderarse de recursos financieros y materiales por parte de los dos presbiterios que aparentan estar en una condición financiera crítica.

Debido a la celeridad de los hechos, el Presbiterio de San Juan ha adoptado una resolución que se adjunta a este documento. En esencia, describe las acciones del Presbiterio del Sureste y el Presbiterio del Noroeste como nocivas para la confianza mutua necesaria para las labores conjuntas entre ambos presbiterios, así como una rebelión contra la Constitución de nuestra iglesia (PEUA). Esta reafirma el compromiso de nuestro presbiterio de observar la doctrina, los principios y la política de nuestra denominación. También solicita ante el CAG el nombramiento de una comisión administrativa para el Sinodo, mientras se determina su futuro. Solicita la disolución del Sinodo, ya que en el Presbiterio de San Juan no podemos mantener una relación en la que percibimos que los otros dos presbiterios intentan clandestinamente excluirnos del proceso de toma de decisiones y monopolizar la autoridad. Como el Sinodo requiere de por lo menos tres presbiterios, nuestra solicitud adicional de ser reasignados a otro sinodo implica la disolución del Sinodo de Puerto Rico y la distribución de sus bienes.

Esta es nuestra posición actual. Nuestra intención es preservar nuestra dignidad, así como nuestros bienes y derechos, y colaborar con el liderato nacional de la denominación para que se solucione rápidamente este grave problema. Debido a esto, solicitamos su consejo y queremos ofrecer al Despacho del Secretario Permanente las herramientas que sean necesarias para tomar medidas apropiadas y oportunas con el fin de defender la integridad de la PEUA. Estamos conscientes de que ambos presbiterios mencionados anteriormente cuentan con miembros dedicados y de que los disidentes son probablemente una minoría. Pero los peligros que conllevan las acciones irrazonables del liderato de dichos presbiterios requieren que tomemos medidas definitivas, las cuales habría que implementar en el peor de los casos.

Le pido que estudie nuestra posición, nos aconseje sobre este asunto y lo considere con toda la seriedad que amerita el caso, ya que la mayor dificultad parece ser la inconsistencia y la aparente falta de sentido en sus acciones. Es este hecho lo que nos ha llevado a considerar que no se puede confiar en ellos. Tal como he expresado, esta es la situación del presente liderato de los presbiterios del Sureste y el Noroeste, y no del resto del liderato o de sus miembros. Pero como no han demostrado efectivamente su lealtad, ni han tomado medidas efectivas para contrarrestar las acciones de sus líderes, no podemos basarnos en las políticas acostumbradas para superar este conflicto.

Dirigimos nuestras esperanzas y oraciones para que este asunto se resuelva para el mayor beneficio del Reino del Señor, el avance espiritual de la Iglesia y el progreso del Evangelio en Puerto Rico.

Atentamente,

El Presbiterio de San Juan, a través de su Concilio de Misión, decide y determina:

1. Declarar que las recientes acciones de los presbiterios del Sureste y el Noroeste, solicitando la renuncia de todos los miembros del Concilio de Misión del Sínodo del Presbiterio de Boriquén y promoviendo la reestructuración de dicho cuerpo junto con los oficiales de los tres presbiterios, constituye una ruptura de la confianza mutua entre los presbiterios, una disolución de la relación necesaria para la vida común de los presbiterios dentro del Sínodo, un rechazo a los principios Reformados de obrar con decencia y orden, y de hecho, una rebelión contra la Constitución de la Iglesia Presbiteriana (USA).

2. Afirmar la intención del Presbiterio de San Juan de mantenerse leal a la doctrina, los principios y la política de la Iglesia Presbiteriana (USA).

3. Solicitar a la Asamblea General que designe a una Comisión Administrativa para el Sínodo del Presbiterio de Boriquén de Puerto Rico, hasta que se decida el futuro del Sínodo y qué estructuras y cuerpos gobernantes podrán sucederle, así como el destino de la jurisdicción y las propiedades de la Iglesia Presbiteriana (USA) en Puerto Rico, ya sea bajo el gobierno directo del Sínodo o de cuerpos gobernantes inferiores.

4. Solicitar a la Asamblea General la disolución del Sínodo del Presbiterio de Puerto Rico y la distribución equitativa de sus bienes entre sus presbiterios.

5. Solicitar que el Presbiterio de San Juan sea transferido en su totalidad a otro sinodo de la denominación.

6. Determinar, mientras tanto, no participar de ninguna forma en las estructuras, los comités, las agencias y las actividades del Sínodo del Presbiterio de Boriquén de Puerto Rico, hasta que la Asamblea General asuma la jurisdicción y lo reorganice. Sin la participación de nuestro presbiterio, el Sínodo quedará inactivo y sin quórum legal. Cualquier intento de convocar a dicho cuerpo y de deliberar o tomar decisiones, se considerará una usurpación ilegal de la jurisdicción y será impugnada por el Presbiterio de San Juan tanto en tribunales eclesiásticos como civiles.

Aprobado por el Presbiterio de San Juan el 24 de junio de 2009.

Por lo tanto, lo certifico.

Rev. Cruz Alberto Negrün
Stated Clerk of the PBPR [Boriquén Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico]

Fraternally greetings,

I submit for the consideration of the PBPR [Boriquén Presbyterian Synod of Puerto Rico] Council the decision taken by the PNO [Northwest Presbytery] Council last Saturday June 13, 2009. This is a response to a request made by the PPO [Southwest Presbytery].

1. To write a letter to the Stated Clerk, the Moderator, the President of the Council and the Interim Executive to express our concerns and worries about how poorly the Synod Council and the Stated Clerk of the PBPR have executed their constitutional duties, thus obstructing the appropriate tasks.

2. To request that the next PBPR Assembly declare vacant the Synod Council and, in its absence, name a special council constituted of the following fifteen people: the Moderator, Council President, Stated Clerk and Treasurer of each presbytery and the Moderator, Stated Clerk and Treasurer of the Synod. This Special Council would act until a new structure is approved.

3. To request that the Stated Clerk of the Synod be declared vacant and to proceed to name a new incumbent who can carry out these responsibilities in accordance with the mission and the objectives of the PBPR.

The PNO Council agreed to add the President of the 2009 Council to item #2 in accordance with the Rule.

It was agreed to take this issue to the next PNO meeting, whether it be regular or specially called. The leaders of the bodies, the Synod and the presbyteries, will be notified of the meeting. A certified letter with acknowledgment of receipt will be sent to the P.O. Box of the PBPR.

RE: Resolución aprobada por la Asamblea del Presbiterio de San Juan

El Presbiterio de San Juan en su pasada reunión ordinaria del 30 de enero de 2010, acordó aprobar la siguiente resolución con respecto a la situación interna del Sínodo y sus presbiterios:

El Presbiterio de San Juan, reconociendo que se han vivido tiempos difíciles en las relaciones entre las diferentes estructuras eclesiales [y que] estas circunstancias nos han llevado a herir y a ser heridos, y lamentar a aquellas personas por quien Cristo murió, entiende que no es apropiado que un cuerpo interverse en las responsabilidades de otro, mucho menos que sugiera la destitución de oficiales y disolución de estructuras que no sean las propias. [Por tanto,] en un espíritu de reconciliación hacemos un llamado a todas nuestras judicaturas, su oficialidad y sus miembros, a perdonar y a ser perdonados, a caminar la milla extra, a buscar consensos, a esforzarnos por lograr la unidad en la diversidad, a dirigir nuestras discrepancias con amor y respeto, a arrepentirnos de nuestros pecados individuales y colectivos, a aprender de nuestros errores y enfocar nuestros esfuerzos en ser fieles al Señor Jesucristo renovando nuestro compromiso con los grandes fines de la Iglesia.

ACCION: Se adopta la resolución como expresión del Presbiterio de San Juan y se acuerda notificarla al Presbiterio del Noroeste, Presbiterio del Sureste, Sínodo Presbiteriano Boricúa y la Asamblea General de nuestra denominación. La resolución se adoptó sin oposición.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: February 4, 2010

FROM: Aurelio A. García Archilla, Ph.D.
Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Juan

TO: The officers of the presbyteries of the Northwest and Southwest; the officers of the Boriquén Presbyterian Synod in Puerto Rico; the Office of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the PC(USA).

REF.: Resolution approved by the Presbytery of San Juan Assembly.

In its last regular meeting held on January 30, 2010, the Presbytery of San Juan agreed to approve the following resolution pertaining to the internal situation of the Synod and its presbyteries:

The Presbytery of San Juan, recognizing the difficult times in the relationships among the different ecclesiastical structures, [and that] these circumstances have led us to wound and to be wounded, to hurt those people for whom Christ died, understands that it is inappropriate for a body to get involved in the responsibilities of another, much less to suggest the dismissal of officers and the dissolution of structures that are not its own. [Therefore,] in a spirit of reconciliation we call all of our judicatories, their officers and their members, to forgive and be forgiven, to walk the extra mile, to seek consensus, to make an effort to achieve unity within diversity, to resolve our differences through love and respect, to repent of our individual and collective sins, to learn from our mistakes and to focus our efforts on being faithful to our Lord Jesus Christ by renewing our commitment to the great ends of the church.

ACTION: The resolution is adopted as the expression of the Presbytery of San Juan and it is agreed to notify about it to the Presbytery of the Northwest, the Presbytery of the Southwest, the Boriquén Presbyterian Synod and the General Assembly of our denomination. The resolution was passed without opposition.

Rev. Nelson Gutiérrez Pagán
Moderator of the Presbytery of San Juan

Dear Rev. Gutiérrez,

Greetings in Jesus Christ.

Thank you on behalf of the Northwest Presbytery for attending our regular meeting on Saturday, February 27, 2010. We also acknowledge your words of forgiveness and reconciliation as the first necessary steps to reestablish the fraternal vision and mission of our calling. We cannot ignore your role in the conversation which was essential for the agreement that is set forth below.

The Northwest Presbytery agreed to the following:

1. Request a meeting between the Councils of the San Juan Presbytery (SJP) and the Northwest Presbytery (NWP). The two moderators of the respective councils will be responsible for this task; the Rev. Nelson Gutiérrez Pagán and Elder José A. Rodríguez Robles.

2. The intention of the agreed meeting will be of total reconciliation.

3. To report to all the constituent bodies of the Presbyterian Church in Puerto Rico and to the General Assembly Review Committee and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly the approving agreements to the objectives mentioned above.

4. The two bodies will schedule, among other things;
   a. Prayer meetings
   b. Lay out and participate in learning and training events related to the areas that need reconciliation.
   c. Worship meetings and events of both Presbyterian bodies
      1. The celebration of the Day of Pentecost is proposed.

5. That the moderators of the NWP and the SJP consider inviting the SJP Council when considered appropriate.

We are certain that both you and Elder José A. Rodríguez Robles understand the importance of this intention and also have committed to this purpose.

Sincerely, Rev. Gerardo López Vigo

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-01. See p. 57.]

On Amending D-6.0101 and D-10.0101 Regarding Conciliation and Mediation—From the Presbytery of Northern Kansas.

The Presbytery of Northern Kansas overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall D-6.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “A remedial case is initiated by the filing of a complaint with the stated clerk of the governing body having jurisdiction. The complaint shall be accompanied by a statement indicating what efforts have been made to fulfill the biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences.”

2. Shall D-10.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “Procedure preliminary to a disciplinary case is initiated by submitting to the clerk of session or the stated clerk of the presbytery having jurisdiction over the member (D-3.0101) a written statement of an alleged offense, together with any supporting information, and an account of efforts made to fulfill the biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences. The statement shall give a clear narrative and allege facts that, if proven true, would likely result in disciplinary action. Such allegations shall be referred to an investigating committee. (D-10.0201)”

Rationale

As noted in Chapter 1 of the Rules of Discipline, it is our responsibility to conciliate and mediate before escalating into the judicial process of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

There are significant human resources and finance costs involved with judicial process of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Therefore, the judicial process can be expensive in financial resources and in relationship capital. Utilized carelessly, the judicial process disrupts the tender balance between “rules” and “relationships” called for in Book of Order.

Relationships need to be valued over rules. The solid expectation of invoking a mediation process strengthens “the biblical duty of church people to ‘come to terms quickly with your accuser while you are on the way to court …’ (Matthew 5:25)” (Book of Order, D-1.0103). The idea of the moral responsible life is reflected in the judicial process of the church when we deal directly with one another through mediation to draw conclusions about what God is enabling and requiring us to be together as the body of Christ. Seeking clarity to questions of standing would be a necessity of such mediation. By requiring a mediation process, the church testifies to our common need to understanding our actions and the inevitability of deeper and wider consequences.

In requiring mediation in a Christian church context, the PC(USA) also acknowledges that the people of God are to see and understand the action of God in everything that happens and to make a fitting response. Our God is not only the commander who gives laws, but the shaper of sparrows and dresser of lilies, the giver of blindness and sight, the One whose rule is embedded in myriad activities and agencies, and is available to those who are willing to interpret the truth of the messiness of human relationships and these challenging times.

Concurrence to Item 05-01 from the Synod of Mid-America (with Additional Rationale)

The concurrence to advocate for mediation (and other alternative methods of dispute resolution) in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is rooted in a Christian vision of God’s mission. A sincere regard for mediation as a means of dispute resolution and reconciliation flows from the affirmation in 2 Cor. 5:19 that “… in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself,” and that through Christ, “… the message of reconciliation [has been entrusted] to us.”

In many ways and for many reasons, the Presbyterian community is encouraged to respond to this challenge. By advocating for mediation, we agree to be about the discipline and practice of faithfully remembering the vision of God’s new creation and invite others into this vision. Too often, the judicial process perpetuates a kind of litigiousness that does not grow the maturity of participants, but simply accentuates the breadth and depth of the church’s brokenness and society’s violence. While we acknowledge instances where deliberate speed is required in reference to a judicial process, there are far too many instances when mediation or other alternatives can be engaged as a more faithful response of genuine Christian community.

Typically, the church has mirrored society rather than offering a witness to it, especially in relation to the ways we treat one another. Justice and reconciliation, remembrance and forgiveness, conversation and social transformation, can find a place of intersection when we seriously consider and engage alternative forms of dispute resolution. By providing a variety of positive forms of resolution for disputes, we seek to constantly engage Scripture and thought with practices through which the Christian ecclesiastical judicial process is shaped and disciplined.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-01

Advice on Item 05-01 (Ovt 028) (North Kansas-Amend D-6.0101 and D-10.0101) — From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-01.

Rationale

The biblical obligation to “[c]ome to terms quickly with your accuser while you are on the way to court ...” (Mt. 5:25) is lifted up in the Preamble to the Rules of Discipline (D-1.0103) as a duty to be fulfilled prior to initiating formal judicial proceedings in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Such efforts for reconciliation are never out of order. In responding to this duty, Christians in disagreement make faithful efforts to provide for the settlement of issues by means of the establishment or restoration of personal relationships that strengthen the Body of Christ, prayerfully and “… according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit…” (Book of Order; G-1.0100c). Even when formal judicial procedures are understood to be necessary in order to build up and redeem the church, within the constitutional steps for remedial and disciplinary cases there are stated points at which the reconciliation of parties might be negotiated before full trials are held: pretrial conferences in remedial cases (D-6.0310), and initiation, if appropriate, of alternative forms of resolution prior to the filing of charges in disciplinary cases (D-10.0202h). As stated in the Preamble to the Rules of Discipline, the Rules provide for judicial process that is not to serve as a substitute for the secular judicial system but is to do what the secular judicial system cannot do, including “… to bring members to repentance and restoration …” (Book of Order; D-1.0101).

Item 05-01 would amend D-6.0101 and D-10.0101 to require that, at the time of initiating formal proceedings and in order for the church to go forward in those proceedings, there be filed along with the complaint or allegation a description of the efforts made “to fulfill the biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences.” It is intended that through this requirement, the Rules of Discipline would further hold the church to the Matthew 5:25 standard as described in the overture rationale, and support the ability and willingness of those in disagreement or conflict to avoid the interpersonal and financial costs of formal judicial process.

While the intent of Item 05-01 is laudable, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes constitutional concerns about requiring some documentation of efforts to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences in order to initiate judicial procedures. With respect to a remedial case, the requirement that a complaint be filed within ninety days of an alleged irregularity or within ninety days after failure or refusal to cure an alleged delinquency (D-6.0202a) may be too short for seeking and participating in meaningful efforts to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences. With respect to a disciplinary case, the proposed requirement of an “… account of efforts made to fulfill the biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences …” (Item 05-01) could delay judicial process in instances, such as those of alleged sexual abuse, in which the church has determined that to protect the innocent there should be a swift response to allegations of misconduct. For both remedial and disciplinary cases, the addition of the proposed requirement could create a pleading standard which would put a burden on a case or could damage a meritorious case.

A particular concern about the impact of Item 05-01 on a potential disciplinary case is that the requirement could possibly serve as an unbounded means to discover facts that would carry weight before the session or permanent judicial commission, without there having been in place those due process safeguards for an accused person that are incorporated into the responsibilities of an investigating committee (D-10.0202a; D-10.0203a, b, c). It is not clear whether an investigating committee may be appointed if jeopardy has been attached.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-01 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Endnotes

1. A pleading standard is a rule governing what statements must be included in a document, such as a remedial complaint or an allegation of an offense, before a disciplinary investigation can be initiated.

2. Jeopardy, in a criminal context, has to do with being in jeopardy of receiving some criminal punishment. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does not execute, incarcerate, or fine offenders; accordingly, within the church jeopardy refers to the jeopardy of receiving a disciplinary censure (which could include, in the most severe form, removal from office or membership).

While the U.S. Constitution includes protections against twice being put in jeopardy for the same offense, the Constitution of the PC(USA) does not include an explicit protection against double jeopardy. No authoritative interpretation has recognized a protection against double jeopardy. Nevertheless, the disapproval of double jeopardy can be found in our understandings of fairness.
In order to recognize when a person is placed in jeopardy twice, it is necessary to be able to determine when a person is placed in jeopardy for the first time, i.e. when jeopardy attaches.

Item 05-02

[The assembly approved Item 05-02. See p. 57.]

On Restoring Previous Provisions of D-13.0102 and D-13.0106 to Deny the Prosecuting Committee the Ability to Appeal a Verdict of “Not Guilty”—From the Presbytery of Arkansas.

The Presbytery of Arkansas respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall the current text of D-13.0102 be deleted and new text inserted to read as follows:[Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “Either party may initiate the first level of appeal by the filing of a written notice of appeal. Only the person found guilty may initiate the first level of appeal by the filing of a written notice of appeal.”

2. Shall D-13.0106 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “a. The grounds for appeal by the person found guilty are

   “(1) irregularity in the proceedings;
   “(2) refusing a party reasonable opportunity to be heard or to obtain or present evidence;
   “(3) receiving improper, or declining to receive proper, evidence or testimony;
   “(4) hastening to a decision before the evidence or testimony is fully received;
   “(5) manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case;
   “(6) injustice in the process or decision;
   “(7) error in constitutional interpretation; and “(8) undue severity of censure.

   “b. The grounds for appeal by the prosecuting committee are

   “(1) irregularity in the proceedings;
   “(2) refusing a party reasonable opportunity to be heard or to obtain or present evidence;
   “(3) receiving improper, or declining to receive proper evidence or testimony;
   “(4) hastening a decision before the evidence or testimony is fully received;
   “(5) manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case; and “(6) error in constitutional interpretation.”

Rationale

The Rules of Discipline were amended in 2004–05 to include numerous changes that were intended to clarify and advance our judicial process. Of the changes made, one has emerged as both problematic in practice and contradictory to our tradition and theology. This change must be reversed.

Among the changes made in 2004–05 was a provision to allow for appeal by the prosecuting committee when an accused person in a disciplinary case is found not guilty. The amendment proposed by this overture would restore the provisions of D-13.0102 and D-13.0106 to the wording of those sections prior to the amendment, an experiment that has not served the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) well.
The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has commented on several problems with the practice of appeal by a prosecuting committee in Davis v Presbytery of San Francisco [Emphasis added in italic]:

“In 2004, the Rules of Discipline were amended to permit a governing body to appeal a judgment of “not guilty” (D-13.0102). D-11.0403b provides that “No judgment of guilt may be found on a charge unless at least two-thirds of the members of the session or permanent judicial commission eligible to vote agree on the judgment.” The amendment to the Rules of Discipline to allow appeals by either party created the potential for an appellate body to re-examine the issue of guilt. In making that reexamination, if it determines that a guilty judgment is the correct result, the appellate body would become the first court to make that judgment. Davis correctly observed that D-13.0102 is a contradiction of all previous ecclesiastical and secular law. Further, the revision stands alone, and other related provisions of the Book of Order have not been revised. Thus, prosecuting bodies have a right to appeal, but there are no corresponding procedures to guide how such appeals should be handled and what this appellate right means in terms of the authority of a permanent judicial commission acting as an appellate court to reverse a judgment of not guilty to guilty. This Commission finds no basis in the Book of Order to permit an appellate body to determine guilt by a simple majority vote. It would be grossly unfair to require a two-thirds majority vote by the trier of fact and then permit a simple majority to reverse that judgment based solely on an appellate record and oral argument. Therefore, this Commission finds that any judgment of guilt requires a two-thirds majority vote.

“The logical implication of permitting a prosecuting committee to appeal a judgment of not guilty is the prospect that the determination of not guilty will be reversed. D-13.0102 grants a right of appeal, but says nothing about whether there shall be a second trial (which raises concerns about double jeopardy) or where and how such a trial would be held. It is inconceivable that D-13.0102 was intended to permit an appellate body to determine guilt by a simple majority vote. It would be grossly unfair to require a two-thirds majority vote of the accused to be found not guilty” (D-1.0102). Being accused and brought to trial is often enormously draining, spiritually and emotionally. Repeated prosecution of an individual after the prosecuting committee has failed to convince a permanent judicial commission of the guilt of the accused does not accomplish the purpose of repentance and restoration, but is more likely to contribute to anger and resentment, strife and distress.

Presbyterian process is supposed “[…] to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings…” (D-1.0101). And yet, it is not just, speedy, or economical when an accused person is subject not just to “double jeopardy,” but potentially to multiple jeopardy involving trials and hearings before several judicial commissions, possibly including more than once at the same level, and—unlike a person found guilty who might choose to appeal—involuntarily. Accused persons face the possibility of having to defend themselves for months and years. For ministers of Word and Sacrament this includes the prohibition on accepting a new call while the cloud hangs over one’s head—even after being found “not guilty” by a judicial commission. The expenses of a defense necessary to protect one’s integrity, reputation, and livelihood can impose a severe financial strain.

The accused is not the only party affected financially. A presbytery may incur large expenses for the prosecuting committee. Furthermore, the presbytery is also responsible for securing counsel for the accused if the accused cannot afford it, which may place a further severe strain on its budget. In addition, judicial process expends an enormous number of hours—time that is not spent in other ministry.

The Rules of Discipline are clear that “[…] in all respects, all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide” (D-1.0101). “The accused in a disciplinary case is presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, and unless guilt is established beyond a reasonable doubt, the accused is entitled to be found not guilty” (D-11.0401).

A presbytery prosecuting committee is an investigating committee that has decided to file charges—generally, an appointed group. The right of a prosecuting committee to appeal the decision of its own presbytery’s permanent judicial commission sets up the situation of an unelected group complaining against the decision of its own presbytery’s elected body. The presbytery, in effect, ends up suing itself, without the consent of the body as a whole. The whole body is affected, and the not guilty party—also a member of the body—carries the greatest burden.

Under the current language of D-13-0102 and D-13.0106, an appellate body may potentially become a trier of fact effectively eliminating the right of the accused to the appellate process. One mark of the true church is “[…] ecclesiastical discipline uprightly [ad]ministered…” (Book of Confessions, Scots Confession, 3.18). A fundamentally unfair process which interferes with the ability of the church to live out its calling as the true church of Jesus Christ is untenable.

The 218th General Assembly (2008), responding to a referral from the 217th General Assembly (2006), addressed the issue of “[…] inappropriate use of judicial process….” with this statement: “The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) remind individuals that the Rules of Discipline cannot be used to mediate intrinsic differences of theology, policy, polity, power, or trust” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 282).

Whatever gains were anticipated from the current language of D-13.0102 and D-13.0106 are overwhelmed by the fundamental unfairness of subjecting an accused person to multiple trials of the same facts. The potential erosion of confidence in the judicial system of the church far outweighs any perceived benefit of the current language. The pre-2005 language ensures both fair and just process while maintaining discipline within the church.

Concurrence to Item 05-02 from the Presbytery of San Francisco (with Additional Rationale)

The Rules of Discipline were amended in 2004–2005 to allow for appeal by the prosecuting committee when an accused person in a disciplinary case is found not guilty. This amendment would restore the provisions of D-13.0102 and D-13.0106 to the wording of those sections prior to the amendment, an experiment that has not served the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) well.

The ability of prosecuting committees to appeal a verdict of “not guilty” does not serve the purpose of church discipline, which is at all times to be used “… for building up the body of Christ, not for destroying it, for redeeming, not for punishing” (D-1.0102). Being accused and brought to trial is often enormously draining, spiritually and emotionally. Repeated prosecution of an individual after the prosecuting committee has failed to convince a permanent judicial commission of the guilt of the accused does not accomplish the purpose of repentance and restoration, but is more likely to contribute to anger and resentment, strife and distress.

Presbyterian process is supposed “… to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings…” (D-1.0101). And yet, it is not just, speedy, or economical when an accused person is subject not just to “double jeopardy,” but potentially to multiple jeopardy involving trials and hearings before several judicial commissions, possibly including more than once at the same level, and—unlike a person found guilty who might choose to appeal—involuntarily. Accused persons face the possibility of having to defend themselves for months and years. For ministers of Word and Sacrament this includes the prohibition on accepting a new call while the cloud hangs over one’s head—even after a judicial commission has found one “not guilty.” The expenses of the defense necessary to protect one’s integrity, reputation, and livelihood can impose a severe financial strain.

The accused is not the only party affected financially. A presbytery may incur large expenses for the prosecuting committee. Furthermore, the presbytery is also responsible for securing counsel for the accused if the accused cannot afford it, which may place a further severe strain on its budget. In addition, judicial process expends an enormous number of hours—time that is not spent in other ministry.

The Rules of Discipline are clear that “… [i]n all respects, all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide” (D-1.0101). “The accused in a disciplinary case is presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, and unless guilt is established beyond a reasonable doubt, the accused is entitled to be found not guilty” (D-11.0401).

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has commented on several problems with the practice of appeal by a prosecuting committee in Davis v Presbytery of San Francisco [Emphasis added in italic]:

“... In 2004, the Rules of Discipline were amended to permit a governing body to appeal a judgment of “not guilty” (D-13.0102). D-11.0403b provides that “No judgment of guilt may be found on a charge unless at least two-thirds of the members of the session or permanent judicial commission eligible to vote agree on the judgment.” The amendment to the Rules of Discipline to allow appeals by either party created the potential for an appellate body to re-examine the issue of guilt. It is inconceivable that D-13.0102 was intended to permit an appellate body to determine guilt without hearing any evidence, judging the credibility of the witnesses, and deciding whether the burden of proof has been met beyond a reasonable doubt. None of these due process safeguards was provided to Davis…” (See Item 05-Info, p. 383, Davis v Presbytery of San Francisco, Disciplinary Case 219-09).

A presbytery prosecuting committee is an investigating committee that has decided to file charges—generally, an appointed group. The right of a prosecuting committee to appeal the decision of its own presbytery’s permanent judicial commission sets up the situation of an unelected group complaining against the decision of its own presbytery’s elected body. The presbytery, in effect, ends up suing itself, without the consent of the body as a whole. The whole body is affected, and the not-guilty party—also a member of the body—carries the greatest burden.

The pre-2005 language ensures both fair and just process while maintaining discipline within the church.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-02

Advice on Item 05-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 05-02.

Rationale

Item 05-02 would limit the right to initiate an appeal in a disciplinary case to the accused, a restriction in place prior to the 2004–2005 amendment of D-13.0102 allowing prosecuting committees to appeal for correction of alleged trial errors by sessions or permanent judicial commissions. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that although it is rare for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to reverse a relatively recent amendment of its Constitution, Item 05-02 is not inconsistent with the faithful openness to institutional reform under the guidance of the Spirit of God, as expressed in G-18.0101.

When amendment to D-13-0102 was proposed in 2004, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution gave the following advice:

This provision would allow either the prosecuting committee or an accused convicted of an offense to initiate an appeal. Currently, only an accused may initiate such an appeal. Whether such appeals are desirable raises several questions. Such appeal rights would be broader than the secular judicial system allows. It also would perpetuate disciplinary cases in a manner that may discourage victims from seeking civil remedies. On the other hand, the amendment is consistent with the concern that the potential for error is greater in a voluntary judicial process than it is in the professional secular system. If the 216th General Assembly (2004) believes that it is desirable to allow prosecuting committees to pursue such appeals, the proposed amendment appears clear and adequate to accomplish that intent. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 306, Item 04-08, ACC Advice on Recommendation 5)

The potential for error exists in any judicial system. Therefore appeal processes are in place for correction. Among the purposes of discipline in the church is to honor God and to preserve the purity of the church. The procedures in the Rules of Discipline can work well for individuals and for the church or can cause harm, including possible financial harm due to a session’s or presbytery’s obligation to cover the expenses of an investigation, original trial, and subsequent expenses of appeal, as well as reasonable expenses for defense of the accused if that person is unable to secure counsel (D-11.0302).

The rationale for Item 05-02 to the 219th General Assembly (2010) cites several reasons to reverse the subject provisions. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that this rationale correctly summarizes the need for the proposed amendment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language in Item 05-02 is clear and is consistent with the stated intent.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-02 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-03

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-03. See pp. 57, 60.]

On Amending G-14.0560 Expanding the Role of the Commissioned Lay Pastor—From the Presbytery of South Louisiana.

The Presbytery of South Louisiana overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-14.0560 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The commissioned lay pastor is an elder of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who is granted a local general commission by the presbytery to lead worship and preach the gospel, watch over the people, and provide for their nurture and service. This commission is valid only in one or more congregations, a new church development, or other valid ministries of the presbytery designated approved by the presbytery, or in his/her own congregation at the invitation of the session and with the approval of the pastor and the presbytery. Such an elder is selected by and receives training approved by the presbytery. The elder shall be instructed in Bible, Reformed Theology and Sacraments, Presbyterian Polity, preaching, leading worship, pastoral care, and teaching. The elder shall be examined by the appropriate committee of presbytery as to personal faith, motives for seeking the commission, and the areas of instruction mentioned previously. An elder who has been commissioned as a CLP and later ceases to serve whose services are no longer needed in a particular congregation may continue to be listed as available to serve, but is not authorized to perform the functions of a commissioned lay pastor again until appointed to a particular congregation by the presbytery as a CLP-at-large, and may also be authorized to continue to perform the functions of a commissioned lay pastor: A CLP-at-large may serve in his/her own congregation at the invitation of the session, with the approval of the pastor, and at discretion of the presbytery. The CLP-at-large would also be able to officiate at the sacraments in those congregations without pastoral leadership under the supervision of presbytery.”

Rationale

These changes would do three things:

1. Provide for a new classification of commissioned lay pastor, CLP-at-large, to serve at the discretion of the presbytery;

2. The CLP-at-large would be able to provide services, although not commissioned to, to a particular congregation, including officiating at the Sacraments; and

3. The CLP-at-large would be able to serve in his/her own church should it have pastoral leadership, somewhat similar to a parish associate.

Given the current reality that many of our smaller membership congregations are unable to afford the services of a commissioned lay pastor, even if one were available in or near the community, much less a minister of the Word and Sacrament, it is incumbent upon the denomination to provide avenues where these congregations may be served by trained laity, especially for the celebration of the sacraments. Having adopted the essential tenets of the Reformed tradition, we should exhibit a visible expression of the Reformed tenet of “the priesthood of all believers” or what Scriptures call the “royal priesthood,” (1Peter 2:9; Ephesians 2:19–22; 1Corinthians 6:16–18).

The current restrictions on the availability and/or accessibility of commissioned lay pastors to smaller membership churches, who are unable adequately to compensate permanent pastoral leadership, or who are located in areas that do not easily attract pastoral leadership, penalizes these congregations. Rather than penalizing such congregations, the denomination needs to be willing to expand our polity in finding ways to make pastoral leadership available.

In addition, the expansion of the role of commissioned lay pastor to include an “at-large CLP,” who could serve in his/her own congregation under the supervision of the pastor, would assist the congregation in expanding its own ministry within the congregation, as well as its outreach to the wider community, in order to more faithfully fulfill the mission of the Church.

The Book of Order reminds us that those whom God calls to exercise special functions in the church, whether they be deacons, elders, or ministers of Word and Sacrament, are given, through the Holy Spirit, spiritual gifts with which they may build up their various callings. Those whom God calls to undertake particular ministries, including being trained and serving as a commissioned lay pastor, God equips with the necessary spiritual gifts and abilities, natural and acquired. Those who undertake these special functions in the church should demonstrate strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as their personal Lord and Savior as a model to those whom they are called to serve in the name of Jesus Christ.

Concurrence to Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Savannah (with Additional Rationale)

Presently, without a commission, qualified and trained leaders wishing to be of service to the church are often overlooked when needs of ministry in a congregation are considered by sessions, committees on ministry, and presbyteries. The at-large position in affect makes this resource of the church more visible and available as ministry needs are assessed. These at-large commissioned lay pastors (CLPs) might well be used as supply pastors and, with proper training, interim positions in smaller outlying churches. These positions often now fall by default to ministers of other denominations, who are not knowledgeable in our Presbyterian polity.

This amendment raises the level of visibility of this important trained and knowledgeable resource of our church. The need of our smaller church congregations cries out for regular pastoral care, and our commissioned lay pastors have already made a great contribution in some presbyteries. It is time to expand their role in order to provide trained laity to serve more easily in this capacity.
Our Constitution currently allows for an initial commissioning to a ministry within a presbytery. This expansion in the proposed amendment would allow for these CLPs to move to at-large status if there is not a suitable need upon the commission ending. Thus, it would allow these persons to continue to use their gifts in other positions, if available, or simply to continue to allow for their helping in ministry and sacraments at the pastor’s discretion within their local church. This continuation of ministry allows for fulfillment of God’s calling to them and to their church, or in other work as the presbytery might see a fit, with an at-large CLP.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-03

Advice on Item 05-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-03.

Rationale

The aim of Item 05-03 is to change the nature of the commission of a commissioned lay pastor from a limited, local commission to a continuing, general commission. It would amend G-14.0560 so as to create a new classification of “CLP-at-large” which could be empowered to continue to perform the functions of G-14.0562 on an ongoing basis without specific authorization.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the overture stands in conflict with the purposes and definitions of the offices of ministry as defined in G-6.0101 through G-6.0104; the definition of minister of the Word and Sacrament in G-6.0201; and G-6.0304a and G-11.0103z which limit authorization to perform the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper to “specific circumstances” that “cannot otherwise be met.”

At the heart of this amendment is the question of the nature of ordered ministry. Persons are ordained to these offices to fulfill particular functions (G-6.0102), and “[w]hile the ministry is one, specific forms of ministry may emphasize special tasks and skills and the ordering of the offices of ministry shall reflect this variety…” (G-6.0104). The gifts required by each office reflect the particular functions of each office. Historically, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has recognized three offices of ordered ministry: deacon, elder, and minister of the Word and Sacrament. Deacons and elders are offices under the jurisdiction of the session, while the presbytery has the exclusive power to oversee the ministers of the Word and Sacrament in its bounds.

It has long been the case, however, that presbyteries have had the power to authorize specific elders to preach and, more recently, to administer the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper in churches that lack the regular services of a minister of the Word and Sacrament. In 1985, presbyteries were permitted to commission some elders as “lay preachers” to provide regular services of preaching and the Lord’s Supper in specific congregations for specific periods of time. In 1997, the name “commissioned lay pastor” was applied to these elders, and presbyteries were permitted to grant additional powers to them, such as performing baptisms and weddings, and moderating sessions. Nevertheless, the General Assembly has always maintained that such commissions were to be limited as to time, place, and powers. Moreover, the ordering of the offices of ministry has continued to be affirmed: elders serving as commissioned lay pastors do so as an extension of the office of elder, not in the capacity of a minister of the Word and Sacrament.

The proposed amendment would fundamentally change the purpose of the commissioned lay pastors and, consequently, the nature of the office of elder. By changing the nature of the commission from local and specific commission to a general commission, it dislodges the commission from its connection to filling a specific need and invests the person with continuing powers and authority. In short, it creates a new office of ministry. This new office of ministry would not only create confusion between the existing offices of elder and minister of the Word and Sacrament, but would complicate issues of jurisdiction, oversight, and accountability between the presbytery and the session.

There are additional concerns arising from the specific provisions of the overture. First, it creates an expectation that a commissioned lay pastor will continuously be placed in congregations or validated ministries, much like a minister of the Word and Sacrament. Second, by allowing a session and commissioned lay pastor to propose service of the commissioned lay pastor in his or her home congregation, the overture places presbyteries in an untenable position when a congregation wishes to have a favorite son or daughter of the congregation serve within that congregation by allowing the process to be initiated in the congregation rather than by the presbytery.

Further, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that several of the stated aims of the amendment already may be accomplished within the current provisions of the Book of Order, and thus the proposed amendment is unnecessary. While the current provisions do not allow an elder not commissioned to a congregation to perform baptisms or preside at weddings, G-6.0304a and G-11.0103z provide that elders may, with specific instruction and with the supervision of the presbytery, supply congregations and preside at table at places that are without the regular ministry of the Word and Sacrament. In addition, W-2.2007 and G-11.0502f provide that lay persons authorized by the presbytery may be invited by the pastor or session to preach at any congregation; this provision would include an elder preaching in his or her own congregation if the presbytery determines such service to be wise.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Adoption of Item 05-03 would have the same profound implications for CLPs in the proposed Form of Government that it would have in the current Form of Government.

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 05-03

Comment on Item 05-03—From the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

The General Assembly Mission Council advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) consider the following important background information, data, and other issues raised in recent research and reports as it deliberates on Item 05-03.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) approved an expansion of the role of “commissioned lay preacher” by creating the role of Commissioned Lay Pastor. Elders trained and approved by their presbytery for the new role are now commissioned to carry out a specific assignment within the presbytery. Commissioned Lay Pastors may now be authorized to perform—if the presbytery so wishes—virtually all the functions of a minister of the Word and Sacrament.

The creation of Commissioned Lay Pastors was a major move for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). For centuries, Presbyterians have required significant educational preparation for pastoral leaders. Ministers have been required to possess both an undergraduate education and a seminary education in central elements of Christian faith and life. The typical requirements for CLPs total less than a semester of college-level work.

The rationale for creating the exceptional role of CLPs was based on two, limited needs: first, the need of immigrant fellowships and racial ethnic churches for pastors who know their language and cultural practices; and second, the need of small churches in particularly remote settings. Since 1995, the role of CLPs has, in practice, expanded well beyond the limited roles that were the foundation for the office. In fact, more CLPs now serve as solo pastors (in non-remote settings) and as associate pastors in multi-staff congregations than serve either immigrant fellowships or churches in remote settings.

Because this overture calls on the PC(USA) to expand the CLP role even further, careful attention is required.

One significant question involves the role of elders who are not Commissioned Lay Pastors. Section G-6.0304a describes the role of elders: “It is the duty of elders, individually and jointly, to strengthen and nurture the faith and life of the congregation committed to their charge…. They should cultivate their ability to teach the Bible and may be authorized to supply places which are without the regular ministry of the Word and Sacrament. In specific circumstances and with proper instruction, specific elders may be authorized by the presbytery to administer the Lord’s Supper in accord with G-11.0103z…” (Book of Order, G-6.0304a). Is there a role to be played by elders in fulfilling the needs cited in Item 05-03?

Another significant question involves the ongoing ministry of ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Currently there are 2,263 persons seeking 527 open positions for ministers of the Word and Sacrament. There are also only 169 positions open to candidates seeking a first call, and 395 qualified candidates. Clearly, the PC(USA) has an oversupply of ministers at the same time that mission needs are unmet. What is the way forward?

Item 05-04

[The assembly approved Item 05-04 with amendment and with comment. See pp. 57, 60–61.]

[Comment: That the Office of the General Assembly is instructed to devise a means of discovery and reporting the work of all commissioned lay pastors in the presbyteries and that all references in the Book of Order be updated to reflect this.]

The Presbytery of Hudson River overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
1. Shall G-11.0407 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

"G-11.0407  Rolls

“The stated clerk shall maintain [four] [five] rolls, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, and one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made. The stated clerk shall also maintain two registers, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and one listing all Commissioned Lay Pastors within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice and vote at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in a church or other validated ministry.”

“G-14.0560 Commissioned Lay Pastor

“[The commissioned lay pastor is an elder of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who is granted a local commission by the presbytery to lead worship and preach the gospel, watch over the people, and provide for their nurture and service. This commission is valid only in one or more congregations, new church development, or other validated ministries of the presbytery designated by the presbytery. Such an elder is selected by and receives training approved by the presbytery. The elder shall be instructed in Bible, Reformed Theology and Sacraments, Presbyterian Polity, preaching, leading worship, pastoral care, and teaching. The elder shall be examined by the appropriate committee of presbytery as to personal faith, motives for seeking the commission, and the areas of instruction mentioned previously. An elder who has been commissioned and later ceases to serve in a particular congregation or validated ministry may continue to be listed as available to serve, but is not authorized to perform the functions of a commissioned lay pastor again until appointed to a particular congregation or validated ministry by the presbytery.”]"

“G-11.0408a  Validated Ministries

“A minister of the Word and Sacrament who is an active member of presbytery may be engaged (1) in a validated ministry within congregations of this church, (2) in a validated ministry in other service of this church, (3) in a validated ministry in service beyond the jurisdiction of this church, or may be (4) honorably retired.

“G-11.0408b  Kinds of Validated Ministries of Commissioned Lay Pastors

“A commissioned lay pastor may be engaged in a validated ministry within congregations or governing bodies of this church. [Current Sections G-11.0408b–c shall be re-lettered as G-11.0408c–d. The text of these sections remains unchanged.]”]

Rationale

It is the intent of this overture to assure that the Office of the General Assembly maintains a separate and complete roll of commissioned lay pastors and to clarify language regarding validated ministries served by commissioned lay pastors. It is further the intent to clarify that those serving in ministries validated by a governing body beyond a session may be commissioned to that governing body.

In order to meet the intent, this overture amends language or introduces new section content. Specifically:

1. The amended and new language proposed in G-11.0407 appropriately sets forth commissioned lay pastors as a distinct classification of ministry and assures that the Office of the General Assembly has a complete and accurate accounting of all commissioned lay pastors. This includes adding a new and separate roll and introduces language that is specific to com-
2. The new language added to G-14.0560 again clarifies that a commissioned lay pastor may serve in a validated ministry and is then afforded the same right to continue to be identified as available to serve as this section currently affords those serving in churches.

3. This overture would add to the Book of Order a new section G-11.0408b, which extends the understanding of validated ministries as applied to commissioned lay pastors and clarifies that such persons may be commissioned to a particular church or to a higher governing body. The Office of the General Assembly currently only recognizes those commissioned to particular churches. This new language is for clarification.

4. The diversity of ministries of commissioned lay pastors continues to unfold. It is clear that more trained individuals will join the ranks of commissioned lay pastors in the years to come. There are those who may [or do] serve in ministries validated by presbyteries or the General Assembly who should be commissioned directly to those entities. Examples of such validated ministries might include hospice chaplaincies, prison ministries, homeless ministries, rural and migrant farm ministries, etc. Such ministries often extend beyond a specific local church and are instead endorsed as validated ministries by presbyteries or the General Assembly.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-04

Advice on Item 05-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 05-04 presents the following issues that the assembly should consider:

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution calls attention to the fact, noted in the rationale, that “… the diversity of the ministries of commissioned lay pastors continues to unfold.” The church should consider the implications of this expansion of the role of the commissioned lay pastor (CLP) for the meaning of the ministry of the Word and Sacrament in light of the present overture.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the proposed amendment would continue the practice of mixing two categories of persons related to the presbytery in the keeping of rolls. Our polity distinguishes between continuing members of the presbytery—ministers of the Word and Sacrament engaged in active service, at-large, or inactive—and persons who are temporarily related to the presbytery by virtue of their particular service: Certified Christian Educators and Associate Christian Educators and, if the present amendment is adopted, commissioned lay pastors.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that, as the term is otherwise used in our polity, a roll names the members of a congregation or presbytery. Properly speaking, therefore, the rolls of the presbytery should contain only the names of those ministers who are continuing members of the presbytery, in the categories of active, at-large, or inactive membership, and the names of those deleted from these rolls. Certified Christian Educators, Certified Associate Christian Educators, and commissioned lay pastors are either members or elders of congregations; their names thus belong on the rolls of the congregations of their membership.

The presbytery does, however, need a way of keeping track of those to whom, by virtue of their service, the presbytery has granted the privileges of voice and vote. Properly speaking, these lists are registers, lists of persons whose status and levels of authorized participation are a matter of ongoing record.

Currently, the language of G-11.0407 does not require the keeping of such registers.

If the 219th General Assembly believes that the intent of Item 05-04 is otherwise appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the proposed language for G-11.0407 can be made clearer and more consistent with that intent by being revised to read as follows: [Text to be added is in italic, and that to be deleted is indicated by strikethrough.]

“G-11.0407 Rolls and Registers

“The stated clerk shall maintain four rolls, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, and one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made. The stated clerk shall also maintain two registers, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and one listing all Commissioned Lay Pastors within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice and vote at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in a church or other validated ministry.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the language of the proposed amendment adding a new section G-11.0408b would have the effect of limiting the service to which a presbytery might commission a lay pastor to ministry within congregations or governing bodies. Such a limitation might be understood to rule out service such as hospital or prison chaplaincy.

Since the proposed Form of Government contains no explicit provision requiring presbytery to maintain rolls, the effect of approving either the authoritative interpretation or amendment offered here is limited to the current Form of Government. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning G-3.0305 in the proposed Form of Government (Item 07-01).

Item 05-05

[The assembly approved Item 05-05. See p. 57.]

The General Assembly Nominating Committee recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

1. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen ministers and elders (both women and men) in numbers nearly as equal as possible.”

2. Shall G-13.0111a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. To ensure careful nomination of members of such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall propose nominees to the General Assembly for such bodies. Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers and church members (both women and men), laymen, and laywomen. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen ministers and elders (both women and men) in numbers nearly as equal as possible. (G-9.0801, G-11.0501, G-12.0102d, G-13.0202) [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]”

3. Shall G-13.0202b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Mission Council to identify needed skills, and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least twenty percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Mission Council. It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and predecessor Moderators, one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen ministers and elders (both women and men) are in numbers nearly as equal as possible. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies.”
Rationale

As part of its preparation for review by 219th General Assembly (2010), the General Assembly Nominating Committee engaged in a self-study process that has led to some recommendations for change in the General Assembly nominations process, including the proposals for amendments to the Book of Order.

A longstanding Presbyterian pattern of governance has been equal representation of elders and ministers in the governing bodies of the church. This pattern continues in the presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly. The General Assembly Nominating Committee’s proposed amendment to require elders and ministers in numbers as equal as possible brings the membership of Book of Order committees in conformance with this pattern.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee believes that for specialized programmatic committees, which may need specific skills and expertise, this pattern be altered to enable church members to serve on non-Book of Order entities.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-05

Advice on Item 05-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC)

This proposal recommends amendments to provisions that describe the composition of the General Assembly Committee on Representation, the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and the General Assembly Mission Council. A similar proposal from the General Assembly Committee on Representation makes related proposals for presbytery and synod nominating committees and the same General Assembly level entities. These proposals are intended to implement the historic principle of minister/elder parity.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) draws attention to our advice concerning committees and commissions in response to Item 07-02 from the Presbytery of Western Reserve. The parity of ministers and elders is an important principle within our polity, but it does not require near equality of numbers of ministers and elders on committees that are only advisory, having only the power to make recommendations that their electing bodies may approve.

We note that the General Assembly Committee on Representation performs an essential function in our church’s governance, but that its function is ultimately one of advising and making recommendations to the assembly.

We also note that the General Assembly Nominating Committee performs an essential function in our church’s governance as well, but that the act of making nominations is ultimately one in the form of making recommendations. Nominations from the floor are possible, and the assembly has the ability to choose which persons to elect.

On the other hand, the General Assembly Mission Council is a coordinating body that is empowered to act on behalf of the assembly. Governing body coordinating entities with decision-making functions should be treated as “commissions” in regards to their composition.

Accordingly, the ACC advises the assembly that the proposed changes to the composition of the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the General Assembly Nominating Committee are not strictly necessary in order to maintain the parity of ministers and elders. Requiring nearly equal numbers of ministers and elders on bodies where it is not necessary runs the risk of reducing the participation of members of congregations on a committee where it would be possible to increase their participation.

The minor differences between the proposals from the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the General Assembly Nominating Committee raise issues that the General Assembly should consider.

The first issue is the need for constitutional language that is flexible enough to anticipate circumstances that could reasonably be expected to occur. The General Assembly Nominating Committee offers examples of this flexibility when it proposes that certain numbers be “nearly as equal as possible”. When the total membership of a committee is an even number, it is possible for the numbers of certain groups represented on the committee to be perfectly equal. But the rules defining the sizes of the GACOR and GANC states that the number of their members is to be equal to the number of the synods. It is possible for the number of synods to change (G-13.0103m) requiring an odd number of members on the two committees, thus making it impossible for the numbers in the represented groups to be perfectly equal.

It is also conceivable in the transition from the current rules to the proposed rules that it could be impossible to achieve equal numbers by the election of a single class without seeking resignations of elected members in the middle of their terms of service.

A second issue to be considered is the progress still to be made in the representation of women and men on the various entities. The GANC proposal uses a parenthetical comment “(both women and men)” indicating that both women and men are to be represented, but not requiring even near equality of representation. The GACOR proposal lists women and men following ministers and elders, thus making gender equality a goal of its proposal.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) believes that the intent of Item 05-05 is appropriate, the ACC advises that the proposed language is clear and consistent with its intent and could be improved by being amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown in italic]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen [ministers and elders (both women and men) in] numbers nearly as equal as possible [of ministers and elders, and women and men].

“2. Shall G-13.0111a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown in italic.]

“To ensure careful nomination of members of such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall propose nominees to the General Assembly for such bodies. Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers and church members (both women and men), laymen, and laywomen. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen [ministers and elders (both women and men) in] numbers nearly as equal as possible [of ministers and elders, and women and men]. (G-9.0801, G-11.0501, G-12.0102d, G-13.0202) [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]

“3. Shall G-13.0202b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown in italic.]

“b. In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Mission Council to identify needed skills, and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least twenty percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Mission Council. It will also follow the provisions of G-0.104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and predecessor Moderators, one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen ministers and elders [, and] [(both] women and men[,]) [are] [shall be represented] in numbers nearly as equal as possible. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies."

Implications for the proposal from the Form of Government Task Force. The proposal for the revision of the Form of Government would permit the General Assembly to determine what structures it needs, and to determine the appropriate way in which those structures should be composed. If the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to implement this proposal through amendments to the proposal from the Form of Government Task Force, the appropriate place to make the amendments would be in the Manual of the General Assembly.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 05-05

Comment on Item 05-05—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation concurs with Item 05-05 and suggests, in considering this item, commissioners read the additional rationale in Item 05-06.

Item 05-06
[The assembly approved Item 05-06 with amendment. See pp. 57, 58.]

The General Assembly Committee on Representation recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
1. Shall G-9.0801a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. Each presbytery and synod shall elect a nominating committee broadly representative of the member churches of the presbytery or presbyteries, with a membership of [equal numbers of] one third ministers of the Word and Sacrament, one third laywomen, and one third laymen and elders, women and men, in numbers as nearly equal as possible.

[2. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“[The General Assembly] shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly. Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-14.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are equal numbers of ministers and elders, women and men, one-third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

[3. Shall G-13.0111a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“[a. To ensure careful nomination of members of such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall propose nominees to the General Assembly for such bodies. Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers and church members (both women and men), laymen, and laywomen. The nominating committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen ministers and elders (both women and men) in numbers nearly as equal as possible. (G-9.0801, G-11.0501, G-12.0102d, G-13.0202) [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]”

[4. Shall the third sentence of G-13.0202b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“[It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and successor Moderators, one third of the members are consideration be given that membership have equal numbers of ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen and elders, women and men, . . . .”]

Rationale

The representational formula of one-third male lay, one-third female lay and one-third clergy is outdated and un-Presbyterian. It was put in place at reunion (in 1983) when there were fewer ordained women ministers. It was designed to honor women’s leadership and decision-making. In the years since, increasing proportions of women have come to graduate from seminaries and be ordained to ministry in significant (though still lesser) numbers. The one-third/one-third/one-third ratio sets up a significant majority presence of elders when theologically we claim to aim at equal representation and shared leadership. Women are frequently a majority among elders in terms of participation levels, though not in every presbytery. Thus, as a compensatory measure for the balance of elders women to men, that formula is no longer needed.

Presbyterians pride themselves in the theological and constitutional concept of shared power. The reality of participation and representation in General Assembly entities is not reaching this standard.

The current measure is un-Presbyterian in its discounting the value of theological education, ministry experience, and understanding of church operation. While elders rightly predominate on sessions, Presbyterians honor minister/elder parity in every other council, including the General Assembly. This parity signifies shared ministry and mutuality between ministers and other servants of Christ, between women and men. It is also about sharing power, general wisdom, and knowledge of the church itself—which should be equitably represented.

In their General Assembly commissioner selections, many presbyteries already show themselves capable of balancing their numbers of men and women elders and are improving in their balance of ministers, women and men (in recent assemblies, women minister commissioner numbers hover at 30 percent of minister commissioners). This change will bring our leadership structure a bit more up-to-date. Should imbalances occur after this change, we would expect the normal representational process to recommend corrective measures.
Advice on Item 05-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC)

The ACC advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) with alternative proposed language.

Item 05-06 from the General Assembly Committee on Representation recommends amendments to related proposals for presbytery and synod nominating committees, the General Assembly Committee on Representation, the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and the General Assembly Mission Council. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) has discussed the issues raised in this item in its advice on Item 05-05 (from the General Assembly Nominating Committee).

The ACC draws attention to our advice concerning committees and commissions in response to Item 07-02 from the Presbytery of Western Reserve. The parity of ministers and elders is an important principle within our polity, but it does not require near equality of numbers of ministers and elders on committees that are only advisory, having only the power to make recommendations that their electing bodies may approve.

We note that the nominating committees perform an essential function in our church’s governance, but that its function is ultimately one of advising and making recommendations to presbytery or synod.

The ACC advises that the General Assembly answer Recommendations 2, 3, and 4 of this item by its action on Item 05-05 (from the General Assembly Nominating Committee).

Recommendation 1 of this item concerns presbytery and synod nominating committees. We note that presbytery and synod nominating committees perform an essential function in our church’s governance, but that the act of making nominations is ultimately one in the form of making recommendations. Nominations from the floor are possible, and the presbytery or synod has the ability to choose which persons to elect.

Accordingly, the ACC advises the assembly that the proposed changes to the composition of presbytery or synod nominating committees are not strictly necessary in order to maintain the parity of ministers and elders. Requiring nearly equal numbers of ministers and elders on bodies where it is not necessary runs the risk of reducing the participation of members of congregations on a committee where it would be possible to increase their participation.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) determines that the intent of Recommendation 1 of Item 05-06 is appropriate, the ACC advises that the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent, and could be improved by being revised as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Shall G-9.0801a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“ ‘a. Each presbytery and synod shall elect a nominating committee broadly representative of the member churches of the presbytery or presbyteries, with a membership [of equal numbers of one third ministers of Word and Sacrament, one third laywomen, and one third laymen and elders; women and men] [composed of ministers of Word and Sacrament, women and men, in numbers as nearly equal as possible]. …”

Implications for the proposal from the Form of Government Task Force. The proposal for the revision of the Form of Government would permit the General Assembly to determine what structures it needs, and to determine the appropriate way in which those structures should be composed. If the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to implement this proposal through amendments to the proposal from the Form of Government Task Force, the appropriate place to make the amendments would be in the Manual of the General Assembly.

Item 05-07

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-07. See pp. 57, 61.]

On Amending G-14.0553 to Allow an Interim Associate Pastor to Become the Next Installed Associate Pastor with Two-Thirds Vote—From the Presbytery of Muskingum Valley.

The Presbytery of Muskingum Valley respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-14.0553 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]
“When a presbytery and session determine that an interim pastor, interim co-pastor, or interim associate pastor is necessary and helpful, the session may consult the committee on ministry and seek an interim minister as soon as a date certain for departure has been announced by a pastor or associate pastor planning to leave. An interim pastor, or interim co-pastor, or interim associate pastor is not eligible to serve that church as the next permanent or designated pastor. An interim associate pastor may become the next installed associate pastor by a two-thirds vote of the presbytery.”

Rationale

The prohibition of an interim pastor becoming the next installed pastor of a congregation is widely accepted, and with good reason. In The Interim Pastor's Manual, Alan Gripe lists the five tasks of the interim pastor: joining the system, analyzing the organization as a system, connecting with the denomination, focusing and assuming responsibility, and exiting and evaluating. Interim pastors have rendered invaluable service to congregations in conflict and transition. The very fact that everyone knows they are not eligible to become the next installed pastor makes this work possible.

Why, then, suggest that an interim associate pastor should be eligible to become the next installed associate pastor? Because there is a fundamental difference between the offices of pastor (head of staff) and associate pastor. Section G-14.0513 states: “An associate pastor shall be directed in his or her work by the pastor in consultation with the session.” While an associate pastor is a colleague in ministry with the pastor, the associate pastor is nevertheless subordinate to and receives direction from the pastor. A good working relationship between the pastor and the associate pastor is essential, but often elusive, conditioned by a number of tangible and intangible factors summed up as “chemistry.” Our churches suffer when there is conflict within the pastoral staff, and our churches are blessed when there is unity of purpose in the use of diverse gifts to accomplish the work of the ministry. We believe that if a pastor and interim associate pastor find they work well together, and if the session and the presbytery discern God's will to continue this relationship, there should be nothing in the Book of Order to prevent it.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-07

Advice on Item 05-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 05-07 would empower a presbytery to approve a call to an interim associate pastor for service as the next installed associate pastor in the congregation he or she serves as interim associate.

Rationale

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) believes that the intent of Item 05-07 is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that this amendment would change the church’s stance on the nature of interim ministry. Since the inclusion of the term “interim pastor” in the polities of the antecedent denominations, persons who have been so categorized have expressly been prohibited from acceding to the pastorate of the congregation served (See: Minutes, UPCUSA, 1975, Part I, p.639; also, PCUS Book of Church Order, 1975, 25-4). In 1990, the General Assembly answered a request from Donegal Presbytery by ruling that an interim pastor may not succeed as the next installed pastor of the congregation served as interim (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 245), and in 1992 the General Assembly rejected an amendment to the same effect (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 302). With regard to the specific issue at hand, the 211th General Assembly (1995) rejected a proposed amendment that would have permitted an interim associate from succeeding as the next installed associate pastor (Minutes, 1995, Part I, pp. 80, 294).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that this amendment would introduce a distinction in the treatment of pastors and associate pastors that is not present in our current polity. Current G-14.0553 prohibits equally both interim pastors and interim associate pastors from succeeding as the next installed pastor or associate pastor. This parallel treatment would be disrupted by the insertion of the proposed language, and may suggest to some that there is an inequality in the nature of the call of a pastor and an associate pastor. The church has moved away from such ideas since it eliminated the position of assistant pastor for similar reasons.

If the proposed revisions to the Form of Government are approved to be sent to the presbyteries, no change in the revisions as proposed by the Form of Government Task Force is necessary, since proposed G-2.0504c already makes provision for the succession of both interim pastors and interim associate pastors. However, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the supermajority vote of presbytery required in the overture is two-thirds, where in the proposed G-2.0504c the requirement is for three-quarters.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Since the proposed Form of Government would not prohibit such transitions, the approval of Item 05-07 would have no implications for the proposed Form of Government.

On Amending G-14.0480 Regarding Ordinations—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to sending the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-14.0480 through G-14.0485 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0480 [Text remains the same.]

“G-14.0481 Place of Examination and Ordination

“Shall the presbytery placing the call to a candidate for ministry ordinarily examine and, contingent upon the candidate’s successful completion of that examination and all requirements in G-14.0450, the presbytery responsible for the candidate’s preparation for ministry shall ordinarily ordain the candidate (see W-4.4000). The presbytery of call shall certify to the presbytery responsible for the candidate’s preparation for ministry that the candidate has been approved for ordination and installation.

“G-14.0482 [Text remains the same.]

“G-14.0483 Presbytery of Call

“Shall the presbytery of call certify to the presbytery responsible for the candidate’s preparation for ministry that the candidate has been approved for ordination and installation. Ordinarily, the presbytery responsible for the candidate’s preparation for ministry shall ordain the candidate. (See W-4.4000.) Following the ordination, the stated clerk of the ordaining presbytery shall record the action, notify the session of the particular church of which the candidate has been a member so that the session may record the fact that the candidate is now ordained and has been transferred to the roll of the presbytery, and issue a letter of dismissal to the calling presbytery, which shall enroll the minister and proceed to install the minister.

“G-14.0484 Agreement on Place of Ordination

“The presbyteries and the candidate may agree that the ordination take place in the calling presbytery, in which case the presbytery may ordain and install the candidate at the same time at a service of worship in the presence of the calling congregation.

“G-14.0485 G-14.0483 Recording the Ordination

“The presbytery shall record the ordination and installation as a part of its official records along with the acceptance and subscription of the new minister to the obligations undertaken in the ordination vows. It shall also be the duty of the stated clerk of the presbytery to enroll the newly ordained minister as a member of the presbytery and to report these actions to the Office of the General Assembly and to the presbytery responsible for the candidate’s preparation for ministry when the calling presbytery ordains. The stated clerk of the presbytery of care shall then notify the session of the particular church of which the candidate has been a member so that the session may record the fact that the candidate is now ordained, has been transferred to the roll of the ordaining presbytery, and remove the person from the membership roll.”

Rationale

These changes would —remove the necessity of negotiating between the presbytery of call and presbytery of care as to which presbytery will examine and ordain;

—remove the need for the candidate to have a commission for ordination and a commission for installation to a called installed position;

—remove the time delay between ordination and installation;

—remove the need, in some instances, to travel long distances for the ordination;

—remove the possibility of the candidate being examined by two different presbyteries and the examination being sustained by one and not the other;
—and while it would ordinarily remove the ordination service from the home church of the candidate, in many cases the candidate has been away from that church for several years and desires to be ordained in the calling presbytery/church, it would continue to allow ordinations in the home church if the candidate so desires.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-08

Advice on Item 05-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 05-08 would alter the current provisions of G-14.0480 by mandating that the presbytery of call shall examine and making normative the expectation that the calling presbytery will ordain and install candidates for the ministry of the Word and Sacrament who are accepting their first call. This represents a change from the current normative practice whereby the presbytery of care ordinarily ordains and the presbytery of call installs such candidates.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) believes that the intent of Item 05-08 is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that this issue has had a contested history since the creation of the current Book of Order. Originally, G-14.0314a provided that “the calling presbytery shall ordinarily examine and ordain the candidate...” (Book of Order 1987–88). As early as 1989, the 205th General Assembly rejected a proposed amendment that would have lodged with the presbytery of care the responsibility for ordination examinations (Minutes 1989, Part I, pp. 66, 219). In 1993, the church approved amendments to (then) G-14.0314a and G-14.0402a that placed responsibility for a candidate’s examination and ordination in the hands of “his or her presbytery”—a phrase normally taken to mean the presbytery of care (Minutes, 1993, Part I, pp. 866, 875–76). In 1996, the 208th General Assembly adopted the present language of G-14.0482 (then G-14.0314a), specifying that the presbytery of care ordinarily ordains and the presbytery of call installs the minister (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 734). The effect of Item 05-08 (the current amendment) would thus be to restore the situation of the polity to its status prior to 1993.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that the effect of approving this amendment would be to eliminate one of the two examinations of a candidate for ordination currently presumed in our polity. A candidate to be ordained by the presbytery of care receives an examination by that presbytery, and then is examined again for membership by the calling presbytery. In some cases, presbyteries of care have accepted the examination of the calling presbytery as sufficient to proceed to the ordination of a candidate, while others have conducted a separate examination. The effect of this amendment would be to eliminate the examination by the presbytery of care, since both ordination and membership/readiness for installation would be accomplished by the calling presbytery.

Finally, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that examining a candidate twice—one in the presbytery of care prior to ordination and once in the presbytery of call prior to installation—is not a requirement of the present wording of G-14.0481. Instead, the presence of the term “ordinarily” in the first clause of the provision implies that a presbytery of call may (or may not) elect to waive its right to examine a candidate for ordination in favor of the examination being conducted by the presbytery of care. Presbyteries across the church vary in their practice in this regard. The effect of the proposed amendment would be to eliminate the calling presbytery’s option to waive its examination.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: The proposed Form of Government provides flexibility on place of examinations. If the 219th General Assembly (2010) believes in making the place of ordination mandatory, it would need to amend the proposed Form of Government at G-2.0702 to remove the word “ordinarily.”

On Amending G-5.0300 and G-10.0302a to Include the Designation of Associate Member—From the Presbytery of Mackinac.

The Presbytery of Mackinac overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-5.0300 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown in italic.]
The membership of a particular church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) includes baptized members, active members, inactive members, affiliate members, and part-year associate members.

2. Shall a new section, G-5.0305, be added to read as follows:

“An associate member of a particular church is an active member of another church of this denomination or of another denomination or Christian body, who maintains more than one residence on a permanent basis in multiple communities. An associate member of a particular church is a person who has made a profession of faith in Christ, has been baptized, has been received into membership of the church by the session, has voluntarily submitted to the government of this church, and participates in the church’s work and worship. An associate member is entitled to all the rights and privileges of an active member. An associate member shall not hold office in multiple churches simultaneously.”

3. Shall a new section, G-10.0302a(5), be added to read as follows:

“Associate Members’ Roll. The associate members’ roll shall list the names of those who have been received into associate membership by the session and who are active in the church’s work and worship.”

Rationale

The existing affiliate member category is intended to allow temporary residents in a community the opportunity to officially align themselves with the ministry and mission of their temporary church while not resigning from their home congregation. This definition does not account for those individuals who permanently split time between two or more residences. Therefore, the classification of affiliate membership does not adequately describe an individual’s desire to be a member in one particular church when they are living in that location, and another congregation when they are living near that particular church, nor does it allow for full participation as a member in multiple congregations.

Currently, there is no category within our Book of Order to address these situations. By maintaining the strict interpretation of affiliate membership, these individuals are forbidden from voting and holding office within a particular church where they are active unless they designate one congregation as the home church and another as their affiliate church. They must choose which church is their primary church for the sake of membership.

This new category of membership would accurately recognize the role these members play in multiple congregations, while allowing them to serve and worship with all the rights and privileges granted to active members. By limiting their ability to hold office simultaneously, these associate members would not run the risk of serving as a deacon, elder, or commissioner in multiple congregations, presbyteries, or synods.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-09

Advice on Item 05-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-09.

Rationale

This item seeks to add a category of membership for persons who divide their residency between two or more places each year, and who wish to enjoy the privileges of full participation as an active member of a Presbyterian church in each location.

The proposed category, “associate member,” as defined, would accomplish the stated intent of the overture, but it would do so in violation of constitutional principles. It is a principle of Presbyterian polity that active membership is held in one body at a time. Thus, when a candidate is ordained as a minister of the Word and Sacrament, his/her membership moves from the particular church to the presbytery. Section G-10.0302b(4) provides that when a member joins another church, that member’s name is deleted from the rolls of the first church. For purposes of accountability, oversight, and order membership is held in one place at one time.

The Item 05-09 provides that “associate members” would be “entitled to all the rights and privileges of an active member.” This means that an associate member could vote and hold office. The overture stipulates that “an associate member shall not hold office in multiple churches simultaneously.” This requirement places an undue burden on the churches of membership to ascertain where the associate member is an officer, if at all, requiring consultation between nominating committees of various particular churches. An associate member who is an elder might be a commissioner to two or more different presbyteries during the same year, creating the possibility that one person could vote more than one time on certain issues, such as proposed amendments to the Constitution.

Associate membership gives rise to questions about potential dual obligations for per capita remittance.
Church members remain under the jurisdiction of the session. The amendment does not make clear how jurisdictional matters would be handled in disciplinary cases in which the associate member was accused.

As a practical matter, an associate member serving as a session member or member of the board of deacons in one particular church leaves that session or board with a functional vacancy during the portion of the year he or she resides in another location.

Implication for the proposed revised Form of Government: The proposed Form of Government moves in the direction of less regulation and fewer rolls. This proposed amendment is in conflict with that direction, and, if approved, would attach at G-3.0204.

Item 05-10
[The assembly disapproved Item 05-10. See pp. 57, 58.]

On Amending G-5.0101 Regarding Covenantal Membership—From the Presbytery of Upper Ohio Valley.

The Presbytery of Upper Ohio Valley respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Amend G-5.0101 by adding a new section “a.” and re-letter sections “b.–f.” as “c.–g.” The new section would read as follows:

“a. It is understood that church membership is first and foremost defined by a covenant, not of human concept, but of divine making. ‘You did not choose me but I chose you’ (John 15:16). All the sections below must need be viewed through this lens.”

Rationale

While the Book of Order implies that church membership is covenantal (G-2.0500a(1)–(2), W-1.3011), it never explicitly says so. The Book of Confessions is more explicit, in particular The Heidelberg Catechism: “I believe that, from the beginning to the end of the world, and from among the whole human race, the Son of God, by his Spirit and his Word, gathers, protects, and preserves for himself, in the unity of the true faith, a congregation chosen for eternal life. Moreover, I believe that I am and forever will remain a living member of it” (The Book of Confessions, 4.055, Question 54). And our Lord’s words in John 15:16 (quoted in the overture) make it clear that we are in the Church by God’s sovereign grace.

This amendment serves to clarify the meaning of membership.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-10

Advice on Item 05-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-10.

Rationale

“The Church and Its Members” (Form of Government, Chapter V) does not use the words “covenant” or “covenantal” in describing membership in the church, which may mean that church membership is based on human ways of understanding the divine covenant.

Although Item 05-10 cites John, “You did not choose me, but I chose you…” (Jn. 15:16), as a rationale for amending G-5.0101, when it comes to determining membership, the church does not know who is actually chosen by the Lord. The Form of Government describes three human ways for the church to respond to its understanding of the divine covenant with an individual seeking active membership in the church (G-5.0101b): “… by profession of faith, reaffirmation of faith in Jesus Christ, or transfer of certificate from some other church” (Book of Order, G-5.0101b).

Human ways are not always in perfect conformity with the divine covenant, so the Constitution also has at least three human ways to remove persons from membership in the church: renunciation of jurisdiction (G-6.0701), deletion after a period of time on the inactive roll (G-10.0302b(7)) and removal from membership as a form of censure in a disciplinary case (D-12.0105b).

Therefore, seeing church membership as only “… first and foremost defined by a covenant, not of human concept, but of divine making …” (Item 05-10) is inconsistent with constitutional provisions which determine church membership through human procedures.
However, if General Assembly prefers to approve Item 05-10, it should focus on the meaning of covenant as it is used in proposed Form of Government (G-1.0301) to specifically emphasize the covenant of membership in baptism upon profession of faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior:

“1.0301 The Meaning of Membership and Baptism

“In Jesus Christ, God calls people to faith and to membership in the Church, the body of Christ. Baptism is the visible sign of that call and claim on a human life and of entrance into the membership of the church. The baptism of children witnesses to the truth that God’s love claims people before they are able to respond in faith. The baptism of those who enter the covenant of membership upon their own profession of faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior witnesses to the truth that God’s gift of grace calls forth a response of faithfulness. Thus, the triune God, incarnate in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, gives to the Church not only its mission but also its understanding of membership” (Item 07-01).

Item 05-11

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-11. See pp. 57, 61.]

On Amending G-13.0103r to Reduce Vexatious and Improper Litigation in the Church—from the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area overtures the 219th General Assembly (2009) of the PC(USA) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-13.0103r be amended to read as follows [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through.]:

“r. to provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order which shall be binding on the governing bodies of the church when rendered in accord with G-13.0112 or through a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case. The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding;”

Rationale

Section G-13.0103r stated that both the General Assembly and the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) can issue “authoritative interpretations” of the Book of Order, and that the “most recent” of these shall be binding. In light of this provision, some have sought to change the law of the church through private judicial cases, rather than through proper recourse to the collective discernment of the whole church gathered in General Assembly. Indeed, some have sought to import notions of “judicial activism” from the secular world and argued that the GAPJC (a commission of the General Assembly) should have the power to overrule the General Assembly itself.

The proposed amendment would eliminate the incentives for such vexatious and improper litigation by providing that authoritative interpretations of the Constitution that bind the whole church may be approved only by the General Assembly, in plenary sessions. Such actions are properly taken with guidance on our law and polity from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (the process described in G-13.0112).

The GAPJC bears the responsibility to decide cases that are brought by or against the PC(USA) or its governing bodies and agencies, because it is not practical for the General Assembly to hear individual cases in plenary session. Decisions of the GAPJC in such cases are final as to the parties. However, the responsibility to decide matters of more general import to the whole church properly rests with the General Assembly.

Judicial cases are extremely burdensome and costly to governing bodies of the church. When brought improvidently, they violate our biblical obligation to avoid vexatious or unnecessary litigation (D-1.0103) and are inconsistent with our fundamental theological conviction that we are most likely to discern the true movement of the Holy Spirit when we gather together in General Assembly (G-1.0400). Moreover, the GAPJC is woefully unprepared to do the work of the General Assembly, since it hears only from the parties to the case; does not have the wider perspective afforded by all of the persons and resources that inform deliberations by the General Assembly; and must prepare its decisions within very tight time constraints (a number of cases usually must be decided, immediately after hearings, in only one or two days).

The proposed amendment would affirm our historic polity of collective discernment under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and put an end to the “culture of litigation” that is growing in the church. It would do so by removing the incentive to pursue fundamental changes in church law through individual court cases. The judicial commissions of the church still could decide particular cases brought before them, as they do now. However, the authority to interpret the Constitution so as to bind the whole church would rest exclusively with the General Assembly.
Advice on Item 05-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-11. The General Assembly may wish to refer to the advice of the Advisory Committee of the Constitution on Item 05-21 as it considers the present overture.

Rationale

The removal of language in G-13.0103r as envisioned in this overture would eliminate the power of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) to interpret the Constitution through the rendering of a decision in a judicial case.

The assignment of the General Assembly’s interpretive responsibility both to the assembly as a whole and to its GAPJC was the result of General Assembly action in 1987. The General Assembly took this action as way of clarifying for the whole church “… the weight to be given to an interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly, either upon recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution or by its Permanent Judicial Commission in judgments in remedial or disciplinary cases” (Minutes, 1987, Part I, p. 143). The question before the General Assembly at the time was...whether such interpretations are to be considered advisory by the governing bodies of the church so that, after careful consideration of the interpretation of a particular provision of the Book of Order, a governing body could proceed to act on a different understanding of that provision, or, are governing bodies bound by such interpretations in the same way they are bound by the words of the Book of Order itself. (Minutes, 1987, Part I, p.143)

In adopting the current language of G-13.0103r, the church decided that it could not permit either the plenary decisions of the General Assembly or the decisions of the GAPJC to be regarded as advisory. Rather, both carried the authority of the General Assembly, which is the “… highest governing body of this church …” (G-13.0101)—the plenary because of its character as the most inclusive representative body, and the GAPJC in its capacity to act on the assembly’s behalf in judicial matters.

In vesting authority for constitutional interpretation in both the assembly plenary and the GAPJC, the church established the principle that the interpretation of the Constitution is both a general and a specific process. It is general in that the General Assembly, acting in plenary session, considers the theoretical and potential implications of the Constitution for the whole. It is specific in that the GAPJC, in deciding a judicial case, applies and may extend or clarify the Constitution to address particular circumstances as they arise in the life of the church.

The rationale offered in support of the overture suggests that the potential exists for “… [changing] the law of the church through private judicial cases (Item 05-11),” and that GAPJC decisions are perhaps used “… to overrule the General Assembly itself” (Item 05-11). But in our current constitutional language, it is precisely this tension between the general and specific interpretive processes described in G-13.0103r that preserves and clarifies the relationship between the church’s governance and its experience in the world. It is the responsibility of the General Assembly plenary to interpret the Constitution in response to general questions; it is the responsibility of the GAPJC to interpret the Constitution only as the facts of a particular case require it to do so. To eliminate either of these methods for interpreting the Constitution, as this overture proposes, is to deprive the church of an indispensable corrective for the limitations of the other.

The rationale for the overture implies that eliminating the GAPJC’s power to interpret the Constitution authoritatively will reduce the burden of “… vexatious and improper litigation…”(Item 05-11) it perceives presently to afflict the church. Item 05-11 presumes that judicial cases are, to some extent, filed for the purpose of seeking alternative authoritative interpretations in remedy of General Assembly or previous GAPJC decisions. It is unclear, however, that eliminating the GAPJC as a source of constitutional interpretation would satisfy this concern. It seems equally likely that eliminating the GAPJC as an authoritative interpreter of the Constitution will merely add to the burden of overtures to subsequent General Assemblies seeking constitutional remedy for unpopular actions of previous assemblies.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-11 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 05-11

Comment on Item 05-11—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concurs with the recommendation and advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) to this overture and respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-11.
This overture seeks to eliminate an authoritative interpretation (AI) of the Book of Order from being rendered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) in its decision in a case before it.

The Book of Order, in G-13.0103r, provides two equally weighted ways for the church to be guided and bound by an authoritative interpretation that clarifies a particular provision of the Book of Order through action of the General Assembly: either (1) directly in plenary session or (2) through decision of its commission (the GAPJC). Such balance of the general focus and the specific focus is valuable to the church as it lives out its mission under the Constitution.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 05-12

On Amending G-7.0400, Articles of Incorporation Be Provided to Presbytery – From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Western North Carolina

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer Item 05-12 with the following response:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer the request with the following authoritative interpretation:

As part of their responsibility to review the proceedings of sessions, presbyteries have responsibility to determine that the proceedings of sessions “have been regular and in accordance with the Constitution” (Book of Order, G-9.0409a(2)). Sessions are required to produce any articles of incorporation and bylaws adopted by the congregation as part of the annual review of session records and may be required to produce such documents as part of a special administrative review undertaken on learning “of any irregularity or delinquency by a lower governing body” (Book of Order, G-9.0408).

[1.] Sessions are required as part of the process of the annual review of records to provide to the presbytery any amendments to the articles of incorporation of the congregation. Because such articles would necessarily have to be adopted by the congregation at a meeting called by the session, the minutes of such a congregational meeting, and any minutes of the session leading to the call of such a meeting, would by necessity have to include copies of such articles or amendments, as well as copies of corporate regulations, bylaws, or standing rules, and any amendments thereto. Section G-9.0407d(1) (“Presbyteries shall review the records of sessions annually. If a session shall fail to submit its records for this purpose, the presbytery shall order them to be produced at a specific time.”) Further, G-11.0103x, which gives presbytery power “to review session minutes and records at least once each year” allows presbytery to require more frequent review than annual review, and thus allows a presbytery to require the submission of proposed amendments to articles of incorporation or bylaws.

[2.] If a presbytery has any reason to believe that a session or congregation is considering changes to its articles of incorporation, regulations, bylaws, or standing rules that are contrary to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), pursuant to G-9.0408 (“If a higher governing body learns at any time of any irregularity or delinquency by a lower governing body, it may require the governing body to produce any records and take appropriate action”) it may require the congregation to produce any proposed or adopted amendments to such corporate documents immediately. A presbytery may delegate the power to require the production of such documents to its council or a committee or entity within the presbytery, or empower an administrative commission of the presbytery to act in such matters.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that the concerns underlying this question might be understood to suggest that absent a presbytery preventing a congregation from amending its articles of incorporation, regulations, bylaws, or standing rules in a manner inconsistent with the Constitution, such an amendment would be effective and potentially irreversible. However, any attempt by a congregation or governing body to adopt corporate documents inconsistent with our Constitution is fundamentally contrary to the polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). A congregation therefore lacks the power to adopt changes to its articles of incorporation, regulations, by-laws, or standing rules that are contrary to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). [In a similar situation, the GAPJC has found that “G-7.0302 and G-7.0304 limit the business of congregational meetings and do not include the topic of seeking dismissal” from the denomination (Sundquist v. Presbytery of the Heartland, Remedial Case 219-03 (Oct. 27, 2008)]. Adoption of corporate documents containing provisions contrary to the Constitution is:

[3.] [b.] Beyond the legal power of a congregation or session (G-7.0402), and subjects officers and members of a congregation that participate in such actions to the discipline of the church and to legal liability for acting beyond their lawful powers with respect to such property;

[4.] [c.] Cause for a presbytery to exercise original jurisdiction over the affairs of the congregation (G-11.0103s) and to replace the session of that congregation with an administrative commission until actions taken contrary to Constitution are rescinded, provided that the commission acts in accordance with Sundquist v. Presbytery of the Heartland, Remedial Case 219-03 (Oct. 27, 2008); and

[5.] [d.] A use of the property of the congregation contrary to the Constitution and causes the property of that congregation to revert to the control of the presbytery until the actions taken contrary to the Constitution are rescinded. Section G-8.0301 (“Whenever property of, or held for, a particular church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ceases to be used by that church as a particular church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in accordance with this Constitution, such property shall be held, used, applied, transferred, or sold as provided by the presbytery.”) If a presbytery becomes aware of such a situation, it has an obligation to exercise oversight over such a congregation to ensure correction of such actions.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Western North Carolina. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Questions Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

   Does the Book of Order require that a congregation or its session promptly provide its presbytery with a prior copy of the congregation's proposed articles of incorporation and any proposed amendments thereof - or at least a copy of articles adopted and amended?

2. Findings

   Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the questions presented:

   With respect to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the relevant provisions of the Book of Order are clear, but that the request presents a question of significant importance in the life of the denomination, and therefore that authoritative interpretation of G-7.0402 is advisable.

   Implications for the proposed Form of Government: The approval of this advice would have similar effect upon the proposed Form of Government as it would under the current Form of Government. The Book of Order citations would have to be changed to reflect the proposed Form of Government numbers.

Item 05-13

[The assembly approved Item 05-13. See pp. 57, 58.]

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer Item 05-13 with the following response:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the question requires interpretation of G-9.0500 concerning the membership of an administrative commission.
The Form of Government permits a governing body to appoint a minimum number of its elder and minister members as an administrative commission to consider and conclude specific matters on behalf of the entire governing body (G-9.0502); an administrative commission’s actions are reviewable as the actions of the governing body itself (G-9.0502, G-9.0407b, G-9.0407d). The informal statement frequently heard that a commission “is the governing body” points to this representation of the whole governing body.

Under G-4.0403 a governing body has responsibility for expressing its own diversity when it commissions individuals to make decisions for its entire membership and for the wider church (G-9.0104a–b). These constitutional standards concerning participation and representation suggest an administrative commission should not be significantly more homogeneous than the governing body that appointed it. Therefore the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that an office or position held by an individual is by itself insufficient basis for appointment to an administrative commission.

It is constitutional, however, for a governing body to provide by rule for appointment of an administrative commission as might be needed under emergency circumstances such as a natural disaster or a public health order forbidding social gatherings. With regard to representation, a governing body may approve a group of ex-officio members as the core membership of an administrative commission if it annually reviews the composition of that group for its representational sufficiency under G-9.0500 and by recorded action augments it as needed in order that the administrative commission can more truly act as and for the governing body.

As is always the case, governing bodies are advised to safeguard against an administrative commission inadvertently or intentionally functioning as the governing body outside of the situation(s) for which it was formed. It is critical to the administrative commission’s integrity in representing the whole governing body that the conditions not only activating but also deactivating the commission be set forth at the time of its appointment, so as to prevent open-ended exercise of the governing body’s responsibilities and powers. An administrative commission has limited authority. Only the governing body may delegate its own powers, and the governing body powers delegated to an administrative commission, council or committees are not to be further delegated, because “[t]he practice of delegating the ‘power to delegate’ would seriously weaken our system of accountability and checks and balances” (Minutes, 1995, Part I. p. 282).

It is possible in advance of actual need to create an administrative commission based on a core ex officio membership to which are added members to meet the representation requirements of G-9.0504 and G-4.0403. The commission must have a detailed set of conditions for its activation and deactivation in order to function within the expressed intent of the governing body. There are means other than an administrative commission by which a governing body may direct that its responsibilities and powers be discerned and fulfilled by a portion of its membership and suggests that these be considered.

1. Section G-9.0501a states “A committee is appointed either to study and recommend appropriate action or to carry out directions or decisions already made by a governing body. It shall make a full report to the governing body that created it, and its recommendations shall require action by the governing body.”

2. Section G-9.0901 states “Within this Constitution, it has been assumed that the governing bodies beyond the session will delegate particular aspects of their tasks to councils, commissions, and committees. … Reference to such agencies, designated by functions or by formal titles, is not intended to limit the governing bodies to these structures but to describe those which will expedite the mutual work of the whole church.” Additionally, G-11.0103v and G-13.0201d–e allow for the authorization of the council of a presbytery or the General Assembly to act for its governing body between meetings.

3. A request may be made that there be a special meeting of the governing body. In the case of a presbytery, the minimum quorum under G-11.0202 (“any three minister members and the elder members present, provided that at least three churches are represented by elders”) is smaller than seven, the minimum number for any presbytery’s administrative commission except those charged to ordain and/or install ministers (G-9.0504b.(3). A possible drawback to this option could be the length of time involved in required notice of a special meeting: for a session there must be “reasonable notice” (G-10.0201); for a presbytery there must be at least ten days’ notice (G-11.0201); for a synod the required notice is fifteen days (G-12.0201), and for the General Assembly sixty days (G-13.0104).

Another alternative to the appointment of an administrative commission is for the governing body to utilize technological assistance in order to meet and carry out its functions on the record without having a face-to-face meeting; some sessions and presbyteries already do this on an occasional or regular basis. A critical requirement for teleconferences and videoconferences under Robert’s Rules of Order is that the “meeting must be conducted by a technology that allows all persons participating to hear each other at the same time (and, if a videoconference, to see each other as well). The opportunity for simultaneous communication is central to the deliberative character of the meeting …” (RONR (10th ed.), p. 482, l. 30–40). It is important that the governing body provide for situations frequently arising in physical assemblies but for which procedures common to parliamentary law are not applicable, e.g., a request for ballot voting.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the Director of Operations of the Office of the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the Assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The Assembly is free to adopt, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Question Received

Item 05-13 from the director of Operations, Office of the General Assembly, presents the following question upon which he seeks constitutional interpretation:

May an administrative commission be appointed by stipulating the positions of those who will serve on the commission without identifying the specific individuals?

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-13 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-14

[The assembly approved Item 05-14 with amendment. See pp. 57, 59.]

Authoritative Interpretation—Officer, Moderator, or Stated Clerk Fails to Carry Out Duties of Office, What Recourse Does Governing Body have to Address the Problem?—Member of the Presbytery of New York City.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer Item 05-14 with the following responses:

1. In response to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request points to a deficiency in the current language of G-9.0203b in the Book of Order, best addressed by constitutional amendment. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

   Shall G-9.0203b be amended as follows (Text to be added is shown as italic.):

   “b. The clerk of the session shall be an elder elected by the session for such term as it may determine. The clerk of a presbytery, a synod, and the General Assembly shall be called stated clerk, shall be elected by the governing body for a definite term as it may determine, and must be eligible for membership in the governing body. A [stated] clerk may be removed from office prior to completion of his or her term of service through the use of the process outlined in G-9.0705.”

2. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer the second question by referring to the 216th General Assembly (2004) interpretation of G-9.0705 (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 86, 331, Item 04-15) and adding the following statement:

   Section G-9.0203a lists the following duties of the stated clerk of a governing body in his or her service as an ecclesiastical officer:

   • Record the transactions of the governing body;
   • Keep its rolls of membership and attendance;
   • Preserve its records carefully; and
   • Furnish verified extracts from the records when required by another governing body.

   The 2004 interpretation defined what it called the “traditional duties of a stated clerk” to include “those enumerated in G-9.0203a, serving as resource for ecclesiastical committees as noted in G-9.0202, providing support for administrative commissions, and fulfilling the responsibilities of the stated clerk for support of the judicial process as provided in the Rules of Discipline.” While the 216th General Assembly (2004) did not use the term “ecclesiastical” to describe these responsibilities, they are clearly ecclesiastical in nature in that they facilitate the functions of the goving body as required by the Constitution of the church.

In addition, the clerk of a session is expected to serve as secretary for congregational meetings; this, too, is to be understood as an ecclesiastical responsibility.

Section G-9.0700 pertains to persons employed by governing bodies to “be the administrators of those governing bodies, accountable to the governing bodies … for the implementation of the decisions and matters of strategy, program, and resources” (G-9.0701). Section G-9.0700 describes both “executives” and “other administrative staff positions” as administrative staff. This description implies a distinction between ecclesiastical functions—those having to do with facilitating constitutionally mandated functions of the governing body—and administrative functions—those having to do with strategy, program, and resources.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from a member of the Presbytery of New York City. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Questions Received

1. If an officer, moderator or stated clerk, is alleged to have failed to carry out the duties and responsibilities of office, what recourse does the governing body truly have to address the problem?

2. What are the ecclesiastical duties of the stated clerk of a presbytery?

Findings

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has established as an historic principle of church order that “the election of … persons to the exercise of … authority, in any particular society, is in that society” (G-1.0306). Except where otherwise stated in the Constitution, it is within the right of every governing body to elect its officers, and to see that those officers faithfully discharge the duties of the offices to which they are elected. However, governing bodies also have an obligation to assure an officer of the same fundamental fairness in responding to allegations of dereliction of the responsibilities of office that it would otherwise accord any member of the body.

Robert’s Rules is helpful in outlining various means of recourse against the failure of a moderator to perform the duties of office:

• In the case of a simple failure of the moderator to perform the duties appropriate to handling a motion, the maker of the motion may raise a point of order, and from the moderator’s decision may raise an appeal.

• In the event of culpable failure of the moderator to perform the duties of the office, a motion can be made to censure him or her (RRONR, 10th ed., p. 642, l. 21).

• The process for termination of a moderator or stated clerk of a governing body higher than the session is not specified in the Book of Order. Sections G-9.0202b and G-9.0203b indicate only that a moderator or stated clerk “serves for such term as the presbytery may determine,” adding in the case of the moderator of a presbytery that the term shall not exceed one year, and of a synod two years. Robert’s Rules of Order provides that a body may rescind on majority vote the election of an officer who is elected for a specific term or until their successors are elected. However, if the officer’s term is specified only in terms of length of time (e.g., “for two years”), that officer may only be removed from office following an investigation and trial (RRONR, 10th ed., p. 643, l. 6-14). The committee notes that the investigating committee required in this section of Robert’s Rules is not the investigating committee required by disciplinary procedures in D-10.0200.

The committee further notes that in many presbyteries stated clerks carry responsibilities that go beyond ecclesiastical duties and include various administrative tasks. In regard to the latter, the stated clerk is subject to the provisions of G-9.0705 regarding the termination of administrative staff. In its interpretation of G-9.0705 in 2004 (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 86, 331, Item 04-15), the 216th General Assembly (2004) noted that an officer who performs non-ecclesiastical functions “is entitled to the protections of G-9.0705 only as related to the non-ecclesiastical portion of the position.” In light of this interpretation, a hearing under the provisions of G-9.0705 would be required to terminate the officer for failure to discharge such non-ecclesiastical responsibilities as the position description may entail. The scope of such a hearing would be limited to non-cecclesiastical functions.

Robert’s Rules and the language of the 2004 interpretation have the effect of requiring two separate hearing processes for removing a stated clerk whose job description specifies non-ecclesiastical functions. Since the content of both hearing processes is likely to be similar, having separate hearings for removal from ecclesiastical and non-ecclesiastical responsibilities seems unnecessarily burdensome. This situation can be remedied by the addition of the language proposed in the amendment.

With respect to the second question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request presents a question that does not require fresh interpretation of G-9.0705.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-14 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-15

[The assembly approved Item 05-15. See pp. 57, 59.]

Interpretation (G-13.0112c) Re: Renunciation—From the Stated Clerk, Synod of Lincoln Trails.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer Item 05-15 with the following response:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-6.0701:

An officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may renounce the jurisdiction of the church under the provisions of G-6.0701 by submitting to the clerk of the governing body supervising the officer’s ministry a written statement of renunciation. The statement must be signed by the officer renouncing, and may not be signed on his or her behalf by another party.

In the absence of a written statement of renunciation signed by the officer, and if the officer engages or persists in a work of which the governing body disapproves, the terms of G-6.0702 would apply.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the stated clerk of the Synod of Lincoln Trails. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Questions Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

May an officer’s authorized representative carry out the terms of G-6.0701, effectively renouncing jurisdiction on behalf of a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) officer so long as that representative has such authority? If not, what process should a commission, such as in the situation described below, utilize in addressing such behavior by a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) officer?

2. Findings

Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the questions presented:

With respect to the question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request presents a question on which authoritative interpretation of the G-6.0701 is advisable.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-15 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.
Item 05-16

[The assembly approved Item 05-16. See pp. 57, 59.]

Ethical and Polity Implications of Financial Gifts Made Directly by Individuals to Ministers—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer Item 05-16 with the following response:

With regard to the six questions raised, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the Book of Order gives very little specific guidance in the area of fiscal responsibility for churches, and even less guidance for ministers. It does lay down some underlying principles, and it specifies the responsibilities of the session, congregation, and presbytery for approving the terms of a minister’s call. It mandates that the session is responsible “to challenge the people of God with the privilege of responsible Christian stewardship of money and time and talents” (G-10.0102h); establish the particular church’s budget and “determine the distribution of the church’s benevolences” (G-10.0102i); to provide for “the annual review of the adequacy of compensation for all staff” (G-10.0102n); and to oversee the finances of the church with minimum standards of financial procedure established at G-10.0401. The Book of Order reserves to the congregation matters related to the pastoral relationship, such as changing the terms of call of a pastor (G-7.0304a(3)). The presbytery has the right and responsibility for oversight of all calls within the presbytery, including the approval of changes in terms of call, and the establishment of minimum compensation and benefits requirements for all pastoral calls (G-11.0103n). Section G-14.0534 very clearly specifies two requirements for the terms of call—that they meet the requirements of federal and state tax laws; and that they fully disclose the compensation of the minister.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the basic requirements set forth in G-14.0534 leave latitude and responsibility for presbyteries to determine fiscal policies for their member churches and standards of financial ethical conduct for members of the presbytery, consistent with current and applicable federal and state tax laws. When problems arise, there is adequate remedy available to presbyteries through general and special administrative review processes.

To the extent that further guidance is necessary, one may refer to the General Assembly Mission Council/Office of the General Assembly Standards of Ethical Conduct (http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/ethical-conduct.pdf).

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Questions Received

The request asks a series of questions that have to do with the practice of financial gifts to a minister that amount to undisclosed compensation additional to the terms of call authorized by the congregation and that may not meet the requirements of federal and state tax laws.

1. What are the ethical and polity implications of financial gifts, bonuses, or other offerings made directly by individuals to a minister?
2. Under what circumstances are such gifts appropriate and when are they not appropriate?
3. Does the size of the gift matter and to whom?
4. What reports are required and to whom when these gifts are made or received?
5. When is congregational approval required and is congregational approval necessary to solicit such gifts?
6. What about honoraria or gifts received as extra compensation for presiding at worship during special occasions?

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-16 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.
Item 05-17

[The assembly approved Item 05-17. See pp. 57, 60.]

Interpreting G-14.0440 Regarding Circulation of Personal Information Forms by Candidates—From Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Columbia Theological Seminary, Presbytery of St. Augustine.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following as an authoritative interpretation of G-14.0440:

Section G-14.0440 allows a candidate to enter into negotiation for his or her ministerial service, even if the candidate has not had his or her final assessment from the presbytery’s committee on preparation for ministry, provided the candidate

- has completed two full years of theological education (or the equivalent thereof),
- has had an annual consultation within the last year,
- has satisfactorily completed all the standard ordination exams or received certification of readiness under G-14.0472, and
- has received the approval of the candidate’s committee on preparation for ministry.

If the committee on preparation for ministry has approved a particular candidate who meets all the aforementioned requirements to enter into negotiation for his or her ministerial service, that candidate may circulate a Personal Information Form or other biographical information.”

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the chairman of the board of trustees, Columbia Theological Seminary. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Question Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Item 05-17 from the chairman of the board of trustees, Columbia Theological Seminary, asks whether G-14.0440 permits a presbytery to authorize the circulation of a Personal Information Form or other biographical information by a candidate who has completed two full years of theological education (or the equivalent thereof), had an annual consultation within the last year, and has satisfactorily completed all the standard ordination exams or received certification of readiness under G-14.0472, even if the candidate has not received final assessment from the presbytery’s committee on preparation for ministry (G-14.0450).

2. Findings

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that there are many factors that contribute to the certification of a candidate as ready to be examined for ordination, pending a call. Some of those factors are listed in G-14.0450. Minimum time requirements for the inquiry and candidacy phases are also controlling factors. The committee on preparation for ministry monitors a candidate’s progress toward the goals of the inquiry and candidacy phases and best knows a particular candidate and whether that candidate is ready to begin ordained ministry.

Implications for the Proposed Form of Government: To the extent that the 219th General Assembly (2010) retains the current language of proposed G-2.0607, this authoritative interpretation would attach to the new constitutional language.

Item 05-18

[The assembly approved Item 05-18. See pp. 57, 59.]

Is a Session Bound to Consider Only Those Items Published in the Call for a Called/Special Meeting—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of New Covenant.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-10.0201:
In the absence of specific language in G-10.0201 about limitation of the business that can rightly be considered in a special meeting of the session, the provisions of Robert’s Rules of Order are controlling: “only business mentioned in the call of a special meeting can be transacted at such a meeting. If, at a special meeting, it becomes urgent in an emergency to take action for which no notice was given, that action, to become legal, must be ratified ... by the organization at a regular meeting (or, if ratification also cannot wait, at another special meeting properly called for that purpose)” (Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised, 10th Edition, p. 90).

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of New Covenant. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Question Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Item 05-18 from the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New Covenant asks whether a session, meeting in a special meeting, is bound to consider only those items published in the call for that special meeting.

2. Findings and Recommendations as to Requests

The Book of Order addresses the issue of special meetings of all four governing bodies and the congregation. In each case, except the session, there is a requirement that the business to be transacted at a special meeting is limited to items specifically listed in the call for the meeting.

The underlying question is whether by its silence on special meeting business in G-10.0201 the Constitution is implying that the session is not subject to the requirement that business to be considered in special meetings is limited to that which was published in the call for the meeting. This interpretation relies on the exception permitted in G-9.0302 to depart from Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the more compelling concern is the protection of the right of the members to know what business will be considered. This right is foundational to parliamentary procedure. The potential for abuse of the special meeting of the session is multiplied when the restriction on business that can be considered does not exist.

Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised, 10th Edition states that “only business mentioned in the call of a special meeting can be transacted at such a meeting. If, at a special meeting, it becomes urgent in an emergency to take action for which no notice was given, that action, to become legal, must be ratified (see pp. 118–20) by the organization at a regular meeting (or, if ratification also cannot wait, at another special meeting properly called for that purpose)” (p. 90). This provision allows some flexibility to the body but also offers safeguards against abuse.

If the General Assembly believes that greater specificity is desired in the text of the Form of Government, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that can be accomplished by directing the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-10.0201 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“G-10.0201 Meetings

“The session shall hold stated meetings at least quarterly. The moderator of the session may call a special meeting of the session when he or she judges it necessary and shall do so when requested in writing by any two members of the session. The session shall also meet when directed to do so by presbytery. Reasonable notice of all special meetings must be given when other than routine business is to be transacted. The notice shall set out the purpose of the meeting, and no other business than that listed in the notice shall be transacted. [The rest of the section remains unchanged.]”

However, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that this amendment will be more restrictive than the application of the provisions of Roberts’ Rules of Order.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-18 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.
Item 05-19

[The assembly approved Item 05-19 with comment. See pp. 57, 59–60.]

[Comment: The 219th General Assembly (2010) advises that the General Assembly Committee on Representation should be asked to study the current age groups and nomenclature in order to have consistency among all Presbyterian documentation and for the General Assembly Committee on Representation to make recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012).]

Definition of Youth, Overture 90-18—From the Manager, General Assembly Nominations.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer the question with the following authoritative interpretation, adopted in 1991, of G-9.0105a(5) regarding “youth”:

“Different age groups are persons who are unlike each other due to the different stages of life they represent, such as youth, adulthood, or old age. In order to assure greater inclusiveness in the church, persons from all different age groups are needed. The age groups and ages they contain are as follows: Youth—25 and under; Young Adults—26–35; Adults—36–55; Senior Adults—56 and up” (Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 402).

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from a General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) staff person. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s recommendation.

1. Question Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Item 05-19 from the Office of the General Assembly seeks clarification of “youth” as found in the G-9.0105a(5) list of required members for the Committee on Representation.

2. Findings

Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the question presented:

In G-9.0105a(5) the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) demonstrates a commitment to the inclusion and participation in the church by its younger members, requiring that there be “youth male and female membership” on committees of representation at the levels of governing bodies above the session. This commitment is also expressed in the G-4.0403 mandate that “[p]ersons of … different ages … shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.” In neither context is there a constitutional definition of “youth” that gives guidance to governing bodies as they nominate church members for election to service.

In its advice to the 203rd General Assembly (1991), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommended that the concern of Overture 90-18 for definition of “different age groups” be answered by this advice: “‘Different Age Groups’ are persons who are unlike each other due to the different states of life they represent, such as youth, adulthood, or old age. In order to assure greater inclusiveness in the church, persons from all different age groups are needed. The age groups and ages they contain are as follows: Youth—25 and under; Young Adults—26–35; Adults—36–55; Senior Adults—56 and up” (Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 402).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that “youth” includes those in the age group 25 and under for membership in committees on representation.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution therefore recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) answer the question with the authoritative interpretation that was adopted in 1991 and is set forth above.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: The proposed Form of Government requires full expression of the full diversity of the church. Different age groups would also be required.
Item 05-20

D-10.0303, Reviewing Work of Investigating Committee—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Seattle.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

   Shall D-10.0202 be amended by inserting a new “c” and renumbering the remaining paragraphs, “c.—j.” as “d.—k.”? The new section “c.” shall read as follows:

   “c. determine whether the accusation repeats allegations previously made against the accused, and if so, report to the governing body having jurisdiction over the accused that it will not file charges (D-10.0202j) unless the accusation contains new information warranting investigation or is the subject of an investigation that has not been concluded.”

2. Commend the responses submitted to the Office of the General Assembly for its use in responding to questions and advising the church.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Seattle. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Questions Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

   a. If a petition for review of the work of an investigating committee that has decided not to file charges is not sustained, is the matter concluded?

   b. What is the meaning of “the matter is concluded”?

   c. If additional information is found at a later date upon which the same or similar allegations are made, may a new investigating committee be appointed?

   d. If no additional information is found, may a new investigating committee be appointed if the same allegations are made at a later date?

   e. Who makes the decision whether to appoint a new investigating committee based on same or similar allegations filed at a later date?

2. Findings

   Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the questions presented:

   a. With respect to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that if a petition for review of the work of an investigating committee that has decided not to file charges is not sustained, the matter is concluded (D-10.0303e; GAPJC 2004, Sohn v. Hanmi Presbytery, Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 371).

   b. With respect to the second question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that “the matter is concluded” means that there are no procedures in the Rules of Discipline providing for further review of the work of the original investigating committee, and that the outcome of the work of both the original and second investigating committees as resulting in no charges being filed stands as the response of the governing body to the original allegation. The session or permanent judicial commission dismisses the investigating committee and the governing body clerk is then to maintain the investigating committee’s records in accordance with session or presbytery policy (D-10.0304).

   c. With respect to the third question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that a new written statement of an alleged offense must be filed in order to open a new investigation. A new investigating committee may be formed on the basis of new information concerning the same or a similar alleged offense. Because additional time will have passed since the original alleged offense, if the offense alleged in the new filing is the one originally alleged, then the requirement that any charges be filed no later than three years from the time of the commission of the alleged offense might have to be met well within a year rather than up to a year following appointment of the new investigating committee. (“No charges shall be filed later than three years from the time of the commission of the alleged offense, nor later than one year from the date the investigating committee was formed, whichever occurs first …” D-10.0401, emphasis added.)

d. With respect to the fourth question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that upon the filing of an allegation with the clerk of the governing body an investigating committee shall be appointed in the usual manner. The presbytery may appoint persons who served on a previous investigating committee to serve on an investigating committee to investigate the same or similar accusations. There is no provision for screening allegations prior to appointment of an investigating committee; it is the duty of the governing body’s clerk to report the allegation “without undertaking further inquiry” in order that the accusation may be immediately referred to an investigating committee (D-10.0103). It then is the responsibility of the investigating committee to determine whether it has sufficient evidence on the basis of which the allegation(s) can be proved (D-10.0202g); it is a responsibility of the investigating committee to conduct an inquiry sufficient to determine whether to file one or more charges based on the previous investigation or upon a new investigation should further inquiry be determined needed.

If informed by the accused or by any papers, documents, records, testimony, or other evidence that the allegation against the accused was investigated by a previous investigating committee, the present committee may review the records of the earlier investigating committee that have been maintained by the governing body and it may make use of those records in its mandated responsibilities to investigate and to make its decision whether to file charges. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution also notes that if a person who is the victim of repeated accusations desires to stop the cycle of accusation and investigation, he or she could request vindication (D-9.0000). If he or she is vindicated, the report of the investigating committee would conclude the matter.

e. With respect to the fifth question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that it is answered by the response to the fourth question.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-20 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-21

[The assembly approved Item 05-19 with amendment. See pp. 57, 61.]

Responsibility of General Assembly to Provide Authoritative Interpretations of Book of Order (G-13.0103r)—From Member, Presbytery of St Augustine.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-13.0103r:

An authoritative interpretation is an interpretation of one or more provisions of the Book of Order. The General Assembly may authoritatively interpret the Book of Order through the approval of an interpretive statement by a General Assembly after the assembly has heard the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, or by a decision in a judicial case rendered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC).

The purpose of an authoritative interpretation is to clarify for the church the meaning and intent of a provision of the Book of Order as that provision impacts the church’s life and witness. An authoritative interpretation of the Constitution approved in accordance with G-13.0103r is binding on all members and governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order is binding. Authoritative interpretations are in effect until changed or revoked by a subsequent General Assembly or modified by the GAPJC.

An authoritative interpretation so approved or rendered may include any language approved by the General Assembly or GAPJC that the body sees as explaining the provision(s) of the Book of Order. It may cite previous interpretations or decisions, review the history of the provision or its antecedents, refer to portions of Scripture or the Constitution, or make use of other explanatory material the body deems helpful in explaining the meaning and impact of the Book of Order provision(s) being interpreted.

With respect to the question of the limits of the General Assembly’s power to interpret the Constitution, it is instructive to examine the wording of G-13.0103r. The General Assembly has responsibility and power to provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order which shall be binding on the governing bodies of the church when rendered in accord with G-13.0112 or through a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case. The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding.

Because the General Assembly “is the highest governing body of this church and is representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (G-13.0101), the power to interpret the Constitution in an authoritative manner belongs finally to the General Assembly. This power is not accorded to any other governing body.

In recent years, the question has arisen in some circles whether the General Assembly’s Permanent Judicial Commission may adopt an interpretation of the Constitution that is contrary to an interpretation rendered by the assembly under the provisions of G-13.0112. Section G-13.0103r makes clear that there are parallel processes for interpreting the Constitution. One method involves an interpretation approved by the assembly after hearing the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution; the other is an interpretation that is part of a decision by the GAPJC in a judicial case. Whether it acts in plenary session or through its commission, the most recent interpretation so rendered is authoritative and binding. The Constitution does not distinguish between levels of authority with respect to these methods. This basic parity between assembly plenary and GAPJC decision is necessary as an important corrective on the interpretive power of both assembly plenary and GAPJC. From a constitutional perspective, it is theoretically possible that plenary and GAPJC may differ, even significantly, in their interpretations of provisions of the Constitution. It is therefore incumbent on both plenary and GAPJC to accord to each other’s interpretations the utmost respect and deference, seeking above all else to discern the guidance of God’s Spirit as it may be heard through each.

The corporate health of the people of God is ill-served by anything less.

With respect to the question of the impact of an authoritative interpretation on the Constitution, it should be noted that an authoritative interpretation is not an amendment to the Constitution. Neither the General Assembly nor the GAPJC may alter the wording of the Constitution by means of an authoritative interpretation.

[More subtle, however, is the question of whether the act of interpreting wording of the Constitution changes the meaning of the Constitution. In truth, any interpretation of a text shapes the meaning of that text by addressing its provisions to circumstances perhaps not anticipated when the text was created. It is for this reason that we regard the church’s Constitution as a living document, in that by the act of interpretation we mold the meaning of our Constitution to fit the ever-changing landscape of the church’s life and witness. This interpretive work is therefore essential to the vitality of the church, lest the Constitution become a lifeless conglomeration of words without reference to reality.]

The General Assembly and the GAPJC would be wise to consider the following as they render authoritative interpretations of the Constitution:

- The General Assembly and the GAPJC, as noted above, may not add new language to the text of the Constitution by means of authoritative interpretation.
- The General Assembly and the GAPJC must interpret the existing language of the Constitution, rather than replacing that language with antecedent language.
- The General Assembly and the GAPJC must resolve tensions and ambiguities between provisions of the Constitution in such a way as to give effect to all provisions.
- The General Assembly and the GAPJC must exercise great care to ensure that any interpretation remains true to the plain meaning and context of the provision interpreted.
- The General Assembly and the GAPJC must each accord to the previous interpretive deliverances of the other the highest respect and deference in rendering additional interpretations of their own.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the Presbytery of St. Augustine. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Constitution.

1. Questions Presented to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution
   a. What may an authoritative interpretation include?
   b. hat limits, if any, exist on the General Assembly’s power to interpret the Constitution?
c. What impact does an authoritative interpretation of a constitutional provision have on the Constitution? Is an authoritative interpretation conditioned by particular patterns of fact in the same way that a decision of the GA Permanent Judicial Commission is?

2. Findings

With respect to the questions presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request presents a question on which authoritative interpretation of G-13.0103r is advisable.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-21 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-22

[The assembly approved Item 05-22. See pp. 57, 62.]

Section G-7.0306, Pastor Moderator of All Meetings of Congregation—From the Stated Clerk, Synod of Southern California & Hawaii.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-7.0306:

The decision to have someone other than the pastor moderate a congregational meeting is a discretionary constitutional power of the presbytery that installed or appointed the moderator and that is “responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district” (G-11.0103). It would be impractical for the pastor to moderate congregational meetings under G-7.0306 that involve responsibilities of the presbytery properly exercised on behalf of the church, or in which the moderator has a material conflict of interest. Because the authority to moderate congregational meetings derives from the presbytery, the presbytery has the right to appoint a moderator other than the pastor for a hearing conducted under the provisions of G-9.0505b(1) and a congregational meeting called under the terms of G-9.0505b(2).

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution from the stated clerk of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly on the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its finding and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. Questions Presented

a. Section G-7.0306 states that “The pastor shall be the moderator of all meetings of the congregation.” Are there exceptions?

b. If an administrative commission has been empowered under the provisions of G-9.0505b(2) to dissolve a pastoral relationship, does the pastor moderate the required congregational meeting at which the commission hears the positions of the pastor and members if they choose to speak?

c. When a congregation is meeting to approve the terms of call for the person who is the pastor, can that pastor be excused during action on the call?

d. Are there other times when it is not appropriate for the pastor to moderate the congregational meeting or portions of it?

2. Findings and Recommendation as to Request

Under G-7.0306 the pastor or moderator of session appointed by the presbytery is constitutionally permitted to be excused from moderating a meeting of the congregation, but is not required to be excused: “If it is impractical for the pastor or the moderator of session appointed by presbytery to preside, he or she shall invite, with the concurrence of the session, another minister of the presbytery to preside.” There is no constitutional definition of “impractical” governing such invitations. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes the widespread custom of providing for another presbyter to temporarily moderate the meeting when the congregation is to consider changes in the terms of the pastor’s call.
Item 05-22 asks whether there are times when the pastor should be excused from moderating all or part of the congregational meeting. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the appropriateness of the pastor being the moderator should be considered in terms of the practicality of the pastor presiding when the congregation works to fulfill certain of its constitutional responsibilities. The G-7.0304 list of the business that may be transacted at meetings of the congregation includes matters that could relate directly to a pastor’s private interest, potentially creating a conflict of interest for the pastor and thereby interfering with the congregation’s work. In order to avoid real or perceived conflict of interest, it would be prudent or even necessary for the pastor not to moderate meetings of the congregation with regard to “matters related to the pastoral relationship, such as changing the call, or requesting or consenting or declining to consent to dissolution” [G-7.0304a(3)], and “matters related to buying, mortgaging, or selling real property” [G-7.0304a(4)] when the pastor would benefit from an outcome.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-22 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-23

[The assembly approved Item 05-23. See pp. 57, 59.]

Work within Bounds—From Manager, Polity Guidance and Training.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve the following as an authoritative interpretation of G-11.0401a:

Work is properly within the responsibility of a presbytery when:

- Responsibility for the work is constitutionally assigned to the presbytery (e.g., service to congregations under the jurisdiction of the presbytery);
- The work is in service to another church and an ecumenical agreement (G-15.0201a) with that church assigns responsibility to the presbytery for permitting a minister to serve the other church; or
- The consultation of the presbytery with the governing bodies above and below it (G-9.0404b) has resulted in an agreement that the presbytery is to be responsible for the type of work.

Work is not properly within the responsibility of a presbytery when:

- Responsibility for the work is constitutionally assigned to another governing body (e.g., service to synod or General Assembly);
- The work is in service to another church and an ecumenical agreement assigns responsibility to a governing body other than the presbytery for permitting a minister to serve the other church; or
- The consultation of the presbytery with the governing bodies above and below it (G-9.0404b) has resulted in an agreement that another governing body is to be responsible for the type of work.

Presbyteries may assert responsibility for work within their bounds where responsibility is not otherwise assigned.

Rationale

This recommendation comes as the result of a request received by the manager for Polity Guidance and Training. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not initiate business before the assembly. However, pursuant to G-13.0112, the Stated Clerk must submit to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, in turn, must report its findings and any recommendations it has to the General Assembly. The assembly is free to approve, amend, or decline to approve the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s recommendation.

1. Question

Does “properly within the responsibility of another presbytery” mean the same thing as “properly within the jurisdiction of another presbytery” or does responsibility carry over beyond jurisdiction, and if so, how far?

2. Findings:

Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the questions presented:
The general principle stated in G-11.0103 is that the presbytery is responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district. But there are a number of exceptions to the general principle that geography determines responsibility.

Offices of synods and General Assembly entities are physically located within the geographical district of specific presbyteries, but G-11.0410 makes it clear that ministries in service of synods and General Assembly are not within the responsibility of the presbytery where they are located.

The use of non-geographic presbyteries also creates situations in which congregations are within the geographic bounds of two presbyteries, but are only within the responsibility of one of the two.

Military chaplaincies involve a ministry at a national level, sometimes located within the geographic bounds of presbyteries, and sometimes located overseas, outside the bounds of any presbytery. The General Assembly has created the Presbyterian Board of Military Chaplains so that responsibility for military chaplaincy within our church is located in the General Assembly, rather than the geographic presbyteries.

Congregations of other churches are not under the jurisdiction of the presbytery where they are located (Jackson v. Presbytery of Susquehanna Valley, GAPJC 1996, Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 179), but recent ecumenical agreements (such as the Formula of Agreement) have included provisions for the orderly exchange of ministers, which assign responsibility for the minister’s work to the presbytery where the congregation is located.

The broad principles stated above do not address all situations. In areas of work not addressed above, the reserved powers of the presbytery (G-9.0103) give the presbytery the authority either to be expansive in its assumption of responsibility for work within its geographic bounds, or to be restrictive in its acceptance of responsibility for work within its geographic bounds.

When a minister member of one presbytery seeks to have a ministry validated within the geographic bounds of another presbytery, it is essential that the two presbyteries communicate to reach, if possible, a common understanding of where the responsibility for the work lies.

With respect to the question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the question presents a question in which interpretation of G-11.0401a is advisable.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of this advice would interpret G-2.0502 of the proposed Form of Government.

Item 05-24

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-24. See pp. 57, 62.]

The Presbytery of Arkansas overtures the 219th General Assembly (2009) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment of the Book of Order to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-13.0103 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly constitutes the bond of union, community, and mission among all its congregations and governing bodies. It therefore has the responsibility and power...

“r. to provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order which shall be binding on the governing bodies of the church when rendered in accord with G-13.0112 or through a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case, which is approved as an authoritative interpretation by the next plenary session of the General Assembly. The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order approved by a plenary session of the General Assembly shall be binding; ...”

Rationale

Section G-13.0103r states that both the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission (PJC) may provide “authoritative interpretations of the Book of Order,” and that the “most recent interpretation” shall be binding. In light of this provision, some have argued that decisions of the General Assembly may be reviewed and overturned by the PJC in subsequent litigation. On this point the Constitution requires clarification.
It is a basic principle of our polity that “[t]he General Assembly is the highest governing body of this church ...” (G-13.0101). This principle reflects our theological conviction that we are most likely to discern the true movement of the Holy Spirit when we gather in large and inclusive groups (G-1.0400). Constitutional interpretation is rightly administered by this highest governing body.

Although comparison is sometimes made between the Presbyterian form of government and the structure of American civil government, the comparison is not entirely accurate. Within our civil society the judicial branch functions as a co-equal and independent branch alongside the legislative. Under the Presbyterian system of church government, the GAPJC is not a “supreme court,” with powers roughly equal to those of the General Assembly. It is a commission of the General Assembly and is bound by the plenary acts of the body that elected it (G-9.0500).

The GAPJC is responsible for deciding cases that are brought by or against individuals, the PC(USA) or its governing bodies and agencies, and its decisions are final as to the parties. However, the responsibility to decide matters of more general import that function to bind the whole church properly rests with the General Assembly.

The proposed amendment makes clear that constitutional interpretations that the GAPJC may apply to particular parties, in individual cases, do not bind the whole church unless and until they are approved by the General Assembly in its next plenary session. The possibility of approval by the General Assembly, in plenary session, ensures that the benefits of any legal insights developed by the GAPJC are not simply lost. The proposed amendment will eliminate confusion about the role of different groups in our polity and reaffirm our historic conviction that the General Assembly acts as the highest governing body of this church.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-24

Advice on Item 05-24—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-24. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests that the assembly may find it beneficial to review its advice on Item 05-21 as it considers the present overture.

Rationale

Antecedent polities of the current Book of Order did provide for General Assembly review and approval of GA Permanent Judicial Commission decisions, but this requirement was eliminated with the adoption of the current text. The 205th General Assembly (1993) rejected an overture that would have amended the Rules of Discipline to restore the practice. The rationale of the assembly’s response is instructive:

Review of a judicial process by the General Assembly would be a costly, cumbersome, and altogether irresponsible act. In order for the commissioners to General Assembly to be able to engage in a true review of a judicial decision, since the recommendations of the overture do not permit oral arguments, they would have to be given documentation from all of the governing bodies involved that shaped the final decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission. Materials would have to be sent with all other commissioner materials. To do otherwise is to deny to each of the parties involved an honest, thorough review of their cases. (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 316).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the desired aim of the proposed amendment is already achievable through existing constitutional provisions. In those cases where the General Assembly, acting in plenary session, finds that a GAPJC authoritative interpretation based on a decision is in error, it may correct that error simply by adopting its own interpretation of the Constitution under the provisions of G-13.0112.

The rationale accompanying the overture notes that the General Assembly is “the highest governing body of this church” (G-13.0101) and argues that “Constitutional interpretation is rightly administered by this highest governing body” (Item 05-24). The implied assumption is that the GAPJC is a lesser voice in the task of constitutional interpretation. Such a position represents a fundamental shift in our current Constitution. Currently, the Constitution invests both its plenary session and its GAPJC with the right and responsibility authoritatively to interpret the Constitution. In so doing, the Book of Order balances two approaches to constitutional interpretation. The action of the General Assembly to interpret the Constitution in general terms is balanced and tested by the work of the GAPJC to interpret the Constitution as needed to resolve judicial cases. Together, these interpretive paths provide both general and specific foundations for the Constitution. Eliminating either has the effect of weakening the church’s ability to use its Constitution in a living and life-giving manner.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 05-24

Comment on Item 05-24—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concurs with the recommendation and advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to this overture and respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-24.
This overture seeks to require an authoritative interpretation (AI) rendered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) in a case before it to be binding on the church only if it is later approved by the General Assembly (GA).

In making an AI, the General Assembly speaks through either (1) an action at a General Assembly meeting or (2) through a decision of its commission, the GAPJC. In both cases the General Assembly has rendered the AI. To require the GA to approve an AI that it has already given by way of its commission is unnecessary.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 05-25

The Office of the General Assembly, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

[The assembly approved Item 05-25, Recommendation 1. See pp. 57, 59.]

1. Shall D-6.0306, D-8.0302, and D-13.0302 be amended by adding a new section “d.” to read as follows:

   “d. If no challenge is made to a finding of the moderator and clerk that one or more points listed in D-6.0305 (or D-8.0301, or D-13.0106, as applicable) has been answered in the negative, the case shall be dismissed without further action or order of the permanent judicial commission.”

Rationale

In situations where there is no challenge made to the findings of the moderator and clerk, the proposed change makes dismissal automatic without any further action by a permanent judicial commission.”

[The assembly approved Item 05-25, Recommendation 2. See pp. 57, 59.]

2. Shall the first paragraph of D-10.0401 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “No charges shall be filed later than three five years from the time of the commission of the alleged offense, nor later than one year from the date the investigating committee was formed, whichever occurs first, except as noted below.”

Rationale

This will allow more time for the governing body to gain notice that an offense has been committed.

[The assembly approved Item 05-25, Recommendation 3. See pp. 57, 59.]

3. Shall the first paragraph of D-13.0404 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “After the hearing and after deliberation, the permanent judicial commission shall vote separately on each specification of error alleged. The vote shall be on the question, ‘Shall the specification of error be sustained?’ The minutes shall record the numerical vote on each specification of error. If the appeal was initiated by a prosecuting committee appealing a verdict of not guilty and the permanent judicial commission sustains that portion of the appeal, the permanent judicial commission shall remand the case for a new trial.”

Rationale

There is a problem when a prosecuting committee appeals a decision in a disciplinary case. A 2/3 majority vote is required for a judgment of guilt by the trial adjudicatory but a simple majority vote is required to sustain a specification of error on appeal. When an appellate permanent judicial commission reverses the trial court in a case in which the prosecuting committee has appealed a not guilty decision, the appellate permanent judicial commission’s remedies should be limited to remanding the case for a new trial. This would protect the integrity of the original super-majority vote by the trial court. It is the trial court who has the opportunity to hear witnesses and evaluate their credibility.
[In response to Item 05-25, the assembly approved an authoritative interpretation with comment. See pp. 57, 59.]

[Authoritative Interpretation: An offense does not include the act of participating in deliberations and decisions ultimately made by a committee or commission of a governing body or of the governing body.]

[Comment: An offense does not include the mere act of participating in deliberations and decisions ultimately made by a committee or commission of a governing body of the governing body.]

4. Shall D-2.0203b be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“An offense is any act or omission by a member or officer of the church that is contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); however an offense does not include the mere act of participating in deliberations and decisions ultimately made by a committee or commission of a governing body or of the governing body.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral:

The 218th General Assembly (2008) requested that the Office of the General Assembly suggest to the 219th General Assembly (2010) any changes to the PC(USA) Constitution that would limit abuse in disciplinary process created by individuals filing multiple complaints and/or allegations. This suggested change will address the unfortunate circumstance when an individual tries to challenge the decision of a governing body or a governing body committee or commission by giving written allegations of “offense” against each member of the governing body or governing body committee or commission that made the decision based solely upon their participation in the deliberation and decision making of the body. However, any behavior such as lying or physical violence in the context of deliberation or decision making would still be considered an offense that would trigger the appointment of an investigating committee because such an offense is not the “mere act of participating” but happened to be committed in the context of deliberation or decision making.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-25

Advice on Item 05-25—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Recommendation 1 of Item 05-25.

The manager of Judicial Process, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommends that D-6.0306, D-8.0302 and D-13.0301 be amended by adding a new subsection “d.” The Rationale stated “In situations where there is no challenge made to the findings of the moderator and clerk, the proposed change makes dismissal automatic without any further action by a permanent judicial commission.”

2. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Recommendation 2 of Item 05-25.

The manager of Judicial Process, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommends that D-10.0401 be amended by deleting the word “three” and adding the word “five.” The Rationale stated that “This will allow more time for the governing body to gain notice that an offense has been committed.”

3. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Recommendation 3 of Item 05-25.

The manager of Judicial Process, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommends that D-13.0404b be amended to add a new sentence to read as follows: “If the appeal was initiated by a prosecuting committee appealing a verdict of not guilty and the permanent judicial commission sustains that portion of the appeal, the permanent judicial commission shall remand the case for a new trial.”

4. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Recommendation 4 and approve the following authoritative interpretation of D-2.0203b:
An offense does not include the act of participating in deliberations and decisions ultimately made by a committee or commission of a governing body or of the governing body.

Findings

These recommendations come to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution in response to a referral from the 218th General Assembly (2008), Item 04-07 to address three issues in the Rules of Discipline for which remedy was sought: (1) to limit abuse in disciplinary process by the filing of multiple complaints and or accusations; (2) to clarify the process following a finding by the moderator and clerk of a permanent judicial commission that one or more of the questions has been answered in the negative; and (3) to clarify the permanent judicial commission’s action when it has sustained an appeal initiated by a prosecuting committee.

1. With respect to Recommendation 1 of this item, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the language is clear and consistent with the stated intent.

2. With respect to Recommendation 2 of this item, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the referral provides insufficient justification for this change. The more time that elapses after an alleged offense, the less likely that the testimony of witnesses will be accurate and credible.

3. With respect to Recommendation 3 of this item, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that when the amendments allowing the prosecuting committee to appeal a decision of not guilty were proposed in 2004, it was not envisioned that the permanent judicial commission hearing the appeal would overturn a decision of the original court. The intent was stated “Under the current form of the Rules of Discipline there is no recourse at the first level of a disciplinary case for the prosecuting committee if a session or permanent judicial commission commits reversible error in the process leading to finding the accused not guilty” (Minutes, 2004, Part 1, p. 306). Since the original session or permanent judicial commission was the trier of fact, it is appropriate for that body to retry the case when an appeal has been sustained. For this reason, requiring the remand of a case when the appellate permanent judicial commission has sustained a specification of error is advisable.

However, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution also notes that it has recommended approval of Item 05-02 that seeks amendment of D-13.0102 and D-13.0106 deleting the possibility that a prosecuting committee could appeal a decision of not guilty. The approval of the amendments recommended in Item 05-02 would eliminate the need for the amendment of D-13.0404b. If both amendments were to be approved by the presbyteries, this one would have no effect.

4. With respect to Recommendation 4 of this item, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the proposed amendment to the Constitution is unnecessary, and that the intent can be accomplished with an authoritative interpretation.

Item 05-26

[The assembly approved Item 05-26. See pp. 57, 59.]

The Office of the General Assembly, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-6.0103 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“D-6.0103 Stay of Enforcement

The action or decision of a governing body, or of its permanent judicial commission, or of a respondent named in D-6.0202b may be suspended by a stay of enforcement. A stay of enforcement is a written instruction, obtained in the manner described in D-6.0103a, that orders the implementation of a decision or action be delayed until a complaint or appeal is finally determined.

a. A stay may be entered in any of the following manners after the filing of a complaint or notice of appeal, but no later than forty-five days after the decision or action:

“(1) From an action of a governing body, by delivering to the stated clerk of the governing body whose action the complainant seeks to stay, and the stated clerk of the governing body whose permanent judicial commission has jurisdiction, (a) a complaint concerning the irregularity signed by one or more persons or governing bodies having standing to challenge the action taken, and (b) a request for a stay of enforcement signed by at least one third of the members recorded as present when the decision or action was made by the governing body; or
“(2) From a decision of a permanent judicial commission, by a stay of enforcement signed by at least one third of the members of the permanent judicial commission who decided the case, obtained by means of a request directed to the commission through the clerk of the permanent judicial commission or the stated clerk of the permanent judicial commission’s governing body; or

“(3) From an action of a governing body or a decision of a permanent judicial commission, by a stay of enforcement signed by at least three of the members of the permanent judicial commission having jurisdiction to hear the complaint or appeal on the decision or action, submitted to such members of the permanent judicial commission through the stated clerk of the governing body of that permanent judicial commission. The following procedure shall be followed for seeking a stay under this subsection:

“(a) The complainant or appellant shall deliver to the stated clerk either in person or by certified mail directed to the stated clerk’s office address a copy of the complaint or notice of appeal and a request for stay containing a short statement of the basis for challenging the decision or action, a short statement of the harm that will occur if the decision or action is not stayed, and a list of telephone numbers and addresses for the complainant or appellant and the opposing party or governing body;

“(b) The stated clerk shall promptly transmit the request for stay by the most expeditious means available to all members of the permanent judicial commission eligible to participate in consideration of the complaint or appeal;

“(c) Any member who determines that entry of a stay is appropriate shall sign and return to the stated clerk a certification stating that in her or his judgment probable grounds exist for finding the decision or action erroneous and for finding that harm will occur if the decision or action is not stayed;

“(d) Upon receipt of certifications finding a stay is appropriate from three or more members of the permanent judicial commission, the stated clerk shall immediately advise the parties that a stay has been entered.

“b. A copy of the stay of enforcement must also be provided to the permanent judicial commission that will hear the complaint or appeal.

“A stay of enforcement is a written instruction from the permanent judicial commission having jurisdiction that orders the suspension of a decision or an action until a complaint or appeal is finally determined.

“a. No later than thirty (30) days after the alleged irregular action of the governing body or the remedial decision of a permanent judicial commission being appealed, a person having standing to file a complaint or appeal may simultaneously file either a complaint or an appeal, and a request for a stay of enforcement with the stated clerk of the governing body having jurisdiction to hear the case. The request may be made in the following manner:

“(1) A request signed by one third of the members recorded as present when the decision or action was made by the governing body;

“(2) A request signed by one third of the members of the permanent judicial commission that decided the remedial case; or

“(3) A request signed by the complainant or appellant requesting that at least three members of the permanent judicial commission having jurisdiction to hear the complaint or appeal sign the stay of enforcement.

“b. The complaint or appeal shall be promptly transmitted by the most expeditious means available by the stated clerk along with the request for a stay of enforcement to the permanent judicial commission moderator and clerk for their determination as to:

“(1) whether the complaint or appeal meets the preliminary issues in D-6.0305 or D-8.0301, and

“(2) if the request is made under D-6.0103a(1) or D-6.0103a(2), either:

“(a) whether the request made under D-6.0103a(1) is complete and timely, including validation of the signatures and intent of those who signed; or “(b) whether the request made under D-6.0103a(2) is complete and timely.

“c. The moderator and clerk of the permanent judicial commission within seven (7) days after their receipt of the request shall report their findings to the permanent judicial commission and the parties.

“d. The permanent judicial commission may enter a stay of enforcement within ten (10) days of the moderator and clerk’s findings in the following manner:
“(1) By the moderator and the clerk in determining that the request made under D-6.0103a(1) or D-6.0103a(2) is complete and timely and the preliminary issues are met for the complaint or appeal.

“(2) If the request is made under D-6.0103(a)(3), by three members of the permanent judicial commission filing with the stated clerk of the governing body that has jurisdiction to hear the case a statement that in his or her judgment substantial harm will occur if the action or decision is not stayed and that in her or his judgment probable grounds exist for finding the decision or action erroneous. Each permanent judicial commission member must include a summary of the specific governing body action or decision being stayed.

“e. The stated clerk shall send a copy of the stay of enforcement to the parties and to the permanent judicial commission members.

“e.f. The stay of enforcement shall be effective until the time for filing a complaint or notice of appeal shall have expired or, if timely filed, until the decision of the permanent judicial commission having jurisdiction over the case, except as hereafter provided.

“d. g. The respondent may, within forty-five days of the filing of a stay of enforcement, file with the permanent judicial commission having jurisdiction over the case an objection to the stay of enforcement, whereupon no fewer than three members of such permanent judicial commission shall conduct a hearing on all of the issues relating to the stay of enforcement. The parties may be present or represented at such hearing. At such hearing, the stay of enforcement may be modified, terminated, or continued until the decision on the merits of the case by the permanent judicial commission.”

Rationale

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-26

Advice on Item 05-26—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to approve Item 05-26.

Rationale

Upon referral from the 217th General Assembly (2006), the manager of Judicial Process, in consultation with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, recommended amendments to D-6.0103, D-6.0103a, and D-6.0103b clarifying procedures for obtaining a stay of enforcement.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the recommended language is clear and consistent with the stated intent.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-26 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

Item 05-27

[The assembly approved Item 05-27 with amendment. See pp. 57, 61.]

On Adopting a Gracious Dismissal Policy—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco humbly overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to take the following actions:

1. Instruct the Stated Clerk to distribute the Gracious Dismissal policy of the Presbytery of San Francisco as a resource for presbyteries and synods to use in engaging congregations that have voiced questions about departing from the denomination in a peaceful process of discussion and resolution;

2. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to post the Gracious Dismissal policy (Appendix A below) on the Middle Governing Bodies website so that it remains available to the whole church.
3. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to consider this policy as one resource to use in response to recommendation seven in Item 08-06.

[4. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to invite other presbyteries who have established gracious dismissal policies to submit their policy to be posted on the middle governing bodies website along with the San Francisco policy.]

Rationale

The 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) urged “… presbyteries and synods develop and make available to lower governing bodies and local congregations a process that exercises the responsibility and power ‘to divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members’ (Book of Order, G-11.0103i) with consistency, pastoral responsibility, accountability, gracious witness, openness, and transparency” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 284). The assembly continued:

Believing that trying to exercise this responsibility and power through litigation is deadly to the cause of Christ, impacting the local church, other parts of the Body of Christ and ecumenical relationships, and our witness to Christ in the world around us, the General Assembly urges congregations considering leaving the denomination, presbyteries, and synods to implement a process using the following principles:

- Consistency: The local authority delegated to presbyteries is guided and shaped by our shared faith, service, and witness to Jesus Christ.
- Pastoral Responsibility: The requirement in G-11.0103i to consult with the members of a church seeking dismissal highlights the presbytery’s pastoral responsibility, which must not be submerged beneath other responsibilities.
- Accountability: For a governing body, accountability rightly dictates fiduciary and connectional concerns, raising general issues of property (G-8.0000) and specific issues of schism within a congregation (G-8.0600). But, full accountability also requires preeminent concern with “caring for the flock.”
- Gracious Witness: It is our belief that Scripture and the Holy Spirit require a gracious witness from us rather than a harsh legalism.
- Openness and Transparency: Early, open communication and transparency about principles and process of dismissal necessarily serve truth, order, and goodness, and work against seeking civil litigation as a solution.” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 284–285)

Quoted from the Gracious Dismissal Policy of the Presbytery of San Francisco

The Presbytery of San Francisco followed the admonition of the 218th General Assembly (2008) to take this charge and commissioned a task force to study national policies that fairly followed the intent of the overture. The Presbytery of San Francisco, by nearly unanimous vote, adopted the following policy of Gracious Dismissal (see Appendix A), which is clear, balanced, and fair to all parties. It provides a peaceful way of dialogue and dispute resolution regarding issues of property and membership, and is worthy of being held up as a national model for PC(USA) presbyteries to use. (See Appendix A for the policy on following pages.)

In presenting this overture to the General Assembly, the Presbytery of San Francisco hopes to help it and the whole church to converse about ways to demonstrate the principles that were lifted up in the Commissioner’s Resolution adopted in 2008 and enumerated above. The presbytery originally proposed an overture asking the General Assembly to make this policy developed by the presbytery a policy of the whole church, but now share it as an example to the church. We suggest that this overture be referred to the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations as one possible resource to use in response to Item 08-06, Recommendation 7 shown below:

“7. Direct the Office of the General Assembly to develop resources to support presbyteries with congregations and/or ministers engaged in a process of discernment or undergoing the process of dismissal, in light of denominational learnings in the recent past.”

Appendix A

Presbytery of San Francisco
Policy for Dismissing Churches
Adopted September 15, 2009

1. Introduction

The 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (USA) urged that presbyteries and synods develop and make available to lower governing bodies and local congregations a process that exercises the responsibility and power “to divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members” (Book of Order, G-11.0103i) with consistency, pastoral responsibility, accountability, gracious witness, openness, and transparency. Believing that trying to exercise this responsibility and power through litigation is deadly to the cause of Christ, impacting the local church, other parts of the Body of Christ and ecumenical relationships, and our witness to Christ in the world around us, it urges congregations considering leaving the denomination, presbyteries and synods to implement a process using the following principles:
• Consistency: The local authority delegated to presbyteries is guided and shaped by our shared faith, service, and witness to Jesus Christ.

• Pastoral Responsibility: The requirement in G-11.0103i to consult with the members of a church seeking dismissal highlights the presbytery’s pastoral responsibility, which must not be submerged beneath other responsibilities.

• Accountability: For a governing body, accountability rightly dictates fiduciary and connectional concerns, raising general issues of property (G-8.0000) and specific issues of schism within a congregation (G-8.0600). But, full accountability also requires preeminent concern with “caring for the flock.”

• Gracious Witness: Scripture and the Holy Spirit require a gracious witness from us rather than a harsh legalism.

• Openness and Transparency: Early, open communication and transparency about principles and process of dismissal necessarily serve truth, order, and goodness, and work against seeking civil litigation as a solution.

2. Statement of Values the Presbytery of San Francisco

   a. Commitment to the ministry of churches and acknowledging good will of parties in dispute

   The Presbytery of San Francisco seeks to uphold one another, respect each other’s integrity, affirm freedom of conscience, even as we acknowledge significant differences in our views on what the Bible teaches about a number of issues. We desire to encourage peace and unity while minimizing confrontation between and among our congregations and members as we seek together to find and represent the will of Christ. In all that we do, it is our prayer to strive to be a church modeled on the body of Christ, a church made up of many different parts, all of which are necessary for its mission to the world, for its building up, and for its service to God and on our organic spiritual unity found in the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit.

   In order to achieve the goals of servanthood, encouragement and support the Presbytery has historically seen its role as being a resource. The Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), (G-11.0103), challenges the Presbytery to order all resources …for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district. It therefore has the responsibility and power to develop strategy for the mission of the church in its area consistent with (G-3.0000) and to coordinate the work of its member churches, guiding them and mobilizing their strength for the most effective witness to the broader community for which it has responsibility. As a result, the Presbytery has an abiding interest in the location and facilities of the member churches as an expression of the missions of the Presbytery.

   b. Specific exposition of what “Held in trust” means to us

   According to the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

   All property held by or for a particular church, a presbytery, a synod, the General Assembly, or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), whether legal title is lodged in a corporation, a trustee or trustees, or an unincorporated association, and whether the property is used in programs of a particular church or of a more inclusive governing body or retained for the production of income, is held in trust nevertheless for the use and benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). (G-8.0201)

   The Trust Clause is meant to reflect the church’s organic unity as it fulfills “The Great Ends of the Church”, strengthening its ability to guide its member churches into their witness to the broader community. Because the trust clause is meant as a means of witness to our unity in the covenant of common mission, it is incumbent upon the Presbytery to act ministerially rather than adversarially to its member churches in regard to its provisions. It is also the right of a congregation to seek and to request dismissal with its property to another Reformed denomination.

   We affirm these principles that will guide the Presbytery’s use of the Trust Clause:

   • It will not be used to shackle churches to the institution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) if a church genuinely desires to depart.
   • It will not be used as a weapon to threaten civil action against a congregation over issues of conscience. (G-1.0300)
   • It reflects a tangible exhibition of the inter-connected relationship organically existing between the Presbytery and its congregations.

   c. Commitment to avoid litigation

   Scripture calls us to seek in all humility to resolve our disagreements and avoid the harm that is done to the Gospel and Christ’s body when Christians resort to civil litigation rather than love for neighbor. The Trust Clause will not be used by Presbytery to initiate civil litigation preemptively. If a church initiates a civil action, the Presbytery may take legal action to defend its mission strategy for the Presbytery.

   d. Commitment to dialogue and openness without the threat of punishment

   The goal of this presbytery will always be reconciliation and continued engagement in relationship for all congregations within the presbytery without the threat of isolation, estrangement or blame. The presbytery is to be a servant to the churches God has entrusted to us, encouraging and supporting them toward becoming healthy, growing, congregations. This is especially true for those congregations for whom the bonds of unity are stretched and ecclesiastical connections frayed over issues of conscience to the point of considering disaffiliation.

1 John 4:18 states “There is no fear in love. But perfect love drives out fear, because fear has to do with punishment. The one who fears is not made perfect in love.”

The presbytery’s commitment to this passage in how we dialogue with each other means that we are committed to engage either the leaders of the congregation or the congregation as a whole, as circumstances dictate, without threat of punishment. We encourage congregations wrestling with these issues to share their concerns with presbytery leadership and know that the response will not be hostile, but instead one of prayerful dialogue and a commitment to act in love and in the best interest of that congregation.

3. Outline of Process for Engagement with Presbytery

a. Initial Contact and Dialogue

When the leadership of the presbytery becomes aware, either through formal session action or discussion, or through informal contacts with church leaders or members, that a congregation is in serious disagreement with the denomination to the extent of considering leaving the PC(USA), a Presbytery Engagement Team (PET), formed for such a purpose, will offer to meet with the session and jointly, or subsequently, with the congregation as the church tries to discern God’s will for denominational affiliation. This process is meant to insure that the congregation is fully informed on the issues at hand, equipped with knowledge of this presbytery’s process, as well as the processes and values that have guided other churches and presbyteries in their decision making. In doing so, the presbytery hopes to creatively engage the concerns of the congregation, and enable them to make decisions based on facts and not assumptions, which could cause suboptimal decisions to be made.

b. Prayerful discussion of differences and determination of possibility of reconciliation

The PET will attempt to “bridge the gap” with the congregation through discussion of possibilities for reconciliation and likely impacts in the case where dismissal is the course decided upon. The PET will outline the process and likely consequences of the congregation requesting dismissal from the presbytery, and will use the following principles to guide the PET’s dialogue with the church:

• To engage either the leaders of the congregation or the congregation as a whole, as circumstances dictate, in a time of prayer and conversation aimed at understanding the issues of the session/congregation that desire that their congregation be dismissed, and also to hear from those congregation members who wish to remain within the PC(USA).

• If the team determines that progress can be made toward reconciliation through continued and constructive dialogue, the session and the team will establish a mutually agreeable timeline of talks to be held and proceed to engage in such dialogue.

• In its dialogue with the church session and/or congregation, the team will share implications for a church considering leaving the PC(USA). The PET will discuss with all minister members the likely impacts on their benefits and ordination status of the various options available to them, so that they fully understand the implications of their transfer to another Reformed body, or staying as a member of presbytery.

• The best goal of presbytery team conversations with congregations when there is a group that desires to remain within the PC(USA) and a group that desires to be dismissed to another Reformed body, is to discuss financial, property and other issues that will enable both members of congregations (groups) to be as healthy as possible in the aftermath of separation.

If after a period of dialogue, the PET and the leadership of the congregation are not able to establish a process for reconciliation, the PET and the leaders of the congregation will begin the process of negotiation of the terms of dismissal, and the validation of the true desire of the members of the congregation with regards to denominational affiliation.

4. Process for a congregation to request dismissal

a. Negotiation of terms of dismissal

The dismissal of a church from the presbytery will be a traumatic event in the life of the congregation and the presbytery. The actions of the presbytery are truly focused on the preservation and even the advancement of ministry through the process of negotiation and after the congregation is dismissed.

The PET will engage with a special committee of the congregation (SCC) to negotiate the terms of dismissal. The presbytery strongly recommends that the congregation’s committee be comprised of a mixture of pastoral leadership and elders, with representatives from the congregation’s finance, property, and personnel committees, and should be selected with a goal of being representative of the congregation. Every effort should be made to represent those desiring to remain with the PC(USA). This will better prepare the leadership of the church to converse with the PET and also avoid being disconnected with the broader congregation, so that any vote to request dismissal would not be divisive and lead to long term harm to the community of believers.

It is expected that once the process has reached this stage, the negotiations should be able to progress relatively quickly and be able to be completed within 60 days.

(1) Terms for release to another body

Consistent with PC(USA) polity and General Assembly actions taken in Anderson v. Synod of Florida, and Strong vs. Bagby, congregations seeking dismissal from the presbytery may only be dismissed with their property to another reformed body.
If a church seeking dismissal has outstanding loans to the Synod or other PC(USA) body, before the actual transfer of title occurs, the loans must be paid back or transferred to another creditor as part of the loan being repaid. Since the church being dismissed will no longer be under the authority of PC(USA), the denomination body that holds the loan should not be placed in the position of being exposed to loss without having a position of oversight of the church, or having the presbytery being able to act as a guarantor of the loan. This repayment does not have to be made before the presbytery acts on the request to dismiss, but must be made within 90 days of the presbytery vote to dismiss. If the PET does not believe a viable plan for repayment exists, the PET shall recommend to the SCC that the process be put on hold before the congregational vote until a viable plan to repay the loan is established.

Prior to the presbytery voting on the dismissal, the SCC shall provide the PET details regarding to whom the church property shall be transferred, such that the appropriate legal documentation can be prepared. Such transfer should occur no later than 90 days of the vote taken by presbytery to dismiss.

(3) Status of minister members of presbytery

If a church is dismissed by presbytery, one of the paramount concerns of this process is to assure that the rights and status of minister members are considered and properly handled.

Ministers may choose to remain as members of presbytery and not transfer to the other reformed body that the church is being dismissed to, or to request transfer along with the congregation. Such transfers may be requested concurrent with the church requesting dismissal, or may occur separately. If the transfer is not requested concurrently, the minister(s) shall be placed on inactive status. This allows them to continue to seek calls within the PC(USA) during the period of inactive status, or request to become members at large if their call at the church ends. At the end of 3 years of inactive status, the COM will normally remove the member from the roles of the presbytery.

Transfers to another reformed body shall normally be approved, unless the minister member is the subject of a pending judicial or investigatory action. Members under discipline of the presbytery may not be transferred until the administrative process is complete and any required remedial actions completed. At that point the transfer may be completed, but a record of IC or PJC must be transmitted to the other body prior to the transfer being requested so proper disclosure of any issues can occur.

(4) Status of members of the congregation being dismissed

Members of the church being dismissed shall be notified by mail after the vote by presbytery to dismiss of the action being taken, and the church shall inform them of the process available to them to have their membership transferred to another PC(USA) church. The church being dismissed must provide a list of members whose membership is not being transferred to the new body to the PET, so as to make sure they are invited to join another PC(USA) congregation. This list should be provided within 30 days of the vote by presbytery to dismiss the congregation. It is important that throughout the process that both the PET and SCC communicate well so that both the members who transfer out of PC(USA) and the members who remain are properly ministered to so that the level of divisiveness and conflict can be minimized, and that the ministry of both groups may continue.

Members of the church being dismissed who are on presbytery committees shall have their terms of service end on the day the presbytery votes to dismiss the congregation. The presbytery welcomes former elder commissioners’ participation at presbytery meetings as a way of continuing shared ministries and mission in the Presbytery of San Francisco, but such participation will be limited as visitors without standing or voice.

(5) Mitigation of financial impact on mission and ministry of the Presbytery

Just as this process is designed to aid in presbytery’s ability to respectfully deal with the congregation’s desire to be dismissed, and to have that happen in a way that minimizes the impact on that congregation’s ministry, it is also important for the congregation to act in a way as to minimize the impact on the mission and ministry of the presbytery.

Recognizing that the presbytery’s ability to sustain ministry is related to its financial health, it is assumed that the congregation that is being dismissed would want to minimize the financial impact of its departure on presbytery. This comes in two forms: per capita giving and mission giving. The dismissal of the church shall not be conditioned on these payments being made, as they are intended to be voluntary contributions driven by this reciprocal concern for ministry.

It is encouraged that the congregation agree to a declining per capita contribution over the span of 5 years so that the presbytery can adequately adjust to a smaller base of per capita contributions. The first year after the dismissal is granted, the contribution should be 80 percent of the last per capita payment the church made before its dismissal, followed by 60 percent the following year, followed by 40 percent the following year, followed by 20 percent the following year, and nothing in year 5.

A similar sort of declining contribution to the mission budget of the presbytery is likewise encouraged. The first year after the dismissal is granted, the contribution should be 80 percent of the last mission payment the church made before its dismissal, followed by 60 percent the following year, followed by 40 percent the following year, followed by 20 percent the following year, and nothing in year 5. The congregation may want this contribution targeted at ministries that the congregation has previously supported. It may even be the case that the ministry integration is such that declining contributions would not be necessary and that the congregation may want to continue to support these ministries at the 100 percent level or more over a long period of time. This is completely consistent with the goal of remaining in fellowship and continuing to serve together even after the dismissal is complete, just as many PC(USA) churches work closely with non-PC(USA) churches on mission today.
b. Validation of Congregation’s desire and discernment to request dismissal

After the PET and the congregation’s SCC have met and negotiated the terms of dismissal, the next step in the process is to validate the congregation’s desire for dismissal, and to ascertain the congregation’s unity in that decision. That validation must be performed through a congregational vote.

While the quorum for congregational meetings is set by the Book of Order and by the bylaws of particular congregations, the PET should expect at least 50 percent of the active members of the congregation be in attendance for a congregational meeting where the vote to accept the terms of the dismissal agreement are voted on and thereby voting to leave the PC(USA). This should be relatively easy for a smaller congregation, but impractical for a larger one, and the PET can negotiate a more practical number if 50 percent is deemed unreasonable.

Such a called meeting of the congregation must be noticed at least 30 days in advance, and every action should be taken to maximize the participation of the congregation in this meeting. It is also expected that representatives of the PET would have an opportunity to address the congregation and be able to discuss specific issues that would enable the congregation to make an informed decision based on the facts of the situation and prayerful discernment.

If the results of the vote to request dismissal and to accept the terms of the negotiated agreement is 75 percent or greater, the dismissal request is considered validated and, and then will be scheduled for a vote at an upcoming presbytery meeting.

5. Process for the presbytery to vote to dismiss a congregation

Once the congregation has voted to request dismissal from presbytery and accepted an agreement on terms of dismissal, the presbytery will vote on accepting the terms of the negotiated agreement and the dismissal of the congregation to another reformed body.

To do this and maintain the trust and integrity of the process, it’s essential that the motion be a “thumbs up or thumbs down” vote. Re-negotiation of the terms of dismissal through the use of amendments on the floor would essentially invalidate months of work between the PET and the congregation, and destroy any trust built between the presbytery and the congregation. Therefore, the following steps shall be taken by the presbytery to avoid this outcome:

- The vote shall be scheduled at a regular meeting of presbytery.
- The proposal will be presented as a whole, with the understanding that the agreement was arrived by good faith negotiations between both the PET and the congregation
- The proposal will be preceded by a 2/3rds vote required to limit debate and amendments or tabling

It should be assumed that after following through the steps of this process that if the presbytery votes down the proposal, that the outcome would be the initiation of civil litigation to force a separation, with all that entails, as well as a deep sense of betrayal by the presbytery. Our prayer above all, through the above process is to ultimately avoid litigation and in good faith attempt to resolve differences reasonably and civilly.

On Amending G-13.0103r Regarding Authoritative Interpretations—From the Presbytery of the Mid-South.

The Presbytery of the Mid-South overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-13.0103r be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

```
“r. to provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order which shall be binding on the governing bodies of the church when rendered in accord with G-13.0112 or through a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case. The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding. No authoritative interpretation shall be issued by a General Assembly which amends or alters a clear mandate contained in any provision of the Book of Order.”
```

Rationale

The Presbytery of the Mid-South desires to overture the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding the proper limits to the use of authoritative interpretations.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-28

Advice on Item 03-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to answer 05-28 with this assembly’s action on Item 05-21, on the responsibility of general assembly to provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order (G-13.0103r) from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.
Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the overture does not specify the location of the sentence to be added. It presumes, however, that the intent of the overture is to add the sentence as a new final sentence to paragraph G-13-0103r.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 05-28 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have for the current Form of Government.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 05-28

Comment on Item 05-28—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concurs with the recommendation and advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) to this overture and respectfully advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 05-28.

Rationale

This overture seeks to restrict the General Assembly (GA) from issuing an authoritative interpretation (AI) which amends or alters a “clear mandate” in the Book of Order.

An Authoritative Interpretation (AI) rendered by the General Assembly under G-13.0112 or by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in its decision in a case before it, clarifies the meaning and intent of a provision of the Book of Order. By definition, an AI cannot amend the provision or alter its wording. Therefore, presumably if a Book of Order provision is “clear,” there would be no need for an AI to clarify it. The COGA believes the proposed amendment is unnecessary.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

      NOTE: The 2004 General Assembly approved class reassignments; therefore, the GAPJC did not have any outgoing members in 2005.

2. Final Decisions of the Permanent Judicial Commission

The Permanent Judicial Commission met in Louisville, Kentucky, on July 24–28, 2009; in Baltimore, Maryland, on October 23–27, 2008; in San Diego, California, on February 26–March 2, 2009; in Louisville, Kentucky, on August 6–10, 2009; in Indianapolis, Indiana, on October 29–November 2, 2009; and in Louisville, Kentucky, on February 24–28, 2010. Having received the final decisions from the commission from its clerk, Gregory Goodwiller, the Stated Clerk now reports to the 219th General Assembly (2010) the final decisions received in the following cases and advises the General Assembly that they will be included in the Minutes:

a. Remedial Case 217-21

Robert E. Leech, as President and CEO of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, Complainants,

v.
The Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Respondent.

This remedial case came before this Commission as a matter of original jurisdiction by a Complaint filed by Robert E. Leech, as President and CEO of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on May 21, 2008. The Respondent appeared by a Limited Appearance and Objection to the Issuance of a Stay of Enforcement received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly on May 23, 2008.

The Executive Committee of this Commission finds that the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly is the appropriate body before which a complaint would be heard against the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as an entity of the General Assembly, and that this Commission has jurisdiction to determine the Complaint.

The Executive Committee of this Commission finds that while Complainant Robert E. Leech is an employee of an entity of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), he does not have standing to file a complaint under D-6.0202b.(3) in this matter because he has not “sustained injury or damage to person or property.” The Executive Committee further finds that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, as an entity of the General Assembly, does not have standing to file a complaint under D-6.0202. According to that provision, the Commission’s power to consider remedial cases is limited to complaints which are submitted by “those eligible to file such … complaint(s).” There is no constitutional provision which grants eligibility to one General Assembly entity to file a complaint against another General Assembly entity. Therefore, the Foundation, as an entity of the General Assembly, is not eligible to file a complaint against the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), which is also a General Assembly entity (D-6.0305b).

The Executive Committee of this Commission also finds that the Complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Advice and/or recommendations do not constitute “actions” and therefore cannot be addressed by remedial complaints (see Presbytery of National Capital v. Office of the General Assembly, Remedial Case 210-5, 1998, p. 136, and The Session of the Concord Liberty Presbyterian Church v. Office of the General Assembly, et al., 2006, p. 501).

With respect to Complainants’ Request for a Stay of Enforcement, the Executive Committee of this Commission finds that since the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution do not constitute “actions” that can be addressed by remedial complaints, a stay of enforcement cannot prevent the General Assembly’s consideration of the matter.

Since one or more of the questions in D-6.0305 has been answered in the negative, the case is hereby dismissed in accordance with D-6.0306c. The findings herein may be challenged, either by a party or by a member of this Commission, by filing a written notice with the Commission within thirty (30) days after receipt of this Preliminary Order.

In view of this decision, the parties are strongly encouraged to heed the biblical obligation to meet together to “conciliate, mediate and adjust differences without strife” (D-1.0103) and to do so prior to the meeting of the General Assembly.

Dated the 26th day of May, 2008.
b. Remedial Case 219-01 (Formerly 218-16)

ORDER FOR DISMISSAL

Remedial Case 219-01
(formerly 218-16)

Sharon Moody, Sandra Hillquist, Tracey Carper, and Mary Williams Complainants

v.

Synod of the Mid-Atlantic
Respondent

This remedial case came before this Commission on a Complaint in original jurisdiction filed by Complainants against Respondent, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, dated October 3, 2007. The Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly in its Order and Decision dated April 28, 2008, determined that this Commission has jurisdiction in this matter.

By letter dated January 9, 2009 from Complainants’ counsel, this Commission has been advised that the matter has been settled.

Therefore, at the request of Complainants, the case is hereby dismissed with prejudice.

Dated the 2nd day of March, 2009.

c. Disciplinary Case 219-02 (Formerly 218-17)

DECISION AND ORDER

Disciplinary Case 219-02
(formerly 218-17)

Headnote

Rationale for Decisions not Required but Recommended: While the Constitution does not require that a permanent judicial commission provide a rationale for every specification of error assigned in the Notice of Appeal when rendering a decision (D-13.0404), this Commission recommends that permanent judicial commissions provide enough explanation so that decisions can be understood.

Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellant Veronica L. Ransom (Ransom) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of South Atlantic (SPJC) dated March 14, 2008. A hearing on Ransom’s challenge to the GAPJC’s Executive Committee dismissal of this matter on a preliminary question was held on July 25, 2008. The Executive Committee’s decision was overturned by this Commission and all preliminary questions were answered in the affirmative on July 27, 2008 (see 219-02: Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta Decision and Order on Challenge to Preliminary Questions v. Veronica Ransom and 219-02: Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta Decision and Order v. Veronica Ransom (formerly 218-17).

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Ransom has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-13.0106.

Appearances

Veronica L. Ransom, Respondent/Appellant, was present and represented by Robert B. Eyre. The Presbytery of Greater Atlanta (Presbytery), Complainant/Appellee, did not appear at the hearing, but relied on its brief.

History

Persistent conflict between Ransom and the pastor of Radcliffe Presbyterian Church (RPC) twice led to attempts to utilize the denomination’s judicial system for resolution. Following receipt of a complaint against the pastor on September 14, 2004, the Presbytery formed an Investigating Committee (IC), which, on January 12, 2005, reported that no charges would be filed.

On February 10, 2005, the Presbytery Stated Clerk received a request by Ransom for a Petition to Review the findings of the IC. On May 25, 2005, it was determined that the Petition to Review would not be sustained, and the matter was closed.

On May 8, 2005, Ransom received an unsigned letter by a group called “Pastor Support Committee” (Committee), informing her that it had been established by the Session of RPC to deal with conflict between Ransom and the pastor. The Committee requested a meeting with Ransom. On May 24, 2005, Ransom replied to the Committee asking a series of questions and indicating a possible willingness to meet with them pending her receipt of the Committee’s answers. The Committee sent another letter on October 11, 2005—this one by certified mail to Ransom—requesting a meeting. Ransom refused to pick up the certified letter at the post office.

On November 14, 2005, the Pastoral Support Committee requested that official charges be brought against Ransom by the Session of RPC alleging “failure to be governed by the oath of elder,” and offering in support, information about Ransom’s “failure to accept the findings of the IC and the findings following a Petition to Review.” The Session, in turn, filed a Request for Reference with the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery, on December 2, 2005, on behalf of the Pastoral Support Committee of the RPC, which Reference was accepted on February 22, 2006.

After receiving the report from its IC, the Presbytery filed twelve charges against Ransom. A trial was held by the Presbytery Permanent Judicial Commission (PPJC) on April 21, 2007, resulting in a finding of “guilty” against Ransom on three charges of “Failure to be governed by the oath of Elder in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” and one charge of “Disrupting the peace and unity of the Church.” The Presbytery cited specific behaviors which Ransom demonstrated to support each of the four “guilty” verdicts.

A censure was read into the record of the Presbytery on May 8, 2007, and an order for supervised rehabilitation was entered on behalf of their Committee on Ministry. Ransom has participated in the supervised rehabilitation.

Ransom filed a Notice of Appeal with the Stated Clerk of the Synod of South Atlantic (Synod) which was received on June 12, 2007. This was followed by a Hearing on Appeal on January 10, 2008, before the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission (SPJC), based on thirteen specifications of error. On January 10, 2008, the SPJC voted not to sustain any of the specifications of error.

On March 4, 2008, Ransom filed a Notice of Appeal with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly based on two specifications of error. Ransom presented oral argument at a hearing conducted by this Commission on October 24, 2008. The Presbytery submitted its brief in lieu of an appearance.

Specifications of Error

The Specifications of Error argued in Appellant’s brief to the GAPJC do not correspond with the Specifications of Error in her Notice of Appeal. This Commission is only required to address those errors set forth in the Notice of Appeal (Congregation for Reconciliation v. Presbytery of Miami, Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 580), and thus, this Decision is based upon determination of those errors. The Appellant’s Notice of Appeal differs significantly from her brief to this Commission. The GAPJC has exercised its discretion to address all those Specifications of Error identified as issues in the Notice of Appeal, Appellant’s brief and in oral argument of this Appeal.

Below are the Specifications of Error in the Notice of Appeal:

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC committed injustice in the process by:

(a) recording a “not sustained” vote for each and every specification of PPJC error without either explanation or basis for the decision; and

(b) convening absent any racial ethnic member.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

(a) D-13.0404 establishes the process by which an appellate body renders its decision. Requirements include a vote on each Specification of Error and the recording of that vote. The Constitution does not require that a permanent judicial commission provide a rationale for every specification of error assigned in the Notice of Appeal when rendering a decision. It should be noted, however, that in the remedial case of Buescher v. Presbytery of Olympia, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 317, this Commission recommended that permanent judicial commissions provide enough explanation so that decisions can be understood. It would be helpful to follow this recommendation in future disciplinary cases.

(b) This Specification of Error was withdrawn by Ransom at oral argument.
Specification of Error No. 2. The degree of censure was unduly severe.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

The basis for the degree of censure is formed from the body of facts developed at trial. Factual determinations made by the trier of fact have a presumption of correctness and are not to be disturbed on appeal unless “plainly or palpably wrong, without supporting evidence, or manifestly unjust” (Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, PCUS Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45; Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church v. National Capital Presbytery, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 493; Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Wyoming v. Gordon R.J. King, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 311). The censure imposed was not unreasonable.

Following is a discussion of Specifications of Error identified in Appellant’s brief which have been reworded and regrouped under appropriate D-13.0106 grounds for appeal in a disciplinary case:

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred and committed injustice in the process when it did not hold that:

(a) The Pastoral Support Committee’s action in intervening in the disciplinary allegation brought by Ransom against her pastor violated the provisions of D-3.0102; and

(b) The Investigating Committee unduly broadened the investigation of Ransom and inappropriately deprived her of both notice of the breadth of the investigation and the nature of the accusation.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

(a) The formation of the Committee was not a judicial action and did not prejudice Ransom’s petition to review the dismissal of the last accusation against RPC’s pastor. This Commission finds no reason to disturb that factual determination.

(b) The nature of an allegation presumes that the whole story may not yet be known. In fulfilling its responsibility to substantiate the allegation or dismiss it, the IC must make a thorough inquiry into the facts and circumstances of the alleged offense (D-10.0202c). It is not unusual that details, including newly discovered elements of the whole story, expand the breadth of an original allegation as they are gathered. Nothing in the Constitution precludes an IC from filing more than one charge from a single, core allegation, as was done in this case.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred in not holding that the PPJC should have dismissed all of the charges against the accused on the grounds that:

(a) The acts charged were separately not significant enough to rise to the level of chargeable offenses under D-2.0203b; and

(b) There are no identifiable offenses within the Constitution or Scripture for “failing to be governed by the Oath of Elder,” or “disrupting the peace and unity of the church.”

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

(a) Appeals in disciplinary cases exist to review proceedings of lower governing bodies (D-13.0100) and not to retry issues of fact (King, p. 311). The determinations of fact are made by the trier of fact, not the appellate body. Whether the charges were or were not of facts significant enough to rise to the level of chargeable offenses under the Constitution or Scripture was a determination appropriately made by the PPJC, the trier of fact, whose presumptions of correctness are not to be disturbed on appeal unless they are “plainly wrong, without supporting evidence or manifestly unjust” (King, p. 311). Nothing either in the record or presented at oral argument warrants such a finding.

(b) Rather than contain a criminal code, where conduct specifically proscribed may be prosecuted, the Constitution is infused with principles and standards to which ordained officers voluntarily submit. G-6.0106b states that “those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. …” This standard is also affirmed in the answers to the ordination questions at W-4.4003 with which all officers agree to comply. Additional guidance can be found in “Standards of Ethical Conduct for Ordained Officers in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” which the 210th General Assembly (1998) recommended to presbyteries as a model for their study, approval, and inclusion of their manuals of operation (Minutes, 1998, Part I, p. 67). Further, ICs are charged with determining “whether there are probable grounds or cause to believe that an offense was committed by the accused” (D-10.0202f).

The church is called to remember that church discipline is not punishment; rather, it is the “church’s exercise of authority given by Christ, both in the direction of guidance, control, and nurture of its members and in the direction of constructive criticism of offenders” (D-1.0101). All judicial process through which church discipline is implemented must be within the context of pastoral care and oversight (D-2.0100).
Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred in not finding that there was a failure of the prosecution to meet the burden of “proof beyond a reasonable doubt.”

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

This Specification of Error was not included in the Notice of Appeal, appropriately briefed, nor argued on appeal. It is, therefore, deemed to be withdrawn.

Decision

None of the Specifications of Error is sustained; therefore, the Decision of the SPJC is affirmed.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the South Atlantic is hereby affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the South Atlantic report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-participants

William Scheu was recused and did not participate in this case. A. Bates Butler III was not present and took no part in this case.

d. Remedial Case 219-03 (Formerly 218-18)

Headnotes

1. Delegation to and Exercise of Power by an Administrative Commission. The functions of an administrative commission are limited by the appointing body and may include any function that the appointing body wishes to delegate (with few exceptions). Powers delegated to administrative commissions must be specifically described (G-9.0502). When an administrative commission reaches a decision on a matter referred to it, the commission’s decision becomes the action of the appointing body. A governing body may amend or rescind an action or decision of an administrative commission in the same manner that it may change its own decisions and actions.

2. Congregational Consultations for the Purpose of Seeking Dismissal. Withdrawal from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is not a matter that can be considered absent the participation of the presbytery. G-7.0302 and G-7.0304 limit the business of congregational meetings and do not include seeking dismissal from the PC(USA). The presbytery is required to afford all persons affected by a dismissal notice an opportunity to be heard on the subject (G-9.0503b(2)). Consultations between a congregation and a presbytery about dismissal are for the benefit of facilitating reconciliation and informing the presbytery as it considers a request for dismissal, but are not meetings at which any business of the congregation may be conducted.

3. Covenantal Relationship between Churches and Presbyteries. In consulting with members of local churches about dismissal, the presbytery’s witness, concern, and responsibility are not solely to one congregation, but to each congregation in light of the whole. The congregation’s responsibility must be seen in light of its call to fulfill its responsibilities as the local unit of mission for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the Glory of God (G-4.0104). Unity in Christ and the relational nature of our polity are fundamental to Presbyterianism and to a gracious witness to Scripture and the Holy Spirit.
4. Limitations on Conscience. Appointment of an administrative commission to deal with churches, sessions and pastors contemplating leaving the PC(USA) does not improperly bind the conscience of church officers or pastors. Belief and behavior are distinguishable. Free expression of conscience is limited for officers and pastors under G-6.0108b. Calling congregational meetings, moving churches to seek dismissal from the denomination or obstructing constitutional governance of the church are actions, not expressions of free conscience.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellants Robert Sundquist, Mark Hawke, Elise Hawke, Charles Lupton and Di Lupton, from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America (SPJC) dated January 25, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellants have standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

The Appellants, Robert Sundquist, Mark Hawke, Elise Hawke, Charles Lupton and Di Lupton (Sundquist, et al.) were represented by Robert Howard. The Appellant Heartland Presbytery (Presbytery), was represented by Stephen Taber, Chad Herring and Landon Whitsitt.

History

The parties agreed that the facts of this case are not in dispute. Accordingly, this statement of the case history and relevant facts is adopted from the parties’ statements.

At the May 3, 2007, meeting of the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry (COM), the Executive Presbyter reported concerns about actions of Kirk Johnston, the Pastor, and the Session of First Presbyterian Church, Paola, Kansas, including concerns about their apparent efforts to diminish or sever the congregation’s connection with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In response to those concerns, the COM appointed an Administrative Review Committee (ARC) to explore the current state of the relationship and to work pastorally to strengthen the relationship among First Paola, its Pastor and Session, the Presbytery, and the PC(USA).

In May, 2007, the ARC attempted to meet with the Pastor and Session of the Paola Church, but did not hold the meeting when it became aware that the Session had already called a congregational meeting to take place on June 24, 2007, for the purpose of voting to request dismissal with property from the PC(USA) to the Evangelical Presbyterian Church.

On May 21, 2007, the Executive Presbyter was notified by Laurie Johnston, Pastor of Hillsdale Presbyterian Church, that the Hillsdale Session would be voting on May 31, 2007, to recommend that the congregation seek dismissal from the PC(USA). The Session of Hillsdale subsequently called a congregational meeting on June 10, 2007, to vote to seek dismissal from the PC(USA) with property to the Evangelical Presbyterian Church.

On June 7, 2007, the COM adopted a resolution that the Presbytery form an Administrative Commission (AC) to address the situations at the Paola and Hillsdale churches. The COM Resolution was published to ministers and commissioners of the Presbytery and slated for action at the Presbytery’s stated meeting on June 16, 2007.

At the June 16, 2007, stated meeting of the Presbytery, after the COM motion was offered, a substitute motion was proposed that made substantial changes to the COM motion. Both motions were debated extensively and perfected. The main motion (the COM Resolution) was passed by a vote of 91 to 39, and provided in relevant part as follows:

1. The purpose of the Commission shall be to act on behalf of the presbytery on all matters regarding ministers, congregations, and members of congregations who are considering withdrawal from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A).

2. [Naming members of the Commission]

3. The Presbytery by this action shall delegate to the Commission the following powers, to take effect when it should become evident to the commission that minister(s) or congregation member(s) are moving toward expressing a desire for separation, and that reconciliation is not likely:

   a. Access to all church records, including but not limited to: membership rolls, minutes of Session and all boards and committees, financial records, membership directories, newsletters, and materials distributed for congregational information.
b. Authority to call a congregational meeting (G-7.0303.a.(2)) and to obtain current and accurate membership lists from the church for this purpose.

c. Authority to engage appropriate legal counsel.

d. Authority to take all necessary steps to discern the “true church” (G-8.0601), that is, those wishing to remain loyal to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

e. In the event that a Session calls a congregational meeting for the purpose of considering actions leading to separation from the PCUSA, the Commission shall have authority to dissolve the Session and assume the full powers and jurisdiction of the Session. In the event that this has occurred prior to this action of presbytery, the power shall be effective immediately. With the full authority of the Session, the Commission shall be empowered to:

i. Provide for worship and for the continuing pastoral care of all members of the congregation, in the manner of Christ.

ii. Receive and act on request from members to be transferred or deleted from the rolls.

iii. Determine and negotiate appropriate distribution of all property and assets of the congregation, with any final resolution to be recommended to the Presbytery Council for approval.

f. Authority to dissolve the pastoral relationship upon evidence that the pastor has advocated separation from the denomination or upon renunciation of jurisdiction, fully observing the due process requirements of the Constitution, G-9.0505b.(2).

g. Authority, in consultation with the Committee on Ministry, to transfer the minister to an established judicatory of another Reformed denomination with which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is in correspondence.

h. Authority to declare a minister to have renounced jurisdiction in accordance with G-11.0416 upon evidence that they have obtained membership of any character in another denomination.

4. The current list of churches for which the Administrative Commission has authority is:

First, Paola, Kansas
Hillsdale, Kansas

5. Other congregations may be added to this list by vote of the Committee on Ministry or the Presbytery Council, or such subcommittees as they may designate, according to procedures established by those bodies.

On June 24, 2007, the Paola congregation voted on the question: Shall the First United Presbyterian Church of Paola, Kansas request dismissal with property from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to the Evangelical Presbyterian Church. The vote was 200 in favor and 81 against dismissal.

On June 24, 2007, the Hillsdale congregation voted by ballot with two options: to “Keep the Hillsdale Presbyterian Church in the PC(USA) denomination” or “dismiss with property the Hillsdale Presbyterian Church to the New Wineskins Presbytery of the Evangelical Presbyterian Church (EPC) denomination” (emphasis in original). The vote was 77 in favor of requesting dismissal and 5 against.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in Constitutional interpretation by failing to sustain Specification of Error “a” in the Complaint, which specified:

The Presbytery erred by empowering an Administrative Commission to assume original jurisdiction of the session of one or more particular churches within its bounds without having complied fully with the requirements of G-11.0103s, viz, an affirmative determination that a session cannot exercise its authority and a prior thorough investigation and a prior and full opportunity for the subject session to be heard.

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed in Part I below.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in Constitutional interpretation by failing to sustain Specification of Error “b” in the Complaint, which specified:

The Presbytery erred by empowering an Administrative Commission to dissolve a pastoral relationship prior to discharging its affirmative duty to make findings to establish that the church’s mission under the Word imperatively demands the dissolution (G-11.0103o).
This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed in Part I below.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred in Constitutional interpretation by failing to sustain Specification of Error “c” in the Complaint, which specified:

The Presbytery erred by delegating to its Committee on Ministry and its Council the authority to sub-delegate to any subcommittee its powers to “divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members” (G-11.0103a) and “to dissolve [the pastoral relationship] ... when it finds that the church’s mission under the Word imperatively demands it” (G-11.0103e).

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed in Part IV below.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred in Constitutional interpretation in its rationale for sustaining Specification of Error “e” resulting in injustice in the process or decision by failing to grant adequate relief to Appellants, which specified:

The Presbytery erred by empowering the Administrative Commission to assume the full powers and jurisdiction of the Session when “a Session calls a congregational meeting for the purpose of considering actions leading to separation from the PCUSA,” effectively preventing a Session from exercising its right, implicit in G-15.0203b, to call for a congregational meeting to consider requesting dismissal from the PC(USA) to another reformed denomination in correspondence with the PC(USA).

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed in Part II below.

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred in Constitutional interpretation by failing to sustain Specification of Error “f” in the Complaint, which specified:

The Presbytery erred by making powers of the Administrative Commission effective “when it should become evident to the Commission that minister(s) or congregation member(s) are moving toward expressing a desire for separation and that reconciliation is not likely” [emphasis omitted], violating the requirement of G-1.0307 that “no Church governing body ought to pretend to make laws to bind the conscience in virtue of their own authority."

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed in Part III below.

I. Specifications of Error Nos. 1 and 2

Delegation to and Exercise of Power by an Administrative Commission

Role and Responsibility of Administrative Commissions. Administrative commissions have an important role in Presbyterian polity and governance. Presbyteries need to rely on administrative commissions to act in a variety of situations. G-9.0502 provides:

A commission is empowered to consider and conclude matters referred to it by a governing body. The appointing body shall state specifically the scope and power given to a commission. A commission shall keep a full record of its proceedings, which shall be submitted to its governing body to be incorporated in its minutes and to be regarded as the actions of the governing body itself.

The functions of an administrative commission are limited by the appointing body, and may include any function that the appointing body wishes to delegate (with few exceptions expressly provided for in the Book of Order). Ordinarily these functions may include: ordaining ministers of the Word and Sacrament, organizing churches, merging churches, receiving candidates under the care of presbytery, making pastoral inquiry in certain situations where judicial proceedings have terminated as the result of death or renunciation of jurisdiction by a person accused of sexual abuse (G-9.0503). Commissions appointed as judicial commissions have other functions, and commissions may be assigned other duties as committees (G-9.0503b and c).

Among the appropriate and ordinary functions for an administrative commission are the following: to visit particular churches, governing bodies, or other organizations of the church reported to be affected with disorder, and to inquire into and settle the difficulties therein, except that no commission shall have the power to dissolve a pastoral relationship unless such power has been specifically delegated to it by the appointing body (G-9.0503a(4)). See also Session of Second Presbyterian Church of Tulsa v. Eastern Oklahoma Presbytery, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 469, (Presbytery may delegate authority to dissolve a congregation to an administrative commission); Londonderry v. Presbytery of New England, Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 577, (demonstrating presbytery’s use of an administrative commission to work with a session struggling over its constitutional obligations in light of disagreement with specific constitutional provisions).
Powers delegated to administrative commissions must be specifically described (G-9.0502). This is consistent with the principle that the jurisdiction of each governing body within the church is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, and that powers not expressly mentioned in the Book of Order are reserved to the presbyteries (G-9.0103).

Decisions of Administrative Commissions. When an administrative commission reaches a decision on a matter referred to it, the commission’s decision becomes the action of the appointing body. A governing body may amend or rescind an action or decision of an administrative commission in the same manner that it may change its own decisions and actions. Specifically, G-9.0505a states:

The decision of an administrative commission shall be the action of the appointing body from the time of its completion by the commission and the announcement, where relevant, of the action to parties affected by it. Such decision shall be transmitted in writing to the stated clerk of the governing body, who shall report it to the governing body at its next meeting. A governing body may rescind or amend an action of an administrative commission in the same way actions of the governing body may be modified.

Fair Process. When an administrative commission has been appointed to settle differences within a church or other entity, there are requirements that it must observe in order to assure the fair exercise of authority. Those requirements for a fair process are set forth in G-9.0505b, which states:

(1) When an administrative commission has been appointed to settle differences within a church, a governing body, or an organization of the church, it shall, before making its final decision, afford to all persons to be affected by the decision fair notice and an opportunity to be heard on the matters at issue. (See G-9.0503a(4), G-9.0503a(6), G-9.0505b–d) Fair notice shall consist of a short and plain statement of the matters at issue as identified by the commission and of the time and place for a hearing upon the matters at issue. The hearing shall include at least an opportunity for all persons in interest to have their positions on the matters at issue stated orally.

(2) Whenever the administrative commission has been empowered to dissolve a pastoral relationship and the administrative commission chooses to exercise that power, there shall always be a meeting of the congregation at which the commission shall hear the positions of the pastor and the members if they choose to speak. The pastor shall be accorded the right to hear the concerns expressed by members in the meeting and to have reasonable time to respond during the meeting. (See G-14.0610, G-14.0611, G-14.0612, G-11.0103o).

Use of Administrative Commissions in Presbyteries. Administrative commissions appointed by a presbytery to settle differences in a church are required to follow G-9.0505b, even if the presbytery did not quote or refer to these requirements when it appointed the administrative commission and specified the commission’s scope of power. When a presbytery creates an administrative commission to divide, dismiss or dissolve churches; establish or dissolve a pastoral relationship; or assume original jurisdiction over a session (G-11.0103i, o and s, respectively), the commission must follow the requirements of G-9.0505b, including obligations for investigation and providing an opportunity for those affected to be heard. When the presbytery’s powers are specifically assigned to an administrative commission, the commission then is acting with the full power and authority of the presbytery as to the powers assigned. Moreover, the administrative commission must follow all applicable requirements for fair notice and an opportunity to be heard. An administrative commission may, in its absolute discretion, offer additional procedures that it deems appropriate to investigate, consider and decide the matters before it in a fair, open and pastoral manner (see G-9.0505c and d).

Application of Principles in This Case. Applying these principles and provisions to this case, this Commission finds that the Presbytery acted appropriately in appointing the AC and delegating specific authority to it. The argument of Sundquist, et al. that, the Presbytery must take all the steps to dissolve a pastoral relationship or assume original jurisdiction over a session, including investigation, notice and an opportunity to be heard, before appointing an administrative commission or delegating power to it, has no Constitutional basis and is in error. However, when an administrative commission is granted the authority to assume original jurisdiction over a session, it may not exercise that authority without first finding that the session is unable or unwilling to manage wisely the affairs of its church as required by G-11.0103s and by following the procedures of G-9.0505b(1). Similarly, an administrative commission may not dissolve a pastoral relationship without adhering to the requirements of G-11.0103o and G-9.0505b(2).

Sundquist, et al. are correct that when a session calls a meeting for the purpose of considering actions that may lead to separation from the PC(USA), neither the Presbytery, nor an administrative commission, may automatically assume original jurisdiction over that session. That is not in fact what happened with respect to the Paola or the Hillsdale churches. The SPJC correctly held that the AC, acting under its delegated powers, must make the determinations specified in G-11.0103s before assuming the powers and jurisdiction of a session and may not assume such powers and jurisdiction solely because the session has called a meeting for the purpose of separating the congregation from the PC(USA). (See Part II below regarding the session’s authority to call a congregational meeting for this purpose.)

Appointing an administrative commission with the power to assume original jurisdiction or dissolve or dismiss a congregation or dissolve a pastoral relationship does not mean that the commission will inevitably exercise this power. In this case, the Resolution provided a process that insured that granting of such powers was separated from the exercise of the powers by the requirement that the AC must first determine that it is “evident to the commission that minister(s) or congregation member(s) are moving toward expressing a desire for separation, and that reconciliation is not likely” (Resolution, section 3 [emphasis added]). This determination is an important buffer between the grant of authority and exercise of that authority by the AC. This provision for phased implementation of the Resolution reflected the Presbytery’s view that in dealing with issues as grave as dissolution of pastoral relationships, dissolving or dismissing churches or assuming original jurisdiction over sessions, it is generally wise to proceed deliberately and with due consideration for the opportunity for reconciliation. It is to be expected that a session and congregation will proceed with that same deliberation in seeking reconciliation. The Resolution reflected the Presbytery’s desire and intent to give broad powers to an administrative commission that may be faced with particularly fluid and difficult circumstances, but conditioned the exercise of those powers on appropriate pastoral considerations for reconciliation in addition to the procedural safeguards imposed by G-9.0505b and G-11.0103i, o and s.\(^2\)

Without an administrative commission in place, the alternative would have required the Presbytery to call the session and pastor to the next plenary meeting of the Presbytery to air the differences in front of the entire Presbytery.\(^7\) Such a process would be unwieldy, use an undue amount time and resources, result in poor stewardship of Presbytery resources, and would in all likelihood not afford the best opportunity for a full hearing or reconciliation. There is greater potential to act pastorally, build trust and seek reconciliation in smaller groups.

Specification of Error No. 4

Congregational Consultations for the Purpose of Seeking Dismissal

_Sundquist, et al._ assert that a session has an “implicit” or “implied right” to call a congregational meeting to consider requesting dismissal to another denomination, but at oral argument to this Commission suggested that it was a “privilege,” not a “right.” Any such privilege exists only within a covenantal relationship between a church and the presbytery. On the contrary, G-7.0302 and G-7.0304 limit the business of congregational meetings and do not include the topic of seeking dismissal. In 2008, the 218th General Assembly adopted Item 04-20 (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 48), which refers to G-7.0304 and states, “Withdrawal from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is not a matter that can be considered at a congregational meeting.”

This does not mean that a congregation is prohibited from requesting dismissal. However, it is the presbytery (or its duly appointed administrative commission or its Committee on Ministry) that has the responsibility to consult with the members of a church about dismissal (G-11.0103i). The presbytery is required to afford all persons affected by a dismissal notice and an opportunity to be heard on the subject (G-9.0503(b); Item 04-20). These consultations (which may be in the form of listening sessions, hearings or other consultations) are for the benefit of informing the presbytery as it considers a request for dismissal, but are not meetings at which any business of the congregation may be conducted (id.; see also Gaba v. Presbytery of Eastern Virginia, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 269. [The purpose of this provision is not merely matter of fairness or information gathering, but also exercise of pastoral oversight of churches by the presbytery to facilitate reconciliation.]).

“Our unity in Christ and the relational nature of our polity require dialogue between and among governing bodies. … Dialogue requires participation by both parties …” (Johnston, et al. v. Heartland Presbytery, Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 462, 466). This obligation and mutual responsibility for dialogue was made explicit by the 218th General Assembly (2008) when it approved the Resolution for a Gracious, Pastoral Response (Minutes, 2008, Part I, Item 04-28, pp. 51, 284), expressing its will that all governing bodies and persons dealing with members of a church seeking dismissal act in a consistent and pastoral manner, with accountability and due consideration for fiduciary and connectional concerns, with open and transparent communication in the context of gracious witness to one another. Presbyteries and congregations have a reciprocal obligation for this process (G-4.0302). Whether the presbytery’s power “to divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members” (G-11.0103i) is retained or delegated to an administrative commission, it is to be exercised in a pastoral manner, with litigation seen as a last resort, “deadly to the cause of Christ” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 284, Item 04-28, Recommendation 2).

Any privilege to seek dismissal is conditioned on the cooperation of the congregation, the session and the pastor(s) with the presbytery in a process that operates in the manner set forth in Item 04-28. There shall not be any secret or secretive acts by sessions, pastors or congregations; bylaw changes or transfers of assets effectively negating the _Book of Order_ or diminishing a church’s connection to the PC(USA); or curtailment of communications with the presbytery as a prelude to dismissal. Congregational meetings called or conducted by sessions for the purpose of voting on dismissal without the involvement of the presbytery are improper and have no binding effect.

G-11.0103i requires the presbytery to consult with members of local congregations seeking dismissal. The presbytery should consult with pastors and congregations seeking dismissal at the earliest practicable opportunity and in the manner described by the Resolution for a Gracious, Pastoral Response (Item 04-28). In consulting with members of local churches about dismissal, the “presbytery’s witness, concern, and responsibility are not solely to one congregation, but to each congregation in light of the whole. The congregation’s responsibility is not to itself, but to itself in light of its call to ‘fulfill its responsibilities as the local unit of mission for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the glory of God.’ (G-4.0104)” (Johnston, p. 467). This understanding of our unity in Christ and of the relational nature of our polity is fundamental to Presbyterianism and a gracious witness to Scripture and the Holy Spirit. We are bound together in covenantal relationships that assume and require the blessings and difficulties of dialogue based on trust and love (G-7.0103).

The several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a re-
Likewise, “Each particular church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by this Constitution. ... it shall fulfill its responsibilities as the local unit of a mission for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the glory of God” (G-4.0104). This union requires each governing body within the church to treat the others pastorally and with high moral obligations to care for and respect the other. “In this way, without the congregations, the presbytery is a hollow shell; without the presbytery, the vision of the churches is limited” (Johnston, p. 466). Thus congregations, sessions, and pastors who fail to abide by the principles of the Resolution for a Gracious, Pastoral Response or presbytery policies (such as the Heartland Resolution) that embody these principles shall have breached important responsibilities and duties. As Presbyterians, the church at every level must visibly demonstrate the covenantal ties that bind us as the one church of Jesus Christ.

III.
Specification of Error No. 5
Limitations on Conscience

Citing the phrase in part 3 of the Presbytery’s Resolution, “moving toward expressing a desire for separation,” Sundquist, et al. argued that the Resolution was an improper attempt to bind the conscience of pastors, elders and members and that it would have a chilling effect on the free expression of conscience. However, the record is clear that the Paola and Hillsdale pastors and sessions had done much more than express their views about a desire for separation, but had taken action to withdraw their congregations from the denomination.

This Commission has distinguished between belief and behavior on several occasions. In Hambrick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina (PCUS Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 43), this Commission addressed a presbytery’s approval for membership of a pastor whose views on the ordination of women and the participation of unconfirmed children in the Lord’s Supper did not comport with the Constitution, and drew an important distinction between “the right of individuals to hold views contrary to the Constitution... and actions contrary to the Constitution [which] are not sanctioned.” In Presbytery of West Jersey v. Synod of the Northeast (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 17), the GAPJC affirmed the right of the Synod to adopt a resolution in opposition to the Book of Order, as interpreted under an authoritative interpretation, and differentiated between opinion and action. In Londonderry (at p. 580), this Commission found that a purported expression of opinion on G-6.0106b actually went further, declaring an intent not to enforce that provision, and thus went too far. Williamson v. Presbytery of Western North Carolina (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 475) holds that those ordained to office in the PC(USA) must exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds, and are answerable to the governing bodies of the church in order that all may live and work together in love and unity. Finally, most recently in Spahr v. Presbytery of the Redwoods (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 330), this Commission held:

Rather than describing freedom of conscience in any absolute way, G-6.0108 declares the manner in which the conscience of an officer of the church is bound. The binding of the conscience of an officer of the church permits freedom of conscience with regard to the interpretation of Scripture only insofar as it ‘may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church.’ G-6.0108a. Submission to the current standards of the church may not always be comfortable, but it is not optional. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 334)

In this case, there is no evidence that Presbytery, either by adopting or following the Resolution, in the exercise of its constitutional powers, has, or necessarily would, improperly bind the conscience of church officers. The mere creation of an administrative commission is not an act of discipline. Free expression of conscience is limited for officers and pastors under G-6.0108b, and does not encompass the calling of congregational meetings, moving churches to seek dismissal from the denomination or obstructing constitutional governance of the church.

IV.
Specification of Error No. 3
Additional Churches

Presbytery’s Resolution specified that the AC had authority over two churches: First United Presbyterian of Paola, Kansas, and Hillsdale Presbyterian of Hillsdale, Kansas. In addition, the Resolution (at section 5), provided for the addition of other congregations by “the Committee on Ministry or the Presbytery Council, or such subcommittees as they may designate, according to procedures established by those bodies.” The SPJC did not sustain Sundquist, et al.’s Specification of Error on this point, but expressed its concern about the breadth of section 5, and stated, “It is our considered view that churches should only be added to the list by vote of the presbytery.” One additional church was subsequently added to the list by the COM.

Here the Presbytery acted to make every church in the Presbytery potentially subject to the AC, conditioned upon action by the COM or the Presbytery Council (or their designated subcommittees) to name a particular church to be actively subject to specified powers of the AC. Although not prohibited by any specific provision of the Book of Order, a better practice would be for the Presbytery itself to name any additional specific churches to come under the authority of the AC.
05 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH POLITY

Order

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America is hereby sustained.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Heartland report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Remedial Case 219-03

Sundquist, et al. v. Heartland Presbytery

Historic principles of the PC(USA) regarding schism, dating back to the plan of reunion of the Synod of New York and Philadelphia, contained the following: “That when any matter is determined by a major vote, every member shall either actively concur with or passively submit to such determination; or if his conscience permit him to do neither, he shall, after sufficient liberty modestly to reason and remonstrate, peaceably withdraw from our communion without attempting to make any schism. Provided always that this shall be understood to extend only to such determination as the body shall judge indispensable in doctrine or Presbyterian government.” (Hist. Dig. (P) p. 1310, Plan of Union of 1758, par. II: see also footnote 1 to G-6.0107b.) Though a presbytery may dismiss a congregation to another reformed body within certain bounds, members and officers are urged to remember and abide by these principles.

e. Remedial Case 219-04 (Formerly 218-19)

Janet E. Wolfe,
Appellant (Complainant),

v.

Presbytery of Winnebago,
Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER
Remedial Case 219-04
(formerly 218-19)

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellant Janet E. Wolfe (Wolfe) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies (SPJC) dated March 14, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Wolfe has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-8.0105.

Appearances

Wolfe was present and represented by Archibald Wallace, III. The Appellee, Presbytery of Winnebago (Presbytery), was represented by David Arey.

History

Wolfe is a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbytery. Effective July 31, 2005, Wolfe was honorably retired. Subsequently, she expressed a desire to seek a call and began circulating her Personal Information Form (PIF). In an October 20, 2006, letter from the Presbytery’s Executive Presbyter, Wolfe was directed to discontinue circulating her PIF and was encouraged to find secular employment. In January of 2007, Wolfe accepted a pulpit supply position in the Presbytery but was immediately advised by the Committee on Ministry (COM) to resign, which she did. On April 19, 2007, the COM limited the ways in which, and the frequency with which, Wolfe could serve as a minister to a congregation. Following Wolfe’s requests to have the limits removed, the COM modified those limits on August 27, 2007.

On October 12, 2007, Wolfe filed a Complaint with the Synod of Lakes and Prairies in which she alleged that the COM had improperly restricted her from fully exercising the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament without a disciplinary hearing or affording her due process.

On December 8, 2007, the officers of the SPJC issued a Preliminary Order, dismissing the Complaint, because the Complaint did not state a claim upon which relief can be granted (D-6.0305d). On January 15, 2008, Wolfe challenged the Preliminary Order under D-6.0306a.

On March 14, 2008, via a conference call, a hearing was held before the SPJC to consider Wolfe’s challenge. The SPJC affirmed the Preliminary Order. The case was dismissed on the ground that one of the items in D-6.0305 was answered in the negative, that is, that the Complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Wolfe filed her Notice of Appeal to the GAPJC on April 11, 2008. The executive committee of the GAPJC found that the GAPJC has jurisdiction, that Wolfe has standing to file the appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for Appeal under D-8.0105. A hearing was held before the GAPJC on July 25, 2008.

Specification of Error

The SPJC erred by ruling that the Complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

The specification of error is sustained.

Decision

The issue to be decided by this Commission is whether the SPJC erred in ruling that the Complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. In determining whether the Complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted, the SPJC and this Commission must assume the truth of facts as alleged by Wolfe in the Complaint (McKittrick v. Session of West End Presbyterian Church, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 272).

This Commission must accept Wolfe’s allegation that the COM did not report to the Presbytery with a recommendation for action as required by G-11.0502b. Further, both parties conceded that this did not happen.

In Rice v. Presbytery of Philadelphia, Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 172, paragraph 12.068, the GAPJC held that “a presbytery clearly has the right and responsibility to approve or disapprove of the ministerial tasks undertaken by its members … . This power should not be exercised arbitrarily.” Under Lewis v. Presbytery of New York City, Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 134, paragraph 11.066, a presbytery is “obligated to treat all parties fairly and provide them with an opportunity to present their positions. The test is fundamental fairness—the opportunity to be heard and a consideration of their respective positions without prejudice.” Under the Rice and Lewis standards, there are two disputed issues which the SPJC should have tried: the absence of a COM report and recommendation to Presbytery; and, whether sufficient opportunities were otherwise provided by the COM for Wolfe to be heard.

In rendering this decision, this Commission concludes that the Complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted and the SPJC has the authority to grant the relief requested by Wolfe. This Commission makes no determination of the merits of this case or whether Wolfe will be able to prove the facts she alleges in her Complaint.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Final Order of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies dated March 14, 2008, be reversed and this case is remanded for pre-trial and trial proceedings consistent with the Book of Order. The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies is also encouraged to explore with Janet E. Wolfe and the Presbytery of Winnebago alternative means to resolve the dispute prior to trial.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Winnebago report this decision to the Presbytery of Winnebago at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of Winnebago enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod of Lakes and Prairies at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of Lakes and Prairies enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.
Commissioner H. Clifford Looney was absent and did not participate in this case. Commissioner Michael Lukens was recused and did not participate in this case.

Certificate

We certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in Remedial Case 219-04 (formerly 218-19), Janet E. Wolfe, Appellant (Complainant) v. Presbytery of Winnebago, Appellee (Respondent), on July 27th, 2008.

Dated this 27th day of July, 2008.

Remedial Case 219-05 (Formerly 218-20)

Jae G. Lee, Ji Suk Kim, and Hyung Young Choi, Appellants (Complainants),

v.

Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi, Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 219-05
(Formerly 218-20)

Headnote

Authority delegated to administrative commissions must specify powers and authority delegated; those not delegated are reserved to the delegating body. Under the Book of Order, when a governing body establishes an administrative commission, it shall state specifically the scope of power given to the commission (G-9.0502). Powers not delegated by a governing body are reserved to that body.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellants, Jae G. Lee, Ji Suk Kim, and Hyung Young Choi (collectively Lee), against Appellee Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi (Presbytery), from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lincoln Trails (SPJC), dated April 26, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Lee has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal required under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Lee was represented by W. Dan Lee and Robert Worley. Presbytery was represented by David G. Strom.

History

Canaan Presbyterian Church (Canaan) is a member church in the Presbytery, which is a non-geographic Korean-language presbytery, created in 1994. Canaan became a charter member when it transferred to the Presbytery from the Presbytery of Chicago.

In 2006, Canaan was severely affected with disorder, and its Session became unwilling or unable to manage Canaan’s affairs. On October 5, 2006, at a special called meeting, the Presbytery appointed an administrative commission (AC) pursuant to G-9.0500 for the peace and unity of Canaan. The AC was directed by Presbytery to dissolve the Session of Canaan and to exercise jurisdiction over Canaan as the session according to G-11.0103s. The AC was granted “both the authority of the Session stated at G-10.0000 of the Book of Order and the authority of the Presbytery listed at G-11.0000 of the Book of Order.” Presbytery did not grant to the AC the power to act as the Presbytery or as the Session with respect to other matters. When dealing “with matters as to the search for the new pastor and dissolving pastor relationship” with Canaan, the AC was limited to the powers and authority of a session. This limitation was consistent with G-9.0503a(4), which provides that an administrative commission may be granted power: to visit particular churches, governing bodies, or other organizations of the church reported to be affected with disorder, and to inquire into and settle the difficulties therein, except that no commission shall have the power to dissolve a pastoral relationship unless such power has been specifically delegated to it by the appointing body ... [emphasis added].

The AC Plan

On October 24, 2006, the AC adopted a “Road Map,” which dealt almost exclusively with the retirement of the pastor, Yong S. Rhee (Rhee). It was crafted by the AC based in part on discussions held with Rhee concerning his retirement and with an opposition group at Canaan known as “CaSaMo.”

The Canaan November Response to the AC Plan

On November 1, 2006, nine elders filed a complaint with Presbytery stating that the AC had exceeded its powers by dealing with the dissolution of the pastoral relationship between Canaan and Rhee, and by establishing a process for naming Rhee’s successor. That complaint was never heard by Presbytery. On November 7, 2006, the AC reaffirmed the “Road Map” and dealt with other matters, including directing that a congregational meeting that had been called for the purpose of electing officers be postponed until the Session’s functions were restored.

On November 28, 2006, the “Board of Directors” (trustees) of the CPC Corporation, of which Rhee was the president, voted to withdraw Canaan’s membership in Presbytery and transfer back to the Presbytery of Chicago. On December 1, 2006, the AC requested by letter to Rhee that Canaan’s previous organizational structure be maintained.

The “December 5 Actions” of the Rhee/Elders Group

On December 5, 2006, in defiance of the November 7, 2006, request of the AC and of the action of Presbytery in establishing the AC, Canaan held, without notice, a congregational meeting at which the congregation purported to direct the board of trustees to form a “steering committee” for the operation of the church and “have it take the church session’s position.” Until the session was organized, the steering committee would consist of five people who had attended the church’s worship services and would exclude persons who had “never paid offerings.” At that meeting the congregation also elected elders and deacons. On December 5, 2007, the so-called steering committee wrote to the congregation explaining what had transpired at the congregational meeting, detailing the disagreements with the AC and stating that “we reached a conclusion in which we couldn’t help but declare a separation from the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery, and from now on we will remove any kind of interference from the Presbytery.” Also on December 5, 2006, Canaan’s attorney wrote a letter to the moderator of Presbytery asserting violations of the Book of Order by the AC and by Presbytery, and advising that Canaan was withdrawing from Presbytery. Canaan’s steering committee wrote a letter to the members of Presbytery stating: “we announced to leave the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery. Of course, this does not mean to leave the denomination. From now on, if permitted, we will return to the Presbytery of Chicago of which we were a member for over seventeen years.”

Following the December 5 Actions, on December 8, 2006, Canaan’s steering committee published a newspaper ad containing the same content as the steering committee’s December 5 letter to the congregation.

The December 11 Meeting of Presbytery

On December 11, 2006, at its regular stated meeting, Presbytery observed in its minutes that Canaan’s December 5 congregational meeting was not legitimate because it had not been called by the AC. It considered the meeting to be a fractional gathering of Rhee and his supporters. The Presbytery further observed that it respected the decision of the pastor and elders to withdraw from the Presbytery, but that since the withdrawal did not recognize the jurisdiction of the Presbytery, the Presbytery would consider the pastor and elders who made that decision to have renounced the jurisdiction of the PC(USA). The Presbytery went on to state that the persons who had made the decisions may have made them without an understanding of the resulting consequences of their withdrawal from Presbytery.

The Presbytery recommended that those persons cancel their decisions to withdraw and resolved that if by December 20, 2006: (i) Rhee did not send a letter cancelling the withdrawal (and advertise such in the congregation newsletter), and stating that he would be in compliance with the governance of the Presbytery; and/or (ii) certain elders did not do likewise; then, the Presbytery would presume that Rhee had renounced the Presbytery’s jurisdiction, and that pursuant to G-6.0502 (now G-6.0702), he would be terminated from ordained office, removed from the list of ministers of the PC(USA) and his exercise of office ended. Likewise, the elders who supported the withdrawal resolution would be “automatically removed from membership and ordained office and the exercise of their office shall be terminated.” The Presbytery further resolved that it would only acknowledge those members of Canaan who did not “renounce jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” as the true church.

At the December 11, 2006, meeting of Presbytery, the AC’s request that Presbytery delegate to the AC from the Committee on Ministry the authority to call Canaan’s next pastor and dissolve the pastoral relationship between Canaan and Rhee was denied.
On December 14, 2006, Canaan placed a newspaper ad: “accepting sincere recommendations from members of the Presbytery and pastors, we inform the resolution adopted by the board of trustees and steering committee to resolve the issues while staying with the Presbytery” [emphasis in original]. On December 19, 2006, Canaan’s attorney wrote to the Presbytery, stating that: (i) the Presbytery had not responded to his previous advice concerning alleged violations of the Book of Order by Presbytery; (ii) the withdrawal was not from the PCUSA but from the Presbytery; and (iii) he represented Canaan, not any minister, officer or member. He wrote that Canaan was not renouncing the jurisdiction of the “church,” but rather of the Presbytery. He requested that the Presbytery grant an extension of time from December 20, 2006, to February 14, 2007, for Canaan to respond. He advised that his client was “considering and contemplating joining other Presbytery with the P.C.U.S.A.”

On December 20, 2006, Rhee wrote to the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery that he “never expressed the renunciation of the jurisdiction of the denomination.” He requested that his part in the December 5 Actions be taken to the Presbytery’s Permanent Judicial Commission (PPJC). He indicated that even if the PPJC punished him, he would still “prefer to transfer to the Chicago Presbytery but I am not withdrawing the membership from the PCUSA.” He also requested an extension of time but, if Presbytery dismissed Canaan, it “would transfer to the Chicago Presbytery.”

2006 Year-end and Early 2007 AC/Presbytery Actions

On December 28, 2006, the AC declared as “unauthorized and illegal” the nomination and election of Canaan’s new officers and as “illegal” the special meeting of the congregation on December 5, 2006. The AC determined that such officers would not be recognized.

At a meeting on January 4, 2007, of Presbytery’s Coordinating Council, Rhee, who was a member of the Coordinating Council as the chair of Presbytery’s Policy and Record Committee, stated his position that he “had never expressed any intention to terminate and withdraw from the denomination.” The Coordinating Council discussed and by implication affirmed Rhee’s continuing status as a member of the Presbytery. The chairman admonished Rhee to “faithfully follow all power of governance and decisions that need to be complied with as a member of the presbytery, since he clearly announced his standpoint stating he had never expressed terminating and withdrawing from the membership of the denomination.”

Also on January 4, 2007, the AC called a congregational meeting to be held on February 4, 2007, for the purpose of dissolving the pastoral relationship between Rhee and Canaan. In a letter dated January 18, 2007, Rhee objected to the calling of the congregational meeting, arguing both constitutional grounds and that the AC had exceeded its authority. He also filed a complaint with the Presbytery concerning the actions of the AC, including those related to the calling of the congregational meeting, and requested that an investigating committee be formed. It does not appear from the record that the congregational meeting was held.

The “January Actions” of Rhee and Elders

The calendar portion of Canaan’s worship bulletin of January 7, 2007, contained a date for “recognition of the 2007 Church Officers” and “Retirement of Elders and Deacons.” On January 8, 2007, a banner on Canaan’s pulpit proclaimed “Chicago Canaan Church” instead of “Canaan Presbyterian Church.” On January 14, 2007, the annual meeting of the Canaan congregation was held, at which the December 5, 2006, withdrawal resolution was vacated and the previously elected officers were “inaugurated.” A new committee structure was approved, including a board of trustees, pastor nominating committee and commissioners to the Presbytery. The congregation also confirmed the new officers elected at the December 5, 2006, congregational meeting and confirmed the members of the steering committee. These actions were clear violations of the directives and findings of the AC. On January 16, 2007, Rhee withdrew $19,500.00 from the “Canaan Presbyterian Church” bank account and deposited it into a new bank account created in the name of “The Canaan Church.”

The AC Hearing

Following those January Actions, the AC, on January 26, 2007, set a hearing pursuant to G-9.0505b(1), and notified Rhee and certain Elders that because Rhee had “persisted doing actions that may lead to a renunciation,” his views were sought before the AC drafted its final report. The notice cited G-6.0502 and G-9.0505b(1). The notice contained no specific enumeration of how Rhee or the elders had “persisted doing actions” that might lead to renunciation. On January 30, 2007, Canaan’s steering committee objected that the hearing was “illegal” and that its members, including Rhee, would not attend.

On February 1, 2007, the AC hearing was held. No minutes of that hearing were produced in these proceedings. On February 8 and 11, 2007, Rhee and an elder, in separate letters, objected to the findings of the AC. On February 12, 2007, at the Presbytery’s regularly scheduled meeting, the AC presented its written Report, determining that Rhee had “renounced the jurisdiction of the Book of Order” by certain enumerated actions, citing in the last paragraph, G-6.0501 (now G-6.0701) and G-6.0502 (now G-6.0702). The Report made no determination as to the status of the Elders. At the point when the AC Report was made to the Presbytery, the meeting erupted into a physical melee. The Record is unclear what further action, if any, the Presbytery took with respect to the AC’s determination that Rhee was presumed to have renounced jurisdiction of the PC(USA). It appears that the AC Report was accepted and approved as action of the Presbytery at its next meeting.

On February 14, 2007, the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery notified Rhee that, based on the report of the AC at the February 12 Presbytery meeting, Rhee had been removed from the rolls of the Presbytery. On February 19, 2007, Rhee wrote to the Stated Clerk objecting to the AC Report.

On February 22, 2007, the Chair of the AC wrote the Elders notifying them that they had been removed from ordained office and from membership in Canaan, because they had renounced the jurisdiction of the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery, based on the December 5 Actions and the January Actions. On March 3, 2007, one of the many complaints concerning the actions of the AC was filed by elder Hyung Young Choi.

Consolidation of Complaints and Stipulations

The various complaints were consolidated for trial and the parties stipulated that the issues to be tried were:

Issue 1, whether the administrative commission acted within scope of the powers authorized by Midwest Hanmi Presbytery set forth in its resolution adopted at the 50th Presbytery meeting on October the 5th, 2006.

Issue 2, whether the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery erroneously applied the Book of Order G-6.0501, now G-6.0701 in finding that Reverend Rhee renounced the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America in writing to the stated clerk of the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery.

Issue 3, whether the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery erroneously applied the Book of Order G-6.0502, now G-6.0702 in finding that Reverend Rhee was presumed to have renounced the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

Issue 4, whether the administrative commission of the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery, the acting session of the Canaan Presbyterian Church, erroneously applied the Book of Order G-6.0501, now G-6.0701 in finding that the eight elders of the Canaan Presbyterian Church renounced the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America in writing to the clerk of the administrative commission that is the acting session of the Canaan Presbyterian Church.

Issue 5, whether the administrative commission of the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery, the acting session of the Canaan Presbyterian Church, erroneously applied the Book of Order G-6.0502, now G-6.0702 in finding that the eight elders of the Canaan Presbyterian Church were presumed to have renounced the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

SPJC ruled in favor of Presbytery on issues 1, 3 and 5, and in favor of Lee on issues 2 and 4. Lee appealed the SPJC decision as to issues 1, 3 and 5. Presbytery did not appeal the SPJC decision as to issues 2 and 4. Therefore, this Appeal involves only issues 1, 3 and 5.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation in failing to rule that the AC acted beyond the scope of its authority.

This Specification of Error is sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part I.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation in failing to rule that the AC acted beyond the scope of its authority, acting as the Presbytery, in presuming that Rhee had renounced the jurisdiction of the church pursuant to G-6.0702.

This Specification of Error is sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part I.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation in failing to rule that the AC acted beyond the scope of its authority, acting as the Session of Canaan, in presuming that certain elders had renounced the jurisdiction of the church pursuant to G-6.0702.

This Specification of Error is sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part I.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred in denying Lee’s motion for production of documents related to or pertaining to the minutes and related documents of the proceedings of the AC.

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part II.

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred in receiving the testimony of the stated clerk of the Presbytery as both fact and expert witness.

This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part II.
This Specification of Error is not sustained for the reasons discussed below in the Decision, Part II.

Decision

I. Specifications of Error 1, 2 and 3

This case is tragic. It involves issues of culture and language, power and stubbornness. It also reflects misunderstandings on the part of individuals and governing bodies as to processes and procedures set forth in the Book of Order. Because the facts in this case reflect extraordinary and egregious conduct and unique cultural circumstances, the application of this Decision to other circumstances is limited.

The actions of Rhee and his supporters were egregious in many respects and certainly improper under the Constitution; but, the actions of the AC were sometimes ill-considered in that its attempts at reconciliation often did not allow sufficient time for process and consultation. Communication on both sides was problematic, if not obfuscatory.

The Commission is dismayed at the conduct of Rhee and his supporters. However, the Presbytery’s attempts to address this conduct by an administrative commission were procedurally flawed. When a governing body establishes an administrative commission, it shall state specifically the scope of power given to the commission (G-9.0502). Powers not delegated by a governing body are reserved to that body (see Sundquist v. Presbytery of Heartland, Remedial Case 219-03, Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 64 ). In its resolution creating the AC for the purpose of promoting the peace and unity of the CPC, Presbytery granted to the AC both the authority of a session as stated in G-10.0000 and the authority of a presbytery as stated in G-11.0000. Presbytery could have but did not grant to the AC the power to act as the Presbytery with regard to matters arising under G-6.0702. Nor did it grant to the AC, acting as a session, the power of a governing body with regard to matters arising under G-6.0702.7

Therefore, despite the improper actions of Rhee and his supporting Elders, the AC acted improperly when, acting as the Presbytery, it presumed the renunciation of jurisdiction by Rhee as a minister of Word and Sacrament and when, acting as the Session, it presumed the renunciation of jurisdiction by certain Elders. The power to presume renunciation remained with the Presbytery. In fact, the retention of that power by the Presbytery is implied by the Presbytery’s actions at its December 11, 2007, meeting, when it resolved that Rhee and the Elders would be presumed to have renounced if they did not correct their December 5 Actions, and by the action of Presbytery’s Coordinating Council on January 4, 2007, when it apparently (the record being unclear) determined that Rhee and the Elders had responded affirmatively to the Presbytery’s admonitions, and that Rhee, at least, remained a member in good standing of the Presbytery.

As noted above, the Record is unclear as to the Presbytery’s actions as a plenary body in presuming the renunciation of Rhee. The AC, acting alone under the authority granted to it by the Presbytery, could not have made the presumption of renunciation. Only the Presbytery could have done this based on the limited authority delegated to the AC (which did not include powers under G-6.0702). Further, it is not clear whether Rhee and the Elders received notice that even after their cure of the December 5 Actions, they were persisting in conduct disapproved by the Presbytery.

In addition, there is no evidence in the record that the AC, acting as the Session, ever made a determination of presumed renunciation of jurisdiction by the designated Elders. The report of the AC to Presbytery on February 12, 2007, is silent in regard to the Elders. On February 22, 2007, the chairman of the AC wrote a letter to the Elders stating that they had “renounced the jurisdiction of the Midwest Hanmi Presbytery” and thereby from ordained office and membership in the CPC, on the basis of their part in the December 5 Actions and because of unidentified decisions they were said to have made on February 13, 2007. As suggested above, the record before this Commission implies that the December 5 Actions had been corrected, and there is no indication in the record of any notice from the AC concerning the February 13 decisions.

For all of these reasons, including the limited delegation of authority given to the AC and failure to notify Rhee and the Elders of their continuing disapproved conduct, and because the Record is unclear, this Commission is unable to affirm the Decision of the SPJC, and this case is remanded for a new trial.

II. Specifications of Error 4, 5 and 6

As to Specification of Error 4, this Commission finds that the documents requested by Lee were not relevant to the resolution of the issues at trial, as stipulated by the parties. However, this Commission notes that G-9.0502 requires a commission to keep a full record of its proceedings, which must be submitted to its governing body and incorporated into the minutes of that governing body.
As to Specification of Error 5, witnesses may be both factual and expert if qualified and if a proper foundation is laid. Fact witnesses should have first-hand knowledge. Experts should have sufficient expertise to aid the trier of fact and the ability to express opinions that assist the trier of fact. The expert to which Lee objects on this Appeal had the requisite factual knowledge and expertise.

As to Specification of Error 6, the procedures at trial were just and fair to all parties and, therefore, the Specification of Error is without merit.

Order

IT IS ORDERED that the portions of the SPJC decision that are before this Commission are set aside and this case is remanded for further proceedings consistent with this Decision.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the SPJC is instructed to conduct a pre-trial conference or other proceeding(s) with the parties to clarify issues with respect to the current status of the parties under G-6.0702 before commencing any further judicial proceedings in this matter. The parties are cautioned that in the event this matter is re-tried, they should take steps to assure that the Record is clear with respect to actions of the parties.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lincoln Trails report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-participants

A. Bates Butler was absent and did not participate in this case.

Dated this 27th day of October, 2008. held in October, 2005. One complaint alleged irregular actions by the pastor (Pastor) and clerk (Clerk) at the meetings and also alleged that the Clerk had failed to maintain and review accurate membership rolls. A second complaint alleged irregularities against the Session and an elder involving the formation and election of the church officer nominating committee. A third complaint alleged irregularities and delinquencies at the congregational meetings.

The three complaints were consolidated into a Restatement of the Complaint against the Pastor and Session (Restated Complaint) alleging irregularities and delinquencies at congregational meetings held on October 2 and October 30, 2005, such as involvement of inactive members, inadequate maintenance and availability of membership rolls at the meetings, improper voting procedures, improper formation of the church officer nominating committee, and improper procedures of the nominating committee. Yun et al. sought a declaration that the 2005 elections were invalid, that the nominating committee be dissolved and a new committee constituted, and that a new congregational meeting be held for the purpose of electing elders.

The case was tried on April 4, 2006, based on the allegations in the Restated Complaint and in two additional complaints filed on March 20, 2006, regarding certain alleged auditing and financial irregularities. The PPJC issued a Decision on May 8, 2006 (PPJC Decision), reciting all parties’ acknowledgment that irregularities and delinquencies had occurred and stating that all parties had agreed to six specific remedies. The PPJC found that the church officer nominating committee had been properly formed. Those persons elected at the congregational meeting were later ordained and installed and have completed their terms of office or have resigned.

Nevertheless, Yun et al. appealed the PPJC Decision to the SPJC. The SPJC dismissed the appeal under D-8.0302c, holding that the Notice of Appeal did not state one or more of the grounds for appeal as set forth in D-8.0105. Yun et al. appealed to this Commission, asserting that the SPJC had improperly dismissed the appeal. On July 27, 2007, this Commission held that the Notice of Appeal stated grounds for appeal and remanded the case to the SPJC. In remanding the case, this Commission directed the SPJC to consider whether the PPJC had jurisdiction over errors alleged to have occurred at congregational meetings and, based thereon, whether relief could be granted. On April 25, 2008, the SPJC held that the PPJC erred in accepting jurisdiction of the case because the complaints were directed toward actions of the congregation and nominating committee, which are not “governing bodies” as defined by G-9.0101. The SPJC set aside the PPJC Decision. Yun, et al. appealed the SPJC decision to this Commission.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1: The SPJC erred by rejecting the claim that the PPJC erred when it did not set aside the October 2005 elections on the basis of specific irregularities in election procedures.

This specification of error is not sustained.

In response to the request of Yun, et al. to set aside the October 2005 elections, the PPJC found that there was no basis to invalidate them. Even if there were, those persons elected have completed their terms, thereby rendering the issue moot.

Specification of Error No. 2: The SPJC erred in rejecting the claim that the PPJC denied access to certain evidence, with the result that the PPJC hastened to an unfair and unjust decision on the basis of insufficient evidence.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The record reflects that all parties had the opportunity to present evidence appropriate to the claims against the Session, as a governing body. Additionally, all parties agreed to the remedies adopted by the PPJC. These remedies were adequate to resolve this case. The Presbytery is encouraged to ensure that the remedies are fully implemented and that all parties honor their agreements.

Specification of Error No. 3: The SPJC erred in finding that no portion of the Restated Complaint alleged irregularities or delinquencies by a governing body, and therefore the PPJC had no jurisdiction.

This specification of error is sustained.

The SPJC correctly stated that remedial complaints can only be filed against governing bodies. To the extent that there are portions of the complaints in this case, including the Restated Complaint, that are addressed to individuals and the congregation generally, the SPJC did not err in finding that the PPJC had no jurisdiction over those complaints.

The PPJC did have jurisdiction, however, to consider those portions of the Restated Complaint alleging irregularities and delinquencies of the Session. The Restated Complaint alleged and the PPJC Decision found that there were irregularities and delinquencies in the acts of the Session. To that extent, the PPJC had jurisdiction and the SPJC erred.

Decision

The Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Northeast is affirmed in part and reversed in part.
ORDER

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Presbytery of Newark Permanent Judicial Commission is reinstated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Newark report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Northeast report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

h. Disciplinary Case 219-07

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Wyoming, Appellee (Complainant),

v.

Gordon R. J. King, Appellant (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellant Gordon R. J. King (King), from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains (SPJC), dated May 7, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that King has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-13.0106.

Appearances

King was represented by Elizabeth Dunning. The Presbytery of Wyoming (Presbytery) was represented by Lynne Reade.

History

This disciplinary case began on May 5, 2000, with the filing of sixteen charges by an Investigating Committee of the Presbytery against King.

On March 1–2, 2002, a trial was held by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery (PPJC). On March 2, 2002, the PPJC delivered a “provisional decision” on the charges, with a finding of guilt on one of the charges, that:

Between October 26 and November 3, 1999, you, Gordon R. J. King, did commit the offense of sexual misconduct in relation to [an 18 year-old female] of Midvale, Utah, in that you sent her a series of e-mail messages containing sexually suggestive language and inappropriate innuendos. This is also an offense of conduct contrary to Scripture, namely I Timothy 5:1–2: ‘Do not speak harshly to an older man, but speak to him as to a father, to younger men as brothers, to older women as mothers, to younger women as sisters—with absolute purity’. (NRSV)

The provisional decision specified the degree of censure as “Rebuke with Supervised Rehabilitation,” with the order to attend a career guidance center which is under contract with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and approved by the PPJC to do an evaluation.

On August 8, 2005, the PPJC sent a letter to King advising him that “further rehabilitation is necessary for you, in the form of long-term individual, and probably group therapy and also spiritual direction, if you want to maintain your ordination in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” specifying the counselor, and identifying eight areas for counseling.
On September 21, 2006, the PPJC issued a “Final Decision of the Commission” which was read at an open meeting held October 20, 2006. This Final Decision was appealed by King to the SPJC on December 7, 2006.

On May 6, 2008, the SPJC had a hearing, subsequently voted not to sustain any of the specifications of error, and affirmed the PPJC’s decision, which is the basis of King’s Appeal filed June 19, 2008. This Commission heard the arguments of the parties on February 27, 2009.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC committed injustice in the process and error in constitutional interpretation by misstating King’s first specification of error and substituting its own.

This Specification of Error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC committed injustice in the process and error in constitutional interpretation by:

a) applying an incorrect standard of review and thereby failing to meet its obligation to review the decision of the PPJC; and

b) sustaining the decision of the PPJC convicting King of the charge of sexual misconduct.

This Specification of Error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC committed injustice in the process and error in constitutional interpretation by sustaining the finding of guilt on the charge of “Sexual Misconduct” made by the PPJC on the basis of the Presbytery’s Standard on Sexual and Ethical Conduct (Standard):

a) in the absence of evidence that King had ever been given a copy of the Standard;

b) by relying on provisions of the Standard not relied upon by the PPJC, and

c) by relying on provisions in the Standard that by their express terms were inapplicable to the conduct at issue.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Individuals have the responsibility to know the policies of the governing bodies they serve.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC committed error in constitutional interpretation by affirming the imposition of supervised rehabilitation that fails to comply with the requirements of Rule D-12.0103 in that it fails to include a clear statement of how progress will be evaluated and how it will be determined when and if the supervised rehabilitation has been satisfactorily completed.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

The question raised by this specification of error is moot in light of the determinations stated above.

Decision

Factual determinations made by a trier of fact are accorded a presumption of correctness. Questions of law are not subject to the same deference (Spahr v. Presbytery of Redwoods, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p 314). The application of a local standard for conduct (i.e., the Standard) does not relieve an appellate body of the obligation to determine whether that or any other legal standard has been properly applied. That determination is a question of law, not a question of fact.

The Record was undisputed and did not support a finding that King engaged in “sexual misconduct” as the term was defined in the Standard and as King was charged in May, 2002. The sections of the Standard on which the PPJC relied, specifically 3 and 5, required proof of misuse of authority and/or power to find that sexual misconduct occurred. The Record did not support such a finding. Because this determination is dispositive in this matter, the PPJC decision is reversed and King’s remaining specifications of error are moot.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains is hereby reversed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Wyoming report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

i. Remedial Case 219-08

David Bierschwale, David Lenz, and Carol Shanholtzer, Appellants (Complainants),

v. Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area, Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 219-08

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by Appellants, David Bierschwale, David Lenz, and Carol Shanholtzer (Bierschwale, et al.), from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies (SPJC) dated August 12, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, Bierschwale, et al. have standing to file the Appeal, the Appeal was properly and timely filed and the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-8.0105 of the Book of Order.

Appearances

Bierschwale, et al. were represented by Charles Shreffler. David Bierschwale and David Lenz were present in person. The Presbytery of Twin Cities Area (the Presbytery) was represented by Douglas Nave and Barbara Saunders Lutter.

History

This case concerns the action of the Presbytery in restoring Paul Capetz, a minister of Word and Sacrament, to the exercise of his ordained office. Capetz was ordained as a minister of Word and Sacrament in 1991, but asked in 2000 to be released from the exercise of ordained office because of his conscientious objection to the then newly adopted section G-6.0106b of the Book of Order. The Presbytery granted the requested release. See G-6.0600.

After the 217th General Assembly (2006) adopted an Authoritative Interpretation from the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, addressing section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, on August 15, 2007, Capetz requested that he be restored to the exercise of ordained office under the procedure set forth in G-6.0600c. Capetz responded to questions put to him by the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry, and stated: “I affirm the Constitutional Questions asked of me at my ordination. However, I have to raise a principled objection or scruple. I cannot affirm G-6.0106b. Nor can I affirm the position of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on the question of the morality of homosexual relationships.”

The Presbytery met on January 26, 2008, and, based on the recommendation of the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry, considered three motions:

First, that Capetz’s “declared departure from G-6.0106b be found not to constitute a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order” (Departure Motion);

Second, that Capetz “be restored to the exercise of ordained office of minister of Word and Sacrament” (Restoration Motion); and Third, that the Presbytery validate Capetz’s “ministry as member of the faculty of United Theological Seminary” (Validation Motion).

During the debate on the Departure Motion, Capetz answered questions. In response to one question, Capetz stated: “The 2006 GA has recognized a right of candidates for ministry to declare a departure, or scruple. My departure: I refuse to take a vow of celibacy.” Capetz was asked whether he was in compliance with the constitutional standards, and responded: “Even if I could look in a crystal ball and know that I would have no future sexual relationships, I would still refuse to be in compliance with the Book of Order as it now stands.” Capetz was asked in reference to G-6.0106b, whether he would refrain from intimate sexual activity outside the bounds of marriage between a man and a woman, if he were to be restored to exercise of his ordained office. Capetz responded: “I refuse to take a vow of celibacy.” The Presbytery passed all three motions on January 26, 2008.\[^8\]

Bierschwale, et al. filed a complaint on February 27, 2008, alleging that the Presbytery acted irregularly in passing the three motions, and asked the SPJC to order the Presbytery to nullify all three of its actions with respect to Capetz and determine that Capetz’s declared departure from G-6.0106b was a failure to adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108. The Presbytery moved to dismiss the Complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

In an April 25, 2008, Preliminary Order, the Moderator and Clerk of the SPJC dismissed the Complaint, finding that granting the relief requested would nullify Capetz’s ordination and that such action could be taken only in a disciplinary proceeding. Bierschwale, et al. challenged this Preliminary Order on June 4, 2008, and later amended their Complaint to request that, in addition to the relief previously sought, the SPJC admonish the Presbytery and order it to refrain from conducting further irregular ordinations, installations, restorations or validations.

After a hearing on August 12, 2008, the SPJC issued a final Decision and Order dismissing the Amended Complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Bierschwale, et al. filed a Notice of Appeal to this Commission on September 23, 2008. A hearing was held before the GAPJC on February 27, 2009.

Specifications of Error

Bierschwale, et al. alleged that they were wrongfully denied an opportunity to present evidence and be heard when the SPJC dismissed their Amended Complaint because it did not state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Specifically, Bierschwale, et al. alleged the following Specifications of Error in the Notice of Appeal:

Specification of Error No. 1: The SPJC failed in its responsibility to warn or bear witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in the area of its jurisdiction, citing G-12.0102m.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 2: The SPJC erred by failing to issue a Stay of Enforcement.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 3: The SPJC erred in characterizing the claim of Bierschwale, et al. as seeking to nullify Capetz’s ordination, rather than challenging his restoration to the exercise of ordained office.

This Specification of Error is not sustained. This Commission understands from Bierschwale, et al. that they are not seeking to revoke Capetz’s ordination. In light of the discussion below, this Specification of Error is not sustained because it is moot.

Specification of Error No. 4: The SPJC erred by not conducting a trial to determine whether there are facts that show: (a) Capetz stated a departure from G-6.0106b and (b) if so, whether that departure was a failure to adhere to the requirements of G-6.0108; and if the facts show that (a) and (b) occurred, whether the Presbytery’s action was irregular.

This Specification of Error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 5: The SPJC erred by not conducting a trial to determine whether there are facts that would show the Presbytery waived the “fidelity and chastity” requirement of G-6.0106b in considering Capetz as a candidate or applicant for membership in the Presbytery; and if so, whether that action by the Presbytery was irregular.

This Specification of Error is sustained. This case is not remanded for a determination in the abstract as to whether any presbytery may decide that the “fidelity and chastity” requirement of G-6.0106b can be waived for any candidate or applicant for membership in a presbytery. Rather, the SPJC shall decide only on the basis of the facts of what the Presbytery did with respect to Capetz, and whether that particular action was irregular.

Specification of Error No. 6: The SPJC erred in ruling implicitly that compliance with requirements in G-6.0106b for “those who are called to office” is not a continuing obligation.

This Specification of Error is not sustained. There was no such implication in the ruling of the SPJC.
Specification of Error No. 7: The SPJC erred by not determining whether the Presbytery’s action was irregular in restoring Capetz to the exercise of his ordained office even after he expressed a refusal to comply with the fidelity and chastity requirement of G-6.0106b.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 8: The SPJC erred by determining that a presbytery’s action to deny restoration to exercise of ordained office would not in effect nullify an individual’s ordination.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 9: The SPJC erred by not determining whether any decision that would affect the ordination status of any individual must be addressed in a disciplinary and not a remedial action.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 10: The SPJC erred by not determining whether granting a departure from compliance with G-6.0106b is the same as exempting the minister from any future disciplinary charges related to sexual practice contrary to the terms of G-6.0106b.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 11: The SPJC erred in failing to admonish the Presbytery to refrain from future irregular ordinations, installations or restorations of anyone who refuses to comply with the requirements of G-6.0106b.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 12: The SPJC erred by ruling that Bush, et al. v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh, 2008 minutes, p. 314, applies only to ordinations and is not applicable to restorations to exercise of ordained office.

This Specification of Error is not sustained. The SPJC was correct that Bush did not address restorations to exercise of ordained office. The Specification of Error misstates the SPJC decision.

Decision

The Departure Motion. Bierschwale, et al. did not allege that there was any procedural irregularity in the manner in which the Presbytery took action on any of the three motions, including the Departure Motion. Any alleged irregularity in the process by which motions such as the Departure Motion are adopted is reviewable by the SPJC under the holding of Bush. In this case, Bierschwale, et al. complained that the Presbytery acted irregularly in adopting the Departure Motion because Capetz’s statements to the Presbytery were a serious departure from essentials of Reformed faith and polity and not a proper exercise of freedom of conscience under G-6.0108b.

This Commission finds that Bierschwale, et al. have stated a claim upon which relief may be granted, and the SPJC should determine whether Capetz’s statements and the Presbytery’s adoption of the Departure Motion are in violation of G-6.0108. The SPJC should address whether Capetz’s statements were a proper exercise of freedom of conscience under G-6.0108, and whether the Presbytery properly approved them in the Departure Motion. The standards for determining whether departures from essentials of Reformed faith and polity are permitted include whether a departure deviates from the standards in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government, infringes the rights and views of others, or obstructs the constitutional governance of the church (G-6.0108 a, b). The trial of this case should include a presentation of evidence to determine whether these three requirements of G-6.0108 have been met.

The Restoration Motion. The primary issue in this case is whether the Restoration Motion was valid. Capetz’s restoration required the approval of the Presbytery, but did not require that he be reordained. (G-6.0600c.) Nor did Capetz’s restoration require the Presbytery to adopt the Departure Motion. However, having elected to adopt the Departure Motion, there will now be a determination of the propriety of the Departure Motion as discussed above.9 Bierschwale, et al.’s challenge to the Restoration Motion is based on their contention that Capetz’s statements were in fact a refusal to comply with G-6.0106b. The undisputed record shows that Capetz did not go that far, and there is nothing in the record to show that he has taken any action that could be deemed to be an act in violation of G-6.0106b. There was no irregularity in the Presbytery’s action with respect to the Restoration Motion, and no relief upon which this claim can be granted.

To the extent that Bierschwale, et al. ’s challenge to the Restoration Motion is based on G-6.0108b, it also fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. The Presbytery was not ordaining Capetz, but was acting to restore him to the exer-exercise of the office of minister of Word and Sacrament as provided for in G-6.0600c. Noncompliance with any ordination standard or constitutional requirement by one who has already been ordained may only be addressed in a disciplinary proceeding.

The Validation Motion. Having properly restored Capetz to the exercise of the office of minister of Word and Sacrament, there was no irregularity in validating Capetz’s ministry under G-11.0408 and G-11.0411.

Effect on Capetz. Capetz’s past, present or future conduct is not at issue in this remedial action. If there is any question about Capetz’s conduct, including whether he has led a life in obedience to Scripture and in compliance with historic confessional standards of the church, he, like any other officer of the church, may be held accountable for his conduct under the Rules of Discipline. A remedial case may not be used to challenge the actions of an individual church officer. Weir v. Second Presbyterian Church, (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339). Thus, specifications of error alleged by Bierschwale, et al. that rest on the past, present or future conduct of Capetz fail to state a claim upon which relief may be granted in this remedial case. Any contention that disciplinary action may never be brought against Capetz is erroneous. If the SPJC finds that the Departure Motion was proper under G-6.0108, Capetz still may be subject to disciplinary action based on his conduct. Having been restored to the exercise of the office of Minister of Word and Sacrament, Capetz is fully accountable under all standards and requirements for ministers of Word and Sacrament to abide by the Constitution of the PC(USA), including G-6.0106b.

Effect on Future Actions of the Presbytery and Others. The questions raised in this case about the individual exercise of freedom of conscience, restoration to the exercise of ordained office and validation of a particular ministry are by their very nature matters that must be considered in the context of the ministry and circumstances of the individual at issue. These questions require case-by-case consideration. The SPJC did not err in finding that Bierschwale, et al. failed to state a claim upon which relief may be granted as to their request for an admonition to the Presbytery with respect to future ordinations, installations or restorations.

The SPJC did not rule (even implicitly) that compliance with requirements in G-6.0106b for “those who are called to office” is not a continuing obligation. In making this allegation, Bierschwale, et al. confused ordination requirements with the process for restoration to exercise of ordained office and obscured the differences between remedial and disciplinary cases.

This Commission cannot reach the questions raised by the parties in this appeal as to the validity and effect of the 2008 Authoritative Interpretation (AI) on G-6.0108b or whether Bush has effectively been overruled by the 2008 AI. The 2008 AI and Bush do not address restoration of officers to the exercise of church office. There is no ordination at issue in this case. Questions as to the validity and application of the statement in the 2008 AI that the requirements of G-6.0108 “apply equally to all ordination standards” of the PC(USA) are not properly raised in this appeal.

Finally, the parties and the SPJC are reminded that this order concerns only the preliminary question of failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted as to Specifications of Error Nos. 4 and 5.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies is hereby affirmed in part and reversed in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this case is remanded to the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission for trial as to Specifications of Error Nos. 4 and 5 consistent with this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Disciplinary Case 219-09

Richard L. Davis
Appellant (Accused),

v.

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of San Francisco,
Appellee (Complainant).

DECISION AND ORDER

Disciplinary Case 219-09

Headnotes

2. Conduct of Church Officers: There are biblical and constitutional principles which guide behavior of church officers.

3. Violation of Ordination Vows Can Be a Constitutional Offense (D-2.0203b): Whether a church officer has departed from biblical and confessional principles must be determined by the governing body to which the officer is accountable.

4. Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church: Use of pornography by a church officer on a church computer does not further the peace, unity, and purity of the church.

Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellant Richard L. Davis (Davis) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC) dated September 13, 2008.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Davis has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-13.0106.

Appearances

Davis was represented by Lynne Reade. The Appellee, Presbytery of San Francisco (Presbytery), was represented by Kurt Franklin and Donald Dressler.

History

Davis was the Designated Pastor of the Broadmoor Presbyterian Church from July, 2004 until January, 2006. Shortly after Davis moved to another state, a seminary intern working at the church discovered pornography on the church computer used by Davis. Two system administrators for the Broadmoor Church were promptly notified and also viewed the images, and sought to determine the source of the images. The administrators reported to the session of the Broadmoor Church (Session).

There was conclusive evidence that, over at least a nine-month period, Davis frequently visited hundreds of pornographic internet sites while using a church-owned computer in the pastor’s office on church premises. Davis would often visit these sites while working on church business. A forensic computer specialist documented the extensive use of the church computer to visit sites that contained hardcore pornography, including scenes of sexual subordination and mistreatment of women, violence, and numerous degrading and dehumanizing acts involving men, women, and adults who appeared like children.

The Session referred the matter to the Presbytery. Disciplinary charges were filed by the Presbytery against Davis in March, 2007 alleging:

1. Between the approximate dates of May 19, 2005, and January 17, 2006, you, Rev. Dr. Richard Louis Davis, did violate the Seventh Commandment as defined by paragraph 7.249 of The Book of Confessions (©1999), of The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). You used Broadmoor Presbyterian Church’s computer to “go online and look at sexual sites…once or twice a week…the sites (you) visited would likely be considered in the category of ‘erotica’…in that some of them may have been sexual (sic) stimulating, they in the least could be offensive to others and devaluing to (your) marriage.”

2. Between the approximate dates of May 19, 2005 and January 17, 2006, you, Rev. Dr. Richard Louis Davis, did violate your ordination vows in that you failed to be instructed, led and guided by the confessions of our church as defined by paragraphs G-14.0405 b. (3) and (4) of the Book of Order
On or about January 31, 2006, you, Rev. Dr. Richard Louis Davis, did violate your ordination vows in that you failed to further the peace, unity and purity of the church as defined by paragraph G-14.0405 b. (7) of the Book of Order 2005–2007©2005, of The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) when James Kosko discovered “six images most people would consider inappropriate in the workplace and pornographic in nature.” Mr. Kosko showed the images to Bob Fishtrom and asked him to clean the computer of the images. Both men said they were horrified and shocked by what had been left on the computer. Mr. Fishtrom was greatly disturbed when it was discovered that someone looked “at pornographic material … in the church, on a church-owned computer.”

The Presbytery Permanent Judicial Commission (PPJC) found Davis not guilty on charge 1, and guilty on charges 2 and 3. Following a censure hearing, on July 9, 2007, the PPJC imposed rebuke with supervised rehabilitation. The censure invited Davis to make voluntary restitution to the Broadmoor Church to replace the computer hard drive and express remorse to the Session of the Broadmoor Church. Davis was also required to enter a therapy program.

Both Davis and the Presbytery appealed the PPJC decision to the SPJC. By a vote of 4 to 3, and without receiving any evidence or hearing any testimony, the SPJC reversed the judgment of the PPJC on charge 1 and found Davis guilty. The SPJC upheld the PPJC judgment of guilt on charges 2 and 3, also by a vote of 4 to 3. The SPJC affirmed the censure, but made the restitution and expression of remorse mandatory.

On October 23, 2008, Davis filed a Notice of Appeal with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly alleging ten specifications of error. Davis and the Presbytery presented oral argument to this Commission on August 7, 2009.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC did not have a two-thirds vote of its members when it found Davis guilty of charge 1. This was contrary to D-11.0403b and was, therefore, an error in constitutional interpretation, an irregularity in the proceedings, and an injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC found Davis guilty of something with which he was not charged. This was contrary to D-11.0403a and D-13.0404 and was, therefore, an error in constitutional interpretation, an irregularity in the proceedings, and an injustice in the process of the decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC made factual determinations that should not have been made by an appellate body since factual determinations made by a trier of fact are presumed correct. This was contrary to D-13.0102 and was, therefore, an irregularity in the proceedings and injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC did not interpret the Seventh Commandment correctly. This is an error in constitutional interpretation (D-2.0203b) and injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred when it affirmed the decision of the PPJC with regard to Charge 2. This was error in constitutional interpretation of G-14.0405b (3) and (4) and an injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 6. The SPJC erred when it affirmed the decision of the PPJC with regard to Charge 3. This was error in constitutional interpretation of G-14.0405b(7) and an injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 7. The SPJC and the PPJC did not interpret D-2.0203b correctly. This was an error in constitutional interpretation and injustice in the process or decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 8. The SPJC and the PPJC erred when they found no fault with having a (former) sex addict as Chair of the Investigating/Prosecuting Committee. This was an error in constitutional interpretation of D-1.0101 and D-10.0204 and an injustice in the process and decision.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.
Specification of Error No. 9. The SPJC and the PPJC erred when they did not recognize a biblical scholar as an expert witness. This was an error in constitutional interpretation of D-14.0301.

This Specification of Error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 10. The SPJC erred when it changed the terms of censure imposed by the PPJC which had conducted a censure hearing under D-11.0403e. This was an error of constitutional interpretation and an irregularity in the proceedings.

This Specification of Error is sustained.

Decision

Reversal of the Not Guilty Judgment (Errors Related to Charge 1)

Specification of Error No. 1 is sustained because the SPJC erred by reversing a judgment of “not guilty” to “guilty” by a vote of 4 to 3. In 2004, the Rules of Discipline were amended to permit a governing body to appeal a judgment of “not guilty” (D-13.0102). D-11.0403b provides that “No judgment of guilt may be found on a charge unless at least two-thirds of the members of the session or permanent judicial commission eligible to vote agree on the judgment.” The amendment to the Rules of Discipline to allow appeals by either party created the potential for an appellate body to re-examine the issue of guilt. In making that re-examination, if it determines that a guilty judgment is the correct result, the appellate body would become the first court to make that judgment. Davis correctly observed that D-13.0102 is a contradiction of all previous ecclesiastical and secular law. Further, the revision stands alone, and other related provisions of the Book of Order have not been revised. Thus, prosecuting bodies have a right to appeal, but there are no corresponding procedures to guide how such appeals should be handled and what this appellate right means in terms of the authority of a permanent judicial commission acting as an appellate court to reverse a judgment of not guilty to guilty. This Commission finds no basis in the Book of Order to permit an appellate body to determine guilt by a simple majority vote. It would be grossly unfair to require a two-thirds majority vote by the trier of fact and then permit a simple majority to reverse that judgment based solely on an appellate record and oral argument. Therefore, this Commission finds that any judgment of guilt requires a two-thirds majority vote.

The logical implication of permitting a prosecuting committee to appeal a judgment of not guilty is the prospect that the determination of not guilty will be reversed. D-13.0102 grants a right of appeal, but says nothing about whether there shall be a second trial (which raises concerns about double jeopardy) or where and how such a trial would be held. It is inconceivable that D-13.0102 was intended to permit an appellate body to determine guilt without hearing any evidence, judging the credibility of the witnesses, and deciding whether the burden of proof has been met beyond a reasonable doubt. None of these due process safeguards was provided to Davis, and therefore this Commission sustains Error 1.

Accordingly, Specification of Error No. 1 is sustained and the PPJC’s judgment of “not guilty” on charge 1 is reinstated. Because Davis is not guilty of charge 1, this Commission need not reach the issues raised by Specifications of Error Nos. 2, 3, and 4.

Violations of Ordination Vows (Errors Related to Charge 2)

The SPJC affirmed the PPJC judgment of guilt with regard to Charge 2, stating that charges 1 and 2 were inextricably linked and the judgments had to be consistent. This Commission does not agree that the two charges are so linked. This Commission sustains the SPJC’s decision, but for other reasons.

Ordination questions 3 and 4 (W-4.4003 c and d) read as follows:

  c. Do you sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church as authentic and reliable expositions of what Scripture leads us to believe and do, and will you be instructed and led by those confessions as you lead the people of God?

  d. Will you fulfill your office in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, and be continually guided by our confessions?

The charge that Davis violated these ordination vows should not be determined in a legalistic way. For good reason, the church has been reluctant to list “essentials” of the Reformed faith or to create a legal code. This does not mean, however, that the church has no standards by which to judge alleged violations of ordination vows.

The Book of Order states at G-6.0106a that church officers’ “manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world.” G-6.0106b states, “Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church.”

The Book of Order and The Book of Confessions make it clear that church officers are to conduct themselves within certain limits. While there are few specific church-wide standards of proscribed conduct, (e.g., G-6.0106b), there are many aspirational statements in the church constitution for how church officers should behave. Notwithstanding the church’s prefe-
Biblical principles include the understanding that God created male and female equally in God’s own image (Gen. 1:27), and that God covenants with God’s people and they with one another. The story of the Fall reminds the Church that when humans disobey God, they are alienated from God (Gen. 3). Scripture contains admonitions against sexual exploitation and violence against one another (e.g., Ex. 20, 2 Sam. 11–12). Exploitation and violence transgress God’s intention that the human community live in health, wholeness, unity and peace. See Pornography: Far from the Song of Songs, 200th GA, 1988, p. 7. Jesus’ ministry was one of love, inclusion, compassion, and hospitality, welcoming both women and men as followers. He condemned exploitation and oppression.

Confessional principles relevant to this case can be found throughout The Book of Confessions. Specifically, the most recent confessional statement, The Brief Statement of Faith, states that among humanity’s acts of rebellion against God are that “we violate the image of God in others and ourselves . . . and exploit neighbor and nature . . . .” (The Book of Confessions, 10.3). The Confession of 1967 speaks of “anarchy” and “moral confusion” in sexual relationships as symptoms of human alienation from God, neighbor and self. Human confusion about “the meaning of sex has been aggravated in our day” by several factors associated with modern life (The Book of Confessions, 9.47).

The 200th General Assembly (1988) study paper on pornography states “pornography is a powerful symptom of injustice and alienation in human society. Through words and images, pornography debases God’s intended gifts of love and dignity in human sexuality. Although humankind was created male and female, equally in the image of God, the history of humanity reveals a fundamental pattern of dominance and subjugation . . . .” (Pornography: Far from the Song of Songs, 200th GA, 1988, pp. 6–8). Pornography is a striking sign of human brokenness and alienation from God and from one another. The paper calls the church to give serious attention to this issue.

This Commission finds that a session or presbytery may determine whether one of its members acted or failed to act in a particular manner that “is contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (D-2.0203b). Pornography does not build up the body of Christ, nor demonstrate a Christly manner of life to the world. The question before this Commission is this: “Was Davis’ use of pornography on a church computer a constitutional offense?” The governing body of membership first determines whether a church officer has departed from biblical and constitutional standards (G-6.0108b) and whether to impose a censure (G-11.0103n and r). The PPJC did make such determinations about Davis’ use of pornography. The SPJC affirmed that decision and this Commission concurs.

Furthering the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Errors Related to Charge 3)

The PPJC found Davis guilty of Charge 3. The SPJC sustained this decision. There is overwhelming evidence showing Davis’ use of a church computer to view pornographic internet sites even on church premises during customary business hours. Davis used the church computer in his church office numerous times to view internet sites showing degrading and dehumanizing scenes of a most heinous kind. After Davis moved to another state, some of these graphic pornographic images remained on the church computer and were inadvertently viewed by Davis’ successor, a seminary intern. The intern promptly sought help from, and showed the images to, other church personnel. As the session and an increasing number of church members learned of this situation, waves of shock and distress rocked the church.

Charge 3 alleged that Davis’ use of the church computer to view pornography did not further the peace, unity, and purity of the Broadmoor Church in violation of his ordination vow. Davis’ actions had other ripple effects beyond those who saw the images on the church computer. Davis did not further the peace, unity, and purity of the Broadmoor Church or the larger church by using a church computer to view pornography regularly and frequently and by leaving some of those images on the church computer. This was a breach of Davis’ ordination vows (W-4.4003g) and scriptural and constitutional principles for acceptable conduct of church officers. The PPJC’s judgment of guilt on Charge 3 was properly sustained by the SPJC.

Investigating Committee Bias (Error No. 8)

The Chair of the Investigating Committee and the Prosecuting Committee was an admitted sex addict in recovery. He raised this issue with Presbytery officials and was advised he need not recuse himself. Davis learned of this at the trial. Because the Chair’s personal background was not disclosed to Davis during the investigative process, Davis was unable to raise his concerns as provided for in D-10.0204 (Petition to Review Procedures). This Commission finds that any error in this regard was not prejudicial to Davis. There is no evidence of bias by any member of the PPJC or the SPJC.

Expert Witnesses (Error No. 9)

At oral argument, both parties addressed the lack of standards for admission of testimony by an expert witness. Chapter XIV of the Rules of Discipline addresses “Evidence in Remedial or Disciplinary Cases,” and at D-14.0301 contemplates the use of expert witnesses. D-14.0201 allows any party to challenge the “competence” of any witness. D-14.0205 defines “Credibility” as “the degree of belief that may be given to the testimony of a witness.” Both of these provisions presumably apply to all witnesses in judicial process, including expert witnesses. D-14.0205 further provides “The session or permanent judicial commission may consider, in determining the credibility of a witness, any matter that bears on the accuracy or truthfulness of the testimony of the witnesses.” In the case of expert witnesses, this would presumably include information about the qualifications of the expert and matters pertaining to the relevance of the expert’s proposed testimony.

D-14.0201 and D-14.0205 are the only guidance on expert testimony within the Book of Order available to assist sessions, permanent judicial commissions and parties to judicial process. In this case, the PPJC allowed an expert on ancient Hebrew law to testify, but did not admit the curriculum vitae of the expert. The expert was not allowed to remain in the hearing room during the testimony of other witnesses contrary to D-14.0301, which permits an expert witness to be present throughout the hearing. In this case, this Commission does not sustain Specification of Error No. 9 because the treatment of Davis’ expert was not prejudicial to Davis.

Monetary Censure (Error No. 10)

The SPJC erred when it imposed a monetary censure that required Davis to pay for a new hard drive for the church computer. See Hennigan v. Presbytery of Charlotte, Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 575, paragraph 12.1004.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Synod of the Pacific is hereby reversed in part and affirmed in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the judgment of the Synod of the Pacific finding Davis guilty on charge 1 is reversed, and the Presbytery of San Francisco’s judgment of not guilty on charge 1 is reinstated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Synod of the Pacific’s affirmation of the Presbytery of San Francisco’s judgment of guilt on charges 2 and 3 is affirmed for the reasons stated in this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the additional censure imposed by the Synod of the Pacific is removed, and the original censure imposed by the Presbytery of San Francisco is reinstated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this decision to the Presbytery of San Francisco at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of San Francisco enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod of the Pacific at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of the Pacific enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-participants

Commissioner Angel Casasus-Urrutia was absent. Commissioners Bradley Copeland and Clifford Looney did not participate in this case.

Concurring Opinion

We concur with the majority in an affirmation of Davis’ guilt on Charge 2, with additional reflections on the contemporary interpretation of the Confessions.

A central element in the trial and appellate record of this case is the issue of the appropriate understanding of the Confessions in the life and experience of the Church. This record illustrates a significant misunderstanding about the nature and authority of the Confessions, especially regarding catechetical texts, e.g., the Westminster Larger and Shorter Catechisms and the Heidelberg Catechism, as statutory norms.

The interpretive process regarding the Confessions requires historical analysis of context and meaning in its own time and a judgment about the contemporary understanding of similar or related behavior, involving a dual interpretive process across divergent ages and extensive linguistic development. This is an arduous and complex process, especially in a non-catechetical culture. “Duties” and “sins,” for example, shift widely in meaning as the age and culture change. What constitutes “immodest apparel,” a “wanton look,” or “lascivious” display four centuries ago and how such a standard is understood now can vary greatly between cultures and within a particular culture. One could go through catechetical lists and, except for a few items that have obvious statutory relevance today, realize easily that these are texts that scream for interpretive exercise. To raise such confessional-catechetical lists to equality with the imperative nature of the Decalogue is hermeneutically untenable and legally inappropriate. In our tradition, a catechism is not intended to function as a legally precise rule book and it is perilous to treat it as such. To open up the Confessions in general as a statutory reservoir for judicial judgment would be an interpretive circus and invite legal anarchy.

It is not necessary, however, to enter this arena, since the consistent policy of the General Assembly on the nature of the Confessions is clear. The wisdom of our ordination vows and the wider policy of the church understand the Confessions in terms of guidance rather than rule. This decision reaffirms such a normative view of the nature and authority of the Confessions.

Dissenting Opinion

While I agree with the rationale expressed in the concurring opinion of Commissioners Lukens, Yun, and Wood, I respectfully dissent from the majority’s decision on Charges 2 and 3.

Both the Presbytery PJC and the Synod PJC committed errors in constitutional interpretation and injustice in process or decision. That is D-1.0101 (“In all respects, all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process…”) and D-10.0204 (During the course of the investigation, the person against whom an allegation has been made may petition the commission to review procedures of the investigating committee.) The procedural injustice occurred when a self-acknowledging sexual addict to hard-core pornography in recovery served on and chaired the investigating committee.

The individual testified before the Presbytery PJC that he believed it was “ironic” that he was asked to serve on this particular investigative committee since he had just finished “up a 26 week course on sexual addiction recovery” after wrestling with sexual addiction for 35 years. He testified that he waged “an ongoing, daily choice, a daily battle” against pornography. While the Chair twice inquired of Presbytery officials whether he should recuse himself from the investigative committee, he received the advice, which in my opinion was incorrect, that he need not do so. The Chair shared his personal struggles of his addiction to hard-core pornography with the other three members of the investigative committee so “they were all aware of who I was and who I am.” However, no one informed either Davis or his counsel. They only found out when the Chair testified at trial. One other member of the investigative committee testified that he and another committee member believed that a charge of a violation of the Seventh Commandment “was a little bit more harsh than we needed to do.” Nevertheless, such a charge was filed. It appears from the testimony before the Presbytery PJC that had the Chair not served as Chair of this four person investigative committee, the decision of the investigative committee to bring the particular charges filed would have been different.

Because the Chair brought to his service on the investigative committee his biased feelings regarding hard core pornography and those who regularly view it, the Chair should have recused himself from the committee or been excused from his service on the committee. The failure to do so constituted a violation of due process and fundamental fairness. In addition, the failure to inform Davis and his counsel of the bias of the Chair during the investigative process was a violation of due process and fundamental fairness. Since I believe any charges presented by the investigative committee were tainted by the bias of the Chair, the Presbytery PJC should have dismissed the committee’s charges and sent the matter back to be examined by a new investigative committee. Contrary to the view of the majority of the GAPJC, I do not believe the subsequent judicial process after the charges were filed could serve to cure these inherent violations of due process and fundamental fairness.

k. Remedia  Case 219-10

ORDER FOR DISMISSAL

Remedial Case 219-10

This remedial case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by Appellants, Andrew McDonald, minister, and Jimmy Shelbourn, minister, from a Preliminary Order by the officers of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies (SPJC) dated November 21, 2008. The Executive Committee (EC) of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) found that while Appellants had standing to file and the Appeal stated one or more of the Grounds for Appeal specified in D-8.0105 (d), the Appeal was not properly filed, and this Commission does not have jurisdiction.

The determination of the EC was challenged by the Appellants, and the matter was considered by the full Commission at its meeting in August, 2009 on the basis of briefs submitted by the parties. The GAPJC determined that a hearing in the presence of the parties was necessary, and the case was therefore accepted for hearing.

On December 14, 2009, however, the Stated Clerk received a communication from the Appellants requesting dismissal of the Appeal and the accompanying Stay of Enforcement.

The request of the Appellants is hereby granted, and the case is dismissed.

Dated the 28th day of February, 2010.

I. Remedial Case 219-11

Mary Holder Naegeli, J. Mark Stryker, and Margaret H. Gelini, Appellants (Complainants), v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 219-11

Headnotes

1. Consideration of departure. The proper time to determine whether a candidate has expressed a departure from the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity is at the time of a presbytery’s examination of the candidate for ordination.

2. Removal of a candidate. A presbytery has discretion whether to maintain or remove the name of a candidate from its roll of candidates for minister of the Word and Sacrament.

3. Consideration of a departure requires full examination. A governing body responsible for examination and ordination of officers may grant a departure only when the departure is one that it finds in the context of the entire examination is not a “serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church” (G-6.0108a).

4. Confidential materials. Judicial commissions should establish appropriate procedures for consideration and handling of confidential information.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by Appellants, Mary Holder Naegeli, J. Mark Stryker, and Margaret H. Gelini (collectively, Naegeli), from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC) on March 20, 2009.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, the Appellants have standing to file the Appeal, the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Mary Holder Naegeli appeared in person and by her counsel, Bruce McIntosh. Mr. McIntosh appeared for J. Mark Stryker and Margaret H. Gelini. Doug Nave and Pamela Byers appeared for the Presbytery of San Francisco.

History

This case concerns the Presbytery’s actions surrounding a candidate for the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament. The Candidate was first under care of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area, and since April 1997 has been under care of the Presbytery of San Francisco Presbytery. In April 2004, the Candidate affirmed to the Committee on Preparation for Ministry (CPM) that she was then in a same-sex relationship and was not in compliance with G-6.0106b. In 2004, the CPM did not complete a Final Assessment or certify that the Candidate was ready for examination for ordination pending a call.
On December 5, 2007, the CPM conducted a Final Assessment of the Candidate. At that time, the Candidate presented a Statement of Departure from G-6.0106b, stating: “By my conscience, faith and theology, I cannot and will not accept the terms of this standard.” There was no evidence that the Candidate acknowledged she was living in violation of G-6.0106b. The CPM voted 12-9 to report to the Presbytery that the Candidate was ready for examination for ordination pending a call with a departure.

Before the January stated meeting of Presbytery, a packet containing the Candidate’s Statement of Departure and a December 15, 2007, letter from CPM were distributed. The CPM letter identified and explained two motions (a majority report and a minority report) that would be presented at the Presbytery meeting:

1. That the Presbytery accept the recommendation of the CPM and certify the Candidate as ready for examination effective January 15, 2008, with a departure (majority report).
2. That the Presbytery remove the Candidate from the roll of candidates effective January 15, 2008 (minority report).

Both the majority and minority reports were presented at the Presbytery meeting on January 15, 2008. Following presentation and discussion of both motions, Presbytery held a lengthy debate to substitute the minority report for the main motion (majority report). By a vote of 151-168, the Presbytery declined to substitute the minority report for the main motion, and then by a vote of 167-151, the Presbytery approved the original motion (majority report) to certify the candidate as ready for examination with a departure. The Candidate was not present at the January 15, 2008, Presbytery meeting.

The Presbytery’s decision that the Candidate was ready for examination with a departure was stayed by the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific on February 29, 2008. Naegeli filed a remedial complaint that was tried before the SPJC. On March 20, 2009, the SPJC granted the request to rescind the Presbytery’s certification that the Candidate is “ready for examination.” The SPJC declined to rule that the Candidate’s departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108a because it found the examination of the Candidate had not yet taken place. The SPJC did not order the Presbytery to remove the Candidate from its roll of candidates. On October 30, 2009, this Commission heard oral argument on Naegeli’s Appeal of the SPJC decision.

Specifications of Error

The Specifications of Error have been grouped, renumbered, reordered and restated as follows:

Errors Relating to the Actions of the Presbytery

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred when it mandated that the examination for ordination is the proper time for a presbytery to determine whether a candidate’s departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity.

This Specification of Error is Not Sustained.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred when it failed to instruct the Presbytery to remove the Candidate from the roll of candidates.

This Specification of Error is Not Sustained.

Errors Relating to Constitutional Interpretation of G-6.0106b

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred when it failed to rule that G-6.0106b is a churchwide mandatory ordination standard that cannot be waived by any ordaining body.

This Specification of Error is Sustained in Part and Not Sustained in Part.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred when it declined to instruct the Presbytery to find that the Candidate’s departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the Candidate from ordination.

This Specification of Error is Not Sustained.

Errors Relating to the Actions by the CPM

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred when it determined it had no jurisdiction to review the actions taken by a Committee on Preparation for Ministry.

This Specification of Error is Sustained in Part and Not Sustained in Part.
Specification of Error No. 6. The CPM acted improperly (a) in the manner in which it counseled the Candidate regarding mandatory churchwide ordination standards, (b) by failing to remove the Candidate who remained opposed to the sexual ethic provision of G-6.0106b, and (c) in the manner in which it communicated with the Presbytery when presenting the Candidate’s Statement of Departure to the Presbytery.

This Specification of Error is Not Sustained.

Errors Relating to the Procedures of the SPJC

Specification of Error No. 7. The SPJC erred in the handling of certain documents referred to as “Envelope B” when it refused to permit Appellants to view these documents, refused to admit them into the record at trial and refused to permit trial testimony regarding these documents and CPM’s handling of them.

This Specification of Error is Sustained.

Specification of Error No. 8. The SPJC erred when it refused to admit the minutes and records of the CPM into the record at trial and refused to permit trial testimony regarding the minutes and related actions by the CPM.

This Specification of Error is Sustained.

Specification of Error No. 9. The SPJC erred when it ruled that a reporter was not required at a pretrial conference.

This Specification of Error is Not Sustained.

Decision

Errors Relating to Actions of the Presbytery

Naegeli contends the SPJC erred when it concluded that the proper time to determine whether a candidate has expressed a departure from the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government (G-6.0108a) is at the time of a presbytery’s examination of the candidate. This Commission disagrees with Naegeli and sustains the SPJC on this point. Candidates for ordination to the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament must appear before presbytery to be examined (G-14.0482). The examining presbytery (ordinarily the presbytery placing the call to the candidate (G-14.0481)) shall receive the report of its CPM (or other appropriate committee) and the report shall include a summary of any waivers or exceptions to ordination requirements granted to the candidate (G-14.0482). Departures from ordination requirements are addressed in G-6.0108 and are not the same as exemptions, exceptions or waivers addressed in G-14.0450 and G-14.0470 through G-14.0474.

Examination and ordination of a candidate for ordained office are responsibilities of the governing body in which the officer will serve, which is a presbytery in the instance of candidates for ministry (G-14.0120; G-14.0482). Individual presbyteries may adopt procedures that lodge certain responsibilities with a CPM or similar committee, but under G-14.0482, the candidate must appear before the presbytery to present a statement of personal faith and commitment to ministry. At this time, the presbytery may conduct such further examination of the candidate as it deems necessary, including a consideration of any departures from standards for ordination (G-14.0482; G-6.0108a).

In this case, a report of the CPM was presented to the Presbytery on January 15, 2007, but the Candidate was not present, did not present a brief statement of faith and was not examined by the Presbytery at that meeting. Although a report about the Candidate was made to the Presbytery, including a statement about the Candidate’s intended departure from G-6.0106b, the Candidate has not yet been examined, and the Presbytery has not yet determined whether the Candidate should proceed to ordination and installation, with or without a departure being granted.

The SPJC rescinded the Presbytery’s certification that the Candidate was ready for examination because the language in the motion before the Presbytery was that the Candidate was “ready for examination … with a departure.” The readiness of the Candidate for examination was properly before the Presbytery at the January 15, 2008, meeting. G-14.0450 states that a CPM “shall report to the presbytery when it has certified a candidate ready for examination for ordination, pending a call.” This Presbytery has elected to take the additional, but unnecessary, step of voting on a candidate’s readiness. The Book of Order does not require a statement of the candidate’s assent to the constitutional ordination questions as a prerequisite to certification of readiness for examination. In this case, it would not be necessary for the Presbytery to reconsider the certification of the Candidate’s readiness to be examined at some future date to be determined by the Presbytery. However, all questions regarding the Candidate’s stated departure from G-6.0106b are yet to be determined by the Presbytery and must be considered when the Candidate is examined.

This Commission further notes its instruction in McKittrick v. Session of West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, NY, Remedial Case No. 215-05, Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 272–274:
Errors Relating to Constitutional Interpretation of G-6.0106b

Specifications of Error Nos. 3 and 4 address ordination standards, and specifically requirements found in G-6.0106b. As discussed above, the Candidate has not yet been examined by the Presbytery, and the Presbytery has not yet considered whether the Candidate has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity as set forth in G-6.0108b. The Presbytery must go through the process required in G-6.0108b to determine whether the Candidate has expressed an interpretation of Scripture that represents a serious departure from essentials of Reformed faith and polity, and if it determines that she has, it must then decide whether the departure infringes on the rights and views of others or obstructs the constitutional governance of the church. Freedom of conscience for officers of the church is bounded by standards of the church. A governing body responsible for examination and ordination of officers may grant a departure only when the departure is one that it finds in the context of the entire examination is not a “serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church” (G-6.0108b).

This Commission declines to instruct the Presbytery as requested by Naegeli because all examinations of candidates for ordained office must be conducted on an individual basis.

It would be an obstruction of constitutional governance to permit examining bodies to ignore or waive a specific standard that has been adopted by the whole church, such as the ‘fidelity and chastity’ portion of G-6.0106b, or any other similarly specific provision. On the other hand, the broad reference in G-6.0106b to ‘any practice which the confessions call sin’ puts the responsibility first on the candidate and then on the examining body to determine whether a departure is a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity and the remainder of G-6.0108a with respect to freedom of conscience. The ordaining body must examine the candidate individually. The examining body is best suited to make decisions about the candidate’s fitness for office, and factual determinations by examining bodies are entitled to deference by higher governing bodies in the review process (Bush v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh, Remedial Case 218-10, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 319. See also Buescher et al. v. Presbytery of Olympia, Remedial Case 218-09, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p.316 (discussing 1927 Report of the Special Commission of 1925 (“Swearingen Commission Report”), Minutes, PCUSA, 1927, Part I, pp. 78–79; see also Wier v. Session, Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, Remedial Case 214-05, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339).

Errors Relating to the Actions by the CPM

“A higher governing body shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have [the] power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal” (G-4.0301f). Governing bodies beyond the session delegate particular aspects of their tasks to councils, commissions and committees (G-9.0901). The actions of any presbytery or its council, committees or commissions are subject to review. In this case, the SPJC found it “lacked jurisdiction” to review the actions of the CPM. However, this misapprehends the nature of Naegeli’s Complaint, which alleged errors of the Presbytery acting through its CPM.

All of the errors alleged based on the CPM’s purported “misrepresentations” to the Presbytery are not sustained. The CPM’s presentation to the Presbytery was not as clear as it could have been. However, the record does not support any finding that the CPM “misrepresented” anything to the Presbytery. Nevertheless, because a presbytery is not required to vote on the CPM’s certification that a candidate is ready to be examined, and because no examination of the Candidate has yet occurred, any alleged errors regarding the CPM’s communications to the Presbytery about the Candidate’s departure are deemed to be harmless error and not a basis on which to reverse the SPJC Decision.
Errors Relating to the Procedures of the SPJC

The SPJC erred when it did not include in the trial record the minutes of the CPM and all of the documents and records of the CPM concerning the Candidate’s certification of readiness for examination, including those documents referred to as “Envelope B.” “While a CPM has discretion to use and rely on confidential documents in order to perform its gatekeeping function, ‘secrecy’ is inimical to the candor and trust inherent in a covenant relationship” (Hope, et al. v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Remedial Case No. 216-06, Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 363; see also Bedford-Central Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of New York City, Remedial Case 199-1, 11.0752, Minutes, 1987, Part I, p. 119).

The record in a remedial case consists of those items listed in D-7.0601d, and includes items offered into evidence even if they were not accepted as admissible evidence. D-7.0601b. Thus, all of the papers and records of the CPM and the Presbytery with regard to the certification of the Candidate and her readiness for examination should have been included in the SPJC record. The SPJC may have, in its discretion, determined that the contents of “Envelope B” (or other documents or testimony) contained confidential material that required special handling.12 However, even confidential material may still be part of a trial record.

When there is a question about the admission of proposed evidence that is confidential, a session or permanent judicial commission that is to try the case must review the proposed evidence (whether in the form of documents or testimony) in order to determine whether the proposed evidence should be admitted at the trial. This review should be conducted by the entire session or permanent judicial commission in a closed meeting. If the session or permanent judicial commission decides the proposed evidentiary material should be admitted, then that material must be disclosed to the parties, except that the session or permanent judicial commission may decide in its discretion to communicate the substance of any confidential material without providing the text of the document or testimony or the source of the material, so long as it communicates sufficiently detailed information to permit the affected party to respond to or rebut the material. See discussion of CPM’s treatment of confidential material in Hope, et al. v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Remedial Case No. 216-06, Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 363. A session or permanent judicial commission may insist that confidential information not be disclosed to the public in order to protect reasonable privacy or similar interests of third parties.

If the session or permanent judicial commission determines the proposed evidence should not be admitted, the material should be kept in a sealed envelope or similar container. If there is a subsequent appeal of the admissibility of the disputed material, the sealed material is a part of the record to be reviewed by the appellate permanent judicial commission. A permanent judicial commission considering an appeal concerning the admissibility of the disputed material may decide the material should have been admitted and disclose it to the parties in the manner described above, or it may decide that the material should remain sealed. Other appropriate procedures for handling confidential material may be adopted by a session or permanent judicial commission to fit particular circumstances.

The minutes of the CPM should have been admitted into the record and made a part of it. “The authenticated written records of a governing body or permanent judicial commission shall be admissible in evidence in any proceeding” D-14.0401.

Permanent judicial commissions are required to arrange a verbatim recording “of all testimony and oral proceedings” D-7.0601a. A verbatim recording of all trials is clearly required, but it is unclear whether this provision would require a verbatim record to be made of pretrial proceedings when no oral testimony is taken. In highly controversial matters, where subsequent appeals or other proceedings are likely to occur, it would be a wise practice to make a verbatim record of all pretrial proceedings.

In light of the rulings on Specifications of Error Nos. 1 and 2 above, any error in regard to the trial record or the making of a verbatim record of the pretrial proceedings in this case are deemed to be harmless error and therefore this error is not sustained.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific is AFFIRMED in part and NOT AFFIRMED in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

m. Remedial Case 219-12

Isaiah D. Phinisee, Appellant (Complainant),

v.

Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic, Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 219-12

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by Isaiah D. Phinisee (Phinisee), Appellant (Complainant), from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the South Atlantic (SPJC) dated March 20, 2009.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, Phinisee has standing to file the Appeal, the Appeal was properly and timely filed, and the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Isaiah D. Phinisee was present and represented by David Belding. The Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic (Presbytery), Appellee (Respondent), was represented by James A. Stuckey.

History

This remedial case arises out of a congregation in conflict, St. Luke Presbyterian Church (SLPC), where Phinisee served as the installed pastor. As recommended by the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry (COM), in May 2006, the congregation entered into a relationship with a Bridgebuilder consultant, to help find resolution to conflict in the church. A report of Bridgebuilders, which assessed numerous conflicts within the congregation, was delivered at a congregational meeting on December 12, 2006. This report suggested an approach for reconciling the conflicts. Concerned officers and members of SLPC as well as Phinisee requested the appointment of an Administrative Commission to resolve the conflicts at SLPC, but this request was not granted because the COM intended to handle the matter itself.

The documentary record of the COM, members of the Session, and Phinisee between December 5 and December 12, 2006, reflects a chaotic interchange concerning a desire of three elders for the Session to meet on December 12 and whether the subsequent gathering of session members on that date was an appropriately called and moderated session meeting. However, there is no dispute that on December 8, 2006, three elders requested in writing that Phinisee call a session meeting for December 12, 2006, and Phinisee did not call that meeting. No other constitutional process for calling this meeting was followed.

Immediately following the December 12, 2006, congregational meeting, a meeting of elders called by COM was held and was moderated by a representative of COM. Phinisee was present for a brief period, protested that the meeting was irregular and left. The elders decided to call a congregational meeting for December 31, 2006, for the purpose of dissolving the pastoral relationship as of December 31, 2006. At the congregational meeting on December 31, 2006, the congregation voted to dissolve the pastoral relationship between SLPC and Phinisee.

Phinisee filed a complaint against the Presbytery on January 4, 2007, and amended the complaint on January 10, 2007. Phinisee’s request to stay enforcement of the dissolution was not granted.

In a letter to Phinisee, on January 15, 2007, the moderator of the COM informed him that the COM had taken action on behalf of the Presbytery to concur with the request from the congregation of SLPC to dissolve the pastoral relationship effective December 31, 2006. He was instructed to cease all contact with the Session and congregation. According to the minutes of the Presbytery’s stated meeting on February 3, 2007, the COM recommended that the Presbytery dissolve the pastoral relationship between SLPC and Phinisee effective December 31, 2006, with three months severance pay ending March 31, 2007. Further, these minutes state,
Prior to the vote, Phinisee asked to speak to the issue. After Phinisee had spoken for about one minute, the stated clerk called a point of order saying ‘that the minister does not have the right to be heard without those in opposition being given the same privilege. Phinisee has not made request of Session nor of the COM for such a hearing.’ A call for the question carried as did the motion to dissolve the pastoral relationship. Phinisee filed a protest at that time.

Because the SPJC had failed to act within 90 days from the date of his complaints, Phinisee requested that the GAPJC assume jurisdiction. On October 22, 2007, the GAPJC ordered that the SPJC proceed within 90 days.

On January 28, 2008, Phinisee again requested that the GAPJC assume jurisdiction for failure of the SPJC to act upon the order of the GAPJC within 90 days. The GAPJC responded with a letter on February 19, 2008, denying the request because the SPJC had begun procedures for processing the Remedial Case on January 3, 2008.

After further preliminary proceedings, a pre-trial hearing was held on December 4, 2008, to seek agreement on a statement of facts, share documents and other evidence and set the date for trial as March 19, 2009.

On January 20, 2009, Phinisee filed an additional Complaint against the Presbytery alleging an irregularity or delinquency at a meeting on December 18, 2008. The Presbytery responded to that Complaint on February 5, 2009.

On March 2, 2009, Phinisee filed a motion to continue the trial of the case for forty-five days, citing the death of his lead counsel. On March 6, 2009, the SPJC denied the request for continuance, consolidated the proceedings for the two complaints, reset the date for Phinisee’s trial brief to be submitted and set out stipulations for the trial. The trial was held March 19-20, 2009. The SPJC issued a decision on March 20, 2009 not to sustain the complaints.

Phinisee filed a Notice of Appeal to this Commission on May 2, 2009. This Commission held oral argument on the Appeal on October 30, 2009.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in upholding the Presbytery’s refusal to appoint an administrative commission prior to the dissolution of the pastoral relationship between Phinisee and SLPC.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The decision to appoint an administrative commission by a presbytery is a discretionary function that resides solely with the presbytery (G-11.0103s).

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in finding that the December 12, 2006, session and December 31, 2006, congregational meetings were properly called meetings.

This specification of error is sustained. See Decision below.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred by not entering Phinisee’s request for Stay of Enforcement of the action taken at the December 31, 2006, congregational meeting of the Church.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The grant of a stay of enforcement is a discretionary function and the Book of Order provides no basis for compelling any stay (D-6.0103).

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred by failing to grant Phinisee’s motion for continuance following the death of his lead counsel.

This specification of error is not sustained. The SPJC appropriately responded to the motion, which was made some 60 days after the discovery of the death. The SPJC has the discretion to determine whether a continuance is needed. That discretion was not abused.

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred in finding that the Presbytery’s counsel was properly appointed and could appropriately act in these proceedings.

This specification of error is not sustained.

This Commission agrees with the SPJC that Stuckey’s service on other Presbytery committees dealing with aspects of the conflict at SLPC does not disqualify his service as the Presbytery’s counsel in this case. There is no demonstration in the record that the appointment of counsel for the Presbytery should be re-examined or was improper in any regard.
Specification of Error No. 6. The SPJC erred in not affording Phinisee the relief requested after Presbytery agreed not to contest the appeal.

This specification of error is not sustained.

While counsel for Phinisee listed this specification of error in his brief, it was not in the Notice of Appeal, was a mischaracterization of the Presbytery’s response, and was not properly before this Commission (Congregation for Reconciliation v. Presbytery of Miami, Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 580, 12.071).

Decision

The Book of Order establishes three ways that a special session meeting may be called: (1) by the moderator, when he or she judges it necessary; (2) by the moderator when requested in writing by any two members of the session; or (3) when directed to do so by presbytery (G-10.0201). Three elders requested in writing that a special session meeting be called for December 12, 2006. Phinisee refused to call a meeting for December 12. Nevertheless, members of the session did meet on December 12 with a COM representative present, who moderated the meeting.

The designated responsibilities of a COM under G-11.0502 do not include the power to call a special session meeting. While this responsibility may be directed by a presbytery and delegated to a COM, nowhere in the record is it reflected that this Presbytery delegated this authority to its COM in this particular matter. At oral argument, Presbytery’s counsel conceded that the Presbytery had not given this authority to the COM. The COM was not empowered to call or conduct a session meeting of SLPC for December 12. Thus, actions taken at this December 12, 2006, meeting to call a congregational meeting for December 31, 2006, for the purpose of recommending that the Presbytery dissolve the pastoral relationship as of December 31, 2006, were irregular, as were the actions taken at that December 31, 2006, congregational meeting.

Phinisee did not fulfill his constitutional mandate to call a meeting in conformity with G-10.0201. Although his conduct was a factor in aggravating the circumstances, it was not dispositive of the issues here. In their haste to correct the difficulties between SLPC and Phinisee, the Presbytery, and particularly the COM, acted with serious disregard for the Book of Order.

This case demonstrates the consequences of failing to follow the Book of Order for calling meetings and dissolving pastoral relationships. The flaws of the COM procedure were exacerbated by the failure of the Synod to respond in a timely manner to Phinisee’s grievances. Justice delayed was an impediment to the process and a fair proceeding throughout the course of this matter. Governing bodies are reminded that “all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process” (D-1.0101).

The pastoral relationship between SLPC and Phinisee was dissolved in an irregular manner. However, in light of the Presbytery’s judgment that the pastoral relationship was broken and due to the passage of time, restoration of this relationship is not feasible. Therefore, the Presbytery’s action to dissolve the pastoral relationship is allowed to stand.

The Book of Order, at G-9.0408, provides that a higher governing body that learns of irregularities or delinquencies by a lower governing body may take appropriate actions to rectify the problems. Accordingly, this Commission directs the actions described below.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission’s decision be affirmed in part and modified in part in conformity with this decision.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the pastoral dissolution effected by the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic on February 2, 2007, shall stand.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic establish an administrative commission to review the policies, procedural options, and strategies for dealing with churches and pastors in conflict, that this administrative commission submit a report of its conclusions to the Presbytery by its October, 2010 stated meeting and enter the report in the Presbytery Minutes. The report is to be submitted to the Synod of South Atlantic for its review as part of its annual review of presbytery records (G-9.0407). A copy of the report is to be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This review shall, at a minimum, identify and develop:

1. a plan to utilize denominational resources available for education, support and assistance in matters of polity and conflict;
2. the Presbytery’s policies and process in relation to churches and pastors in conflict;
3. internal policies to insure compliance with the relevant Book of Order provisions;
4. a manual to guide presbytery committees on procedures relevant to their respective functions (or review any existing manual); and

5. a plan to train the Committee on Ministry on Book of Order provisions related to the rights and responsibilities of pastors and sessions, and provisions related to the role of the Committee on Ministry and presbytery in situations of congregational or pastoral conflict.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of South Atlantic report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic report this decision at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-Participants

Janet E. Wolfe,
Appellant (Complainant),

v.

Presbytery of Winnebago,
Appellee (Respondent).

Headnotes

1. Authority of Presbytery: A presbytery has the authority to address the work of a minister of Word and Sacrament through administrative means.

2. Notice and Opportunity to be Heard: When a minister of Word and Sacrament is faced with an administrative proceeding in which the severity of the outcome has the potential to approximate the results of a disciplinary case, the minister shall be furnished fair notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard on the matter at issue.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Appellant Janet E. Wolfe (Wolfe) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies (SPJC) dated January 14, 2009.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Wolfe has standing to file the Appeal, that the Appeal was properly and timely filed and that the Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-8.0105.

Appearances

Wolfe was present and represented by Archibald Wallace, III. The Appellee, Presbytery of Winnebago (Presbytery), was represented by Margaret Zedan.

History

Wolfe, a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbytery, was honorably retired, effective July 31, 2005. Subsequently, she expressed a desire to seek a call and with the encouragement of the Committee on Ministry (COM) began circulating her Personal Information Form (PIF). After her retirement, Wolfe engaged in various ministerial activities. In an October 20, 2006, letter from the Presbytery’s Executive Presbyter, Wolfe was directed to discontinue circulating her PIF and was encouraged to find secular employment. On April 19, 2007, the COM limited the ways in which, and the frequency with which, Wolfe could perform certain ministerial functions and tasks. On August 27, 2007, following Wolfe’s requests to have the limits removed, the COM modified those limits.

On October 12, 2007, Wolfe filed a Complaint with the Synod of Lakes and Prairies in which she alleged that the COM had made the equivalent of a disciplinary finding of wrongdoing and improperly restricted her from fully exercising the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament without a hearing or affording her due process. On December 8, 2007, the officers of the SPJC issued a Preliminary Order dismissing the Complaint because the Complaint did not state a claim upon which relief could be granted (D-6.0305d). On January 15, 2008, Wolfe challenged the Preliminary Order under D-6.0306a. On March 14, 2008, via a conference call, a hearing was held before the SPJC to consider Wolfe’s challenge. The SPJC affirmed the Preliminary Order dismissing her Complaint.

Wolfe appealed the dismissal of her Complaint to the GAPJC. In its Decision dated July 25, 2008, the GAPJC reversed the SPJC Decision, and ordered that the case be remanded to the SPJC for pre-trial and trial proceedings consistent with the Book of Order. Additionally, the SPJC was encouraged to explore alternative means of dispute resolution with Wolfe and the Presbytery.

A trial on the original Complaint was scheduled by the SPJC to be held on January 14, 2009. On October 1, 2008, the Presbytery Stated Clerk notified Wolfe of a “special hearing” which was scheduled for November 15, 2008, during a stated Presbytery meeting to “receive the report of the Committee on Ministry on its recommendations regarding the extent and scope of your pastoral ministry.” The report and recommendations of the COM were not included in that notification to Wolfe. At that “special hearing,” COM’s report and recommendations restricting Wolfe’s ability to fully exercise the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament were presented and received. However, counsel for the Appellee acknowledged during oral argument that the COM’s recommended restrictions were incorrectly communicated to the Presbytery, which resulted in additional restrictions on Wolfe.

In its Decision and Order following the January 14, 2009, trial, the SPJC found in favor of the Presbytery, relying in part upon the special Presbytery hearing of November 15, 2008.

Specifications of Error

This Commission has considered all of the Specifications of Error as presented by the Appellant, but has restated them as follows:

The SJPC erred:

1. In finding that the Presbytery, through its COM, could properly restrict or limit Appellant’s functions as a Minister of the Word and Sacrament in an administrative proceeding.

   This specification of error is not sustained.

2. In finding that there was “fundamental fairness” in the proceedings conducted by the Presbytery and its COM.

   This specification of error is sustained.

3. In considering evidence that occurred subsequent to the actions that were the subject of Appellant’s complaint here-in.

   This specification of error is sustained.

Decision

Specification of Error No. 1: A presbytery has the authority to address the work of a minister of Word and Sacrament through administrative means. Rice v. Presbytery of Philadelphia, Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 172, states: “In light of G-6.0201, G-11.0103k, G-11.0103n, G-11.0103p, G-11.0502b, a presbytery clearly has the right and responsibility to approve or disapprove of the ministerial tasks undertaken by its members, including serving as temporary supply. This power should not be exercised arbitrarily.”

Ministers of Word and Sacrament are members of presbyteries, which “shall designate them to such work as may be helpful to the church in mission, in the performance of which they shall be accountable to the presbytery. They shall be responsible for participation in the larger ministry of the church in addition to the duties to which they are called and designated by the presbytery. ...” (Book of Order, G-6.0201).

Wolfe is accountable to the Presbytery for the performance of her work. Presbytery has the authority to determine how she can be helpful to the mission of the church.
Specification of Error No. 2: The Synod erred in finding that the proceedings of the COM and the November, 2008 hearing conducted by the Presbytery were fundamentally fair. In a letter dated October 1, 2008 Wolfe was informed of a special hearing scheduled for November 15, 2008, at which recommendations would be made “regarding the extent and scope of your pastoral ministry.” At minimum, notice in this case should have included a copy of the COM’s report and recommendations.

Gaba v. Presbytery of Eastern Virginia, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 269, while concerning the work of an administrative commission which did not have the authority to dissolve a pastoral relationship, is instructive in this case. Wolfe, like Gaba, faced an administrative proceeding by a presbytery in which the severity of the outcome had the potential to approximate the results of a disciplinary case. Gaba, at page 271, states:

the specific allegations being made were intentionally withheld from both the pastor and the congregation until the day of the presbytery meeting, thereby depriving them of the opportunity to prepare a reasoned response to the motion to dissolve. While Presbytery was not obligated to provide a full hearing under G-9.0505d at the meeting, it was obligated to provide the interested parties fair notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard on the matters at issue.

Like Gaba, Wolfe did not have fair notice because she did not receive the specific recommendations being made about her (in this case by the COM) until the day of the Presbytery meeting. In addition, because her counsel was unable to attend the November, 2008 Presbytery meeting, Wolfe had requested that the hearing be deferred, but that request was refused. That refusal abridged her right to a fair hearing.

Specification of Error No. 3: Prior to the SPJC trial, the Presbytery attempted to cure the deficiencies alleged in the original Complaint by holding a hearing at its November, 2008 meeting. In rendering its Decision, the SPJC improperly considered actions taken by the Presbytery at its November, 2008, meeting which were not the subject of the original Complaint.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that this case be remanded to the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies with instructions to enter an order directing the Presbytery of Winnebago to commence proceedings at a Presbytery meeting no later than December 31, 2009, to determine the restrictions on Wolfe, if any. The Presbytery shall provide Wolfe reasonable, adequate, and timely notice of the meeting, including the proposed restrictions and their rationale, and an opportunity to be heard at the meeting.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Winnebago report this decision to the Presbytery of Winnebago at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of Winnebago enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod of Lakes and Prairies at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of Lakes and Prairies enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-participants

Commissioner Angel Casasus-Urrutia was absent and did not participate in this case. Commissioner Michael Lukens was recused and did not participate in this case.

o. Remedial Case 219-14

Frederick Nash Westbrook, III
Appellant (Complainant),

v.

Presbytery of New Hope,
Appellee (Respondent).

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 219-14

Headnotes

1. Discretionary authority of presbyteries to validate ministries. Every presbytery has discretionary authority to determine who shall be its ministers and to approve the call of every minister laboring within its bounds. Every presbytery has discretionary authority to validate ministries in accordance with G-11.0403.
2. Accountability in validated ministries. While there is no particular form of employment or entity that is required for validation, a validated ministry must be in a setting where the minister is accountable to some entity other than him- or herself.

3. All calls to ministry must be validated. A call to ministry in the Presbyterian church must be confirmed by the calling community and validated by the presbytery. A call to ministry is never self-validating.

4. Decisions of a permanent judicial commission. Permanent judicial commissions must complete the full written decision and order while in session, and a final decision and order must signed by the moderator and clerk. D-7.0402c. Permanent judicial commissions should not distribute preliminary notes or drafts of decisions, and all final decisions should be dated.

Arrival Statement and Appearances

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal by Reverend Frederick N. Westbrook, III, from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic (SPJC) dated September 2, 2009. This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellant has standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105. The Appellant was present in person and was represented by Archibald Wallace, III. Ann H. Barnhill appeared for the Appellee, the Presbytery of New Hope (Presbytery).

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, Westbrook has standing to appeal, the appeal was timely and properly filed, and the Notice of Appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal in D-8.0105.

History

Westbrook, a member at large of the Presbytery, sought to have his work as an independent media consultant validated as a ministry of the Presbytery. Westbrook provided independent media consulting services to educational institutions and other clients through his solely-owned, for-profit corporation. Westbrook’s application for a validated ministry was considered by the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry on February 14, 2007, and initially approved, but reversed a few days later. The Committee on Ministry did not have authority to validate Westbrook’s ministry and did not make a recommendation to Presbytery as required by G-11.0502b. The Presbytery took no action on the validation of Westbrook’s ministry. On May 24, 2007, Westbrook filed his initial complaint regarding the failure of Presbytery to validate his ministry. His contentions were heard by the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic on July 8, 2008. The SPJC found that the Presbytery had erred by not voting on the Committee on Ministry recommendation, remanded the matter to the Presbytery and directed it to comply with the Book of Order to give Westbrook an opportunity to have his application for a validated ministry heard by the Presbytery.

The Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry reconsidered Westbrook’s application for a validated ministry. The Committee on Ministry recommended that the Presbytery deny Westbrook’s request for a validated ministry. The Presbytery considered Westbrook’s request at its regularly scheduled October 18, 2008, meeting. Westbrook had an opportunity to speak at the Presbytery meeting, and after a debate, the Presbytery voted by written ballot 50 to 26 to disapprove Westbrook’s application for a validated ministry. Westbrook filed a second remedial complaint with the SPJC on or about December 19, 2008. The SPJC heard the second complaint on September 2 or 3, 2009. The SPJC provided handwritten notes of its decision to the parties following the hearing, and issued a typed, decision dated September 3, 2009, on September 22, 2009. Westbrook’s notice of appeal was filed on October 15, 2009. This Commission heard oral arguments on February 26, 2010.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1: The Synod failed to find irregularities in the actions of the Presbytery of New Hope leading up to and in the denial of the Application of Rev. Westbrook for Validated Ministry Status at its October 18, 2008 meeting of the Presbytery.

This Specification of Error Is Not Sustained for the reasons discussed in the Decision below.

Specification of Error No. 2: The Synod failed to find irregularities in the actions of the Presbytery of New Hope in denying Rev. Westbrook fundamental fairness in the handling of Rev. Westbrook’s re-evaluation for Validated Ministry Status in the events leading up to and in the meeting of Presbytery on October 18, 2008.

This Specification of Error Is Not Sustained for the reasons discussed in the Decision below.
Specification of Error No. 3: The Synod failed to correct the irregularity in the actions of New Hope Presbytery in incorrectly determining the meaning and application of the term “accountability” in G-11.0403.

This Specification of Error Is Not Sustained for the reasons discussed in the Decision below.

Specification of Error No. 4: The Synod committed its own irregularity in failing to comply with D-7.0402c in the manner in which it attempted to render its decision.

This Specification of Error Is Not Sustained. D-7.0402c states “A written decision shall be prepared while in session, and shall become the final decision when a copy of the written decision is signed by the moderator and clerk of the permanent judicial commission. A copy of the written decision shall immediately be delivered to the parties to the case by personal service or by certified delivery.” In this case, the SPJC provided the parties with a copy of handwritten notes of the SPJC’s decision immediately following the hearing of the case. These notes were not dated and were not signed by the moderator and clerk of SPJC and could not have been a final decision under D-7.0402c. A signed, written decision was issued by the SPJC about three weeks after the hearing. Issuing undated, unsigned notes of a decision does not comply with the requirements of D-7.0402c. D-7.0402c requires permanent judicial commissions to complete the full written decision and order while in session, and requires a final decision and order to be signed by the moderator and clerk. D-7.0402 also requires permanent judicial commission to deliberate in private. Permanent judicial commissions should not distribute preliminary notes or drafts of decisions, and all final decisions should be dated. The parties, however, agreed that any procedural error by the SPJC in rendering its decision did not have any effect on the substantive issues in this case and any error is not sustained because it is moot.

Decision

Citing Williamson v. Presbytery of Western North Carolina, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 475 (GAPJC Remedial Case 217-7) (2005), Westbrook argued that the Presbytery did not develop additional written criteria for validation of ministries within its bounds and thus violated G-11.0403. The record of this case clearly negates such a contention. Both the February 2006 and May 2006 versions of the Presbytery’s Validated Ministry Handbook (Handbook) contain sufficient written criteria for determining whether to validate the ministry of a member at large. In addition to the expository language in the Handbook describing the Presbytery’s criteria for validating ministries, the Handbook contains additional references to the mission of the Presbytery and its expectations that any validated ministry will support that mission, Scriptural citations, and references to other portions of the Book of Order and The Book of Confessions.

Further, the Handbook includes two application forms: one to be completed by the minister and one to be completed by the entity which the minister would serve. These forms contain specific and detailed questions that give any applicant clear notice of the information the Committee on Ministry would seek and consider in determining whether to recommend to the Presbytery that it validate the ministry. Several of the questions on these forms are preceded by further explanatory material describing the criteria for validating ministries, such as the following material in the “Application Form For Agencies/Organizations”:

Ministers in the Presbyterian Church are required to be accountable to the Presbytery and to the organization or agency which employs[17] the minister. This accountability of ministers to your organization and to the Presbytery is for both work and personal conduct and character.

6.) What formal supervisory structures does your organization use to encourage and monitor the professional development and oversight of this ministry?

7.) What tools or methods will be used to conduct works and character evaluations in your organization?

8.) After receiving written authorization from the minister, will you share performance reviews, disciplinary actions and formal complaints with the Presbytery? How will you do this?

This Commission concludes that the Presbytery’s Handbook, with its explanations, additional criteria and forms, complies with G-11.0403. There is no evidence to sustain any error that the Presbytery lacked sufficient, written criteria for validating ministries.

Westbrook also contended that he was not treated fairly by the Presbytery in its handling of his application for a validated ministry and that he was denied due process by the Presbytery because he did not have notice of the criteria, nor an adequate opportunity to be heard. Any error in the initial process was addressed when the Presbytery started over and reconsidered Westbrook’s application. After a second hearing by the Presbytery, Westbrook again complained to the Synod, but the second time, the SPJC found the Presbytery’s process, although flawed, was minimally sufficient.

Westbrook completed the forms in the Presbytery Handbook and thus had full notice of the criteria the Presbytery used during the validation process. The Presbytery gave Westbrook an ample opportunity to demonstrate that he had been called to a ministry that meets the criteria of G-11.0403 and specifically the accountability provisions of G-11.0403d. The Presbytery considered all of the material Westbrook submitted, including the Handbook forms as completed by Westbrook in his capacity as minister and as the employing entity. Although Westbrook contended that he wanted to submit additional materials, there is no evidence to show that he had any additional materials that he could or would have submitted to cause the Presbytery to reach a different conclusion about the nature of Westbrook’s ministry and the accountability issues surrounding it.

Westbrook had an opportunity to present his case to the Committee on Ministry and on the floor of Presbytery. There is no evidence to show the process was unfair to Westbrook or that he was denied due process.19

Westbrook also complained that the Presbytery’s process for validating his ministry lacked specificity. The Presbytery’s criteria are set forth in the Handbook and its accompanying forms. The criteria, particularly the application and evaluation forms in the Handbook, are specific and unambiguous. For the reasons discussed above, this Commission finds that Presbytery has adequate, specific written criteria for validating ministries.

Additionally, Westbrook argued that the Presbytery’s criteria for validating ministries are too subjective. This assertion conflates the purported subjectivity of the criteria with the Presbytery’s discretionary authority to apply the criteria. Every presbytery has discretionary authority to determine who shall be its ministers and to approve the call of every minister laboring within its bounds (G-11.0402). There is no evidence to show the Presbytery acted arbitrarily, capriciously or abused its discretionary authority in applying the Presbytery’s written criteria to the materials submitted by Westbrook.

Westbrook’s third specification of error addresses his contention that Presbytery misapplied the concept of “accountability” found in G-11.0403. The Presbytery declined to validate Westbrook’s ministry because it found Westbrook could not meet the standard in G-11.0403d that a validated ministry must be “carried on in accountability for its character and conduct to the presbytery and to organizations, agencies, and institutions.” This provision was amended in 1987 by the 199th General Assembly (1987), which added the phrase “and institutions” and removed the words “where appropriate” in order to clarify that ministries of those who were self-employed or acting independently and were not answerable to some other entity for the character and conduct of the ministry should not be validated (Minutes, 1987, Part I, pp. 610, 611).

The Presbytery declined to validate Westbrook’s ministry as a self-employed media consultant working in his one-person, for-profit corporation, where he was accountable for his ministry to no one but himself. The Presbytery’s decision rested upon the principle that a validated ministry must be in a setting where the minister is accountable to an entity other than him- or herself.20 There is no particular form of employment or entity that is required for validation, and a ministry in a for-profit entity, or an independent, self-employed consultant, could be validated where the minister demonstrates that he or she is accountable for the ministry to some entity other than him- or herself and the other criteria for validation are met. Westbrook proposed an advisory board, but the Presbytery concluded the proposed board would not have had sufficient oversight functions for Westbrook’s ministry. Accountability does not exist where the minister would supervise and evaluate him- or herself.

In validated ministries, the Committee on Ministry acts in a manner similar to that of the local church when a minister of Word and Sacrament is called to pastoral service. Whenever a minister is called to any ministry, whether in a particular congregation of the church, in a governing body of the church, as a chaplain, teacher or missionary, or in an organization, entity or agency in which the church has no official participation, the call must be confirmed by the calling community and validated by the presbytery. A call to ministry in the Presbyterian church always involves responsibility for participating in the ministry of the church at large. See G-6.0201. A call to ministry is never self-validating. Westbrook admitted that he “called” himself to work in his own corporation and is answerable to no one but himself.

Therefore, the Presbytery did not err in its decision not to validate Westbrook’s proposed ministry as an independent media consultant. The SPJC did not err in refusing to reverse the decision of the Presbytery.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic is sustained.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that after receiving this Decision and Order, the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic shall report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its next regularly scheduled meeting, that the Synod enter this Decision and order in its entirety in the Synod’s minutes and that an excerpt from the Synod minutes showing entry of this Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that after receiving this Decision and Order, the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New Hope shall report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its next regularly scheduled meeting, that the Presbytery enter this Decision and order in its entirety in the Presbytery’s minutes and that an excerpt from the Presbytery minutes showing entry of this Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of General Assembly.

Absences and Non Participants

Commissioner Angel Casasus-Urrutia and Commission Bradley C. Copeland were not present and took no part in the hearing, deliberations or decision of the Commission in this case. Commissioner Yun Jin Kim recused himself and took no part in the hearing, deliberations or decision of the Commission in this case.

Dated this 28th day of February, 2010 at Louisville, Kentucky
This remedial case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by Appellant, Session of Caledonia Presbyterian Church, from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies on September 11, 2009.

Appellant and Appellee having agreed to dismissal of the current action upon their mutual stipulation to certain facts and conditions,

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the following agreement of the Parties is made the Consent Order of this Commission:

1. This case shall be and hereby is dismissed, and the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies dated September 11, 2009, here on appeal, shall be and hereby is vacated, all without prejudice to the rights of either party.

2. The Stay of Enforcement issued herein on October 29, 2009, shall be and hereby is dissolved.

3. Action taken by Respondent-Appellee to date with respect to the candidacy of Mr. Scott Anderson does not constitute approval of any departure from church standards that he might declare in examination for ordination at any time in the future. Insofar as Mr. Anderson may declare one or more departures from church standards during examination, either on his own initiative or in response to questions posed during examination, Appellee will expressly record the substance of those declarations and actions taken with respect thereto.

4. Appellee will conduct any ordination examination of Mr. Anderson at a regularly called meeting in which the examination is duly docketed and noticed in advance to its members and church contact persons, as is customary, or will provide written notice to its members and church contact persons not less than twenty-one (21) days prior to any meeting that is specially called for the purpose of such examination. In either case, Appellee will include with such notice a copy of all written statements, reports and other documents to be submitted by it, any of its committees, and/or Mr. Anderson, to its members and church contact persons in connection with that examination.

5. Appellee will provide an opportunity for a full and complete examination of Mr. Anderson, consistent with the procedures set forth by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly in Remedial Case 219-11, Naegeli v. Presbytery of San Francisco (November 2, 2009).

6. Appellee, through its Stated Clerk or her designee, will ensure that it is prepared to make a verbatim recording of the examination of Mr. Anderson and any debate thereon. If the will of the body at the meeting in which the examination is held is to make such a recording, Appellee will ensure that that recording is preserved for inclusion in the record to be filed in connection with any judicial review of that examination and debate. Appellee’s Committee of Counsel will not oppose the making of such a recording in this case.

7. If Appellee approves Mr. Anderson for ordination, it will not proceed to ordain Mr. Anderson until not less than forty-five (45) days have elapsed from the date of such approval, to provide the Appellant and any other proper parties an opportunity to file a remedial case in accordance with the spirit of the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly in Remedial Case 215-5, McKittrick v. West End Presbyterian Church (March 3, 2003).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of Caledonia Presbyterian Church report this Consent Order to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full Consent Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Consent Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of John Knox Presbytery.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of John Knox Presbytery report this Consent Order to the members and elder-commissioners of John Knox Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that John Knox Presbytery enter the full Consent Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Consent Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies.

Dated the 28th day of February, 2010.

Endnotes

1. In this case, the parties agreed the challenge is to the Resolution itself and not to the AC’s exercise of the powers granted in the Resolution.
2. Presbyteries are cautioned that the use of ambiguous language which implies that Constitutional safeguards have been omitted or replaced is not helpful.

5. If the Administrative Commission violated the rights of ministers or members under G-6.0108, a remedial action could be brought to address any such infringement.

6. Presbyteries may delegate to their Committees on Ministry the authority to appoint administrative commissions to ordain ministers of Word and Sacrament (Interpretation of G-11.0502b Regarding Committee on Ministry’s Authority to Approve Commissions for Ordination, Minutes, 2006, Part I, Item 05-26, p. 441).

7. The AC, acting as a session under G-10.0302b(4), had the power to delete from the rolls of the church the name of a member who has renounced jurisdiction of the church, but the issue in this case is not the management of the church’s membership rolls, but rather the authority to presume renunciation under G-6.0702.

9. The question of whether the type of examination contemplated by G-11.0402 is required for restoration has not been raised in this case, is not before this Commission, and need not be addressed by the SPJC on remand.

10. Chapter 14 of the Book of Order underwent substantial revision in 2006 by the 217th General Assembly, and hence the Presbytery may have believed that it was still required to vote on the Candidate’s certification of readiness for examination.

11. A presbytery that finds that a candidate is not in compliance with the Book of Order should consider whether to remove the candidate from the roll of candidates, but is not required to do so. Sheldon, et al. v. Presbytery of West Jersey, Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 589; see also Stewart v. Mission Presbytery, Remedial Case 218-04, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 305.

12. The treatment of confidential material as discussed in Presbytery of Elizabeth v. Finn, Disciplinary Case No. 213-09, Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 584, is instructive in this remedial case.

13. This conclusion is consistent with the Authoritative Interpretation on G-9.0505b issued by the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Minutes. p. 234).

14. The record in this case contained undated documents, and the SPJC Decision recites conflicting dates. Counsel for the parties sent undated correspondence. Thus, this Commission is left with a confusing record of the procedural history of this case.

15. In this case, we need not decide whether a presbytery that relies only on the criteria set forth in G-11.0402 is acting within constitutional bounds.

16. Two annual reporting forms are also included in the presbytery’s Handbook and both must be completed annually by the minister and the entity which the minister serves once a ministry has been validated.

17. The Presbytery explained that any reference to an “employing” agency or organization could encompass various forms of affiliation between a minister and the agency, organization or other entity the minister would serve in a validated ministry and is not intended to be limited to narrow secular understandings of the term “employment” relevant to various labor or tax laws.

18. To the extent that any of Westbrook’s due process arguments are based on a purported failure by the Presbytery to adhere to its own Handbook, such an error would not rise to the level of a Constitutional violation.

19. The SPJC Decision made an unexplained distinction between the spirit and letter of the law with respect to “fundamental fairness.” This Commission has previously distinguished the principles of “due process” relevant in disciplinary cases from the principles of “fundamental fairness” relevant in remedial cases. See, e.g., Lewis v. Presbytery of New York, (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 133, paragraph 11.066). Although due process may require more, both due process and fundamental fairness require notice, an opportunity to be heard, and a fair, unbiased consideration of the issues.

20. A presbytery could provide the necessary oversight functions through its Committee on Ministry or another group within the presbytery. While it is not likely to be feasible or reasonable to expect presbyteries to accept such responsibilities for every minister who seeks a validated ministry, presbyteries could provide such a service if they elected to do so. In so doing, the presbytery would be accepting responsibilities beyond those set forth in G-11.0403.

B. Governing Bodies Statements of Compliance with General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission Decisions

Section IV.B.2.d. of the Organization for Mission requires that when a decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission contains an order directed to another governing body, the Stated Clerk report to the General Assembly a statement of the governing body’s compliance. Below is a report of the statements of compliance received by the Stated...
Clerk from the governing bodies for cases decided by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission during the year 2004-2006.

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Trinity is hereby affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Washington report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Trinity report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Trinity stated meeting on February 20, 2008, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Washington on March 11, 2008.

2. 218-21 Robert E. Leech, as President and CEO of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, Complainants, v. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Respondent

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission dismisses the complaint in the above-captioned matter on the grounds that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Case dismissed. No compliance required.

3. 219-01 (Formerly 218-16) Sharon Moody, Sandra Hillquist, Tracey Carper, and Mary Williams, Complainants v. Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, Respondent

By letter dated January 9, 2009 from complainants’ counsel, this commission has been advised that the matter has been settled. Therefore, at the request of complainants, the case is hereby dismissed with prejudice on March 2, 2009.

Case dismissed. No compliance required.

4. 219-02 (formerly 218-17) Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta, Complainant/Appellee v. Veronica L. Ransom, Respondent/Appellant

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the South Atlantic is hereby affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the South Atlantic report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of the South Atlantic stated meeting on May 5, 2009, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic on February 21, 2009.

5. 219-03 (formerly 218-17) Robert Sundquist, Mark Hawke, Elise Hawke, Charles Lupton and Di Lupton, Appellants (Complainants), v. Heartland Presbytery, Appellee (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America is hereby sustained.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Heartland report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.
The decision was reported at the Synod of Mid-America stated meeting on April 24, 2009, and the stated meeting of Heartland Presbytery on October 30, 2008.

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

    IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Final Order of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies dated March 14, 2008, be reversed and this case is remanded for pre-trial and trial proceedings consistent with the Book of Order. The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies is also encouraged to explore with Janet E. Wolfe and the Presbytery of Winnebago alternative means to resolve the dispute prior to trial.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Winnebago report this decision to the Presbytery of Winnebago at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of Winnebago enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod of Lakes and Prairies at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of Lakes and Prairies enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of Lakes and Prairies stated meeting on September 27, 2008, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Winnebago on September 9, 2008.

7. 219-05 (formerly 218-20) Jae G. Lee, Ji Suk Kim, and Hyung Young Choi, Appellants (Complainants), v. Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi, Appellee (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

    IT IS ORDERED that the portions of the SPJC decision that are before this Commission are set aside and this case is remanded for further proceedings consistent with this Decision.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the SPJC is instructed to conduct a pre-trial conference or other proceeding(s) with the parties to clarify issues with respect to the current status of the parties under G-6.0702 before commencing any further judicial proceedings in this matter. The parties are cautioned that in the event this matter is re-tryed, they should take steps to assure that the Record is clear with respect to actions of the parties.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lincoln Trails report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of Lincoln Trails stated meeting on January 31, 2009, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Mid-West Hanmi on December 8, 2008.

8. 219-06 Hyung K. Yun, Yoon Soo Kim, Young Yoon Kim, Kwan Young Lee, Seung G. Ahn, In Bae Chun, Richard Yun, and Kee Ho Lim, Appellants (Complainants), v. The Session of the Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey, Appellee (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

    IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Presbytery of Newark Permanent Judicial Commission is reinstated.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Newark report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

    IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Northeast report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Northeast stated meeting on October 16, 2009, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Newark on March 21, 2009.

9. 219-07 The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Wyoming, Appellee (Complainant), v. Gordon R. J. King, Appellant (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

    IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains is hereby reversed.
IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Wyoming report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Rocky Mountains stated meeting on April 25, 2009, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Wyoming on May 1, 2009.

10. 219-08 David Bierschwale, David Lenz, and Carol Shanholzer, Appellants (Complainants), v. Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area, Appellee (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies is hereby affirmed in part and reversed in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this case is remanded to the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission for trial as to Specifications of Error Nos. 4 and 5 consistent with this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of the Rocky Mountains stated meeting on April 25, 2009, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Wyoming on May 1, 2009.

11. 219-09 Richard L. Davis Appellant (Accused), v. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of San Francisco, Appellee (Complainant)

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Synod of the Pacific is hereby reversed in part and affirmed in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the judgment of the Synod of the Pacific finding Davis guilty on charge 1 is reversed, and the Presbytery of San Francisco’s judgment of not guilty on charge 1 is reinstated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Synod of the Pacific’s affirmation of the Presbytery of San Francisco’s judgment of guilt on charges 2 and 3 is affirmed for the reasons stated in this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the additional censure imposed by the Synod of the Pacific is removed, and the original censure imposed by the Presbytery of San Francisco is reinstated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this decision to the Presbytery of San Francisco at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of San Francisco enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod of the Pacific at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of the Pacific enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of the Pacific stated meeting on October 8, 2009 and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of San Francisco on September 15, 2009.

12. 219-10 Andrew McDonald and Jimmy Shelbourn, Appellants (Complainants), v. Presbytery of Homestead, Appellee (Respondent).

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

On December 14, 2009, however, the Stated Clerk received a communication from the appellants requesting dismissal of the appeal and the accompanying Stay of Enforcement. The request of the appellants is hereby granted, and the case is dismissed.

Case dismissed. No compliance required.
13. 219-11 Mary Holder Naegeli, J. Mark Stryker, and Margaret H. Gelini, Appellants (Complainants), v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Appellee (Respondent)

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific is AFFIRMED in part and NOT AFFIRMED in part.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision is scheduled to be reported at the stated meeting of the Synod of the Pacific on May 5, 2010, and was reported at the Presbytery of San Francisco stated meeting on November 10, 2009.

14. 219-12 Isaiah D. Phinisee, Appellant (Complainant), v. Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic, Appellee (Respondent)

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission’s decision be affirmed in part and modified in part in conformity with this decision.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the pastoral dissolution effected by the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic on February 2, 2007, shall stand.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic establish an administrative commission to review the policies, procedural options, and strategies for dealing with churches and pastors in conflict, that this administrative commission submit a report of its conclusions to the Presbytery by its October, 2010 stated meeting and enter the report in the Presbytery Minutes. The report is to be submitted to the Synod of South Atlantic for its review as part of its annual review of presbytery records (G-9.0407). A copy of the report is to be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This review shall, at a minimum, identify and develop:

1. a plan to utilize denominational resources available for education, support, and assistance in matters of polity and conflict;
2. the presbytery’s policies and process in relation to churches and pastors in conflict;
3. internal policies to ensure compliance with the relevant Book of Order provisions;
4. a manual to guide presbytery committees on procedures relevant to their respective functions (or review any existing manual); and
5. a plan to train the Committee on Ministry on Book of Order provisions related to the rights and responsibilities of pastors and sessions, and provisions related to the role of the Committee on Ministry and presbytery in situations of congregational or pastoral conflict.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of South Atlantic report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic report this decision at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of South Atlantic stated meeting on October 15, 2009, and at the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic on December 2, 2009. The presbytery stated clerk also certified that the presbytery has established an administrative commission to review presbytery policies, provide COM training, and report back to the presbytery and synod by October 2010.

15. 219-13 Janet E. Wolfe, Appellant (Complainant), v. Presbytery of Winnebago, Appellee (Respondent)

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that this case be remanded to the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies with instructions to enter an order directing the Presbytery of Winnebago to commence proceedings at a Presbytery meeting no later than December 31, 2009, to determine the restrictions on Wolfe, if any. The Presbytery shall provide Wolfe reasonable, adequate, and timely notice of the meeting, including the proposed restrictions and their rationale, and an opportunity to be heard at the meeting.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Winnebago report this decision to the Presbytery of Winnebago at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery of Winnebago enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.
IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod of Lakes and Prairies at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod of Lakes and Prairies enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of Lakes and Prairies stated meeting on January 17, 2010, and the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Winnebago on November 14, 2009.

16. 219-14 Frederick Nash Westbrook, III, Appellant/Complainant, v. Presbytery of New Hope

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic is sustained.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that after receiving this Decision and Order, the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic shall report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its next regularly scheduled meeting, that the Synod enter this Decision and order in its entirety in the Synod’s minutes and that an excerpt from the Synod minutes showing entry of this Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that after receiving this Decision and Order, the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New Hope shall report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its next regularly scheduled meeting, that the Presbytery enter this Decision and order in its entirety in the Presbytery’s minutes and that an excerpt from the Presbytery minutes showing entry of this Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of General Assembly.

This decision was reported at the Synod of Mid-Atlantic stated meeting on March 8, 2010, and on the docket to be reported at the July 20, 2010, stated meeting of the Presbytery of New Hope.

C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is composed of nine voting members as established by the Book of Order, G-13.0112 and G-18.0301. The nine voting members must be former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church (G-13.0112a). The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is a member ex officio without vote.

With regard to questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order, the advisory committee’s responsibilities are set out in G-13.0112c and d as follows:

  c. All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

  d. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations. Such recommendations may include proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them.

With regard to proposed amendments to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the advisory committee’s mandated responsibilities are set out in G-18.0301b, as follows:

  b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposed amendments to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0112), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendation from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

2. Process and Procedures, Responsibilities and Relationships

The advisory committee does not interpret the Constitution. The role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as its title suggests and as its constitutional mandate clearly establishes, is to advise the General Assembly. The committee’s advice has no authority until and unless it is approved by the General Assembly. With respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution, the advisory committee focuses on clarity of proposed language, and consistency of the proposed amendment with the remainder of the Constitution. The advisory committee occasionally finds that the intent of the proposal is already inherent in other provisions of the Constitution or that it could be achieved by slight changes in language, by placing the amendment in a different section, or by different language entirely. The advisory committee sometimes has suggested such changes in order to avoid inconsistencies within the Book of Order, and also to make as few changes as possible in existing paragraphs and in section numbering.
With respect to requests for interpretation, as well as comments on overtures, the advisory committee seeks to provide advice that is based on constitutional issues, not on the substance of the issues at hand. In many circumstances, the question has been answered by earlier interpretations and does not require action by the General Assembly. In these cases, the inquirer is notified of the standing interpretation. In order to make clear the questions raised, the advisory committee has modified its past practice of reprinting the entire request received (which in some instances contained material not germane to the question itself), and has focused the presentation of the request on the question presented, together with the advisory committee’s findings and recommendations. If the question was not clear from the request received, the advisory committee has sought clarification from the individual transmitting the request.

All overtures and reports containing proposed amendments and all requests for interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly must be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112c). This 120-day time period allows the advisory committee the time to consider and research carefully each proposed amendment and request. Those requests that the advisory committee believes meet this constitutional criterion.

The advisory committee completed its preparatory work for the General Assembly in two meetings. At a two-day fall meeting, held in conjunction with the OGA Fall Polity Conference, we were able to begin work on our task of preparing for the 219th General Assembly (2010). At its spring five-day meeting, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution concluded its work of preparing responses to constitutional issues to be considered by the 219th General Assembly (2010).

After it has received and considered the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the General Assembly is free to take whatever action it deems wise on proposed amendments, requests for interpretations, and referrals.

The primary focus for the advisory committee is to fulfill its constitutional function to provide advice to the General Assembly concerning overtures that seek to amend the Constitution, and concerning requests for interpretation of the Constitution.

3. Consultations

Since the 218th General Assembly (2008), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has consulted with a number of General Assembly groups as those groups worked on their areas. The ACC provided feedback to the Sexual Misconduct Review Team on their proposed Updated Sexual Misconduct Policy and Procedures (Item 03-26).

The ACC also consulted with the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations regarding the Ecumenical Agreement with the Roman Catholic Church “regarding mutual recognition of Baptism from the Catholic/Reformed Bilateral dialogue” (Item 07-05 from the 218th General Assembly (2008)).

Finally, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has consulted with the Office of the General Assembly regarding the process to be utilized if the new proposed Form of Government is approved by the 219th General Assembly (2010) and proposals to approve the current Form of Government are also approved. Commissioners will note the committee’s analysis of the effect such proposed change to the current Form of Government would have on the new Proposed Form of Government as italicized language at the close of each item of business proposing a change to the current Form of Government.

4. Editorial Corrections

The Organization for Mission provides, at IV.B.2.c., that the Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by the presbyteries. The following changes have been made by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

Editorial Change 001 from Valerie Small, the Assistant Stated Clerk, manager, GA Nominations, has asked the ACC to authorize an editorial correction to G-13.0111a.

Small asked whether an editorial correction should be made in G-13.0111a. in the third sentence from the end of the paragraph: “These appointments shall be in consultation with the synod through its regular nominating process and shall reflect the commitment of the inclusive policies of the General Assembly.” She suggested that it was the intent that both nominations to the GANC and appointments for other vacancies “shall be in consultation with the synod...” She asked whether the addition of the words “nominations or” be added before “appointments.” The sentence would then read “These nominations or appointments shall be in consultation with the synod through its regular nominating process and shall reflect the commitment of the inclusive policies of the General Assembly.” With respect to the question presented on the editorial correction, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the suggested editorial correction changes the meaning of the text. “Appointments” pertains only to mid-term appointments to vacancies during the year caused by death, resignation, or inability to act and does not apply to nominations made for the regular election cycle.

With respect to the comment that the word “appoint” should be “nominate” in the fourth sentence, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that preceding editions of the Book of Order use the word “nominate” and the amendment that was approved in 2002 intended that the appointment process be replaced with a nomination and election process. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the correction proposed by Small and directs the correction be made by the Stated Clerk in future editions.

Editorial Change 002 from Samuel Marshall III, general presbyter, Presbytery of Salem, asking if the Advisory Committee on the Constitution could editorially change the wording at G-14.0550.

The ACC’s discussion of this request centered on the various meanings of the word “call”. In that discussion they noted the following quote from the 1992 report from the Call System Task Force:

> The term ‘call’ is used in three ways in this proposal:

1. The call of God to be a Christian, a call that is made to all people. The sign and seal of this call and our response to it is our Baptism.

2. The call to service in the church that comes to each Christian and is distinctive to each. For those baptized as a child, this call is recognized in confirmation and commissioning; a person baptized upon profession of faith has this call at baptism. For some people this call is directed to a “church vocation.”

3. The call to a particular place of service or employment at a particular time. This third sense of call is used in the naming of the call system. (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 984)

The ACC believes that in G-14.0550 the words relating to “call” refer to the second and third meanings, the call of a pastor to a particular place of service or employment. They do not believe that this “call” refers only to installed positions for pastors; thus, its use in G-14.0550 about temporary pastoral positions is still appropriate and correct.

Using “terms of call” only for installed positions is a practice a presbytery could choose to do; that would make it easier for all concerned to distinguish between temporary and installed positions. The ACC believes the use in this paragraph is not incorrect and does not require a change.

5. Special Thanks

On behalf of the 218th General Assembly (2008), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution expresses its thanks and appreciation to the Elders Alyson Janke and James Wilson for their dedicated service to the church through membership on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. Each of them has brought profound gifts, and deep dedication, to the work of the committee.

The advisory committee is grateful for the staff assistance of the Reverend Mark Tammen, Associate Stated Clerk and director for the Department of Constitutional Services, and Joanne Green, administrative assistant for the Department of Constitutional Services.

Finally, the advisory committee is deeply grateful for the insightful leadership Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons, who serves as an ex officio member of the advisory committee. We are grateful for the opportunity to serve with him.

D. Advisory Committee on Litigation

I. Narrative

Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys. Each year the General Assembly elects one member to a six-year term. Each member is eligible for reelection to an additional term, but in no case may a member serve for a period exceeding twelve consecutive years of service. The General Assembly Nominating Committee nominates persons for the ACL who fit the criteria for eligibility. The Advisory Committee on Litigation was established by the 200th General Assembly (1988) to advise the Stated Clerk on matters relating to litigation.

The consultations typically take place via telephone conference calls after committee members have been provided copies of all pertinent pleadings, orders, and information. The committee ordinarily meets face-to-face at least once each year. It is normally consulted whenever the Stated Clerk is asked to participate in litigation involving matters of civil and religious liberty, church and state relations, and other matters related to the mission and interests of the church.
II. Disposition of Cases Reported in 2008

In Support of Rodi Alvarado Pena

Appeal before the Attorney General

On January 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined an amicus curiae brief to Attorney General John Ashcroft in support of asylum seeker Rodi Alvarado Pena. The brief requested that the attorney general affirm the decision of the immigration judge granting her application for political asylum based on an undisputed record reflecting years of severe domestic violence and the failure of the government of Guatemala to respond to Alvarado’s repeated efforts to obtain protection from the abuse. The brief was consistent with PC(USA) policies on immigration and domestic violence. The brief was limited to the finalization of a Standing Rule interpreting asylum based on membership of a particular social group. This brief addressed only the question of Alvarado’s eligibility for asylum based on her membership in a particular social group defined by her gender, her marital status, and her status as a victim of domestic violence.

On December 16, 2009—fourteen years after fleeing her home country of Guatemala, where she suffered a decade of brutal domestic violence—Rodi Alvarado’s legal battle finally concluded when an immigration judge granted her asylum.

III. Cases Joined (2006–08)

A. People of the State of New York v. John Taylor
New York Court of Appeals
New York Court of Appeals Decision October 23, 2007

On November 2, 2006, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk, joined a variety of religious leaders on an amicus brief against the use of capital punishment. In this case, the defendant was convicted of six counts of first-degree murder and sentenced to the death penalty. In his appeal of the sentence, the defendant asserted that there were procedural errors in the sentencing phase of his trial.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has long held positions against capital punishment and joined the amicus brief on that basis.

On October 23, 2007, the New York State Court of Appeals ordered that the death sentence be vacated and returned the case to the New York State Supreme Court for re-sentencing. New York has since repealed its use of capital punishment and Taylor was sentenced to life in prison.

B. The Presbyterian Church of Sudan et al., v. Talisman Energy Inc, and the Republic of Sudan
U. S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit

On March 7, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined scholars and former prosecutors with the international criminal for the former Yugoslavia and the Special Court for Sierra Leone submitting to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit an amicus brief arguing that Talisman Energy could be held liable for its participation in international law violations under either federal common law or international law. The brief argued that a judicial dismissal for failure to prove that the defendants had direct knowledge that their actions aided and abetted the genocide committed by the Sudanese government failed to allow the complainant ample opportunity to present evidence to that issue.

The plaintiffs, who are current and former residents of Southern Sudan, allege that they were victims of genocide, crimes against humanity, and other violations of international law as a result of acts perpetrated by the Canadian energy company, Talisman Energy, Inc., and the government of Sudan.

In September of 2009, the 2nd Circuit issued an opinion affirming the trial court’s summary dismissal on the complaint for failure to show proof that the defendants had direct knowledge that their actions aided and abetted the genocide committed by the Sudanese government.

The complainants have filed a Petition for Certiorari with the 2nd Circuit for appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court and are awaiting notice of Certiorari.

State of Colorado Supreme Court
Colorado State Court Decision May 1, 2007

On March 15, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined sixteen other religious and civil rights organizations submitting to the Colorado Supreme Court an amicus brief supporting the constitutionality of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA). The Board of Trustees of the Town of Foxfield adopted an ordinance (“Ordinance No. 3”) on March 22, 2001, which made it unlawful to park more than five motor vehicles for more than fifteen minutes within 1,000 feet of a private residential property on more than two occasions during any thirty day period.

After receiving complaints concerning a catholic parish church’s parking, the town filed a lawsuit asking the Arapahoe County District Court to issue a permanent injunction and a declaratory judgment against the Archdiocese of Denver. On August 1, 2002, the Archdiocese of Denver filed a motion arguing that Ordinance No. 3 violates the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000 (“RLUIPA”), Colorado’s “Freedom to Gather for Worship Act,” and the U.S. and Colorado constitutions and was thus void and unenforceable. The town filed a cross motion arguing, among other things, that RLUIPA is unconstitutional.

The trial court rejected the archdiocese’s RLUIPA defense. In August 2006, the Colorado Court of Appeals’ decision handed the archdiocese a major victory by allowing the church’s RLUIPA claims to go forward, noting that “Ordinance No. 3” was not “neutral and generally applicable” and remanded the case back to the trial court. In May 2007 the Court of Appeals’ ruling was upheld when the Supreme Court of Colorado denied the Town of Foxfield’s petition for Writ of Certiorari.

D. Shafiq Rasul et al., v. Donald Rumsfeld et al.
U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit
U. S. Court of Appeals Decision January 11, 2008

On March 16, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined other religious organizations submitting to the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia an amicus brief in supporting the plaintiffs (Rasul) in their suit against the U.S. government. The plaintiffs were being held in a detention center in Guantanamo and asserted that the U.S. was in violation of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) by acts that inhibited the prisoners’ religious faith. The defendants (U.S. government and its agents) assert that RFRA is applicable to areas within the United States territory, but outside its sovereignty that, in this case, is the military base at Guantanamo Bay.

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a long history of support of religious freedom including participation in drafting the Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

In their decision on January 11, 2008, the Court of Appeals affirmed the district court’s decision that the plaintiffs rights under RFRA were not violated stating “We believe that RFRA’s use of ‘person’ should be interpreted consistently with the Supreme Court’s interpretation of ‘person’ in the Fifth Amendment and ‘people’ in the Fourth Amendment to exclude nonresident aliens. Because the plaintiffs are aliens and were located outside sovereign United States territory at the time their alleged RFRA claim arose, they do not fall with the definition of ‘person’.” In April 2009, the Court of Appeals on remand from the U.S. Supreme Court held that plaintiffs were not among the protected “person[s]” for whom RFRA, 42 U.S.C.§ 2000bb-1(a)–(b), creates a private right of action to remedy unjustifiable government burdens on the exercise of religion. The Court of Appeals interpreted that the U.S. Supreme court decision in Boumediene v. Bush, 128 S. Ct. 2229 (2008), limited any extraterritorial reach to the Suspension Clause of the U.S. Constitution and not to any other constitutional provision including any interpretation of the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment that, by extension, would help interpret the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA). In short, the U.S. Court of Appeals refused to apply RFRA to persons who are nonresident aliens detained in Guantanamo because they are not considered “persons” or “people” under the U.S. Constitution.

E. The District of Columbia and Adrian Fenty, Mayor, v. Dick Anthony Heller
U. S. Supreme Court Case No. 07-290

On January 11, 2008, the Stated Clerk joined other religious organizations in submitting to the United States Supreme Court an amicus brief affirming the constitutional right of the District of Columbia to regulate handguns. For decades, many amici have supported meaningful handgun regulations that amici believe are critical to protecting life, liberty, and property. Amici thus have a particular interest in the manner in which the decision below struck down the District of Columbia’s handgun law, because it threatens their ability to seek and obtain effective protection through firearm regulation at the state and local level.

The PC(USA) has a long history of supporting federal and state regulation of handguns.

On June 26, 2008, the U.S. Supreme Court held that 2nd Amendment to the U.S. Constitution protects an individual’s right to possess a firearm for private use in federal enclaves such as the District of Columbia.

F. Episcopal Church Cases
California Supreme Court

On May 4, 2008, the Stated Clerk joined in an amicus brief with other denominational partners to the California Supreme Court regarding a schism and property dispute with several cases involving the Episcopal Church. These cases were combined and appealed to the California Supreme Court to clarify the standards for determining which faction in a church property dispute had legal property interest.

The appellants appealed to the California Supreme Court arguing that California should follow “neutral principals of law” and only look at secular documents to determine which faction has the legal property interest. The amicus brief filed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) argued that Federal constitutional jurisprudence allowing states to apply “neutral principals of law” does not abrogate the right of states to apply a “principle of [church] government” approach to resolve disputes over church property. The brief argued that the California courts may, under the U.S. Constitution, apply its traditional “principle of government” approach to resolving disputes over church property or it may apply a “neutral principals of law” approach. If the California Supreme Court applied the “neutral principals of law” approach, it is not limited to an analysis of only secular legal documents such as deeds or corporate charters alone but has been explicitly instructed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Jones v. Wolf (1979) 443 U.S. 595, 602 to take into account an express trust within the denomination’s own constitution.

On January 5, 2009, the California Supreme Court issued an opinion that stated when the court applies neutral principals of law to resolve a property dispute without reference to church doctrine, the court should consider sources such as the deeds to the property in dispute, the local church’s articles of incorporation, the general church’s constitution, canons, and rules, and relevant statutes, including statutes specifically concerning religious property, such as California Corporations Code [which provides that the governing instruments of a general church may impress a trust on property of a local church].

IV. Cases Joined (2008–10)

A. Episcopal Church Cases
Virginia Supreme Court

On December 21, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with a variety of denominational religious partners to the Virginia Supreme Court challenging an old Virginia statute on U.S. Constitution 1st Amendment issues. The 1867 Virginia statute that was challenged delineates a process by which a congregation may determine which branch of a denomination to which it will belong or how an independent congregation will organize itself to own and hold property.

The amici argued that the Virginia state statute violated the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution in that it displaced a church’s own rules of self governance in determining property ownership and voting rights, it required civil courts to conduct an extensive inquiry into fundamentally religious questions, and it was neither “generally applicable,” “neutral,” nor was it the least restrictive means to serve a compelling state interest.

The Virginia Supreme Court has not yet issued a decision in this case.

B. People of the State of Michigan v. Edward Pinkney

On March 18, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with several partners on behalf of defendant Rev. Pinkney in People of the State of Michigan v. Edward Pinkney. According to the Court of Appeals: “following a jury trial, Rev. Pinkney was convicted of giving valuable consideration to influence the manner of voting by a person, MCL 168.931(1)(a), influencing a person voting an absent voter ballot, MCL 168.932(h), and three counts of possessing, returning, or soliciting to return an absent voter ballot, MCL 168.932(f). The trial court sentenced defendant to five years’ probation with a delayed jail sentence of 365 days. Subsequently, after finding that defendant violated the terms of his probation, the trial court revoked defendant’s probation and sentenced him to 3 to 10 years’ imprisonment. In Docket No. 282144, defendant appeals as of right his convictions. In Docket No. 286992, defendant appeals the trial court’s order revoking his probation.”

One of the reasons Rev. Pinkney’s probation was revoked according to the trial court was that the trial court found that Rev. Pinkney “threatened” the trial court judge in a paragraph published in an opinion column in a newspaper. The amici argued that this paragraph was political and religious speech at the very core of the First Amendment, and not within any exception to constitutional protection. Political speech is central to the First Amendment because of its importance to self-governance. Religious speech is protected by both the Free Speech Clause and the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment.

On July 16, 2009, the Court of Appeals of Michigan affirmed the defendant’s convictions, but reversed the order revoking his probation on the grounds that the prohibition to not engage in defaming or demeaning behavior as a condition of parole was not directly related to defendant’s rehabilitation or to the protection of the public and thus an improper condition of parole.

C. Navaho Nation v. United States Forest Service

On February 6, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons joined in an amicus brief with a number of religious entities as partners to Petition for Certiori to Ninth Circuit requesting that the U.S. Supreme Court resolve a split in the U.S. Courts of Appeals regarding the interpretation of federal and state statutory balance of free exercise of religion with state interests.
The amici, both as religious organizations and as organizations concerned with the free exercise of religion, argued that the right of individuals to exercise a wide variety of religious beliefs is a central aspect of our nation’s protection of fundamental rights. Federal and state laws that protect the free exercise of religion are therefore of great and immediate significance to them.

The Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq., and the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc et seq., both provide a well-established mechanism to balance the important interests of religious exercise with the interests of the state. However, that balancing takes place only after the religious practitioner establishes that the governmental action in question will “substantially burden” its religious practice. The Ninth Circuit panel held that a substantial burden is one that “prevent[s] the plaintiff from engaging in [religious] conduct or having a religious experience,… Under RFRA, a ‘substantial burden’ is imposed only when individuals are forced to choose between following the tenets of their religion and receiving a governmental benefit (Sherbert) or coerced to act contrary to their religious beliefs by the threat of criminal or civil sanctions (Yoder).” As such, the Ninth Circuit panel shifted the issue of what constitutes a substantial burden under RFRA from a case-by-case inquiry into the impact on the religious practice at issue to the very different question of the nature of the governmental action that creates the burden, limiting it to the deprivation of governmental benefits or criminal or civil coercion. The amici argued that such an interpretation of the term prevented consideration of the competing interests and thereby inappropriately limited the application of the statutes to a narrower scope than mandated by their text and by Congress’ purpose in enacting them. This narrower scope had the effect of finding that the Navaho Tribe in this case was not substantially burdened by the desecration of a holy site by the creation of artificial snow. The Stated Clerk reiterated in his statement of interest that an area of abiding concern for Presbyterians is that Native Americans have full freedom to practice their religion.

The U.S. Supreme Court denied the Petition on June 8, 2009.

Item 06-01

[The assembly approved Item 06-01 with amendment. See pp. 33, 47.]

The Presbytery of Mission overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to affirm the role of Certified Christian Educators in the life of our denomination and to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to The Book of Order to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-11.0407 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The stated clerk shall maintain [five] [four] rolls, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all the ministers of Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only, [and, in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote,] [at all presbytery meetings, during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery,] [and, in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote,] and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made.”

2. Shall G-14.0730b be amended as follows: (Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.)

“b. provide the following support to the [e][C]ertified Christian [e][F]educators: service of recognition that shall include the constitutional questions at W-4.4003 (G-11.0103n); establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits (G-11.0103n); and access to the committee on ministry (G-11.0503). The presbytery may grant the privilege of the floor to the Certified Christian Educator at all its meetings with voice only, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b, during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery. (G-11.0407) In accordance with G-11.0407, [e][C]ertified Christian [e][F]educators are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote [during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery].

Rationale

When Chapter 14 of The Book of Order was re-written and approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), it created an inconsistency between G-11.0407 and G-14.0730b of the Book of Order. This overture seeks to bring the two references concerning the privileges granted to Certified Christian Educators into consistency.

The 218th General Assembly (2008) amended these two portions of the Book of Order with language that limits these privileges to only those certified Christian educators who are serving in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, there are certified Christian educators who have faithfully served the church in other educational ministries not under the jurisdiction of the presbytery (synods, church-related colleges, other institutions, etc).

Ministers of the Word and Sacrament, who are honorably retired, continue to serve the church in many forms of ministry and remain on the active roll of the presbytery. Certified Christian Educators, who have retired, also continue to serve the church in many forms of ministry and should remain on the presbytery’s roll with the privilege of voice and vote (when an elder).

Concurrence to Item 06-01 from the Presbyteries of Lake Michigan, New Hope, and Western New York.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-01

Advice on Item 06-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-01.
Rationale

The proposed amendments would remove from G-11.0407 and G-14.0730b the phrase adopted by the church at the recommendation of the 218th General Assembly (2008) limiting the privilege of voice (and, in certain cases, vote) to the period of service under presbytery’s jurisdiction.

A foundational principle of our polity is that “[t]his church shall be governed by presbyters (elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament, traditionally called ruling and teaching elders)” (Book of Order, G-4.0301b). The adoption of this amendment would appear to compromise this principle. In those cases where an educator is not an elder and is also not engaged in a work under the supervision of the presbytery, the proposed amendment would have the effect of entitling a person who is neither an elder nor in service under its supervision to participate in the presbytery’s deliberations. If the educator is not a member of the PC(USA), the effect of this amendment would be to invite persons who are not members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) to take part in its governance.

By its adoption of the amendments to G-11.0407 and G-14.0730b in 2008, the church placed limits on the tenure of the participation of educators in the deliberations of the presbytery. In its comment on this proposal, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution noted that … certification itself is contingent upon having employment as a Christian educator in a Presbyterian church [PC(USA)]. However, once the certification is conferred, the presbytery is required to enroll the certified Christian educator with voice, or, if an elder, with voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b, whether or not the educator remains employed. Once established, the relationship to the presbytery is not contingent upon service or employment in a Presbyterian church. Further, the certified Christian educator could move his or her church membership to a particular church in a different presbytery and that presbytery would be required to enroll the certified Christian educator regardless of employment status and without any right to determine suitability for membership in the presbytery. Conversely, the first presbytery has no authority or warrant for dismissing or removing a departed Christian educator from its roll of certified Christian educators, required by G-11.0407. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 279)

The rationale offered in support of the overture notes that the language of current G-11.0407 does not provide for keeping a roll of Certified Christian Educators who, by virtue of being elders, are entitled to voice and vote in meetings of presbytery; such privilege is provided in G-14.0730. If the General Assembly wishes to correct this inconsistency without abandoning the limitation of privilege imposed by amendments approved by the 218th General Assembly (2010), this purpose may be served by approving the following action:

That the Stated Clerk be directed to send the following amendments to the Book of Order to the presbyteries for their positive or negative votes:

1. Shall G-11.0407 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The stated clerk shall maintain four rolls, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all the ministers of Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote, at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of each determination to be made.”

2. Shall G-14.0730b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“provide the following support to the Certified Christian Educators; service of recognition that shall include the constitutional questions at W-4.4003 (G-11.0103n); establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits (G-11.0103n); and access to the committee on ministry (G-11.0503). The presbytery may grant the privilege of the floor to the Certified Christian Educator at all its meetings with voice only, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b. In accordance with G-11.0407 Certified Christian Educators are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery.”

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: The proposed Form of Government already provides presbyteries with the authority to grant voice and vote.
The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve this overture.

Rationale

Eighty-five percent of the Certified Christian Educators are women. These women are active in the church, highly educated, motivated, and concerned for our churches and our denomination. To lose this voice and vote where ordained as elder when they are retired or without present call is to lose an extremely valuable resource and needs to be changed. This overture does that, and we recommend its approval.

Item 06-02

[The assembly answered Item 06-02 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 47.]

On Calling for a Moratorium Until 2012 for Requests to Change, Alter, or Remove the Current Standards of Ordination—From the Presbytery of Prospect Hill.

The Presbytery of Prospect Hill overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to call for a moratorium until the 220th General Assembly (2012) on motions and overtures that would change, alter, or remove the current standards of ordination for the offices of deacon, elder, and minister of Word and Sacrament.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-02

Advice on Item 06-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-02. If the assembly wishes to accomplish the intent of Item 06-02, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to answer Item 06-02 with an action that takes into account the concern identified in the Rationale below.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Prospect Hill has presented an overture that does not suggest a constitutional amendment to the Book of Order. The overture requests that the General Assembly approve a moratorium that would, in effect, preclude any overtures to this body about G-6.0106b of the Constitution until the 220th General Assembly (2012).

The General Assembly, under G-13.0103q, is responsible “to decide controversies brought before it and to give advice and instruction in cases submitted to it, in conformity with the Constitution.” (Book of Order, G-13.0103q). The delay of all action until 2012 “on motions and overtures that would change, alter, or remove the current standards of ordination for the offices of deacon, elder, and minister of Word and Sacrament” (Item 06-02) should only be approved if such action will assist the General Assembly to decide controversies brought before it, or to give advice and instruction in cases submitted to it on issues relating to overtures before this body under G-6.0106b.

Overtures before the 219th General Assembly Related to Ordination and Installation of Church Officers

Item 06-02 must be considered in the context of other overtures relating to G-6.0106b that are under consideration at this General Assembly. Currently there are no less than eighteen overtures and twelve concurrences that directly or indirectly address G-6.0106b before the 219th General Assembly (2010). These items generally fall into four categories:

1. Proposals to eliminate or substantially amend G-6.0106b that have the intention of making ordination standards less restrictive.

2. Proposals to reinstitute those authoritative interpretations withdrawn by the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding ordination and installation that were in place prior to the adoption of G-6.0106b.

3. A proposal to replace the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), as amended by the 218th General Assembly (2008), with language limiting the use of G-6.0108b in ordination and installation decisions.

4. A proposal to amend G-6.0106b in order to clarify and strengthen its prohibitions on the ordination or installation of persons not meeting prescribed standards of sexual ethics, and to expand the responsible governing body’s oversight over ordained and installed officers with respect to such standards.
The specific merits of the overtures proposed relating to G-6.106b are discussed independently in advice rendered and/or recommendations provided by this committee for each overture. A substantive discussion on this topic is provided in the advice on Item 06-04—from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. The issue this overture presents, however, is whether or not to defer or suspend for a period of at least two years overtures relating to G-6.0106b submitted for consideration before the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Moratoria

Over the last ten years the General Assembly has considered a number of overtures requesting moratoria relating to the subject of G-6.0106b. The General Assembly has been reluctant to issue moratoria that would discourage or limit discussions on this controversial subject matter despite the divisions on this subject in our denomination. In response to a similar set of overtures (particularly Item 05-08, On Establishing a Moratorium on Discussions Regarding Human Sexuality and Ordination Standards), the 214th General Assembly (2002) approved a recommendation that called “… the church to prayer for a period of one year, with the focus of prayer to be on behalf of, and with those with whom we disagree…” however, “[t]his call for prayer [did] not seek to prevent, or be a substitute for other discussions, dialogue, or actions…” (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 64).

Item 06-02, if successful, would defer consideration for a period of two years for the thirty overtures and concurrences before this General Assembly that request action relating to G-6.0106b. Further, Item 06-02 has not suggested any means of collectively resolving the issues that surround concerns expressed by the presbyteries submitting these overtures. If the purpose of this overture is to delay action because of opposition to the proposed overtures addressing G-6.0106b, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution reminds the assembly that the most effective way to oppose a proposed action is to speak and vote against it, rather than to postpone action with no plan for illuminating the discussion. While the action contemplated in this overture is permissible, it suggests a lack of trust that the Holy Spirit will work by and through the commissioners to the assembly. The Advisory Committee of the Constitution reminds the church that such trust in the working of the Holy Spirit is central to the functioning of our polity.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Approval of Item 06-02 would have similar implications for the proposed Form of Government that it would have on the current Form of Government.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-02—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 06-02 be disapproved.

Items 06-02 and 06-03 are similar, calling for a moratorium or a season of rest and healing until the 220th General Assembly (2012) on motions and overtures that would change, alter, or remove the current standards of ordination.

Rationale

The apparent purpose of these overtures is to defer or suspend from discussion and action the numerous overtures that have been submitted to the 219th General Assembly (2010) related to standards of ordination. First, as difficult as it may be, the General Assembly is the arena of the church that is responsible for deciding on such complex and controversial churchwide issues. The actions the assembly takes should contribute to this decision making. In the Reformed tradition, decision making by ordered bodies has a legislative aspect that is part of the wholeness of the church’s life. Item 06-02 offers no way for moving toward decision making. Item 06-03 offers no means by which rest and healing will be accomplished. In recent years moratoriums have been tried, most recently during the consideration of the Peace, Unity, and Purity Report, without resolving these difficult issues.

In addition, as of this writing, presbyteries have submitted numerous overtures with additional concurrences expressing their concern with and proposals about ordination standards. The serious effort of these presbyteries to discern the will of the Holy Spirit for the church in these matters deserves, in response, our serious attention.

Item 06-03

[The assembly answered Item 06-03 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 47.]

On Declaring a Season of Rest by Taking No Action to Modify or Eliminate G-6.0106b for Not Less Than Two Years—From the Presbytery of the Pines.

The Presbytery of the Pines overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to declare a season of rest and healing for the denomination by taking no action to maintain, modify, or eliminate section G-6.0106b from the Book of Order for a period of time of no less than two years.
Rationale

For thirty years the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has debated and voted on ordination standards of non-heterosexual persons. Such debates and votes have become divisive, disillusioning, and disappointing to many on both sides of the issue. The decline in membership of congregations, and the number of congregations seeking to withdraw from the denomination are directly related to this ongoing debate and the energy and money it has taken.

Many believe that the true mission of the church has suffered because of this continuing debate, leaving some to see the denomination as focused only the issues of human sexuality.

This overture will allow the church a respite and the ability to focus its time, energy, and money on the great mission before it.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-03

Advice on Item 06-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-03 and refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning the similar Item 06-02.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to take this action, it would have a similar impact on the proposed Form of Government.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-03—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 06-03 be disapproved.

Items 06-02 and 06-03 are very similar and call for a moratorium or a season of rest and healing until the 220th General Assembly (2012) on motions and overtures that would change, alter, or remove the current standards of ordination. Check the ACSWP response to 06-02 for the complete rationale behind this Advice and Counsel.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 06-03 recommends taking a two-year break from taking action, modifying, or eliminating G-6.0106b.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) disapprove this item.

On Issuing an Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0106—From the Presbytery of San Diego.

The Presbytery of San Diego Presbytery overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to issue an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106 as follows: “Restoring to full force and effect the interpretive statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the 191st General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and all subsequent affirmations including the Bush v. Pittsburgh Presbytery General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decision.”

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbyteries of Beaver-Butler, Central Florida, Mid-South, St. Andrews, Upper Ohio Valley, and Washington.
Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of Central Washington (with Additional Rationale)

Declaring the definitive guidances (and later authoritative interpretation) of 1978 [UPCUSA] and 1979 [PCUS] to have “…no further force or effect” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 373), leaves the church without a clear response to the question of whether ordination of self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons remains an act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture and to the will of Christ. While both the Old and New Testaments speak clearly on the matter, and the PC(USA) Constitution in Part I, The Book of Confessions, speaks explicitly to this matter, these interpretive statements have been of great benefit and guidance to the church’s life and witness.

Further, the definitive guidance addresses many helpful aspects of the church’s relationship with persons in homosexual relationships, correctly advising Christians to love and care for their brothers and sisters and giving explicit authoritative counsel on the church’s proper pastoral role. The church is poorer for the removal of that guidance.

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of Cherokee (with Additional Rationale).

The intent of this overture is to reverse the authoritative interpretation (AI) of the 218th General Assembly (2008) that declared these statements and their affirmations to have no further force and effect. The assembly erred and exceeded its authority when it nullified them while G-6.0106b is in the Book of Order.

The Book of Order requires that a General Assembly comply with Robert’s Rules of Order (RONR), except where the Constitution provides otherwise (G-9.0302). Robert’s Rules of Order asserts the following rule of interpretation:

Each society decides for itself the meaning of its bylaws. When the meaning is clear, however, the society, even by a unanimous vote, cannot change that meaning except by amending its bylaws. An ambiguity must exist before there is any occasion for an interpretation [emphasis in the original](RONR, 10th edition, p. 570, lines 16–20).

The Constitution does not provide otherwise. In fact, it affirms and applies this rule by empowering a General Assembly to provide authoritative interpretation on “questions requiring an interpretation” of the Book of Order (G-13.0103r, G-13.0112c).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) violated this rule when it nullified the set of clear, unambiguous, and, because of G-6.0106b, evidently correct interpretations of church law described below:

1. The 1978 interpretative statement was the definitive guidance: “That unrepentant homosexual practice does not accord with the requirements for ordination set forth in Form of Government, Chapter VII, Section 3 (37.03) …” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 265).

2. The 1979 interpretative statement supported the one above and added: “For the church to ordain a self-affirming practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its charter and calling in scripture …” (Minutes, PCUS, 1979, Part I, pp. 201, 207).

3. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission affirmed these statements several times. In the Blasdell case in 1985, it found that the statements were authoritative interpretations of the two constitutions as they were in 1978 and 1979 and of the PC(USA) Constitution in 1985, and concluded: “Therefore, it is unconstitutional for the Church to ordain any self-affirming, practicing, and unrepentant homosexual as elder, deacon, or minister of the Word” (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 121).

4. The 205th General Assembly (1993) affirmed the statements with an authoritative interpretation (AI) that declared: (a) That the two statements have been considered by the judicial commissions of the Church and “carry the weight of authoritative interpretations” and (b) “Current constitutional law in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is that self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons may not be ordained as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, elders, or deacons” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, pp. 76–77, 322).

These interpretive statements and their affirmations are evidentially clear and unambiguous interpretations of church law. Any question about their being correct was completely removed in 1997 by the addition to the Book of Order of G-6.0106b, which contains the “fidelity and chastity” requirement. By nullifying them, the General Assembly exceeded its authority because there was no real ambiguity and no bona fide occasion for interpretation.

A General Assembly may propose changes in church polity by proposing amendments to the Book of Order (G-18.0301c). The assembly in 2008, by a small majority, properly exercised this power by proposing an amendment that would remove the fidelity and chastity requirement from G-6.0106b.

But the General Assembly’s power to interpret the Book of Order is of an entirely different nature (G-13.0103r, G-13.0112). When acting as interpreters, commissioners to a General Assembly, like members of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, are duty-bound to discern and act objectively on what the Book of Order says, not what they believe it should say. The power to interpret is not to be used to change clearly expressed church polity. Thus, it was an abuse of power to approve the AI without making it contingent on the presbyteries’ approval of the amendment.
In the same circumstances in 2001, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised that nullification of the interpretive statements should be contingent on the presbyteries' approval of the amendment, and the assembly followed that advice (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 51–52, 405).

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of Redstone (with Additional Rationale).

The 218th General Assembly (2008), without waiting to see the outcome of the vote of the presbyteries concerning the amendment of G-6.0106, prematurely removed interpretive documents written specifically to explain and support the current, and once again upheld, language concerning the requirements, for ordination as specified in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) issued a series of authoritative interpretations that may be contributing to the erosion of trust in the covenental relationship that binds our presbyteries and congregations together in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The actions of the 218th General Assembly (2008) mark a change in our covenant life as Presbyterians and has generated uncertainty about the nature and authority of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of South Alabama (with Additional Rationale).

The intent of this overture is to reverse the authoritative interpretation (AI) of the 218th General Assembly (2008) that declared these statements and their affirmations to have no further force and effect. The assembly erred and exceeded its authority when it nullified them while G-6.0106b is in the Book of Order.

The Book of Order requires that a General Assembly comply with Robert’s Rules of Order, except where the Constitution provides otherwise (G-9.0302). Robert’s Rules asserts the following principle of interpretation:

“Each society decides for itself the meaning of its bylaws. When the meaning is clear, however, the society, even by a unanimous vote, cannot change that meaning except by amending its bylaws. An ambiguity must exist before there is any occasion for an interpretation” [emphasis in the original] (RONR, 10th edition, p. 570, lines 16–20).

The Book of Order affirms and applies the principle by empowering a General Assembly to provide authoritative interpretation on “questions requiring an interpretation” of the Book of Order (G-13.0103r, G-13.0112c).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) violated the principle when it nullified a set of clear, unambiguous, and correct interpretations of church law:

2. The 1979 interpretative statement supported the 1978 statement shown above and added: “For the church to ordain a self-affirming practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its character and calling in scripture” (Minutes, PCUS, Part I, 1979, pp. 201, 207).

3. There were several affirmations by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GA PJC) of the statements. The first was in the Blasdell case in 1985, when the GA PJC found that the 1978 and 1979 statements were authoritative interpretations of the two constitutions as they were then, and of the PC(USA) Constitution in 1985, and concluded: “Therefore, it is unconstitutional for the Church to ordain any self-affirming, practicing, and unrepentant homosexual as elder, deacon, or minister of the Word” (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p.121).

4. The 205th General Assembly (1993) affirmed the statements with an authoritative interpretation (AI) that declared: “(a) That the two statements have been considered by the judicial commissions of the church and ‘carry the weight of authoritative interpretation’ and (b) ‘Current constitutional law in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is that self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons may not be ordained as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, elders, or deacons” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, pp. 76–77, 322).

The interpretive statements and their affirmations are clear and unambiguous. Any question about their being correct was completely removed in 1997 by the addition to the Book of Order of G-6.0106b, which contains the “fidelity and chastity” requirement. By nullifying them, the General Assembly violated an important principle of interpretation and exceeded its authority to provide authoritative interpretations when there are bonafide needs for them.

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of Tropical Florida (with Additional Rationale).

[The following rationale, with the exception of the last three paragraphs, is similar to the “Additional Rationale” from the Presbytery of Cherokee.]
The intent of this overture is to reverse the authoritative interpretation (AI) of the 218th General Assembly (2008) that declared these statements and their affirmations to have no further force and effect. The assembly erred and exceeded its authority when it nullified them while the current text of G-6.0106b is in the Book of Order.

The Book of Order requires that a General Assembly comply with Robert’s Rules of Order, except where the Constitution provides otherwise (G-9.0302). Robert’s Rules of Order asserts the following rule of interpretation:

“Each society decides for itself the meaning of its bylaws. When the meaning is clear, however, the society, even by a unanimous vote, cannot change that meaning except by amending its bylaws. An ambiguity must exist before there is any occasion for an interpretation” [Emphasis in the original] (RONR, 10th edition, p. 570, lines 16–20).

The Constitution does not provide otherwise. In fact, it affirms and applies this rule by empowering a General Assembly to provide authoritative interpretation on “questions requiring an interpretation” of the Book of Order (G-13.0103r, G-13.0112c).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) violated this rule when it nullified the set of clear, unambiguous, and, because of G-6.0106b, evidently correct interpretations of church law described below:

1. The 1978 interpretative statement was the definitive guidance: “That unrepentant homosexual practice does not accord with the requirements for ordination set forth in Form of Government Chapter VII, Section 3 (37.03) …” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 265).

2. The 1979 interpretative statement supported the one above and added: “For the church to ordain a self-affirming practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its charter and calling in scripture …” (Minutes, PCUS, 1979, Part I, pp. 201, 207).

3. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission affirmed these statements several times. In the Blasdell case in 1985, it found that the statements were authoritative interpretations of the two constitutions as they were in 1978 and 1979 and of the PC(USA) Constitution in 1985, and concluded: “Therefore, it is unconstitutional for the Church to ordain any self-affirming, practicing, and unrepentant homosexual as elder, deacon, or minister of the Word” (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 121).

4. The 205th General Assembly (1993) affirmed the statements with an AI that declared: (a) That the two statements have been considered by the judicial commissions of the Church and “carry the weight of ‘authoritative interpretation.’” and (b) “Current constitutional law in the Presbyterian Church (U. S. A.) is that self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons may not be ordained as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, elders, or deacons” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, pp. 76–77, 322).

These interpretive statements and their affirmations are evidentially clear and unambiguous interpretations of church law. Any question about their being correct was completely removed in 1997 by the addition to the Book of Order of G-6.0106b, which states: “Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standard of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness.” By nullifying them, the General Assembly exceeded its authority because there was no real ambiguity and no bona fide occasion for interpretation.

A General Assembly may propose changes in church polity by proposing amendments to the Book of Order (G-18.0301c). The assembly in 2008, by a small majority, properly exercised this power by proposing an amendment that would remove the fidelity and chastity requirement from G-6.0106b.

But the General Assembly’s power to interpret the Book of Order is of an entirely different nature (G-13.0103r, G-13.0112). When acting as interpreters, commissioners to a General Assembly, like members of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, are duty-bound to discern and act objectively on what the Book of Order says, not what they believe it should say. The power to interpret is not to be used to change clearly expressed church polity. Thus, it was an abuse of power to approve the authoritative interpretation without making it contingent on the presbyteries’ approval of the amendment.

In the same circumstances in 2001, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised that nullification of the interpretive statements should be contingent on the presbyteries’ approval of the amendment, and the assembly followed that advice (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 51–52, 405).

When G-6.0106b, which contains the “fidelity and chastity” requirement, was added to the Book of Order in 1997, it became the clear, definitive provision of church law with respect to the ordination of self-acknowledged, practicing homosexual persons. It reinforced the 1978 and 79 interpretations. The 2006 Peace, Unity, and Purity authoritative interpretation (AI) was believed by some to have permitted the ordination of persons who do not agree to comply with the requirement. That belief was dispelled when the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission ruled in Bush v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh that such candidates can not be ordained.

Some may believe that the AI approved in 2008 in response to the John Knox overture has overturned the Bush ruling. That is by no means certain and there are strong arguments against it. That will not be determined until the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decides a relevant case.

In 2001 there was an overture to delete G-6.0106b and to nullify the 1978 and 79 interpretations. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised that both actions were necessary to accomplish the purpose of the overture and that the nullifying action should be “held in abeyance and not take effect” until the presbyteries approved the amendment (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 405). The assembly followed that advice; but the presbyteries rejected the amendment, so the nullification did not take effect. In 2008 the assembly should have followed the 2001 precedent and made the nullification of the interpretations contingent on the approval of the proposed amendment.

Concurrence to Item 06-04 from the Presbytery of Yukon (with Additional Rationale).

Declaring the authoritative interpretation (AI) of 1978 and 1979 to have “no further force or effect” leaves the church without a clear response to the question of whether ordination of self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons remains “an act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture” and “to the will of Christ,” as the wording of the AIs say. While both the Old and New Testaments speak clearly on the matter, and the PC(USA) Constitution in Part I speaks explicitly to this matter, the authoritative interpretation has been of great benefit and guidance to the church’s life and witness. Further, the authoritative interpretation addresses many helpful aspects of the church’s relationship with persons in homosexual relationships, correctly advising Christians to love and care for their brothers and sisters and giving explicit authoritative counsel on the church’s proper pastoral role. The church is poorer for the removal of that guidance.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-04

Advice on Item 06-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-04. If the assembly wishes to accomplish the intent of Item 06-04, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to answer Item 06-04 with an action that takes into account the concern identified in the Rationale below.

Rationale

Item 06-04 is part of a group of items before the 219th General Assembly (2010) addressing the ordination and/or installation of candidates for office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). No issue has absorbed as much energy and attention from General Assemblies over the past two decades as this one. For a variety of reasons, the issue is not only one that evokes deep passion, but also one with a complex history. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution strongly believes that a clear understanding of this history and the current interplay of constitutional provisions and authoritative interpretations is an absolute prerequisite for discerning where the Holy Spirit is leading the 219th General Assembly (2010) with respect to the variety of options before it. In order to assist the assembly in understanding this history and interplay of constitutional provisions, this advice therefore sets out: (1) a summary of the items before the 219th General Assembly (2010) related to ordination and/or installation; (2) an explanation of the means by which the Book of Order is amended and interpreted; (3) background concerning the approval and interpretation of G-6.0106b prior to the 217th General Assembly (2006); (4) background concerning the 217th General Assembly (2006)’s approval of an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b as it applies to the examination of candidates for ordination and/or installation in office, a review of subsequent decisions of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) pertaining to the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b, and the action of the 218th General Assembly (2008) in response to those PJC decisions; (5) a review of actions of the 218th General Assembly (2008) withdrawing authoritative interpretations adopted prior to the adoption of G-6.0106b; and (6) a review of the options available to the 219th General Assembly (2010) with respect to these items.

Accordingly, while Item 06-04 itself is relatively short, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) consider it within the broader context of the various items addressing the ordination and/or installation of candidates for office. The last section of this rationale specifically addresses Item 06-04 in light of this broader advice.

1. Summary

   The 219th General Assembly (2010) has before it a number of items of business related to amendment or interpretation of the ordination standards contained in G-6.0106b. In response to these items:

   - it may leave in place the status quo, it may propose to the presbyteries that they amend or remove G-6.0106b, or

- it may adopt a new authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106b.

In considering the appropriate response to this business, it is essential that the assembly have an accurate understanding of the context in which these items are proposed.

Book of Order section G-6.0106b contains standards governing the ordination and installation of individuals to all three offices of the church by presbyteries and sessions. Because the 218th General Assembly (2008) withdrew authoritative interpretations that pre-dated G-6.0106b, this section and the authoritative interpretations of it are now the exclusive standards governing ordination. The GAPJC has adopted several authoritative interpretations of G-6.0106b. These authoritative interpretations make it clear that G-6.0106b requires that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. Lack of chastity in singleness or of fidelity in marriage is subject to the same standard of self-acknowledgment as any sinful behavior in order to preclude ordination or installation. “Self-acknowledged” means that by words or actions, the person seeking ordination or installation has made it plain, palpable, and obvious that he or she is engaged in conduct “the confessions call sin” (G-6.0106b).

The authoritative interpretations approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and the 218th General Assembly control governing bodies in the process of examining and approving candidates for ordination and installation, and the application of G-6.0108b to determinations of whether a candidate can be ordained and/or installed under G-6.0106b. Section G-6.0108 requires examining bodies to give prayerful and careful consideration, on an individual, case-by-case basis, to any departure from an ordination standard in matters of belief or practice that a candidate may declare during examination. However, the examining body is not required to accept a departure from standards and cannot excuse a candidate’s inability to perform the constitutional functions unique to his or her office (such as administration of the sacraments). Whether the examination and the ordination and/or installation decision comply with the Constitution of the PC(USA), and whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.

2. Business Before the 219th General Assembly (2010) Related to Ordination and Installation of Church Officers

The 219th General Assembly (2010) has before it a variety of items addressing how governing bodies should determine whether a candidate should be ordained and/or installed, and what conduct bars such ordination and/or installation. These items generally fall into four categories, with some overlap between these categories:

- Proposals to eliminate or substantially amend G-6.0106b that have the intention of making ordination standards less restrictive.
- Proposals to reinstitute those authoritative interpretations withdrawn by the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding ordination and installation that were in place prior to the adoption of G-6.0106b.
- A proposal to replace the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), as amended by the 218th General Assembly (2008), with language limiting the use of G-6.0108b in ordination and installation decisions.
- A proposal to amend G-6.0106b in order to clarify and strengthen its prohibitions on the ordination or installation of persons not meeting prescribed standards of sexual ethics, and to expand the responsible governing body’s oversight over ordained and installed officers with respect to such standards.

A variety of responses are possible to these various proposals. Evaluation of those options requires an understanding of the implications of constitutional amendment as opposed to authoritative interpretation, as well as of the history of these issues and the current status of both these constitutional provisions and of the authoritative interpretations governing those provisions.

3. How the Book of Order Is Amended and Interpreted

There are three sources of constitutional authority for the PC(USA):

- The Constitution itself and amendments to it. The process of constitutional amendment is carefully defined in the Book of Order (Chapter XVIII).
- GAPJC decisions interpreting the Constitution. The GAPJC makes such decisions in the context of hearing the appeal of particular disputes (remedial cases) or of allegations against an individual (disciplinary cases), or, fairly rarely, in an action originating in the GAPJC itself. The GAPJC only interprets the Constitution in the context of such particular cases and appeals.
c. Deliberate General Assembly interpretations approved pursuant to the process described in G-13.0112. The General Assembly approves such interpretations not in the context of particular disputes, but for the broader guidance of the church. Any General Assembly is free to modify or withdraw an authoritative interpretation approved by a previous General Assembly or by a decision of the GAPJC.

Decisions by the GAPJC and General Assembly interpretations under G-13.0112 together are referred to as “authoritative interpretations” (G-13.0103r). The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order is binding.

In this context, the constitutional structure of the church is not modeled on the United States federal system with the GAPJC as a supreme court that has final authority in constitutional matters, because the General Assembly itself also has power to provide authoritative interpretations of the Constitution in accordance with G-13.0103r. The General Assembly is not permitted to overturn the resolution of a particular dispute between the parties to a case before the GAPJC, but it is permitted to overturn a constitutional interpretation adopted by the GAPJC by approving an authoritative interpretation setting forth a different interpretation than the GAPJC used in deciding the particular case before it.

4. The Adoption and Interpretation of G-6.0106b prior to the 217th General Assembly (2006)

In 1978, the former UPCUSA adopted a policy statement that came to be called “definitive guidance.” The next year, 1979, the former PCUS adopted a similar statement. Both sought to prohibit the ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons.” The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) determined in a permanent judicial commission (PJC) decision (Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell v. The Presbytery of Western New York, Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 118 et seq.) that those earlier statements carried the authority of the present Constitution. Thus, the statement prohibiting ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons” from the earlier “definitive guidance” became an “authoritative interpretation” prohibiting the ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons.” Several additional PJC decisions reiterated this authoritative interpretation, such as Hope Presbyterian Church v Central Presbyterian Church (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 142); LeTourneau v Presbytery of Twin Cities (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 163); Sallade, et al. v Presbytery of Genesee Valley (Minutes, 1993, p. 166). Likewise, the 205th General Assembly (1993) affirmed that authoritative interpretation (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 76–77).

In 1996 the General Assembly proposed, and in 1997 the presbyteries adopted, an amendment to the Form of Government found at G-6.0106b, which provides:

Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. (Book of Order, G-6.0106b)

The provisions of G-6.0106b have been interpreted by the GAPJC on several occasions.

In Wier v Second Presbyterian Church (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 831) [Wier I], the General Assembly PJC held that G-6.0106b does not authorize the nullification of an ordination that has been completed, even if the ordination might have been contrary to G-6.0106b’s provisions.

In Benton, et al. v Presbytery of Hudson River (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 586), the General Assembly PJC limited the application of G-6.0106b, finding: “The Appellants argue that since G-6.0106b is a foundational standard derived from the Confessions, it should be applied to standards for worship as well. This is unpersuasive. The plain language of G-6.0106b speaks only to ordination. The adoption of G-6.0106b did nothing to change the constitutional interpretation concerning worship practices set out in the 1991 Authoritative Interpretation …” (Ibid., p. 587).

In Londonderry, et al., v Presbytery of Northern New England (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 577), the General Assembly PJC held that a higher governing body had an obligation to exercise pastoral oversight when an ordaining body (a session) adopted the position that “… ‘we vow to continue welcoming persons living singly or in committed relationships, regardless of sexual orientation, into the life, membership and leadership of this congregation on an equal basis, including eligibility for election and ordination as a ruling elder or deacon’” (Ibid., pp. 577–78). In reaching this conclusion, the PJC noted: “G-6.0106b presents the qualifications established by the corporate judgment of the whole church for ordination to service as minister of the Word and Sacrament, elder, and deacon. The Historic Principles of Church Order are explicit as to the right of the church to make and to enforce these standards …” (Ibid., p. 579). Further, the PJC noted: “It is not unusual for a document such as our Constitution, written at different periods of time and under different circumstances, to exhibit tensions and ambiguities in its provisions. Nevertheless, it is the task of governing bodies and judicial commissions to resolve them in such a way as to give effect to all provisions. …” (Ibid., p. 578).

In Wier v Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339) [Wier II], the General Assembly PJC held that an allegation that the accused was a “practicing homosexual” was an insufficient allegation of an irregularity against the respondent, and that the complaint must allege that the person purportedly disqualified from ordination or installation must have self-acknowledged the proscribed sin. The PJC further explained: “Self-acknowledgment may come in
In Presbytery of San Joaquin v. Presbytery of the Redwoods (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 277), the General Assembly PJC held that “sexual orientation alone would be no more sufficient or reasonable grounds for further questioning than would singleness, obesity or any other categorization. In other words, stereotypical profiling is not a reasonable or valid ground for singling out a candidate for additional questioning. Therefore, if a person does not self-acknowledge a practice that the confessions call sin, then a governing body has a positive obligation to make further inquiry only if it has direct and specific knowledge that said person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution” (Ibid, p. 280).

In McKittrick v Session, West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 272), the General Assembly PJC held that where an “… elder had admitted during his examination that he was a gay man in a fifteen-year relationship, and that this information had previously been shared with his pastors and the nominating committee of the church…” (Ibid., p. 272), a remedial case could seek a declaration that the installation was irregular. Further, the PJC held that a remedial case could challenge the procedures followed by the installing body, as opposed to the conduct of the individual installed. Finally, the PJC noted that “… when, as in this case, an installation occurs immediately following the examination process, there may be no practical opportunity for a protesting or dissenting party to seek a stay of enforcement of the decision to install. The Presbyterian custom of conducting business ‘decently and in order’ should not be converted into a race in which the swift prevail. We undermine our system of mutual accountability when the proceedings such as ordination or installation are rushed with the consequence (whether intended or otherwise) that certain remedies become unavailable. Therefore, we encourage governing bodies to permit sufficient time between the examination and installation or ordination of a candidate so that there can be no intimation that any governing body intended to shield its action from scrutiny…” (Ibid., 274).

These cases before the General Assembly PJC thus established the following authoritative interpretations of G-6.0106b:

a. Governing bodies are not free to declare that they will disobey the constitutional standards for ordination and installation established by the whole church, and when faced with such a declaration higher governing bodies must exercise oversight, whether pastoral or administrative over the disobedient governing body.

b. Section G-6.0106b applies to ordination and installation, and does not otherwise set constitutional limitations for governing bodies.

c. Section G-6.0106b requires that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. Self-acknowledged means that by words or actions, the person seeking ordination or installation has made it plain, palpable, and obvious that he or she is engaged in conduct “the confessions call sin.” Alleged sexual sin (lack of chastity in singleness or fidelity in marriage) is subject to the same high standard of self-acknowledgment as any sinful behavior in precluding ordination or installation.

d. With respect to a challenge based on an alleged lack of chastity or fidelity, sexual orientation alone is not sufficient ground to require a governing body to make further inquiry into a person’s fitness for office.

e. A challenge made to the process by which a governing body makes a decision to ordain or install is subject to review, and presumably to correction of the process by which such decisions are made.

Since G-6.0106b was ratified by the presbyteries in 1997, three General Assemblies have proposed either to strike or substantially to amend this provision. These proposals were defeated by the presbyteries in 1998, 2002 and 2009.

5. The 217th General Assembly (2006)’s Approval of an Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108 and Its Revision by the 218th General Assembly (2008)

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 based on the recommendation of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church:

b. These standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries. These standards may be interpreted by the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission.

c. Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church, have the responsibility to determine their membership by applying these standards to those elected to office. These determinations include:
Prior to the approval of this authoritative interpretation, the relationship between G-6.0108 and G-6.0106b had not been authoritatively interpreted by either previous General Assemblies or the GAPJC. In its advice to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution discussed the relationship between these two provisions:

By using the phrase “practice which the confessions call sin” rather than delineating practices that bar ordination, G-6.0106b creates an intersection between belief and practice. A person can only repent of conduct he or she genuinely believes to be sinful. If a person does not believe conduct to be sinful, he or she may abstain from that conduct out of concern for the well-being of the community (e.g., 1 Corinthians 8), but he or she cannot be said to repent of that conduct. The authoritative interpretation offered by the task force would allow an ordaining or installing governing body, when faced with a particular practice that is described as sinful at some place in the confessions, that the candidate does not believe to be sinful, to ordain or install the candidate on the basis that the candidate’s belief that the practice was not sinful does not depart from the essentials of the Reformed faith or polity. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 529)

During the course of the 217th General Assembly (2006), the proposed authoritative interpretation recommended by the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church was amended both by the committee and on the floor of the assembly.

Between the 217th and 218th General Assemblies (2006 and 2008), the GAPJC issued three decisions—Buescher v Presbytery of Olympia (Remedial Case 218-09, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 318); Bush v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10, Ibid., p. 319); Session of First Presbyterian Church of Washington v. Presbytery of Washington (Remedial Case 218-15, Ibid., p. 324)—applying the 217th General Assembly’s authoritative guidance to particular controversies. Each of these cases arose from the adoption by presbyteries of resolutions declaring certain “mandatory” provisions of the Form of Government as “essential,” and therefore not provisions from which a candidate for ordination or installation could depart without being barred from ordination or installation. In each case, the PJC determined that the presbytery under the authoritative interpretation was not permitted to determine outside the scope of a particular examination of a particular candidate what was a departure from what was essential:

… [T]he broad reference in G-6.0106b to “any practice which the confessions call sin” puts the responsibility first on the candidate and then on the examining body to determine whether a departure is a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity and the remainder of G-6.0108(a) with respect to freedom of conscience. The ordaining body must examine the candidate individually. The examining body is best suited to make decisions about the candidate’s fitness for office, and factual determinations by examining bodies are entitled to deference by higher governing bodies in any review process. (Bush v Presbytery of Pittsburgh, Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 323)

Bush further states that G-6.0108 protects “… freedom of conscience, but only with respect to the interpretation of Scripture…” (Ibid., p. 322). However, as the decision goes on to point out, such departures may relate to the Presbyterian system of doctrine, government, or discipline. In other words, Presbyterians may depart from our denomination’s doctrine, government, or discipline if they determine their interpretation of Scripture leads them to such a departure. In the context of an examination of a candidate for office, the governing body must determine, in light of the interpretation of Scripture offered, whether that departure is from something essential to the Reformed doctrine, government or discipline.

In addressing the meaning of the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108, the GAPJC indicated that the following limitations apply: “It is up to the examining body to determine whether a candidate’s actions and beliefs, including with respect to G-6.0106b, are a serious departure from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity, or are such that they infringe on the rights and views of others, or would obstruct the constitutional governance of the church (G-6.0108a)” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 321).

The Permanent Judicial Commission then went on to address the ability of governing bodies to apply the authoritative interpretation to the provisions of G-6.0106b:

Section G-6.0106b contains a provision where conformity is required by church officers “to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or in chastity in singleness.” The church has decided to single out this particular manner of life standard and require churchwide conformity to it for all ordained church officers. Therefore, the specific “fidelity and chastity” standard in G-6.0106b stands in contrast to the provisions of G-6.0106a, including those concerning faith, discipleship, belief and manner of life in the church and the world, and also the remainder of G-6.0106b. The candidate and examining body must follow G-6.0108 in reaching a determination as to whether the candidate for office has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity, but that determination does not rest on distinguishing “belief” and “behavior,” and does not permit departure from the “fidelity and chastity” requirement found in G-6.0106b. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 321–322)

In response to this portion of the Bush decision, the 218th General Assembly (2008) adopted (Item 05-12) a further Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108:

...the requirements of G-6.0108 … apply equally to all ordination standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Section G-6.0108 requires examining bodies to give prayerful and careful consideration, on an individual, case-by-case basis, to any departure from an ordination standard in matters of belief or practice that a candidate may declare during examination. However, the examining body is not required to accept a departure from standards and cannot excuse a candidate’s inability to perform the constitutional functions unique to his or her office (such as administration of the sacraments). (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 380)

This authoritative interpretation modified the decision in Bush to allow a governing body to determine that a candidate’s departure from the second sentence of G-6.0106b, as applied through the third sentence of G-6.0106b, is not a departure from what is essential to Reformed faith and polity. The effect of this action is to remind ordaining bodies that they bear the responsibility for determining whether any particular standard (including those described in G-6.0106b) will be a bar to that particular candidate’s ordination or installation. This Authoritative Interpretation preserves the historic right of sessions and presbyteries to determine their membership. All these decisions, however, continue to be subject to review by a higher governing body.

The 218th General Assembly (2008) adopted, as a part of Item 05-09, a new authoritative interpretation that is now in effect:

Interpretive statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect.

What this means is that this identical wording from those 1978 and 1979 predecessor bodies is no longer in effect: “… For the church to ordain a self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture, setting in motion both within the church and society serious contradictions to the will of Christ” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 264; Minutes, 1979, PCUS, p. 207;).

The subsequent affirmations that are also negated include these words from the 205th General Assembly (1993):

… [w]e concur with the opinion of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution that “the General Assembly statements of 1978, 1979, and subsequent years concerning the ordination of self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons and the related recommendations adopted by the General Assemblies have been considered by the judicial commissions of the church . . . [and] currently carry the weight of ‘authoritative interpretations.’” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 76).

Authoritative Interpretations relying on the following GAPJC cases (GAPJC) are now no longer in effect:

- Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell v Presbytery of Western New York, (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 121)
- LeTourneau v Presbytery of Twin Cities (Minutes, 1993, 163)
- Sallade, et al. v Presbytery of Genesee Valley (Minutes, 1993, 166)
- Hope Presbyterian Church v Central Presbyterian Church (Minutes, 1994, 142)
7. Summary of the Current Status of Ordination Standards

After the 218th General Assembly (2008):

a. G-6.0106b continues to contain standards governing the ordination and installation of individuals to all three offices of the church by presbyteries and sessions.

b. Earlier holdings of the GAPJC remain in place, including the holdings that G-6.0106b requires that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. Lack of chastity in singleness or of fidelity in marriage is subject to the same standard of self-acknowledgment as any sinful behavior in precluding ordination or installation. Self-acknowledged means that by words or actions, the person seeking ordination or installation has made it plain, palpable, and obvious that he or she is engaged in conduct “the confessions call sin.”

c. The authoritative interpretations approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and the 218th General Assembly (2008) remain in effect and control governing bodies in the process of examining and approving candidates for ordination and installation. These authoritative interpretations apply to the application of all of G-6.0106b. Governing bodies are not permitted to determine outside the examination of a particular candidate whether a departure is from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity.

8. Options Available to the 219th General Assembly (2010)

The 219th General Assembly (2010) may address the various items related to ordination and installation in a number of ways:

a. The General Assembly may take no action, leaving in place G-6.0106b and the authoritative interpretations that govern its application.

b. The General Assembly may submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote an amendment to repeal G-6.0106b or replace it (with or without amendment to portions of Chapter 14 of the Form of Government) with a different standard intended to be less restrictive. Items 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17 recommend this course of action.

c. The General Assembly may submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote an amendment to replace G-6.0106b with provisions intended to make more restrictive the standards of this section. Item 06-11 recommends this course of action.

d. The General Assembly may approve an authoritative interpretation related to ordination standards. This item (06-04) and Item 06-18 recommend this course of action.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice as to each of these approaches is set forth in the items suggesting that approach.

9. Advice Concerning Item 06-04

Item 06-04 asks the 219th General Assembly (2010) take action to undo the two authoritative interpretations related to ordination standards adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008). It does not attach a rationale, but a number of presbyteries that have concurred with the overture have attached their own rationales.

The intent of Item 06-04 is first, to reinstate the authoritative interpretations of the current G-6.0106a as precluding the ordination of a self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to the offices of deacon, elder, and Minister of Word and Sacrament; and second, to reinstate the holding in Bush that G-6.0108 does not permit departure from the “fidelity and chastity” requirement found in G-6.0106b.

Initially, in light of the rationale contained in several of concurrences with Item 06-04, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that it disagrees with the assertion that either of the actions of the 218th General Assembly (2008) were not within its power to take. First, with respect to the withdrawal of interpretations of G-6.0106a adopted prior to the ratification of G-6.0106b, the issue of authoritative interpretations is discussed in detail in section five above. The 218th General Assembly (2008) was free to adopt an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106a irrespective of any action by the presbyteries with respect to repeal or amendment of G-6.0106b.

Likewise, with respect to the authoritative interpretation regarding the scope of G-6.0108’s application to the second sentence of G-6.0106b, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 218th General Assembly “… that such an authoritative interpretation is within the power of the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve. The effect of such an action would be to allow governing bodies to examine a candidate regarding his or her understanding of the terms ‘fidelity in marriage’ and ‘chastity in singleness,’ and if the candidate’s understanding of those confessional standards differed from the understanding of the governing body, to determine whether the departure was from an essential of Reformed faith and polity …” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 381).

Further, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the overture mischaracterizes Bush as a “subsequent affirmation” of the authoritative interpretations of G-6.0106a made before the adoption of G-6.0106b. Bush dealt with the application of G-6.0108 to G-6.0106b, and did not address those authoritative interpretations.

With respect to both prongs of the suggested authoritative interpretation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that if it desires to modify any actions of the 218th General Assembly (2008), it should do so in clear and direct language, rather than requiring the church to figure out what has been withdrawn and what that means for the current interpretation of the Constitution. The area of ordination standards is already confused enough, as is demonstrated by the sheer length of this advice. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends disapproval of Item 06-04 as drafted because it would add to, rather than subtract from, the confusion currently facing the church regarding these standards.

With respect to the first prong of the overture, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that if the Assembly desires to further authoritatively interpret current ordination standards as they relate to sexual conduct that it direct its authoritative interpretation to G-6.0106b, which is the constitutional provision that most specifically addresses such conduct, rather than reinstating interpretations of G-6.0106a that were adopted before the specific provisions of G-6.0106b were ratified. Therefore, if the General Assembly wishes to accomplish the apparent intent of Item 06-04, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that it adopt an authoritative interpretation defining in as specific terms as possible what self-acknowledged practices preclude ordination under G-6.0106b.

Likewise, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that if the General Assembly desires to reinstate the holding of the Bush decision that was modified by the 218th General Assembly, it authoritatively interpret G-6.0108 as not applying to the second sentence of G-6.0106b.

Implications for the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b. To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0108, the identical provision (although not divided into two paragraphs) in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-04—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 06-04 be disapproved.

Rationale

Item 06-04 has the effect of superseding and replacing the authoritative interpretations related to ordination standards that were adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) and the 217th General Assembly (2006) following the study process of the Theological Task for on Peace, Unity, and Purity. One authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 states:

…the requirements of G-6.0108 … apply equally to all ordination standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Section G-6.0108 requires examining bodies to give prayerful and careful consideration, on an individual, case-by-case basis, to any departure from an ordination standard in matters of belief or practice that a candidate may declare during examination. However, the examining body is not required to accept a departure from standards… (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 42-43, 380)

The second authoritative interpretation adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) determines that the statements by PC(USA)’s predecessor bodies, that ordination of a “self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to ministry” would be contradictory to Scripture and the will of Christ, would “have no further force or effect” (Minutes, 2008, pp. 42, 373).

The result of these actions was to allow a governing body to determine that a candidate’s departure from the specific standard in G-6.0106b, fidelity in marriage and chastity in singleness, or any particular standard, is not a departure from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity based on their careful and case-by-case consideration of the candidate. These actions attempt to strike a balance between identifying the essentials of faith in the tradition and the individual’s right of conscience. They place the responsibility for determining an individual’s readiness for ordination with sessions and presbyteries, subject to the review of a higher body.

The 2008 General Assembly also sent to the presbyteries for their approval or disapproval an amendment to the Book of Order that would have eliminated G-6.0106b from the church’s constitution. Presbyteries disapproved this amendment with seventy-eight presbyteries voting for the amendment. This was nine less than needed for ratification. The 219th General Assembly (2010), as of this writing, has received numerous overtures and concurrences related to this issue. Many of these would either remove G-6.0106b or replace it with a standard intended to be less focused on sexual behavior. Some, such as Item 6-04, would return the church to a standard that identifies certain sexual behavior as so uniquely contrary to the essentials of faith as to render a candidate unqualified for ordination regardless of the candidate’s faith, character, and conscience. Clearly, the church is of several minds on this issue. Good and serious and faithful people disagree.

Central to this disagreement is our diversity about the interpretation of Scripture. Item 6-04 would replace current authoritative interpretations of ordination standards that recognize this diversity among individuals and governing bodies with an authoritative interpretation requiring one interpretation of biblical passages related to same-sex behavior. The church’s constitution states:

… So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained. (Book of Order, G-6.0108a)

… The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves. (Book of Order, G-6.0108b)

As the church struggles to determine its standards on an issue that so clearly divides good people, ACSWP recommends that the authoritative interpretations adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) not be superseded by another authoritative interpretation that would restore a rigid and legalistic standard for ordination based solely on sexual behavior and in so doing disregard the differing perspectives of almost half of the church’s presbyteries. Maintaining openness to an on-going process of discernment by individuals and governing bodies should continue as the church strives to understand and do the will of Christ more fully.

On Homosexual Practice and the Church: An Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of Shenandoah.

The Presbytery of Shenandoah overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to do the following:

1. Approve the following authoritative interpretation:

   Introduction

   In 1979, the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States adopted an essentially identical statement, “Homosexuality and the Church” (Minutes, PCUS, 1979, Part I, p. 201ff).

   Although the 218th General Assembly (2008) did not remove these statements, it did say:

   “Interpretive statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, Item 05-09, p. 373).
American society has radically changed since the late 1970s, and persons practicing homosexual behavior have moved into the mainstream. Popular media are much more likely to laud homosexual behavior than to condemn it. Many public officials openly proclaim their same-sex attractions. With the Supreme Court’s decision in Lawrence et al v Texas, handed down in 2003, homosexual practice between consenting adults can no longer be considered illegal. All these things have rendered many points in the 1978 and 1979 documents on homosexuality out of date.

But to clarify its ordination standards as well as to witness to the wider world, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must speak out concerning same-sex attractions and behavior. It must speak to condemn homophobia, and to urge sensitivity in the examination of candidates. For all these reasons, the 1978 and 1979 statements, properly updated, deserve a fresh hearing. [Note: Text follows “Policy Statement and Recommendations on Homosexuality” from the Minutes of the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the UPCUSA. For a better understanding of how this new text differs from the 1978 version, proposed changes to the original text are shown with a strikethrough for deleted text and italic for text that has been added.]

“Homosexual Practice within a Theological Context

“New data and hypotheses in psychology, sociology, endocrinology, and the other secular disciplines cannot in themselves determine a shift in the church’s posture on this issue. Very frequently these disciplines shed new light upon our understanding of homosexuality same-sex attraction and how the church should respond to it. Frequently the results of scientific inquiry are tentative and inconclusive, neutral in their theological and ethical implications, or even weighted with unspoken values and assumptions that are misleading against the background of biblical faith. Therefore, we must address the task of theologically interpreting these extrabiblical data, while at the same time renewing our understanding of Scripture and tradition in the light of those data in the sciences.

“Medical and psychological theories concerning same-sex attraction and its causes are complex and often contradictory…

“Human sexuality has a dynamic quality. Within the constraints of nature, nurture serves to transform both sexual identity and intersexual preference. Our sexuality is vulnerable to shaping influences from many directions…

“… [T]he Genesis account of the creation of humankind, which speaks of the precious and precarious balance of male and female life together that perpetually needs both our affirmation and God’s upholding grace. Genesis offers polemic against deviations from the wise separation of humankind into man and woman. It is this separation that makes union possible. In creation, God separates woman from man so that they are constituted with yearning for each other. Becoming one flesh they portray the glory of his image in the earth.

“To say that God created humankind male and female, called man and woman to join in partnership as one flesh, and commanded them to multiply (Genesis 1:27–28; 2:24) is to describe how God intended loving companionship between a man and a woman to be a fundamental pattern of human relationship and the appropriate context for male-female genital sexual expression. However, to say that God created humankind male and female, called man and woman to join in partnership as one flesh and commanded them to multiply this is not, however, to state that God intended to limit the possibility for meaningful life to heterosexual marriage. Jesus’ own celibate lifestyle and his commitment to his own ministry rather than to the biological family (Matthew 12:46–50; Mark 3:31–35; Luke 8:19–21) demonstrates the blessing of God upon life lived outside the covenant of marriage.

“We conclude that homosexuality homosexual behavior is not God’s wish for humanity. This we affirm, despite the fact that some of its forms may be deeply rooted in an individual’s personality structure. This we affirm, despite the fact that some of its forms may be deeply rooted in an individual’s personality structure. Some persons are exclusively homosexual in orientation. In many cases homosexuality same-sex attraction is more a sign of the brokenness of God’s world than of willful rebellion. In other cases homosexual behavior is freely chosen or learned in environments where normal development is thwarted. Even where the perceived homosexual orientation has not been consciously sought or chosen, it is neither a gift from God nor a state nor a condition like race; it is a result of our living in a fallen world.

“How are we to find the light and freedom promised to us by our Lord through the Holy Spirit in such a world? Where do we find norms for authentic life, which in truth transcend the conditioning of history and culture, and the power to live by them?

“We dare begin in no other place than with the living Word, Jesus Christ, who in risen power transcends time and space and the limitations of our values, norms, and assumptions to confront, judge, and redeem us. It is here that all theological confession and affirmation must begin—in the light of God as revealed to us in the incarnate and living Word, Jesus Christ. It is his exposure of our sin, his obedient sacrificial love, and his being raised in power to continue his activity of redemption of this world (1 Cor.15: 20–28) that brings us new light. This same God in Jesus Christ comes to make us whole, to redeem creation, and to restore it to the goodness proclaimed at creation. Yet the prelude to this redemption is divine judgment.

“To look at the Jesus Christ is to see at once the brokenness of the world in which we live and the brokenness of our own lives. This comes as the supreme crisis in our life.

“Yet, in the moment of this crisis, the Spirit of God brings the confirmation of divine forgiveness, moves us to respond in faith, repentance, and obedience, and initiates the new life in Christ.

“Jesus Christ calls us out of the alienation and isolation of our fallen state into the freedom of new life. This new life redeems us as sexual beings but is impossible without repentance. To claim that God’s love for us removes divine judgment of us is to eliminate the essence of divine love and to exchange grace for romantic sentimentality. There is a necessary judgment in God’s love—else it cannot redeem. It was this Christ who said to the woman in adultery, ‘Go and sin no more’ (John 8:1–12), and to the rich young ruler: ‘One thing you still lack. Sell all that you have and distribute to the poor… and come, follow me.’ (Luke 18:22 and parallels.)

“Jesus Christ calls us out of the alienation, brokenness, and isolation of our fallen state into the freedom of new life in Christ. We deny that this new life liberates us to license and affirm that it frees and empowers us for lives of obedience whereby all of life becomes subject to his Lordship.

“Scripture and Homosexual Practice

“We have already indicated that we must examine scientific data but must move beyond them in order to understand what our sexuality means and how it should be expressed. We anchor our understanding of homosexual practice in the revelation in Scripture of God’s intention for human sexuality.

“In order to comprehend the biblical view of homosexual practice, we cannot simply limit ourselves to those texts that directly address this issue. We must first understand something of what the Scriptures teach about human sexuality in general. As we examine the whole framework of teaching bearing upon our sexuality from Genesis onward, we find that homosexuality is a contradiction of God’s wise and beautiful pattern for human sexual relationships revealed in Scripture and affirmed in God’s ongoing will for our life in the Spirit of Christ. It is a confusion of sexual roles that mirrors the tragic inversion in which men and women worship the creature instead of the Creator. God created us male and female to display in clear diversity and balance the range of qualities in God’s own nature. The opening chapters of Genesis show that sexual union as ‘one flesh’ is established within the context of companionship and the formation of the family. Nature confirms revelation in the functional compatibility of male and female genitalia and the natural process of procreation and family continuity.

“Human sin has deeply affected the processes by which sexual orientation is formed, with the result that none of us, heterosexual or homosexual, fulfill perfectly God’s plan for our sexuality. This makes it all the more imperative for revelation to make clear for us how our sexual relationships are to be conducted so as to please God and challenge us to seek God’s will instead of following our own. Though none of us will ever achieve perfect fulfillment of God’s will, all Christians are responsible to view their sins as God views them and to strive against them. To evade this responsibility is to permit the church to model for the world forms of sexual behavior that may seriously injure individuals, families, and the whole fabric of human society. Homosexual persons who experience same-sex attractions but who will strive toward God’s revealed will in this area of their lives, and make use of all the resources of grace, can receive God’s power to transform their desires or arrest their active expression.

“Within the context of general biblical teaching on human sexuality, a number of passages dealing specifically with homosexuality are significant for our response to this issue. These are, of course, complementary to the wider biblical themes of creation, fall, and redemption.

“Three Scriptures specifically address the issue of homosexual behavior between consenting males: Leviticus 18:22, Leviticus 20:13, and Romans 1:26–27. Romans 1:26–27 also addresses the issue of homosexual behavior between consenting females. These three passages stand in an integral and complementary relationship. Leviticus 20:13 regards homosexual behavior as an ‘abomination.’

“In the Reformed tradition, the Leviticus passages are considered part of the moral law and thus are different in kind from Levitical proscriptions against certain foods, for instance, which belong to the ritual law. Jesus declared ‘all foods clean’ (Mark 7:19)—one declaration among many that the ritual law of the Old Testament is transcended and fulfilled in him. Moral law in the New Testament is not the means of salvation, for that is Christ alone. Rather, obedience to the moral law is a fruit of grace and salvation.

“Genesis 19:1–29 and Judges 19:16–26 show that homosexual rape is a violation of God’s justice. II Peter 2:6–10 and Jude 7 suggest a wider context of homosexual practice in Sodom, implying that such rape was but one expression of prior homosexual practice in the population.
“Romans 1:26–27 speaks to the problem of homosexual passion, describing it as ‘dishonorable,’ as well as homosexual behavior, which is described as ‘unnatural.’ By ‘unnatural’ the Scripture does not mean contrary to custom, or contrary to the preference of a particular person, but rather contrary to that order of universal human sexual nature that God intended in Genesis 1 and 2.

“We emphasize that Paul here includes homosexual behavior in a larger catalogue of sins, which includes pride, greed, jealousy, disobedience to parents, and deceit. Homosexual behavior is no greater a sin and no less a sin than these.

“Two other texts, I Corinthians 6:9–10 and I Timothy 1:9–10, show further New Testament opposition to homosexual behavior. I Corinthians probably distinguishes between the more passive partners or catamites (malakoi) and the more active partners (arsenokoitai). Homosexual relationships in the Hellenistic world were widespread. We may safely assume that some were characterized by tenderness, commitment, and altruism. Yet the New Testament declares that all homosexual practice is incompatible with Christian faith and life. No Scriptures speak of homosexuality as granted by God. No Scriptures permit or condone any of the forms of homosexuality. In Matthew 19:1–12, Jesus reaffirms God’s intention for sexual intercourse, enduring marriage between husband and wife, and affirms godly celibacy for those not entering the marriage covenant.

“The biblical revelation to Israel, reaffirmed in the teaching of Jesus and Paul, portrayed in the theology and human creation, specifically reflected in the ethical teachings in both the Old and New Testaments, and confirmed in nature, clearly indicates that genital sexual expression is meant to occur within the covenant of heterosexual marriage. Behavior that is pleasing to God cannot simply be defined as that which pleases others or expresses our own strong needs and identity; it must flow out of faithful and loving obedience to God. Sin cannot simply be defined as behavior that is selfish or lustful. Many unselfish deeds ignore God’s expressed intentions for our lives. Homosexual Christians who fail to recognize God’s revealed intent for sexual behavior and who move outside God’s will in this area of their lives may show many gifts and graces. They may evidence more grace than heterosexual believers who so readily stand in judgment over them. This does not mean that God approves their behavior in the area in which they are failing to be obedient.

“To conclude that the Spirit contradicts in our experience what the Spirit clearly said in Scripture is to set Spirit against Spirit and to cut ourselves loose from any objective test to confirm that we are following God and not the spirits in our culture or our own fallible reason. The church that destroys the balance between Word and Spirit, so carefully constructed by the Reformers to insure that we follow none other than Jesus Christ who is the Word, will soon lose its Christian substance and become indistinguishable from the world. We have been charged to seek “new light from God’s Word,” not “new light” contrary to God’s Word.

“Church Membership

“Persons who manifest homosexual behavior must be treated with the profound respect and pastoral tenderness due all people of God. There can be no place within the Christian faith for the mingled contempt, hatred, and fear that is called homophobia.

“Homosexual persons are encompassed by the searching love of Christ. The searching love of Christ reaches many persons who consider themselves to be homosexual. The church must turn from its fear and hatred to move toward the homosexual community in love and to welcome homosexual inquirers from that community into its congregations. It should free them to be candid about their identity and convictions, and it should also share honestly and humbly with them in seeking the vision of God’s intention for the sexual dimensions of their lives.

“As persons who consider themselves to be homosexual repent and believe, they become members of Christ’s body. The church is not a citadel of the morally perfect; it is a hospital for sinners. It is the fellowship where contrite, needy people rest their hope for salvation on Christ and his righteousness. Here in community they seek and receive forgiveness and new life. The church must become the nurturing community so that all whose lives come short of the glory of God are converted, reoriented, and built up into Christian maturity. It may be only in the context of loving community, appreciation, pastoral care, forgiveness, and nurture that homosexual persons experiencing same-sex attractions can come to a clear understanding of God’s pattern for their sexual expression.

“There is room in the church for all who give honest affirmation to the vows required for membership in the church. Persons who experience same-sex attractions but who sincerely affirm “Jesus Christ is my Lord and Savior” and “I intend to be his disciple, to obey his word, and to show his love” should not be excluded from membership.

“Ordination

“To be an ordained officer is to be a human instrument touched by divine powers but still an earthen vessel. As portrayed in Scripture, the officers set before the church and community an example of piety, love, service, and moral integrity. Officers are not free from repeated expressions of sin. Neither are members and officers free to adopt a lifestyle of conscious, continuing, and unresisted sin in any area of their lives. For the church to ordain a self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture, setting in motion both within the church and society serious contradictions to the will of Christ.

“The repentant homosexual person repenting of homosexual practice who finds the power of Christ redirecting his or her sexual desires toward a married heterosexual commitment, or finds God’s power to control his or her desires and to adopt a celibate lifestyle, can certainly be ordained, all other qualifications being met. Indeed, such candidates must be welcomed and be free to share their full identity. Their experience of hatred and rejection may have given them a unique capacity for love and sensitivity as wounded healers among heterosexual Christians, and they may be incomparably equipped to extend the church’s outreach to the homosexual community.

“We believe that Jesus Christ intends the ordination of officers to be a sign of hope to the church and the world. Therefore we believe God’s will precludes the ordination of persons who do not repent of homosexual practice.

“Pluralism and Unity in the Church

“We of the 190th General Assembly (1978) realize that not all United Presbyterians can in conscience agree with our conclusions. Some are persuaded that there are forms of homosexual behavior that are not sinful and that persons who practice these forms can legitimately be ordained.

“This is wholly in keeping with the diversity of theological viewpoint and the pluralism of opinion that characterize the United Presbyterian Church. We are concerned not to stifle these diverging opinions and to encourage those who hold them to remain within the church. As Paul clearly teaches in Eph. 4:1–16, as members of Christ’s body we desperately need one another. None of us is perfect. No human opinion or decision is irreformable…

“We want this dialogue to continue. Nevertheless, we judge that it genuine dialogue cannot effectively be pursued in the uncertainty and insecurity that would be generated by the Assembly’s silence on this matter at this time. On the basis of our understanding that the practice of homosexuality homosexual practice is a sin, we are concerned that homosexual believers who consider themselves to be homosexual and the observing world should not be left in doubt about the church’s mind on this issue during any further period of study…

“Ministry and Mission

“In ministry the church seeks to express and portray the grace and mercy of Christ in worship, nurture, evangelism, and service to those within the covenant community. In mission the church proclaims to all the good news of redemption and reconciliation, calls persons and nations to repentant faith in Christ, and promotes and demonstrates the advance of his rule in history through healing works of mercy and prophetic witness that aim at justice and liberation.

“In its ministry and mission the church must offer both to homosexual persons those who consider themselves to be homosexual and to those who fear and hate them God’s gracious provision of redemption and forgiveness. It must call both to repentant faith in Christ, urging both toward loving obedience to God’s will.

“The church’s grappling with the issue of homosexuality homosexual practice has already energized its membership in a remarkable awakening of prayer and theological study. Our study should continue with the aim of reaching harmony in our diverging positions on homosexuality and other issues. Our prayer should now be concentrated upon this process of We should continue to pray for internal reconciliation and also upon the creation of ministry as we continue to create ministries with and for persons experiencing homosexual persons attractions. Great love and care must be exercised toward such persons already within the church, both those who have affirmed their sexual identity and practice and those who have in conscience chosen not to do so. “We urge candidates committees, ministerial relations committees, personnel committees, nominating committees, and judicatories to conduct their examination of candidates for ordained office with discretion and sensitivity, recognizing that it would be a hindrance to God’s grace to single out candidates for ordained office and make a specific inquiry into their the sexual orientation or practice of candidates for ordained office or ordained officers where the person involved has not taken the initiative in declaring his or her sexual orientation.

“The Christian community can neither condone nor participate in the widespread contempt for homosexual persons who practice homosexual behavior that prevails in our general culture. Indeed, beyond this, it must do everything in its power to prevent society from continuing to hate, harass, and oppress them. The failure of the church to demonstrate grace in its life has contributed to the forcing of homosexual persons who identify themselves as homosexuals into isolated communities. This failure has served to reinforce the homosexual way of life and to heighten alienation from both church and society. The church should be a spiritual and moral vanguard leading society’s society in response to view of those who practice homosexual persons behavior.
“Through direct challenge and support the church should encourage the public media—television, film, the arts, and literature—to portray in a wholesome manner robust, fully human life that expresses the finer qualities of the human spirit. It should call upon its members and agencies to work to eliminate prejudicial and stereotypical unrealistic images of homosexual persons practice in the public media.

“Decriminalization Sexuality and Civil Rights

“… Society does have a legitimate role in regulating some sexual conduct, for criminal law properly functions to preserve public order and decency and to protect citizens from public offense, personal injury, and exploitation. Thus, It is thus proper for criminal law properly prohibits to address certain matters of sexuality, including the prohibition of homosexual and heterosexual acts that involve rape, coercion, corruption of minors, mercenary exploitation, or public display…” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 261–65).

The church is called to stand firm against the discriminatory enforcement of criminal laws against homosexual persons.

Since marriage was ordained by God as the union of a man and a woman, and since such marriages are the most healthy environment for the rearing of children, society also has an interest in how families are structured. It is thus proper for the state to define marriage as only existing between one man and one woman, and to limit adoption rights in accordance with this definition of marriage.

Conclusions

The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) makes the following authoritative interpretation of the Constitution:

That unrepentant homosexual practice does not accord with the requirements for ordination set forth in Form of Government, G-6.0106b:

“Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament” (Book of Order, G-6.0106b).

That those engaged in unrepentant homosexual practice or those who affirm their freedom to be so engaged, may not be ordained as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, elders, or deacons.

That in relation to candidates for the offices of minister of the Word and Sacrament, elder, or deacon, all governing bodies shall abide by this authoritative interpretation.

2. Approve this policy statement and direct the Office of the General Assembly to send a paper copy of the policy statement and authoritative interpretation to all congregations, presbyteries, and synods and to post it on the denomination’s website.

3. Urge presbyteries and congregations to develop programs to reach out to communities of persons who consider themselves to be homosexual.

4. Urge candidates committees, personnel committees, nominating committees, and judicatories to conduct their examination of candidates for ordained office with discretion and sensitivity, recognizing that it would be a hindrance to God’s grace to single out candidates for ordained office and make a specific inquiry into their sexual orientation or practice where the person involved has not taken the initiative in declaring his or her sexual orientation.

5. Declare that these actions shall not be used to affect negatively the ordination rights of any Presbyterian deacon, elder, or minister who was ordained in the UPCUSA prior to 1978 or in the PCUS prior to 1979.

6. Call on Presbyterians to reject in their own lives, and challenge in others, the sin of homophobia, which drives persons who consider themselves to be homosexual away from Christ and his church.

7. Call upon the media to end the use of unrealistic stereotypes of homosexual behavior.

8. Encourage persons working in the human sciences and therapies to pursue research that will seek to learn more about the nature and causes of homosexuality.

9. Encourage Christians who experience same-sex attractions to form communities to encourage them in seeking sexual reorientation or meaningful, joyous, and productive celibate lifestyles and the dissemination throughout the church of information about such communities.
10. Call for an end to any discriminatory enforcement of criminal laws against homosexual persons.

11. Call upon those who in conscience have difficulty accepting the decisions of this General Assembly bearing on homosexuality to express that conscience by continued dialogue within the church. (Some recommendations of the 1978 policy statement have been retained in those above, see Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 265–66.)

Rationale

Declaring the definitive guidelines of 1978 in the United Presbyterian Church (USA) and 1979 in the Presbyterian Church U.S., and other interpretive statements to have “...no further force or effect” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 373) leaves the church without a clear response to the question of whether ordination of self-affirming, practicing, homosexual persons remains an act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture and to the will of Christ. While both the Old and New Testaments speak clearly on the matter, and The Book of Confessions, Part I of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), speaks explicitly to this matter, the interpretive statements have been of great benefit and guidance to the church’s life and witness.

The authoritative interpretation above addresses many helpful aspects of the church’s relationship with persons in homosexual relationships, correctly advising Christians to love and care for their brothers and sisters and giving explicit authoritative counsel on the church’s proper pastoral role. The church is poorer for the previous removal of that guidance.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-05

Advice on Item 06-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-05.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

The intent of Item 06-05 appears to be to reinstate the authoritative interpretations of the current G-6.0106a as precluding the ordination of a self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to the offices of deacon, elder, and Minister of Word and Sacrament that were withdrawn by the 218th General Assembly. However, in form, the authoritative interpretation proposed goes far beyond any authoritative interpretation previously adopted by the denomination, and includes virtually all of the Definitive Guidance adopted by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and by the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

The Definitive Guidance, as a whole, was not an authoritative interpretation. Rather, as recognized in Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell v The Presbytery of Western New York (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 118 et seq.), it was issued under broader authority in the 1978 Book of Order for the assembly to use “deciding in all controversies respecting doctrine and the interpretation of the Constitution of the Church; of reproving, warning, or bearing testimony against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in any church, presbytery, or synod ...” (Book of Order (UPCUSA) (1978–79), Chapter XIV, Section 10; see also Book of Church Order (PCUS) (1978–79) 18-6). These provisions are the counterparts of G-13.0103p, q and r. Only subpart “r” provides the basis for an authoritative interpretation.

Blasdell recognized that only the portion of the Definitive Guidance addressing ordination was an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution under the provisions of G-13.0103r:

[I]t is our considered opinion, and we so find, that the “Definitive Guidance” of the 190th General Assembly (1978) of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the “Definitive Guidance” of the 119th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States on the issue of ordination of self-affirming, practicing homosexuals were, in fact and in substance, authoritative interpretations of the Constitutions as they were then and as the Constitution presently exists. (Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 121, emphasis added)

The overture proposes to incorporate extensive language unrelated to the Constitution into an authoritative interpretation by quoting large parts of the Definitive Guidance verbatim, and in other places offering a variation from the language of 1978. To the extent that the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to affirm any portions of this language to the denomination, it should do so not as authoritative interpretation, but pursuant to its authority under G-13.0103p “to warn or bear witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in or outside the church” (Book of Order, G-13.0103p).

The language appropriate for an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution in this overture is found in the section labeled “Authoritative Interpretation” under “Conclusions.” Consistent with the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution regarding Item 06-04 the proposed authoritative interpretation is of G-6.0106b, which is the constitutional provision that most specifically addresses such conduct, rather than G-6.0106a, the provision in place at the time of the Definitive Guidance.

However, the proposed authoritative interpretation would go far beyond the Definitive Guidance or authoritative interpretations adopted prior to incorporation of G-6.0106b into the Constitution. Specifically, the interpretation offered would:

1. Replace current interpretations of Section G-6.0106b, based upon its specific language, that require that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. See particularly: Presbytery of San Joaquin v Presbytery of the Redwoods (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 277) and Wier v Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339).

2. Extend the prohibitions on ordination or installation to all individuals who believe it would be appropriate for “those engaged in unrepentant homosexual practice” to be ordained or installed.

The proposed authoritative interpretation goes well beyond and is not supported by the language of G-6.0106b. The language of G-6.0106b on its face does not provide warrant to preclude the ordination or installation of “those who affirm their freedom to be so engaged” in unrepentant homosexual practice, but rather only applies to those who “refus[e] to repent of any self-acknowledged practice...” (Book of Order, G-6.0106b). Further, G-6.0106b contains an express requirement of self-acknowledgment. “… [I]f a person does not self-acknowledge a practice that the confessions call sin, then a governing body has a positive obligation to make further inquiry only if it has direct and specific knowledge that said person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution...” (Presbytery of San Joaquin v Presbytery of the Redwoods, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 280; see also Wier v Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339).

Indeed, the prohibition on ordination or installation in G-6.0106b would apply to any candidate who declined to affirm that persons sexually active outside of marriage should be precluded from ordination. Thus, more fundamentally, the proposed authoritative interpretation would not protect the historic principle of freedom of conscience found in the Report of the Special Committee on Historical Principles, Conscience, and Church Government:

The rights of the individual, the minority and absentees are carefully protected rights within the Constitution and by the parliamentary practices of the church. Individuals have every reasonable right to press their case to try to persuade the majority of the church to their point of view and, having failed, they still have the right to enter a formal dissent or protest on the records of the governing body to which they belong. (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p.141ff).

Finally, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the interpretation proposed would remove the authoritative interpretation adopted by the 217th General Assembly (2006) in response to the recommendations of the Task Force on Peace, Unity and Purity, as revised by the 218th General Assembly (2008), the details and operation of which are discussed in detail in Section 4 of the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution—concerning Item 06-01. Reinstiution of the 1978 and 1979 Definitive Guidance does not provide a basis for undoing actions that related to the interplay of G-6.0106b and G-6.0108, an issue not before the denomination when it adopted the Definitive Guidance.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to take this action, it would have a similar impact on the proposed Form of Government

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 06-05 be disapproved.

Rationale

Regarding the proposed authoritative interpretation, please refer to ACSWP’s Advice and Counsel on Item 06-04.

Item 06-05, in addition, recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve as policy the statement written by the Presbytery of Shenandoah. Much of this statement quotes large segments of the Definitive Guidance adopted by the PC(USA)’s predecessor denominations in 1978 and 1979.

The PC(USA) has a long tradition of developing social witness policy according to very specific procedures set out in Manual of the General Assembly (2010). ACSWP is tasked in the section of Guidelines and Policies on Forming Policy with the responsibility for developing social witness policy as mandated by the General Assembly.
The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy will be responsible for the process of developing and recommending social witness policy to the General Assembly. If any other entity is involved in processes of developing and recommending social witness policy, then appropriate consultation and linkage with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy shall be undertaken. (Manual of the General Assembly, p. 65)

The procedures to be followed require an inclusive and highly consultative process, including the appointment of a diverse task force that develops a plan by which the whole church can participate in its deliberations. The task force is mandated to listen to the voices of the biblical text, the wisdom of theological discourse, the guidance of our Reformed confessions, the insights of sociopolitical disciplines, past policy statements, the advice of church members and governing bodies, the counsel of ecumenical partners, and the insights of people who are poor, victims of existing policies, and those who have not had a voice in church councils.

The Presbytery of Shenandoah is to be commended for the seriousness with which they approached this issue. However, should the 219th General Assembly (2010) want to develop a new policy statement on the issue of sexual orientation, ACSWP advises that it mandate the development of such a policy according to the Manual of the General Assembly.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 06-05 recommends approval of authoritative interpretation on homosexual practice and the church.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) disapprove this item.

Rationale

See Rationale for Item 06-09.

Item 06-06

[The assembly answered Item 06-06 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

The Presbytery of Detroit respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church, by their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, as revealed in Holy Scripture, striving to follow where He leads through the authoritative witness of the Scriptures, and to understand the Scriptures through the instruction of the Confessions. In so doing, they declare their fidelity to the standards of the Church. Each governing body charged with examination for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) establishes the candidate’s faithful efforts to adhere to these standards.”

2. Amend G-14.0240 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “Preparation and Examination for Office

   “When persons have been elected to the office of elder or deacon, the session shall confer with them as to their willingness to undertake the office. The session shall provide for a period of study and preparation, after which the session shall examine the officers-elect as to their personal faith; knowledge of the doctrine, government, and discipline contained in the Constitution of the church; and the duties of the office; and readiness to assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation. If the examination is approved, the session shall appoint a day for the service of ordination and installation (see W-4.4000). If the examination is not approved for one or more elected officers, the session shall report its action to the congregation’s nominating committee, which shall bring nomination(s) to a meeting of the congregation for any office(s) not filled”

3. Amend G-14.0450 by inserting a new paragraph “b.” and by relettering current paragraphs “b.” through “d.” as “c.” through “f.” The text shall read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Final Assessment of Readiness to Begin Ordained Ministry

“In the final year of theological education or when a candidate has satisfied all of the requirements of this section, and before the candidate has received a call, the committee on preparation for ministry of the candidate’s presbytery shall conduct a final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ordained ministry. A summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. The committee on preparation for ministry shall report to the presbytery when it has certified a candidate ready for examination for ordination, pending a call. This consultation shall focus on the outcomes of inquiry and candidacy and shall include each of the following requirements of certification:

“a. demonstration of readiness to begin ministry of the Word and Sacrament as required to fulfill the candidacy phase of preparation;

“b. demonstration of readiness to assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation;

“c. presentation of a transcript showing satisfactory grades at a regionally accredited college or university, together with a diploma;

“d. presentation of a transcript from a theological institution accredited by the Association of Theological Schools acceptable to the presbytery, the transcript showing satisfactory grades, and presentation of a plan to complete the theological degree including Hebrew and Greek and exegesis of the Old and New Testaments using Hebrew and Greek texts;

“e. presentation of satisfactory grades together with the examination papers in the five areas covered by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates.”

Rationale

The opening paragraphs of the Form of Government are a powerful statement of the fundamental Christian and Reformed affirmation that Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church. In support of this primary affirmation, Chapter I of the Form of Government calls Christians to attend to the Scriptures, insofar as they set forth “Christ’s will for the Church,” and Chapter II identifies the church’s confessions as its guides, subordinate to the Lordship of Jesus Christ as revealed to us in Scripture alone. Our church thus has bound itself to a hierarchy of authority in which we are to obey Jesus Christ its Head, and, the Scriptures as the authoritative witness to Him, and then the confessions, to the extent that they accurately bear witness to Christ’s will. This fundamental hierarchy of authority is accurately and eloquently reflected in the first three of the constitutional questions, the assent to which is required of each candidate for ordination and/or installation.

Although the hierarchy of the church’s authority is clear, it is subverted by the current language of G-6.0106b, which substitutes for our obedience to Christ two concepts that are foreign to Reformed understanding: “obedience” to Scripture and “conformity” to the confessions. We do not confess, “Scripture is Lord” nor “the Confessions are Lord.” Instead, we boldly confess that “Christ is Lord!” The proposed amendment would substitute new language, which (1) reflects the church’s historical understanding of where its authority is to be found, and (2) reaffirms the church’s reliance on the examination of candidates by its governing bodies as the principal means by which to ensure the commitment of its ordained officers to the duties of faith. The amendment additionally would insert appropriate language to ensure that each such examination would include discussion of the constitutional questions and the governing body’s determination of the candidate’s readiness to accept their principles and faithfully live by them to the extent any of us is able.

In order to be able to rely on Jesus Christ as its Head and as its chief guide in all of life, the church must shed any human-made, subordinate source of authority that would bind its ability to follow where our Savior leads.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-06

Advice on Item 06-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-06 with the following comment.
Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-06 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b, and would amend G-14.0240 and G-14.0450 to incorporate consistent provisions regarding the examination of candidates for office. In other respects, the proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language is virtually identical to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-06

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-06—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-06, like 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-07

[The assembly answered Item 06-07 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

On Deleting G-6.0106b—From the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Presbytery of Hudson River overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106b be stricken? [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through.]

b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W 4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”

Rationale

Simply put, G-6.0106b is superfluous. The church’s need to protect the mystery and the integrity of calls to ministry by followers in the Way of Jesus is already well and carefully met in G-6.0106a.

“To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament—God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, natural and acquired, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a governing body of the church.”
Section G-6.0106b adds nothing to this careful and loving scrutiny on the behalf of the whole church. Instead it damages the peace and unity of the church, creating an environment of suspicion and mistrust for all candidates for ordination, whether deacons, elders, or ministers, and opens a door to grief and recrimination.

Worse yet, the exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b do violence to Scripture’s clear teaching on God’s clear intention that everyone is to be welcomed within the gates of the city and no one is to be made to feel unworthy or afraid (Mic. 4:4). As the whole human family is out of the hands of God, so, per force, is the whole human family to be welcomed to the whole life of God’s church. There can be no beloved community that imagines, designs, and builds divisions into its life. Such divisions are by definition violent. Who doubts that they break the heart of God?

Section G- 6.0101b has usurped our Reformed tradition. Its effect has been to create a second class membership that is against our faith and our historic principles based on the ‘priesthood of all believers.” The ordination policies of G-6.0106b are in conflict with numerous parts of the Book of Order that underscore the church’s call to welcome and inclusiveness (G-3.0401, G-4.0100–0403) and the privileges granted to all members (G-5.0102 and G-5.0103, G-6.0107, and G-6.0108). The failure of the church to embody this hospitality “… constitutes a rejection of Christ himself and causes a scandal to the gospel.”

In the same way, The Confession of 1967 affirms, in clear and compelling language, the church’s vocation to hospitality of God:

… The church is called to bring [women and men] to receive and uphold one another as persons in all relationships of life: in employment, housing, education, leisure, marriage, family, church, and the exercise of political rights. … Congregations, individuals, or groups of Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize [others], however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess. (The Book of Confessions, 9:44)

The Brief Statement of Faith is no less eloquent:

In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God’s image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community.” (The Book of Confessions, 10:3, Lines 29–32)

The church is to be a sanctuary but not a hideout. Within the church, all of life, every life, wholeness of life matter. None of the lines that divide the human family in the world apply within the community of believers: not between old and young, male and female, rich and poor, homed and homeless, black and white, gay and straight, physically challenged or not. We are to exhibit another way to live that is beyond all of these and other divisions, a way that is characterized by love, forbearance, the giving and receiving of forgiveness, compassion, and joy.

Concurrence to Item 06-07 from the Presbytery of New York City (with Additional Rationale).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination, particularly as reflected in the provisions of G-6.0106b, require interpretation of ambiguous words and phrases in order to determine who has or has not met the standards for ordination. The battle over interpretation, and in particular, using this amendment in consistent attempts to root out all those with whom we might disagree, has fractured the fellowship and families of our brothers and sisters within the church, offering little hope to those who look to us for witness, as well.

Additionally, this delineation has produced real spiritual and personal harm in designating directly or indirectly that individuals who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender (LGBT) are second-class creations of God, less able to serve because they identify as they were created by God.

Maintaining G-6.0106a and deleting G-6.0106b returns to the presbyteries and sessions the oversight of who is to be ordained to the offices of the church, and returns the entire church to the Reformed understanding that we read the same Scripture but come to different conclusions. The fact that this covenant was ever broken by the addition of G-6.0106b points to a sad choice that has greatly divided our church. It is this amendment that is the cause of the division, not our sisters and brothers against which it is used to discriminate.

Deletion of G-6.0106b returns the church to its historic standards of ordination as stated in G-6.0106a, which provides that the manner of life for all officers of the church “should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world,” as follows:

G-6.0106a: To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament—God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, natural and acquired, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a governing body of the church.

Where these provisions of G-6.0106a adequately state the PC(USA)’s historic, Reformed understanding of the standards for ordination, the provisions of G-6.0106b discriminatorily exclude faithful church members from service in the church.
The provisions of G-6.0106b—and their exclusion of faithful LGBT Christians from the full life of the church—contradict Scripture’s teachings about the freedom of God’s Spirit to engage in surprising, new, and unpredictable activities (John 3). Who of us can say with absolute certainty precisely what is God’s will with regard to the leadership of the church?

For centuries, the church used biblical texts as the basis of opposition to the ordination of women and inclusion of African Americans in our congregations. Now we know that both practices were sinful violations of God’s will. Likewise, A Brief Statement of Faith reminds us that the same Spirit “… calls women and men to all ministries of the Church” (The Book of Confessions, 10.4, line 64). Current denominational practices constricted by the exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b deny the truth of God’s freedom to “do a new thing” (Isa. 43:19).

The exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b contradict the value that Scripture places on inclusive welcome (Acts 8:26ff, 10:28 and 11:17). So, too, current ordination policies conflict with numerous parts of the Book of Order that underscore the church’s call to openness and inclusiveness (G-3.0401, G-4.0100–.0403) and the rights granted to members (G-5.0102 and G-5.0103, G-6.0107 and G-6.0108).

The exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b contradict the Great Commission of Christ, who instructed his followers to go into all the world, making disciples, baptizing and teaching (Matt. 28:16–20). The Scriptures call the church out of itself and direct us to practice hospitality towards all—even strangers (Hebrews 13), thereby demonstrating the message of grace and welcome that draws people into the community of faith. The Apostle Paul points out that “… God shows no partiality, but in every nation anyone who fears [God] and does what is right is acceptable to [God]” (Acts 10:34–35).

The exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b contradict the church’s understanding of the Sacrament of Baptism. The Book of Order tells us that in baptism “we die to what separates us from God.” To be consistent with that teaching, we cannot then set up a barrier (ordination) that separates some of the baptized from their unity with God and from God’s calling on their lives. Likewise, we profess that “baptism is [a] sign and symbol of inclusion in God’s grace and covenant …” (W-2.3004), and that “barriers of race, gender, status, and age are to be transcended. Barriers of nationality, history, and practice are to be overcome” (W-2.3005). We cannot, with any integrity, baptize believers and then set up discriminatory barriers to their full participation and service within the church.

The exclusionary provisions of G-6.0106b contradict the basic principle of the church that all men and women who are church members have both the right and responsibility to respond to God’s call to special ministries as elders, deacons, or ministers of Word and Sacrament (G 6.0106a). There is only one status of church membership; one’s sexual orientation should not be regarded when considering service.

Concurrence to Item 06-07 from the Presbytery of the Redwoods (with Additional Rationale).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination, particularly as reflected in the provisions of G-6.0106b, require interpretation of ambiguous words and phrases in order to determine who has or has not met the standards for ordination. The battle over interpretation, and in particular, the attempt to root out all those with whom we disagree, has fractured the fellowship of our brothers and sisters in the church. There is only one status of church membership; one’s sexual orientation should not be regarded when considering service.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-07

Advice on Item 06-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-07 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the General Assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 06-07 seeks to delete G-6.0106b from the Form of Government. Approval of this overture would accomplish its intent to modify the church’s position on ordination standards.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: to the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-07—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-07, like 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-08

[The assembly answered Item 06-08 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

On Replacing G-6.0106b with New Text—From the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Presbytery of Hudson River respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
Shall the current text of G-6.0106b be stricken, and replaced with the following text:

"Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, striving to follow him through the witness of the Scriptures, and through the historic discernment of those Scriptures expressed in the Confessions of the church. Living obediently, we are called to proclaim the Gospel to all peoples, to love neighbor and enemy, and to express the love of Christ in faithful relationships with others. Persons who are ordained and/or installed are nonetheless sinners in need of God’s grace. The governing bodies of the church are called to be communities of support and accountability, as together we labor to be an obedient people, and seek to be disciples of the living Christ."

Rationale

At the very core of our Reformed identity are these words from Paul, “for by grace you have been saved through faith, and this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God” (Eph. 2:8). We acknowledge that there is nothing we can do to earn God’s grace—nothing we can do to earn God’s calling in our lives—nothing we can do that lifts us above our neighbor in the loving eyes of God which know no partiality.

The present and much debated text of G-6.0106b steps beyond this core understanding. The current language, “persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament,” supposes that ordained persons can manage the task of repentance for all forms of sin in their lives. This is impossible, and the very notion a scandal to the Gospel. If we could live lives utterly free from sin, if we could be wholly repentant, we would not need the grace of God in Jesus Christ. Indeed, Paul would remind us, “You who want to be justified by the law have cut yourselves off from Christ; you have fallen away from grace” (Gal. 5:4).

And yet, this does not free us to set aside God’s claim upon our lives. God’s gift of grace comes wrapped in the life of faith. With faith comes obedience. Obedience is founded in relationship. God calls—God’s children obey.

The governing bodies of the church are communities of sinners, ever working out this call to obedience, with fear and trembling, with joy and compassion. We look to Scripture, to each other, and to the community of saints whose voices ring in our Confessions, seeking God’s will for each moment of our lives. In faith, we leave God room to be God—humbly acknowledging that we cannot mend our brokenness by ourselves—and that God can speak a new word in a new time if God chooses to do so, through the Living Word, Jesus Christ.

Ordination in the church is not a mark of sinlessness. Ordination is a sign by which the church recognizes a person’s response to the call of God to a particular office despite their sin. It is not their works that have prepared them, nor their works that will sustain them, but the grace of God that is bestowed in baptism that alone is sufficient for their calling.

The present language of G-6.0106b also errs in lifting up one form of supposed sin above the rest. The text, “among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness,” is a thin attempt to avoid the many sins of all our lives by setting apart some as inherently more sinful than others.

This overture invites us to consider the many avoided questions of our sinfulness—Is it a sin when we fail to love our enemies? Is neglect of our environment a sin? Is it sinful to hoard away wealth when God’s children are hungry? Is it a sin when we fail to welcome the alien, the widow, the orphan? Is it a sin that we who sing “I love to tell the story” fail to tell neighbor and stranger of Christ’s presence in our lives?

A catalog of the serial, unrepentant sinfulness of our lives would fill many books. Gratefully, if all of the Grace of Jesus Christ “were written down, … the world itself could not contain the books that would be written” (cf. John 21:25).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-08

Advice on Item 06-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-08 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-08 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.
The overture would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. The overture further substitutes responsibilities to “… proclaim the Gospel to all peoples, to love neighbor and enemy, and to express the love of Christ in faithful relationships with others…” (Item 06-08) for the current standards of G-6.0106b. This sentence, however, is somewhat confused by the substitution of the first person pronoun “we” as the subject of the sentence, rather than continuing to refer to “persons who are called to office.” The overture reframes the role of governing bodies as being “communities of support and accountability,” but does not describe how governing bodies carry out such responsibilities. Presumably, with respect to presbyteries, the provisions in chapter eleven of the Form of Government define those roles, but this intent is unstated. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the language is similar, but not identical, to the amendment adopted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) and sent to the presbyteries for their vote. The amendment was rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-08

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-08—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-08, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-09

[The assembly approved Item 06-09. See pp. 33–34, 47.]

On Amending G-6.0106b—From the Presbytery of the Western Reserve.

The Presbytery of the Western Reserve overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106b be amended by striking the current text and inserting new text in its place: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Standards for ordained service reflect the church’s desire to submit joyfully to the Lordship of Jesus Christ in all aspects of life (G-1.0000). The governing body responsible for ordination and/or installation (G.14.0240; G-14.0450) shall examine each candidate’s calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for the responsibilities of office. The examination shall include, but not be limited to, a determination of the candidate’s ability and commitment to fulfill all requirements as expressed in the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003). Governing bodies shall be guided by Scripture and the confessions in applying standards to individual candidates.”

Rationale

The integrity of the church demands that those who serve in ordained office meet high standards—always seeking to live according to the life and teaching of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. As we affirm in the words of the Theological Declaration of Barmen: “Jesus Christ, as he is attested for us in Holy Scripture, is the one Word of God which we have to … trust and obey in life and in death” (The Book of Confessions, 8.11).
And yet no person follows perfectly; each of us is entirely dependent for our salvation, and for our growth in faith and obedience, on the grace of Christ:

For there is no distinction, since all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God; they are now justified by his grace as a gift, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God put forward as a sacrifice of atonement by his blood, effective through faith. He did this to show his righteousness, because in his divine forbearance he had passed over the sins previously committed; it was to prove at the present time that he himself is righteous and that he justifies the one who has faith in Jesus. (Rom. 3:22b–26)

The current text of G-6.0106b was added to the Book of Order in an attempt to bring closure to the issue of the ordination of persons in same-sex relationships; instead, it has brought continual contention to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It purports to apply even-handedly to all candidates, but is overwhelmingly used only to exclude gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered persons—many of whom exhibit abundant gifts and strong calls to ministry. With its reference to any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin, it has rarely or never been honestly applied to any candidate ordained or installed since its adoption.

The PC(USA) has no consensus in the interpretation of Scripture on issues of same-sex practice. When convictions about important issues are so different, and so firmly-held, our long-standing Presbyterian commitment to freedom of conscience and mutual forbearance is vital to maintaining our fellowship:

That, while under the conviction of the above principle we think it necessary to make effectual provision that all who are admitted as teachers be sound in the faith, we also believe that there are truths and forms with respect to which men of good characters and principles may differ. And in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other. (Book of Order, G-1.0305)

The proposed amendment would maintain high standards for ordination and installation by renewed focus on the questions candidates must answer, but without imposing a single, highly contested interpretation of Scripture on the whole church.

Concurrence to Item 06-09 from the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky.

Concurrence to Item 06-09 from the Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy (with Additional Rationale).

The integrity of the church demands that those who serve in ordained office meet high standards—always seeking to live according to the life and teaching of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. As we affirm in the words of the Theological Declaration of Barmen: “Jesus Christ, as he is attested for us in Holy Scripture, is the one Word of God which we have to hear and which we have to … trust and obey in life and in death” (The Book of Confessions, 8.12)

And yet no person follows perfectly; each of us is entirely dependent for our salvation, and for our growth in faith and obedience, on the grace of Christ:

For there is no distinction, since all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God; they are now justified by his grace as a gift, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God put forward as a sacrifice of atonement by his blood, effective through faith. He did this to show his righteousness, because in his divine forbearance he had passed over the sins previously committed; it was to prove at the present time that he himself is righteous and that he justifies the one who has faith in Jesus. (Rom. 3:22b–26)

The Office of Theology and Worship, in a publication on Ordination and Authority, correctly points out that the vows of ordination create a hierarchy of authority: obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, guided by the confessions, governed by the church’s polity, within a collegial ministry. This demands that the ultimate authority in call is Jesus Christ, and we further recognize that a call to ministry is never the result of our perfection but of Christ’s ability to make us useful, even in our imperfection.

The current text of G-6.0106b was added to the Book of Order in an attempt to bring closure to the issue of the ordination of persons in same-sex relationships; instead, it has brought continual contention to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It purports to apply even-handedly to all candidates, but is overwhelmingly used only to exclude gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender persons—many of whom exhibit abundant gifts and strong calls to ministry. With its reference to any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin,” it has rarely or never been honestly applied to any candidate ordained or installed since its adoption.

The PC(USA) has no consensus in the interpretation of Scripture on issues of same-sex practice. When convictions about important issues are so different, and so firmly-held, our long-standing Presbyterian commitment to freedom of conscience and mutual forbearance is vital to maintaining our fellowship:

And in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other. (Book of Order, G-1.0305)

The proposed amendment would maintain high standards for ordination and installation by renewed focus on the questions candidates must answer, but without imposing a single, highly contested interpretation of Scripture on the whole church.
Concurrence to Item 06-09 from the Presbytery of Heartland (with Additional Rationale)

Currently some church members believe that homosexuality is sinful; however, homosexuals are members of the church, a church that is composed entirely of sinners. All church members are subject to the Great Commission, which commands the followers of Christ to make disciples of all nations (Mt. 28:16–20). The ability to completely fulfill the Great Commission requires the capacity to exercise all of the gifts of the Spirit, including ministry (1 Corinthians 12). Therefore, homosexual church members, if called by God, should be allowed to serve in ordained offices, thereby empowering these church members with the ability to fulfill the Great Commission.

Currently some church members believe that homosexuality was considered sinful by the early church and consequently homosexuals should be prohibited from the current practice of ordination. However, the practices of slavery and the prohibition against women serving in ordained leadership positions in the church appear to have been condoned by the early Church, but these practices and prohibitions have since been recognized as being an obstruction to God’s will.

Currently some church members believe the role of the church is to discern God’s will primarily through the love and grace of Jesus Christ. To say that the Spirit cannot move the church to revise its stance on the ordination of homosexual church members who are called by God to service and who are gifted with abilities to serve in ordained offices would be to impugn the sovereignty of God.

Currently some church members believe that homosexuality is not a sin, but is a part of God’s created order and should be celebrated as such. God testifies to the inherent goodness of creation (Gen. 1:31) and states that all of us are wondrously made; therefore the church should not bring reproach upon God’s own creation (Ps. 139:14). God has always known us, God formed us, and God sets us apart for service (Jer. 1:5). Those who abide in God do not face condemnation from God, nor should they be censured by human standards, nor be condemned by the church (Rom. 8:1). Accordingly, any church member who is called by the Spirit should be allowed to serve in ordained ministry.

Currently some church members deny homosexual Christians the opportunity to be ordained to serve in Christ’s name, thereby denying Christ’s authority (Mt. 28:18b). Such action causes the church to commit the corporate sin of disobedience by blocking paths to the fulfillment of the Great Commission.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-09

Advice on Item 06-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-09 with the following comment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice on Item 06-04 that sets forth the background the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-09 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

This overture seeks to restore the ordination practice and principles affirmed in the Adopting Act of 1729, the paradigm through which the tension between the differing points of view and the unity of the church have been maintained through much of our denomination’s history. Examining bodies are required not only to examine “… each candidate’s calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for the responsibilities of office,” but are also required to judge the candidate’s “… ability and commitment to fulfill all requirements as expressed in the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003)” (Item 06-09, emphasis added). These questions require that the candidate affirm the authority of scripture, adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as contained in our confessions, and submit to the polity and discipline of the church. Moreover, the overture specifically states, consistent with the Adopting Act, that the examining bodies “… shall be guided by Scripture and the confessions in applying standards to individual candidates…” (Item 06-09, emphasis added).

The proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language has some similarity, and a similar intent, to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.
Advice and Counsel on Item 06-09—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Items 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, from differing presbyteries, all overture the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries amendments that would delete G-6.0106b (Item 06-07) or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers the following advice and counsel:

Since 1978, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and its predecessors have recognized that ordination issues are justice issues that are linked to a range of cultural changes. The history of the church’s struggle to embrace equality in ordination for women and racial/ethnic men is a clear example of this connection. The action of the 217th General Assembly (2006), to approve paragraph five of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church report, was intended to provide a way by which we could live together in mutual forbearance and respect our differences regarding ordination of homosexual persons. In response to a decision by the Permanent Judicial Commission (PJC) in Bush v Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10), the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved two authoritative interpretations intended to return to governing bodies the responsibility to determine what is “essential” and to avoid rigid and legalistic standards, particularly ones that highlight certain sexual sins while not naming many other forms and categories of serious sin. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 319–323)

Items 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17 share this intention. All affirm the need for ethical standards shaping the whole of life, for reasonable regulation applied fairly by councils of the church, and that the responsibility for discernment of readiness for ordination lies with the local governing bodies as they examine candidates as individuals in a case-by-case basis. By deleting G-6.0106b and offering replacement language, they intend to remove the narrow focus on sexual sins and to remove the ambiguities of relying on authoritative interpretations rather than amending Part II of the Constitution of the PC(USA). ACSWP agrees with the general intent of these items and finds them to be consistent with the historical practice of the church to strive for balance in articulating its standards and respect for individual conscience and the diversity of perspectives existing within it. As the church’s constitution states:

… So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained (Book of Order, G-6.0108a).

… The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves” (Book of Order, G-6.0108b).

If the 219th General Assembly (2020) chooses to send an amendment on this issue to the presbyteries for their consideration, ACSWP concurs with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution that Item 06-09 is the preferred language.

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 06-09 deals with amending G-6.0106b.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve this overture.

Rationale

After reviewing all the overtures on ordination, ACWC chooses to speak on Item 06-09. We believe this overture offers the best possibility of moving us forward as a denomination in this more than thirty-year debate. It calls for high standards for ordination, outlines the process of examination for each candidate—calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for office—while lifting up the importance of the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003) without limiting the examination only to those questions.

We would, however, advise the substitution of the Rationale for Item 06-17 as it is much more comprehensive.

The PC(USA) has no consensus in the interpretation of Scripture on the issue of same-sex practice. When convictions about important issues are so different, and so firmly-held, our long-standing commitment to freedom of conscience and mutual forbearance is vital to maintaining our communal relationship. This proposed amendment would maintain high standards for ordination and installation by renewed focus on the questions candidates must answer, but without imposing a single, highly contested interpretation of Scripture on the whole church.
Item 06-10

[The assembly answered Item 06-10 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

The Presbytery of Southern New England respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the present paragraph G-6.0106b be stricken and new text inserted in its place as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

"Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Jesus, the Head of the Church, has established standards for church officers (G-6.0101). These standards are contained in the Scriptures rightly understood in the light of the Confessions, and expressed in The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003) shall guide those responsible for examination as they discern with an individual that person’s calling, gifts, and preparation and their willingness to adhere to church standards. Those seeking office shall demonstrate their understanding of and affirm their willingness to adhere to church standards."

Rationale

It is appropriate for the Book of Order chapter on the church and its officers to discuss the standards for holders of church office. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has considered these standards with care on several occasions and each time has decided in favor of our tradition’s rich complexity rather than a specific list of “standards.” Indeed, the decision to adopt The Book of Confessions epitomizes this affirmation of the richness and diversity of our Reformed tradition’s self awareness. It also acknowledges that the times and places where people of faith attempt to articulate their beliefs modify their expression.

The constitutional questions for ordination and installation are not in themselves a standard or a list of standards. They are questions that direct the attention of individuals considering church office and of the governing bodies charged with examining them to the full diversity of belief and practice that is the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The questions encourage, and can guide, discernment of the appropriateness of the person to particular church office by the individual, the calling organization, and those responsible for the individual’s preparation and examination.

All would agree that Jesus, the Head of the church, establishes the standards. While this is said in G-6.0101, its absence from G-6.0106b has caused considerable theological controversy. Whatever we may say about standards must be based on Jesus’ leading. Much of our polity, and much of the history of its development, is concerned with learning to listen to Jesus’ leading. That is why we have come to rely on the decisions of the larger bodies of the church in matters of controversy. It is through our connectional effort to discern where Jesus is leading us that we have developed our polity and its practical expression of the way we participate in the true church.

Our standards have never been successfully expressed as a few simple ideas or behaviors. As Calvin understood, Scripture contains the word of God, but it is not the word of God. The result is that we depend on our confessions to inform the way we approach, read, understand, and interpret Scripture. Likewise, Scripture and our polity contain our standards, but are not our standards. We continually engage them as we seek to faithfully apply our standards to particular people and callings.

The diversity that arises from our efforts at understanding and the diversity of individuals and of callings demands careful consideration of each person being considered for ordained church office. Those considerations rightly include the responsibility to apply the standards determined by the whole church to the particular situation. This is challenging work. That is why there is a process for review. That is why our Reformed tradition looks to the wisdom of governing bodies to make these determinations. But it also depends on the willingness of governing bodies to trust the effort and good will of the decisions made on behalf of the whole church by other governing bodies.

Sessions and presbyteries are responsible for both the preparation and examination of people considering service as church officers. These responsibilities are best carried out in a spirit of mutual discernment that is only possible in an atmosphere of trust and love. The language presently in G-6.0106b is an impediment to this work. It creates an unnecessarily adversarial relationship compromised by suspicion. The people who desire to serve the church are conscientious and willing to give generously of their time, talents (especially when it comes to paying for a theological education), and lives. They deserve gratitude and support from their church. Even when the discernment that accompanies the process of preparation directs them to a different understanding of their call, they deserve our thanks and encouragement, not our suspicions.
Presbyteries and their committees on preparation do not need the language of the present G-6.0106b as they carry out their responsibilities. They have other, more gracious and more effective means for recognizing those cases where a call to ministry is inappropriate. Sessions likewise know the people they are preparing for church office and are not helped by the present language.

We need to replace the present paragraph “b.” It has brought much strife and little peace, unity, or purity to our church. We offer this proposed amendment as language that we can all agree to and apply to everyone being considered for church office.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-10

Advice on Item 06-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-10 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-10 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture would substitute a standard based on a candidate’s willingness to adhere to the standards contained in the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003) for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. The proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language is similar, but not identical, to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

On Amending G-6.0106b to Give Broader But Specific Scope to the Ordination Standards—From the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler.

The Presbytery of Beaver-Butler respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

219TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2010)
“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those called to ordained service in the church, and having given assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ, Head of the Church. In so doing, those ordained bind themselves, to the best of their ability, with the ever-present help of the Holy Spirit, to live according to the leading and witness of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as mediated through the Confessions. In so doing, they thus declare their fidelity to the Standards of the Church. Foremost among these standards are the New Testament Epistolary ethical requirements for ordained officers of ministry, which include but are not limited to chastity in singleness and fidelity in monogamous, heterosexual marriage. Each governing body charged with examination for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) attests and affirms candidates’ sincere efforts to adhere to these standards and is responsible for the maintenance and administration of routine positive and negative discipline over those ordained.”

Rationale

The Church of Jesus Christ in the contemporary Western world finds itself in an increasingly chaotic culture in which even our most basic social, political, philosophical, and theological assumptions are challenged, attacked, ignored, and even openly scorned.

It is a time well-described by the late general of the Army, Omar N. Bradley, who said, “We live in an age of nuclear giants and ethical infants, in a world that has achieved brilliance without wisdom, power without conscience. We have solved the mystery of the atom and forgotten the lessons of the Sermon on the Mount. We know more about war than we know about peace, more about dying than we know about living.”

Nowhere is such confusion demonstrated more poignantly than in the contemporary search for, subscription to, and application of a compelling system of ethics that can be applied to our individual and corporate lives. In just the last decade we have observed myriad public figures from all disciplines, professions, and walks of life ethically compromise themselves in highly public spectacles that demonstrate either a spectacular moral ignorance or a coarse amorality.

Sadly, much of the blame for such blatant disregard of basic traditional norms can and must be laid at the feet of the Christian churches in Western societies. This moral malaise within the American portion of Christ’s Body was well diagnosed by Reformed theologian H. Richard Niebuhr. The Union Theological Seminary (New York) professor described the theology and preaching of vast swaths of 20th Century Protestantism with this observation, “A God without wrath brought people without sin into a kingdom without judgment through the ministry of a Christ without the cross.”

Our understanding and practice of distinctly Christian ethics must be derived from a consistent and fixed source that must be inculcated in and demonstrated by the ordained leaders of the church.

Such an understanding does, in fact, exist. It has been revealed to us by the Triune God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. He has revealed Himself to us repeatedly throughout Covenant History in theophanies (personal appearances of God to people to whom He has chosen to reveal Himself and His will), inspired authoritative writings (the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments), and finally—and most decisively through the Incarnate Word of God, Jesus of Nazareth, the Messiah, and our Emmanuel.

The opening paragraphs of our Form of Government are a powerful testimony to this fundamental belief and affirmation: Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church.

As the Gospel writer asserts so powerfully in the opening verses of John’s Gospel, “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things came into being through him, and without him not one thing came into being. What has come into being in him was life, and the life was the light of all people. The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not overcome it” (John 1:1–5)

Central to Reformed Theology is our understanding of how Christ’s headship over the Church is exercised and revealed to His Body, the Church. We know that ultimately the Word of God is Christ Jesus, the Incarnate Word by Whom the fullness of God is manifested to human beings. We also understand that, by the work of the Holy Spirit in inspiring the words and testimonies of Scripture’s many authors, Christ the Word inhabits the “Word of God written” in order that it may instruct us in the things of God.

God’s being, character, plan, commands, and dealings with the people whom He has created, chosen, justified, sanctified, and will glorify are mediated to us through the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. This we understand and accept as our Superior Standard that stands as constant, abiding, and authoritative witness to the Incarnate Word.
Our interpretive framework and lens for discerning what Scripture says, commands, and abjures is provided to us in The Book of Confessions and Book of Order, which are understood to function as our Subordinate Standards.

Our “hierarchy of authority” within the church is thus solidly established. It descends from Christ as God the Son and Lord over His Church. Next in order of precedence come the Scriptures from which are derived our Confessional corpus that describe our understandings of what Scripture teaches and commands, and, finally, the Book of Order as the practical framework by which we Presbyterians implement and exercise our calling as part of the universal Church of Jesus Christ.

All of this is enumerated within the first three chapters of the Book of Order, which instructs that Christ gives to his Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its officers and ordinances. Insofar as Christ’s will for the Church is set forth in Scripture, it is to be obeyed. In the worship and service of God and the government of the church, matters are to be ordered according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.” (G-1.0100c)

This concept is stated made even more clearly and forcefully in the proposed FOG—which, if accepted at the upcoming assembly, could become the law of the land—has simplified and shortened it to say:

Christ gives to the Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its order and discipline. Scripture teaches us of Christ’s will for the Church, which is to be obeyed. In the worship and service of God and the government of the church, matters are to be ordered according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. (1.0203 Christ Gives the Church Its Life)

Further refining this understanding, Chapter II instructs us that the Confessions explain to and instruct us about what canonical Scriptures teach, that they are statements grounded in the Word written, and that while subject to human error, they are serious statements that must be accorded respect and serious study. So serious are these standards that we are told in G-2.0200, that:

These confessional statements are subordinate standards in the church, subject to the authority of Jesus Christ, the Word of God, as the Scriptures bear witness to him. While confessional standards are subordinate to the Scriptures, they are, nonetheless, standards. They are not lightly drawn up or subscribed to, nor may they be ignored or dismissed. The church is prepared to counsel with or even to discipline one ordained who seriously rejects the faith expressed in the confessions.

Finally, our understanding is that it is the mission of the Church to proclaim the truth and abiding standard that God has given to us. Chapter III of the Book of Order opens its statement on the mission and work of the church by informing us that, “The mission of the Church is given form by God’s activity in the world as told in the Bible and understood by faith” (G-3.0100).

With the hierarchy of authority understood, we must look to the reasons for this proposed change, and they are principally two: (1) the current standard contained in G-6.0106b flatly ignores the Scriptures as the superior standard and dislocate it solely to the Confessions that are subordinate; and, (2) the current language of G-6.0106b is simultaneously too vague and undefined and too narrowly focused on one particular set of sins.

This overture would effectively answer the problems with Reason #1 because it takes seriously the Hierarchy of Authority and rightly places our primary fealty and obedience under Christ as Incarnate Word and Head of the Church as mediated to us by the Word written and contained within the Scriptures.

Now we must look to the ethical considerations and social context within which this proposed revision of the existing Book of Order mandate sits. Core scriptural understandings of sexuality, theology, marital fidelity, and family structure remain as contested ground both within our wider culture and the Church. But traditional Scriptural norms regarding these issues have been and continue to be upheld within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This proposal would maintain those current understandings and would firmly root them in their antecedent scriptural context.

But principled statements regarding only, or largely, sexual ethics and requirements for ordained officers within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are insufficient in a society dominated by the practical ethics of Enron, AIG, and CitiBank. We must remember that our ordained leadership is bifurcated. Well over half of presbyters and all of our deacons are ordained from among the ranks of those that other theological traditions consider as the laity. These officers work daily in the thick of a culture that is in a state of severe ethical rootlessness, relativism, and drift. And yet we expect them to maintain positions of moral leadership and ethical accountability in which they are to be exemplars of the best virtues established and vouchsafed by the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Some better direction as to precisely what standards are to be maintained and to whose authority they are ultimately responsible must be provided for all of our ordained officers whether they be teaching or ruling elders or deacons. This proposed revision of G-6.0106b would provide that understanding. It particularly references the epistles of the New Testament that establish in several places the qualifications, responsibilities, and expectations of ordained service (e.g., Titus 1:5–2:15 and 1 Tim. 3:1–13).

It is incumbent upon the church to firmly establish and adhere to such standards in order that we provide good direction and oversight to our officers in the exercise of mutual accountability and discipline within the courts of the church. To do less is akin to sending out the shepherd to the fields with no staff and no club or cudgel with which to fend off wild animals loose among the flock. The shepherd will be severely injured or killed in the course of the fight if not properly equipped.

Finally, this proposed revision takes seriously, and makes explicit the duty for mutual accountability. It reminds us that we are responsible to and for one another in love and mutual burden sharing (Ephesians 4). Too often, discipline is seen purely as a negative and punitive process without regard for the fact that daily exercise is, in itself, a form of discipline. We are continually learning and training ourselves and each other for the life of practical sanctity. This is our call and we cannot escape it.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-11

Advice on Item 06-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-11.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 06-11 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with what is intended to be a clearer standard for ordination and installation. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution commends the overture for seeking to clarify the current standards, and in particular for attempting to find a replacement for the third sentence of the current G-6.0106b.

Nevertheless, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends disapproval of the language proposed. First, elevating standards of sexual conduct above and to the exclusion of all other standards of conduct has neither scriptural nor confessional foundation.

Further, the phrase “New Testament Epistolary ethical requirements for ordained officers of ministry” (Item 06-11) does not sufficiently clarify the standards for ordination and/or installation, and potentially represents a significant restriction on ordination and installation. For example, to the extent this phrase is understood to incorporate the requirements of 1 Tim. 3:2, it could be understood to preclude divorced persons from serving as elders or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

In addition, the proposed language does not solve the current ambiguity in the use of the phrase “ chastity in singleness” in light of the variety of confessional understandings of the word “chaste.” [See, for example, The Heidelberg Catechism (C-4.109) and the Westminster Catechism (Larger Catechism) (C-7.249), that list a variety of conduct as unchaste.]

Finally, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the description of the Confessions as “mediating” the Scriptures is inconsistent with other sections of the Book of Order (G-2.0100b, W-4.4003d) that describe the confessions as a guide to Scripture.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-11—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-11 from the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries for their action an amendment to G-6.0106b that would replace current language regarding the standards of the church with language naming the “New Testament Epistolary ethical requirements for ordained officers of ministry” as “foremost” among the standards of the church to which those called to ministry bind themselves.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly that Item 06-11 be disapproved.

Rationale

While the intent of this overture seems to be to clarify the standards for ordination by reference to biblical criteria contained in the Epistles, this proposal in fact would raise additional questions of biblical interpretation and possibly result in reestablishing classes of people who would be ineligible for ordination and installation.
The overture’s rationale refers to Titus 1:5–2:15 and 1 Tim. 3:1–13, in particular. In these verses, elders, and particularly bishops and deacons are described as “the husband of one wife” who keeps his children “submissive and respectful in every way” (1 Tim. 3:2–4) and whose children are believers (Titus 1:6). The most obvious exclusion from these standards is women. However, these standards might also exclude divorced men or even require widowers to remain single. They may exclude single men. They would seem to exclude men whose children do not follow the Christian faith or who are deemed insufficiently submissive to parental authority.

Obviously, the church has faced these issues of interpretation in the past, struggling, as we do in the present, to discern where the Holy Spirit would lead us in understanding the relevance of biblical criteria set in a very different time and culture to our understanding of God’s call in people’s lives today. The church over time has rejected the elevation of male gender, marital status, and family condition as standards for ordination.

Consequently, Item 06-11 does not yield the clarity it desires. However, it reminds us that the church has historically struggled to interpret the Scriptures and to understand their authority for us—as we continue to do today.

On Replacing G-6.0106b with New Text—From the Presbytery New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the current text of G-6.0106b be deleted and new text inserted: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, striving to follow him through the witness of the Scriptures, and through the historic discernment of those Scriptures expressed in the Confessions of the church. Living obediently, we are called to proclaim the Gospel to all peoples, to love neighbor and enemy, and to express the love of Christ in authentic, faithful relationships with others. Persons who are ordained and/or installed are nonetheless sinners in need of God’s grace. The governing bodies of the church are called to be communities of support and accountability, as together we labor to be an obedient people, and seek to be disciples of the living Christ.”

Rationale

At the very core of our Reformed identity are these words from Paul, “For by grace you have been saved through faith, and this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God…” (Eph. 2:8). We acknowledge that there is nothing we can do to earn God’s grace—nothing we can do to earn God’s calling in our lives—nothing we can do that lifts us above our neighbor in the loving eyes of God which know no partiality.

The present and much debated text of G-6.0106b steps beyond this core understanding. The current language, “persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament,” supposes that ordained persons can manage the task of repentance for all forms of sin in their lives. This is impossible, and the very notion a scandal to the Gospel. If we could live lives utterly free from sin, if we could be wholly repentant, we would not need the grace of God in Jesus Christ. Indeed, Paul would remind us, “You who want to be justified by the law have cut yourselves off from Christ; you have fallen away from grace” (Gal. 5:4).

And yet, this does not free us to set aside God’s claim upon our lives. God’s gift of grace comes wrapped in the life of faith. With faith comes obedience. Obedience is founded in relationship. God calls—God’s children obey.

The governing bodies of the church are communities of sinners, ever working out this call to obedience, with fear and trembling, with joy and compassion. We look to Scripture, to each other, and to the community of saints whose voices ring in our Confessions, seeking God’s will for each moment of our lives. In faith, we leave God room to be God—humbly acknowledging that we cannot mend our brokenness by ourselves—and that God can speak a new word in a new time if God chooses to do so, through the Living Word, Jesus Christ.
Ordination in the church is not a mark of sinlessness. Ordination is a sign by which the church recognizes a person’s response to the call of God to a particular office despite their sin. It is not their works that have prepared them, nor their works that will sustain them, but the grace of God that is bestowed in baptism that alone is sufficient for their calling.

The present language of G-6.0106b also errs in lifting up one form of sin above the rest. The text, “among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness,” is a thin attempt to avoid the many sins of all our lives by setting apart some as inherently more sinful than others.

The question has been asked, debated, and argued, “Is homosexuality a sin?” This overture will not seek to resolve the question—many responses are available on both sides of the debate.

Rather, this overture invites us to consider the many avoided questions of our sinfulness—Is it a sin when we fail to love our enemies? Is neglect of our environment a sin? Is it sinful to hoard away wealth when God’s children are hungry? Is it a sin when we fail to welcome the alien, the widow, the orphan? Is it a sin that we who sing “I love to tell the story” fail to tell neighbor and stranger of Christ’s presence in our lives?

A catalogue of the serial, unrepentant sinfulness of our lives would fill many books. Gratefully, the Grace of Jesus Christ would fill many more; indeed, if all of it were written down, the world could not contain the books that would be written.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-12

Advice on Item 06-12—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-12 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17; Item 06-12 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture, which is similar to Item 06-08, would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. The overture further substitutes responsibilities to “… proclaim the Gospel to all peoples, to love neighbor and enemy, and to express the love of Christ in authentic, faithful relationships with others …” (Item 06-12) for the current standards of G-6.0106b. This sentence, however, is somewhat confused by the substitution of the first person pronoun “we” as the subject of the sentence, rather than continuing to refer to “persons who are called to office.” The overture reframes the role of governing bodies as being “communities of support and accountability,” but does not describe how governing bodies carry out such responsibilities. Presumably, with respect to presbyteries, the provisions of Chapter XI of the Form of Government define those roles, but the overture does not explicitly clarify that responsibility. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the language is similar, but not identical, to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed Form of Government before the General Assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-12—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-12, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.
The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

On Amending G-6.0106b—from the Presbytery of Albany.

The Presbytery of Albany overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

```
b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church, by their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, striving to follow where He leads through the witness of the Scriptures and the interpretations of the confessions. In doing so, they declare their fidelity to the standards of the Church. Each governing body charged with examination for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) establishes the candidate’s faithful efforts to adhere to these standards."
```

Rationale

The current language of G-6.0106b subverts the hierarchy of authority set forth in the opening chapters of the Form of Government: we are to obey Jesus Christ as Head of the Church, the Scriptures as the authoritative witness to Him, and then the confessions, to the extent that they accurately bear witness to Christ’s will. The proposed revision of G-6.0106b reaffirms this hierarchy as necessary and sufficient authority for ordination.

The current categorical exclusion of certain church members from service in ordained office is unjust to the excluded individuals and spiritually damaging to the body of the church. It creates a category of “second-class membership” and fosters the heretical attitude that those assigned to this category are not really deserving of membership at all, i.e., are not Christians. Profession of faith in Jesus Christ is and must be the only requirement for church membership (Book of Order, G-5.0103). Any policy that promotes erosion of this principle does damage to the Body of Christ.

According to the Book of Order, “a faithful member accepts Christ’s call to be involved responsibly in the ministry of his Church” (G-5.0102), including “participating in the governing responsibilities of the church” (G-5.0102e). The current language of G-6.0106b, which bars an entire class of persons from participating in some of the most important areas of church governance, violates the conditions of membership and sets the Book of Order in contradiction with itself.

Ordination is an important qualification for participation in the discernment process that sustains the spiritual life of the church at all judicatory levels. Our goal is not to “make” decisions, but to seek to discern God’s intention for us. It has been a long-standing article of faith in our tradition that discernment requires a democratic inclusion of many voices. To rule out certain voices in advance as ineligible is both undemocratic and unjust. True reconciliation that seeks to restore peace, unity, and purity to the church is possible only between equals who mutually share access to power and who acknowledge that all power, ultimately, comes from God.

When Christians fall into two sides through disagreement, all involved are obliged to think charitably of those on the opposite side. If G-6.0106b is revised as proposed, the “losers” will not have lost their status as full members of the church, eligible to participate in all decisions, including future decisions about ordination on an individual basis. On the other hand, if the current language of G-6.0106b remains, the “losers” will continue to feel that their very humanity has been cast in doubt by a church that condemns what they understand to be their God-given nature. Revision of G-6.0106b will honor everyone as a child of God and will permit the assignment of particular duties on the basis of the particular gifts that God has granted.

Injustice that exists now demands to be remedied now. Many a prophet would have preferred to exercise the call to prophecy at a more opportune time, but God has always made clear that the prophetic call is immediate. To appeal now for relief from the injustice fostered by the current language of G-6.0106b is simply to obey God’s command with humility and love for all those who now serve and for those who earnestly desire to serve God in the future.
Advice on Item 06-13—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-13 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17; Item 06-13 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture, which insofar as it seeks to amend G-6.0106b is identical to Item 06-06 except with respect to some theological nuance in its second sentence, would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. In other respects, the proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language is very similar to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2010) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

On Replacing G-6.0106b with New Text—From the Presbytery of Chicago.

The Presbytery of Chicago respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the current language of G-6.0106b be stricken and be replaced with the following:

“b. Standards for ordained service are derived from the church’s desire to submit joyfully to the Lordship of Jesus Christ in all aspects of life (G-1.0000). Those who are called to ordained service in the church shall give their assent to the Constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledging themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, following where he leads through the witness of the Scriptures, and understanding the Scriptures through the guidance of the Confessions. The governing body responsible for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) shall examine each candidate’s calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for the responsibilities of office, including assessing his or her adherence to the church’s standards.”
Regrettably, the process of communal discernment for decision making on the difficult issue of ordination standards, recommended by the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church and approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), has been underutilized. Continued recourse to parliamentary procedures and judicial process has undermined decision-making, prolonged resolution, and consumed resources. In light of this experience, change in the language of G-6.0106b provides the way forward on this difficult issue.

The impact of the current language in G-6.0106(b) in its application has been far greater than simply excluding some from ordained office. It has allowed a class distinction to be constitutionally enshrined, creating two classes of baptized Christians—those who are clearly eligible for ordained office in the church, and those who are not. Not since the now-abandoned prohibitions on divorced officers and clergy in our predecessor denominations has one class of members been singled out in a Presbyterian Constitution for automatic disqualification from eligibility for ordained office.

The summary exclusion of any member from meaningful eligibility inexcusably divides the body of Christ. In the first letter to the church at Corinth, the Apostle Paul reminds us: “For in the one Spirit we were all baptized into one body … and we were all made to drink of one Spirit. Indeed, the body does not consist of one member but of many. If the foot would say, ‘Because I am not a hand, I do not belong to the body,’ that would not make it any less a part of the body … The eye cannot say to the hand, ‘I have no need of you,’ nor again the head to the feet, ‘I have no need of you,’” (1 Cor. 12:13–21).

But G-6.0106(b) does precisely that. One class of Christians is effectively being told, “the body has no need of you.” This communicates to those same children of God that in our denomination, they are not part of One Body, but are foreign, to be isolated and treated differently from all others. Such a position invalidates what Scripture says about baptism and what our Book of Order says about the meaning of active membership (G-5.0102) and the relationship between membership and ordained office (G-6.0102).

Though its proponents argue that the measure deals only with conduct, in reality, G-6.0106(b) is a statement by one portion of the baptized body of Christ to all lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender Christians, whether partnered or not, sexually active or not, that in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) their “membership” in the body is at best second-class, and, at worst, neither desired nor honored as equal with all other members. This is a scandal to the gospel of Jesus Christ and has no place in the Constitution of the PC(USA).

This second-class status is unaffected by the recent elimination of older authoritative interpretations and the approval of additional interpretations of Chapter 6 because whether or not a particular session or presbytery is permitted—often after protracted ecclesial litigation involving those interpretations—to call and/or ordain a particular lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender member, that member is constitutionally singled out under the current language of G-6.0106b in ways that straight members are not.

The proposed language takes seriously the responsibilities of those bodies of the church charged with examining, calling, and installing church officers, but places those examinations in the greater context of Presbyterian polity. It also ensures a more consistent approach in the treatment of all members, appropriately acknowledging the weight and importance of authority in our tradition: Christ first, Scripture second, and tradition (Confessions) third. This restores consistency between the provisions of Chapter 6 and the ordination vows (W-4.4003).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-14

Advice on Item 06-14—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-14 with the following comment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-14 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture, which is similar to Item 06-09, would substitute a standard of submission to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. Under the proposed language, a governing body would focus on the candidate’s “calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for the responsibilities of office.” The proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language is similar, but not identical, to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.
If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-14

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-14—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-14, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-15, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-15

[The assembly answered Item 06-15 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

The Presbytery of Des Moines respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the current text of G-6.0106b be stricken and new text be inserted to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W 4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Persons called to office in the church are to live in faithful obedience to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, according to the authoritative witness of the Scriptures, and guided by the Confessions of the church. Those ordained as deacons, elders, or ministers of Word and Sacrament are sinners in need of God’s grace while striving to fulfill the responsibilities of their office with accountability to the governing bodies of the church, which guide and support them as they seek to follow the living Christ.”

Rationale

Accountability to Jesus Christ and the Authority of Scripture

In its opening paragraphs, the Form of Government affirms the fundamental Christian and Reformed affirmation that Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church. Chapter I calls Christians to attend to the Scriptures, insofar as they set forth “Christ’s will for the Church,” and Chapter II identifies the Confessions as the church’s guides, subordinate to the authority of Jesus Christ and to the witness of Scripture. Thus our church has set forth a hierarchy of authority in which we are to obey Jesus Christ by heeding first the Scriptures and then the Confessions, as we seek to discern Christ’s will.

This fundamental hierarchy of authority is reflected in the first three constitutional questions that candidates for ordination are required to affirm. This understanding is distorted, however, by the current language of G-6.0106b. Failing to acknowledge our obedience to Jesus Christ, G-6.0106b posits “obedience to Scripture” and “conformity to the confessions” as the primary requirements for ordination.
The proposed amendment would remove this paragraph and substitute new language reflecting the church’s true sources of authority (Jesus Christ and the witness of Scripture), and affirming our biblical, confessional, and constitutional accountability.

Sinfulness of All People

Summarizing the faith of the Reformed Tradition, Chapter II of the Form of Government draws special attention to only one example of sin, “the human tendency to idolatry and tyranny” (Book of Order, G-2.0500a(4)). Yet the current language of G-6.0106b singles out an entirely different category of human behavior—marriage and sexual relationships—as a primary consideration in determining a person’s eligibility for ordination.

The proposed amendment would remove this apparent contradiction of our historic understanding of human sinfulness, and substitute new language affirming the church’s belief that we are all sinners in need of God’s grace.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-15

Advice on Item 06-15—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-15 with the following comment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-16, and 06-17, Item 06-15 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. The overture reframes the role of governing bodies as being “communities of support and accountability.” The proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, however, notes that the language is similar, but not identical, to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-15

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-15—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-15, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-16, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.
Item 06-16

On Amending G-6.0106b and G-14.0450 Regarding Requirements for Ordained Office—From the Presbytery of Heartland.

The Presbytery of Heartland overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   "b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church, by their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, as revealed in Holy Scripture, striving to follow where He leads through the authoritative witness of the Scriptures, and to understand the Scriptures through the instruction of the Confessions. In so doing, they declare their fidelity to the standards of the church. Each governing body charged with examination for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) establishes the candidate’s faithful efforts to adhere to these standards.”

2. Amend G-14.0450 by inserting a new paragraph “b.” and by relettering current paragraphs “b.” through “d.” as “c.” through “e.” The text shall read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Final Assessment of Readiness to Begin Ordained Ministry

“In the final year of theological education or when a candidate has satisfied all of the requirements of this section, and before the candidate has received a call, the committee on preparation for ministry of the candidate’s presbytery shall conduct a final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ordained ministry. A summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. The committee on preparation for ministry shall report to the presbytery when it has certified a candidate ready for examination for ordination, pending a call. This consultation shall focus on the outcomes of inquiry and candidacy and shall include each of the following requirements of certification:

   “a. demonstration of readiness to begin ministry of the Word and Sacrament as required to fulfill the candidacy phase of preparation;

   “b. demonstration of readiness to assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation;

   “b. c. presentation of a transcript showing satisfactory grades at a regionally accredited college or university, together with a diploma;

   “b. d. presentation of a transcript from a theological institution accredited by the Association of Theological Schools acceptable to the presbytery, the transcript showing satisfactory grades, and presentation of a plan to complete the theological degree including Hebrew and Greek and exegesis of the Old and New Testaments using Hebrew and Greek texts;

   “b. e. presentation of satisfactory grades together with the examination papers in the five areas covered by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates.”

Rationale

The opening paragraphs of the Form of Government are a powerful statement of the fundamental Christian and Reformed affirmation that Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church. In support of this primary affirmation, Chapter I of the Form of Government calls Christians to attend to the Scriptures, insofar as they set forth “Christ’s will for the Church,” and Chapter II identifies the church’s confessions as its guides, subordinate to the Lordship of Jesus Christ as revealed to us in Scripture alone. Our church thus has bound itself to a hierarchy of authority in which we are to obey Jesus Christ its Head, and, the Scriptures as the authoritative witness to Him, and then the confessions, to the extent that they accurately bear witness to Christ’s will. This fundamental hierarchy of authority is accurately and eloquently reflected in the first three of the constitutional questions, the assent to which is required of each candidate for ordination and/or installation.
Although the hierarchy of the church’s authority is clear, it is subverted by the current language of G-6.0106b, which substitutes for our obedience to Christ two concepts that are foreign to Reformed understanding: “obedience” to Scripture and “conformity” to the confessions. We do not confess, “Scripture is Lord” nor “the Confessions are Lord.” Instead, we boldly confess that “Christ is Lord!” The proposed amendment would substitute new language, which (1) reflects the church’s historical understanding of where its authority is to be found, and (2) reaffirms the church’s reliance on the examination of candidates by its governing bodies as the principal means by which to ensure the commitment of its ordained officers to the duties of faith. The amendment additionally would insert appropriate language to ensure that each such examination would include discussion of the constitutional questions and the governing body’s determination of the candidate’s readiness to accept their principles and faithfully live by them to the extent any of us is able.

In order to be able to rely on Jesus Christ as its Head and as its chief guide in all of life, the church must shed any human-made, subordinate source of authority that would bind its ability to follow where our Savior leads.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-16

Advice on Item 06-16—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-16 with the following comment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, and 06-17, Item 06-16 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

This Item 06-16 is identical to Item 06-06, except that it does not seek to amend G-14.0240. The overture would substitute a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b, and would amend G-14.0450 to incorporate consistent provisions regarding the examination of candidates for office. In other respects, the proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes, however, that the language is virtually identical to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-16

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-16—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-16, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, and 06-17, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-17

[The assembly answered Item 06-17 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

The Presbytery of National Capital respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown in italic.]
a. To delete the current text of G.060106b and insert new text in its place:

“Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W.4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Members who are called to ordained service in the church (G.5.0302), by their examination and assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (G.14.0240, G.14.0450, and W.4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ, the Head of the Church (G.1.0100), striving to follow where he leads through the witness of scripture (W.4.4003b), and to understand the Scriptures through the instruction of the Confessions (W.4.4003c and d). In so doing, they declare their fidelity to the standards of the church.”

Rationale

Our fellowship in Christ includes bisexual, gay, lesbian, straight, and transgendered persons, and, by the grace of God, we are all capable of living honorable, faithful Christian lives filled with the Holy Spirit. Thus we believe it is time to remove categorical barriers constraining lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered church members from ordained service as deacons, elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We believe this because of scripture, not in spite of it; because of our confessions, not in spite of them; because of our polity, not in spite of it; because of who we are, not in spite of who we are, for we are all beloved children of God.

I. YOU SHALL LOVE THE LORD YOUR GOD

[Jesus] said to [the lawyer], “You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind.” This is the greatest and first commandment. And a second is like it: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself.” On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets …” (Mt. 22:37–40, emphasis added)

Beloved, let us love one another, because love is from God; everyone who loves is born of God and knows God. Whoever does not love does not know God, for God is love: (1 Jn. 4:7–8, emphasis added)

For I am convinced that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor rulers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord. (Rom. 8:38–39, emphasis added)

As our most recent confession reminds us,

In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God’s image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.3, emphasis added)

Contrary to the spirit of Scripture and this confessional standard, our current ordination policy is at odds with the foundational principle of Jesus’ teaching—that God is love. From the Genesis account of Abraham and Sara welcoming strangers to dinner (Genesis 18), to the numerous stories of the early New Testament churches creating an environment of hospitality, reconciliation, and generosity (Romans 13 and 14, 1 Corinthians 13, Ephesians 2, Colossians 3, Hebrews 13), the story of our faith is the story of God’s love and insistence that people of faith practice that love. In times of controversy, individual passages of Scripture should be interpreted in light of the broader story, and all of Scripture should be interpreted in accord with Jesus’ “two-fold commandment to love God and neighbor …” (“Presbyterian Understanding and Use of Holy Scripture,” adopted by 195th General Assembly (1983), Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 615). There are no exceptions to this expectation and yet our ordination policies expressed in and through G.060106b do not communicate the message of God’s love and they rest on a few verses whose meaning is the subject of extensive debate.

Thus, through this new language, we invite the church to proclaim that nothing in our polity shall separate any of us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus, nor shall it deny any who are called, gifted and qualified the opportunity to serve as disciples of Christ in ordained office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

II. THERE IS ONE BAPTISM

There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called to the one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all. (Eph. 4:4–5, emphasis added)

The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a sharing in the blood of Christ? The bread that we break, is it not a sharing in the body of Christ? Because there is one bread, we who are many are one body, for we all partake of the one bread. (1 Cor. 10:16–17, emphasis added)

As our most recent confession reminds us,

The Spirit justifies us by grace through faith, sets us free to accept ourselves and to love God and neighbor, and binds us together with all believers in the one body of Christ, the Church. … The same Spirit claims us in the waters of baptism, feeds us with the bread of life and the cup of salvation, and calls women and men to all ministries of the Church. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.4, emphasis added)

Contrary to the spirit of Scripture and this confessional standard, our current ordination policy divides the body of Christ, sets neighbor against neighbor and leads us to violate the image of God in others and in ourselves. Our current ordination policy is inconsistent with our church’s understanding that “Baptism is a sign and symbol of inclusion in God’s grace and covenant …” (W-2.3004) that transcends “[b]arriers of race, gender, status, and age …” (W-2.3005) and in which “… we die to what separates us from God …” (W-2.3002); moreover, in communion “… we manifest the reality of the covenant of grace in reconciling and being reconciled …” (W-2.4004).

Further, our current policy continues to relegate lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgendered members of the church to second-class status, dishonoring their relationships and placing on them a burden of celibacy that is not required of other members. By demanding a standard of heterosexual marriage or chastity in singleness, the current policy places all members in the position of “… [boasting] of the merits of [their] own works, or … in works of supererogation … [a] damnable idolatry…” (The Book of Confessions, The Scots Confession 3.15).

Thus, through this new language, we invite the church to proclaim that we are bound to one another and to God in the sign and seal of the Sacraments, and that our polity should reflect the truth that is incarnate in Jesus Christ: that all who trust in him are reconciled to God and are part of the ministry of reconciliation according to their gifts and particular calling.

III. IT IS GOD WHO CALLS

You didn’t choose me, remember; I chose you, and put you in the world to bear fruit, fruit that won’t spoil. As fruit bearers, whatever you ask the Father in relation to me, he gives you. But remember the root command: Love one another. (Jn. 15:16–17, The Message: The Bible in Contemporary Language, emphasis added)

Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you. And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age. (Mt. 28:19–20, emphasis added)

The Book of Confessions, The Brief Statement of Faith reminds us that the Spirit “… calls women and men to all ministries of the Church” (10.4). And The Confession of 1967 says, “… every church order must be open to such reformation as may be required to make it a more effective instrument of the mission of reconciliation” (Ibid., 9.40).

Contrary to the spirit of Scripture and these confessional standards, our current ordination policy contradicts the basic principle of the church which holds all men and women who are church members responsible for answering God’s call to special ministries as elders, deacons, or ministers of Word and Sacrament (G-6.0106a). Current policy contradicts the church’s understanding of membership and takes away from some members their entitlement to “… all the rights and privileges of the church, including the right to … hold office” (G-5.0302). The new language acknowledges Jesus Christ as head of the church (G-1.0100; Eph. 1:22; Col. 1:15–20) and acknowledges the responsibility of those called by Christ to be obedient to Him. Embedded in this principle is the understanding that those “… who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world” (G-6.0106a). Current policy discounts the Constitutional questions asked of candidates. These questions focus broadly on the faith and manner of life expected of church officers without prurient concern with human sexuality.

In addition, current policy and practice regarding G-6.0106b limit the right of congregations to elect their own officers (G-6.0107) and limit their freedom of conscience in interpreting Scripture and the call of God (G-6.0108) by focusing inordinate attention on matters about which there remains great disagreement throughout the church.

Thus, contrary to the spirit of Scripture and our confessional standards, our current ordination policy contradicts the Great Commission of Christ (Matthew 28:18–20) and the Great Ends of the Church (G-1.0200) by:

• constraining the church’s proclamation of the good news;

• denying nurture and spiritual fellowship to an entire category of God’s children;

• placing a stumbling block before many who are gifted and called to lead and preserve divine worship;

• undermining the truth that is incarnate in Jesus Christ, that all who trust in him are reconciled to God and called to be part of the ministry of reconciliation;

• standing in the way of the church’s promotion of social righteousness and justice for the marginalized and outcast of our culture; and

• preempting the possibility that God is calling us to exhibit the Kingdom of God in a new way to the world in our time.

The Great Commission and these purposes constitute a rule of our faith and should guide our interpretation of Scripture and the Confessions (“Presbyterian Understanding and Use of Holy Scripture”).
Thus, through this new language, we invite the church to proclaim that church polity exists to serve the Great Commission and the Great Ends of the Church and should reflect that commission and those ends.

IV. THE MINISTRY OF RECONCILIATION

So if anyone is in Christ, there is a new creation: everything old has passed away; see, everything has become new! All this is from God, who reconciled us to himself through Christ, and has given us the ministry of reconciliation; that is, in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting the message of reconciliation to us. (2 Cor. 5:17–19, emphasis added)

The Confession of 1967 says that … This community, the church universal, is entrusted with God’s message of reconciliation and shares his labor of healing the enmities which separate men from God and from each other.” (The Book of Confessions, 9.31, emphasis added)

Contrary to the spirit of Scripture and this confessional standard, our current ordination policy stands as a barrier to reconciliation, contradicts the value Scripture places on inclusive welcome (Acts 8:26–39, 10:28, and 11:17), and conflicts with numerous parts of the Book of Order that underscore the church’s call to reconciliation, hospitality, openness, and inclusiveness (G-3.0401, G-4.0100 - G-4.0304) and the rights granted to members (G-5.0102 and G-5.0103, G-6.0107 and G-6.0108). In addition, a faithful member accepts Christ’s call “… to [participate] in the governing responsibilities of the church” (G-5.0102e), while current ordination policies deny some faithful members the opportunity to serve and thus the opportunity to accept fully the privileges and responsibilities of membership that are “… a commitment to Jesus Christ that binds the individual to fulfillment of the obligations of membership” (G-5.0601).

Current policies have not been a source of peace or unity in the church. They have not kept those who advocated for the policies from schism. They have not silenced those who opposed them. The Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church, after earnest study and prayer, was not able to come to a resolution on current policies. For the sake of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which calls us to the ministry of reconciliation, we invite the church into a season of reconciliation and hospitality to those gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered persons who have felt abused, neglected, and locked out of the fellowship of reconciliation by our current policies. The new language makes clear that all members who are called have the right and responsibility to stand for ordained office.

Thus, through this new language, we invite the church to proclaim that our polity will reflect a church as welcoming as God’s grace, as loving as God’s heart, and as reconciling as God’s word.

V. OUR COMMON HUMANITY, OUR COMMON FAITH

… For there is no distinction, since all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. (Rom. 3:22–23)

Therefore, since we are justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have obtained access to this grace in which we stand; and we boast in our hope of sharing the glory of God. And not only that, but we also boast in our sufferings, knowing that suffering produces endurance, and endurance produces character, and character produces hope, and hope does not disappoint us, because God’s love has been poured into our hearts through the Holy Spirit that has been given to us. (Rom 5:1–5)

A Brief Statement of Faith reminds us that “… we rebel against God; we hide from our Creator…. we violate the image of God in others and ourselves... Yet God acts with justice and mercy to redeem creation” (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.3). Further, in the Confession of 1967, “The new life [in Christ] takes shape in a community in which men know that God loves and accepts them in spite of what they are. They therefore accept themselves and love others, knowing that no man has any ground on which to stand, except God’s grace” (Ibid., The Confession of 1967, 9.22, emphasis added).

Contrary to the spirit of Scripture and these confessional standards, our current ordination policy denies both our common humanity and the freedom of the Holy Spirit to work in new and surprising ways among us for reconciliation, and contradicts the Reformed understanding of God’s grace in Jesus Christ. The Apostle Paul understood our common sinfulness; nevertheless, Paul, in following Jesus, said we are justified by faith. Indeed, Jesus promised the coming of the Holy Spirit to guide us in faith, and promised that the Spirit that will be with us always. We are called to be open to the movement of the Holy Spirit continually doing new things among us. We are charged with interpreting Scripture according to the movement of the Spirit and to what Calvin called the “inner testimony of the Holy Spirit.” The founders of our Reformed Tradition and their heirs have continually been open to the moving of the Spirit in leading the church in new directions. As we are reformed and renewed according to the movement of the Spirit, even in our brokenness, Jesus Christ remains our peace, our unity, and our purity. Our peace, unity, and purity come through faith, obedience to Jesus Christ, our willingness to follow him and to respond to his call when we hear it. In times of controversy we recognize that Jesus Christ is the center of Scripture and we interpret it accordingly.

Thus, through this new language, we invite the church to proclaim that God’s redeeming work in Jesus Christ embraces the whole of human life, and that the church best participates in this work when its polity reflects the unmerited grace and reconciling love made known to us in Jesus Christ, who calls each of us to this ministry of grace and reconciliation.
Advice on Item 06-17—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) regarding Item 06-17 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Like Items 06-06, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15 and 06-16; Item 06-17 seeks to replace the current language of G-6.0106b with a different standard.

The overture would substitute a requirement of assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003) for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. The language offered could be understood to limit examination of candidates to their assent to those constitutional questions. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the language is similar to the amendment submitted by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to presbyteries and rejected by a majority of the presbyteries.

If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to present an amendment to G-6.0106b to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote with the intention expressed in the rationale for this overture, and the concurrences thereto, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the language proposed by Item 06-09 accomplishes that result in a manner more consistent with the historic principles of Presbyterian polity.

Implications of the proposed revisions to the proposed Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 219th General Assembly (2010) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104b.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-17

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-17—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-17, like 06-06, 06-07, 06-08, 06-09, 06-10, 06-12, 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, and 06-16, overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries proposed amendments that would either delete G-6.0106b or replace it with language intended to support greater flexibility in discernment by the governing body responsible for approving a candidate for ordination and installation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) offers its advice and counsel on all of these overtures at Item 06-09.

Item 06-18

[The assembly answered Item 06-18 with the action taken on Item 06-09 of this report. See pp. 46, 48.]

On Behavioral Standards for Ordained Office—From the Presbytery of Central Washington.

The Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to:

1. Declare that church officers and ministers of Word and Sacrament may in good conscience disagree with constitutional requirements for both faith and behavior, nevertheless, the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), while allowing freedom of conscience in interpreting the Scripture (G-6.0108a), also requires that in becoming candidates and officers, members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) choose to exercise their consciences within certain bounds:

   “… His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body…” (G-6.0108b).

2. Declare that G-6.0108b shall be understood to mean that no governing body may grant an exception to any explicitly stated behavioral standard for ordination and that church officers are to remain in compliance with such standards.

3. Consequentially, declare that any person declining to comply in practice or refusing to comply in stated intent is ineligible for ordination, installation, or for candidacy as an officer or minister of Word and Sacrament, and shall not be ordained, installed, validated, or reinstated to active ministry by any governing body.
We recognize the church’s responsibility to counsel with and care for those whose consciences lead them to disagree with standards adopted by consent of the whole church and urge our particular churches and governing bodies to counsel and minister to such persons at all times with Christ’s love and moral clarity.

Rationale

- Confusion remains in the PC(USA) about the meaning and application of G-6.0106b in light of G-6.0108.
- Confusion feeds dissention, animosity, inconsistency, and controversy, poorly serving the whole church, which is in need of clear and forthright instruction.
- The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) has a constitutional responsibility to deliver binding authoritative interpretations, both in PJC proceedings and in this General Assembly.
- Whether the standards adopted by the whole church must be applied uniformly has been the subject of many complaints, which has resulted in costly litigation that wastes resources that could be used for better purposes.
- The lack of a clear and direct statement has led many to conclude that the PC(USA) is less than serious about constitutional consistency.
- The above statement would promote the peace, unity, and purity of the PC(USA) by stating clearly what the standard is and by uniting the authoritative interpretations of both the GAPJC and the General Assembly.
- The above statement stands in solidarity with the GA Permanent Judicial Commission’s authoritative interpretation of the requirements for ordination.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-18

Advice on Item 06-18—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) to disapprove Item 06-18.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 219th General Assembly (2010) to its advice concerning Item 06-04, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

While the overture appears to seek that the 219th General Assembly (2010) approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b, it is framed in terms of seeking a declaration. If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires to approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b, it should expressly state that intent in taking action on this item.

The intent of Item 06-18 appears to be to remove the authoritative interpretation adopted by the 217th General Assembly in response to the recommendations of the Task Force on Peace, Unity and Purity, as revised by the 218th General Assembly (2008). As discussed in more detail in Section 4 of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice concerning Item 06-04, the authoritative interpretations describe the relationship between G-6.0108 and G-6.0106b.

Under the authoritative interpretations approved by the 217th and the 218th General Assemblies (2008 and 2010), governing bodies are not permitted to determine outside the examination of a particular candidate whether a departure is from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity.

The authoritative interpretation offered by Item 06-18 would prohibit ordination or installation of any person “… declining to comply in practice or refusing to comply in stated intent …” with the “… stated behavioral standard …” (Item 06-18) of G-6.0106b that a person not engage in a “practice which the confessions call sin” (Book of Order, G-6.0106b). G-6.0106b contains an express requirement of self-acknowledgment. “… [I]f a person does not self-acknowledge a practice that the confessions call sin, then a governing body has a positive obligation to make further inquiry only if it has direct and specific knowledge that said person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution…” (Presbytery of San Joaquin v Presbytery of the Redwoods, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 280; see also Wier v Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339). The declaration in this item does not expressly recognize this important prerequisite to the application of G-6.0106b’s standards.

Further, the interpretation offered would extend the prohibitions on ordination or installation to all individuals who “… refuse[s] to comply in stated intent …” with a request for affirmation that he or she will not engage in any practice the confessions call sin. Again, such an interpretation would go well beyond the restrictions on ordination or installation expressed in G-6.0106b, and potentially interfere with a candidate’s expressions of conscience.
Finally, this item does not provide guidance as to how governing bodies are to determine which practices the confessions call sin. If the 219th General Assembly (2010) desires that G-6.0108b not be applied to making such a determination in the context of an examination for ordination or installation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises, consistent with its advice to the 218th General Assembly (2008), that the assembly either (1) withdraw the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 and approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106b defining which practices the confessions call sin; or (2) submit to the presbyteries an amendment to G-6.0106b that replaces the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a list of conduct the assembly believes should bar ordination or installation, or with some other standard that does not require definition through interpretation of the confessions.

Implications for the proposed Form of Government: Since the proposed Form of Government retains the language of the current G-6.0106b in section G-2.0105, the approval of Item 06-18 would have substantially the same effect on the proposed Form of Government as it would have on the current Form of Government.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-18—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 06-18 from the Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to declare that under G-6.0106b no governing body may permit an exception to “any explicitly stated behavioral standard for ordination…” (Item 06-18).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the 219th General Assembly (2010) that Item 06-18 be disapproved.

On Establishing a Process to Evaluate the Current Call System—From the Presbytery of New Covenant.

The Presbytery of New Covenant respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to establish a process to evaluate the current call system of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and bring recommendations back to the 220th General Assembly in 2012 for changes that will shorten the length of time during which a church seeking a pastor is ordinarily without an installed pastor.

Rationale

The average time line to conduct and complete the search for a new pastor appears to be anywhere from eighteen months to two and a half years. In 1998, the Barna Research Group, Inc. reported that the average length of time for an installed pastor to remain in place was five years. For many churches that average now is closer to four years. The instability that ensues when a congregation invests its time and resources in a search for a new pastor—as often as occurs—is detrimental to the mission and vision of that congregation, as well as to the denomination as a whole.

While there is clearly a provision for temporary pastoral leadership during these times of transition, many congregations feel as though they are always living in transition and that their constant focus is upon who will be the next pastor, not what God is calling them to do in ministry.

A study of our call system in light of these realities, will, we pray, result in recommendations for change that will strengthen the ministries of congregations in the PC(USA).

COGA COMMENT ON 06-19

Comment on Item 06-19—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

This overture seeks to establish a process to evaluate the current call system over a two year period and bring recommendations for changes that will shorten the length of time a church seeking a pastor is ordinarily without an installed pastor to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

The Office of Vocation is already in the early stages of inviting a number of Church Leadership Connection (CLC) users and presbytery leaders into conversation to review and evaluate the current call process and system and would welcome bringing the Presbytery of New Covenant’s concerns about the length of the process into this broader evaluation. If additional study is mandated by the 219th General Assembly (2010), the Office of Vocation recommends that such a study be done through the work of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The only Book of Order guidance provided on the call process for installed pastoral relations is found in G-14.0530. It gives latitude to presbyteries regarding the call process including decisions that affect the length of the process. In 2009, the median search time for churches that used Church Leadership Connection (CLC) as part of their call process, from the time a Church Information Form (CIF) was submitted until a person was called, was eight months.

The Barna Research Group, Inc. averages are gathered from a wide range of denominational and non-denominational congregations. Averages for the PC(USA) show that the duration of pastor tenure in installed positions has increased over the past twenty years.

* subset of “Pastors (HoS, Solo, Co)”

The Office of Vocation is aware of the concerns expressed by congregations and presbyteries that a lengthy call process can be detrimental to the mission and vision of a particular congregation. Such concerns do not need to wait two years before action can be taken. The Office of Vocation, working with committees on ministry (COM) and presbytery leaders, can begin now to lift up ways to shorten the call process and focus in particular on current factors affecting its length. These include:

- whether a presbytery requires a mission study before the search for a new pastor begins;
- when the COM grants permission for the church to elect a pastor nominating committee;
- how long it takes for the CIF to be written, approved by session and COM, and entered into CLC;
- how long it takes for the COM moderator and clerk of session to approve the CIF so it may be activated in Church Leadership Connection (CLC);
- how long it takes for presbytery leaders to complete the matching for churches in their presbytery. (When CLC does the matching for a presbytery, matches are ordinarily completed within three days of CIF release.);
- how broad the pastoral search will be (geographically, and the time frame for advertising and recruitment);
- how often a PNC will meet to do their work;
- the group dynamic of the PNC as it works to reach agreement on a nominee to be presented to the congregation.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Calling All Individuals in the Majority and Minority to Wait Actively Upon the Lord in a Season of Fasting and Forbearance—From the Presbytery of the Miami Valley.

The Presbytery of the Miami Valley respectfully overtures the 219th General Assembly (2010) to do the following:

1. Acknowledge, with humility,
   a. that history reveals that Christians of the Reformed tradition are prone to divide over differences of faith or practice;
   b. that such division dims the unity within which the Lord has placed us; and
c. that such division is as likely to dim our witness to the Lord Jesus Christ as error or injustice in doctrine or practice.

2. Acknowledge, with humility and patience,
   a. that the Lord has not seen fit to bless the church with a unity of conscience with regard to ordination standards, and no one knows the day or hour when the Lord will offer such a blessing; and
   b. that despite our earnest desires for justice, for order, and for faithfulness to the Lord Jesus Christ as revealed in Scripture, many strategies we have pursued to address our controversies over ordination standards have inadvertently obscured to the world the church’s resemblance to the mind of Christ.

3. Exhort all members and officers, therefore,
   a. to undertake a seven-year fast, abstaining voluntarily from all legislative efforts to resolve these controversies, and to hunger for the Lord; and
   b. to engage instead in a conscious, deliberative alternative; namely, to wait actively upon the Lord by pursuing untried strategies of humility, gentleness, patience, and forbearance, to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4. Exhort all officers serving on governing bodies to wait upon the Lord by:
   a. studying Ephesians Chapter 4 in light of matters in the church where differing views have become entrenched,
   b. resisting the temptation to entertain division of the Spirit,
   c. voluntarily extending forbearance as the Lord has voluntarily extended grace, and
   d. voluntarily electing not to act when acting is likely to yield only another polarized debate according to the world’s ways.

5. Exhort officers in the majority on the ordination standards controversy to wait upon the Lord and forbear Presbyterians in the minority by:
   a. refraining from judging fellow Presbyterians, remembering that judgment belongs to the Lord and recognizing that even if the majority holds, there is no genuine unity of conscience among the present or foreseeable PC(USA);
   b. honoring Presbyterians in the minority by humbly, gently, and patiently guarding the full range of minority rights which help them submit to Christ’s unity despite differing conscience;
   c. exercising the majority right to rule, with full humility that a significant portion of Presbyterian sisters and brothers must exert patience, forbearance, or even self-denial to abide by the rule;
   d. seeking new, non-legislative ways to relate to Presbyterians in the minority, so that the world might see that in Christ’s mission there is neither majority nor minority;
   e. honoring Presbyterians in the minority by engaging them in serious conversation, apart from legislative venues, about the theological roots of their convictions; learn how they see their convictions as a faithful response to God’s covenant call for a way of life and faith distinct from the ways of the world; and
   f. forbearing the temptation to withdraw due to impatience with opponents in the church; forbearance glorifies the Lord.

6. Exhort officers in the minority on the ordination standards controversy to wait upon the Lord and forbear Presbyterians in the majority by:
   a. refraining from judging fellow Presbyterians, remembering that judgment belongs to the Lord, and recognizing that even if the majority shifts, there is no genuine unity of conscience among the present or foreseeable PC(USA);
   b. honoring Presbyterians in the majority by humbly, gently, and patiently heeding majority rule in the church;
   c. exercising the full range of minority rights, especially exploring the more moderate rights of individuals in the minority (the right to express dissent, to passively concur, to actively concur), with full humility that the timing of change is in the hands of the Lord;
   d. seeking new, non-legislative ways to relate to Presbyterians in the majority, so that the world might see that in Christ’s mission there is neither majority nor minority;
Yet, the same poll also indicates a smaller majority opposing the ordination of gay persons as Elder or Deacon. Margins in voting attest to the lack of consensus: for instance, the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved an amendment of G-6.0106b by a slim margin (380 affirmative, 325 negative, 3 abstaining), then the presbyteries rejected it, but with a significant minority (78 yes, 95 no).

Regarding Item 1 (that division dims Christian unity)

As the only chapter of the New Testament using the Greek word translated as unity, Ephesians 4 presents a vision for faithful Christian community. It reminds us that the church’s unity is both grace and vocation, gift and responsibility. “Church unity is not ours to produce; it is a gift to be received and faithfully displayed, as public testimony that God in Christ is indeed with us. Yet, while the church’s unity is not ours to produce, we do set the tone that nurtures or withers it, illuminates or darkens it, enhances or defaces it, affirms or denies it.” The qualities outlined by Paul—humility, gentleness, patience, forbearance, and persevering effort for unity—are thus a standard of relationship between Christians, integral to our witness to the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Yet the legacy of the Reformed tradition in the United States is largely one of fragmentation, not unity. We divide over differences in faith, practice, or both. In our dividing, we fall short of glorifying the triune God, described well by Karl Barth in his discussion of the oneness of the church:

A plurality of Churches...means a plurality of lords, a plurality of spirits, a plurality of gods. There is no doubt that to the extent that Christendom does consist of actually different and opposing Churches, to that extent it denies practically what it confesses theoretically—the unity and singularity of God, of Jesus Christ, of the Holy Spirit. There may be good grounds for the rise of these divisions. There may be serious obstacles to their removal. There may be many things which can be said by way of interpretation and mitigation. But this does not alter the fact that every division as such is a deep riddle, a scandal. And in face of this scandal the whole of Christendom should be united in being able to think of it only with patience, not with the patience which each expects of the other, but with the patience in which—whatever may be the cost—each is willing to precede the other.

Regarding Item 2 (effects of division over ordination standards)

The present controversy over ordination standards has tested Presbyterian unity for more than three decades. Most organized efforts to resolve the controversy and maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace have been legislative and judicial. Some of us have sought to clarify and maintain the long tradition within our constitution and polity prohibiting self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons from ordination. Some of us have sought to revise these standards to permit gay ordination within our constitution and polity. Some of us, for varying reasons, have not made this controversy our priority in discipleship, and yet are called upon nearly annually to line up with majority or minority. The debates surrounding gay ordination have dominated our public discourse, informal and formal. Some of us believe this matter is a central issue of faith in our time. Some of us believe this focus has come, at least in part, at the expense of faithful attention and care to growth in our knowledge of Scripture, our ability to engage one another theologically, our courage to bring the love of Christ to our neighbor, our generosity and creativity in lifting the sorrows of our world, and our readiness to represent Christ in interfaith interactions.

After these three decades, evidence indicates there is not yet a unity of conscience on the subject of ordination standards. Margins in voting attest to the lack of consensus: for instance, the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved an amendment of G-6.0106b by a slim margin (380 affirmative, 325 negative, 3 abstaining), then the presbyteries rejected it, but with a significant minority (78 yes, 95 no). Polling data indicates that a significant majority of Presbyterian members oppose ordination of gay persons as Minister of Word and Sacrament. Yet, the same poll also indicates a smaller majority opposing ordination of gay persons as Elder or Deacon.

Just as significantly, evidence suggests that our approach to the controversy has diminished our resemblance to the mind of Christ. While proponents of gay ordination have long argued that the church’s prohibition is unbecoming of the gospel of Jesus Christ, opponents of gay ordination are beginning to notice the detrimental effects of the controversy. For instance, the Barna Group conducted research on Americans born between 1965 and 2002, who are “outsiders,” namely, those looking at Christian faith from the outside. Representing an evangelical voice, authors Kinnaman and Lyons published their findings under the title, Unchristian, to denote the essence of outsiders’ most common reaction to Christian faith: “… they think that Christians no longer represent what Jesus had in mind, that Christianity in our society is not what it was meant to be.” In their national surveys, Barna Group found that the three most common perceptions of present-day Christianity are anti-homosexual (an image held by 91 percent of young outsiders), judgmental (87 percent), and hypocritical (85 percent). Notwithstanding their conservative stance on homosexuality, the authors do not flinch from this alarming summary:

> When most of us engage homosexuals, we come across as arrogant, self-righteous, and uncaring—the opposite of how Jesus engaged outsiders. Rather than articulating a biblical perspective and living out a biblical response to homosexuals, the research demonstrates how inconsistent and uncompassionate—we have been.

Kinnaman and Lyons urge Christians who view homosexual behavior as sin to change their approach. They urge biblical responses which acknowledge complexity, treat others with respect, and above all demonstrate compassion.

Standards matter; yet, when our debate causes us to depart from such fundamental standards of Christian behavior as evidently perceived by many young Americans, then we have dimmed our capacity to witness to the Light of Christ. Further, by neglecting such standards of behavior—humility, gentleness, patience, forbearance, and persevering effort for unity—we have fractured trust, withering the gift of community.

Regarding Item 3 (seven-year fast and active waiting upon the Lord)

Three decades of legislative wrangling has not yielded unity, nor does the future portend unity, no matter whether the majority holds or the majority shifts. Legislative effort does not appear to be the way at this time. Returning to Ephesians, then, though we have made long effort, we have not made every effort to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Further, we have often forgotten along the way to act with humility, gentleness, and patience.

We believe the PC(USA) would benefit and the Lord would be glorified by a General Assembly call to fasting and active waiting upon the Lord. This is not to be understood as a moratorium in religious clothing. A moratorium is a legislative order, meaning delay, implying inaction. In effect, it is often little more than a cease-fire, allowing opponents time to reload. Fasting, by contrast, is active. To fast is to voluntarily hold back or refrain from something in order to hunger for the Lord. To fast is to wait actively for the Lord, engaging in activities that sharpen our readiness for revelation, insight, and call.

To fast from legislative efforts to resolve the ordination standards controversy will be a significant spiritual challenge for many of us. It will require prayer, self-emptying, self-control, and community support. As with any fast, it must be voluntarily chosen, not coerced. This draws us closer to the mind of Christ (Philippians 2). As with every gift of grace, it will be costly.

Further, to fast is to hunger for the Lord, also understood as actively waiting upon the Lord. We believe that in our focus on legislative solutions, we have overlooked many potential efforts to maintain unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. We believe active waiting in this time means consciously, deliberately pursuing untried efforts, especially guided by the standard of behavior set forth in Ephesians 4.

The recommended length of the fast—seven years—stems from our biblical formation, as well as a sober recognition of the depth of fractures in many of our relationships. Time is an important tool for healing. Wounds more than thirty years in the making will not heal overnight.

Regarding Item 4 (Ephesians 4, Officers, and Forbearance)

Our historic principles call us to preserve and nurture our unity by “exercising mutual forbearance in love.” This phrase, mutual forbearance, stems from Ephesians 4 in the King James Version, but does not quote it precisely. Paul does not beg the church in Ephesus to “mutually forbear”; he begs them to “forbear.” We observe that despite all laudable pleas for mutual forbearance, no individual can exercise it. We can only forbear. We can offer only our own patience, we cannot demand it from another.

To paraphrase Barth (above), it behooves the church to think of this controversy only with forbearance, not with the forbearance that each expects of the other, but with the forbearance in which—whatever may be the cost—each is willing to precede [that is, offer first to] the other. Reconciliation precedes righteousness. Christ forbore us while we were yet sinners.

In such a time of division, it is especially incumbent upon Presbyterian leaders to equip themselves to nurture and affirm the gift of unity. Our recommendations encourage officers to be grounded in biblical study and strengthened for the hard work of resisting temptation and exercising forbearance. Forbearance can restore trust, and the church hungers for trust.

Regarding Items 5 and 6 (Exhortations for majority and minority)

Habits are hard to break. Items five and six specifically address those representing opposing viewpoints. We are so accustomed to the controversy that guidance is warranted in turning to a new direction.
How, then, do communities of conviction within the church relate to other communities of different conviction within the church? If disassociation is ruled out, each group is called to life together. If castigation is ruled out, each group is called to speaking and listening in a manner that recognizes the integrity of the other. If indifference is ruled out, each group is called to bear faithful witness to its own apprehension of the truth.

Items five and six seek to assist in our call to life together, to recognize the integrity of the other, and to bear faithful witness.

In particular, the approaches outlined draw upon insights from the 1983 document, Historic Principles, Conscience and Church Government, prepared at the time of reunion of the UPCUSA and the PCUS to address issues of diversity of conscience. This document asserts the political means by which we cope with unity and diversity:

> The polity of Presbyterianism—with its strong insistence on the rule of the majority and the rights of the minority—is indeed the way in which Presbyterians affirm their unity amid their diversity.

We have therefore extended specific counsel to each group—majority and minority—within the PC(USA). Each group has a specific set of opportunities and responsibilities, protected by the polity of Robert's Rules of Order, yet each group also has a more fundamental set of responsibilities set forth by biblical standards. Our counsel calls attention to opportunities and responsibilities for both majority and minority—opportunities and responsibilities that we believe have been thus far overlooked or under-explored in our wrestling with this controversy.

According to Historic Principles, the majority has the right to rule, to establish its own standards, and this freedom includes the right to be wrong. Nevertheless, the dissenter also has rights. “The church protects its own minority point of view as if it were protecting its future, recognizing that the dissenter may well represent the will of God.”

The church is cautioned that schism is generally the result not of an issue itself, but of an improper understanding or use of Presbyterian polity, such as when

- “a governing body acts on crucial matters which affect the whole church, even with proper authority, but without giving consideration to consultation and the slow process necessary to aid in the building of consensus” and
- “an individual church officer or group of church officers become isolated from the governing body and see the action of the body as that of an enemy, thus refusing to take such action with seriousness.”

While the majority has the right to rule, the minority has rights as well. After an action has been taken, individuals in the minority possess five specific rights: (1) the right to work for change, (2) the right of dissent, protest, or appeal, (3) the right of passive concurrence (abide by the rule without agreeing), (4) the right of active concurrence (changing one’s mind), and (5) the right of peaceful individual withdrawal.

In three decades of debate, the minority has not explored the full complement of these rights. For instance, to our knowledge, there has been no sustained effort by those in the minority to enter a formal dissent or protest on the records of the governing body to which they belong. Better, the right to work for change can include non-legislative and non-judicial methods.

Because both sides seek to gain the majority, we cite this prophetic observation from the report:

> Divisiveness and schism are most likely to occur when the church does not follow its own procedures carefully. When an attempt is made to force consensus before the time is right, the impatience of those who demand premature action may produce a lack of proper attention to the convictions of a large minority. Such a lack is one which produces ill will and potential for schism.

The minority is now large. And even if the minority gains majority, the consequent minority will be large. We must try a different way.

Regarding Item 7 (Communicating to the Church)

By choosing to communicate with the church by means of a message, rather than a rule, the General Assembly invites forbearance by exercising it.

Item 07-01

Form of Government Task Force Report to the 219th General Assembly (2010)

The Form of Government Task Force recommends that the 219th General Assembly (2010):

[The assembly approved Item 07-01, Recommendation 1, with amendment. See pp. 18–24.]

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

   Shall the Book of Order be amended by striking out the text of Chapters I–XVIII of the current Form of Government (G-1.0000–G-18.0401) and inserting two documents, Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and a new Form of Government, to read as follows:

   "The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity"

   "Chapter One"

   "The Mission of the Church"

   "F-1.01 God's Mission"

   "The good news of the Gospel is that the triune God—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—creates, redeems, sustains, rules, and transforms all things and all people. This one living God, the Scriptures say, liberated the people of Israel from oppression and covenanted to be their God. By the power of the Spirit, this one living God is incarnate in Jesus Christ, who came to live in the world, die for the world, and be raised again to new life. The Gospel of Jesus Christ announces the nearness of God’s kingdom, bringing good news to all who are impoverished, sight to all who are blind, freedom to all who are oppressed, and proclaiming the Lord’s favor upon all creation.

   "The mission of God in Christ gives shape and substance to the life and work of the Church. In Christ, the Church participates in God’s mission for the transformation of creation and humanity by proclaiming to all people the good news of God’s love, offering to all people the grace of God at font and table, and calling all people to discipleship in Christ. Human beings have no higher goal in life than to glorify and enjoy God now and forever, living in covenant fellowship with God and participating in God’s mission.

   "F-1.02 Jesus Christ Is Head of the Church"

   "1.0201 The Authority of Christ"

   "Almighty God, who raised Jesus Christ from the dead and set him above all rule and authority, has given to him all power in heaven and on earth, not only in this age but also in the age to come. God has put all things under the Lordship of Jesus Christ and has made Christ Head of the Church, which is his body. The Church’s life and mission are a joyful participation in Christ’s ongoing life and work.

   "1.0202 Christ Calls and Equips the Church"

   "Christ calls the Church into being, giving it all that is necessary for its mission in the world, for its sanctification, and for its service to God. Christ is present with the Church in both Spirit and Word. Christ alone rules, calls, teaches, and uses the Church as he wills.

   "1.0203 Christ Gives the Church Its Life"

   "Christ gives to the Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its order and discipline. Scripture teaches us of Christ’s will for the Church, which is to be obeyed. In the worship and service of God and the government of the church, matters are to be ordered according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

   "1.0204 Christ Is the Church’s Hope"

   "In affirming with the earliest Christians that Jesus is Lord, the Church confesses that he is its hope, and that the Church, as Christ’s body, is bound to his authority and thus free to live in the lively, joyous reality of the grace of God.

---

a Throughout this document and the Form of Government, the capitalized term ‘Church’ refers to the Church Universal, the Church as it is called to be in Christ, [the lower-case term ‘church’ refers to denominations, except as part of a title (i.e. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)). In place of the vernacular use of ‘church’ to denote a congregation of believers, the term ‘congregation’ is used.]
“1.0205 Christ Is the Foundation of the Church

“Christ is the Foundation of the Church.

“In Christ, the fullness of God was pleased to dwell, and through Christ God reconciles all things, whether on earth or in heaven, making peace by the blood of the cross. In Christ’s name, therefore, the Church is sent out to bear witness to the good news of reconciliation with God, with others, and with all creation. In Christ the Church receives its truth and appeal, its holiness, and its unity.

“F-1.03 THE CALLING OF THE CHURCH

“1.0301 The Church Is the Body of Christ

“The Church is the body of Christ. Christ gives to the Church all the gifts necessary to be his body. The Church strives to demonstrate these gifts in its life as a community in the world (1 Cor. 12:27–28):

“The Church is to be a community of faith, entrusting itself to God alone, even at the risk of losing its life.

“The Church is to be a community of hope, rejoicing in the sure and certain knowledge that, in Christ, God is making a new creation. This new creation is a new beginning for human life and for all things. The Church lives in the present on the strength of that promised new creation.

“The Church is to be a community of love, where sin is forgiven, reconciliation is accomplished, and the dividing walls of hostility are torn down.

“The Church is to be a community of witness, pointing beyond itself through word and work to the good news of God’s transforming grace in Christ Jesus its Lord.

“1.0302 The Marks of the Church

“With all Christians of the Church catholic, we affirm that the Church is ‘one, holy, catholic, and apostolic.’

“a. The Unity of the Church

“Unity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ. Just as God is one God and Jesus Christ is our one Savior, so the Church is one because it belongs to its one Lord, Jesus Christ. The Church seeks to include all people and is never content to enjoy the benefits of Christian community for itself alone. There is one Church, for there is one Spirit, one hope, ‘one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all’ (Eph. 4:5–6).

“Because in Christ the Church is one, it strives to be one. To be one with Christ is to be joined with all those whom Christ calls into relationship with him. To be thus joined with one another is to become priests for one another, praying for the world and for one another and sharing the various gifts God has given to each Christian for the benefit of the whole community. Division into different denominations obscures but does not destroy unity in Christ. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity, and is willing to seek and to deepen communion with all other churches within the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church.

“b. The Holiness of the Church

“Holiness is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ. Through the love of Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God takes away the sin of the world. The holiness of the Church comes from Christ who sets it apart to bear witness to his love, and not from the purity of its doctrine or the righteousness of its actions.

“Because in Christ the Church is holy, the Church, its members, and those in its ordered ministries strive to lead lives worthy of the Gospel we proclaim. In gratitude for Christ’s work of redemption, we rely upon the work of God’s Spirit through Scripture and the means of grace (W-5.5001) to form every believer and every community for this holy living. We confess the persistence of sin in our corporate and individual lives. At the same time, we also confess that we are forgiven by Christ and called again and yet again to strive for the purity, righteousness, and truth revealed to us in Jesus Christ and promised to all people in God’s new creation.

“c. The Catholicity of the Church

“Catholicity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ. In the life, death, and resurrection of Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God overcomes our alienation and repairs our division.

“See ‘The Nicene Creed,’ The Book of Confessions, 1.3.
“Because in Christ the Church is catholic, it strives everywhere to testify to Christ’s embrace of men, women, and children of all times, places, races, nations, ages, conditions, and stations in life. The catholicity of the Church summons the Church to a deeper faith, a larger hope, and a more complete love as it bears witness to God’s grace.

d. The Apostolicity of the Church

“Apostolicity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ. In Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God sends the Church into the world to share the gospel of God’s redemption of all things and people.

Because in Christ the Church is apostolic, it strives to proclaim this gospel faithfully. The Church receives the good news of salvation in Jesus Christ through the testimony of those whom Christ sent, both those whom we call apostles and those whom Christ has called throughout the long history of the Church. The Church has been and is even now sent into the world by Jesus Christ to bear that testimony to others. The Church bears witness in word and work that in Christ the new creation has begun, and that God who creates life also frees those in bondage, forgives sin, reconciles brokenness, makes all things new, and is still at work in the world. To be members of the body of Christ is to be sent out to pursue the mission of God and to participate in God’s new creation, God’s kingdom drawing the present into itself. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms the Gospel of Jesus Christ as received from the prophets and apostles, and stands in continuity with God’s mission through the ages.

The Church strives to be faithful to the good news it has received and accountable to the standards of the confessions. The Church seeks to present the claims of Jesus Christ, leading persons to repentance, acceptance of Christ alone as Savior and Lord, and new life as his disciples.

“The Church is sent to be Christ’s faithful evangelist:

• making disciples of all nations in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit;
• sharing with others a deep life of worship, prayer, fellowship, and service; and
• participating in God’s mission to care for the needs of the sick, poor, and lonely; to free people from sin, suffering, and oppression; and to establish Christ’s just, loving, and peaceable rule in the world.

1.0303 The Notes of the Reformed Church

Where Christ is, there is the true Church. Since the earliest days of the Reformation, Reformed Christians have marked the presence of the true Church wherever:

• the Word of God is truly preached and heard,
• the Sacraments are rightly administered, and
• ecclesiastical discipline is uprightly ministered.

In our own time, we affirm that, in the power of the Spirit, the Church is faithful to the mission of Christ as it:

• Proclaims and hears the Word of God,
  • responding to the promise of God’s new creation in Christ, and
  • inviting all people to participate in that new creation;
• Administers and receives the Sacraments,
  • welcoming those who are being engrafted into Christ,
  • bearing witness to Christ’s saving death and resurrection,
  • anticipating the heavenly banquet that is to come, and
  • committing itself in the present to solidarity with the marginalized and the hungry; and
• Nurtures a covenant community of disciples of Christ,
  • living in the strength of God’s promise and
  • giving itself in service to God’s mission.

1.0304 The Great Ends of the Church

The great ends of the Church are:

• the proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind;

3 See The Scots Confession, Ch. XVIII (The Book of Confessions, 3.18)
“the shelter, nurture, and spiritual fellowship of the children of God;
“the maintenance of divine worship;
“the preservation of the truth;
“the promotion of social righteousness; and
“the exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the world.”

“F-1.04 OPENNESS TO THE GUIDANCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

1.0401 Continuity and Change

“The presbyterian form of government set forth in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is grounded in Scripture and built around the marks of the true Church. It is in all things subject to the Lord of the Church. In the power of the Spirit, Jesus Christ draws worshiping communities and individual believers into the sovereign activity of the triune God at all times and places. As the Church seeks reform and fresh direction, it looks to Jesus Christ who goes ahead of us and calls us to follow him. United with Christ in the power of the Spirit, the Church seeks ‘not [to] be conformed to this world, but [to] be transformed by the renewing of [our] minds, so that [we] may discern what is the will of God—what is good and acceptable and perfect’ (Rom. 12:2).

1.0402 Ecumenicity

“The presbyterian system of government in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is established in light of Scripture but is not regarded as essential for the existence of the Christian Church nor required of all Christians.

1.0403 Unity in Diversity

‘As many of you as were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s offspring, heirs according to the promise’ (Gal. 3:27–29).

“The unity of believers in Christ is reflected in the rich diversity of the Church’s membership. In Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God unites persons through baptism regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, or theological conviction. There is therefore no place in the life of the Church for discrimination against any person. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall guarantee full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership. No member shall be denied participation or representation for any reason other than those stated in this Constitution.

1.0404 Openness

“In Jesus Christ, who is Lord of all creation, the Church seeks a new openness to God’s mission in the world. In Christ, the triune God tends the least among us, suffers the curse of human sinfulness, raises up a new humanity, and promises a new future for all creation. In Christ, Church members share with all humanity the realities of creatureliness, sinfulness, brokenness, and suffering, as well as the future toward which God is drawing them. The mission of God pertains not only to the Church but also to people everywhere and to all creation. As it participates in God’s mission, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) seeks:

“a new openness to the sovereign activity of God in the Church and in the world, to a more radical obedience to Christ, and to a more joyous celebration in worship and work;

“a new openness in its own membership, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions, made one in Christ by the power of the Spirit, as a visible sign of the new humanity;

“a new openness to see both the possibilities and perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activity in the world; and

“a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be more effective in its mission.

“This statement of the Great Ends of the Church, slightly edited here, came from the United Presbyterian Church of North America, which united with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in 1958. The statement was then made a part of the Constitution of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, as the united body was called. This now classic statement was adopted by the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1916, following various actions between 1904 and 1910 looking forward to the revision of the church’s Constitution.
CHAPTER TWO
THE CHURCH AND ITS CONFESSIONS

F-2.01 THE PURPOSE OF CONFESSIONAL STATEMENTS

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states its faith and bears witness to God’s grace in Jesus Christ in the creeds and confessions in The Book of Confessions. In these statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do. These statements identify the church as a community of people known by its convictions as well as by its actions. They guide the church in its study and interpretation of the Scriptures; they summarize the essence of Reformed Christian tradition; they direct the church in maintaining sound doctrines; they equip the church for its work of proclamation. They serve to strengthen personal commitment and the life and witness of the community of believers.

“The creeds and confessions of this church arose in response to particular circumstances within the history of God’s people. They claim the truth of the Gospel at those points where their authors perceived that truth to be at risk. They are the result of prayer, thought, and experience within a living tradition. They appeal to the universal truth of the Gospel while expressing that truth within the social and cultural assumptions of their time. They affirm a common faith tradition, while also from time to time standing in tension with each other.

F-2.02 THE CONFESSIONS AS SUBORDINATE STANDARDS

“These confessional statements are subordinate standards in the church, subject to the authority of Jesus Christ, the Word of God, as the Scriptures bear witness to him. While confessional standards are subordinate to the Scriptures, they are, nonetheless, standards. They are not lightly drawn up or subscribed to, nor may they be ignored or dismissed. The church is prepared to instruct, counsel with, or even to discipline one ordained who seriously rejects the faith expressed in the confessions. Moreover, the process for changing the confessions of the church is deliberately demanding, requiring a high degree of consensus across the church. Yet the church, in obedience to Jesus Christ, is open to the reform of its standards of doctrine as well as of governance. The church affirms ‘Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda secundum verbum Dei,’ that is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed according to the Word of God’ in the power of the Spirit.

F-2.03 THE CONFESSIONS AS STATEMENTS OF THE FAITH OF THE CHURCH CATHOLIC

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) witnesses to the faith of the Church catholic. The confessions express the faith of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church in the recognition of canonical Scriptures and the formulation and adoption of the ecumenical creeds, notably the Nicene and Apostles’ Creeds with their definitions of the mystery of the triune God and of the incarnation of the eternal Word of God in Jesus Christ.

F-2.04 THE CONFESSIONS AS STATEMENTS OF THE FAITH OF THE PROTESTANT REFORMATION

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) upholds the affirmations of the Protestant Reformation. The focus of these affirmations is God’s grace in Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. The Protestant watchwords—grace alone, faith alone, Scripture alone—embody principles of understanding that continue to guide and motivate the people of God in the life of faith.

F-2.05 THE CONFESSIONS AS STATEMENTS OF THE FAITH OF THE REFORMED TRADITION

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expresses the faith of the Reformed tradition. Central to this tradition is the affirmation of the majesty, holiness, and providence of God who in Christ and by the power of the Spirit creates, sustains, rules, and redeems the world in the freedom of sovereign righteousness and love. Related to this central affirmation of God’s sovereignty are other great themes of the Reformed tradition:

“The election of the people of God for service as well as for salvation;

“Covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God;

“A faithful stewardship that shuns ostentation and seeks proper use of the gifts of God’s creation; and

“The recognition of the human tendency to idolatry and tyranny, which calls the people of God to work for the transformation of society by seeking justice and living in obedience to the Word of God.
“F-3.01 HISTORIC PRINCIPLES OF CHURCH ORDER”

“In setting forth this Book of Order, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirms the historic principles of church order, which have been a part of our common heritage and which are basic to our Presbyterian concept and system of church government, namely:

3.0101 God Is Lord of the Conscience

a. That ‘God alone is Lord of the conscience, and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in anything contrary to his Word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship.’

b. Therefore we consider the rights of private judgment, in all matters that respect religion, as universal and unalienable: We do not even wish to see any religious constitution aided by the civil power, further than may be necessary for protection and security, and at the same time, be equal and common to all others.

3.0102 Corporate Judgment

That, in perfect consistency with the above principle of common right, every Christian Church, or union or association of particular churches, is entitled to declare the terms of admission into its communion, and the qualifications of its ministers and members, as well as the whole system of its internal government which Christ hath appointed; that in the exercise of this right they may, notwithstanding, err, in making the terms of communion either too lax or too narrow; yet, even in this case, they do not infringe upon the liberty or the rights of others, but only make an improper use of their own.

3.0103 Officers

That our blessed Savior, for the edification of the visible Church, which is his body, hath appointed officers, not only to preach the gospel and administer the Sacraments, but also to exercise discipline, for the preservation of both truth and duty; and that it is incumbent upon these officers, and upon the whole Church, in whose name they act, to censure or cast out the erroneous and scandalous, observing, in all cases, the rules contained in the Word of God.

3.0104 Truth and Goodness

That truth is in order to goodness; and the great touchstone of truth, its tendency to promote holiness, according to our Savior’s rule, ‘By their fruits ye shall know them.’ And that no opinion can either be more pernicious or more absurd than that which brings truth and falsehood upon a level, and represents it as of no consequence what a man’s opinions are. On the contrary, we are persuaded that there is an inseparable connection between faith and practice, truth and duty. Otherwise it would be of no consequence either to discover truth or to embrace it.

3.0105 Mutual Forbearance

That, while under the conviction of the above principle we think it necessary to make effectual provision that all who are admitted as teachers be sound in the faith, we also believe that there are truths and forms with respect to which men of good characters and principles may differ. And in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other.

3.0106 Election by the People

That though the character, qualifications, and authority of Church officers are laid down in the Holy Scriptures, as well as the proper method of their investiture and institution, yet the election of the persons to the exercise of this authority, in any particular society, is in that society.

---

5 This section, with the exception of the first paragraph, was first drawn up by the Synod of New York and Philadelphia, and prefixed to the Form of Government as published by that body in 1788. In that year, the synod was divided into four synods and gave place to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, which held its first meeting the following year. The four synods formed were the Synod of New York and New Jersey, the Synod of Philadelphia, the Synod of Virginia, and the Synod of the Carolinas. The presbyteries of these four synods were represented in the first General Assembly, which met in Philadelphia on May 21, 1789. The general plan drawn up in 1788 became that by which the Presbyterian Church in the United States and The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America were subsequently governed.

6 The words ‘men’ and ‘man’s’ in this section from the eighteenth century should be understood as applying to all persons.

7 See the Westminster Confession of Faith (The Book of Confessions, 6.109).

8 The terms ‘officers’ and ‘office’ are preserved here and in G-3.0106 as part of the historic language of the Principles. Elsewhere in the Form of Government the terms ‘ordered minister’ and ‘ordered ministry’ are used in place of ‘officer’ and ‘office.’
“3.0107 Church Power

“That all Church power, whether exercised by the body in general or in the way of representation by delegated authority, is only ministerial and declarative; that is to say, that the Holy Scriptures are the only rule of faith and manners; that no Church judicatory ought to pretend to make laws to bind the conscience in virtue of their own authority; and that all their decisions should be founded upon the revealed will of God. Now though it will easily be admitted that all synods and councils may err, through the frailty inseparable from humanity, yet there is much greater danger from the usurped claim of making laws than from the right of judging upon laws already made, and common to all who profess the gospel, although this right, as necessity requires in the present state, be lodged with fallible men.

“3.0108 The Value of Ecclesiastical Discipline

“Lastly, that if the preceding scriptural and rational principles be steadfastly adhered to, the vigor and strictness of its discipline will contribute to the glory and happiness of any church. Since ecclesiastical discipline must be purely moral or spiritual in its object, and not attended with any civil effects, it can derive no force whatever but from its own justice, the approbation of an impartial public, and the countenance and blessing of the great Head of the Church universal.

“F-3.02 PRINCIPLES OF PRESBYTERIAN GOVERNMENT

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirms, within the context of its commitment to the Church universal, a special commitment to basic principles of Presbyterian polity:

“3.0201 One Church

“The particular congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) wherever they are, taken collectively, constitute one church, called the church.

“3.0202 Governed by Presbyters

“This church shall be governed by presbyters, that is, ruling elders and teaching elders. Ruling elders are so named not because they ‘lord it over’ the congregation (Matt. 20:25), but because they are chosen by the congregation to discern and measure its fidelity to the Word of God, and to strengthen and nurture its faith and life. Teaching elders shall be committed in all their work to equipping the people of God for their ministry and witness.

“3.0203 Gathered in Councils

“These presbyters shall come together in councils in regular gradation. These councils are sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly. All councils of the church are united by the nature of the church and share with one another responsibilities, rights, and powers as provided in this Constitution. The councils are distinct, but have such mutual relations that the act of one of them is the act of the whole church performed by it through the appropriate council. The larger part of the church, or a representation thereof, shall govern the smaller.

“3.0204 Seek and Represent the Will of Christ

“Presbyters are not simply to reflect the will of the people, but rather to seek together to find and represent the will of Christ.

“3.0205 Decision by Majority Vote

“Decisions shall be reached in councils by vote, following opportunity for discussion and discernment, and a majority shall govern.

“9 The term ‘judicatory,’ employed here as part of the historical language of the Principles, is elsewhere in the Form of Government replaced with ‘council.’

“10 This provision is derived from and intended to restate the Historic Principles of Church Government, which were adopted in 1797 by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Principles of Presbyterian Government. In this quotation, the word ‘radical’ is used in its primary meaning of ‘fundamental and basic,’ and the word ‘appeals’ is used in a general sense rather than with reference to a case involved in judicial process: ‘The radical principles of Presbyterian church government and discipline are: “That the several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies [councils], till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church. For these principles and this procedure, the example of the apostles and the practice of the primitive Church are considered as authority.”’
3.0206 Review and Control

“A higher council shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal.

3.0207 Ordination by Council

“Presbyters (ruling elders and teaching elders) and deacons are ordained only by the authority of a council.

3.0208 Shared Power, Exercised Jointly “Ecclesiastical jurisdiction is a shared power, to be exercised jointly by presbyters gathered in councils.

3.0209 General Authority of Councils

“Councils possess whatever administrative authority is necessary to give effect to duties and powers assigned by the Constitution of the church. The jurisdiction of each council is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries.

F-3.03 FOUNDATIONAL STATEMENTS

“The statements contained in this section, ‘The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity,’ describe the ecclesiological and historical commitments on which the polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) rests. Provisions of any part of this Constitution are to be interpreted in light of the whole Constitution. No provision of the Book of Order can of itself invalidate any other. Where there are tensions and ambiguities between provisions, it is the task of councils and judicial commissions to resolve them in such a way as to give effect to all provisions.

\textbf{G-1.01 The Congregation}

\textit{1.0101 The Mission of the Congregation}

The congregation is the church engaged in the mission of God in its particular context. The triune God gives to the congregation all the gifts of the gospel necessary to being the Church. The congregation is the basic form of the church, but it is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. Thus congregations are bound together in communion with one another, united in relationships of accountability and responsibility, contributing their strengths to the benefit of the whole, and are called, collectively, the church.

Through the congregation God’s people carry out the ministries of proclamation, sharing the Sacraments, and living in covenant life with God and each other. In the life of the congregation, individual believers are equipped for the ministry of witness to the love and grace of God in and for the world. The congregation reaches out to people, communities, and the world to share the good news of Jesus Christ, to gather for worship, to offer care and nurture to God’s children, to speak for social justice and righteousness, to bear witness to the truth and to the reign of God that is coming into the world.

\textit{1.0102 The Fellowship of the Congregation}

The polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presupposes the fellowship of women and men, and children united in covenant relationship with one another and with God through Jesus Christ. The organization rests on the fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.

\textit{1.0103 Governed by the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)}

A ‘congregation’ as used in this Form of Government refers to a formally organized community chartered and recognized by a presbytery as provided in this Constitution. Each congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by this Constitution. The members of a congregation put themselves under the leadership of the session and the higher councils (presbytery, synod, and General Assembly). The session is responsible to guide and govern the life of the congregation. The session leads the congregation in fulfilling its responsibilities for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the glory of God.

Other forms of corporate witness established by the presbytery shall also be governed by this Constitution and shall be subject to the authority of the presbytery.

\textbf{G-1.02 The Organizing of a Congregation}

A congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be organized only by the authority of a presbytery and shall function under the provisions of this Constitution.

\textit{1.0201 Organizing Covenant}

In organizing a congregation, presbytery shall receive applications for membership from persons wishing to unite in forming a new congregation. These persons shall covenant together as follows:

\begin{quote}
‘We, the undersigned, in response to the grace of God, desire to be constituted and organized as a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to be known as ____________. We promise and covenant to live together in unity and to work together in ministry as disciples of Jesus Christ, bound to him and to one another as a part of the body of Christ in this place according to the principles of faith, mission, and order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}
‘(Signatures)’
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}
[At its sole discretion the presbytery may then] declare an organized congregation of the presbytery[,] [and] The congregation shall proceed to the election of ruling elders and, if they so decide, deacons. The presbytery shall prepare, examine, ordain, and install these newly elected persons. Presbytery shall continue to work closely with the congregation in securing pastoral leadership, in plans for the service and witness of the congregation, in coordinating its work with other congregations, in counseling concerning incorporation and bylaws for the congregation conforming to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and in giving other forms of support and encouragement that will strengthen the mission of the congregation in the larger life of the denomination.
\end{quote}

“G-1.03 THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CONGREGATION

1.0301 The Meaning of Membership and Baptism

“In Jesus Christ, God calls people to faith and to membership in the Church, the body of Christ. Baptism is the visible sign of that call and claim on a human life and of entrance into the membership of the church. The baptism of children witnesses to the truth that God’s love claims people before they are able to respond in faith. The baptism of those who enter the covenant of membership upon their own profession of faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior witnesses to the truth that God’s gift of grace calls forth a response of faithfulness. Thus, the triune God, incarnate in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, gives to the Church not only its mission but also its understanding of membership.

1.0302 Welcome and Openness

“A congregation shall welcome all persons who trust in God’s grace in Jesus Christ and desire to become part of the fellowship and ministry of his Church (F-1.0403). No person shall be denied membership for any reason not related to profession of faith. The Gospel leads members to extend the fellowship of Christ to all persons. Failure to do so constitutes a rejection of Christ himself and causes a scandal to the Gospel.

1.0303 Entry into Membership

“Persons may enter into active church membership in the following ways:

a. Public profession of faith, made after careful examination by the session in the meaning and responsibilities of membership; if not already baptized, the person making profession of faith shall be baptized;

b. Certificate of transfer, when a person is a member of another Christian church at the time of transfer;

c. Reaffirmation of faith, for persons previously baptized in the name of the triune God [and having publicly professed their faith].

1.0304 The Ministry of Members

“Membership in the Church of Jesus Christ is a joy and a privilege. It is also a commitment to participate in Christ’s mission. A faithful member bears witness to God’s love and grace and promises to be involved responsibly in the ministry of Christ’s Church. Such involvement includes:

proclaiming the good news in word and deed, thaking part in the common life and worship of a congregation, lifting one another up in prayer, mutual concern, and active support, studying Scripture and the issues of Christian faith and life, supporting the ministry of the church through the giving of money, time, and talents, demonstrating a new quality of life within and through the church, responding to God’s activity in the world through service to others, living responsibly in the personal, family, vocational, political, cultural, and social relationships of life, working in the world for peace, justice, freedom, and human fulfillment, participating in the governing responsibilities of the church, and reviewing and evaluating regularly the integrity of one’s membership, and considering ways in which one’s participation in the worship and service of the church may be increased and made more meaningful.

G-1.04 CATEGORIES OF MEMBERSHIP

“The membership of a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) includes baptized members, active members, and affiliate members.

1.0401 Baptized Member

“A baptized member is a person who has received the Sacrament of Baptism, whether in this congregation or elsewhere, and who has been enrolled as a baptized member by the session but who has not made a profession of faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. Such baptized members receive the pastoral care and instruction of the church, and may participate in the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper.
“1.0402 Active Member

An active member is a person who has made a profession of faith in Christ, has been baptized, has been received into membership of the church, has voluntarily submitted to the government of this church, and participates in the church’s work and worship. In addition, active members participate in the governance of the church and may be elected to ordered ministry (see G-2.0102). Active members shall regularly, after prayerful consideration, recommit themselves to the disciplines and responsibilities of membership outlined in G-1.0304. The session shall have responsibility for preparing those who would become active members of the congregation.

“1.0403 Affiliate Member

An affiliate member is a member of another congregation of this denomination or of another denomination or Christian body, who has temporarily moved from the community where the congregation of membership is situated, has presented a certificate of good standing from the appropriate council or governing body of that congregation, and has been received by the session as an affiliate member. An affiliate member may participate in the life of the congregation in the same manner as an active member except that an affiliate member may not vote in congregational meetings or be elected to ordered ministry or other office in the congregation.

“1.0404 Other Participants

Persons who are not members of, or who may have ceased active participation in, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are welcome and may participate in the life and worship of this church and receive its pastoral care and instruction. The invitation to the Lord’s Supper is extended to all who have been baptized, remembering that access to the table is not a right conferred upon the worthy, but a privilege given to the undeserving who come in faith, repentance, and love (W-2.4011). Confessing members of other Christian churches may present children for baptism, in conformity with W-2.3014.

“G-1.05 MEETINGS OF THE CONGREGATION

“1.0501 Annual and Special Meetings

The congregation shall hold an annual meeting and may hold special meetings as necessary, for any or all of the purposes appropriate for congregational consideration. The business to be transacted at special meetings shall be limited to items specifically listed in the call for the meeting.

All active members of the congregation present at either annual or special meetings are entitled to vote. Congregations shall provide by rule the quorum necessary to conduct business.

“1.0502 Calling a Congregational Meeting

Meetings of the congregation shall be called by the session, by the presbytery, or by the session when requested in writing by one fourth of the active members on the roll of the congregation. Adequate public notice of all congregational meetings shall be given. Congregations shall provide by their own rule for minimum notification requirements and give notice at regular services of worship prior to the meeting.

“1.0503 Business Proper to Congregational Meetings

Business to be transacted at meetings of the congregation shall be limited to matters related to the following:

“a. electing ruling elders, deacons, and trustees;
“b. calling a pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor;
“c. changing existing pastoral relationships, by such means as reviewing the adequacy of and approving changes to the terms of call of the pastor or pastors, or requesting, consenting to, or declining to consent to dissolution;
“d. buying, mortgaging, or selling real property;
“e. requesting the presbytery to grant an exemption as permitted in this Constitution (G-2.0404).

Whenever permitted by civil law, both ecclesiastical and corporate business may be conducted at the same congregational meeting.

“1.0504 Moderator

The installed pastor shall ordinarily moderate all meetings of the congregation. If it is impractical for the pastor to preside, he or she shall invite another teaching elder who is a member of the presbytery or a person authorized by the presbytery to serve as moderator. If there is no installed pastor, [or the installed pastor is unable to moderate and/or to name another moderator,] the presbytery shall make provision for a moderator.

“1.0505 Secretary and Minutes

“The clerk of session shall serve as secretary for all meetings of the congregation. If the clerk of session is unable to serve, the congregation shall elect a secretary for that meeting. The secretary shall record the actions of the congregation in minutes of the meeting.

“CHAPTER TWO

“ORDERED MINISTRY, COMMISSIONING, AND CERTIFICATION

“G-2.01 ORDERED MINISTRIES OF THE CHURCH

“2.0101 Christ’s Ministry

“The Church’s ministry is a gift from Jesus Christ to the whole Church. Christ alone rules, calls, teaches, and uses the Church as he wills, exercising his authority by the ministry of women and men for the establishment and extension of God’s new creation. Christ’s ministry is the foundation and standard for all ministry, the pattern of the one who came ‘not to be served but to serve’ (Matt. 20:28). The basic form of ministry is the ministry of the whole people of God, from whose midst some are called to ordered ministries, to fulfill particular functions. Members and those in ordered ministries serve together under the mandate of Christ.

“2.0102 Ordered Ministries

“The Church’s ordered ministries described in the New Testament and maintained by this church are deacons and presbyters (teaching elders and ruling elders). Ordered ministries are gifts to the church to order its life so that the ministry of the whole people of God may flourish. The existence of these ordered ministries in no way diminishes the importance of the commitment of all members to the total ministry of the church.

“The government of this church is representative, and the right of God’s people to elect presbyters and deacons is inalienable. Therefore, no person can be placed in any ordered ministry in a congregation or council of the church except by election of that body.

“Ordination to the ministry of teaching elder, ruling elder, or deacon is unique to that order of ministry.

“2.0103 Call to Ordered Ministry

“The call to ordered ministry in the Church is the act of the triune God. This call is evidenced by the movement of the Holy Spirit in the individual conscience, the approval of a community of God’s people, and the concurring judgment of a council of the church.

“2.0104 Gifts and Qualifications

“a. To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, ruling elders, and teaching elders—God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a council of the church.

“b. Those who are called to ordered ministry in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, ruling elders, or teaching elders.

“2.0105 Freedom of Conscience

“It is necessary to the integrity and health of the church that the persons who serve it in ordered ministries shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in this Constitution. So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained. It is to be recognized, however, that in entering the ordered ministries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God.
as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek, or serve in, ordered ministry. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the council in which he or she is a member.11

“G-2.02 Deacons: The Ministry of Compassion and Service

“2.0201 Deacon Defined

“The ministry of deacon as set forth in Scripture is one of compassion, witness, and service, sharing in the redeeming love of Jesus Christ for the poor, the hungry, the sick, the lost, the friendless, the oppressed, those burdened by unjust policies or structures, or anyone in distress. Persons of spiritual character, honest repute, exemplary lives, brotherly and sisterly love, sincere compassion, and sound judgment should be chosen for this ministry.

“2.0202 Under Authority of the Session

“Deacons may be individually commissioned or organized as a board of deacons. In either case, their ministry is under the supervision and authority of the session. Deacons may also be given special assignments in the congregation, such as caring for members in need, handling educational tasks, cultivating liberality in giving, collecting and disbursing monies to specific persons or causes, or overseeing the buildings and property of the congregation. Deacons shall assume other duties as may be delegated to them by the session, including assisting with the Lord’s Supper. (W-3.3616). A congregation by a majority vote may choose not to utilize the ordered ministry of deacons. If the congregation has neither a board of deacons nor individually commissioned deacons, the function of this ordered ministry shall be the responsibility of the ruling elders and the session.

“G-2.03 Ruling Elders: The Ministry of Discernment and Governance

“2.0301 Ruling Elder Defined

“As there were in Old Testament times elders for the government of the people, so the New Testament church provided persons with particular gifts to share in discernment of God’s Spirit and governance of God’s people. Accordingly, congregations should elect persons of wisdom and maturity of faith, having demonstrated skills in leadership and being compassionate in spirit. Ruling elders are so named not because they ‘lord it over’ the congregation (Matt. 20:25), but because they are chosen by the congregation to discern and measure its fidelity to the Word of God, and to strengthen and nurture its faith and life. Ruling elders, together with teaching elders, exercise leadership, government, spiritual discernment, and discipline and have responsibilities for the life of a congregation as well as the whole church, including ecumenical relationships. When elected by the congregation, they shall serve faithfully as members of the session. When elected as commissioners to higher councils, ruling elders participate and vote with the same authority as teaching elders, and they are eligible for any office.

“G-2.04 General Provisions for Ruling Elders and Deacons

“2.0401 Election of Ruling Elders and Deacons

“Ruling elders and deacons are men and women elected by the congregation from among its members. The nomination and election of ruling elders and deacons shall express the rich diversity of the congregation’s membership and shall guarantee participation and inclusiveness (F-1.0403). Ruling elders and deacons shall be nominated by a committee elected by the congregation, drawn from and representative of its membership. Congregations may provide by their own rule for a congregational nominating committee, provided that the committee shall consist of at least three active members of the congregation, and shall include at least one ruling elder who is currently serving on the session. The pastor shall serve ex officio and without vote. When no other provision is made, this committee shall include at least one ruling elder who is currently serving on session, and the pastor shall serve ex officio without vote. When elections are held, full opportunity shall always be given to the congregation for nomination from the floor of the congregational meeting by any active member of the congregation. A majority of all the active members present and voting shall be required to elect.

11 Very early in the history of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, even before the General Assembly was established, the plan of reunion of the Synod of New York and Philadelphia contained the following sentences: ‘That when any matter is determined by a majority vote, every member shall either actively concur with or passively submit to such determination; or if his conscience permit him to do neither, he shall, after sufficient liberty modestly to reason and remonstrate, peaceable withdraw from our communion without attempting to make any schism. Provided always that this shall be understood to extend only to such determination as the body shall judge indispensable in doctrine or Presbyterian government.’ (Historical Sections of the Digest, 1938, The Historical Section of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America p. 1310, “Reunion of 1758,” par. II).
“2.0402 Preparation for Ministry as a Ruling Elder or Deacon

“When persons have been elected to the ordered ministry of ruling elder or deacon, the session shall provide a period of study and preparation, after which the session shall examine them as to their personal faith; knowledge of the doctrine, government, and discipline contained in the Constitution of the church; and the duties of the ministry. The session shall also confer with them as to their willingness to undertake the ministry appropriate to the order. If the examination is approved, the session shall appoint a day for the service of ordination and installation.

“2.0403 Service of Ordination and Installation

“The service of ordination and installation shall focus upon Christ and the joy and responsibility of serving him through the mission and ministry of the church, and shall include a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The moderator of session or person authorized to preside shall state briefly the nature of the ministry of ruling elder and deacon. The act of ordination and installation takes place in the context of worship. The order for that service of worship in the Directory for Worship (W-4.4000) shall be followed.

“2.0404 Terms of Service

“Ruling elders and deacons shall be elected to serve terms of no more than three years on the session or board of deacons, and may be eligible for reelection according to congregational rule. However, no ruling elder or deacon shall be eligible to serve more than six consecutive years, and a ruling elder or deacon who has served six consecutive years shall be ineligible for election to the same board for at least one year. Election shall be to classes as nearly equal in number as possible, with the term of only one class ending each year. The presbytery may, upon written request and by majority vote, grant a congregation a waiver of this limitation on terms.

“Once ordained and while they are active members of any congregation of this denomination, ruling elders or deacons not in active service on a session or board of deacons continue to bear the responsibilities of the ministry to which they have been ordained, except as provided in G-2.0406, G-2.0407, or in accordance with the Rules of Discipline.

“2.0405 Dissolution of Relationship

“A ruling elder or deacon may resign from the session or board of deacons, with the session’s consent. On ceasing to be an active member of a congregation, a ruling elder or deacon ceases to be a member of its session or board. When a ruling elder or deacon, because of change of residence or disability, is unable for a period of one year to perform the duties of the ministry to which he or she was installed, the active relationship shall be dissolved by the session unless there is good reason not to do so, which shall be recorded.

“2.0406 Release from Ministry as a Ruling Elder or Deacon

“If a ruling elder or deacon who is in good standing, against whom no inquiry has been initiated, and against whom no charges have been filed, shall make application to the session to be released from the exercise of the ordered ministry, the session of the congregation in which he or she holds membership, upon granting the release, shall delete that person’s name from the appropriate register of ruling elders or deacons of the congregation. No judgment of failure on the part of the ruling elder or deacon is implied in this action. Release from the exercise of the ministry of ruling elder or deacon requires a discontinuation of all functions of that ministry. The status of one so released shall be the same as any church member. Should a person released under this section later desire to be restored to that ordered ministry, that person shall make application to the session that granted the release, and upon approval of the session, that person shall be restored to the exercise of the ministry from which he or she was released without re-ordination.

“2.0407 Renunciation of Jurisdiction

“When a ruling elder or deacon submits to the clerk of session a written statement renouncing the jurisdiction of this church, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. When a ruling elder or deacon persists in work disapproved by the session, the session shall consult with him or her and shall give notice of its disapproval. If, after having been provided opportunity for consultation and upon written notice of its disapproval, the ruling elder or deacon persists in the work, the session may then conclude that the ruling elder or deacon has renounced the jurisdiction of this church.

“Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the ruling elder or deacon from membership and ordered ministry and shall terminate the exercise of the ministry. The renunciation shall be reported by the clerk of session at the next meeting of the session, which shall record the renunciation, delete the name of the ruling elder or deacon from the appropriate register, and take such other administrative actions as may be required by this Constitution.
“G-2.05 Teaching Elders: The Ministry of the Word and Sacrament

“2.0501 Teaching Elder Defined

“Teaching elders (also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament) shall in all things be committed to teaching the faith and equipping the saints for the work of ministry (Eph. 4:12). They may serve in a variety of ministries, as authorized by the presbytery. When they serve as preachers and teachers of the Word, they shall “rightly explain the Word of truth” (2 Tim. 2:15) and shall preach and teach the faith of the church, so that the people are shaped by the pattern of the gospel and strengthened for witness and service. When they serve at font and table, they shall interpret the mysteries of grace and lift the people’s vision toward the hope of God’s new creation. When they serve as pastors, they shall support the people in the disciplines of the faith amid the struggles of daily life. When they serve as presbyters, they shall participate in the responsibilities of governance, seeking always to discern the mind of Christ and to build up Christ’s body through devotion, debate, and decision.

“2.0502 Presbytery and the Teaching Elder

“As the Lord has set aside through calling certain members to be teaching elders, so the church confirms that call through the action of the presbytery. The presbytery shall determine whether a particular work may be helpful to the church in mission and is a call to validated ministry requiring ordination as a teaching elder. In the performance of that ministry, the teaching elder shall be accountable to the presbytery. Teaching elders have membership in the presbytery by action of the presbytery itself, and no pastoral relationship may be established, changed, or dissolved without the approval of the presbytery.

“2.0503 Categories of Membership

“A teaching elder is a member of a presbytery and shall be engaged in a ministry validated by that presbytery, a member-at-large as determined by the presbytery, or honorably retired.

“a. Engaged in a Validated Ministry

“A validated ministry shall:

“(1) demonstrate conformity with the mission of God’s people in the world as set forth in Holy Scripture, The Book of Confessions, and the Book of Order of this church;

“(2) serve and aid others, and enable the ministry of others;

“(3) give evidence of theologically informed fidelity to God’s Word;

“(4) be carried on in accountability for its character and conduct to the presbytery in addition to any organizations, agencies, and institutions served; and

“(5) include responsible participation in the deliberations, worship, and work of the presbytery and in the life of a congregation of this church or a church in correspondence with the PC(USA) (G-5.0201).

“When teaching elders are called to validated ministry beyond the jurisdiction of the church, they shall give evidence of a quality of life that helps to share the ministry of the good news. They shall participate in a congregation, in their presbytery, and in ecumenical relationships and shall be eligible for election to the higher councils of the church and to the boards and agencies of those councils.

“The presbytery shall review annually the work of all teaching elders engaged in validated ministries outside the congregation.

“b. Member-at-large

“A member-at-large is a teaching elder who has previously been engaged in a validated ministry, and who now, without intentional abandonment of the exercise of ministry, is no longer engaged in a ministry that complies with all the criteria in G-2.0503a. A teaching elder may be designated a member-at-large because he or she is limited in his or her ability to engage in a ministry fulfilling all of the criteria for a validated ministry due to family responsibilities or other individual circumstances recognized by the presbytery. A member-at-large shall comply with as many of the criteria in G-2.0503a as possible and shall actively participate in the life of a congregation. A member-at-large is entitled to take part in the meetings of the presbytery and to speak, vote, and hold office. The status of member-at-large shall be reviewed annually.

“c. Honorably Retired

“Upon request of a member of presbytery, the presbytery may designate the member honorably retired because of age or physical or mental disability.
“2.0504 Pastoral Relationships

“When teaching elders are called as pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of a congregation, they are to be responsible for a quality of life and relationships that commends the gospel to all persons and that communicates its joy and justice. They are responsible for studying, teaching, and praying with and for the congregation. With the ruling elders, they are to encourage people in the worship and service of God; to equip and enable them for their tasks within the church and their mission in the world; to exercise pastoral care, devoting special attention to the poor, the sick, the troubled, and the dying; to participate in governing responsibilities, including leadership of the congregation in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness in the decision-making life of the congregation, and its task of reaching out in concern and service to the life of the human community as a whole. With the deacons they are to share in the ministries of compassion, witness, and service. In addition to these pastoral duties, they are responsible for sharing in the ministry of the church in councils higher than the session and in ecumenical relationships.

“a. Installed Pastoral Relationships

“The installed pastoral relationships are pastor, co-pastor, and associate pastor. A teaching elder may be installed in a pastoral relationship for an indefinite period or for a designated term determined by the presbytery in consultation with the congregation and specified in the call. When a congregation determines that its strategy for mission under the Word so requires, the congregation may call additional pastors. Such additional pastors shall be called co-pastors or associate pastors, and the duties of each pastor and the relationship between the pastors of the congregation shall be determined by the session with the approval of the presbytery. When a congregation has two pastors serving as co-pastors, and the relationship of one of them is dissolved, the other remains as pastor. The relationship of an associate pastor to a congregation is not dependent upon that of a pastor. An associate pastor is [ordinarily] not eligible to be the next installed pastor of that congregation.

“b. Temporary Pastoral Relationships

“Temporary pastoral relationships are approved by the presbytery and do not carry a formal call or installation. When a congregation does not have a pastor, or while the pastor is unable to perform her or his duties, the session, with the approval of presbytery, may obtain the services of a teaching elder, candidate, or ruling elder in a temporary pastoral relationship. No formal call shall be issued and no formal installation shall take place.

“Titles and terms of service for temporary relationships shall be determined by the presbytery. A person serving in a temporary pastoral relationship is invited for a specified period not to exceed twelve months in length, which is renewable with the approval of the presbytery. A teaching elder employed in a temporary pastoral relationship is [ordinarily] not eligible to serve as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor.

“c. Exceptions

“A presbytery may determine that its mission strategy permits a teaching elder currently called as an associate pastor to be eligible to serve as the next installed pastor or co-pastor, or a teaching elder employed in a temporary pastoral relationship to be eligible to serve as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor. Presbyteries that permit this eligibility shall establish such relationships only by a three-fourths vote of the members of presbytery present and voting.

“2.0505 Transfer of Ministers of Other Denominations

“a. When a minister of another Christian church is called to a work properly under the jurisdiction of a presbytery, the presbytery, after the constitutional conditions have been met, shall recognize the minister’s previous ordination to ministry. Such ministers shall furnish credentials and evidence of good standing acceptable to the presbytery, and shall submit satisfactory evidence of possessing the qualifications of character and scholarship required of candidates of this church. (G-2.0607 and G-2.0610). In exceptional circumstances the following provisions will apply:

“(1) In the case of ministers for immigrant fellowships and congregations, a presbytery may, if it determines that its strategy for mission with that group requires it, recognize the ordination and receive as a member of presbytery a new immigrant minister who furnishes evidence of good standing in a denomination, even though at the time of enrollment that minister lacks the educational history required of candidates, and provide such educational opportunities as seem necessary and prudent for that minister’s successful ministry in the presbytery.

“(2) A minister of another Reformed church who has been ordained for five or more years may be granted an exemption for some or all of the examinations required of candidates for ordination by a two-thirds vote of the presbytery.

“b. Upon enrollment, the minister shall furnish the presbytery with evidence of having surrendered membership in any and all other Christian churches with which the minister has previously been associated.
“2.0506 Temporary Membership in Presbytery for a Period of Service

“A presbytery may enroll a minister of another Christian church who is serving temporarily in a validated ministry in this church, or in an installed relationship under the provisions of the Formula of Agreement (Book of Order, Appendix C, G-5.0202), when the minister has satisfied the requirements of preparation for such service established by the presbytery’s own rule.

“2.0507 Release from Ministry as a Teaching Elder

“When a teaching elder against whom no inquiry has been initiated pursuant to D-10.0101 and D-10.0201, against whom no charges have been filed, and who otherwise is in good standing shall make application to be released from the exercise of the ordered ministry of teaching elder, the presbytery shall delete that person’s name from the roll and upon request of a session dismiss that person to a congregation. Release from the exercise of ordered ministry requires discontinuance of all functions of that ministry. The designations that refer to teaching elders shall not be used. The person so released shall engage in the ministry shared by all active members of congregations. Should a person released under this section later desire to be restored to the ordered ministry of teaching elder, that person shall apply through the presbytery which granted the release, and upon approval of that presbytery, the reaffirmation of the ordination questions, and the resumption of a ministry that qualifies that person for membership in the presbytery, shall be restored to the exercise of the ordered ministry as a teaching elder without re-ordination.

“2.0508 Failure to Engage in Validated Ministry

“A teaching elder whom the presbytery determines no longer to be engaged in a validated ministry (G-2.0503a) or to fulfill the criteria for membership-at-large (G-2.0503b), and who is not honorably retired (G-2.0503c), shall not have voice or vote in meetings of the presbytery, except when the matter under consideration pertains to his or her relationship to the presbytery. Names of such persons shall be reported annually to the presbytery by the stated clerk. If after three years the teaching elder does not meet the criteria for validated ministry or membership-at-large, the presbytery may delete that person’s name from the roll of membership and, upon request of a session, dismiss that person to a congregation.

“2.0509 Renunciation of Jurisdiction

“When a teaching elder (or authorized representative) submits to the stated clerk of the presbytery of membership a written statement renouncing the jurisdiction of this church, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. When a teaching elder persists in work disapproved by the presbytery having jurisdiction, the presbytery shall consult with the teaching elder and shall give notice of its disapproval. If after having been provided opportunity for consultation and upon written notice of its disapproval, the teaching elder persists in the work, the presbytery may then conclude that he or she has renounced the jurisdiction of this church.

“When a teaching elder accepts or continues membership of any character in another denomination, except as provided in this Constitution, the presbytery shall record the fact and delete the teaching elder’s name from the roll.

“Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the teaching elder from membership and ordered ministry and shall terminate the exercise of that ministry. The renunciation shall be reported by the stated clerk at the next meeting of the presbytery, which shall record the renunciation, delete her or his name from the appropriate roll, and take such other administrative actions as may be required by this Constitution, including public communication of such a renunciation.

“G-2.06 PREPARATION FOR MINISTRY

“2.0601 Nature and Purpose of Preparation

“It is important that those who are to be ordained as teaching elders receive full preparation for their task under the direction of the presbytery. For this purpose, a presbytery shall enter into covenant relationship with those preparing to become teaching elders and with their sessions and congregations. This relationship shall be divided into the two phases of inquiry and candidacy.

“2.0602 Time Requirements

“To be enrolled as an inquirer, the applicant shall be a member of the sponsoring congregation, shall have been active in the work and worship of that congregation for at least six months, and shall have received the endorsement of the session of the sponsoring congregation. The inquiry and candidacy phases shall continue for a period of no less than two years, including at least one year as a candidate.

“2.0603 Purpose of Inquiry

“The purpose of the inquiry phase is to provide an opportunity for the church and those who believe themselves called to ordered ministry as teaching elders to explore that call together so that the presbytery can make an informed decision about the inquirer’s suitability for ordered ministry.
“2.0604 Purpose of Candidacy

“The purpose of the candidacy phase is to provide for the full preparation of persons to serve the church as teaching elders. This shall be accomplished through the presbytery’s support, guidance, and evaluation of a candidate’s fitness and readiness for a call to ministry requiring ordination.

“2.0605 Oversight

“During the phases of inquiry and candidacy the individual continues to be an active member of his or her congregation and subject to the concern and discipline of the session. In matters relating to preparation for ministry, the individual is subject to the oversight of the presbytery within the context of their covenant relationship.
