II. Committee Final Action and Report to Assembly

Item 14-A. Minutes, Committee on Theological Education

Approved with comment: [See pp. 1225–26.]

Comment: Although it was necessary to involve two different clerks over the course of the past two years, consistency is needed in presentation of the minutes:

1. Persons attending should be referenced by their full name or with title.

2. Care should be exercised in recording actions as motions and votes with less emphasis on recording discussion, especially when discussion notes are unclear, spotty, and incomplete. The minutes from February 21 are more helpful in clarity. Earlier minutes were less clear.

These comments were also part of the recommendation to approve with comment by the Assembly Committee on Theological & Church Growth Issues and Institutions of the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

CELEBRATION OF 100th ANNIVERSARY OF THE BOY SCOUTS AND CLOSING PRAYER

Co-Moderator Cintrón-Olivieri recognized Phillip E. Melberg, president of the National Association of Presbyterian Scouters. Melberg reported that the National Association of Presbyterian Scouters launched a celebration of the partnership between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Boy Scouts of America, which began in 1918. The observance of the centennial continued through Scout Sunday this past February, and here at the General Assembly.
Brian Frick, the associate for camp and conference ministries, presented Melberg with the highest honor in the National Association of Presbyterian Scouters, the Celtic Cross.

Melberg recognized Eagle Scout Patrick Rouff, who recited the Boy Scout Oath and offered the closing prayer for this session of the General Assembly.

SItem 10-01. On an Initiative to Repair Critical Infrastructure Needs of the Churches and Properties in the Historic Native American and Alaskan Native Mission Field of the PC(USA)—From the Presbytery of Grand Canyon.

Approved as amended and with comment. [See p. 809.]

Amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Presbytery of Grand Canyon overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA) to direct the Mission Agency to [provide] [work with mid councils to facilitate] an assembly-wide inventory documenting the physical needs of Native American churches and chapels and creating an ongoing fund for urgent and immediate repairs and improvements. The property assessments shall be done during that time between the meetings of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) and the 224th General Assembly (2020). The comprehensive report shall be comprised from the on-site inventories and shall indicate what repairs need to be completed for congregation use.

“The PC(USA) has identified ninety-eight Native American churches in the denomination. Inventoring the ninety-eight campuses is manageable over the two-year assessment period. A formal assessment of churches/chapels in the Synod of the Southwest was launched in 2016. An assessment of ten churches and chapels in Presbytery of Grand Canyon’s northern bounds was completed in nine months. The assessment process, as completed and critiqued, provides a guide for future and expanded inventories in PC(USA) with the following components:

1. Inventory—Intentionally working together, evaluation teams would use survey forms that allow for both check-offs and narratives of the situation of each church. Teams [should] [shall be led by individuals with the appropriate professional certification, licensures, or degrees appropriate to the work and may also] include synod and presbytery staffs, Native American ministries committees, Native American congregations, and special task forces. Focus would be on immediate safety and health repairs needed to stop leaking roofs, build-up of mold, buckling walls, collapsing retaining walls, dangerous furnaces, stoves, refrigerators, air conditioners, deteriorating fences, parking lot potholes, graffiti, and abandoned buildings.

Comment: While the overture contains significant funds for assessing all Native American churches, if a church community or mid council feels they can accurately assess and tabulate the cost through volunteers in the community in an effort to be good stewards of our denomination and diminish costs, this action could be permitted

1. The task force will report back with recommendations to the 224th General Assembly (2020) after:

“2. [No changes.]

[Financial Implications: Per Capita Annual $11,060. Total—$22,120]

Approved with comment. [See p. 816.]

Comment:

[This comment addresses the Justice and Reconciliation portion of the Mission Work Plan.] While the item overtly names white supremacy and racist systemic structures, it does not name violence against women in a time when the United States of America society is grappling with the violence perpetrated against women. If not now, when? When violence intersects with poverty and racism, women have experienced hurt and harm. The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) supports the need for the PC(USA) to put into practice the PC(USA)’s confession and beliefs (from the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns comment).

The Mission Work Plan, written in the form of worship, allows for repentance (confession) and a way forward. The focus on an intentional mission plan with specific areas of intention (Evangelism & Discipleship, Leader Formation, and Justice and Reconciliation) allows for a radical turn in the mission of the denomination. Addressing structured racism and white supremacy is emphasized, and yet the lens of gender justice is omitted.

The Gender and Leadership in the PC(USA) Report, written by Research Services of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, states:

Although male and female members are equally likely to be asked to serve in a leadership role, the nature of that role varies by gender. Men are more likely to hold an official leadership role, in which they have an official title and/or receive a paycheck, and women are more likely to be heavily involved in a voluntary capacity. Women still comprise only about 38% of all active PC(USA) teaching elders, and only 29% of teaching elders overall. These percentages are slowly increasing. If the rate remains the same, we won’t achieve gender parity among active teaching elders until 2027. [Gender and Leadership in the PC(USA), https://www.presbyterianmission.org/resource/gender-leadership-pcusa/4.]

With this present reality as evidenced in the above-mentioned report, the delayed justice for women must be included in the overall fiber and ethos of the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. To fail to intentionally include addressing known gender injustices in our denomination does a grave disservice to the recent findings included in the research of 2016.

For these reasons, the 223rd General Assembly (2018) would like to see an emphasis on support/leadership efforts (including mentoring) for women leaders in ordered ministries, as well as an overall acknowledgement of the need to address gender injustices via the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency (from the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns comments).

Sltem 10-09. Overture Concerning Small Churches—From the Presbytery of Grace.

Approved an alternate resolution with comment. [See pp. 827–28.]
Alternate Resolution:

Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency to report to the 224th General Assembly (2020) on its efforts to strengthen the mission and ministry of small congregations, including the progress of implementing the Vital Congregations and Christian Formation initiatives.

The Presbytery Mission Agency (PMA) currently supports the ministries and missions of small churches through a wide range of ministries that have been designed to partner with small congregations as they live into the challenges and opportunities of the present moment.

The Theology, Formation, and Evangelism (TFE) ministry area of the PMA is a strong advocate for small churches and their ministry.

- The Vital Congregations initiative is a ministry designed to help all our churches become more vital, including small congregations. This initiative brings church leaders together in prayer, Bible study, and discernment. It provides them with tools and support for the work of revitalization. Because presbyteries are essential partners in ministry with congregations, TFE staff members have begun a two-year pilot project in five presbyteries to obtain some experience with this initiative. The pilot project includes small congregations. The current plan is to launch this initiative at the 224th General Assembly (2020).

- 1001 New Worshiping Communities is deeply engaged in ministry with new small congregations and has seen 445 new worshiping communities take shape in a variety of contexts and with a diverse group of people. Many of these new worshiping communities continue to be small churches even as they reach new people and experience vitality and vibrancy. TFE staff are beginning to work with existing churches so that they can learn from the new worshiping communities and the new worshiping communities can learn from them.

- The Christian Formation and Theology and Worship ministries of TFE continue to work with all our churches, including our small congregations, on the practices of our faith that lead to evangelism and sharing our hope with the world.

The Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministry (RE&WM) area of the PMA is also a strong advocate for small churches and their ministry.

- Racial Ethnic & New Immigrant Intercultural Ministries offers support for African, African American, Asian, Hispanic/Latino-a, Korean, Middle Eastern, and Native American small and large congregations. The small congregations are racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities that regularly gather together, constructing a racial ethnic identity that stems from a common history, heritage, and language. The support includes working closely with racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities through mid councils, caucus groups, and networks, engaging in the mission to grow, transform, empower, lead, and develop communities.

- Women’s Leadership Development and Justice Ministries provide opportunities and training for women leaders to serve in small congregations. The office annually gathers Presbyterian racial ethnic and new immigrant seminarians from different theological institutions across the United States for the Racial Ethnic & New Immigrant Seminarians conferences and helps prepare them for ministry.

Comment: We recognize the need for assistance for small churches to support their vitality. We ask that the Presbyterian Mission Agency and corresponding committees and agencies not only work to grow new churches but to also support small churches struggling with vitality using innovative resources to support their missions. We also recognize membership numbers alone do not indicate the health of a church but a more comprehensive approach should be taken when determining vitality and the need of assistance. We have reservations regarding creating a new director position for small churches but ask the Presbyterian Mission Agency to work with existing programs specifically targeting outreach to smaller churches.

*Item 10-10. Approve List of Presbyterian Related Schools and Colleges

Approved as amended and with comment. [See pp. 830–31.]

Amendment:

Add the following to the end of the recommendation section:

“[The Presbyterian Mission Agency will use the existing criteria and develop additional criteria as needed for placing and removing colleges, universities, and secondary schools on this list.]”

Comment: The Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination recommends the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board clarify the criteria for being included on this list and confirm through positive affirmation from the school to be included on the list. We believe the schools’ lack of response should not indicate a positive response to remain on the list of schools related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
Item 10-11. On Establishing a Grant to Develop Resources to Educate Entities Regarding Serious Mental Illness Issues—From the Presbytery of Mission.

Approved as amended. [See pp. 831–32.]

Amend Item 10-11 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline. Action taken in plenary is shaded in gray.]

1. Recognize the 10th anniversary of the ‘Comfort My People: A Policy Statement on Serious Mental Illness’1 approved at the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and to acknowledge the relevance it still holds for our church and society in 2018. [Commend the initial work of the Presbyterian Serious Mental Illness Network (PSMIN) of the Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association (PHEWA) in distributing Comfort My People.]

2. Establish a $250,000 grant to be used to implement the provisions of this overture. The funds will be used to develop plans of action and resources that will be used by presbyteries, congregations, and seminaries of the PC(USA) to further educate these entities within PC(USA) regarding serious mental illness issues with the intent to provide a foundation for action within the denomination, and that the materials developed include help for congregations interfacing with mental illness found in the homeless population surrounding the church.

3. Direct Compassion, Peace, and Justice Ministries of the Presbyterian Mission Agency to launch a churchwide network following Recommendation 10 in the Comfort My People policy (p. 10).

4. Consult with Presbyterian seminary professors of pastoral psychology, counseling, and psychiatry on models, incentives, existing resources, and counseling centers that provide holistic mental health ministries.

5. Draw upon those academic and practical experts, Presbyterian Research Services, and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in the survey design, analysis, and preparation of recommendations for action and policy update outlined in Recommendations 4 and 5.

Approved as amended. [See pp. 838–40.]

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“Recommendations 1. through 3. remain unchanged.

4. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate with congregations and mid councils, encouraging them to explore the following:

[a. The local history of how the land was acquired from indigenous residents,

[b. The local history of how the community and the church formed, and how that community or church pursued relationships with the indigenous people of the region.

5. Make recommendations for how mid councils, as well as the national council and ministries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), can support Native Americans in their ongoing efforts for sovereignty and fundamental human rights.

4. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to issue a call for the engagement of mid councils and their congregational members to start a flow of ideas and information back and forth between mid councils and congregational members, directed at understanding how the Doctrine of Discovery has been present in our history and our theological positions, and continues to be present today.

[We recommend a two-step process: confession, repentance. These are concepts that have always been central to Presbyterian theology. These interactions should include:

[a. Confession:

1. An exploration of the local history of how the land was acquired from indigenous residents, and

2. The local history of how the community and the church formed, and how that community or church pursued relationships with the indigenous people of the region.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20

“[b. Repentance:

“(1) Development and implementation of a beginning strategy for entering into dialogue and action with relevant local communities, and

“5. Direct the PMA to form a coordinating council for the purpose of encouraging, monitoring, and sharing the ongoing responses by the national church, mid councils, and congregations to the call to action issued by the Stated Clerk, as listed in Recommendation 4, above. The council will also have the purpose of making recommendations to the 224th General Assembly (2020) on how the national church, mid councils, and congregations can support Native Americans in their ongoing efforts for sovereignty and fundamental human rights.

“a. The coordinating council should be comprised of at least two members from the Native American Consulting Committee, plus at least two members from national church, two from mid councils, and at least two members from congregations.

“b. The General Assembly should commit funds to enable this group to meet quarterly throughout the next two years. This means a total of seven or eight meetings. These meetings can be virtual if the group desires this, however, it is important that the group meet together at least twice: at the start and toward the end.

“c. The coordinating group must be organized and have its first meeting within three months of the passage of this overture.

“d. The coordinating group will be responsible for generating a report back to the next General Assembly, in 2020, and for making recommendations for actions that the next General Assembly may consider.]”

Approved as amended. [See pp. 842–43.]

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Urge the session of each congregation, as well as each mid council, [seminary] [COTE-member seminaries], Presbyterian Women’s groups, and other organizations to confess their complicity and repudiate the Doctrine of Discovery.

“3. Encourage [PC(USA) schools and seminaries] [COTE-member seminaries] to prepare students to articulate Native American theologies to give voice to these theologies and disrupt historic oppression and racism in Native American communities.

“Recommendations 4. through 11. remain unchanged.

“12. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency to initiate a survey in order to create a listing of courses taught in [Presbyterian-related seminaries and schools] [COTE-member seminaries] that focus on the histories of Indigenous peoples and current issues facing Indigenous peoples, identifying specific instructors, courses, texts, and syllabi when possible.

“17. Urge the session of each congregation—as well as each mid council, [seminary] [COTE-member seminaries], Presbyterian Women’s groups, and national church agency—to review the existing study resources on the Doctrine of Discovery (posted on the Facing Racism website: https://facing-racism.pcusa.org/item/41901/), and to lift up histories of Indigenous peoples and current issues facing Indigenous peoples.

*$Item 09-06. A Resolution on Global Order and National Purpose—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

Comment: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline; actions taken in plenary are shaded in gray.]

The Assembly Committee on Peacemaking, Immigration, and International Issues [09] thanks the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy for their affirmations and recommendations related to global order and our nation’s purpose. We commend their creative and comprehensive exploration of global themes in an effort to reinvigorate the collective conscience of Presbyterians and other ecumenical partners to speak ethically and morally to a changing and challenged world.

We recognize the need to speak with a measured urgency to the many existential threats facing our nation and the world, and we appreciate the vision for ecumenical partnerships in addressing them. We offer the following suggestions to clarify and focus your recommendation to the General Assembly. [We encourage ACSWP to collaborate and/or partner with a variety of other funding sources in order to move this study forward and better reflect and incorporate the voices of diverse persons and marginalized communities.]

Recommendations:

1. Clearly name the audience for the study, as well as the final objectives of the study.

2. Focus and limit the affirmations thematically. Furthermore, decide on a scope for the project that honors the complexity of the issues we face while systematically addressing individual issues.

3. The formation of the steering committee should include the participation and comments from diverse persons and those from marginalized communities (e.g. ethnicity, gender, orientation, cultural origin, age, economic status, ability, education level, geographical region).

4. State how you will invite diverse persons including those from marginalized communities, beyond theological differences, into the public forums.

5. Create a curriculum from the findings of the study that would be teachable, useable, and approachable to the whole church.

6. Integrate the sacred texts of traditions that represent the voices of the participants in the study. Bring them to the forefront of the conversation/study.

Rationale

The affirmations and recommendations presented by ACSWP feel comprehensive to the point of confusion, making it difficult to discern the audience, participants, and outcomes of the study. Outside of theological diversity, other diversities (ethnicity, gender, orientation, cultural origin, age, economic status, ability, education level, etc.) were not included as participating voices throughout the process and in the creation of a final document, leaving us to wonder if it would have its intended effect. Finally, in honoring the intent to develop a theologically sound moral and ethical framework and set of practices, we trust that ecumenical and interreligious sacred writings will ground the document as it seeks to speak prophetically to the political structures being scrutinized. The importance of the project was noted by several committee members, and we would encourage ACSWP to broaden its input while creating another proposal to be presented at a later time.

Item 09-12. Commissioners’ Resolution. On North Korean Refugees

Approved an alternate resolution. [See pp. 795–96.]

Approved the following alternative resolution:

1. Designate September 2018 as a Korean mission month

   a. to pray for peace in the Korean peninsula and for victims of division and conflict on both sides of the Korean peninsula, and

   b. to reflect on the past 130 years of Presbyterian mission to Korea including both the positive legacies and also the ways in which mission workers might have contributed to the Korean conflict.

2. Direct the Stated Clerk and the Office of Public Witness to communicate with domestic and international governments and agencies to encourage peaceful resolution of the divisions on the Korean peninsula, which will foster an environment where no party to the historic conflict feels the need to sacrifice civil liberties in the name of security and where refugees and asylum-seekers are treated humanely.

3. Authorize the Presbyterian Mission Agency, through World Mission Ministries and other appropriate Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) bodies and staff, to support and monitor progress toward reconciliation and de-nuclearization in consultation with Korean and other Asian partners, including the following actions:

   a. Explore, in conjunction with current refugee ministries, caring and support ministries for those displaced from both South and North Korea;

   b. Share more broadly within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) an understanding of current relationships with the Korean Christian Federation (KCF) of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK);

   c. Deepen the participation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the Ecumenical Forum for Peace, Reconciliation, and Development Cooperation in order to prepare U.S. Christians for reconciliation in Korea by expanding people-to-people exchanges and other forms of trust building.

   d. Plan events and programs for the Korean mission month and providing informational resources to local councils and congregations.

   e. Encourage the United States and other governments to lift sanctions on North Korea, as appropriate, to begin genuine steps toward peace and justice and in respectful consultation with regional allies.
f. Expand ministries of healing and reconciliation, building on the example of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) peace delegation visit to No Gun Ri in 2017, and including as feasible additional areas in Korea significant to the history of the conflict.

Item 09-14. Commissioners’ Resolution. On Stopping the Separation of Immigrant Families at the Border and Upholding the Integrity of the U.S. Asylum System.

Amendment:

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline; actions taken in plenary are shaded in gray.]

“That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA):

1. Call upon the [Department of Justice (DOJ)] [federal government] to immediately end the newly implemented zero-tolerance policy that is tearing apart families.

2. Call upon the [DOJ] [federal government] to reunite parents and children that have been separated as soon as possible, under the care of the community, not in family detention [ensuring access of attorneys to those in detention].

3. Call upon the [DOJ] [federal government] to make certain that every parent in custody knows the location of their children and facilitate regular communication between parents and their children until they are reunited.

4. Call upon the [DOJ] [federal government] to not use possible reunification with children to force immigrant parents into a concession to plead guilty to a crime in exchange for reuniting with their children.

5. [Call upon churches and individuals to advocate for the passage of the Keep Families Together Act in Congress, which would take away the power of the DOJ to continue separating families. [Condemns the President’s June 20th Executive Order ‘Affording Congress an Opportunity to Address Family Separation’ that further criminalizes migration through the expansion of family detention on military bases and other government property, potentially indefinitely.]

6. Call upon synods, presbyteries, and individual churches to understand, condemn, and work against the ideology of white supremacy undergirding these racist immigration policies.

7. Remind our denomination of the Gospel call to work for just and humane policies for all immigrant communities, grounded in the principles of family unity, human dignity, and rights.

8. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate the contents of this overture to the President of the United States, our representatives in Congress, as well as to Jeff Sessions, U.S. Attorney General, and Kirstjen Nielson, U.S. Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security.

9. Directs the PMA, through the Office of Public witness, to advocate for a policy that ensures family unity and safety for those in the asylum process.

9[.][10.] Strongly encourage congregations to learn about the impact of these immigration policies on the lives of church members as well as members of our local communities, making use of resources listed below:

- The Genesis of Exodus film and Story Map resources: www.genesisofexodusfilm.com;
- Family Detention: www.pcusa.org/familydetention;

“(11. Urge churches and congregations to connect with, accompany, support, and advocate alongside immigrant-focused organizations that can lead us to be part of the voices working for change and transformation of unjust immigration laws and policies.)”

Comment: The commissioners of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) support and pray for effective humane and swift action to end this atrocity.

Approved as amended. [See p. 804.]

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) direct the Stated Clerk and the Presbyterian Mission Agency (through its Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations, Presbyterian Office of Public Witness, and Presbyterian World Mission) to speak out on behalf of the people of Nicaragua in response to violent repression taking place at the hands of their own government, and other violent actors. The assembly directs these entities to work together to:

“1. Develop a moral, theological, and prophetic framework in consultation with our mission partners in Nicaragua, in response to escalating violence and the growing outcry for international support, thus adding our faith-rooted witness to the growing chorus of voices denouncing the actions of the Nicaraguan government [and other violent actors]. The assembly asks that such a condemnation would take the form of a written statement and press release. Such a statement should make reference, but not be limited to, the following points:

“[4. Continue to consult with and listen to the perspective of our partners in Nicaragua and count on their guidance on how to support and respond to this crisis.]

“[5. THURSDAY, JUNE 21

BUSINESS MEETING VIII

ECUMENICAL GREETINGS AND OPENING PRAYER

Woods introduced the Reverend Nicola Kontzi-Méresse of the United Protestant Church of France (ecumenical advisory delegate); the Reverend Megrditch Karagoezian, the president of the Union of the Armenian Evangelical Churches in the Near East (ecumenical advisory delegate); Daniel Ženatý, the synodical senior of the Evangelical Church of the Czech Brethren (ecumenical representative); Bassem Thabet, the synod secretary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Jordan and the Holy Land (ecumenical representative); the Reverend Farouk Hammo, president of the Evangelical Presbyterian Church in Iraq (ecumenical advisory delegate); and the Reverend Hendrik Shanazarian, moderator of the Evangelical (Presbyterian) Church of Iran (ecumenical representative). Shanazarian offered greetings and prayer.

MEMORIAL MINUTE FOR JACK ROGERS

Co-Moderator Kohlmann recognized Beth Hessel, Associate Stated Clerk in the Office of the General Assembly and executive director of the Presbyterian Historical Society, for a brief celebration of the life and ministry of former General Assembly Moderator Jack Rogers. Hessel read the following tribute, presented a short video on Rogers’s life, and offered a prayer.

The Reverend Dr. Jack Bartlett Rogers, born January 23, 1934, in Lincoln, Nebraska, was the son of Harold and Ruth Rogers, a postman and a school teacher, and a beloved child of God. Through his many years of ministry, scholarship, and compassionate, courageous, and committed witness to God’s love and mercy, Rogers remained faithful to the Reformed faith, the centrality of the Bible to his life, and a belief that intentional listening, open hearts, and unceasing gratitude to our Triune God were keys to the beloved kindom.

Rogers attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, where he participated on the debate team and with the Cornhusker’s marching band. In the late 1950s, following a United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. work camp immersion experience in Egypt, he took a year interlude from Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary to participate in a “Faith at Work” internship program. That year, Rogers shadowed Christians working as police, bartenders, lawyers, and in other professions to learn how their faith shaped and informed their work.

Faith at Work profoundly influenced Rogers. In his academic studies, his teaching, and his pastoral leadership, he would consistently ask questions about the choices God’s people make and wonder how to help them attune their lives to the witness of God’s Word in Scripture and the confessions. Through his internship, Rogers developed a deep interest in case studies as a means to explore and understand human actions.

Jack Rogers believed firmly in the Presbyterian ethos of being reformed and always reforming. He opened his life to the transformative work of the Holy Spirit and led our denomination into rich conversations about the meaning of reformation. Along the way, he trained and mentored countless women and men for ministry.

As a faculty member at numerous institutions, including Westminster College in New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, and Fuller Seminary in Pasadena, California, where he started the Office of Presbyterian Ministries and championed increased representation of women and people of color; as vice-president and professor at the southern California campus of San Fran-Cisco Theological Seminary; and as a teacher of the popular Presbyterian Polity class at General Assembly, he gained a reputation as a careful, skilled, and deeply engaged teacher. Rogers served on the UPCUSA Task Force on Biblical Authority and Interpretation from 1980–1982 and on the committee that developed A Brief Statement of Faith. After serving as Moderator of the 213th General Assembly (2001), Rogers became a staunch ally for full inclusion of LGBTQIA+ Presbyterians in ordination and marriage.

The Reverend Dr. Jack Rogers wrote prolifically, publishing thirteen books that deepened our ability as Presbyterians to think holistically about Scripture and the Reformed tradition. Before his death on July 14, 2016, Rogers was working on a book about the Westminster Divine Edward Reynolds. In Reynolds, Rogers glimpsed a kindred soul seeking the joy of God in daily living.

Rogers was what we lovingly call a “GA Junkie.” He loved immersing himself in each General Assembly, finding richness in the worship, the time spent together as a church, and the rich dialogue. Jack Rogers believed participation in the assembly enabled us Presbyterians to see a broader perspective beyond our local church. Rogers fought dearly for what he humbly claimed was his one tangible contribution to A Brief Statement of Faith: the inclusion of the phrase “holy and joyful lives.” He embodied that phrase in the way he carried out his work, and by the way he integrated his insatiable and faithful curiosity about the endless manifestations of God’s Word in God’s world.

Many of us lost a friend, teacher, and mentor when Jack Rogers died. His beloved wife of fifty-nine years, Dr. Sharon Rogers, and his three sons, Matt, John, and Toby, continue his life’s work of embodying holy and joyful lives, which was his hope for each of us children of God.

MEMORIAL MINUTE FOR BENJAMIN WEIR

Co-Moderator Kohlmann recognized Debra Avery, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Oakland, California, to pay tribute to the life and work of former General Assembly Moderator Benjamin Weir.

I am grateful for the opportunity to share some thoughts with you about a man who, throughout his life, embodied these words: “The Church is to be a community of faith, entrusting itself to God alone, even at the risk of losing its life” (Book of Order, F-1.0301).

Ben and his wife Carol were not the kind of people who sought the spotlight. They modeled for us all what humility and commitment looked like, what it meant to center the work of justice, not the justice workers.

In truth, I feel a pretty strong sense of irony that we are celebrating a man who would have preferred quietly rolling up his sleeves and getting to work over having his photos on the big screen.

Ben oriented his life toward the relentless and often risky struggle for justice. From the more than thirty years he and Carol spent as mission co-workers in Lebanon to the thirty years of ministry that followed his return in 1985, that included

- Serving as Moderator of the 198th General Assembly (1986),
- Inspiring the next generation of risk-takers at San Francisco Theological Seminary,
- Offering his wisdom and support to those who worked for freedom in Israel-Palestine,
- Working for full inclusion for LGBTQIA+ people seeking ordination,
- raising funds for the Near East School of Theology.

Even in his last years, when I had the blessing of serving as his pastor, he shared his hard-won wisdom, offering encouragement to me.

When I first arrived at First Presbyterian Church of Oakland, we found ourselves in the early days of the movement for Black Lives. We had some tough Sundays; our mixed-race congregation, as members and friends who have always been afraid for the lives of the young (primarily men) in their lives, were hit especially hard.

Deep grief and fear were often part of the sharing of joys and concerns, and sermons often took a more focused turn toward connecting the injustice directed toward people of color with the radical Christ we saw in the gospels. It was not long after one such sermon that Ben grasped my hand and said: “Keep it up. You’re doing great.” He held on to my hand and over the next three years I would come to learn that was exactly who Ben was—provoked by injustice, Ben thoughtfully and carefully made sure that his justice collaborators had the encouragement and the tactical support they needed to endure the long journey toward shalom.
What this looks like in each of our contexts will be different. For Ben one of many such moments came in 1975, shortly after the situation in Lebanon had worsened. A leader of Lebanon’s oppressed Shiite Muslim community came to him, saying: “My people are in trouble; can you be of help?” Ben shared that in moments like this.

He believed that our faith doesn’t allow us to back out of any situation. No matter how risky.

Former Ambassador to Qatar Andrew Kilgore wrote that Ben’s experience as a hostage “instilled in him a deep sympathy for the poor, the dispossessed, and the afflicted.” But I believe that Ben’s understanding of justice and mercy was and had always been rooted in his faith—the faith that we all share—a faith that calls us to risk everything for the sake of the gospel.

So today, we give thanks that Ben Weir did not forget God’s teaching.

We give thanks that he showed us what it is to live as a faithful disciple of a radical Christ.

We give thanks that he consciously chose to stay in the struggle, to enter deeply into human suffering.

We give thanks that his vision of freedom, his vision of justice for everyone continues to call us today. And as we follow Jesus, as we follow Ben and Carol and all the saints who showed them the way, may we come to that day when EVERYONE is free and God’s kingdom of shalom is truly fulfilled.

I. Plenary Action

*$Item 04-01. On Appointing a Team to Review the Current Per Capita Based System of Funding the Ministry of Councils Higher Than the Session—From the Presbytery of Newton.

Approved as amended. [See p. 355.]

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Direct the Moderator(s) of the General Assembly, in consultation with the Office of the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Committee on Representation, to appoint a team of no less than [six] [twelve] and no more than [ten] [fifteen] elders and ministers to review the current per capita based system of funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, for financial sustainability into the next ten years. The team will accomplish this by identifying the adaptive and technical challenges of sustainability in funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, consulting and receiving feedback/input from the leadership of the presbyteries, synods, and the Office of the General Assembly, as well as the Presbyterian Foundation.

“2. Direct the team to make a final report of their work, along with recommendations and suggestions of potential experiments for changes to the system that funds the ministry of councils higher than the session, to the 224th General Assembly (2020). [If the work requires more time, the team is directed to report to 225th General Assembly (2022), with an interim report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).]

[Financial Implications: Per Capita Annual $38,240. Total—$76,480]

$Item 04-02. A Resolution on Prioritizing Translation and Accessibility in the PC(USA)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Approved as amended. [See p. 358.]

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline. Actions taken in plenary are shaded in gray.]

“1. Direct all six of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) agencies to be intentional and proactive in prioritizing the hiring and retaining of people from [the ‘Global South,’ Presbyterian communities and other historic Presbyterian ‘Communities of Color,’] [Presbyterian communities in the global south and other historic Presbyterian ‘Communities of Color,’] preferably with theological training and fluency in languages other than English, in [every] [each] of their program areas or departments so that resources, as well as theological, ecclesiological, and other pertinent documents, if applicable, will be written from the cultural, methodological, and linguistic worldviews of those communities. The agencies will report back on their progress to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

“2. Direct all the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to create an ‘Office of Translation and Interpretation’ that will develop and share resources with other agencies and mid councils to create a systematic approach to language accessibility for the entire church. The translators should have direct interaction with the associates in the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Intercultural Ministries as well as the Racial Ethnic Caucuses and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (proposed recommendation to change name to Racial Equity Advocacy Committee) to ascertain the actual needs of their constituencies and prioritize the documents, articles, and news items that are important and relevant to these communities.]
[3.] Encourage all councils of the church to conduct all meetings related to the ministry of the church in their respective jurisdiction in languages common to their constituencies and to offer simultaneous interpretation in those languages as well as American Sign Language (ASL) [and provide captioning services for the deaf and hard of hearing community]. All pertinent documents should be sent ahead of time in the proper languages in a format accessible to [the blind and vision impaired] [people who are blind and vision impaired]. [This will allow those church members and leaders of immigrant, deaf, and blind communities who are not proficient in the English language or are unable to hear or see to participate and have a “place at the table.”]

3. Financial Sustainability of the National Denomination

Comment: The Way Forward Commission recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a twelve-person committee (to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Nomination Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and to include two presbytery executives and one synod executive) with a deadline of 12/31/2019, to provide a comprehensive resource projection analysis and summary assessment—in conjunction with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation and representatives of all other agencies—of national church assets and income for financial sustainability review. Such analysis/report will be forwarded to each of the six agencies, the 2020 Vision Team, and the ongoing Moving Forward Implementation Commission proposed in Recommendation 5 below.

4. Inclusion and Equity

Approved as amended and with comments. [See comments starting on p. 49 after Recommendation 6.] [See pp. 362–63.]

Amendment:

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline. Actions taken in plenary are shaded in gray.]

“a. [Diversity and Reconciliation.] Require that all six agencies participate [and invite Presbyterian Women to participate] in the Diverse Voices Table being established (described under Ongoing Commission Administrative Actions below); and similar to what has been undertaken by the FMA’s Office on Diversity and Reconciliation, create a process to examine issues of equity and inclusion particular to their own agencies.

“b. [Completion of Audits.] [Require that the prior 222nd General Assembly (2016) mandate for personnel audits from each agency be completed by January 1, 2019, and to recur every four years (see Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 788, GA 222 Item 11-24 (Recommendation 1.b., ‘Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism and Ethnocentricty Report’)).] [Require that the previous mandate originating from the 222nd General Assembly (2016) for personnel audits from each agency must be completed by January 1, 2019. Further, direct that all agencies incorporate ‘race audits’ occurring at least every four years, utilizing an external professional auditor, who can objectively report systemic bias and prejudice, as well as suggesting actions to becoming more racially just and equitable employers. The same external auditor shall be utilized by all agencies in order that the same standards are applied. The results of these audits will be reported to respective agency boards and committees and to the next General Assembly. We further recommend that the members of the Diverse Voices Table and the ‘Chairs & Chiefs’ group of agency executives and board chairs collaborate to select the external auditor. (See Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 788, GA 222 Item 11-24 (Recommendation 1.b., ‘Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism and Ethnocentricty Report’)).]

[Understanding that we desire to create a systematic approach to language accessibility for the entire church, require that translation services be staffed appropriately in order to provide translation services to all six agencies and be centralized in Shared Services. We recommend that our existing translation staff spread across several agencies be coordinated within Global [Communications] [Resources]. Global [Communications] [Resources] would translate all materials going forward and historical/existing records upon request.

“[Prioritization and exceptions of translation services is to be discerned and directed by an inclusive group, such as the Diverse Voices Table, in consultation with associates in Racial Ethnic and Women’s Intercultural Ministries, as well as the racial ethnic caucuses and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

“[Translation services shall include websites and the translation into English of materials originally written in other languages. Translation services will be one more service residing within Shared Services in ‘A Corp.’ The total cost of these services shall be allocated and paid for by each agency as a percentage of work completed. Specific funding sources and budgets used by each agency shall be determined by their respective board(s)/committee(s) and/or executive leadership.”

5. Moving Forward Implementation Commission

Approved as amended and with comments. [See comments starting on p. 49 after Recommendation 6.] [See pp. 363–64.]

Amendment:

Amend the recommendation section as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee jointly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a “Moving Forward Implementation Commission” [to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and to include four members of the 2016 Way Forward Commission, four members of the 2016 All-Agency Review Committee, and four members to be appointed from the commissioners of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) (including one young adult advisory delegate), for a term ending at the 224th General Assembly (2020), with the mandate and authority to (1) ensure compliance and implementation of 2018 assembly action on recommendations from the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee, (2) ensure continued implementation of collaborations and commission administrative actions underway as outlined in this report and the report of the All-Agency Review Committee, (3) coordinate with the 2020 Vision Team, (4) report findings and make recommendations to the 224th General Assembly (2020). (5) working together with the Stated Clerk and the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, may secure an outside consultant to address the issues raised in the June 12, 2018, Administrative Action Regarding Trust and Transparency, (6) direct an evaluation of Shared Services and report to the 224th General Assembly (2020). The report is to include:

“(a) An itemized list of all services shared through the Office of Shared Services and services that might be contracted with other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) agencies to provide.

“(b) Assessment of transparency by which rent and all other fees are calculated and charged.

“(c) Commission may direct appropriate denominational agencies or corporations to provide financial documents, billing data, fees lists, etc.

“(d) A Corp Board Composition.

“(e) Recommendations, in consultation with the A Corp board, of additional services that should or could be shared by the agencies and Presbyterian Women.

“(f) Recommendations regarding potential for mid councils, congregations, and other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) organizations to contract for any or all Shared Services.

“(g) Take any and all administrative action necessary to accomplish the Moving Forward Implementation Commission vision with respect to the Way Forward Commission initiatives and the June 5, 2018 Administrative Supplement.

“If any of the four members to be appointed from the 223rd General Assembly (2018) is a representative of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or of the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall ensure that both such agencies are represented among those four members. [The Moving Forward Implementation Commission is to be appointed by October 1, 2018.]”
6. [Note from the Way Forward Commission: The Way Forward Commission concurs with and urges approval of the recommendations of the All-Agency Review Committee with respect to agency reviews.]

Comments:

We believe that there is potential for equity and inclusion that is not fully realized by the current configuration and lack of organizational clarity regarding Shared Services.

We believe that by engaging all agencies in determining the constitution of Shared Services and how services are administered, in a transparent and holistic process, that greater buy-in will be accomplished across the six agencies and Presbyterian Women, giving the General Assembly as a whole greater bargaining power, opportunities for cross-agency collaboration, and shared accountability.

We believe that areas identified in “Ongoing Commission Administrative Action”: Partnership of six agencies to identify solutions for the cultural, cost, and efficiency issues within Shared Services, property usage, institutional culture, communications, and equity all directly have great potential to be addressed through improved collaboration and shared establishment of a pool of resources that benefit our whole body.

1. There is lack of clarity around what is meant by Shared Services—these should be readily defined with a clear understanding of who is delivering the services. Additionally, it is possible that an agency separate from A. Corp might be more equipped to deliver particular services with greater quality and cost benefit than the Office of Shared Services. We should explore how we can best leverage the skills of our different agencies for the good of the whole.

2. In order for agencies to commit to participation in Shared Services, they must be given enough data to comparison shop and to know and trust that their fees are paying for the services they receive. Currently there is a lack of transparency regarding how service fees are calculated, which leads to distrust and desire to pursue other options.

3. Is the A. Corp Board, as established at the 223rd General Assembly (2018), constituted in a way that encourages all agencies to engage enthusiastically in the opportunity to participate in Shared Services? Trusting that we will learn a lot about what is actually needed for governance of this body during its first two years of implementation, the Moving Forward Commission may realize a different configuration benefits the whole.

4. How might we further partner to create cohesive messaging and bargaining power through Shared Services? Would we benefit from housing some other services such as communications, Human Resources Support, IT, etc. within Shared Services?

5. It seems that there is potential for Shared Services to benefit our denomination beyond the General Assembly level. How can we better resource our congregations and mid council bodies and their work on the ground?

Amend the last bulleted item (sixth bullet) of Recommendation 1. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“• What will the PC(USA) do to open wide the doors of the church to God’s amazing diversity, welcoming all ages and all expressions of race, class, gender, [and] sexual orientation, and differing abilities in striving to increase the membership of our denomination and achieve the great ends of the church?”

“2. The assembly celebrates that over the years, LGBTQIA+ people have faithfully, lovingly, and courageously served in every kind of service to which Christian disciples are called—notwithstanding the church’s efforts to exclude them from particular types of service.”

“3. The assembly laments the ways that the policies and actions of the PC(USA) have caused gifted, faithful, LGBTQIA+ Christians to leave the Presbyterian church so that they could find a more welcoming place to serve, as they have been gifted and called by the Spirit.”

“4. At the same time, the assembly gives thanks for the LGBTQIA+ pioneers of the faith who have persisted in relationship with the Presbyterian church, at great personal cost and sacrifice, together with the whole of the LGBTQIA+ community, moving the church toward a more generous, loving, and just understanding of God’s grace.”

“1. Confess that, in spite of fifty years of Presbyterian advocacy to reduce gun violence, we have been paralyzed by fear of the gun and ammunition lobby and our church has not adequately applied the power of God’s love to the issue of gun violence, with more than 1,600,000 Americans dying from guns since 1968 and many millions more wounded, orphaned, and devastated by gun violence.

“3. Call upon God to wake us up from seeing gun violence as normal and to grant divine courage to our more than 10,000 churches that we might foster a nationwide conversation on gun violence in every community; specifically, to stand in prayer during the 223rd General Assembly (2018), to share this overture and prayer with the presbyteries and synods, to share it in any other way possible, and to encourage every General Assembly commissioner and observer to continue to pray when they go home for a movement of the Spirit to engage our churches in study and action to prevent gun violence. May every congregation know that the whole church has prayed for them and for God’s intervention through them in the face of a gun violence epidemic. In love, may our churches help our country enact sensible steps to prevent gun violence from murders, suicides, accidents, family disputes, and mass shootings.

“[3. This is the time for us to act and intervene in the gun violence epidemic. We will stand in prayer during the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to share this overture, to take action, and to pray with presbyteries and synods, to share it in any way possible, and for every General Assembly commissioner, and to encourage every General Assembly commissioner and observer to continue to pray when they go home for a movement of the Spirit to engage our churches in study and action to prevent gun violence. May every congregation know that the whole church has prayed for them and for us to take transformational action in this gun violence epidemic. In love, may our churches help our country enact sensible steps to prevent gun violence from murders, suicides, accidents, family disputes, and mass shootings.

“[a. to work with teen and young adults especially in proposing local and state legislation prior to and in preparation for the 2018 and 2020 elections, to hold elected officials accountable, and to ensure accurate historical treatments of gun violence are included in high school curricula; and

“[b. to create opportunities for study of this issue in the local churches and at the presbytery level with an emphasis on the use of resources from the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship. Such studies should make every effort to incorporate the perspectives of communities of color which already bear the burdens of racialized policing and which struggle under education and economic oppression, two root causes of violence, which grow out of the long history of the continual and systematic reassertion of white supremacy.]

“[c. to strategize with ecumenical partners based on the five elements on successful social movements cited in the General Assembly report, Gun Violence, Gospel Values (2010, p. 14), including use of the prayer below in public worship and protest events.]

“We are obligated to declare our concerns about the direction towards autocracy that our country is taking.

“We say Yes to God’s power of love and justice for the neighbor as well as the self; and we say No to demonic power that urges hate of the other, scatters blame, and creates civic discord.

Amend Recommendation 1. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through.]

“1. Approve the following resolution:

“The 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA) strongly condemns the unjust, racist disparagement of people and entire nations [lately], promoted by politicians and government officials at all levels in the mistaken effort to place “America First.” As Christians, our call is to bring to “all nations” (Mt. 28:19) the good news that God loves all people equally. [Historically, America has been “first” in espousing human equality as the principle on which nations are founded.] We call upon our national leaders to lead by that principle. We pray that God may open the minds and hearts of the American people to understand that the real problems they face result from real causes and not from the presence of demonized “others.” We commit to working with people of good will, regardless of political or religious affiliation, in a collective effort to solve the real problems facing our nation and the world.
We ask forgiveness from those who have been hurt by hateful rhetoric and harmed by unjust government policies. We acknowledge our responsibility and urge our elected officials to speak out against hate and “to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly” with God (Mic. 6:8).”

BUSINESS MEETING XII

The 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened by Co-Moderators Vilmarie Cintrón-Olivieri and Cindy Kohlmann in Hall 5 of the America’s Center in St. Louis, Missouri.

OPENING GREETINGS AND PRAYER

Co-Moderator Kohlmann recognized Brian Ballard, theological student advisory delegate from Princeton Theological Seminary, who brought greetings and offered prayer.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Co-Moderator Kohlmann recognized Moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures Cheni Khonje and Vice-Moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures Ryan Landino for a report from the committee. Moderator Khonje moved Item 02-04 [see p. 158], the docket as amended. It was approved.

Vice-Moderator Landino brought forward Item 02-05 for information only, the minutes of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) for the plenaries on Wednesday morning, June 20, 2018, through Friday morning, June 22, 2018 [see p. 159]. In accordance with the Standing Rules, the minutes have been reviewed and found to be in order. In accordance with the Standing Rules, the minutes for the rest of the assembly will be reviewed by a subcommittee of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures and will be posted on PC-Biz.

A protest found to be in decorous language is recorded in the Minutes as follows:

I respectfully wish to protest, under G-3.0105b, the decision of the General Assembly not to approve its committee recommendation of item 06-08, which I believe was based on two instances of inappropriate and extra-constitutional advice provided by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1. In its written response to item 06-08, the ACC says “The essential functions of ruling elders identified in G-2.0301 (exercise leadership, government, spiritual discernment, and discipline) are yoked to the practice of governance in the context of councils. The Constitution assumes such experience as a prerequisite to exercise governance in higher councils. Removing this requirement would deemphasize the essential governance function of ruling elders and incorporate other forms of service.” The ACC’s use of the word “assumes,” here, without a Constitutional citation to support it, goes beyond the ACC’s remit to provide advice that is explicitly founded on the Constitution. The ACC, I believe, should restrict itself to communicating what the Constitution actually says, not what it assumes.

2. In his response to a question posed by a commissioner late on the evening of June 22, 2018, ACC representative Daniel Williams advised the Assembly that the Constitution, in G-2.0202, provides the option of individually commissioned deacons solely for congregations that do not have a Board of Deacons. This assertion is likewise an assumption that is not explicitly founded in the Constitution.

I believe the ACC best serves the General Assembly when it confines its advice to directing the Assembly’s attention to explicit Constitutional provisions and avoids opining on what the General Assembly assumed or intended when it adopted specific sections of the Constitution.
FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS UPDATE: REPORT TWO OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

General Assembly Nominating Committee 2018 Nominations

Commissioners to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) will vote to elect many people to positions on the various entities of the General Assembly. In accordance with the Book of Order, G-3.0111, and to ensure careful nominations of members to these entities, the General Assembly Nominating Committee proposes a slate of nominees for election. Positions to be filled are listed on the attached pages.

Biographical Information: A short descriptive paragraph for each nominee being presented by the General Assembly Nominating Committee can be found by May 16 on the GA Nominations website—www.pcusa.org/nominations.

Inclusive Representation: The nominations made by the General Assembly Nominating Committee are responsive to and reflective of the principles of participation and representation expressed in the Book of Order, F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. This report provides diversity information following the name of each nominee as well as a chart describing inclusiveness information for each committee to which the General Assembly is electing members.

Nominations Process: The process for nominations proposed to the General Assembly is a long and thorough one. As of May 1, 2018, the General Assembly Nominating Committee has on file approximately 130 Application for Nomination forms. The names of these persons were gathered through

- self-nomination;
- suggestions from sessions, presbyteries, and synods;
- and other Presbyterians who suggested the nominations of persons they knew or with whom they’ve worshipped and worked.

Application for Nomination forms are received by the General Assembly Nominations office and a copy of each form is shared with all members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee. In addition, a copy of the application is sent to the committee or entity itself.

Each applicant is asked to solicit references from three persons of their choosing. In response to the action of the 208th General Assembly (1996), an appraisal is also solicited from the applicant’s council of membership—presbytery for teaching elders and session for ruling elders and church members. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will not nominate a person unless it has received three appraisals.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation has encouraged persons, particularly those in underrepresented categories, to consider serving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on General Assembly entities and to submit an application for nomination form for the General Assembly Nominating Committee consideration. The General Assembly Committee on Representation has reviewed the GA Nominating Committee’s nominations.

Although the majority of nominations are proposed for “at-large” positions, some people are nominated as representatives of specific presbyteries or synods to a particular entity. In these cases, the General Assembly Nominating Committee requests presbyteries and synods to send the names of no less than three persons for consideration. The General Assembly Nominating Committee may select only from the pool suggested by the synod or presbytery—through its regular nominating process—when filling a mid council representation slot in these instances.

This report lists the names of persons being proposed for nomination and distinguishes between those positions that are at-large (AL), those that are synod (S) or presbytery (P) representation slots, etc., and those that are filled by representatives from other General Assembly agencies or ecumenical bodies.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee also needs to take into account the people of color, geographic, physical, theological, and age diversity. The committee is also sensitive to the needs for expertise expressed by the entities themselves. It is a balancing act that the General Assembly Nominating Committee takes seriously and faithfully as it attempts to discern the call of Presbyterians to service on committees at the General Assembly level.

Persons who are elected to service on General Assembly committees and entities are, in most cases, eligible to be reelected to a second term. The 219th General Assembly (2010) urged “General Assembly entities to consider re-nominations as the exception, rather than the rule and applied only to those members whose continued service is clearly beneficial to ongoing or projected work in order to assist the GANC in making its careful nominations.” However, many of the persons who are proposed in the report are re-nominations.
Descriptions for each committee have been developed by the entity and adapted from the Entity Lists and Descriptions page of the General Assembly nominations website—pcusa.org/nominations. Nomination information for the 2018–2020 cycle is available at the Office of the General Assembly exhibit area.

Procedure for Nominations from the Floor: The procedure for nominations from the floor is described in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, F. General Assembly Plenary Meeting, 6.c. Nominating from the Floor:

When any nomination for service on a General Assembly committee, council, or board comes from the floor of the assembly, the commissioner making the nomination will provide the General Assembly Nominating Committee, no later than 48 hours after the convening of the General Assembly, with pertinent information about the person whose name is being presented, as well as the name of the particular person nominated by the nominating committee whose nomination is being challenged. Such information shall be provided on the “Nomination by Commissioner Form” provided for use at the assembly and available from the Stated Clerk. The availability of the pertinent information provided by the person challenging the nominating committee’s nominee shall be announced to the assembly at least twenty-four hours in advance of the nomination being made from the floor.

The name of the specific person being challenged must be stated on the “Nomination by Commissioner” form. Please return this form, completed in full on all sides, to the ASSEMBLY INFORMATION CENTER in the Plaza Lobby no later than 11:00 am on Monday, June 18, 2018, so that it may be verified for eligibility and the Stated Clerk may prepare for a ballot. Thank you.

This report containing the General Assembly Nominating Committee “Proposed Nominees” will be reported for action on Friday, June 22. Commissioners and advisory delegates will need the following pages for action at that time.

I. Referrals in Progress

A. Board of Pensions

Interim Report:

The Board of Pensions has employee demographics that exceed all General Assembly goals for gender and racial ethnic representation on its staff.

The gender and racial ethnic diversity goals and results are reviewed annually by the executive team of management and the board of directors.

The Board of Pensions does not track racial ethnic data of its members as this is a prohibited activity for healthcare payers. Therefore, the board continues to reach out to caucuses, other self-identified groups, and other agency staff who work with these organizations. The board continues to dialogue with national committees, including the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns, and welcomes additional conversation partners. This area is of consistent interest to our board of directors, and the board looks forward to this important and continuing work.

B. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations

Response: In progress. The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations has worked on developing a theological rationale for Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) engagement in interfaith relationships. This rationale builds on the Interfaith Stance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations would like to invite further response and reflections from stakeholders within the PC(USA) as well as our ecumenical and interfaith partners before finalizing the rationale. Therefore, the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations reports this as a referral in progress with the expectation that a final report will be submitted to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

C. Office of the General Assembly

In Process: Will work with OGA manager for equity and representation to disseminate resources to these committees once identified.

In Process. The following specific points addressed in updates to the Advisory Handbook on Preparation for Ministry in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), released at the end of 2017:

a. Promote training to be more effective in cross-cultural relations.

b. Include members of diverse racial backgrounds in the oversight of candidates and those in ministry where possible. ...

c. Regularly address issues of racism on ordination exam questions, ensuring that ordination exam questions are culturally sensitive to the racial- and language-diversity of candidates, the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCC) includes within its process for review of questions and reader training resources specific attention to potential issues of cross-cultural accessibility.
d. Offer retreats or trainings at the mid council level for those in the ordination discernment process to dialogue about race and racism

e. Request presbyteries to explore a standard of practice for psychological exam providers that are applicable for broader racial and ethnic demographics.

3. 2016 Referral: Item 05-10. A Resolution to Require and Expand Family Leave Policies—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns. Urge All Presbyteries, Synods, and Sessions to Evaluate Their Leave Policies for New Parents for the Birth/Adoption, or Care for, a Child or Other Family Member (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 32, 34, 292).

   In Progress. OGA has begun the necessary research to provide the information needed for us to make an informed and cost-effective decision, while also meeting the needs of our staff.

4. 2016 Referral: Item 12-05. On Affirming Nonviolent Means of Resistance Against Human Oppression—From Presbytery of Muskingum Valley. Recommendation 4. Direct the Stated Clerk to Communicate This Action to All Other PC(USA) Councils and Entities, etc., Calling Upon Them to Build Greater Awareness of Our Historical Witness for Peaceful and Nonviolent resistance to Oppression and to Inform Our Ecumenical Partners of This Action Making Resources We Create Available to Them as Well. (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 66, 67, 860–61).

   In Progress. The Office of the General Assembly will continue to lift up the PC(USA)’s affirmation of nonviolent resistance through educational initiatives, preaching, and other resources.

   In Progress. OGA initiated a race audit using statistics provided by PMA-Human Resources. Also, conducted an employee survey with a race audit portion on the topics of: job satisfaction, workplace values, discrimination and harassment, and leadership. This work will continue in 2018 as we analyze responses to the employee survey and develop a course of action to respond to concerns or issues raised. Race audit work will continue as OGA undertakes an organizational review to assess the impact of its current practices and policies and future initiatives on people of color.

6. 2016 Referral: Item 10-11. A Resolution to Contribute to a Proactive, Health-Giving Ministry to and Relationship with Our Clergywomen—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, Recommendation 5. Direct the Six Denominational Agencies to Collaboratively Create the Expense of New Leadership Development Opportunities for All Clergywomen (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 41, 44, 614).

   In progress.

7. 2016 Referral: Item 11-08. On Offering an Apology to Native Americans, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians—From the Presbytery of Baltimore. Recommendation 2. That the Moderator of the PC(USA) Share This Apology with Native American Congregations, Coordinated with PMA’s Native American Congregational Support Office and with the Native American Consulting Committee (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 47, 54–55, 711–12).

   In Progress. Apology trip made to Barrow, Alaska, where former Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons made apology to Alaska Natives with current Stated Clerk J. Herbert Nelson in attendance.

   In Progress. Apology trip made to Barrow, Alaska, where former Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons made apology to Alaska Natives with current Stated Clerk J. Herbert Nelson in attendance.

   In progress.
D. Presbyterian Mission Agency

   Progress Report: The referral is complicated to implement as it directs detailed planning at the national level to be implemented at multiple subsequent levels both inside (congregations, mid councils, assembly) and outside of the church (ecumenical). Multiple actions of the assembly, sharing common issues differing in approach, are converging and competing. Additional time for this referral will improve the response. As a partial response, PMA and OGA formed a Diversity & Reconciliation Team that gathers monthly to coordinate strategies and work. Both agencies consulted with the Way Forward Commission separately and together. The Diverse Voices working group indicated the commission will recommend using the Diversity & Reconciliation team to help formulate a national strategy. Moreover, a new resolution (the Decade of Intercultural Transformation) seeking the same national push to dismantle racism is going to 223rd General Assembly (2018). An effective strategy will require a deep partnership between all agencies and mid councils. PMA and OGA will bring a final response to this referral to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

   Response: Final response will be presented to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

   Response: Final response will be presented to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

   Response: Final response will be presented to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

   Response: Final response will be presented to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

   Response: Ongoing. The Presbyterian Mission Agency, per its standard practice, provided the 2015 and 2016 report to the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

E. Rules of Discipline Task Force Interim Report

   Response: The Rules of Discipline Task Force was created by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) in response to an overture from the Presbytery of Chicago. The task force was charged with “revising the entire Rules of Discipline to make the Rules of Discipline more accessible to the church, to preserve and enhance the accountability of councils and individuals to the church, to expand the role of mediation and alternate dispute resolution, and to provide flexibility in crafting censures and remedies, particularly in light of recent learnings in ethical and social development and experiments by the secular legal system with alternate sentencing” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 374).

The Co-Moderators appointed five persons to make up the task force in May of 2017. The five are Doska Ross, retired Stated Clerk of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii; Barbara Burdick, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Chicago; Donna Wells, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta; Therese Howell, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Middle Tennessee; Greg Goodwiller, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of St. Andrew; and Paige McRight, retired Executive Presbyter of the Presbytery of Central Florida, Moderator. The task force is ably staffed by Laurie Griffith and Flor Velez-Diaz. Dan Saperstein is liaison from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Since its appointment in May of last year, the task force has been at work to revise the Rules of Discipline as charged. The task force has met three times face-to-face and held several electronic meetings in the writing process. A survey in the summer of 2017 and a meeting with stated clerks and other interested parties at the 2017 Mid Council Leadership Forum in St. Louis provided vital input on particular items in the revision that would be helpful to the church.

The first draft of the revised Rules of Discipline will be available for review and response across the church by March 1, 2018. That draft is comprised of three major sections. The initial section contains the preamble and general description of the judicial process. The second section deals with the remedial process through which councils in the church are held accountable. The third section deals with the accountability of individuals to the church. Currently, this section is referred to as the disciplinary process. This nomenclature itself has caused confusion in the church since both councils and individuals are accountable through church discipline. The task force proposes to rename the process of individual accountability the restorative process because its intent is to restore wholeness in the body of Christ when trust is broken.

The task force will be available for interpretation of its work on invitation in all of 2019. It will make its report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

F. Task Force for Safe and Sacred Space Interim Report

Interim Report from the Task Force for Safe and Sacred Space

The 221st General Assembly (2014) directed the Office of the General Assembly to appoint a task force to help congregations implement child, youth, and vulnerable adult protection policies. Members of the Task Force for Safe and Sacred Space were identified in June of 2017:

Nancy Cavalcante: Synod of Living Waters, Presbytery of Mid Kentucky
Windy Johnston: Synod of South Atlantic, Presbytery of Tropical Florida
Jody LeFort: Synod of the Covenant, Presbytery of the Western Reserve
Doreen Der McLeod: Synod of the Pacific, Presbytery of San Francisco
Sheila Palmer: Synod of South Atlantic, Presbytery of Florida

The task force held its first meeting in Louisville, August 14–15, 2017, reviewing the resources that can be accessed through the PC(USA) website and beginning to identify additional sources for education and training materials. Representatives from the task force attended the October 2017 Mid Council Leaders Gathering to seek feedback regarding the needs of congregations as they implement protection policies. Our continuing work, individually and in conference calls in November and December of 2017 and February of 2018, has been focused on identifying best practices and effective resources for education, training, and response.

The task force will meet in Louisville in March of 2018. Part of that meeting’s agenda will be a conversation with a survivor of sexual abuse in the church. The need for healing materials has surfaced, and we hope this conversation will result in suggestions of processes for congregational healing when abuse does occur.

Because the task force did not begin its work until mid-2017, we are not prepared to report to the 223rd General Assembly (2018). Members of the task force are committed to continuing efforts and anticipate making a final report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

Creating Safe Ministries, https://www.presbyterianmission.org/legal-resources/creating-safe-ministries/, in the Presbyterian Mission Agency section of the PC(USA) website begins with this statement: “God intends for the church and its ministries to be a safe place for all to encounter God and grow into lives of service and fulfillment. We are called to be a holy community.” The Task Force for Safe and Sacred Space joins other groups and individuals in the church whose efforts respond to that call.
II. Final Responses to Referrals

A. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns

Response: This referral is answered by Item 11-05 being presented to the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

B. Board of Pensions

Response: The Board of Pensions has reviewed its employment policies and is in full compliance with this resolution.

Response: The Board of Pensions has fully implemented this request.

The Board of Pensions invested $100,000,000 with Impax Asset Management Group, a London-based investment manager that specializes in resource efficiency markets in their Impax Leaders Strategy. The Leaders Strategy is a fossil fuel-free portfolio that invests worldwide in resource efficiency and environmental markets.

The Board of Pensions added the Pax Global Environmental Markets Fund Institutional Class (PGIX) to the Retirement Savings Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (RSP). Pax Global joins the PC(USA) Socially Responsible U.S. Equity Fund and the PC(USA) Socially Responsible Balanced Fund as a screened option in the RSP. Pax Global is fossil fuel-free and invests in companies worldwide that produce products or create solutions to drive positive environmental performance, such as alternative energy or waste management technology. The RSP is available to any employee of an organization affiliated with the PC(USA). Participation in Pax Global has been modest. As of December 31, 2017, 148 participants out of 11,957 selected Pax Global for their accounts. Total investment was approximately $2.7 million of the $706 million in total assets in the RSP.

3. 2016 Referral: Item 10-11. A Resolution to Contribute to a Health-Giving Ministry to and Relationship with Our Clergywomen—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns. 5. Direct the Six Agencies to Collaboratively Create the Expense of New Leadership Development Opportunities for All Clergywomen (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 41, 44, 614).

Response: The Board of Pensions (BOP) does not provide leadership development programs.

All of the BOP plans serve women equally with men. For those clergy who are plan members, the Board of Pensions successful CREDO program has been expanded to include all newly ordained members. To ensure full participation of clergywomen, the Board of Pensions pays for licensed infant care and encourages nursing mothers to participate fully. Six programs were offered in 2017, attended by 87 women and 73 men. In addition, the Board holds periodic CREDO conferences for mid council clergy. The most recent one was attended by six women and eleven men.

The Board of Pensions is expanding its educational debt relief program from grants of up to $25,000 for new minister members who are directly out of seminary, second career, or identify as racial ethnic. Our educational debt coaching partner is a racial ethnic owned enterprise and is particularly sensitive to the particular needs of racial ethnic ministers.

Response: The Board of Pensions is and continues to be committed to a diverse workplace where staff of all backgrounds can feel comfortable and be effective in serving the church. The Board of Pensions is supportive of the principles of cultural proficiency: Since the inception of the cultural proficiency initiative, the Board of Pensions

- has incorporated the principles into its Mission Statement, Values, and Personnel Policies and Procedures, works with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) to ensure gender and racial ethnic balance on the board of directors, has employee demographics that exceed all General Assembly goals for gender and racial ethnic representation on its staff, uses these guidelines in the board’s recruiting efforts, both directly and through search firms, has met as board and executive team to ensure representation goals are met, maintains an annual compliance education calendar that includes diversity training, and, has posted on the board’s internal employee-focused website, the report “Privilege, Power and Policy: The Church as an Employer” (Minutes, 2012, Part I, p. 1091). The 220th General Assembly (2012) directed the Presbyterian Mission Agency to publish and distribute this report of the Creating a Climate for Change Task Force to employees of all six corporate agencies.

Response: The Board of Pensions worked closely with the other five agencies and is grateful for the leadership of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and their submission of a response on the Board of Pensions’ behalf.

Response: The Board of Pensions was pleased to co-sponsor and design the 2017 Mid Council Leaders Gathering (formerly the Fall Polity Conference) with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) from October 15–17, 2017, in St. Louis, Missouri. The Board of Pensions was pleased to be a sponsor and contribute to the design of Big Tent, and its theme of “Race, Reconciliation, and Reformation” held July 6–8, 2017, in St. Louis, Missouri. These conversations utilized “Shifting Accountability for Racial Ethnic Ministries” and was incorporated into this national gathering.

C. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations

Response: The 222nd General Assembly (2016) directed GACEIR to encourage appropriate General Assembly entities to do the following: “Collaborate with councils at all levels (of the PCUSA) to work ecumenically and interreligiously in addressing such crucial issues as violent conflict between states, climate change, transnational terrorism, global economic system, global persecution of Christian minorities and LGBTQ persons, and extremist interreligious violence.”

Collaboration being central to its charge, GACEIR identified key features of effective collaboration, which build on the foundation of trusted relationships. These are an empowering vision, organizing for common purposes, frequent interpersonal communication among leaders, shared decision-making, truthful and transparent interpretation, effective use of social media, and mutual accountability in the stewardship of limited resources.

The subcommittee researched the issues within contemporary global contexts and created a document with several parts including brief working descriptions of each issue, identification of current General Assembly mission areas that relate to these issues, documentation of associated General Assembly policies, notations of relevant Presbytery Mission Agency programs and offices currently addressing the issues, and wherever possible, references to ecumenical and interreligious partners with whom the PC(USA) is collaborating on the issues.

The GACEIR received the attached report from the Presbyterian Mission Agency about how they are working with ecumenical and interfaith partners on the above identified issues. We share it with the 223rd General Assembly (2018) for information and guidance for other councils of the PC(USA)—synods, presbyteries, sessions on ways to work with ecumenical and interfaith partners on critical global issues.

Given elements of persistent xenophobic and misogynistic mindsets within every faith group, including the PC(USA), and assuming their influence in perpetuating these global issues, GACEIR decided it is imperative, together with others throughout the PC(USA), to increase awareness of racial/cultural bias and white privilege. Committee members began self-examination by participating in an intense bias/privilege experiential training workshop.

Response: GACEIR was asked by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to encourage mid councils to enter into consultancies with neighboring ecumenical councils regarding shared administrative tasks. GACEIR worked with Presbyterian Research Office in surveying mid councils within the PC(USA) and some of their ecumenical counterparts. While this is still a project in process, the survey provided some examples that may serve as models for other mid councils to emulate.

3. 2016 Referral: Item 07-06, 15. Commit to Further Reflection on the Nuanced Definitions of “Interfaith” and “Interreligious” for the Purpose of Clarity in Communications. (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 448)

Response: The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations was asked to provide clarity about the use of the words “interfaith” and “interreligious,” and to provide direction about how the terms should be used in our work as a denomination.

Interreligious and interfaith are terms that are so close together in meaning that they are frequently used interchangeably. Interreligious refers more to the institutional aspects of religions and may include religions that do not necessarily claim faith. Interfaith points more towards the inner meaning and experience of faith and spiritual practices in different religious traditions.

While interreligious offers a broader base of relationships to include traditions that do not claim faith, our preference is to use interfaith as we engage people of faith in dialogue and relationships. We may use interreligious as we work cooperatively with organizations of different religious traditions for the common good.

D. General Assembly Committee on Representation

Response: The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) reviewed two agency benchmarks for employment and supplier diversity and recommended changes for OGA and PMA (Item 03-10) to the 222nd General Assembly (2016). The committee will incorporate its agency benchmark reviews with other reviews of the agency by the assembly. GACOR reports to every assembly regarding employment and supplier diversity reports it receives regularly. The committee includes reviews of major contracts and policies in its review of an agency. As ongoing work, we are answering this as a final response knowing it will continue as a function of the reviews that have a periodicity set by the assembly.

Response: With the approval of Standard Definition for Supplier Diversity by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) by its action on Item 03-12, the General Assembly Committee on Representation has what it needs for agencies to report on supplier diversity regularly. Reporting on agencies regarding supplier diversity resumes with its report to this assembly (Item 03-Info: Supplier Diversity Report on Six Agencies). This practice is now a regular feature of the committee’s reporting to the assembly and will remain until the assembly deems it necessary to stop.

Response: The committee has made it a regular feature of its meetings to hear from the Presbyterian Mission Agency and Office of the General Assembly considering the new benchmarks and changing practices to track this work. GACOR has made efforts to communicate with PMAB leaders and/or staff of PMA in its meetings of March 2017 (board and committee members met) and October 2017 (committee met with staff leaders). PMA has improved in communicating with GACOR and sent their data reports in a timely fashion. All parties are committed to continuing these practices of regular communication going forward.

E. Office of the General Assembly

Response: Presbyteries voted to approve the amendments, which have been incorporated into the 2017–2019 Book of Order. New preference for titles will be incorporated into CPM and COM resources as they are updated.

Response: The Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCC) advised candidates, their presbyteries, and their seminaries, as well as exam readers, that the standard ordination examinations would require use of the 2017–19 Book of Order beginning with the October 2017 exams. (PCC policy is that constitutional documents current when registration opens are required for the exams; registration for the October exams open on August 1).

Response: OGA and PMA collaborated in 2017 and contracted with a curator for this project. Staff transition in PMA meant main contact with contractor shifted to OGA while payment was through PMA. The work spans more than a century and is curated by themes and timeline. The study guide (integrated into the materials) and worship resource is intended to be posted to the Facing Racism webpage (https://facing-racism.pcusa.org/) when all materials can be can accommodated. The scope of the ask provided challenges. Copyright issues are being worked on at the time of this reporting and will be resolved in coming weeks. Materials will be posted to the website for distribution and promoted accordingly.

Response: Approved by the presbyteries and included in the 2017–2019 Book of Order.

Response: Approved national certifying bodies were informed of their approval by the 222nd General Assembly (2016). In addition, a web page was created to list the approved national certifying bodies that included links to the organizations’ own websites.

Response. The Office of Public Witness has been working closely with the No Way to Treat a Child Campaign. We have sponsored a congressional briefing on the issue of the treatment of Palestinian Children in the Occupied Territories and asked Presbyterians to urge their members of congress to attend. We sponsored two webinars on this issue as well.

We have worked in coalition with other denominations and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) to have HR 4391 introduced—Promoting Human Rights by Ending Israeli Military Detention of Palestinian Children Act. We have promoted webinars on this as well as issued action alerts to Presbyterians to ask their members of congress to cosponsor.

There is ongoing work to support cosponsors and the following letter will be signed by heads of communion and be sent to all who cosponsor. This should be finalized and sent in the next week or two.

We believe advocacy on HR 4391 to be the most pressing and strategic issue in congress right now that directly relates to the situation of Palestinian children in detention. Letter has been sent to representatives.

Response: The Office of Immigration Issues of the Office of the General Assembly advocated for an increase in the number of refugee arrivals to the Obama administration in 2016 and the Trump Administration in 2017. The office expressed opposition to the multiple travel bans in 2017, which disproportionately affected refugees and migrants from primarily Muslim countries, including resourcing the Stated Clerk so he could participate in two amicus briefs, in the fourth and ninth circuits asking to enjoin the government from refusing refugees from primarily Muslim countries.

The office created a new webpage to educate Presbyterians about refugees and equip them to advocate for refugees. www.pcusa.org/refugees. The office partnered with Presbyterian Mission Agencies to create a “We Choose Welcome” resource that congregations can participate in to offer support to and advocate for refugees in their communities. The office presented on issues of refugees at Big Tent with Susan Krehbiel of Presbyterian Disaster Assistance at the workshop, Creating Spaces of Welcome: Acting in Solidarity with Refugees and Immigrants of all Faiths and Nationalities. The Office lead workshops at the 2018 Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Refugee Summit, an event that prepares the National Response Team to assist people of varying immigration statuses in their natural and human-caused disaster responses.

Response: The Stated Clerk of the Office of the General Assembly has written letters to the President of the United States asking for an increase in the number of refugee arrivals. The Stated Clerk has written multiple letters for refugees, asylum seekers, and undocumented members of our congregations who are at risk of deportation. These letters are written with the input of the person at risk of deportation and their attorney. Taking their guidance, these letters have been addressed to members of Congress, leadership in the Department of Homeland Security, leadership in Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and local Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers. No one, for whom the Stated Clerk has personally advocated, has wanted a letter written and sent on their behalf to the President or the Attorney General.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) has taken lead on this referral; see PMA response to Item 11-12 Recommendation 1, in I. Referrals in Progress, D. Presbyterian Mission Agency, Response 1.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) has taken lead on this referral; see PMA response to Item 11-18 Recommendation 1. II. Final Responses to Referrals, G. Presbyterian Mission Agency, Response 3.

Response: The Office of the General Assembly’s Cultural Proficiency Plan is available to all employees. OGA partners with PMA to ensure employees receive announcements of activities, events, and educational opportunities that promote diversity, equity, and inclusion.

Response: A letter was sent.

Response: Letters were sent to the President and to members of Congress.

Response: In coordination with the Stated Clerk, the Office of Public Witness has continued to advocate for policies that would protect human rights, promote security, and support effective electoral participation. Because of the current situation in the DR Congo, public advocacy on these issues may put our partners in danger. We have, however, continued to work with allies in congress, including Rep. Karen Bass, as well as the State Department, to promote free and fair elections in the DRC, as well as to condition aid and impose sanctions if steps towards the protection of human rights and collective security are not taken.

Response: In partnership with the Stated Clerk, the Office of Public Witness continues to build a strong partnership with the Presbyterian AIDS Network and other ecumenical partners to advocate for maintenance and increase to federal programs that support people living with HIV. One example of this is raising awareness about Faith HIV AIDS Awareness Day, through action alerts such as this: http://capwiz.com/pcusa/issues/alert/?alertid=78494626. We also participate in interfaith and secular efforts around Advocacy for World AIDS day.

Response: Answered by PMA’s response to Item 12-10, Recommendation 4.b. (See II. Final Responses to Referrals, G. Presbyterian Mission Agency, Referral 66.)

Response: The Stated Clerk of the Office of the General Assembly has written letters to the President of the United States asking for an increase in the number of refugee arrivals. These letters are written with the input of the person at risk of deportation and their attorney. No one, for whom the Stated Clerk has personally advocated, has wanted a letter written and sent on their behalf to the president or the attorney general.

Response: The Office of Immigration Issues of the Office of the General Assembly, on behalf of the Stated Clerk, participates in the National Sanctuary Movement, an interfaith movement of sanctuary partners across the U.S., and has hosted members of this movement to speak at presbytery meetings, congregational meetings, and Big Tent.

The office is a member of the Interfaith Immigration Coalition and collectively works to keep family unity as a cornerstone in immigration policy, for due process in immigration proceedings, for enforcement policy that honors borderland communities and to resource congregations wishing to offer sanctuary.

Response: The Office of Immigration Issues of the Office of the General Assembly, on behalf of the Stated Clerk, participated in and provided guidance and resources for a sanctuary training retreat with the Synod of the Northeast with more than eighty Presbyterians in attendance.
The office attended and spoke at multiple presbytery events where members were interested in learning more about sanctuary.

The office created a new sanctuary resource webpage to help Presbyterians discerning whether to enter, offer, or support sanctuary: www.pcusa.org/sanctuary.

The office created multiple resources, including a film, Bible study, and StoryMap around the root causes of migration from Central America, all of which can be accessed and utilized by congregations at www.genesisofexodusfilm.org.

The office provided assistance to the Office of Public Witness as they created the Sanctuary Discernment Guide to help congregations work through how they can offer sanctuary: http://www.pcusa.org/site_media/media/uploads/oga/pdf/pc(usa)_opw_sanctuary_final_6.21_edit.pdf.

Response: The special committee was formed and is bringing a report to the 223rd General Assembly (2018). (See Item 14-06.) The committee was staffed by both the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly.

Response: Distributed electronically to all presbyteries and synods of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and asked that they forward this action to sessions so that all councils of the church can use it for their study, reflection, and, where possible, their approval.

Response: The Office of the General Assembly co-sponsored the Mid Council Leaders Gathering in October 2017 with the Board of Pensions. A workshop was offered on the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity.

23. 2016 Referral: Item 08-07. On Prayerfully Studying the Palestinian Civil Society Call for Boycott, Divestment, and Sanctions (BDS). Recommendation 5. Direct the Stated Clerk to Distribute, for Prayerful Study, the Text of the Palestinian Call and Documentation from Interfaith Partners Who Oppose the BDS Movement to All PC(USA) Congregations—From the Presbytery of New Hope (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 60, 62, 217 of the print copy, 504–06 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Stated Clerk has transmitted the following URL containing “the call” for participation in the BDS Movement to all presbyteries, with the request that it be forwarded to every congregation within their bounds: https://bdsmovement.net/call.

The Stated Clerk offers the following URL locations representing our primary “interfaith partners,” each of which includes material opposing participation in the BDS Movement. This information is to be forwarded as stipulated in the paragraph above.

The Religious Action Center—https://rac.org/opposing-bds

The Central Committee of American Rabbis—www.ccarnet.org

For additional perspectives from interfaith partners regarding the BDS Movement, the following sites provide additional reflections on the search for a future of peace and justice, including theological concerns:

The American Council for Judaism (Reform)—www.acjna.org

Jewish Voice For Peace—https://jewishvoiceforpeace.org

Response: For the OGA response to this referral, see Item 06-24.
Response: The Co-Moderators, working in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, appointed former General Assembly Vice Moderator Byron Wade as the chair and sought to fill out the membership of the commission as directed by the 222nd General Assembly (2016). After months of work, the Co-Moderators, along with GANC and Commission Chair Byron Wade, came to the conclusion that the assembly might be better served if the composition of the commission was changed. The Co-Moderators, along with Byron Wade, will be bringing those recommendations to the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

26. 2016 Referral: Item 08-02. On Advocating for the Safety/Wellbeing of Children of Palestine/Israel—From the Synod of the Covenant, Recommendation 2. Calls on U.S. Senate to Ratify the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child; Direct the Stated Clerk to Communicate This Call to All Members of the U.S. Senate, the President, and the Vice President (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 59, 61, 458).

Response: Completed. The OPW has been working closely with the No Way to Treat a Child Campaign. We have sponsored a congressional briefing on the issue of the treatment of Palestinian Children in the Occupied Territories and asked Presbyterians to urge their members of congress to attend. We sponsored two webinars on this issue as well.

We have worked in coalition with other denominations and NGO’s to have HR 4391 introduced—Promoting Human Rights by Ending Israeli Military Detention of Palestinian Children Act. We have promoted webinars on this as well as issued action alerts to Presbyterians to ask their members of congress to cosponsor.

There is ongoing work to support cosponsors and a letter will be signed by heads of communion and be sent to all who cosponsor. This should be finalized and sent in the next week or two.

We believe advocacy on HR 4391 to be the most pressing and strategic issue in congress right now that directly relates to the situation of Palestinian Children in Detention.

Letter has been sent to representatives.

27. 2016 Referral: Item 08-03. On Upholding Peoples and Partners in the Middle East and in the United States—From the Presbytery of New York City, Recommendation 4. Direct Stated Clerk, Other Staff to Foster Joint Action with Partner Churches and Others to Address Ways of Increasing the Respect of Christians, Other Minorities in the Middle East (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 13, 61, 463).

Response: Presbyterian World Mission continues to develop and strengthen its partnerships with churches in the Middle East, principally with the Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Egypt, the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon (NESSL), the Presbyterian Church of Iraq, and the Presbyterian Church of Iran, as well as with the Lutheran and Anglican churches in Israel-Palestine (among others), the Middle East Council of Churches, and the Fellowship of Middle East Evangelical Churches. This is expressed through regular visits, including a leadership visit to the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon in March 2017, led by Co-Moderator Jan Edmiston and PMA Interim Executive Director Tony De La Rosa, and a leadership visit to Christian partners in Israel-Palestine planned for Advent 2017, led by the Stated Clerk.

Our embedded staff in the region, Steve Gorman, formerly in Cairo (until November 2016), Elmarie Parker in Beirut and working with NESSL, and Kate Taber, soon to be succeeded by Doug Dicks, in Jerusalem, facilitate many of these visits, helping to make the region accessible to congregations, mid councils, partnerships networks, and interested individuals. They do this both practically (assisting with arrangements) and through interpreting the experience (helping people to understand the joys and concerns of our partners, and why Christians feel the way they do about their region).

Through our funding programs and with the generous support of Presbyterians, we have been able to expand our support for the Synod of the Nile’s new church development program, and continue to contribute to the sustainability of the Presbyterian Church of Iraq, among other things working with them to plan an international partners meeting in 2018 focusing on rebuilding the church’s presence in society. With the Presbyterian Church of Iran, we are developing a program of financial support that will help sustain the presence and witness of their church. As things settle down in Syria and people return to their communities, Presbyterian World Mission (along with Presbyterian Disaster Assistance) are working with NESSL on reconstruction efforts, enabling Christians to return to their homes and take up their lives again.

With our ecumenical partners in the U.S., we have relaunched the Churches Middle East Forum, bringing together the Middle East officers of our principal ecumenical partners to better coordinate our efforts as we journey with and support the churches of the Middle East.

At Big Tent in 2017, we ran a workshop that featured Hadi Ghantous, from NESSL, introducing Christian-Muslim relations from a Middle Eastern perspective, highlighting both the opportunities for peaceful coexistence and the trials and challenges
Christians in the region face. Building on this, and in cooperation with the Near East School of Theology in Beirut, we are running in July 2018, a two-week intensive course on Christian-Muslim relations that, among other things, will tackle the issue of religiously based radical thought and responses to it.

In 2017, World Mission’s Equipping for Mission Involvement group created a mission toolkit on Muslim-Christian relations that provides educational and liturgical resources for congregations to build bridges with Muslims locally and abroad.

28. 2016 Referral: Item 08-04. On Calling for the RE/MAX Corporation to Cease Selling Property in West Bank Settlements—From the Presbytery of the Redwoods, Recommendation 7. Direct the Stated Clerk to Communicate This Action to All Other PC(USA) Councils and Entities and to the Re/Max Corporation (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 13, 61, 465–66).

Response: Because the Board of Pensions and Foundation of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. do not hold stock in RE/MAX, LLC; the committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) has not engaged with representatives from RE/MAX, LLC. In mid-2017, the Office of Faith-Based and Corporate Engagement drafted and sent the official response from the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to the CEO of RE/MAX, LLC, commending the company’s commitment in 2016, ahead of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), to take action to ensure RE/MAX, LLC, will no longer receive income from the sale of Jewish-settlement properties in the West Bank or East Jerusalem. The correspondence from the Office of Faith-Based Investing and Corporate Engagement also reiterated the request of the 222nd General Assembly (2016) for RE/MAX, LLC, and its franchisees to continue to do everything in its legal and moral power to stop facilitating the sale or rental of properties in Israeli settlement colonies in East Jerusalem and the West Bank, and to continue to be in conversation with the proponent of the overture from the Presbytery of the Redwoods.

Direct the Stated Clerk to Inform the Denomination and the Larger Public of the Passage and Implementation of This Overture (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 62, 63, 511–12).

Response: PMA has agreed to be lead on this recommendation.

Response: PMA has agreed to be lead on this recommendation.

Response: PMA has agreed to be lead on this recommendation.

Response: The Office of General Assembly is making this document available to the church and sharing with church partners, ecumenical bodies, and public officials. The Office of General Assembly will place the document in an easily downloadable format.

Response: Letters to the president and congressional leaders have been sent.

F. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation, in collaboration with the other five General Assembly agencies, approved a definition of Supplier Diversity as a guideline for all agencies to follow in the selection of vendors. This definition outlines Supplier Groups, Supplier Categories, and Payment Thresholds.

2. 2016 Referral: Item 05-10. Urge All Presbyteries, Synods, and Sessions to Evaluate Their Leave Policies for New Mothers and Fathers for the Birth or Adoption of, or to Care for, a Child or Other Family Member, Such as Seniors or Those Who Require Health Assistance—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 32, 34, 292).

Response: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation currently provides five weeks of paid time off that employees may utilize in these circumstances. We also comply with FMLA requirements to provide twelve weeks of unpaid time off. New mothers who go on short-term disability (which pays 60 percent of their normal pay) may also use available PTO from their sick bank to pay the remaining 40 percent.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation continues to pursue its Transformational Investment program in the Middle East. The Foundation has now invested more than $2 million in seven initiatives in Israel, Palestine, and Jordan designed to help create conditions for peace and human flourishing in the region. These include:

- Creation of a microfinance program in partnership with The National Bank, which has generated 136 sustainable new jobs throughout the West Bank.
- Installation of a 168kw solar field to provide low-cost electricity for the Arab Development Society in Jericho.
● Construction of a new Continuous Education building and a Media Center building at Dar al Kalima University College in Bethlehem.

● Incubator funding for life sciences companies through New Generation Technologies in Nazareth, which brings together Christian, Muslim, and Jewish scientists and doctors to create new businesses.

● Construction and expansion of a pilgrimage center at the site of Jesus’ baptism operated by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Jordan and the Holy Land.

● Line of Credit for the Applied Research Institute-Jerusalem supporting its work to promote sustainable development and self-reliance of the Palestinian people.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation is aligned with the General Assembly goal of a sustainable environment for all of God’s creation. The Presbyterian Foundation, in coalition with MRTI, has participated in corporate engagements with energy companies regarding sustainability and clean energy, voted proxies to support clean energy, and filed shareholder resolutions calling for sustainability reporting for energy companies held in portfolios. Energy investments held by the Presbyterian Foundation are diverse among oil and gas companies, utilities, and renewable power producers. Furthermore, our investment strategy includes a direct allocation of at least 1 percent in clean energy investments for the Presbyterian Endowment Fund. Today, this allocation has a market value of $9.3 million. These investments include solar power, wind power, and other renewable sources. Lastly, the Foundation communicates in writing directly with all investment managers to consider environmental impact when making investment decisions.

5. 2016 Referral: Item 10-01 On Seeking to Eradicate Slavery from the Supply Chains of Vendors and Other Businesses That the PC(USA) and Its Various Bodies Do Business—From the Presbytery of Newark (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 13, 42, 567).

Response: The Foundation works cooperatively with the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) to research, identify, and develop practices to certify vendors’ supply chains are free of slavery. The Foundation regularly submits Affirmative Action/Equal Employment Opportunity and supplier diversity reports to GACOR.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation established a Ministry Partnership Fund for the initiative and has worked with the five pilot presbyteries and the Presbyterian Mission Agency to promote gifts to the fund.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation’s initiative on church financial literacy and leadership addresses clergywomen specifically, including those in their first five years of ministry, second-career clergywomen, clergywomen of color, and senior pastors. Elements of this initiative are conducted in partnership with the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. Discussions are ongoing with the other agencies about how all can work together to fulfill this resolution.

Response: The Foundation submits a request for proposal for larger contracts with outside vendors and vets smaller contractors before finalizing the agreements. Consideration is given for: (a) qualification under the Supplier Diversity Policy; (b) negotiated pricing; (c) financial stability and reputation.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation adheres to the General Assembly’s guidelines regarding cultural proficiency goals and resources.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation was not reviewed in 2017–2018. These recommendations will be addressed during the time period of the Foundation’s next agency review.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation shares the General Assembly’s goal to eradicate human trafficking from the supply chains of vendors and uphold the human rights of all people. We work with the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment and participate in corporate dialogues to raise awareness and advocate for corporate training for prevention of human trafficking and promotion of human rights. We vote shareholder proxies in favor of fair labor practices and support of human rights. We have filed shareholder resolutions calling for corporate policies to prevent human trafficking and to support fair labor practices in supply chains. Furthermore, the Foundation and its investment advisor, Northern Trust, are both signatories to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment. These principles seek to prevent human trafficking by encouraging companies to have policies that adhere to fair labor practices whereby a company is responsible to its employees and the communities in which they operate.

United Nations Principles for Responsible Investing (PRI)

The PRI is the world’s leading proponent of responsible investment.

It works to understand the investment implications of environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors and to support its international network of investor signatories in incorporating these factors into their investment and ownership decisions. The PRI acts in the long-term interests of its signatories, of the financial markets and economies in which they operate, and ultimately of the environment and society.

The PRI is truly independent. It encourages investors to use responsible investment to enhance returns and better manage risks, but does not operate for its own profit. It engages with global policymakers but is not associated with any government; it is supported by, but not part of, the United Nations.

PRI’s aim over the next ten years is to bring responsible investors together to work towards sustainable markets that contribute to a prosperous world for all.

The United Nations (UN) has been supporting the Principles for Responsible Investment ever since their launch. The PRI has two UN partners—UN Environment Programme Finance Initiative and UN Global Compact—which play an important role in delivering the PRI’s strategy, including by holding a seat each on the PRI Board, and provide additional avenues for signatories to learn, collaborate and take action towards responsible investment.

Principle 1: We will incorporate ESG issues into investment analysis and decision-making processes.

Principle 2: We will be active owners and incorporate ESG issues into our ownership policies and practices.

Principle 3: We will seek appropriate disclosure on ESG issues by the entities in which we invest.

Principle 4: We will promote acceptance and implementation of the principles within the investment industry.

Principle 5: We will work together to enhance our effectiveness in implementing the principles.

Principle 6: We will each report on our activities and progress towards implementing the principles.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation joined with the other PC(USA) agencies to jointly formulate and implement a communications plan to share implicit bias and antiracism resources. The Foundation used its electronic communication resources to help share this information with congregations and mid councils.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation has not supported therapies that attempt to alter sexual orientation.

Response: The Presbyterian Foundation has completed an organizational review of practices and policies as they impact people of color and continues to evaluate potential impacts of future initiatives.

G. Presbyterian Mission Agency

   Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency website includes a section Creating Safe Ministries—https://www.presbyterianmission.org/legal-resources/creating-safe-ministries/.

   On that webpage, councils of all levels can find PC(USA) statements and resources to help them develop dependent care policies. The resources include:

   - Dependent Care Reimbursement Policy for Commissioners and Advisory Delegates to the 222nd General Assembly (2016);
   - Dependent Care Expenses While Traveling (from the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Guidelines for Reimbursement of Expenses);
   - Standards of Ethical Conduct (1998);
   - Sexual Misconduct Policy and Its Procedures (2013);
   - Resolution on Allegations of Child Sexual Abuse Against Educators (2004);

   The webpage provides links to other resources.

   During Big Tent 2017, a presentation was offered on drafting child protection policies. A presentation on child protection policies was offered at the Mid Council Leaders Gathering in the fall of 2017. It is anticipated that other similar presentations will be offered at future conferences. Such presentations offer guidance concerning how to create policies, policies that can include how to organize dependent care in a safe manner.

   During the 222nd General Assembly (2016), Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons announced that the PC(USA), in partnership with the Insurance Board, had established a Helpline that is staffed by experts from Praesidium. Informational brochures and magnets on the Helpline were passed out to commissioners and attendees, and were distributed at other events such as Big Tent. One of the functions of the Helpline is that councils can seek information on how to develop policies, such as child protection policies. Callers can also access the Insurance Board’s Workbench where they can find resources to help create policies (https://www.insuranceboard.org/safety-resources/safeconduct-workbench/).

   The networks of the Presbyterian Health Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA) also provide good resources in this area, in particular the page “Presbyterians for Disability Concerns” https://www.presbyterianmission.org/ministries/phewa/pdc/. That webpage includes resources such as Congregational Audit of Disability Accessibility & Inclusion and Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities (2006).

   The PHEWA website also offers a connection to four consultants in the areas of visual disabilities, hearing, mobility and accessibility, and developmental disabilities. These consultants are available to resource councils who may assistance in drafting dependent care policies that include care for persons who are disabled.

   Recommendation. To Establish the Goal of Achieving, in a Reasonable Period of Time, a 5:1 Salary Ratio Between the Highest-Paid and Lowest-Paid Employees of the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA), Beginning with New PMA Positions, Understanding This to Be a Partial Return to Earlier Policy and a Practical Embodiment of Missional Solidarity—From the Presbytery of Newton (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 41, 44, 262 of the print copy, 617–21 of the electronic copy).

   Response: As of 12/11/2017, the ratio between the highest and lowest paid employee stands at 5.31 percent. This is a decrease from the June 2016 ratio of 6.04 percent. The PMA will continue its efforts to reach a 5:1 ratio.

   Recommendation 1. Direct the Six Agencies of the General Assembly to Have Their Leadership Meet Twice a Year to Collaborate and Improve Their Cultural Proficiency (or Comparable Initiative) Goals and Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency initially interpreted this referral as a request for the senior leadership of each General Assembly agency to confer. Following conversations with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, the intent of the referral was clarified as a request for the staff in each agency who work in the area of cultural humility to collaborate twice each year. As a result of this initial misunderstanding, focused collaboration with all six agencies has not yet occurred. The Presbyterian Mission Agency will take the lead and make this a high priority for the first quarter of 2018.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency regularly partners closely with the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., on cultural proficiency efforts, including plan development, training, and initiatives.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency’s 2016–17 Cultural Humility Implementation Plan is available to all employees through Center Net, our internal communications site. Announcements and articles are run periodically throughout the year about educational offerings with a reminder that the Plan is posted and available to all employees. A hard copy of the Plan is given to employees during our Staff Development Day, where a mandatory educational workshop on a specific cultural humility/antiracism topic is held.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB) currently has a liaison relationship with the advocacy committees, which sends one of its members to the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) as a full member, and which receives the chair (or designee) of ACREC and ACWC as a PMAB corresponding members. This provision fulfills Recommendations 2 and 3, not only in the years during which the PMA is reviewed, but at all times.

In order that this General Assembly mandate be remembered into the future, a section will be added to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Manual of Operations outlining this requirement.

Response: PMA started a race audit through two inquiries.

- Inquiry 1—2017 Employee survey with a race audit portion on the topics of: a-recruitment, b-training and leadership development, c-workplace values, d-discrimination and harassment and leadership, e-supervisors and human resources.

The PMA formed a Race Audit team to study these two inquiries. It was purposefully formed without a majority ethnicity and with other factors of diversity for differing perspectives.

As of the time of this writing (December 2017), we are continuing to study the responses to Inquiry 1 and 2. The data thus far has not shown structural racism in our policies or practices. However, there are signs that further work is needed:

- In 2010, 20 percent of PMA staff reported experiencing some form of discrimination. In 2017, only 5 percent reported that experience. Five percent is still a significant number we need to address.
- There is indication that white staff feel more valued by their colleagues than staff members of color.

Therefore, the Race Audit work will continue into 2018.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the ministries of Compassion, Peace and Justice (CPJ), has made “Choosing to Be a Church Committed to the Gospel of Matthew 25” a major priority since the last assembly.

In order to fulfill the mandate and develop a “cycle of social engagement,” CPJ organized and coordinated all of its work around four priority areas directly connected to the initiative: Environmental Justice and Creation Care; Human Rights, Dignity and Racial Justice; Advocacy, Peace, and Reconciliation; Poverty, Hunger, and Disaster Response. CPJ also recognizes that this response is core to the church’s mission and cannot be accomplished in a two-year time frame. There are challenges facing society that demand ongoing and sustained efforts in order to fully develop a “cycle of social engagement.” There are also several initiatives emerging in the church and the broader ecumenical and interfaith community that call the church to continue its engagement in “Choosing to Be a Church Committed to the Gospel of Matthew 25,” including the “Hands and Feet” initiative launched by the Office of the General Assembly, http://oga.pcusa.org/section/ga/hands-and-feet/ and the “Poor Peoples’ Campaign,” https://poorpeoplescampaign.org. As a result, CPJ will continue in its efforts to deepen its engagement and its response to this request over the next two years.

The outline below offers some examples of CPJ’s efforts to engage the church and partners in “Choosing to Be a Church Committed to the Gospel of Matthew 25.”

Confronting Racism

- Hosted Compassion, Peace, and Justice Training Day—More than 270 people attended based on the theme, “Confronting Chaos, Forging Community” that focused on the challenges of, and solutions to, racism, materialism and militarism. Some of the relevant plenary and workshop topics were:
  - Police/citizen relations and mass incarceration in low income communities
  - Urban ministry
  - Refugee and immigration ministry
  - “White Folk Work”: equipping white people to intervene in racism in our daily lives
  - Addressing the impact of environmental injustice in low-income and communities of color

  This gathering was followed by Ecumenical Advocacy Days (EAD) that focused on the same theme. EAD is a three-day event that includes advocacy visits to members of Congress. For the fifth year in a row, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) had the largest percentage of participants across the ecumenical community. Plans are underway for the 2018 gathering that will focus on “A World Uprooted: Responding to Migrants, Refugees, and Displaced People.”

- Created a new ministry position to work with Racial Ethnic and Women’s ministry racial justice staff to facilitate trainings and other events that confront racism and white privilege.

- Supported Charlottesville and other communities impacted by racially motivated public violence events. Provided grant support and training opportunities to presbyteries in Freedom Rising responses.

- Facilitated antiracism/Beloved Community trainings in N.J., Tex., Ky., Ohio. These trainings were designed to engage Presbyteries, faith communities, and seminaries to gain both awareness and proactivity in addressing issues of race, as well as examine issues of privilege.

- Facilitated an Education Roundtable (Educate a Child), bringing together Presbyterians concerned about education to conceptualize and develop an “Education Covenant” to be used in congregations to address issues of racism and concentrated poverty in public schools.

Environmental Concerns

- Engaged ExxonMobil, Marathon Petroleum, Noble Energy, Valero, AES Corporation, Dominion Energy, and numerous other oil and gas companies in dialogue around their corporate responsibility in implementing stronger environmentally responsible practices.

Led climate justice travel study seminars to Guatemala, Costa Rica, and Madagascar to help Presbyterians learn about environmental challenges and the impact of climate change in a global context. Met with impacted communities, expressed PC(USA) solidarity with efforts, and shared their stories with the larger church.

Began conversations with Presbyterian leadership in Puerto Rico and other VOAD (voluntary organizations active in disasters) partners concerning the most appropriate response to Hurricane Maria, including ways that solar power and sustainable food production can be incorporated into the long-term recovery.

Working in collaboration with partners in Flint, produced the Flint Water Crisis documentary, developed a strategic release and distribution of the documentary to facilitate congregational/community engagement with Flint and broader issues around water.

Advocating for the Dispossessed

Ongoing advocacy with and for disadvantaged, marginalized, and oppressed communities:

- Provided advocacy trainings to interested Presbyterians and issued more than thirty action alerts related to legislation that impacts the poor, including tax reform, the federal budget, healthcare, disaster recovery funds, human trafficking immigration, climate change, payday lending, the North America Free Trade Agreement, the DREAM Act, and refugee resettlement.
- Advocated for criminal justice reform to reduce mandatory minimum sentencing, abuses of prosecutorial discretion, use of for-profit prisons seeking more inmates, and over-sentencing of nonviolent drug offenders.
- Provided grants that enable partner organizations to work on engaging investors, civil society organizations, and corporations on their work addressing environmental sustainability and work on global economic justice and human rights.
- Engaged in advocacy with Phillips 66, a lead operator in the Dakota Access Pipeline, to create a publicly disclosed human rights policy, which they did in fall 2017. There is ongoing dialogue and monitoring to determine the how well they implement the policy.
- Worked with the Interfaith Working Group on Foreign Assistance and the Interfaith Working Group and Trade and Investment and Jubilee USA engaging in direct advocacy as well as providing education and advocacy opportunities to Presbyterians on issues concerning foreign assistance, fair trade, and debt relief and corporate responsibility.

○ Supported the Coalition of Immokalee Workers in promoting their call to action and the Wendy’s boycott.

○ Provided financial support to ecumenical partners as they addressed the Rohingya crisis in Myanmar and neighboring countries.

○ Engaged in advocacy with poor, marginalized, and oppressed communities in the Joining Hands Against Hunger as they work to change structures and systems that are unjust.

○ Worked alongside community leaders in Flint, Michigan, as they responded to the water crisis. Developed a documentary.

○ Supported projects with street vendors, community garden organizations working in food deserts, workers’ rights organizations, low-income housing initiatives, job training initiatives, reentry programs for people leaving prison, including:

  — Popular Union of Street Vendors in Los Angeles, Calif., an immigrant-led group that fights to defend their rights in order to overcome poverty and homelessness through self-management and cooperative economy.

  — Southside Worker Center in Tucson, Ariz. This project was started by day laborers who gathered at Southside Presbyterian Church. The immigrant led organization has grown to such an extent that the members see a need to train emerging leaders. The project provided stipends for persons who led the training as well as provided food and childcare for the training sessions.

  — Alianza Agricola, which serves the needs of undocumented immigrant farmworkers in Western New York. Their primary aim is to advocate for legislation for access to driver’s licenses to provide greater mobility for undocumented residents of New York.

  — South Sudanese Bead/Basket Project, Minn. The project makes and sells culturally traditional beaded baskets to generate income for the economically poor Sudanese refugees.

  — Refugee Driver Education Program in Rochester, N.Y. To obtain driver licenses for refugees that have little or no access to a car or an instructor.

Response: This referral is answered by “The Doctrine of Discovery: A Review of Its Origins and Implications for Congregations in the PC(USA) and Support for Native American Sovereignty.” (See Item 10-13.)

Response: “World Day of Prayer for the Care of Creation” is included in the 2017–2018 Presbyterian Planning Calendar on September 1. Web links to resources (pcusa.org/earthday, pcusa.org/eco-journey) are also published in planning notes in the same calendar.

Response: Between July 1, 2016, [following conclusion of the 222nd General Assembly (2016)] and July 31, 2017, the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office of Communications has collected and disseminated across multiple agencies and channels 133 stories about congregations, mid councils, other organizations and individuals about dismantling racism. These stories have been shared and have appeared 928 separate times across a variety of platforms, including social media (Facebook, Twitter), print publications (Presbyterians Today, Mission Crossroads, Racial Ethnic Torch), Presbyterian News Service, web and blog sites (www.presbyterianmission.org, www.pcusa.org, facing-racism.pcusa.org), and through 19 separate e-newsletters. A complete listing of these stories is available upon request.

Response: Following the conclusion of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), directors of communications for the six church agencies began development of a communications plan to share antiracism resources with the church. A copy of the communications plan is available on request. The goal of the campaign was to equip the PC(USA) to work toward addressing and ending racial injustice by providing mid councils, congregations, and Presbyterian-affiliated institutions with free access to antiracism resources. Principal tactics included developing new PC(USA) resources or repurposing existing resources, creation of a new website to function as the repository for these resources and a series of bimonthly email installments sent to our primary audiences: congregations, mid councils, and Presbyterian-affiliated organizations.

With participation from all six agencies of the church, the electronic campaign was launched in March 2017 and continued through March 2018, leading up to the 223rd General Assembly (2018). The plan called for themed communications utilizing multiple digital platforms to share antiracism resources. With support through social media, the campaign was delivered in a series of e-mails sent every two months for a total of seven installments with the following themes:

1. PC(USA) Policy: Facing Racism (March 21, 2017)
2. The Confession of Belhar (May 22, 2017)
3. Race, Reconciliation, and Reformation (July 17, 2017)
4. Doctrine of Discovery (September 21, 2017)
5. Immigration and Refugees (November 27, 2017)
6. Resources Throughout the Church (January 22, 2018)
7. Reparations (March 19, 2018)
Additionally, on August 16, 2017, an extra Facing Racism email installment was added in order to share resources in a timely way following violent protests in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Resources were made available in Spanish and Korean where possible.

This report—created in August 2017, about midway through the yearlong effort—uses statistics from the first three installments of the campaign.

The website www.FacingRacism.org, created especially for this effort, served as the hub for antiracism resources. All electronic communications linked back to this website.

The campaign delivered access to antiracism resources via e-mails sent to 6,700 congregations, 307 mid council representatives, and 19 Presbyterian-affiliated organizations. Analytics for the first five months of the campaign show an average mid council email open rate of nearly 50 percent (well above the industry standard of 27 percent). The open rate among emails sent to congregations averaged 30 percent.

The emails linked to the campaign website resulted in nearly 10,000 page visits over the first five months of this effort. The campaign picked up more than 500 “organic” subscribers through the website.

We expanded access to antiracism resources using each agency’s social media channels (Facebook and Twitter). Analytics for the first five months show the campaign delivered approximately 72,000 impressions with 300 shares.

News of each bimonthly theme was also shared in story coverage by the Presbyterian News Service. The promotional effort also included a story about the campaign in numerous e-newsletters among all six agencies.

Themes and resources for this campaign were developed by the six agency directors of communications with input from the coordinator for racial and intercultural justice, the manager for diversity and reconciliation, and other national church staff members.

Response: This referral was approved with a comment limiting its scope and directing the Presbyterian Mission Agency “to explore how translations can be produced utilizing volunteers from around the church.”

Since 2013, the Presbyterian Mission Agency has had two translators on staff (one Spanish-language, one Korean-language) whose jobs are to manually translate “essential documents,” principally for the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly. Congregational Ministries Publishing (part of the Presbyterian Mission Agency) also has Spanish- and Korean-language translators on their staff who work exclusively on curriculum.

From time to time, requests come in to the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office of Communications for translations of specific documents or resources into languages other than Spanish or Korean. In some cases, native or fluent speakers who do other ministry work on staff, or volunteers, handle the translation work (such as translating Presbyterians Today’s Advent and Lenten devotionals into Taiwanese, Chinese, and other east Asian languages, or translating grant application request forms and agreements into French). In other cases, we have helped individual offices and ministries to contract with professional translators for specific assignments.

We recognize and concur that there is no substitute for human translation to capture the nuances of language, especially given the important and unique terminology specific to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the cultural subtleties of the many constituencies that we serve. In 2014, the Presbyterian Mission Agency responded to Referral Item 16-07, Recommendation 5, from the 2012 General Assembly. At that time, we answered that we lacked sufficient financial resources to translate all communications into numerous languages. The cost implications of that referral amounted to approximately $1.3 million per year for translations into just four languages: Spanish, Korean, French, and Portuguese. This was predicated on hiring, in addition to the one Korean and one Spanish translators already on staff, fifteen additional full-time translation staff: 3 Spanish, 3 Korean, 4 French, 4 Portuguese, a project manager, and one freelancer.

These financial constraints have not changed. Accordingly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office of Communications continues to explore ways to offer translations of more communications into different foreign languages, and test these options when possible. In 2017, for example, we added a free Google Translate button on presbyterianmission.org web pages, stories and blogs. While Google translations tend to be very literal and may be only 50–60 percent accurate, users can select from... among more than 100 languages to instantly translate the entire web page. At present, Google’s system relies on a very large database of prior translations and statistical algorithms to determine a possible translation of a given text. We readily acknowledge that this is the leading edge of an emerging technology and that it is often useful to get only a general sense of the document in another language. Google Translate can fail (sometimes dramatically) to convey the underlying meaning that the writer is trying to get across. Yet, thanks to artificial intelligence and a community of fluent and native speakers who voluntarily edit and correct translated output, Google Translate continues to improve. While Google Translate in its present form is not ideal to meet our church’s needs, we have attempted to show good faith and respect to our non-English-speaking constituents by offering it as an interim measure.

At the July 2017 Big Tent, the Presbyterian Mission Agency and Office of the General Assembly worked together with software provider TheoTech to provide real-time translation services via its spf.io (pronounced “spiffy-oh”) online application to deliver real-time captions and translations of events to projection screens and mobile devices. Spanish, Korean, and English subtitles were offered to all Big Tent attendees. This tool displayed the text of prepared content like song lyrics and presentation slides, and it also translated the spoken word (as subtitle text or speech interpretation) in real time. Translations through spf.io rely on artificial intelligence technology and the latest tools from Google Translate and Microsoft Translate to process language, learning new idioms and voices along the way, in more than fifty languages. The Big Tent planning team was pleased with this first effort, and the Office of the General Assembly plans to use it again in St. Louis at the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

In response to this referral, the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office of Communications also consulted with Hispanic and Korean Presbyterian caucuses and the Advisory Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) to ask specifically about their views on working with a network of volunteers. The consensus from these groups is that it would not be advisable to use volunteers to do translations. They reason that even though volunteers would be well-meaning and probably enthusiastic, it is more important to have culturally-sensitive translations that accurately convey the underlying meaning of the source text. In addition, they feel that language inclusiveness is important and therefore the church should make good, professional translation a priority. They also believe, especially regarding Spanish, that the variety of local vocabulary variations depending on the translator’s country of origin would create confusion. Finally, from a logistical perspective, we also feel that it could prove difficult (and possibly expensive) to manage a widespread network of volunteers, exercise control over deadlines, deal with a complex flow of documents for translation/review/proofreading, and maintain adequate quality control.

We have also explored the use of outside, professional translation services to supplement the work of our staff translators. For example, the Board of Pensions has worked successfully with a firm in Los Angeles that does translation from and to English from some fifty different languages. The Board of Pensions reports that the firm’s work improved significantly as they learned the church’s specialized terminology. This firm’s charges are based on English word count. Translations into Spanish (and other romance languages) cost 20 cents per word, Korean is 35 cents per word, and other languages range from 20 to 40 cents per word. Clearly, it would be very expensive to translate “all communications” into multiple languages, but a service like this if used judiciously to supplement the output of our staff translators might be considered. We plan to try this service as an alternative to contract freelancers who cover for staff translators when they are unavailable.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office of Communications is committed to actively exploring and testing, as financially feasible within existing budgets, alternate means of bringing quality translations to the church, but we submit moving to a volunteer model is not a good solution. There is still a need for translation services in the church.

They correlate to the longer response to another referral from 2012, 11-16, which led to the creation of a resource for all Sunday Schools and Child Care or Nursery Programs: https://www.presbyterianmission.org/wp-content/uploads/pcan-child-safe-church.pdf.

We Won’t Let It Happen Here: Creating a Child Safe Church

A Project of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) & the Presbyterian Child Advocacy Network (PCAN), A Network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA)

Response: The process of engagement has resulted in a December 2017 trip by leaders in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), exploring partnering presently taking place, and opportunities for further partnership.

Response: The Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations of the 222nd General Assembly (2016) also asked the General Assembly Standing Committee of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interereligious Relationships (GACEIR) to develop a theological rationale to support interfaith relationships in order to encourage Presbyterians to enter into interfaith relationships with confidence. The GACEIR has intentionally drafted a document that confesses the history of Christian Domination and Supremacy Over Other Religions referenced specifically in this referral. Their document, if approved by the 223rd General Assembly (2018), will provide the theological foundation to encourage all Presbyterians to enter into family relationships, friendships, local interfaith partnerships, regional advocacy efforts, and national and international missional efforts in a way that prepares them to be good partners in such efforts. This document will be presented to and acted on by the GACEIR at its January meeting, and if adopted will be available following that meeting. The staff person for Interfaith Formation consistently engages with interfaith partners to support grassroots organizing efforts. Examples include the interfaith clergy witness at Standing Rock, ND in the fall of 2016 (attended by Sara Lisherness and Rick Ufford-Chase) and interfaith relief work with the Muslim community in Puerto Rico in December 2017.

Response: PMA staff responsible for Interfaith Formation have been laying the groundwork for sharing best practices across mid councils, particularly as those practices relate to interfaith organizing efforts to respond to the dramatic rise in incidences of bias and hate crimes since the 222nd General Assembly (2016). By the meeting of the 223rd General Assembly (2018), the staff expects to have a process in place to share resources and training among mid councils that wish to deepen their work on these issues. Recognizing that such resources are readily available in larger metro areas, but often are lacking in smaller cities and rural areas, this effort seeks to model the effective work in the Presbytery of Carlisle, where Presbyterians have been key partners in developing proactive, interfaith, volunteer-based responses to incidences of religious intolerance.

and Individual Churches. (We Request That These Resources Be from the PC(USA) and Not Just Direction to Other Denominational Resources)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) (Minutes, 2014, Part I, pp.40, 43, 531–3; pp. 231–32 of the print copy 2).

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency maintains a web page called Creating Safe Ministries that includes a variety of resources, including information on creating child/youth protection policies and procedures: https://www.presbyterianmission.org/legal-resources/creating-safe-ministries/.

Included on that web page is information about a Helpline that former Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons, the Office of the General Assembly, and the Presbyterian Mission Agency developed in partnership with the Insurance Board. The Helpline was announced and brochures were delivered to commissioners during the 222nd General Assembly (2016). Councils can contact the Helpline for assistance through Praesidium, a nationally recognized leader that provides advice to organizations concerning policies and procedures to protect children. The Safe Ministries web page includes a link to the Insurance Board’s Workbench where councils can get a free assessment and find a tool to help create child protection policies: https://www.insuranceboard.org/safety-resources/safeconduct-workbench/. All PC(USA) councils are eligible to utilize the Workbench through the partnership with the Insurance Board.

During the 222nd General Assembly (2016), in Item 3-NB, the assembly directed the Office of the General Assembly “to form a task force made up of representatives from mid councils and local governing bodies to work with congregations on implementing child/youth/vulnerable adults protection policies and appropriate responses.” The Task Force for Safe and Sacred Space was created in June 2017. Presbyterian Mission Agency staff are working with the Office of the General Assembly and the task force to help congregations implement child/youth/vulnerable adult protection policies: http://oga.pcusa.org/section/ga/222nd-general-assembly-2016/task-force-safe-and-sacred-space/

Presentations on how to create child/youth protection policies were made by staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly at the Big Tent in St. Louis (2017), and at the Mid Council Leaders Gathering (2017).

Response: The Office of Korean Intercultural Congregational Support in Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries met with the Coordinating Committee for Korean American Presbyteries in March 2017, including Presbyterian Mission Agency and Office of General Assembly staff. In August 2017, the Korean Intercultural Congregational Support office contacted the 16 synods to provide information on this G.A. referral and urge them to support and strengthen the existing system between the Korean non-geographic presbyteries, including educating and sharing cultures and customs with each other and engaging in community building with one another. The Office of Korean Intercultural Congregational Support in the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of Korean-Speaking Councils Support in the Office of the General Assembly shared with these mid-councils that they are able to serve as resources to assist synods and non-geographic presbyteries in strengthening relationships one another.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency lifted up the heritage and history of Korean Americans through joint worship services and events, such as the March 2017 meeting of the Coordinating Committee for Korean American Presbyteries in Louisville in March 2017, where the heritage of Korean Americans was lifted up in worship. PMA and OGA staff also traveled to Seoul, Korea, to participate in the 46th Annual Meeting of the National Caucus of Korean Presbyterian Churches (NCKPC), and joined in worships, meetings, wrote and posted news articles, and visited with denominational and mission partners. Approximately thirty other events and worship services with non-Korean were also held in 2017.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations, in consultation with the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness, has worked with the Israel-Palestine working group at the United Nations, highlighting especially the needs and well-being of children. Defense for Children International Palestine is a partner in the work. The Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations and the Working Group also hosted a listening lunch during the United Nations commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the Occupation.

Response: Presbyterian World Mission continues to develop and strengthen its partnerships with churches in the Middle East, principally with the Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Egypt, the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon (NESSL), the Presbyterian Church of Iraq, and the Presbyterian Church of Iran, as well as with the Lutheran and Anglican churches in Israel-Palestine (among others), the Middle East Council of Churches, and the Fellowship of Middle East Evangelical Churches. This is expressed through regular visits, including a leadership visit to the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon in March 2017 led by Co-Moderator Jan Edmiston and PMA Interim Executive Director Tony DeLa Rosa, and a leadership visit to Christian partners in Israel-Palestine planned for Advent 2017, led by the Stated Clerk.

Our embedded staff in the region, Steve Gorman, formerly in Cairo (until November 2016), Elmarie Parker in Beirut and working with NESSL, and Kate Taber, soon to be succeeded by Doug Dicks, in Jerusalem facilitate many of these visits, helping to make the region accessible to congregations, mid-councils, partnerships networks and interested individuals. They do this both practically (assisting with arrangements) and through interpreting the experience (helping people to understand the joys and concerns of our partners, and why Christians feel the way they do about their region).

Through our funding programs and with the generous support of Presbyterians, we have been able to expand our support for the Synod of the Nile’s new church development program and continue to contribute to the sustainability of the Presbyterian Church of Iraq, among other things working with them to plan an international partners meeting in 2018 focusing on rebuilding the church’s presence in society. With the Presbyterian Church of Iran, we are developing a program of financial support that will help sustain the presence and witness of their church. As things settle down in Syria and people return to their communities, Presbyterian World Mission (along with Presbyterian Disaster Assistance) are working with NESSL on reconstruction efforts, enabling Christians to return to their homes and take up their lives again.

With our ecumenical partners in the U.S., we have re-launched the Churches Middle East Forum, bringing together the Middle East officers of our principal ecumenical partners to better coordinate our efforts as we journey with and support the churches of the Middle East.

At Big Tent in 2017, we ran a workshop that featured Hadi Ghantous, from NESSL introducing Christian-Muslim relations from a Middle Eastern perspective, highlighting both the opportunities for peaceful coexistence and the trials and challenges Christians in the region face. Building on this, and in cooperation with the Near East School of Theology in Beirut, we are running in July 2018, a two-week intensive course on Christian-Muslim relations that, among other things, will tackle the issue of religiously based radical thought and responses to it.

In 2017, World Mission’s Equipping for Mission Involvement group created a mission toolkit on Muslim-Christian relations that provides educational and liturgical resources for congregations to build bridges with Muslims locally and abroad.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations works to promote these goals with the Israel-Palestine Working Group. The Ministry at the United Nations has also encouraged the support and funding of activities that nurture civil society and strategies for economic development in the Middle East at the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women. It co-hosted an open forum for discussion of these issues with Michael Lynk, UN Special Rapporteur on Palestine.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Office of Faith-Based Investing and Corporate Engagement, has been in communication with the proponent of the overture from the Presbytery of the Redwoods and has sent a letter to the chief executive officer, president, and general counsel of RE/MAX, LLC. The letter includes a commendation of RE/MAX, LLC, for responding favorably to discussions with representatives from the PC(USA) regarding its commitment to take action to ensure RE/MAX, LLC, will no longer receive any income from the sale of Jewish settlement properties in the West Bank or East Jerusalem. The letter also includes a call for RE/MAX, LLC and its franchisees to do everything in its legal and moral power to stop facilitating any sale or rental of properties in Israeli settlement colonies in East Jerusalem and the West Bank.

Response: This referral will be answered by the report with recommendations titled “MRTI Report to Presbyterian Mission Agency and the 223rd General Assembly” (see Item 08-08).

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbytery Church Office of Public Witness, the Office of Immigration Issues in the Office of the General Assembly, and Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, has worked in coalition with Church World Service, as well as other denominations and members of the faith community, to advocate for improvement in refugee resettlement policies and related issues.

In January 2017, the president issued three Executive Orders that called for drastic changes to U.S. immigration and refugee policies with potentially disastrous consequences for refugees and our communities. The Executive Order on refugees called for the immediate 120-day suspension of refugee resettlement and a ban on all travel to the U.S., including humanitarian cases, for Iraqi, Iranian, Syrian, Somali, Sudanese, Yemeni, and Libyan nationalities and drastically reduced refugee admissions. (Iraqis were later removed from this list.) As a result of these Executive Orders, much of the attention of PC(USA) advocacy in 2017 has been to protect and defend the U.S. refugee resettlement program, including a call to end the travel ban, including joining an Amicus Brief in a lawsuit filed in the US District Court.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency has issued action alerts for Presbyterians, signed on to coalition letters to congress and the administration, developed resources for congregations, provided leadership at rallies and protests, and provided leadership at strategy meetings of the interfaith coalitions in order to determine the best possible actions in order to improve the current climate around refugee resettlement, particularly for Muslim refugees. In addition, staff representatives have had meetings with members of congress and the administration in order to advocate for more just policies and increased funding.

The Ecumenical Declaration signed by PC(USA) in February included the call to:

- The president and his Administration to immediately rescind all three immigration-related executive orders, and to affirm the importance of welcoming policies and a robust refugee resettlement program that provides protection to the most vulnerable, regardless of their nationality or religion.
- Members of Congress to do everything in their power to rescind these three executive orders, prevent them from taking effect, and robustly support and fund the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program.
- The Judicial branch to continue to uphold the decisions that block the implementation of these executive orders, including the travelban.
- Each of our communions to organize and facilitate meetings with local, state, and national policymakers to educate them about our collective support and action in solidarity with refugees and immigrants, and urge them to serve as champions by supporting policies that affirm welcome, meeting with their immigrant and refugee constituents, and appropriating adequate resources to serve refugees.

A letter from Stated Clerk on June 5th was part of an interfaith Letter a Day Campaign in honor of World Refugee Day sent to all members of U.S. Congress which included:
... we ask that members of Congress continue to do everything in their power to rescind the actions of the three refugee-related executive orders to prevent them from taking effect. Our desire is that the United States restore its commitment to refugee admission to the levels of more recent times with a minimum goal of 75,000 refugees in Fiscal Year 2018 and to robustly support and fund the U.S. Refugee admissions and resettlement.

... As a body, members of the PC(USA) continue to engage publicly, pushing for greater support locally and nationally for refugees and refugee resettlement. By choosing welcome, we understand our commitment to also challenge any legislation that creates unjust burdens on these populations or creates greater obstacles to seeking resettlement.

The “We Choose Welcome” campaign https://www.presbyterianmission.org/we-choose-welcome/ has continued, with new resources, including the development of a “We Choose Welcome” lawn sign and advocacy alert.

Family unity and reunification have been central messages as well as the need for a generously funded resettlement program.

In addition, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance has recently released two new short documentary films, “Facing the Human Tragedy in Syria” and “To Breathe Free” as educational tools to support outreach to and advocacy by Presbyterians for the end of the Syria conflict and to support refugee resettlement.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness, is a member of the Syrian Refugee Working Group as well as the South Sudan Working Group. Through these working groups as well as broader refugee advocacy coalitions, the office has worked to increase financial support for internally displaced peoples, humanitarian agencies that are working in the Internally Displaced Person (IDP) camps, and increased funding for refugees and IDPs in general. The Office of Public Witness has done this by both grassroots education and advocacy for Presbyterians as well as direct advocacy with congress and the administration through letters and visits. This work has been done in consultation with Presbyterian Disaster Assistance and the Office of Immigrations Issues.

The Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations has been engaged with the Security Council Working Group and Committee of Religious Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) to ask governments to increase refugee access and maintains a relationship with the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) and the U.S. Fund for UNICEF who work to support and deal with trauma of child refugees.

Response: Presbyterian World Mission has worked with its global partners to encourage and support them in their advocacy efforts for change to the systems and situations that cause peoples to be displaced. Some of these efforts cannot be discussed publicly because of the risks people face in this work; however, the following are some examples of the different ways we are working with our partners:

- Due to civil conflict and resulting famine, more than 1 million South Sudanese have been internally displaced or have fled to refugee camps in Uganda. World Mission partners with the Presbyterian Church of South Sudan (PCOSS), the South Sudan Council of Churches, RECONCILE International, and South Sudan Presbyterian Evangelical Church to advocate for a peaceful resolution to the conflict. Our Africa Area Office works with partners on advocacy points and collaborates with the Office of Public Witness and the Presbyterian Ministry at the UN to use government influence for positive change; several OPW action alerts have been issued. The Africa Office has also resourced the South Sudan/Sudan Mission Network in preparing an overture on South Sudan for the upcoming General Assembly.

- We have urged the Presbyterian Church of Myanmar to speak up for the plight of the Rohingya, recognizing that they too, as tribal peoples, have been subject to displacement and forced removal by the military. However, because of their own vulnerability they are hesitant to speak out, which is the reality many of our partners face in such situations.

- In Syria, our partner church is against the violence that has decimated their country and displaced millions of people. However, as a minority community their advocacy only works on the local level, advocating for political solutions that keep their own neighborhoods safe and are now enabling people to return. We have heard of many courageous stories where their interventions have made a difference, and we continue to support these efforts, such as the ‘Space for Hope’ initiative that is enabling Muslims and Christians to rebuild their community in Homs.
strategize with national and international partners for climate mitigation, given the decision by the US administration to cease all participation in the Paris accords.

In 2016–17, World Mission was privileged to accompany the Presbyterian Church of Colombia as it advocated for peace from fifty-two years of guerilla war that displaced millions. Our sister denomination has been a persistent and courageous voice for peace. It recognized the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s faithful accompaniment by inviting World Mission and the Office of General Assembly to join a meeting with President Santos of Colombia to promote the proposed peace accord with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). Also in 2017, mission co-worker Sarah Henken shifted her ministry in Colombia to focus on peace initiatives with the Presbyterian Church of Colombia in collaboration with its peace commission.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness, works through many different ecumenical, interfaith, and nongovernmental organization (NGO) coalitions to advocate for an end to conflicts around the globe and has educated and mobilized Presbyterians to engage in advocacy on numerous conflicts that are displacing people from their homes, particularly Syria, South Sudan, and Israel/Palestine by providing educational resources, action alerts, letters writing initiatives meetings with members of congress and their staff.

As a member and leader in the Steering Committee of the NGO Group on the UN Security Council, the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations works with the United Nations Security Council to end conflicts so that refugees and internally displaced people can safely return home in Sudan, South Sudan, Colombia, Syria, Palestine, Israel, Iraq and other places impacted by human-caused disasters.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through The Office of Public Witness and the Presbyterian Hunger Program, continue to work closely with ecumenical organizations to protect creation, particularly with regards to natural resource extraction and pipeline construction.

In September of 2016, staff from the Office of Native American Intercultural Congregational Support, along with the Office of Public Witness, the Presbyterian Hunger Program, and the Office of Racial and Intercultural Justice, turned their attention to the indigenous leaders’ social movement to protect the water and stop the Dakota Access Pipeline taking place at Standing Rock, North Dakota. The group worked with Elona Street Stewart and Fern Cloud, both from the Synod of Lakes and Prairies, other Native American Presbyterian leaders engaged in the movement, and ecumenical partners concerned for racial and environmental justice. A working group that included staff from the named offices, as well as other Compassion, Peace, and Justice and Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministry staff was created to support the water protectors. An action kit of resources was developed and regularly updated. The kit included ideas for advocacy, action, and prayer. The working group supported a request from the Synod of Lakes and Prairies to help it raise funds that could provide basic needs legal and support for the Standing Rock community. The working group sent action alerts to Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), helped facilitate multiple communications by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to President Obama and the Army Corps of Engineers, and elected officials in North Dakota, and made weekly calls to action to support the effort.

Work in ecumenical coalitions on the national level continues, primarily focused on the Green Climate Fund, the notice to pull out of the 2015 Paris Agreement on Climate Change, and the preservation of newly named national monuments that will protect sacred sites from oil and gas exploration.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will have a delegate to the COP 23 in Bonn, Germany this upcoming fall to continue to strategize with national and international partners for climate mitigation, given the decision by the US administration to cease all participation in the Paris accords.

31. 2016 Referral: Item 09-12, On Advocacy Against Factory Farming. Recommendation 1. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency to Responsibly Advocate in Favor of Humane Treatment of Animals on All Size of Farms. Furthermore, to Promote Environmental Stewardship and Additional Public Regulations Within Reason, Such as CAFO, Which Encourage Minimizing the Impact That Modern Production Practices Have on God’s Beautiful Earth; Acknowledging That Large-Scale Farming Is Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Hunger Program, consulted with the overture writers in the Presbytery of Monmouth, engaged in research, and discussion with several groups around the country to create a Factory Farming webpage (presbyterianmission.org/food-faith/factory_farms) on the Presbyterian Mission Agency Food & Faith Blog, and promoting the same on social media. The page provides background along with a variety of educational articles and analysis on the three areas of the resolution: (1) Humane treatment of animals; (2) Environmental concerns about animal agriculture, including the concerns of ‘fence line’ communities located near factory farms; (3) Support for farmworkers and processing plant workers, people of color farmers, and family farmers and ranchers. Readers are encouraged to subscribe to action alerts from our One Great Hour of Sharing partner, the National Sustainable Agriculture Coalition, for advocacy on related issues.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the efforts of the Presbyterian Hunger Program, encourages grassroots advocacy in collaboration with the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness to support of food chain workers, farmers of color, family farmers, and ranchers notably when called for by our partners, such as Coalition of Immokalee Workers, National Farm Worker Ministry, RAIFI-USA, Farm Labor Organizing Project, Familias Unidas por la Justicia, Migrant Justice, Food Chain Workers Alliance, US Food Sovereignty Alliance, and the National Family Farm Coalition.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Factory Farming webpage, provides a concise collection of background papers and reports, which specify ways that animal farming, when done poorly, negatively impact God’s creation including the climate. The educational material and calls for change from the National Sustainable Agriculture Coalition point us toward ways of producing meat using humane treatment and more sustainable practices.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, has facilitated several conference calls with PMA staff and the STAR (Strategies for Trauma Awareness & Resilience) program. This led to a face-to-face meeting in Washington, D.C., with representatives of STAR, PMA staff, and representatives of four of the five presbyteries named in the Freedom Rising Initiative. The purpose of the meeting was to explore ways that the STAR program might support the presbyteries in their effort to further the Freedom Rising initiative. Several options for STAR support will be offered to the five presbyteries.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through Self-Development of People (SDOP), has been addressing this overture through engagement, resourcing, relationship building, and strategy. Some of the issues presented in Item 10-03 are centered around many of the maladies facing African American males such as mass incarceration at high levels, School-to-prison pipeline, and issues centered around unemployment and poverty—all of which are issues also addressed in SDOP’s work.

One example is recent work in Cleveland, one of the identified “Freedom Rising” cities. Self-Development of People staff in conjunction with members of the Presbytery of the Western Reserve’s Race Action Network, strategized, planned, and initiated presbytery- and synod-wide event to provide opportunities for education, conversation, and engagement in the issues surrounding Freedom Rising. The planning team, which consisted of members of both SDOP, Presbytery of Western Reserve, and the Race Action Network, created a four-day intensive event called Seasons of Justice (March 24–27th, 2017). The event was a combination of awareness-raising of many of the issues facing African American males and relationship building. The gathering included workshops that addressed race, poverty, education, and mass incarceration, a viewing and discussion of the film 1/3, panel conversations, and talkback conversations with educators, social workers, and leaders. One of the Co-Moderators, the Reverend Denise Anderson led one of the conversation sessions.

This work has created an ongoing generative relationship with the Presbytery of Western Reserve that addresses many of the key issues facing African American men and boys. Plans are underway to engage with mid councils in the five cities mentioned and other areas where African American men face challenges in living out futures of self-determination. In doing so, SDOP hopes to lift-up some of the work of its community partners to encourage and connect presbytery leaders, congregations, and others that are directly involved with issues that affect African American men and boys to the mission and development work of SDOP. Through community education events, workshops, and strategic conversations and planning with mid council leaders, we are working to be a resource for the church in addressing these issues.

SDOP has also lifted-up its community partner models that address these issues by:

- Creating awareness about restorative justice issues and mass incarceration.
- Conducting workshops and activities designed to help people learn more about the needs of those who are reentering society.
- Providing examples of community partners who are doing constructive and innovative work in addressing the issues of re-entry and recidivism connected to mass incarceration.
- Engaging with the Prison Partnership Program, which has worked in Sing Sing and other correctional facilities.
- Providing healthy examples of community partners that focus on ways that those reentering society can once again be useful and productive members of their communities (i.e. advocacy, job training skills, education etc.).

Response: Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries sponsored leadership institutes in the summer and fall of 2017, including a New Immigrant Clergywomen’s Leadership Institute, a Women of Color Consultation, and a Young Adult New Immigrant Leadership Institute. Racial ethnic & women’s leadership institutes were established as a ministry of Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries in 2010. Several of the participants have assumed leadership roles with even greater responsibility, having been elected to General Assembly committees, become national agency staff, received national church awards, and called as pastors and heads of staff of congregations. Our goal is for the leadership institutes to impact more racial ethnic and women leaders in the church at large, so that they will have opportunities to serve fully in ministry and leadership.

Response: Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries, through the office of Women’s Leadership Development & Young Women’s Ministries, provided and supported opportunities for women of color to attend events and conferences in 2016 and 2017, such as the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, Ecumenical Advocacy Days, the Women of Color Consultation, and the Racial Ethnic & New Immigrant Seminarians’ Conference. Women have also participated in racial ethnic & women’s leadership institutes. Though leadership institutes are a significant ministry in Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries, there are many leadership development opportunities each year for racial ethnic persons and women, including the Asian Leadership Study Program, antiracism and cultural humility Trainings, intercultural conferences, Presbyterian Intercultural Young Adult Network conferences, Hispanic/Latino-a Continuing Education Seminar, Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Coaches Training, as well as other trainings and professional development event.

Response: A statement defining “missional” and outlining missional living has been drafted and will be posted on the PC(USA) website (to be put on the TFE page of the website; arrangements for that are being made). Initiatives to education members of this church in our call to participate in God’s mission in the world are underway in the Vital Congregations initiative, the 1001 New Worshipping Communities movement, the widely used Engage resources. The Office of Evangelism is developing new missional strategies in cooperation with Greater Atlanta and Pittsburgh presbyteries; it is launching new initiatives through the Vital Congregations program with Newark, Trinity, San Jose, Grand Canyon and de Cristo presbyteries. The Evangelism Office, working with Research Services, has also prepared a tool for congregational self-assessment on a variety of metrics, which is available here: https://www.presbyterianmission.org/resource/vital-congregations-immediate-toolkit/.
38. 2016 Referral: Item 10-11. A Resolution to Contribute to a Proactive, Health-Giving Ministry to and Relationship with Our Clergywomen. Recommendation 1. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) to Design, Create, and Bring to Fruition Four Annual Regional Gatherings of Clergywomen Across the United States to Address Reoccurring Themes Within the Women’s Listening Visits, Including, But Not Limited to, Leadership Development; Peer Support for New Clergywomen (Including Second-Career Clergywomen [Not Age-Specific]); Mentoring; Pay Equity; Call Process; and Networking—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 41, 44, 261 of the print copy, 614–15 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Office of Women’s Leadership Development and Young Women’s Ministries in Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries held several events gathering clergywomen and other women, particularly women of color. We planned conferences and also determined that it would be beneficial and cost-effective to partner with groups in the church who held events for clergywomen in 2017. One event was the Women of Color Consultation on July 31 to August 2, 2017, in Daytona Beach, Florida, where women addressed reoccurring themes within the Women’s Listening Visits, including leadership development, peer support, mentoring, and networking. A joint event, also held in Daytona Beach, Florida, on August 1–3, 2017, was the New Immigrant Clergywomen’s Leadership Institute, which addressed navigating the call process, performance management, interviewing skills, as well as leadership development, peer support, mentoring, networking and pay equity. Additional women’s listening visits in 2017 include visits at the 2017 National Korean Presbyterian Women Gathering, Presbyterian Women’s 2017 Summer Gathering of the Synod of Mid-Atlantic, National Asian Presbyterian Council Meeting at the Big Tent, Intercultural Pre-Conference at the Big Tent, and the National Black Presbyterian Caucus 2017 Convention. A listening visit will also be held at the Presbyterian Women Churchwide Gathering on August 2–5, 2018, in Louisville, Kentucky.

Response: The Office of Women’s Leadership Development and Young Women’s Ministries in Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries partnered with Research Services, the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, and Presbyterian Women and extended women’s listening groups, including voices of racial ethnic women, in 2017. There were fourteen women’s listening visits held in 2017, including visits at the 2017 National Korean Presbyterian Women Gathering, Presbyterian Women’s 2017 Summer Gathering of the Synod of Mid-Atlantic, National Asian Presbyterian Council Meeting at the Big Tent, Intercultural Pre-Conference at the Big Tent, and the National Black Presbyterian Caucus 2017 Convention. Additionally, there were four listening visits held at the Women of Color Consultation and four held at the New Immigrant Clergywomen’s Leadership Institute. In the fall of 2018, additional women’s listening visits will be held in a rural setting, in the Midwest, on the west coast, and at the Presbyterian Women Churchwide Gathering on August 2–5, 2018, in Louisville, Kentucky.

40. 2016 Referral: Item 10-11. A Resolution to Contribute to a Proactive, Health-Giving Ministry to and Relationship with Our Clergywomen. Recommendation 3. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) to Create a Virtual Work Group Comprised of One Member of the Women’s Ministry Staff, One Member of Research Services Staff, at Least Two Members of the Status of Women Team, and Two Members of ACWC to Review and Respond with Action Steps Addressing the Needs of Clergywomen Across the PC(USA) as Articulated Within the Gender and Leadership in the PC(USA) Survey Conducted in 2015—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 41, 44, 261 of the print copy, 614–15 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Office of Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries created a virtual work group comprised of the following persons: the Reverend Rhashell Hunter, director of Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries and member of the Study on the Status of Women Team; Angie Andriot, research associate in Research Services and member of the Study on the Status of Women Team; the Reverend Elizabeth Hinson-Hasty, Study on the Status of Women Team; the Reverend Susie Carter Wiggins, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns; and Elder Wanda Beauman, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns and vice moderator for Justice and Peace Concerns for Presbyterian Women, Inc. The work group reviewed the Gender and Leadership/Study on the Status of Women research project and responded with action steps to address the needs of PC(USA) clergywomen. These action steps include Women’s Listening Visits planned by Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries that focus on the experience of women of color and women in different geographic areas in the nation; development of educational resources that are accessible to the church, including plans for a Theo Academy series in Korean, Spanish and English; an online Woman Church Syllabus and liturgical material; consideration of a theological resource on women’s experience and theology for the church. The overall target date for all resources to be developed is the 224th General Assembly (2024), which marks the 100th anniversary of women achieving the right to vote. Additionally, the Gender and Leadership Survey was the central focus of a workshop entitled What if the Women Left? Shattering and Reframing the Stained Glass Ceiling offered at the Big Tent 2017.
in St. Louis, Missouri. Nearly thirty women and men attended the workshop. Those in attendance discussed the best way to move forward to eliminate discriminatory practices in the church.

Response: A meeting of the six agencies occurred on October 27, 2017. Representatives from each agency envisioned collaboratively creating and sharing the expense of a new leadership development opportunity for PC(USA) clergywomen who are newly ordained, second-career, racial ethnic, and those who desire to serve at administrative and executive levels. The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Office of Racial Ethnic Leadership Development & Recruitment and the Office of Women’s Leadership Development & Young Women’s Ministries, will gather the agency representatives together in 2018 to continue the vision for creating and sharing the expense of a clergywomen’s leadership institute in the summer of 2019. Additionally, the Board of Pensions and Presbyterian Foundation are working on expanding offerings to provide new opportunities specifically for clergywomen.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness, has continued to distribute and promote the update of “We Shall Not Be Moved,” a guide to election protection and action to advance voter rights. The Office of Public Witness also participated in the Jericho March for Voting Rights and Criminal Justice Reform at the Supreme Court Friday, June 23rd, 2017.

On June 23rd, just days before the four-year anniversary of Shelby v. Holder—the Supreme Court decision that gutted the Voting Rights Act—interfaith leaders gathered at the Supreme Court to protest voter suppression policies that seek to disenfranchise seniors, college students, and communities of color. Religious leaders also called on Attorney General Jeff Sessions to rescind his call for federal prosecutors to seek harsher sentences for drug-related offenses.

43. 2016 Referral: Item 11-16. On Equipping and Mobilizing Member Congregations to Better Serve Those Living with HIV/AIDS. Recommendation 2. Instruct the Presbyterian Mission Agency to Work with the Presbyterian AIDS Network (PAN) to Coordinate a Development Strategy and Activities to Raise the Following Revenue to Support These Initiatives: $150,000 Over a Three-Year Period to Be Utilized to Operationalize This Initiative—From the Presbytery of National Capital (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 53, 56, 276 of the print copy, 729–32 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency encourages congregations, mid councils, and concerned Presbyterians to use existing methods of fundraising to address this concern. Since 2006, the Presbyterian Mission Agency has encouraged congregations to use all or part of the portion of the Peace and Global Witness Offering retained locally toward causes related to HIV/AIDS. This can be done by supporting the work of the Presbyterian AIDS Network or another HIV/AIDS ministry that is in a partnership relationship with the PC(USA). Materials produced for PC(USA) World AIDS Sunday, designated by the Stated Clerk in response to another action of the 222nd General Assembly (2016) and for World AIDS Day (December 1), encourage financial support for ministries engaged in addressing HIV/AIDS.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Church Office of Public Witness, working in coalition with the Washington Interfaith Staff Community Working Group on Trafficking, has advocated on issues around child soldiers particularly addressing documentation in the State Department Trafficking in Persons report. The Office of Public Witness continues to advocate with congress and the administration for the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on Children in Armed Conflict. The Optional Protocol aims to protect children from recruitment as soldiers and other forms of abuse in hostilities.

The Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations continues to work with Presbyterians to participate in the Red Hands Campaign against the use of child soldiers. As part of the campaign, red hands are collected and sent along with an accompanying letter encouraging UN member states who have not yet ratified the Optional Protocol to take action.
Response: Since 2016, the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment has incorporated labor practices into its Guideline Metrics developed in 2017 and used to evaluate all engagements with corporations. The metrics include sections on “environmental, social, and governance” (ESG) issues that are high priorities for faith-based and values-based investors when engaging corporations. Some of the measurements include whether companies have human rights policies in place; how robust human rights policies are; how are human rights policies implemented and monitored and whether investors are aware of any human rights concerns involving the company in question. In fall 2016, MRTI successfully encouraged Phillips 66, a 25 percent joint venture minority stakeholder in the Dakota Access Pipeline, to create a publicly disclosed human rights policy, which they included in their fall 2017 sustainability report. While the policy is not as robust as MRTI would like to see, MRTI will continue to dialogue with the company and monitor how they implement the policy in the next year.

On the issue of human trafficking, MRTI has continued to address the issue primarily through its partnership the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (ICCR) for whom human trafficking is one of the primary issues of focus for its membership. In 2017, MRTI participated in an engagement with American Airlines who agreed to adopt human trafficking prevention policy as result of productive dialogues with faith-based investors. MRTI also engaged Old Dominion Freight Line on their trafficking prevention efforts.

For the 2018 proxy season, MRTI was the lead filer on two shareholder resolutions with JetBlue Airways Corporation and Spirit Airlines, encouraging them to follow the lead of American and Delta and commit to training their employees on human trafficking prevention. As of December 2017, Spirit Airlines committed improving its internal human trafficking prevention training program for employees and providing additional disclosure on its website and SEC filings. As a result of this positive response, MRTI withdrew its shareholder resolution. MRTI has also co-filed a resolution with the Hershey Company specifically requiring reporting on its recruitment and labor practices and is involved in efforts to engage Coca-Cola, Macy’s, and Coach on their labor practices.

While MRTI’s primary focus since 2014 has been on environmental and climate change issues at the direction of the General Assembly, MRTI continues to incorporate human rights issues in its engagements. Most recently, this has included Chevron and Noble Energy. With Noble Energy, MRTI is discussing human rights and labor issues in their natural gas operations in Israel/ Palestine, which have been flagged as possibly out of compliance with the General Assembly’s policy on corporate activities in the region.

MRTI’s lead staff person, Rob Fohr (director for the Office of Faith-Based Investing and Corporate Engagement), serves on the Board of Directors of the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (ICCR), and helped establish the Investor Alliance for Human Rights. This new initiative from ICCR aims to increase collaboration between investors focused specifically on human rights issues. Fohr also sits on a stakeholder’s team with Ford Motor Company and General Motors. Both teams meet in person with senior executives at least once per year. In 2017, responsible supply chains were a major focus and both companies have committed to improved monitoring and vetting of their Tier 1, 2, & 3 suppliers.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency continues to advocate on a variety of issues across the globe in order to put policies in place that will protect the most vulnerable. In its coalition work and direct advocacy with congress and the administration as well as through grassroots education and advocacy with Presbyterians, the Human Trafficking Roundtable, (which includes staff from the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations, the Office of Public Witness, and the Presbyterian Hunger Program), has addressed issues related to protection of workers in free trade agreements, funding for internally displaced people and refugees, child soldiers, the protection of the dignity of trafficked persons in the United Sates as well as a advocating for peaceful resolutions to conflict that cause increased vulnerability.

Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, the Office of Public Witness, the Office of Immigration Issues, and the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations have partnered with More Light Presbyterians and the First Presbyterian Church in the City of New York to convene a faith-based forum on supporting LGBTQ Refugees October 20–21, 2017.

This two-day symposium will address the challenges facing LGBTQ refugees and asylum seekers and what congregations can do to make a difference. Participants will learn specific strategies to provide services to and advocate with LGBTQ asylum seekers.

Response: The Office of Public Witness (OPW), in partnership with End Child Prostitution in Asian Tourism (ECPAT) and the Alliance to End Slavery and Trafficking (ATEST) and our ecumenical and interfaith partners in Interfaith Working Group on Human Trafficking, has continued to advocate for legislation combatting human trafficking.

In partnership with the PC(USA) Human Trafficking roundtable, the Office of Public Witness sponsored a webinar that included representatives from the State Department’s Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons, ECPAT USA, and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. Nearly 200 Presbyterians attended.

Through the Washington Interfaith Staff Community’s Working Group on Human Trafficking the Office of Public Witness has continued to monitor and strategize around possible opportunities to advance anti-trafficking policy with the administration. In February 2017, we met with senior staff in the Administration to discuss ways we could partner to combat trafficking. We have continued to be in contact with them.

The Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations served on the Board of Directors of ECPAT USA and Partners for Just Trade. Additionally, we supported the ecumenical community in advocacy with the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Hunger Program, continues to address justice issues in global supply chains in a variety of ways. This includes work around the importance of Fair Trade as it relates to global supply chains, including a Fair-Trade delegation to Nicaragua. The Presbyterian Hunger Program has also taken the opportunity to address these supply chain issues in the garment factory by facilitating workshops for Presbyterians in conjunction with our partners at the International Labor Rights Forum (IRLF). With the help of the IRLF the Presbyterian Hunger Program is also seeking to produce resource materials to use in churches to help them understand better their role in the global supply chain as well as raise awareness about supply chain issues and the human lives that get caught up in that chain. The Presbyterian Hunger Program has also collaborated with colleagues in the World Mission Ministry for brainstorming sessions for a Global Supply Chains trip. Finally, through an ecumenical partnership with the University of Minnesota, Continental Floral Greens, and the Rainforest Alliance in Guatemala, the Presbyterian Hunger Program also provides an option for sustainably sourced palms for Palm Sunday (Eco-Palms) which encourages Presbyterians to consider their choices when it comes to the greenery supply chains. Through this partnership the Presbyterian Hunger Program was also able to offer for the first time a fairly sourced Christmas wreath and garland program for churches.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency strongly supports anti-trafficking efforts and encourages all people traveling on behalf of the church to support businesses that have signed the Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children from Sexual Exploitation in Travel and Tourism (http://www.thecode.org).

The Presbyterian Mission Agency also encouraged its travel agency Azumano to become a Code signatory, which it did. The Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly have recently contracted with a new travel agency, Balboa, and have asked Balboa to sign The Code. The online reservation service also identifies “preferred” airlines, hotels, and rental car agencies that have adopted the Code.

50. 2016 Referral: Item 11-23. On Therapies Purporting to Change Sexual Orientation or Gender Identity. Recommendation 2. Direct All Agencies of the General Assembly to Refrain from Supporting, Sponsoring, or Implementing Therapies or Ministries That Attempt to Alter a Person’s Sexual Orientation or Gender Identity; and Strongly Discourage Congregations, Presbyteries, Synods, and Affiliated Educational Institutions from Sponsoring or Supporting Such Programs—From the Synod of the Covenant (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 53, 57, 299 of the print copy, 785–86 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Office of Public Witness, engaged in extensive research on resources available to educate about these therapies, and provide background for congregations and families to create a safe, welcoming community for LGBT youth. Staff conducted conversations with both former Covenant Network Staff and current More Light staff to assess the needs and gaps they saw in PC(USA) educational materials. These resources will be compiled and released as a part of a response to this overture. The Office of Public Witness is also tracking state and national legislation that would regulate these therapies, and is actively seeking opportunities to advocate for their illegality.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Office of Public Witness, has drafted and has forthcoming a letter in support of the “Therapeutic Fraud Prevention Act,” introduced in the House by Rep. Ted Lieu of California, and in the Senate by Sen. Patty Murray of Washington. This bill would prohibit, as an unfair or deceptive act or practice, commercial sexual orientation conversion therapy, and for other purposes.

Response: The study guide on the history of Presbyterian resistance to racism and structural inequality in the U.S. has been developed. It is an electronic resource and can be viewed on the racial and intercultural justice website: www.pcusa.org/racialjustice.

53. 2016 Referral: Item 11-24. Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism and Ethnocentricity Report: Recommendation 1d. Direct All Agencies of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and the Board of Pensions to Host a Series of Regional Conversations on Race Utilizing the Study Guide “Shifting Accountability for Racial Ethnic Ministries in the PC(USA) from Variety to Equity” (Appendix I). Conversations Are to Be Held in Cooperation with Other Regularly Scheduled Events such as Polity Conference, Moderator’s Conference, Big Tent, or Other Gatherings and Conferences, and Included in Other Church Trainings and Events for Church Leaders—From the Presbyterian Mission Agency (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 46, 57, 299–302 of the print copy, 787–801 of the electronic copy).

Response: Staff in the Office of Racial and Intercultural Justice in the Presbyterian Mission Agency and staff supporting the General Assembly Committee on Representation in the Office of the General Assembly collaborated on creating discussion questions for “Shifting Accountability for Racial Ethnic Ministries” and hosted conversations at the 2017 Mid Council Leaders Gathering on October 13–17, 2017, in St. Louis, Missouri. This event included the following meetings: Association of Mid Council Leaders, Association of Stated Clerks PC(USA), Moderators’ Conference, and the Mid Council Leaders Gathering.

Response: The production of a film on race, ethnicity, racism, and ethnocentricity for churchwide study will be completed by December 2018, and the film will be available as a resource to the church.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through its Office of Asia-Pacific, has worked in collaboration with the Office of the General Assembly, the Peace Trip Delegation, the Peace Network for Korea, mission co-workers, and a contract person to accomplish items a.–e. under Recommendation 3:

a. Offer condolences to the approximately forty surviving victims of the events of No Gun Ri on behalf of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);

b. Create a bibliography of resources about the events at No Gun Ri;

c. Create worship materials to remember the people impacted by the events at No Gun Ri;

d. Share the bibliography and worship materials and this overture and rationale electronically with the congregations and presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Presbyterian Church in Korea (PCK) and the Presbyterian Church in the Republic of Korea (PROK);

e. Explore possibilities for joint prayer and witness regarding continuing tensions on the Korean peninsula, in the South China Sea, and other considerations for peace, world order, security, and meeting basic human needs that are currently before their congregations and members. (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 854)

A PC(USA) delegation traveled to South Korea November 1–8, 2017. The delegation interacted with individuals representing the Presbyterian Church in Korea (PCK), the Presbyterian Church in the Republic of Korea (PROK), as well as the National Council of Churches in Korea (NCCK). The PC(USA) delegation, which included the Stated Clerk and several others, engaged in a day filled with ceremonies and a worship service held November 7, 2017, at No Gun Ri Peace Park. Months of planning finally culminated in a tour of the battle-site massacre during which U.S. troops fired upon Korean civilians, including women and children for three days. To apologize for this atrocity, the delegation dedicated flowers at the peace park memorial monument, planted a tree in the memorial garden, and offered confession, lamentations, and a proclamation of apology during a worship service with survivors and their families.

The contract person wrote the service of worship for November 7, 2017, and completed a bibliography. During the first quarter of 2018 World Mission will work with Communications to post these resources online. Once the bibliography and worship service are posted, World Mission will notify PC(USA) constituents and global partner denominations, and will work with Communications to make the resources widely and readily available to those interested in using them.

World Mission and other ministry areas of the denomination have been engaging with our ecumenical/global partners in ongoing conversations as we identify various ways in which to be in prayer together. It is always our goal to be partnered in intentional prayer efforts. We have identified a season of prayer for the Korean peninsula held yearly in July and August. PC(USA) is in the process of developing resources for this season of prayer including, but not limited to, invitations to various individuals to contribute their own prayers and litanies that will be made available for all who wish to access. We plan to post these during the first quarter of 2018.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Office of Public Witness, in consultation with the area coordinator for Africa, the regional liaison, our mission co-workers, and the Congo Mission Network continues to advocate for policies that would protect human rights, promote security, and support effective electoral participation. Because of the current situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), public advocacy on these issues may put church partners in danger. The Office of Public Witness, however, has continued to work with allies in congress, including Rep. Karen Bass, as well as the State Department, to promote free and fair elections in the DRC, as well as to condition aid and impose sanctions if steps towards the protection of human rights and collective security are not taken.

57. 2016 Referral: Item 12-05. On Affirming Nonviolent Means of Resistance Against Human Oppression. Recommendation 3. Create Resources That Teach the Church About Its Theology of Peacemaking and Nonviolence in Relation to Its Historical Decisions to Boycott Companies and/or Their Products, Divest from Holdings in Corporations That Profit from Non-Peaceful and Violent Pursuits, and Otherwise Call for Sanctions by Entities That Have the Power to Effect Positive Change—From the Presbytery of Muskingum Valley (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 66, 67, 312 of the print copy, 860–67 of the electronic copy).

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Compassion, Peace, and Justice Ministry, has produced two resources that address the directive.

The first resource is the book, Five Risks Presbyterians Must Take for Peace, based on the report approved by the General Assembly, “Risking Peace in a Violent World” (https://www.pc-biz.org/#/search/3000047). The book is published by Westminster/JohnKnox Press and was prepared particularly for congregations renewing their peacemaking commitments by staff of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Christian Iosso). While it does not focus on economic witness strategies, it affirms economic pressure as part of nonviolent social change at several points, such as:

“…the antiapartheid movement in South Africa, supported by international economic pressure, that brought an end to white minority rule.”

“Nonviolent direct action—the use of protest marches, strikes, boycotts, sit-ins, and more—is a means of wielding power and a technique for waging conflict, just as guerrilla warfare, conventional warfare, and terrorism are also means of waging conflict.”

The other resource is another report approved by the 2016 assembly, Israel-Palestine: For Human Values in the Absence of Just Peace (pc-biz: https://www.pc-biz.org/#/committee/567/business), which has now been printed and posted separately for free download: https://www.presbyterianmission.org/resource/israel-palestine-human-values-absence-just-peace/

This report is quite clear that boycott, divestment, and sanctions approaches have been approved by the church precisely because they provide proven pressure for nonviolent change, and because, in the case of Israel’s fifty-plus year occupation of Palestine, all other violent resistance and official “peace processes” have failed. To quote briefly:

Presbyterians and the Presbyterian Mission Agency have sought to work with other peacemaking organizations to counteract the culture of resentment and militarization that drives violent interactions between Israelis and Palestinians. The PC(USA) has called on all parties to cease activities that worsen the prospects for a just peace… The limited success of years of “words-only” efforts is part of what has led the church to move toward nonviolent economic pressure on the settlement enterprise and to work with civic organizations in the occupied Palestinian territories (OPT).”

The report goes on to affirm and recommend actions consistent with the referral, including:

(1) The Presbyterian Foundation and Board of Pensions refrain from investments that support violence against Israelis or Palestinians, including finance and support for the economic activity and expansion of settlements outside of Israel’s internationally recognized borders, in accord with previous General Assembly actions.

(2) Appropriate agencies of the assembly support measures by the Internal Revenue Service (or related units of the United States government) to investigate and possibly revoke the 501(c)(3) status for organizations, and tax deductions for individuals, that promote and finance the development or operation of Israeli settlements, which are illegal under international law and obstacles to peace.

(3) The General Assembly affirms the traditional freedom of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other religious, civic, and private organizations in the United States to determine their own practices of investment or divestment, boycott or selective purchasing, in advocacy for peace and human rights, and therefore opposes efforts in state legislatures and elsewhere to limit or punish these exercises of freedom and nonviolent solidarity.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Peacemaking Program, brought one of its larger groups of International Peacemakers in 2017, with representatives of partner churches in many conflict areas. In each case, the peacemakers met with regional area liaisons from World Mission (some of whom had helped contact those peacemakers initially). For overall lessons, see the Peacemaking Program 2017 report on the program and its learnings. In general, however, the peacemakers affirmed the continuing need for a human rights emphasis in foreign policy that does not single out Christians, as this can lead to resentment and pressure from neighbors and charges that Christians are not indigenous people. International development aid that genuinely helps self-empowerment can also accompany better relations in countries that are seeking to recover from disasters, natural or human made.
The Second General Council of the World Communion of Reformed Churches (WCRC, continuing the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the Reformed Ecumenical Council) met in Leipzig, Germany, in July 2017, and included much consultation and planning among member Reformed bodies looking at many world crisis areas.

In November 2016, a team of two PC(USA) World Mission representatives and the coordinator of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) were in Beirut for the meeting of the Fellowship of Middle Eastern Evangelical Christians, which brings together representatives of Protestant churches from across the Middle East. The agenda of that body focused on ways to emphasize the role of Christians as peacemakers seeking reconciliation within their societies while also representing small but historic groups. The ACSWP coordinator and the Middle East coordinator of the Mennonite Church met with an international affairs representative of the U.S. Department of State at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, to discuss both the Lebanese and Syrian situations. This conversation is an example of the overall ways PC(USA) staff has tried to bring the fruits of international church cooperation to U.S. policymakers and diplomatic representatives, in this case focusing on future peace talks that could include Iranian as well as Russian representatives (the PC(USA) has supported the multinational nuclear de-escalation agreement with Iran, reducing tensions between our countries).

Similar initiatives have continued with the Cuba Partners network and South America & Caribbean World Mission office, touching also on issues in Brazil, Venezuela, and Colombia. Work on the updated Cuba policy approved by the 2016 assembly included meetings with the State Department and National Security Council, set up with the assistance of the Office of Public Witness. Colombia has a historic peace agreement, long advocated by the PC(USA) and our partners, with whom the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship has run an accompaniment program for congregations of people displaced by civil war and death-squads funded by wealthy landowners.

In Israel/Palestine, the PC(USA) continues to work with Christian and interfaith partners toward human rights for Palestinians, given the recognition by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) and many observers that the “two-state solution” is politically and economically impossible as long as Israel continues settlements and colonizes “Area C,” the 60 percent of the West Bank that consists of the Jordan Valley.

With regard to the Korean Peninsula, PC(USA) representatives met with South Korean church representatives in early Fall of 2017, during a public apology for the wartime massacre of civilians at No Gun Ree (as also mandated by the 2016 assembly). The PC(USA) and all ecumenical churches seek ways to de-escalate tensions while also advocating for better conditions for North Koreans.

The Peacemaking Program has been encouraging congregations to recommit to an updated Peacemaking Commitment statement, coordinating with the publication and marketing of the book by Chris Iosso, Five Risks Presbyterians Must Take for Peace (Westminster/JohnKnox, 2017). That book contains a modified form of the Peace Discernment report approved by the 2016 assembly.

Response: World Mission staff, the IPRC, and the Cuba Partners Network have been working together to celebrate, strengthen, and put into action the partnership between the PC(USA) and the IPRC through:
● Convening an Encuentro (Gathering) in Matanzas, Cuba, October 5–8, 2016, to celebrate the partnership relationship between the IPRC and the PC(USA) and begin discussions of how we might strengthen our mutual mission. More than sixty people participated in the Encuentro: about half from Cuba and half from the U.S.

● Celebrating a joint meeting between IPRC leadership, the PC(USA) Stated Clerk, World Mission’s Latin America and the Caribbean staff, and Cuba Partners Network delegates in Cardenas, Cuba, May 8–11, 2017. The purpose of the meeting was to affirm our partnership relationship and, using the World Council of Churches’ latest statement on Mission and Evangelism (Together Towards Life) as a missiological tool, to envision directions for a renewed Mutual Mission Agreement between our two denominations. A writing team was commissioned to draft the new agreement based on the discussions.

● Holding a Cuba Partners Network meeting, including five representatives of the IPRC, to share the new Mutual Mission Agreement draft document and to explore other topics, towards the end of strengthening our partnership. This meeting was held September 12–15, 2017, in Chicago with the theme of “Deepening Mutual Mission.” The new Mutual Mission Agreement will be submitted to the Synod of the IPRC at their annual Synod meeting, February 1–3, 2018. Co-Moderator Denise Anderson will attend as part of the PC(USA) delegation. Upon its adoption, the agreement will be submitted to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA).

● Discussing with the IPRC leadership the matter of IPRC’s legal recognition as a church by the Cuban government, and the denomination’s exercise of religious liberty including the exercise of control over church properties. IPRC representatives expressed their gratitude for the support of the PC(USA) on this item, but affirmed that the legal recognition by the Cuban government of the IPRC as a church is a matter internal to Cuba and that they are taking steps with the government toward that end.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the work of the Office of Public Witness, has continued to advocate against the rollback of the recent openings in US-Cuba relations by the current administration. The representative for international issues at the Office of Public Witness chairs the Interfaith Working Group on Cuba and has coordinated interfaith advocacy with congress and the administration. The Office of Public Witness has had several meetings with the State Department on the issues around the tightening of travel restrictions and has worked to advocate for legislation in congress that would continue to advance more open relations. These bills are:

House Bills

✱ The Cuba Trade Act (H.R. 442)
Introduced by Rep. Tom Emmer (R-MN-6)
This bill would allow businesses in the private sector to trade freely with Cuba, while prohibiting taxpayer funds to be used on promotion or development of a new market.

✱ The Freedom to Travel to Cuba Act (H.R. 351)
Introduced by Rep. Mark Sanford (R-SC-1)
The bill simply removes the current travel restrictions to Cuba.

✱ The Cuba Agricultural Exports Act (H.R. 525)
Introduced by Rep. Eric A. Crawford (R-AR-1)
This bill seeks to repeal financing restrictions, allowing firms in the U.S. to offer credit to Cuba in connection with exports of U.S. agricultural goods. It also seeks to eliminate restrictions on key federal funding used in agricultural export promotions.

Senate Bills

✱ The Agricultural Export Expansion Act (S.275)
Introduced by Sen. Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND)
This bill aims to lift the ban on private banks and companies offering credit for agricultural exports to Cuba, and to help level the playing field for exporters across the country and support American jobs.

✱ The Freedom to Export to Cuba Act
Introduced by Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN)
This bill would lift the current embargo and allow more U.S. goods to be exported to Cuba. The bill would also eliminate the legal barriers to Americans doing business in Cuba. It does not repeal provisions of current law that address human rights in Cuba or that allow individuals and businesses to pursue claims against the Cuban government.

🌟 The Freedom to Travel to Cuba Act
[Introduced by Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ)]
This bill would eliminate current restrictions on traveling to Cuba for tourist purposes. Additionally, ahead of the Trump Administration’s expected release of its U.S.-Cuba policy review, which will determine whether or not to continue policies that made it easier to travel to Cuba, this legislation would completely and permanently deregulate U.S. travel to Cuba.

The Office of Public Witness is hosting a delegation from the Cuban Council of Churches, including two from the Presbyterian Church of Cuba, who will meet with congress and the administration on these issues in January of 2018.

In addition, we have worked in partnership with the Latin America Working Group to offer opportunities for education and advocacy for Presbyterians including:

- A Twitterstorm to end the embargo,
- Calling for aid for Cuba after Hurricane Irma
- Monitoring the changes made to US policy toward Cuba by the current administration,
- Supporting legislation that would end the travel ban,
- Advocating for continued engagement and travel to Cuba.

The Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations sent a letter to the president of the General Assembly of the United Nations advocating the end of sanctions against Cuba.

Response: The Presbyterian Mission Agency, through the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations, invited the High Commissioner for Human Rights Office to address Presbyterians in the Love Welcome Conference at First Presbyterian Church in the City of New York. The Love Welcome Conference addressed ways that the faith community can respond to LGBTQI refugees.

Response: World Mission staff created a training entitled “Safety, Respect, Advocacy & More” with the following objectives:

- Creating awareness of the goals of the Report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Regarding Protecting Individuals from Violence and Discrimination; and
- Providing an environment in which mission co-workers can learn about and share context-sensitive ways to address issues of safety and respect for LGBTQ persons both when in the U.S. and within their countries of service.
In 2017, this training was implemented at the following mission personnel events:

- Africa Regional Gathering (37 mission personnel attending, including 4 Young Adult Volunteers);
- Sharing Conference (12 mission personnel attending); and
- Orientation for new mission personnel (2 attending).

The same training will be shared at future mission personnel training events in order to share the goals of the report and to engage all PC(USA) mission personnel in understanding context-sensitive ways of protecting individuals from violence and discrimination.

- Additionally, the Young Adult Volunteer program incorporates training and reflection with all YAVs around antiracist, anti-oppression, and nondiscrimination. In 2017, this training was for all seventy active YAVs, and is reinforced at each site through ongoing training through the YAV site coordinators.

Response: As mandated by the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency communicated the goals of the Report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to Presbyterian World Mission. In turn, Presbyterian World Mission took two actions. The first was to modify its Mission Co-Worker Handbook to add language that avoided the perception of disparate treatment for LGBT candidates for mission service, who were being considered for appointment to global partners that do not accept such persons. These changes were made in collaboration with the Covenant Network of Presbyterians.

Second, Presbyterian World Mission developed a training program for mission co-workers to help them address issues of safety and respect for LGBT persons in their unique contexts, which vary from country to country. This training program will be offered at all training meetings for mission personnel. In 2017, it was used at the regional gathering of all mission personnel in Africa and at a sharing conference for mission co-workers who were in the United States on their interpretation assignments.

The training program includes a review of the goals of the 2015 Report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and an overview of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s policy statements on protections and human rights for LGBT persons. It then gave space for mission co-workers to share their experiences and any uncertainties about how best to address issues that arise. In the longer version of the program, we also included a section on bystander intervention.

Working collaboratively with First Presbyterian Church of New York City, the Presbyterian Ministry at the UN, the Peace-making Office, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, and the Office of Immigration Issues, More Light Presbyterians and Covenant Network are organizing a regional conference to focus on congregational support and accompaniment of LGBTQ asylum seekers and refugees. “Love Welcome” Conference will take place October 20–21, 2017, in New York City. The conference will serve as a focal point for identifying, compiling, and (if necessary) producing new congregational resources to be made available in 2018.

66. 2016 Referral: Item 12-10. On Committing to Play an Active Part in the Global Response to the HIV/AIDS Epidemic. Recommendation 4.b. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency, through World Mission, to (1) Encourage and Accompany Global Partners Working to Raise Awareness of the HIV and AIDS Epidemic and to Promote Appropriate Responses to the Disease; (2) Educate PC(USA) Constituencies, Including Congregations and Mission Networks, About the Urgency of Action to Prevent a Resurgence of HIV Infections Through Media Such as Bulletin Inserts, Publications, and Social Media; and (3) Encourage Congregations to Use Existing Methods of Fundraising, such as the Portion of the Peace and Global Witness Offering Retained Locally to Be Used Toward This Cause, Either by Encouraging the Support of the Presbyterian AIDS Network, or Another HIV/AIDS Ministry with Which the PC(USA) Is in Partnership. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Is Not Response: Presbyterian World Mission was directed in Section 4(b) to undertake three activities.

Encourage and accompany global partners: Presbyterian World Mission encourages and accompanies global partners working on HIV and AIDS testing, prevention, and care through both monetary and human resources. In 2017, Ruth Brown was reassigned from the Democratic Republic of Congo to Zimbabwe. In partnership with the Church of Central Africa Presbyterian—Synod of Zimbabwe, she serves as a resource, advisor, and colleague to the convener of the synod’s Chikondano (“Love”) HIV/AIDS and Vulnerable Children Committee, as the committee works to promote health and prevent diseases throughout the CCAP and the communities in which it ministers. The committee works particularly to reduce the incidence of HIV and AIDS and to improve conditions for vulnerable populations, including widows and orphans.

Further to the South, Doug Tilton and Janet Guyer have been working diligently with the Lesotho Evangelical Church in Southern Africa on a proposal to Prevent AIDS Africa, an organization born out of a U.S. Presbyterian congregation. This effort has focused on identifying the training and educational needs of our partner in Lesotho, so that the curriculum developed by Prevent AIDS Africa can be tailored to the partner’s context. Lesotho has the second highest incidence of HIV in the world, so this effort meets a critical need.

We have been able to encourage our global partners’ ministries in Southern Africa with financial support, too. World Mission gave a grant to the Churchwide HIV and AIDS Committee of the Church of Jesus Christ in Madagascar to assist three dispensaries with their care for HIV-positive persons and their families. Such care includes medicines and transportation to the regional care center for CD4-level testing. In some dispensaries, the number of cases of HIV-positive patients has doubled in recent years.

A continent away, Presbyterian World Mission was asked to fund a “training of trainers” by the United Church of Christ in the Philippines, a partner denomination of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The UCCP General Assembly previously approved a policy statement on LGBT persons, which has raised questions among members about how to implement the policy. They are applying the Our Whole Lives curriculum of the UUA and UCC, which has a holistic approach to sexuality. It includes age-appropriate information on HIV and AIDS symptoms, treatment, and prevention. It stresses the importance of safe behavior and HIV testing. It promotes compassion for those infected with HIV and afflicted with AIDS. To roll this out, the UCCP wished to host a training for people to become trainers in their own communities, but could not afford the entire cost. Presbyterian World Mission made a grant to the partner to support this effort.

Educate PC(USA) constituencies: Within Presbyterian World Mission, the ministry area used the launch of its new blog, World Mission Connect, to focus on HIV and AIDS awareness, particularly the work of our global partners and mission co-workers. For seven weeks, World Mission brought news from around the world related to this epidemic and the risk of resurgence.

Working with EMPACT Africa and the Presbyterian AIDS Network, World Mission also is developing an online mission toolkit, containing liturgical and resources for congregations. These resources will be promoted in print publications and through postcard mailings to congregations interested in this type of ministry. In its electronic newsletter, we asked congregations for information about their efforts and provided links to need for diligence in the fight against AIDS.

Fundraising: The Presbyterian Mission Agency encourages congregations, mid councils, and concerned Presbyterians to use existing methods of fundraising to address this concern. Since 2006, the Presbyterian Mission Agency has encouraged congregations to use all or part of the portion of the Peace and Global Witness Offering retained locally toward causes related to HIV/AIDS. The Leader’s Guide for this Special Offering (www.specialofferings.pcusa.org/peace-global) encourages donating to a program working with people living with HIV/AIDS, hosting a resource day or worship service to support, and praying for people living with AIDS and those who care for them.

In addition, the mission toolkit and materials produced for PC(USA) World AIDS Sunday, designated by the Stated Clerk in response to another action of the 222nd General Assembly (2016) and for World AIDS Day (December 1), encouraged financial support for ministries engaged in addressing HIV/AIDS.

Response: Presbyterian Mission Agency through Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corp, has implemented standards to ensure just compensation practices for those employed by third-party contractors. The standards are to protect the wages and fringe benefits of outsourced employees and are clearly documented within applicable contracts. Those employed by third party contractors of the Presbyterian Mission Agency will have similar and in some cases the same fringe benefits as employees of Presbyterian Mission Agency, such as access to healthcare insurance, and paid holiday and vacation leave. The Presbyterian Mission Agency contributes a portion of premiums annually per employee if the employee participates in the employer healthcare plan. The paid holiday leave mirrors the Holiday Schedule of the Presbyterian Mission Agency ensuring employees will not lose wages during that time. Wages for the employees of the third-party contractors are determined based on market rates. Annually employees will receive a percentage increase for cost of living, currently determined to be 3 percent.

Response: Completion anticipated prior to General Assembly. Actions taken by offices of the Presbyterian Mission Agency are noted in the order of the directives from the 222nd General Assembly (2016). While the assembly approved these directives with amendments in 2016, it only approved funding to fulfill the directives starting in 2018. Thus, certain actions were only scheduled starting in January of 2018, though planned in advance. This response to referral addresses the first four directives of the General Assembly and are cited in italic type; the Office of the General Assembly has submitted a separate response to the fifth and last directive (see II. Final Responses to Referrals, E. Office of the General Assembly, Referral 23).

1. Prayerfully study the call from Palestinian civil society for boycott, divestment, and sanctions (BDS) against the state of Israel as well as resources that oppose this BDS movement (see “additional resources” after the Rationale section of this overture for full text of the call).

This action is invited from all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This response outlines history and theology relevant to “prayerful study.” Item 08-07, originally an overture from the Presbytery of New Hope in North Carolina, cited the goals of the “BDS movement” announced by Palestinian civil society organizations in 2005:

[nonviolent economic] measures [that] should be maintained until Israel meets its obligation to recognize the Palestinian people’s inalienable right to self-determination and fully complies with the precepts of international law by:

Ending its occupation and colonization of all Arab lands and dismantling the Wall;

Recognizing the fundamental rights of the Arab-Palestinian citizens of Israel to full equality; and

Respecting, protecting and promoting the rights of Palestinian refugees to return to their homes and properties as stipulated in UN resolution 194. (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 504)

The General Assembly Committee on Middle East issues that discussed this matter was aware of the historic Presbyterian policy and practice of engaging in boycott, divestment, and sanctions (and other nonviolent economic witness) on a range of issues, as noted in advice & counsel memoranda provided to all commissioners. Formal Presbyterian consideration of applying boycott and divestment measures to Israel for its occupation of Palestine began in 2004, prior to the civil society call, and General Assembly calls for sanctions against Israel (mainly reductions or halts in military aid) go back to the 1980s.

The rationale to this action in 2016 cites the particular note made in the assembly’s 2014 action approving divestment from three companies supportive of the occupation of Palestine: “This action on divestment is not to be construed or represented by any organization of the PC(USA) as divestment from the State of Israel, or an alignment with or endorsement of the global BDS (Boycott, Divest and Sanctions) movement” (Minutes, 2014, Part I, p. 261). Thus, this prayerful consideration presumes that the economic practices of boycott, divestment, and sanctions are legitimate tools used by the church; the question is whether Presbyterians and their church should specifically align with or endorse a “the BDS movement.”
Presbyterian Mission Agency offices have provided materials to assist Presbyterians in prayerful study; both in reports of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) and policy statements developed by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

MRTI developed criteria for divestment that were approved by the General Assembly in 1984 (prior to action on corporations supporting South African apartheid, though after divestment from nuclear warhead makers and major military contractors; see https://www.presbyterianmission.org/wp-content/uploads/5-divestment_strategy-1984.pdf ). Any action of economic witness (boycotts, divestment, and sanctions) should be based on consistency with the Gospel message of love and justice (integrity; practicing what we preach), effectiveness (that we actually get across the road to those who have “fallen among thieves”), and solidarity (being guided by Christian partners and others of prophetic purpose). From these bases in theological ethics, the divestment policy derives criteria for assessing divestment actions, and these criteria encourage doing action in concert with other concerned groups:

The decision should be taken after consultation with the ecumenical community, whenever possible.

The implementation of a divestment action should ordinarily be in solidarity with other Christian bodies.

This criterion is reflected in the second directive of the 2016 Assembly calling for “ecumenical and interfaith dialogue,” and in its rationale it cites the 2009 statement, Kairos Palestine, in which representatives of virtually all of the churches in Palestine joined in supporting the 2005 call for BDS (For the Kairos Palestine document: https://www.pcusa.org/site_media/media/uploads/oga/pdf/kairos-palestinestudy-guide-final-6-14-11.pdf).

A summary of boycott and divestment actions taken by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) since 2004 is provided in the ACSWP study guide to the report approved by the 2016 assembly, “Israel-Palestine: For Human Values in the Absence of A Just Peace,” https://www.presbyterianmission.org/wp-content/uploads/IS-PAL-STUDY-GUIDE-FINAL.pdf. The section on economic witness follows:

Economic pressure

In light of the limited success and frequent reversals of “words-only” efforts, the church has moved toward nonviolent economic pressure against the settlement enterprise. PCUSA, with its own funds and member purchasing, has tried to curtail its support for the occupation and settlements while making it clear that it is not divesting from or boycotting the State of Israel within the internationally recognized borders. This accords with our economic support for nonviolent social change in other cases where politics met an impasse. Maintaining the distinction in these actions between Israel within internationally recognized borders and the occupation and illegal settlements in the West Bank… aims to help keep open the option of a two-state solution. This is one reason why the General Assembly has not endorsed efforts of boycott, divestment, or sanctions that do not distinguish between settlements and Israel, although the Report does reveal how integrated these settlements have become with Israel proper.

Nonetheless, the 2016 Presbyterian General Assembly called for a prayerful study of whether the church should move from its current affirmation of certain boycott, divestment, and sanction actions only against the occupation to a broader endorsement of the Palestinian campaign for BDS against all the Israeli economy (for which we use capital letters). The Israeli government and its supporters in the US have made extraordinary efforts to oppose BDS. Some Jewish groups react to boycott movements of the Israeli state today in light of the earlier history of anti-Semitic boycotts. The government of Israel fears such economic pressure sufficiently to restrict public debate of boycott, divestment, and sanctions, and to restrict travel into and out of Israel-Palestine by those who advocate it. Both of these strategies are undemocratic and restrict freedom of speech not only for Palestinians, but also for Israelis, Americans, and other visitors.

Pro-Israel organizations in the U.S. also lobby Congress and state governments to penalize U.S. companies and organizations that publicly choose not to provide economic support to the government of Israel or its settlements. If these laws apply to U.S. religious bodies, those efforts to block our witness would also violate the separation of church and state and the free exercise of public speech and religious liberty.

The PC(USA) has repeatedly endorsed a democratic Israel with secure and internationally agreed-upon boundaries, living at peace with its neighbors and providing equal rights to all its citizens under one system of justice. Palestinians under occupation or exiled from their homes do not enjoy such rights, however, and therefore PC(USA) has taken several actions regarding corporate engagement in Israel-Palestine. The Presbyterian Foundation and Board of Pensions refrain from investments that support violence against Israelis or Palestinians, including finance and support for the economic activity and expansion of settlements outside of Israel’s recognized borders, in accord with previous PC(USA) General Assembly actions.

Thus, the Presbyterian Mission Agency has been providing materials that can help in prayerful discernment of whether or not to formalize and broaden the usage of boycotts, divestment, and sanctions as part of an international movement that includes Christians and many others.

2. Engage in ecumenical and interfaith dialogue with the authors and signatories of this document, including our historic church partners in Palestine and our interfaith partners who oppose the BDS movement, in order to better understand and interpret the call for BDS that was issued in 2005.
In order to carry out this directive in a cost-effective manner, elected leaders and staff of the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency combined this dialogue with a solidarity visit to Christian churches in Israel and Palestine in December 2017. That team, headed by the Stated Clerk, the Reverend J. Herbert Nelson and including staff from ministries of World Mission and Compassion, Peace, & Justice, met with leaders of seven partner communions, with primary authors of the 2005 call, and with leading Muslim and Jewish analysts of how the economic practices of boycott, divestment, and sanctions are viewed within Palestine and Israel. Video footage of interviews with most interlocutors was made (by prearranged permission) for use in assisting prayerful study back in the United States.

Among those with whom the Presbyterian church group met were Dr. Omar Barghouti of the organization originating the 2005 civil society call, Dr. Mahdi Abdul Hadi of a Palestinian academic research center, owners of a Palestinian-Israeli dairy products business, executives of an Israeli start-up business incubator, and Rabbi David Rosen, an international representative of the American Jewish Committee based in Jerusalem. Along with Dr. Rosen, the group was also able to make contact with an Israeli leader in joint Jewish and Palestinian Israeli cooperative social services and peace-building. The Presbyterian Mission Agency (particularly the Peacemaking Program and Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy) is currently developing interpretive material, both written and DVD, for use in webinars and other aids to prayerful study.

3. Serve as a prophetic witness with a voice of humility and wisdom amidst the controversy and confusion around the BDS call.

This is a directive to all Presbyterians as we recognize a “prophethood” as well as priesthood of all believers in the Reformed tradition. In other words, each of us is called by the Holy Spirit, the “inner Christ” speaking to our consciences, to discern how to make a difference for justice and peace in Israel and occupied Palestine, which is the overall goal of the BDS movement. The Middle East Office of World Mission ministries helps us appreciate the steadfast courage and sacrifice of Christians and others in the Holy Land in ways that can increase our humility.

4. Direct the Presbyterian Mission Agency to facilitate dialogue events regarding BDS, which would include the authors of the 2005 civil society call and our interfaith partners who oppose the BDS movement and any interested Presbyterians.

In addition to the dialogue events occurring from December 4–10, 2017, in Israel and Palestine, the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations organized an event on January 25, 2018, at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in New York City. This event was to include video footage of discussion with BDS proponents and opponents taken in Israel and occupied Palestine, as well as U.S.-based proponents and opponents and interested Presbyterians, all invited at the same time in early January, subsequent to the December trip, Christian and Jewish holidays, and events such as the U.S. president’s recognition of Jerusalem as Israel’s capital.

Two dialogue events ended up occurring on January 25, but they were not the full program initially intended. A representative of Presbyterians for Middle East Peace, an unofficial interest group in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), made contact with Jewish individuals and groups opposing BDS and dissuaded them from accepting the invitation from the denomination. Thus, the initial program was canceled and focused conversations were held with two groups of interested Presbyterians. Because of some potential for confusion by General Assembly commissioners, we describe these groups briefly.

A dialogue event was held in the morning of January 25 with representatives of the Israel-Palestine Mission Network, IPMN, one of a number of mission networks developed to advocate for, support, and promote the policy and program of the PC(USA). IPMN is unique among these networks in that it is the only one specifically created by action of the General Assembly (2004). Information on its finances and membership can be found at http://new.israelpalestinemissionnetwork.org/ipmn-documents/IMPN_overview.pdf. All monies are donated by Presbyterians, resources are produced, and Presbyterian mission personnel are supported within a total budget of $60,000. The representatives of IPMN reaffirmed their support for economic engagement as well as other forms of witness to end the occupation of Palestine and defend human rights for all persons under Israeli control in East Jerusalem, Gaza, and the West Bank.

In the afternoon of January 25, a conference call was held between Presbyterian Mission Agency staff and representatives of Presbyterians for Middle East Peace (PMEP). While using a name similar to that of Churches for Middle East Peace (CMEP, an ecumenical group of which the PC(USA) is a member), PMEP is an advocacy group working within the PC(USA) but does not have official standing, so it is not required to disclose either its finances or its membership. The representatives of PMEP reiterated their opposition to the BDS movement, based in part on their belief that it alienates mainstream Jewish organizations and their supporters and hence is counterproductive to any peace process.

This year’s Mosaic of Peace, a Presbyterian Peacemaking conference in Israel and Palestine, will give participants the opportunity to engage in prayerful study of the BDS movement, and it is our hope that other opportunities will emerge using the materials that we are producing.
Future dialogue events will be coordinated with synod and presbytery partners and are expected to include video footage and webinars, as well as posted resources (some already noted). Copies of this communication will be updated with links provided to online posting of additional materials for on-going prayerful study.

5. Direct the Stated Clerk to distribute, for prayerful study, the text of the Palestinian call and documentation from interfaith partners who oppose the BDS movement to all PC(USA) congregations.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency refers commissioners to the response of the Office of the General Assembly on this directive (see II. Final Responses to Referrals, E. Office of the General Assembly, Referral 23). The Stated Clerk’s transmittal of the requested information will complete the tasks assigned to the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency in fulfillment of this particular referral; Middle East related ministries will of course continue, as guided by the policies of the General Assembly and ongoing conversations with ecumenical and interfaith partners.

H. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

Response: The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation takes seriously the report’s call for each agency of the church to evaluate its impact on people of color and racial diversity. Over the past several years, PPC has taken the following steps to evaluate its impact on staff as well as its potential to create positive change in the world:

In 2013 PPC developed a six-year cultural proficiency plan in response to the 2012 Climate for Change report. This report included several goals, including an increase in the publication of books written by women and people of color; the hiring of a senior staff person and an acquisitions editor who would both be people of color; and regular, mandatory training in cultural proficiency and antiracism for all staff. As a result of these goals and additional efforts taken in response to Item 11-24, we are pleased to say that we have taken the following steps:

- Mandatory, all-day training seminars were held for all PPC staff in April 2014, August 2015, and September 2016 in cultural competency and racial awareness. These seminars (the first two led by Susana Rinderle and the third by Stacy Kitahata and Valerie Norwood) included pre- and post-meeting staff surveys as well as the completion of an Intercultural Development Inventory (IDI) tool by each staff person. PPC also offered to pay for one-on-one follow-up training with Kitahata and Norwood for any staff persons who requested that.

- The Reverend Laura Mariko Cheifetz was hired in 2013 as PPC’s executive director of church relations, serving on PPC’s executive management staff. She held this position until she left in July 2017 to be deputy director of systems and sustainability for the National Asian Pacific American Women’s Forum. The Reverend Dr. Bridgett Green was hired in 2013 to be acquisitions editor for biblical studies for Westminster John Knox Press. Bridgett had previously served as a Bob Bohl Intern for PPC, a regular program that recruits seminarians who are people of color to work for the organization for a summer to determine whether a career in academic religious publishing is right for them.

- PPC has intentionally increased the publishing of books by people of color, as well as books on antiracism and related topics, over the last several years. The percentage of books contracted from people of color have doubled since 2013, to 21 percent. The sixteen-person editorial board for the new lectionary commentary series, Connections, includes seven people of color. More than one-third of the contributors to that series are people of color. Many of our key titles published in the last four years have been by people of color, or about topics of racial justice. These include:

  - Microaggressions in Ministry: Confronting the Hidden Violence of Everyday Church, Cody Sanders and Angela Yarber
  - Fearless Dialogues: A New Movement for Justice, Gregory C. Ellison
  - Race in a Post-Obama America: The Church Responds, David Maxwell, editor
  - Blue Note Preaching in a Post-Soul World: Finding Hope in an Age of Despair, Otis Moss III
  - Becoming Married, Staying Married: A Guide for African-American Couples, Marcus Small
  - Leading Wisdom: Asian and Asian North American Women Leaders, Jung Ha Kim and Su Yon Pak, editors
  - No Innocent Bystanders: Becoming an Ally in the Struggle for Justice, Shannon Craigo-Snell and Christopher Doucet
  - The Spiritual Biography of Jackie Robinson: The Faith of a Boundary-Breaking Hero, Chris Lamb and Michael Long
  - Neighbor: Christian Encounters with “Illegal” Immigration, Ben Daniel
An Introduction to Womanist Biblical Interpretation, Nyasha Junior

African American Theology: An Introduction, Frederick Ware

African-American Theological Ethics: A Reader, Peter Paris

The Genesis of Liberation: Biblical Interpretation in the Antebellum Narratives of the Enslaved, Emerson Powery and Rodney Sadler

- PPC launched a new children’s book imprint, Flyaway Books, in 2017 that will be intentionally diverse in content, authors, and illustrators. One of our first publications was praised by The New York Times for showing children the tremendous diversity in the world, and the beauty and strength that grows from that diversity. Future children’s books will examine the role of unsung women of color in America (Katie Yamasaki, author and illustrator), will help children understand the racial violence that affects young African American men (Michael Waters, author; Shane Evans, illustrator), and will show how the biblical story of the Tower of Babel is a story about God’s wish for a diverse world, where people speak different languages, look differently, and live in many different ways (Lib Caldwell and Ted Hiebert, authors; Katie Yamasaki, illustrator).

- PPC has begun publishing several of its most popular Presbyterian resources in both Spanish and Korean, including The Presbyterian Elder, The Presbyterian Deacon, and Presbyterian Questions, Presbyterian Answers.

- Future initiatives will include a fourth all-day mandatory training session for staff and the continuing growth of publishing on topics of race, including the beginning of a new academic series edited by Jonathan Walton titled A History of Race and Religion in America.

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, with the concurrence of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018)
1. Reelect Thomas Hay, director of assembly operations; Robina Winbush, director of ecumenical relations; and Kerry Rice, Deputy Stated Clerk of the Office of the General Assembly, as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

2. Elect Laurie Griffith, associate director of constitutional interpretation, and Tricia Dykers Koenig, associate director of mid council relations, to a first, four-year term as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

Rationale

According to H.2.d. in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly: “The General Assembly may elect one or more Associate Stated Clerks as the General Assembly shall determine. The Stated Clerk shall nominate persons to fill each such office after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The term of office shall be four years, subject to reelection at the pleasure of the General Assembly.”

Laurie Griffith, currently OGA’s manager of judicial process and social witness policy, will assume a new role as associate director for constitutional interpretation. Griffith, a PC(USA) ruling elder, has served in OGA since 2002. In addition to her work in constitutional services, she has straddled the church and secular worlds, providing advice and counsel about Presbyterian polity, order, and history in secular litigation and to secular attorneys who have represented the church. She is a graduate of Hood College in Frederick, Maryland, the Brandeis School of Law at the University of Louisville, and attended two years at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Griffith is expected to be an articulate interpreter of theology grounded in Scripture and the Reformed tradition as reflected in the Book of Order and the Book of Confessions. In addition to providing support to those that have constitutional questions, the associate director will also manage a “constitutional table” made up of other OGA staff who often answer constitutional questions so that responses to constitutional queries from around the church will be consistent and coordinated.

Thomas (Tom) Hay serves as director of assembly operations at the Office of the General Assembly. He has been with the OGA since January of 2009. Before coming to work at the OGA, he served as the general presbyter for the Presbytery of Shenandoah in western Virginia and portions of West Virginia.

Ordained in 1979 in the PCUS, Tom has served pastorates in Buchanan (Va.), Wallace (N.C.), and Bristol (Va.). He is a graduate of St. Andrews Presbyterian College (BA) and Union Presbyterian Seminary (D.Min.). Tom is a third-generation Presbyterian pastor with deep roots in the church and the ministry. He brings this history into the current imperative to discover the unfolding future of Christ’s work in the world.

Tricia Dykers Koenig will be the new associate director for mid council relations.

Dykers Koenig, a teaching elder member of the Presbytery of the Western Reserve and graduate of Duke University and McCormick Theological Seminary, has served two pastorates and for the past seventeen years has served as national organizer for the Covenant Network of Presbyterians, which for twenty years has sought “to strengthen the church of Jesus Christ … by furthering the inclusion of LGBTQ persons and working for the unity of the PC(USA).”

Dykers Koenig will be expected to enable strong and effective communication and common ministry between mid councils, OGA, and other PC(USA) agencies. In addition, she will be charged to put her community organizing skills to work to connect mid council leaders with skills, resources, and each other in order to strengthen leadership across the church.

Kerry Rice has assumed the role of Deputy Stated Clerk of the Office of the General Assembly and is responsible for strategic planning, for coordination of meetings of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), for leadership team meetings, and for providing leadership and administrative oversight for all programs and services of the OGA.

Rice, a ruling elder in the Presbytery of Ohio Valley and long-time PC(USA) employee, has worked in many areas of the church. He served as staff in the Young Adult Volunteer program in the National Ministries Division of the former General Assembly Council, as director of admissions for the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Louisville, manager in General Assembly Meeting Service responsible for the General Assembly Exhibit Hall, Big Tent, and Polity Conference planning.

Robina Marie Winbush is director of ecumenical relations. Prior to assuming this position, she served as the pastor of Hollis Presbyterian Church in Queens, New York. A minister of Word and Sacrament, Robina has served congregations in Harlem, Long Island, the Bronx, Queens, New York, and Louisville, Ky.

Winbush has served on several national and international denominational and ecumenical committees and organizations including the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the World Council of Churches, the World Communion of Reformed Churches, and the national staff of Church Women United. She just completed a term as president of Churches Uniting in Christ. Winbush served as the moderator of the Justice, Peace, and Creation Commission of the World Council of Churches.
Winbush was co-editor of Sisters Struggling in the Spirit: A Woman of Color Theological Anthology. She appears in African American Presbyterian Clergywomen: The First Twenty-Five Years. Her work has also appeared in Righting Her-story: Caribbean Women Encounter the Bible Story.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Section IV.C.1. of the Organization for Mission by adding a new “d.” and renumbering current IV.C.1.d.–h. as IV.C.1.e–i. The new section “d.” shall read as follows:

“d. Persons who serve as staff on any of the six agencies of the General Assembly, committees or commissions of the General Assembly, or persons employed by agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may not serve as elected members of committees, commissions, or special committees and commissions unless otherwise designated by the General Assembly.”

Rationale

The General Assembly Nominating Committee recognizes that General Assembly level staff should not serve in elected positions on ongoing committees of the General Assembly unless otherwise designated. Employees of the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) cannot serve as elected members of ongoing General Assembly level boards, commissions, or committees. Members currently serving in elected service on General Assembly level boards, commissions, or committees who become employees of the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must submit their resignation to the Stated Clerk in accordance with IV.C.1.e, so that the position may be declared vacant.

[The assembly approved Item 03-04. See pp. 11, 66.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) accept the invitation of the Presbytery of Utah to hold the 226th General Assembly (2024) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in Salt Lake City, Utah, from June 29–July 6, 2024.

Rationale

In accordance with Standing Rule I.1.d., the designated region for the General Assembly in 2024 is Region A, which includes the Synods of Alaska/Northwest, the Pacific, Southern California & Hawaii, the Rocky Mountains, and the Southwest.

The committee concurs with staff of the Office of the General Assembly that Salt Lake City (Presbytery of Utah, Synod of the Rocky Mountains) will be a very good location for the General Assembly, offering competitive pricing for excellent convention center facilities and conveniently located hotels.

Salt Lake City and the Presbytery of Utah last hosted the assembly in 1990. Since then it has hosted the winter Olympics, adding more hotels, a light rail that connects the airport to downtown, and other downtown attractions.

The Salt Palace Convention Center has expanded and undergone other revisions since it last hosted the assembly, and has more than ample space for all the traditional assembly events and operations. Exhibit halls for plenary, exhibits, and offices are large and convenient to the main entrances. Assembly committees can all be accommodated in rooms on three floors of the one section, making them easy to find and support. There are plenty of additional meeting rooms for other needs and functions. The Salt Lake Convention and Visitors Bureau and the convention center are offering discounts and concessions that bring the convention center rent to zero.

The Salt Lake City airport is located eight miles from downtown, and is a major hub for Delta. It currently has more than 700 daily flights serving more than ninety cities with nonstop service, offering good options for most participants traveling from across the U.S. and other countries.

Most other cities in this area capable of hosting an assembly would be much more expensive, offering much higher hotel rates and/or convention center rent. A few cities (Spokane, Reno, Albuquerque) were more affordable, but with much smaller convention center facilities and/or less convenient hotel packages.

[The assembly approved Item 03-05. See pp. 11, 66.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends, per G-2.1101 of the Book of Order, that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve the applications of the Administrative Personnel Association, the Educator Certification Committee, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians as national certifying bodies.
03 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Book of Order calls for the General Assembly to approve national certifying bodies in order for those individuals achieving certification to be recognized in the church. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly approved, at its October 2015 meeting, the application process for organizations wishing to be recognized as national certifying bodies.

Approved national certifying bodies are approved for the period of time starting at the close of the General Assembly where the approving action was taken to the close of the next General Assembly. These organizations must apply every two years (for consideration at the biennial General Assemblies) to maintain their status as an approved national certifying body. All three of these bodies were approved as national certifying bodies by the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

Applications were due to the Office of the General Assembly by January 15, 2018. The OGA received three applications: the Administrative Personnel Association, the Educator Certification Committee, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly now recommends them to the assembly for action.

G-2.11 CERTIFIED CHURCH SERVICE

G-2.1101 Forms of Certified Church Service

Persons may be certified and called to service within congregations, councils, and church-related entities, serving in staff positions. These individuals endeavor to reflect their faith through their work and to strengthen the church through their dedication. They should be encouraged by their session and presbytery to meet, or be prepared to meet, the certification requirements in a handbook provided by a national certifying body approved by the General Assembly. Names of those who have earned certification through a national certifying body shall be transmitted to the appropriate body of the General Assembly, which will forward them to the stated clerk of the presbyteries in which those persons labor.

G-2.1102 Presbytery and Certified Church Service

The presbytery shall encourage sessions to make continuing education funds and time available to those seeking certification, and shall affirm the skill and dedication of these certified persons by providing a service of recognition at the time of certification. The presbytery may grant the privilege of voice at all its meetings to persons in certified church service.

G-2.1103 Christian Educators

a. Skills and Training

Certified Christian educators are persons certified and called to service in the ministry of education in congregations or councils. They shall have skills and training in biblical interpretation, Reformed theology, worship and sacraments, human development, faith development, religious educational theory and practice, and the polity, programs, and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

b. Presbytery Responsibility

The presbytery shall establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits for Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators and shall provide access to the area of presbytery that oversees ministry (G-3.0307). During their term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, Certified Christian Educators are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified Christian Educators who are ruling elders, the privilege of voice and vote at all its meetings.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):
1. Add two at-large members to the General Assembly Committee on Representation, restoring its membership to sixteen persons.

2. Direct the two agencies that are under their six-year General Assembly review to:
   a. Assign at least one representative to attend one GACOR meeting per year in their two-year review cycle for the purpose of developing a collaborative working relationship.
   b. Invite one representative from GACOR to attend one meeting of that agencies’ board or comparable governing body per year in the two-year review cycle.

3. Direct all six agencies to apply Recommendations 2.a. and 2.b. above in the years when each agency is under review by the General Assembly.

4. Direct the General Assembly Nominating Committee to share representation data on all applicants for service on bodies for whom they nominate on a regular and timely basis.

5. Direct that each assembly receive information from GACOR of the representation of its commissioners and advisory delegates.

[Financial Implications: Per Capita Annual $3,848. Total—$7,696]

Rationale

Rationale for Recommendation 1.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) and 221st General Assembly (2014) assigned the responsibility of reviewing employment practices and addressing supplier diversity goals for all six Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) agencies in a scheduled rotation (every six to eight years). These responsibilities have greatly increased the workload of the committee and stretched the members’ time commitments. Two additional members will enable GACOR to properly support agencies as they strive to uphold supplier diversity guidelines and affirmative action policies, educate and collaborate with synods as they apply knowledge from their SCOR reports, expand the committee’s presence and educational opportunities across the denomination, and supply additional liaison positions to various caucuses and committees. Sixteen members will better equip the committee to draw from the widest of the PC(USA) across the guides in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. When the denomination was actively debating the future of synods, having acted to reduce them to “no more than 10–12” (Item 05-04, Minutes, 2014, Part I, p. 320, Recommendation 3.b.), GACOR asked its membership to be de-coupled from synods. We calculated that reducing our numbers would be helpful in changing the means by which geographic distribution was guided. It was a risk and it has proven a hardship in getting the work accomplished.

Historically, membership of GACOR was tied to synods designed to create wide regional representation. This made region the priority sought in the nominations process (when seeking one representative from each synod, a secondary or tertiary focus became the skills necessary to do this work and other aspects of diversity). Often this meant vacancies that were difficult to fill. As the guide from F-1.0403 is clear about including geography as a guide, the committee prefers the additional members have expertise prioritized. Regarding the make-up of the whole committee, emphasized needs include: cultural proficiency, data collection and analysis, theological training, and writing. Taking these skills and expertise into account after assessing those currently available within the existing committee allows the GACOR to best complete their work. It is the intention that the addition of these two positions will take into account this variety rather than privileging any one area of representation over another.

Impacting systems of thought, practice, and institutions is rigorous work and requires creativity and collaboration. A larger committee brings more resources to the difficult work ahead and allows for some specialization that would improve results.

Rationale for Recommendations 2.a., 2.b., and 3.

The GACOR completed a two-year monitoring cycle in 2016 with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA). In 2017, GACOR found that both OGA and PMA were working towards compliance to the General Assembly (GA) mandates of supplier diversity and employment practices. We expressed our appreciation to both of these agencies because our work together helped us to identify and design a collaborative and productive process; this ensured that the whole process was mutually encouraging. The work of evaluating each agency in its own context and right-sizing the benchmarks to them, is highly technical work and requires solid communication. With Recommendations 2.a. through 3., the GACOR desires our collaborative efforts to result in a streamlined, user-friendly approach throughout each of the agency reviews. It will set a practice in place that will serve the agencies and GACOR well.

With this practice in place, GACOR’s work may be viewed as a resource in assisting the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their commitment to comply with the directives and policies of the General Assembly. The committee strongly believes that a relationship between the bodies enhances the results of our work together.
Rationale for Recommendation 4.

The GACOR is a mandated partner in reviewing, advising, and assisting by recruiting underrepresented groups and providing additional nominees to all slates at the General Assembly. Both “Unity in Diversity” (F-1.043) and “Participation and Representation” (G-3.0103) of the Book of Order guide the work and ministry of the GACOR. Part of “advocating for diversity in leadership” (G-3.0103) is to review the nominations process and advise the committee. A slate can only be properly assessed in relation to its pool of candidates. The GACOR has followed GA recommendation to analyze data in disaggregated ways whenever possible. Part of this recommendation is about how data is shared. Identifying records but not persons, will allow the disaggregated analysis. Assessing the pools and determining where underrepresentation is most critical so attention and GACOR targeted recruiting efforts can be most effective.

To perform the work each General Assembly expects from GACOR, we must receive data on the finalized slates and the pools from which they are drawn so that the committee can review, analyze, and report all pertinent information to the body. It is challenging to do so when the GACOR does not receive the information in a timely manner. The GACOR looks forward to improved and deeper relationship with the GANC to serve this church well and advocate for wide participation in all its entities.

The GACOR is a mandated partner in advising on the selection of slates from nominating pools and in the appointment process between assemblies. In recent years, the GANC has notified the GACOR of finalized slates very shortly before submission (as little as 24–48 hours) and action. The GACOR cannot properly advise GANC in these circumstances. The data needs to be scrubbed of identifying information (names, emails, addresses) while still linked to individual records. In this way disaggregated analyses are possible, demonstrating the complexities of the pools and making gaps (and gluts) more apparent.

Rationale for Recommendation 5.

The GACOR does not currently have access to the assembly when it gathers to advise the body regarding representation and participation. There is currently no official process to inform the General Assembly body concerning its demographic representation.

Opportunities could include, but not be limited to: a report or presentation near the beginning of the meeting sharing disaggregated data of commissioners and advisory delegates and its implications for the work at hand; insights gained from process observation (experience) or knowledge of process observation in real time; a separate means in PC-biz to highlight the self-identified differences present (representation) within assembly committees and the General Assembly body as a whole; and/or an educational opportunity before the beginning of the assembly concerning the representation data (who’s present, how they get there, what identity groups are in majorities and/or underrepresented). Making provisions for the access to such data and education of its implications will enhance the awareness of potential biases, inequalities, overrepresented voices and/or participation, and lack of representation within the gathered body. It is the intention that such knowledge will shape and inform the actions of those present in their decision-making processes.

In the last two assemblies, GACOR has accessed registration data on a date just before the assembly begins and created profiles that appear under resources in PC-Biz. In 2012, the voter practice questions included demographic questions COR presented and disability in the room was reported at near 33 percent of commissioners and advisory delegates, while in registration system it was much lower (not above 8 percent). These insights inform leaders and participants and encourage sensitivities when awareness of rare perspectives is drawn.

Advice & Counsel on Item 03-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 03-06. Given ACREC’s original recommendation for a self-study to the 222nd General Assembly (2016), we fully support GACOR’s recommendation and strongly agree that the make-up of the committee needs to take into consideration cultural proficiency. People of color bring different culturally norms and practices that need to be understood.

WFC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-06

Comment on Item 03-06—From the Way Forward Commission (WFC) with the Concurrence of the All-Agency Review Committee.

The Way Forward Commission (“WFC”), with the concurrence of the All Agency Review Committee (“AARC”), advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve Item 03-06. In the work of both of our groups, we have seen the importance that the General Assembly Committee on Representation have adequate resources to carry out the important work of lifting up in measurable and useful ways our denominational commitment to diversity and inclusion in employment and contracting. Item 03-06 will further strengthen this important work and will assist GACOR in continuing to be a central voice in the review of each agency’s work.

2. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to produce supplemental instructions and teaching tools to assist churches with the preparation and processing of the SASR.

[3. Include the collection of data in the Session Annual Statistical Report relating to gender, disability, and Christian Education enrollment.]

[Financial Implications: Per Capita Annual $7,500. Total—$7,500]

Rationale

The 196th General Assembly (1984) created the Special Committee on the Statistical Needs of the Church. Its task was to examine and make recommendations about the statistics that are needed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), how they should be gathered, and how they should be reported. Thirty-four years later, there has been little change to the questions we ask or the things we choose to measure. As we move and grow in new directions and continue to implement the 2011 revisions to the Form of Government at every level of the church, the time is right to think about new statistical questions that can help guide churches, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly through this process of new growth.

In 2009, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly created a Statistical Revision Task Force to review the current Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR) and to propose changes to be submitted to the 220th General Assembly (2012). The task force was composed of elected members of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC, now called Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA)), staff of these agencies, and an outside consultant from the Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies who works with another denomination’s statistics and data collection. This group developed a comprehensive new approach to the SASR, presented it to presbyteries and sessions for their feedback, and refined their work further. COGA heard concerns about this draft from constituencies and caucuses representing concerns of people of color, women, and people with disabilities, and COGA chose to enter a time of further discernment and conversation rather than present any proposed changes at that time.

Independent of this past work, the 222nd General Assembly (2016) considered two items of business related to the SASR and particularly the racial ethnic component of the report. These overtures were referred to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, which picked up the work of the Statistical Revision Task Force and extended it to include the matters referred in these overtures. A working group of COGA members (including current and former presbytery stated clerks who work directly with clerks of session to receive the SASR), Office of the General Assembly staff, and other diverse persons sought to complete the work begun in 2009 and incorporate further improvements, resulting in the proposal now presented to the 223rd General Assembly (2018).
In its consideration of potential revisions to the Session Annual Statistical Report, COGA sought to simplify and streamline the report for our changing church. With more than 60 percent of our congregations reporting under 100 members, our church and its congregations are smaller than they were when the SASR was originally designed, and the information we need about our membership is necessarily and appropriately different.

The 2009 Statistical Revision Task Force agreed on three fundamental principles that would guide its evaluation and formulation of questions for the SASR.

- Information that is readily available: The SASR should not be a task that creates work for its own end; rather, it should gather information already at hand for meeting other responsibilities of the church. Because churches have such a wide variety of internal reporting procedures, it is not possible to devise a set of questions that will exactly replicate other reports prepared for session and congregational purposes. The questions should, however, be crafted based on expectations of what churches will already know about themselves.

- Statistically reliable: Not even a comprehensive census could establish exact numbers that would precisely quantify demographic and other categories of information about the church. Yet even granting such issues as incomplete reporting across and within our churches, care needs to be taken to provide as accurate a picture as possible of who we are and the ministries in which we are engaged. Questions that are reasonable in their expectations and acknowledge imprecision in reporting can enhance overall accuracy.

- Useful for ministry: The purpose of the SASR is to gather information that can help guide churches, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly in assessing and planning their respective ministries. Simple curiosity is not sufficient reason for requesting information. The reasons for requesting information should be either immediately obvious or simply explained and have a clear relation to the ministry of the church.

These three principles guided the completion of this work as well. The COGA working group also considered several other factors in its revision:

- Simplicity: In recent years, the overall reporting rate for the SASR has remained generally steady. However, the more complex component parts of the SASR have seen significant declines in submission rates, suggesting that some sessions are choosing to leave certain sections requiring more extensive information incomplete. We believe that any reduction in the number of data points will be easily offset by an increase in submission rates and therefore data quality.

- Context: Throughout its work, COGA sought to keep in mind the various contexts in which this data is submitted and used. We are well aware that a great majority of those who submit the SASR are clerks of session who rely on “best guess” and “loose estimate” techniques to fill in gaps in data that is at times difficult to quantify exactly without receiving an extensive census-like questionnaire from each and every church member. Without the deep faith and commitment of these clerks of session, the SASR would be impossible! Therefore, we made it our goal to keep the SASR as simple and straightforward as possible so that clerks could complete it easily and without making too many “best guesses.”

- Opportunity for supplemental questions: As a required report, the form of and questions on the SASR require General Assembly approval. Recommendation 2 would provide the opportunity for the Office of the General Assembly to work with the broader church to create and distribute a supplemental questionnaire that would offer space for deeper reflection on issues of immediate importance to the church or respond to particular needs of General Assembly entities for statistical information regarding the congregations of the PC(USA).

Principles of diversity and representation: In accordance with the directive of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), COGA also consulted extensively with the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) regarding the racial ethnic categories to be used in the report. They asked us good questions about the intentions and use of the SASR and its questions that helped us to think more carefully about how it should be designed. We appreciated their advice and counsel on this and other segments of the report, and we believe that this instrument will be far better at helping us to understand the church that we are and believe that God is calling us to be because of their honest input into its new form.

What Is Not Here

The proposed revisions to the Session Annual Statistical Report omit several elements of the previous SASR. Several of these changes are significant and substantial enough to merit mention and explanation.

Christian education enrollment. An extensive section of the previous SASR requested a highly specific breakdown of the number of persons enrolled in various age groups of Christian education programs. These statistics are no longer used to guide the creation of curriculum at the General Assembly level and are of limited value for local congregations in planning contemporary faith formation efforts.
Number of giving units and other financial breakdowns. The proposal removes a number of outdated, overly complex, and confusing references to financial data that have little or no meaning beyond this report. They were replaced with simpler, shorter questions that seek to provide a straightforward picture of the average PC(USA) congregation’s financial health.

Number of deacons. The role of deacons in PC(USA) churches is very fluid at present. Many churches do not have deacons, opting to use Stephen Ministers instead or giving the responsibilities of deacons to the session. Among congregations that have deacons, many will have a board of deacons while others exercise the option for utilizing individuals in this form of ordered ministry (G-2.0202). As churches seek to make a determination as to whether or not to have deacons, the proposed SASR asks congregations only to identify whether or not they utilize this ordered ministry, not to assign a number of persons to it, with the goal of encouraging linkage between congregations as they consider possibilities for this form of ordered ministry.

Disability data. The definition of disability on the current SASR is consistent with that adopted by the World Health Organization, but feedback to the 2009 Statistical Revision Task Force and anecdotal reports from presbytery stated clerks made it clear that the data that was being collected usually was more of a “best guess” of clerks of session than any sort of actual self-reporting by individuals.

Gender breakdowns. Requests for data related to the gender of church members and leaders have been removed from the proposed SASR following careful consideration and review of these questions, the history behind them, the data being submitted, and emerging understandings of gender in church and society. The question disaggregating female members from overall membership was originally included to track the differences between the proportions of male and female members overall and the proportions of men and women serving in leadership positions; consequently, it was necessary to designate the numbers of male and female ruling elders serving on session and the numbers of male and female deacons. Yet in the past thirty-five years, there has been no significant change to the percentages for either of these categories.

We recognize the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) regularly requests detailed demographic information, recently with interest in increasing degrees of disaggregation (e.g., breakdowns by gender and age within racial-ethnic data). Yet churches have begun to ignore these more detailed questions or simply guess. The responses do not provide accurate information, and the process tends to fuel distrust concerning why the question is being asked and how the information is being used. Legitimate concerns for this more detailed information are more likely to be fulfilled through the Clerk’s Annual Questionnaire or studies commissioned through Research Services, where the questions can be more specific and immediately relevant to the constituencies making use of the data.

Finally, as church and society begin to recognize and honor a broader spectrum of gender identity, the binary categories of the current SASR are inadequate to express the church’s emerging understanding of God’s gift of gender in the life of the church and its members. The particular design of the SASR where clerks of session are generally asked to decide questions of identity for their members makes it difficult if not impossible to collect this data in ways that recognize the emerging, more expansive understanding of gender identity.

Overview of the New Session Annual Statistical Report

The proposed new Session Annual Statistical Report groups its questions into three categories:

- Membership Information
- Congregational Life
- Financial

Information about the reasoning behind the formulation of the specific questions follows.

Membership Information

The Book of Order requires that a church maintain membership rolls (G-3.0204a) and that it report this information to the presbytery and the General Assembly as requested (G-3.0202f). Very few modifications have been made to the questions asked in this portion of the SASR. The questions correspond to the categories listed in the 2017–2019 Book of Order.

One specific change is the way discrepancies are handled for differences in beginning membership. Occasionally a church that has audited its membership rolls may find it necessary to correct its beginning membership for a year from what was reported as the ending membership the previous year. Changes will no longer be handled by “other” gains or losses. Instead churches will be able to declare a new beginning balance and the difference will automatically be calculated and reported as an adjustment. This procedure will facilitate the identification of administrative changes to a church’s membership as distinct from actual gains or losses in a particular year.

Congregational Life

Baptisms: “Baptism is the sign and seal of our incorporation into Jesus Christ … [and] the bond of unity in Jesus Christ” (W-3.0402). As such, the administration of this sacrament is a key indicator of a congregation’s response to Christ’s commission to make disciples and to nurture them in the faith (Mt. 28:19). The reporting of these statistics should present no difficulty in that each session is required to maintain a record of each baptism that it authorizes and that is administered by minister of the Word and Sacrament in service with the session (W-3.0403) and to maintain a roll that also includes those baptized elsewhere for whom the congregation has assumed the responsibility of Christian nurture to bring those persons to a profession of faith (G-1.0401).

The questions presented fall into two categories:

First, three questions relate to baptisms administered during the past year. They distinguish between those baptisms initiated by parents or others responsible for the nurture of the one baptized administered who intend to raise that person within the faith (“Presented by Others”) and those baptisms of persons who present themselves for baptism upon their own profession of faith either in the context of specific training of children and adolescents in Christian faith (“At Confirmation”) or other opportunities of appropriate instruction and examination (“All Others”).

Second, there is a question regarding the number of persons currently upon the roll of baptized persons (G-1.0401 and G-3.0204a). This number reports the total of all persons baptized within the particular congregation or elsewhere who have yet to make a profession of faith for whom the reporting congregation has assumed the responsibilities of care and nurture in the faith.

The definition of Average Worship Attendance has been clarified and simplified. Many churches have tended to include their special worship services in the count for Average Worship Attendance, and this reporting method skews the overall average. The new definition seeks simply the “weekly average of all regularly scheduled worship services.”

The Age Distribution question asks for the number of members in each of five broad age categories: youth/emerging adults (25 years and younger); young adults (26–40 years); younger middle-aged adults (41–55 years); older middle-aged adults (56–70 years); and older adults (71 years and older). These categories identify important and distinct groups in the church that can help congregations, presbyteries, and the denomination identify needs for age- or generation-specific activities and ministries and multigenerational needs and types of facilities and resources needed by the congregation; look for trends in aging within the membership; and understand how the age distribution of members compares with that of people in the neighborhood around the church and other congregations in the presbytery and with the PC(USA) as a whole.

Friends of the Church is an attempt to recognize and quantify those persons who are not members of a congregation who yet are participants in the life and worship of the congregation. While these persons may not have official standing to vote or hold office in a congregation, they nonetheless form an important part of the ministry and mission of PC(USA) congregations.

Number of Ruling Elders on Session is a figure that churches frequently request as they determine the size of their session vis-à-vis other churches of similar size.

The adjustments in questions regarding Deacons have been discussed above.

Congregation questions seek information regarding the racial ethnic identity of members of the congregation. The categories in this section have been reviewed and revised in light of several overtures to the 222nd General Assembly (2016) and extensive conversation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The racial ethnic categories used on the current SASR are the product of the original 1984 Special Committee on the Statistical Needs of the Church, with some changes approved by a later General Assembly. Feedback on these categories from clerks of session, presbytery stated clerks, and users of SASR data has been nearly universally negative, since the categories were created for a different time and include no option for persons who identify as multiracial. In addition, lack of clarity regarding the meaning of commas in the General Assembly action created three separate categories for African, African American, and Black that are often used interchangeably in individual reports and combined for use in the broader church.

To increase the usefulness of this information when churches seek to compare their membership to their surrounding communities, the task force and COGA working group initially considered adopting the racial ethnic categorization used by the United States Census Bureau. For historical reasons, that particular system proved to be both too highly specialized (e.g., in identifying specific subgroups among Asian-Pacific Islanders) and too general to represent historical trends within the PC(USA).

At the suggestion of GACOR, the COGA working group turned to the “Standard Definition for Supplier Diversity” approved by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) [Item 03-12], which included a set of “categories of difference” and accompanying definitions designed to identify diverse supplier groups. These categories were developed in consultation with the racial ethnic caucuses of the PC(USA) and reflected a long period of engagement of these groups by GACOR. COGA chose to adapt these categories only slightly by adding “White” and “Multiracial” so that they might capture the broadest spectrum of persons in our congregations.

These categories, like any listing of racial groups, are deeply constrained by the complex history and sociology of race and ethnicity. Since race and ethnicity are social constructs, we believe that self-identification is the most effective and appropriate way to collect this data. However, the constraints of the statistical reporting process make it impossible to allow each individual to directly identify their racial ethnic identity. Clerks of session have often made well-meaning assumptions regarding individuals’ racial ethnic identity to fit the categories of the SASR that have the unintended consequence of suppressing this important identity further.

The temptation, then, is strong to eliminate collection of this data entirely. Yet our Constitution requires otherwise: “The unity of believers in Christ is reflected in the rich diversity of the Church’s membership. In Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God unites persons through baptism regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, or theological conviction. There is therefore no place in the life of the Church for discrimination against any person” (F-1.0403). We hope that the proposed list of categories and the collection of this data, even in this imperfect form, will help the whole church to see a more complete vision of its wide diversity and help open space for greater conversation, learning, and understanding about these matters in congregations, presbyteries, and our whole denomination.

Finance

The current information collected on the SASR deals with specific, detailed financial questions. The main goal with the proposed questions is to gather information that develops a picture of a congregation’s financial health.

In the current SASR, there are approximately twenty questions regarding church finance; of those twenty, congregational and mid council leadership regularly requested and/or utilized data from only three. The task force incorporated data from the current SASR’s “Contributions” and “Expenses” lines into five simpler and yet more comprehensive questions that offer a picture of all income and expenses that a congregation expects to receive and use in a particular year.

Annual Income is summarized in a single line. With wide variations in definitions around various types of income, a shift to this single category is designed to simplify reporting and create more usable data that will help identify broader trends and clearly and easily track the difference between a congregation’s actual income and expenses.

Annual Expenses seeks a similarly simple overview of a congregation’s overall expenses as a point of comparison over time and in the larger church. Three subcategories here seek to help the church better understand how it is spending its money while keeping reporting simple.

- Mission Expenses focuses on those expenditures for mission not related to the PC(USA). Contributions to PC(USA) mission are already tracked on a per-congregation basis by presbyteries, synods, and the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and eliminating this duplicate reporting will both simplify the reporting process for clerks of session and increase the quality of the data.

- Personnel Expenses are a useful tool for councils at all levels. Currently the SASR does not collect this data; however, data on compensation of staff persons (particularly for churches of comparable size in comparable communities) is the most frequent request of the denomination by sessions and presbyteries.

- Facilities Expenses are an important measure of the church’s investment in buildings and grounds and other facilities used for mission and ministry. Councils will no doubt make use of this data in order to better understand the capacity of a congregation to determine program emphases and maintain facilities.

Advice & Counsel on Item 03-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 03-09.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) supports the General Assembly Committee on Representation’s request to the Office of the General Assembly that the COGA take into consideration the following comments and strongly advises further discernment on the proposed Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR). Grateful to our partners on GACOR, we cite below the entirety of their concerns, with which ACREC is in full support:

1. The document no longer solicits information concerning gender or disability, erasing the church’s ability to examine its inclusiveness in relation to the prevalence of persons with these identities in its membership. Lacking this information will further disenfranchise and renders invisible the needs of the individuals participating in congregational life. In addition, it will not allow for comparison to previous years’ SASR results to consider increasing or decreasing representation within the congregation. With respect to sessions, we will not have an ability to evaluate for gender. If anything, an addition of questions about active elders’ social identities would expand our understanding of inclusion and shed more light on effective power sharing.

2. Age continues to be distributed monolithically for those from 26–40 years old, despite representation of several different life stages within it. A more discrete breakdown would illustrate a fuller representation of young adults while still allowing for comparison to previous years’ data in the former designations. At the other end of the spectrum, current congregational membership includes many older persons and grouping these individuals in larger sets also obscures reality.
3. The language utilized in the race/ethnicity portion of the questionnaire continues to be problematic. When the choice to define categories was made, it added to the confusion. Problematic portions in this area of the questionnaire include but are not limited to:

a. “Hispanic” is not a category of race, but a designation of spoken language. Including one language and not others amplifies such a designation.

b. It is not clear what “black Africa” means as a category descriptor and can be perceived as negatively charged, racialized language.

c. “Multiracial” puts all individuals, despite diversity of identities, into one category. This does not assist the denomination in better understanding the unique needs of multiracial individuals in its pews.

d. The definition of “white” uses Europe as its descriptor, however, portions of this region are also included in the listing for “Middle Eastern/North African.” Whiteness is a category that changes over time as it seeks to claim power over other identities such as in West Asia, North Africa and Europe, as well as Australia and parts of Asia (Russia and the caucuses). To seek a definition of the category in this way illustrates a desire to make race more than a social construct.

e. The baseline data provided by SASR gives a context for understanding participation and representation evaluations. Understanding who is a Presbyterian and where they are located assists in efforts to widen participation, plants seed for power analyses, and broadens the meaning of difference in congregational and council life. ACREC believes that data is best at providing feedback on who is missing and who is overrepresented. That work often comes out of the questions a community asks when they see the mirror of SASR.

Finally, ACREC is in agreement with GACOR that the positional and defining power of the individual completing the SASR is an important consideration. He or she makes a determination and describes the identities of the individuals represented in the congregation that, unfortunately, often means guessing on behalf of marginalized members in the church. If constructed well, ACREC imagines that answering the SASR may prompt curiosity about how that difference matters in the community.

A completed SASR should lead to power analysis within our denomination, taking into consideration who is given the power to vote (or not) or the privilege to speak on the floor of mid-council meetings (or not) as well as the individuals or groups who determine such distribution of power. The changes to the SASR present the opportunity to transform the way the denomination approaches representation and equity. In the shadows of racialized violence across the country, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) possesses the distinct ability to revise how it understands its membership in the pews as well as its fellowships and new worshipping communities. ACREC acknowledges that there is hard work to be done within the denomination to ensure that representation promotes equity for all of God’s people. The SASR is important. It is difficult to construct in helpful ways. A race dominant church like PCUSA (still over 90% white) cannot afford to stop looking at itself, at race, language, gender, age, and ability. The prophets and Jesus remind the people again and again, that they have to have eyes to see and ears to hear. How, then, will you equip the church to understand itself across difference?

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-09

Advice & Counsel on Item 03-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 03-09.

Along with our sibling committee, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), and our partner in ministry, the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR), ACWC raises major concerns over some of the proposed revisions to the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR).

As a committee called to hold the church to the highest standards of gender justice and equity, ACWC warns against the discontinuation of collecting information regarding gender in membership. Not counting women as such will render them and their particular contributions as well as needs invisible. We will no longer know how, when, and if they are represented. Years of minimal change in data do not warrant no longer counting, particularly in a church and society that still so clearly struggle with sexism. [Gender and Leadership in the PC(USA), https://www.presbyterianmission.org/resource/gender-leadership-pcus/. Note: Gender data from the SASR was used throughout this report.]

Further, at a time when the world and the church are expanding their understandings of gender identity, as noted by the SASR Update, the data being collected on gender should continue to be broadened to include multiple gender expressions in order to remain relevant. This may mean a revamping of the methods whereby data is collected (which is also necessary with regards to the importance of self-naming racial and ethnic identities as well as disability), but this does not make the collection of such data less important. Data collection is essential to justice work as it reveals who we truly are and allows us to work directly toward becoming who we desire to be or say that we are. Being counted matters.
We would also direct the assembly’s attention to ACREC’s Advice & Counsel, as well as any comments submitted directly by the GACOR.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-09

Comment on Item 03-09—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) acknowledges that there is hard work to be done within the denomination to ensure that representation and inclusion promotes efforts to expand equity for all of God’s people. The Session Annual Statistics Report (SASR) is the tool that gathers basic membership information and is an important part of this work. Though it is difficult to do, changes to the SASR present opportunities to transform the way the denomination approaches noticing difference that matters, how it shows up in its practices, and when power is in play.

The GACOR lifts up The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity where the church makes plain several commitments that bear on this action. We urge you to consider them regarding whether and how the church counts as well as who and what we see in that counting:

1. F-1.0302.c.—“Because …the Church is catholic, it strives everywhere to testify to Christ’s embrace of men, women, and children of all…races, nations, ages, conditions and stations of life.”

2. F-1.0403—“the [church] shall guarantee full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership…” and lists areas of human life in which we fall prey to sin and discriminatory practice including “race, ethnicity, age, sex, [and] disability.”

3. F-1.0404—“a new openness in its own membership becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions … a visible sign of the new humanity.”

4. F-1.0404—“a new openness to see both the and perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activity in the world. …”

GACOR envisions that answering the SASR might prompt curiosity about how these differences matter in the congregation, mid council, and the denomination as a whole. This instrument provides estimates that inform baselines of how we understand who is in the Presbyterian community every year. Completing a SASR should prompt leaders to ask about how power is wielded across these consequential differences in each context within our denomination. Natural questions might examine who (in their configuration) is: more frequently ordained and given the power to vote (or not), given the privilege to speak on the floor of mid councils (or not), automatically given more access for participation, and how group identities of leadership relate to the membership in their context while looking at the distribution of power.

Recent changes in how SASR statistics are available to the public have improved access to the data. An annual and five-year trend of denominational statistics can be found here: http://church-trends.pcusa.org. Providing broad awareness of differences in multiple contexts, SASR provides baselines for self-understanding of inclusiveness and power sharing, tracking identities that influence access and participation. The requirement of responding to SASR provides institutional power to the questions, noticing difference that impacts opportunities for members and leaders.

Systems, including the church, behave inequitably across these differences historically and presently: age, gender, race, and ability. Year-to-Year baseline information allows for comparative analysis to hold up a mirror to congregations, presbyteries, and synods concerning representation and accessibility, some of which is gathered through the SASR. Deleting any of these categories and questions removes information, silences or erases the church’s ability to recognize itself in these ways, and blocks evidence that would prompt questions about inclusion practices.

The Standard Definition of Supplier Diversity, approved by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) as Item 03-12, https://www.pc-biz.org/#/search/3000031, contains definitions of racial group categories containing the federally recognized groups and expansions requested by actions of the assembly. They differ from the ones lifted in this action. The definitions proposed in the Supplier Diversity Definition are for internal use and written by caucuses themselves. The definition helps suppliers identify themselves as diverse in racial groups the church has claimed as impactful in its mission and ministries. It is not an approach suggested for church statistics.

The GACOR is a willing partner in exploring designs for church statistics that will improve self-understanding and equip the church to explore how access to power is differently experienced.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

Amending Standing Rule A.6.h. to Make Clear What Happens if Assembly Overturns Bills and Overtures Decision Not to Refer an Item of Business—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule A.6.h. as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“h. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may decline to refer proposed items of new business if it decides that the matters proposed are already before the assembly or that the purpose of the proposals can be reached by the process of amendment and debate. Proposed items of business not referred, whether declined by the Stated Clerk or the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, shall be identified in the first report of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures distributed to commissioners after the period docketed for committee meetings, with a brief description of the content and a statement of the reasons for declining the proposed business. Twenty-five percent of commissioners present and voting is required to overturn action of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to decline, take no action, or refer a commissioners’ resolution to a subsequent assembly. Should the assembly overturn a Bills and Overtures decision not to refer an item of business, the assembly committee who would ordinarily receive this item will be reconvened for the purpose of considering the business. If a commissioners’ resolution affects a substantial change in an existing social witness policy, the Stated Clerk should recommend to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures that it be referred to the next General Assembly.”

Rationale

All items of business that have been accepted by the Stated Clerk are considered in committee before they are presented to the assembly floor. Items of business are assigned to committees on the first day of the assembly. The appeals process for items not referred occurs after the first day. This addition lays out the process if the assembly decides to hear an item of business after committees have ceased to meet.

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-11. See pp. 65, 67.]

Amending Standing Rule B.2.e. to Anticipate Need to Adjust Number of Advisory Delegates—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule B.2.e. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“e. There shall be a delegation of theological student advisory delegates each year, two from each of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); one from each of the theological institutions in a covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and one each from three selected other theological seminaries. The selection process for these delegates is as follows: not to exceed fifteen. Any graduate theological student actively working toward a degree, with at least one year after the assembly remaining before graduation, may apply to the Stated Clerk for selection. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 180 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected. The Stated Clerk will present these names to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly for selection, ensuring if there are more than fifteen applicants, for diversity of region, race, gender, and theological institution with priority selection for students enrolled in the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Stated Clerk will then transmit the names of the students to be delegates to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(1) Each theological institution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate three students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. Two of these students shall be designated by the institution as delegates and the other student shall be designated as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery, or a student nominated by the Presbyterian School of Christian Education. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 180 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the names of the two students to be delegates to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.
“(2) Each theological institution in covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate two students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. One of these students shall be designated by the institution as the delegate and the other student as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 180 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(3) All non-Presbyterian theological schools represented by corresponding members on the Committee on Theological Education and one additional non-Presbyterian theological seminary shall be asked to nominate one theological student advisory delegate and one alternate. The additional non-Presbyterian seminary shall be chosen on a rotating basis, descending alphabetically, from those that have at least twelve Presbyterian enrollees (either inquirers or candidates under the care of a presbytery) as of October 1 in the year preceding the assembly. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 180 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

“(4) Nominated students shall have at least one more year of study following the assembly remaining in their degree program. The Stated Clerk shall forward the name of the nominated students to the presbyteries of jurisdiction for election and confirmation.”

Figures from 2016—594 commissioners; 141 young adult advisory delegates (YAADs); 20 theological student advisory delegates (TSADs); 8 missionary advisory delegates (MADs); 14 ecumenical advisory delegates (EADs) (183 total advisory delegates, making up 24 percent of total).

The year 2016 saw a decrease of sixty-two fewer commissioners. The year 2018 will have 538 commissioners, a decrease of sixty-five commissioners.

Standing Rule B.2.b. says that “When the ratio of advisory delegates to commissioners exceeds one to three, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be authorized to make changes to the Standing Rules to create a ratio of less than one in three.” The recommended changes bring the number of potential TSADs down from 28 to 15. It also allows students who are candidates for ministry but attending a theological institution not directly related to the PC(USA) to make application.

Amending Standing Rule E.2.f.(3) Regarding Privilege to Speak—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule E.2.f.(3) as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“(3) Persons with special expertise, including elected members or staff members of General Assembly entities; when such experts advocating a particular point of view have spoken to the committee, the committee moderator shall offer to the committee the opportunity to hear from experts advocating a different point of view.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2016 Referral: Item 03-01. Recommendation 2. Amend Standing Rule E.2.f.(3)—From the Presbytery of Central Florida (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 28, 159 of the electronic copy).

[The assembly approved Item 03-13. See pp. 11, 67.]

Amending Standing Rule E.5.a. Reviewing the Rules for Who Can Appropriately Use the Public Hearings to Address the Committee—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.
The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule E.5.a. as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. Each committee, with the exception of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, shall schedule at its convenience one or more public hearings on matters before it. Public hearings are the opportunity for the committee to hear from those who do not have other avenues for addressing the committee—including those who are not Presbyterian. For this reason, those who are given privilege to speak to the committee in E.2.f.(1–7) are not entitled to address the committee during public hearings.”

Rationale

For some items of business, the right to speak in public hearings must be limited because of the large number of people signing up. Current rules have allowed those who otherwise are entitled to address the committee to also take up space in public hearings. This change will alter this practice.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule F.1.d. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. Requests During the assembly, requests for the privilege of communicating with the General Assembly shall be referred to this committee the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures. This includes requests from assembly committees who wish to include reports or presentations that don’t relate directly to an item of business that is before the assembly. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, which shall confer with persons making such requests about the time and the manner in which their concerns may be brought to the attention of the General Assembly. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall recommend to the General Assembly a response regarding any possible presentation to the assembly at the beginning of the plenary where the presentation will occur. At the time any such recommendation is acted upon, any commissioner may request that an opposing view be heard, and the assembly shall consider and act upon the matter.”

Rationale

Before and at each assembly, the Stated Clerk receives dozens of requests by people and institutions to address the assembly on matters that are related to the church but not related to business before the assembly. This change makes explicit the role of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to control the docket and make good choices about access to plenary time.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule F.5.d. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. When the General Assembly is in plenary session considering an item of business, questions that touch upon arising in debate concerning constitutional matters, including rulings on questions of order involving constitutional matters requested by the Moderator, shall be handled by referred to the Advisory Committee on Constitution (ACC) present at the plenary (see Standing Rule B.4.). These questions shall be referred in writing by the Moderator to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall consider each matter referred and make recommendations directly to the General Assembly through the Moderator. In cases where the ACC cannot give an immediate response, the Moderator may entertain a motion to postpone the pending motion until the ACC is prepared to advise the assembly concerning the question that has been asked.”
Rationale

Current rules do not give guidance for those times when the ACC is not prepared to give an immediate answer to a question and allows for deliberations to be called to a stop by a dilatory constitutional question. This change allows the assembly to vote on whether the advice of the ACC is pertinent enough to justify postponing debate.

Item 03-16

[The assembly approved Item 03-16. See pp. 11, 67.]

Amending Standing Rule K.1.b. Regarding Commissions and Special Commissions—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule K.1.b. as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. In considering the creation of a special committee or commission the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall hear from relevant agencies, a representative from the General Assembly Nominating Committee, a representative from the General Assembly Committee on Representation, as well as from the assembly committee considering the proposal. Financial implications of special committees or commissions shall accompany any recommendation to the assembly.”

Rationale

For a variety of reasons, there has been difficulty appointing persons to serve on several commissions and special committees created by previous General Assemblies. The General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation can be useful resources to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures by providing well thought through recommendations for membership size and composition, skills, and requirements for service, and diversity needs, etc., as the assembly committee considers the necessity and viability of a special committee or commission.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 03-16

Comment on Item 03-16—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) looks forward to the collaboration called for in this Standing Rule change. The increasingly frequent practice of creating new bodies and to do so with detailed composition requirements has created difficulties in seating them. The committee has missed opportunities to consult regarding the recommendations for membership size and composition, skills, requirements for service, and demographic diversity available for commissions and special committees. Consultation regarding the pools of available persons to serve on commissions and special committees will equip assembly commissioners and committees with knowledge and data that predicts the impact of any proposed composition of appointed members before votes are finalized. For example, the GACOR can provide information on the representation within a given committee and the General Assembly body as a whole should participation be suggested from within one or both of those bodies.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule A.4.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. The assembly committee to which it is assigned is authorized to approve minutes of the agencies and entities without referral to plenary unless discrepancies occur that call for reporting to the assembly. Minutes of General Assembly entities agencies will be reviewed in accordance with the ‘Guidelines for Preparation of Minutes of Agencies’ as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Minutes of the synods will be reviewed in accordance with “Guidelines for Reviewing Synod Records” as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly.”

Amending Standing Rule A.5. to Reflect Book of Order, G-6.04e—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule A.5. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“5. Each presbytery shall act upon all papers sent to the presbytery to be voted upon in ample time to permit the stated clerk of the presbytery to transmit the results to the Stated Clerk so that they are received no later than one year following the adjournment of the assembly responsible for the proposed amendments two weeks before the convening of the General Assembly. The response of the presbytery shall be mailed to the Stated Clerk by certified mail.”

Amending Standing Rules A.3., A.3.c.(6), and A.3.e. Define Clearly Meaning of Concurrence and Role of Overture Advocate—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend the Standing Rules as follows:

1. Amend Standing Rule A.3. by adding a new “b.” and re-lettering current “b.” through “e.” as “c.” through “f.” New section A.3.b. reads as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “b. Concurrences are items of business that have been approved by a presbytery that recommend an action identical to that in an overture already received for that assembly. The first concurrence received by the Stated Clerk, fulfilling Book of Order, G-3.0302d, must be submitted by the deadlines appropriate for the overture and entitles the submitting presbytery to an overture advocate. Subsequent concurrences must meet the forty-five day rule for business.”

[The assembly approved Item 03-19, Recommendation 2. See pp. 65, 68.]

2. Amend Standing Rule A.3.c.(6) by striking the text:

   “In the event that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly receives an overture similar to one already proposed (excluding the rationale), she or he shall inquire of the presbytery or synod in question whether it would be willing to concur with that existing overture or desires to withdraw the overture. A presbytery or synod concurring with an overture may submit additional rationale for its action, provided that it does not duplicate the rationale provided by the overturning body. The concurrence and any additional rationale will be printed with the original overture in the Reports to the General Assembly. Concurrences to any overture shall be received up to 45 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. Concurrences to any overture with constitutional implications shall be received up to 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.”

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-19, Recommendation 3. See pp. 65, 68.]

3. Amend Standing Rule A.3.e. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “e. Each presbytery or synod that submits an overture and the presbytery whose concurrence was received first (SR A.3.b.) shall each notify the Stated Clerk of the name of an overture advocate who shall be available to provide information on the background and intent of the overture to any assembly committee to which the overture may be referred. Each council who submits an overture or concurrence may appoint only one overture advocate. Only the originating council and the first concurring council will have the right to appoint an overture advocate. (See Standing Rules A.3.c.(6) A.3.b. and E.2.)”

Rationale

With changes in the Book of Order requiring a concurrence to an overture, the Standing Rules needed to be updated to reflect the new reality. This change accomplishes two things: (1) it sets a policy on what a concurrence is and what deadlines are pertinent and (2) it clarifies the relationship between a concurrence and an overture advocate. Under current policy, every concurring mid council has the right to send an overture advocate. This has created an imbalance in access to assembly committees as a presbytery that concurs with every overture would have special privileges at the assembly when compared to a presbytery that did not.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-19

Advice on Item 03-19—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) that Recommendation 3 of Item 03-19 presents the following issues the assembly should consider:

Recommendation 3 of Item 03-19 would limit the opportunity for presbyteries and synods presenting or concurring with overtures to the General Assembly to provide overture advocates to represent them before standing committees of the assembly.
Only the first presbytery or synod presenting the overture and the first concurring presbytery or synod would be entitled to be so represented.

Item 03-19 seeks to address the tension between the right of presbyteries and synods to appeal matters of controversy or concern to the General Assembly (and so to be decided by the voice of the whole church per F-3.0206—see footnote 6) and the assembly’s right to determine the manner by which it conducts its business (F-3.0209, G-3.0102). The Constitution does not specify the manner by which a lower council may petition the General Assembly to address a matter of controversy or concern (except that requests for interpretation of the Book of Order and proposed amendments must be received “in writing” per G-6.02 and G-6.04a).

However, a right to petition the General Assembly could reasonably be interpreted to include a right to address the assembly on the matter of concern. This is currently provided through the identification of overture advocates per Standing Rule A.3.e. While petitioning bodies may seek identical ends, their contexts and rationales may differ. Excluding the voice of petitioning presbyteries and synods from being heard by the assembly (or the committee designated to make recommendation on the matter) could be interpreted to violate the just exercise of their right to petition the assembly.

One might entertain the analogy that a concurrence to an overture is equivalent to “seconding” a motion under parliamentary procedure. However, this analogy is unconvincing. Parliamentary procedure presumes an assembled body in which those moving and seconding a motion are present and able to speak. This is not necessarily the case in standing committees of the assembly.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution is not aware of any historic interpretation of the Constitutional provisions in this matter to resolve these issues conclusively.

Amending Standing Rule A.2.d. Regarding the Length of Reports to General Assembly—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

In order to account for the new emphasis on translating every item into Korean and Spanish, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend Standing Rule A.2.d. to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. All reports shall be limited to ten five thousand words except the report of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the length of which shall be determined by the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. A request for an exception to the length of a report, up to ten thousand words, shall be submitted to the Stated
Clerk no later than forty-five days prior to the deadline for the submission of the report and shall include the anticipated length of the report. The Stated Clerk may assess a fee of the entity or committee whose report exceeds ten five thousand words for the costs incurred in translating, printing, and distributing the excess pages. Payment of the fee shall be submitted to the treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. If the Stated Clerk and the representatives of any body are unable to agree, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall determine the length of the report.”

Rationale

A new emphasis upon making sure that all reports are translated in a timely manner has necessitated a reexamination of the place of lengthy written reports. While allowing for exceptions, this should aid in the work of the assembly.

Amending Standing Rules by Deleting A.3.d. and Inserting a New A.1.c. Regarding Language on Distributing Overtures Reflecting PC-biz—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) amend the Standing Rules as follows:

1. Amend Standing Rule A.3.d by striking the text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through.]

   “d. Overtures that do not propose constitutional amendment or interpretation, and that are postmarked at least sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be published (print or electronic) in the reports distributed by the Stated Clerk. Overtures received in the same manner, postmarked no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be distributed to the commissioners before the convening of the General Assembly.”

2. Amend Standing Rule A.1. by adding a new section A.1.c. to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “c. It is the responsibility of the Stated Clerk to distribute the business of the assembly, with translations as appropriate, in a manner that allows the church to carefully discern the work of the assembly.”

Item 03-22

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Directing the Office of the General Assembly to Develop a Plan for Cost-Reduction Measures for Meetings of the PC(USA) General Assembly.

The 223rd General Assembly (2018) directs the Office of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to investigate adaptive and technical issues around cost-reduction measures for future meetings of the General Assembly and to report back with a plan to the 224th General Assembly (2020). These measures may include, but are not limited to,

1. finding new ways of managing overtures, resolutions, reports, and other business, reducing the number of days the assembly meets;

2. changing the venue to university campuses with conference capabilities that meet accessibility and safety needs for our diverse commissioners;

3. moving from a biennial to triennial or quadrennial meeting cycle;

4. evaluating the present committee structure;

5. examine the advisory delegate process and structure.

Rationale

Exploring who we are and what we do when we gather, including all possible ways to reduce the costs of the meeting of the General Assembly, is necessary in a time of vast denominational shifts and changing demographics. The work of the assembly is important work, and the efforts of those who tirelessly commit to pull it together should be celebrated. Yet, one of the most significant items in the OGA budget is staging the meetings of the General Assembly. At a time when the denomination is challenged by rising costs to coordinate ministry and resource congregations from a national level, while many mid councils and members voice concern in significant increase to per capita, it is prudent to evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of what we do.

The meeting of the General Assembly may be a place where shifts to how we meet can make our ministry together more effective and significantly reduce costs without impacting the function and purpose of the assembly. The PC(USA) must figure out how we still meet together and do the critical work supporting of Christ’s disciples within a more realistic structure and budget for the size denomination we now find ourselves.

A reduction in the per capita funds committed to the meetings of the General Assembly is not only necessary, it is also faithful in order to be able to direct resources to other crucial initiatives for mission, social witness, and support of mid councils in their work to equip congregations.

Because the OGA is already committed for contracts for assemblies several years in the future, plans to make shifts must move forward immediately. Any delay will result in yet another two-year cycle being added to the commitments that already exist. Doing so will help lead the way for our denomination in demonstrating our adaptive posture, our ability to imagine how we are a connectional church for generations to come, and our faithful response to the Spirit’s continued work among us, even in the midst of change.

[Comment: Recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) refer Item 03-23 to the Office of the General Assembly, to be in consultation with the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and to bring a recommendation before the 224th General Assembly (2020) for full consideration, including the possibility of constitutional amendment.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Permitting Advisory Delegates to Have a Full Vote in Moderator Elections in Future General Assemblies.

That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) direct that advisory delegates have full vote in Moderator/Co-Moderators elections in future General Assemblies.

Rationale

Advisory delegates currently have advisory votes in plenary sessions. Advisory delegates believe that their votes should be tallied as full votes in the election of the Moderator and Vice Moderator or Co-Moderators. The election of the Moderator and Vice Moderator or Co-Moderators sets the tone for what is to become of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) over two years. The Moderator(s) are the representation, as well as a model, of the embodiment of Christ in the PC(USA) and that decision impacts both commissioners and advisory delegates. The church is not dying; it is reforming. In order to reform, the church must embrace new perspectives and work to cultivate relationships. In order to create a more inclusive, diverse church, we must bridge the generational gap and work to understand each other in the light of Jesus Christ.

Advice on Item 03-23—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The recommendation was that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) direct that advisory delegates have full vote in Moderator/Co-Moderators elections in future General Assemblies.

Findings by ACC

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly (A.6.d) states that “Commissioners’ resolutions shall not contain business that requires an amendment to or interpretation of the Constitution (see Book of Order, G-6.04a).” Item 03-23 conflicts with and would require addressing the Book of Order, F-3.0202, “This church shall be governed by presbyters, that is, ruling elders and teaching elders (also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament).” In addition, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission found in MacKellar v. Synod of the Northeast:

It is not intrinsically discriminatory to require presbytery, synod and General Assembly commissioners to have prior experience in the government of local congregations, the “basic form of the church” (G-1.0101). To the extent the Synod’s Bylaws and Standing Rules fail to give proper weight to the requirements of F-3.0202 and G-3.0401 by giving vote to members who are neither ruling elders nor teaching elders, they are unconstitutional.1

Following Standing Rule A.6.d, Item 03-23 should be rejected and not heard by this committee or referred to the plenary session. The purpose of Standing Rule A is to provide for an orderly process for receiving and considering business at the meetings of the General Assembly. Standing Rule A.1. states:

1. Papers in General

Papers to Be Considered

a. The General Assembly shall consider only those papers delivered to the Stated Clerk in compliance with Standing Rule A. Ordinarily, such papers shall have been forwarded to the Stated Clerk postmarked, or electronically delivered, no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly.

Standing Rule A.3.c.(4) and (5) provide:

(4) Overtures not received within the designated time limits shall not be considered, but shall be returned to the originating council for reconsideration.

(5) Presbyteries or synods submitting overtures with a recommendation(s) that affects the work or budget of a General Assembly entity(ies) shall submit evidence that the affected entity(ies) has (have) been consulted. If such evidence is not submitted, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the overture be received and referred to a future session of the General Assembly so that consultation may take place.

The reasons for Standing Rule A include providing for an orderly and timely process for considering matters by the committees and commissions relevant to the subject matter at hand. The goal of this rule is to provide an informed basis for considering matters that come before a General Assembly. In particular, the deadline for submission of papers is intended to allow time for the General Assembly commissioners to receive advice and counsel from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on any proposal that would require interpretation or amendment of the Constitution. Commissioners do not have the benefit of advice regarding a resolution that proposes amendment of the Constitution when the resolution is presented outside those timeframes in the form of a commissioners’ resolution. Thus, the General Assembly’s Standing Rules do not permit consideration of such resolutions.

Item 03-23 illustrates the wisdom of following the Standing Rules. For example, the ACC has not yet provided any advice on the actual subject matter of Item 03-23. While the proposal may indeed be one that the General Assembly may wish to consider, allowing advisory delegates to vote on elections of a Moderator or Co-Moderator has constitutional implications for several provisions in the Book of Order, including certain Foundational Principles regarding governance at General Assemblies and the role of advisory delegates. It is unwise to consider such a significant change on a rushed schedule and without ACC (and other) advice. The correct and better process is to present the matter on a timely basis as an overture to the 224th General Assembly (2020) so that the matter can receive the full hearing it deserves.

If it is the decision of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures to consider Item 03-23 notwithstanding the Standing Rule, the ACC advises against approval of Item 03-23. Further consideration of Item 03-23 by the 223rd General Assembly (2018) shall require suspension of the Standing Rules by a vote of the assembly.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-23

Advice and Council on Item 03-23—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) commends Item 03-23 in its effort to “center” younger voices, bringing them in as full participants in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 03-23, conditional on the following considerations being addressed:

1. Ecumenical advisory delegates are not members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). While ecumenical voices are an important contribution to the discourse at the General Assembly, it does not make sense for members of other denominations (ecumenical advisory delegates) to vote for Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) leadership.

2. Proportionality. The current voting population for the Moderator election consists of commissioners proportionate to the population of presbyteries. While inclusion of theological student and missionary delegates may not significantly skew this ratio, one young adult advisory delegate (YAAD) is currently appointed per presbytery. Unless additional young adult advisory delegates were added from larger presbyteries, this would mean a significant increase in the influence of small presbyteries on Moderator/Co-Moderator elections.

3. Selection of young adult advisory delegates. The current process for selecting young adult advisory delegates varies by presbytery, and does not require ordination as a deacon or other position within a congregation. Setting a uniform minimum standard of local selection would be consistent with the polity of the church as applies to all other voting members.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness (ACSWP) advises that these issues be taken into account prior to any blanket inclusion of advisory delegates in Moderator elections. If these items are adequately addressed, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness (ACSWP) supports Item 03-23, recognizing that the prophetic and intergenerational voices of advisory delegates are an important cue for how the church must grow and change.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-23

Advice and Council on Item 03-23—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 03-23.

Advisory delegates are present at General Assembly to offer differing perspectives on issues that impact and affect the PC(USA). This advice is not to be considered lightly, but reverently in the spirit with which it is offered. However, voting delegates do not have to accept the advice or counsel from our partners in ministry.

We continue to offer that the voices of people’s long silenced be heard and acknowledged, as our advisory delegates listen to the Spirit of God and advise the assembly.

02 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS & OVERTURES COMMENT ON ITEM 03-23

Comment on Item 03-23—From the 02 Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures refers this commissioners’ resolution to 03 Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures with the following comment:

While Item 03-23 contains business that requires an amendment to or interpretation of the constitution; we enthusiastically suggest a referral to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly for further consideration and reporting to the 224th General Assembly (2018).

A. Appointment of Assistant Stated Clerks—From the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, with the approval of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly has appointed Jihyun Oh, manager for call process support, and Flor Vélez Díaz, manager for judicial process, as Assistant Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

Jihyun Oh joined Mid Council Ministries as manager of call support in January 2018. Oh, a minister of Word and Sacrament, will be responsible for providing support, resources, and training for committees on ministry in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s presbyteries, including their call processes. She will also carry management responsibility for the Church Leadership Connection.

Oh has a wide range of experience in the PC(USA). She has held leadership positions in the Presbyteries of Greater Atlanta and Chicago and was a commissioner to both the 221st General Assembly (2014) and the 222nd General Assembly (2016), at both of which she served as a committee leader. She most recently served on the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation. In addition, Rev. Oh has served as both an English- and Korean-language Standard Ordination Examinations reader.

Flor Vélez Díaz is joining Mid Council Ministries Division as manager of judicial process and social witness in constitutional interpretation. She replaces Laurie Griffith, who now serves as the associate director for constitutional interpretation.

Vélez-Díaz, a ruling elder, comes from a family that is multigenerational Presbyterian. She has served as a commissioner from the Synod of Puerto Rico on the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) since 2012, including as vice moderator (2015–2017) and as moderator since October 2017. She has also served on the committee on ministry and several administrative commissions of the Presbytery of San Juan.

B. GACOR Agency Summary

“As many of you as were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female: for all of you are one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s offspring, heirs according to the promise” (Gal. 3:27–29) (Book of Order, F-1.0403, Unity in Diversity).

Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) is a permanent standing committee of the General Assembly, mandated by the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Book of Order (G-3.0103, Participation and Representation), The Manual of the General Assembly (including the Standing Rules of the General Assembly and the Organization for Mission) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and the Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action. Since it was constituted at reunion in 1983, GACOR has a long history of leadership, training, and service to the denomination.
The GACOR helps the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) become what God calls it to be, a church that includes diverse persons from the abundance God provides, an inclusiveness that represents the fullness God has created. We serve the denomination, keeping our attention on the quality of its community and always pointing toward a greater openness to voices not always heard, to leaders routinely overlooked, and to seek decision-making processes that enable full participation.

Assigned Responsibilities

The GACOR, in its constitutional mandate, promotes, reviews, advises, advocates, and consults with the General Assembly and its entities, committees, councils, and divisions in order to ensure that the principles of inclusiveness and diversity are implemented. How we function as the body of Christ is important both internally (structures, procedures, ways of interacting) and externally (social witness, mission, ministry). The church seeks to live into the abundance of the gifts given to it for its mission by helping it express that diversity and more fully accomplish our common ministries. To do this most faithfully, the church needs to have the widest possible participation. This rich diversity of membership and participation particularly includes “race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, [and] theological convictions (Book of Order, F-1.0403). At the national level, the church (as the body of Christ) is equipped with the widest possible diversity, by election and employment, for its life and it is called to select broadly from those leaders for its bodies.

Accomplishments

Since the close of the 222nd General Assembly (2016) on June 25, 2016, in Portland, Oregon, the GACOR worked diligently to complete the functions assigned by the Book of Order, Organization for Mission, and in accordance with its Manual of Operations. The committee met face-to-face four times. The GACOR Executive Committee (GACORX) consists of the moderator, vice-moderator, secretary, and the two chairpersons of the two subcommittees—Gather, Advise, Translate, and Export (GATE) and Advise, Review, Report, and Recommend (ARRR). Subcommittees meet monthly by Zoom teleconference or in-person when GACOR is meeting for an in-person meeting.

The continued transition from more frequent face-to-face meetings to Zoom teleconference meetings has provided significant financial savings for the committee’s budget. Challenges remain to streamlining this process, but the utilization of Zoom has allowed more frequent interactions to do the work of GACOR leading to a greater continuity of individual projects.

Accomplishments over this two-year term included:

- Book discussions for GACOR study and training included Racism in a Post Obama America, edited by David Maxwell (WJK, 2016) and Pre-Post Racial America by Sandhya Rani Jha (Chalice, 2015).

- In October of 2016, GACOR held an orientation for new committee members in Ferncliff, Arizona, and a retreat for the full committee. Jessica Vazquez-Torres and Jyaphia Christos-Rodgers, with CROSSROADS Anti-Racism Training, facilitated training for all members of GACOR.

- The GACOR held consultations with committees on representation of various mid councils, where it met. These dialogues provided GACOR opportunities to learn of the ways that synods’ and presbyteries’ CORs conducted their work in their contexts. We also heard specific concerns and challenges. The GACOR listened, learned, and, where invited, consulted and advised CORs on ways to progress toward better representation and equity in the PC(USA).
  - February 2016—Synod of Southwest and Presbytery of Santa Fe.
  - March 2017—Synod of Boriquén, Noroeste Presbytery, San Juan Presbytery, and Suroeste Presbytery
  - October 2017—Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy

- The GACOR staff alerts the committee members when invited to local synods and presbyteries for additional training. Members sometimes attend to promote the GACOR, service beyond local and spread awareness of the work being done.

- Dropbox is now a central part of the work of GACOR. This has dramatically reduced paper waste, increased availability of documents, and reduced the time spent sending reports and comments between committee members.

- GATE hosted six meetings with synod leaders (executives and stated clerks) regarding the synod representation reports via Zoom. Feedback on the report is very positive so few changes have been made. Trending data is now available and useful for synods. The focus of conversations has been to clarify intent and process improvement.

- Initiated multiyear trending reports for synod COR leaders. Developing content to share information for the wider church.

- Completed first supplier diversity analyses for the six agencies of PC(USA) based on supplier diversity definition approved at GA222.
Increased engagement of synod leaders and agency leaders through education and awareness of the reporting process.

The GACOR regularly comments on overtures to the General Assembly. The GACOR proposed language sometimes is approved into final actions.

The GACOR engaged in conversations with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concerning the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR). At the 222nd General Assembly (2016), a referral comment from the Item 03-02 requested that the “Committee of the Office of the General Assembly to work with the General Assembly Committee on Representation to determine the most effective and efficient way to achieve this outcome by the 223rd General Assembly (2018)” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 28, 161, electronic file). Three GACOR members joined on four video conference calls with a COGA subcommittee to explore options, discuss possible changes, and engage in conversation around the SASR.

The GACOR held conversations with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) regarding hiring practices and nomination processes.

In accordance with Standing Rules, a GACOR member participated in the Leader Selection process for the 222nd General Assembly (2016) assembly committees and for the 223rd General Assembly (2018) assembly committees on February 12, 2018.

In preparation for the 223rd General Assembly (2018) in St. Louis, Missouri, the committee reviewed General Assembly overtures and other business, preparing comments and marking items of interest to the committee for follow-up.

At the October 2017 meeting in St. Louis, GACOR met with the GA223 COLA team to discuss concerns from previous assemblies surrounding diversity and inclusion issues in worship and committee structures.

As part of our learning experiences and dialogues with mid councils, agencies, and multiple committees on representation across the denomination, we have come to the conclusion of the need to write a theology on representation for reflection and further study. Committee members—the Reverend Dr. Raj Nadella, assistant professor at Columbia Theological Seminary, and the Reverend Eric Thomas, Ph.D., student at Drew Theological Seminary—drafted a Theology of Representation that was approved by GACOR (see Appendix A). Rev. Nadella and Rev. Thomas presented a Bible study on the theology at the Mid Council Leaders Gathering in St. Louis, Missouri, in October 2017. They utilized resources and wisdom provided by other members of GACOR.

The GACOR members lead two workshops at the 2017 Mid Council Leaders Gathering in St. Louis, Missouri, on a theology of representation and the inclusion of those with disabilities.

of Government and reflects the denomination’s experience with the new Form of Government in the General Assemblies since its approval (i.e., 220th General Assembly (2012), 221st General Assembly (2014), and 222nd General Assembly (2016)).

I: THE TASK

The task of self-study is a process of the General Assembly that occurs every six years. The ACC looks inward and evaluates its work based on review standards covering the previous six years and is required to file its report 120 days prior to the 224th General Assembly (2018). Simultaneously the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), in consultation with the ACC, develops a survey instrument by the Office of Research Services. Finally, the review responsibilities are vested in a designated assembly committee. The standards that are under review are covered under two broad headings: (1) Fidelity to Mission and Purpose; and (2) Effectiveness of Services. As presented this report provides a description of the ACC’s work and performance, as requested in the “Manual—Assembly Committee on Review” (Appendix 11) and addresses the self-study criteria indicated in the “Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committee and Commissions” (Appendix 12). Thus, the study provides two things: (1) a firm and focused sense of the ACC’s mission in the life of church, and (2) clear and specific ways to improve the performance and effectiveness of the ACC.

The ACC moderator, Alyson Jahnke, appointed Mon Lee and Judy L. Woods to conduct the self-study project, and she assisted them as needed. They were supported by Laurie Griffith and Dianne Minter with the Office of the General Assembly Constitutional Services. The survey was conducted by Susan Barnett, Ph.D. We thank all those who participated in and assisted with this self-study. Finally, we thank the ACC predecessor self-study committees, on whose work this report builds.

A. A Brief History

The ACC was created with the reunion of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1983. Prior to that, the predecessor denominations had relied upon the respective General Assembly Stated Clerks to do several of the functions now assigned to the ACC. In the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, it was the General Assembly’s Stated Clerk—who was charged with interpreting the denomination’s Constitution—who would draft the opinions and polity advice pertaining to any overture that sought to amend the Constitution. This overture counsel from the Stated Clerk was summarily presented to the General Assembly’s polity committee for assembly action at the time of the annual General Assembly meeting.¹ The Presbyterian Church in the United States utilized a different mechanism in regard to proposed overtures that sought to change the Constitution. Predictably, the Stated Clerk was the primary ecclesiastical officer; however, any overtures submitted to the Office of the Stated Clerk were duly presented to the Permanent Judicial Commission for action.²

The original 1983 formula for ACC membership, previously G-13.0112a, set the number of members at six; but this did not last long, undoubtedly because the number of overtures to the assembly was more than six persons could reasonably handle, and an amendment to the Book of Order, setting the number of members at nine, was approved by the assembly in 1985. The ACC, throughout its history, has had a commitment to remain within the parameters of its constitutional mandate and has not expressed a need to expand or alter its fundamental responsibilities to the General Assembly and the church.

B. Organization and Responsibilities

The ACC is established by the Book of Order, G-6.02 (previously G-13.0112):

The General Assembly shall elect an Advisory Committee on the Constitution composed of nine persons, ministers of the Word and Sacrament and ruling elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be a member ex officio without vote. No person who has served on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for a full term of six years shall be eligible for reelection until four years have elapsed after the expired six-year term. The General Assembly shall provide by its own rule for the qualifications of members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. (G-6.02) (See Appendix 1 for the Book of Order citations that outline the constitutional mandate for the ACC.)

The description of committee and member responsibilities is in the Manual of Procedures for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). (See Appendix 2.) The life-center of the ACC revolves around the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its role in the life of the church. For instance, any questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order are referred to the ACC by the Stated Clerk (G-6.02, previously G-13.0112c, d). It is the role of the Stated Clerk routinely to make decisions about referring matters that arrive at the Office of the Stated Clerk.³ (See Appendix 3 for the Standing Rules that describe the role of the Stated Clerk.) In many respects, the ACC is directly related to the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly, but is an independent entity of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk is an ex-officio member of the ACC, but the actions of the ACC are not subservient to the Stated Clerk. The ACC does not have the authority to interpret the Constitution regarding requests for interpretation of the Constitution, but rather it makes recommendations (advice) to the General Assembly for action, which may be to approve, disapprove, or modify the counsel of the ACC.

All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall communicate its report and recommendations to the next session of the General Assembly, no less than sixty days prior to the General Assembly. (G-6.02)
Preceding the meeting of the General Assembly, the bulk of the ACC’s work involves overtures to the General Assembly, which chiefly are proposed amendments to the Book of Order (G-6.04b, previously G-18.0301b), and requests for interpretation of the Constitution. The ACC’s advice to the General Assembly on the typical flurry of overtures and requests to the General Assembly, many of them controversial, have only the authority of being recommendations from a special General Assembly entity.

C. The ACC’s Call to Mission

The ACC serves and supports the church’s mission by providing the General Assembly advice in matters of interpretation and amendment of the Constitution of the PC(USA). In this work, the ACC serves and supports the church’s mission by assisting the General Assembly to make choices about the interpretation and amendment of the Constitution, and more particularly, the Book of Order, with an understanding of the context of their choices and the consequences of proposed actions. To perform this function, the ACC prepares advice to commissioners at each assembly as to each item of business seeking an interpretation or amendment of the Book of Order. In light of this charge, exhibiting “a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role” has several aspects: (1) faithfully providing advice on each item sent to an assembly that suggest a constitutional interpretation or amendment; (2) providing such advice in a manner that is clear and understandable to its audience (i.e., General Assembly commissioners); and (3) providing such advice without becoming advocates for particular factions of the PC(USA). (See Appendix 4 for a full description of the duties of the ACC at the meetings of the General Assembly.)

Prior to any General Assembly meeting, the ACC expresses its partnership role by consulting with various entities that will be making significant reports to the General Assembly. The ACC expresses partnership in mission by regularly consulting with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (PJC). Upon request and need, the ACC continues its servant function by working with various other entities, including governing bodies of the PC(USA).

During the assembly, the primary arena for the ACC’s advice is with the various General Assembly committees (assembly committees) that have business related to some aspect of the Constitution. Members of the ACC are assigned to the assembly committees that have business with constitutional implications. The role of the ACC members who staff assembly committees is very carefully sculpted: the ACC counsel should faithfully provide information on those items being designated for the assembly that require a constitutional interpretation or amendment. That advice is to be expressed in a manner that is clear and understandable to the General Assembly commissioners and any audience present at the assembly committee meeting. Most importantly, the ACC’s recommendations, because of its focus upon its understanding of the Constitution, shall be neutral in political tone and shall not advocate a position of any entity or group of the PC(USA).

The ACC’s role is constitutional and supports the mission of the church by guiding the assembly in the authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order to provide for order and justice in the common life of the church, “For God is a God not of disorder, but of peace” (1 Cor. 14:33a). In this way, we help shelter the children of God from injustice and abuse arising out of confusion and disorder and help exhibit the Kingdom of Heaven to the world (Book of Order, F-1.0304). The ACC consistently attempts neutrally to evaluate constitutional matters before the assembly. It takes great pains to give careful, constructive, critique to proposals. The ACC endeavors to be particularly sensitive to the sometimes volatile sentiments and beliefs expressed in our theologically diverse denomination. The ACC views these realities as an opportunity for further educating and reminding the church of the principles and beliefs expressed in our Constitution. The fundamentals of our polity continue to guide and inspire the church when they are applied in the decision-making process.

D. The ACC’s Faithfulness in Its Servant Role

The ACC’s faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role is vividly shown in its commitment to neutrality on difficult issues before the church. While sometimes goaded to be partisan, the committee has maintained and enforced within itself high standards of objectivity and neutrality, in order that its service to the church might be trusted. Further, the ACC has strengthened its service by increasingly seeing its role as educational and instructive. Most commissioners to an assembly do not come with a detailed knowledge and understanding of the inter-workings of different sections of the Form of Government or the Rules of Discipline. Former ACC moderator, Jim Wilson, stated in a prior survey response that “the advice the ACC gave during my tenure on the committee generally did a good job of helping commissioners understand those inter-workings, and thus make well-informed judgments about the alternatives offered them.” In preparing this advice, the ACC must be, and generally has been, sensitive to the distinction between advocacy and advice, while still offering its wisdom as to the unintended or less than obvious consequences of particular options being considered. The ACC’s advice given the past few assemblies regarding the options available with respect to the ordination of gay and lesbian Presbyterians, and its advice regarding approval of the new Form of Government are examples in which the ACC has done a good job of presenting the assembly with options and consequences, without stepping over the line into an advocacy position.

In sum, the ACC primarily acts in a servant capacity; it does not initiate its own agenda; rather it responds to requests from the church for interpretation of existing provisions of the Book of Order and provides counsel to the assembly regarding amendments to the Book of Order. In addition, the ACC serves the assembly in an advisory capacity when required. Members of the ACC often contribute hundreds of hours of volunteer service in preparation for a particular meeting of the General Assembly, and in service while the assembly is in session. Members of the ACC, much like the members of other committees and commissions, boards and ministries in church councils large and small throughout our denomination, are grateful to the presbytery and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ for affording us the privilege to serve.

E. The Interface Between the ACC’s Constitutional Mandate and Being Equipped to Respond to the Needs of the Church

Honoring the ACC’s historic charge does not easily lend itself to the notion of being a visionary entity. The ACC’s primary function is to be reactive and responsive to the business that is routinely placed before the committee. The Book of Order places some rather stringent parameters on what the committee can and cannot do. The committee has learned that one of the key components to being visionary in its work is to cherish the past and use it to reflect upon the future. Frequently, when the ACC has crafted its written response to an overture to the General Assembly (GA), the recommendation will cite (and remind the assembly) of historic events that shaped the denomination as well as drawing attention to past assembly actions and judicial decisions that are still relevant and helpful.

The ACC is keenly aware and concerned about emerging issues in the church—especially the issues that have a polemical and divisive nature. Ordinarily, the ACC addresses these issues in the context of an ACC response to an overture or a concern that arises in the assembly’s plenary session. And, the ACC continues to discipline itself not to take an advocacy position on any matter before the assembly.

II: SELF-STUDY STRATEGIES AND PROCESSES

A primary principle for this self-study is that there be a conspicuous alignment between the self-study strategy and processes if consistent results are to be obtained. Largely, there are two parties in this study: (1) ACC members and former members, and (2) persons who are “consumers” of the ACC’s advice. Because the intent is not only to provide a self-study, but also to solicit perceptions of the ACC from important others, several survey instruments were designed that would generate the information in an honest, objective, and fair manner. In addition, two sets of surveys were prepared and distributed. The survey was designed/modified and distributed by the ACC subcommittee based on a previous self-study of the ACC (2012) with assistance of the General Assembly Office of Research Services (GAORS) in designing, distributing, collating, and summarizing the results. Gathering clear, candid data was the goal of both of the survey instruments. The General Assembly Office of Research Services also compiled the responses, prepared a report, and submitted its findings to the ACC. A slide presentation prepared by Susan Barnett is attached to this report. (See ACC Permanent Committee Review 2017 Report October 23 2017.pptx.) This report summarizes the survey process and findings, as well as strengths of the ACC, areas for growth, and other comments.

III: EFFECTIVENESS

Webster’s Dictionary defines effective as, “… producing the intended or expected result.”

This self-study will explore the performance and role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) within the context of the larger institutional environment of the General Assembly (GA) and the spiritual lives of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In a stringent effort to derive objective and honest information, the surveys targeted several levels and arenas of persons that have felt the impact of the ACC’s work. The harvest of the survey information provides a keen portrait of the ACC’s worth, precisely because the ACC is uniquely effective in the manifestation of its constitutional mandate. According to the description of the functions of the ACC in the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the primary orientation of the ACC is to the meetings of the General Assembly. However, the data are clear that the impact and effectiveness of the ACC is felt throughout the church in numerous ways, on multiple levels of governance, and in the daily lives of Presbyterians.

A. On the General Assembly Level

In preparation for a meeting of the General Assembly, the most conspicuous and common tasks before the committee are the preparation of the written responses to requests for interpretation of the Book of Order (G-6.02 previously G-13.0112c) and the committee’s advice to the assembly regarding overtures that seek to change the Constitution (G-6.04 previously G-13.0112d). The Book of Order requires that the ACC meet prior to each session of the General Assembly and submit its advice to the Stated Clerk no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the assembly (G-6.04b previously G-13.0112b). The ACC performs its work by initially assigning each item of business coming to an assembly (or in the more unusual case, items referred by an assembly to the ACC) to a drafting team. Each member of the drafting team prepares a draft comment or response to each item of business assigned it. Once the drafting team agrees on a proposed response, that draft is presented to the entire committee for discussion and revision. Only after several redrafts does an item generally receive approval from the entire committee for submission to an assembly. This process is effective in creating consensus among committee members as to the appropriate reasoning and conclusions to be submitted to the assembly, and forces discipline and rigorous writing and analysis. Fortunately, this work all occurs within an atmosphere of community and common mission that places the integrity of our responsibilities to the church above any personal interests, an approach that should be a model to the rest of the PC(USA) (James Wilson, ACC alumnus 2010). When the ACC’s recommendations are submitted to the Stated Clerk, they are the result of arduous toil, both by individual members of the ACC as well as the full committee. Some overtures, in particular, require extensive research and study that is labor intensive. These recommendations soon enter the public domain, initially as Reports. to the General Assembly, and are distributed to elected commissioners prior to the General Assembly meeting. The ACC recommendations become part of the printed record of the General Assembly in the Minutes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Part I, which are available to every stated clerk and council in the PC(USA).

By the time the General Assembly convenes, the ACC has made extensive and thorough preparations for each item of business that requires ACC presence and assistance in General Assembly committees, such as the Church Polity Committee. Because the General Assembly committee structure is set months before the assembly convenes, each ACC member has been given his/her GA committee assignments, which may include several different committees. It is the responsibility of the ACC member to be fully prepared to interpret in full to the GA committee the rationale for the ACC’s recommendations and advice. Members of the ACC are not authorized to deviate from the ACC recommendations/advice to offer personal opinions. It is the responsibility of any ACC member assigned to a General Assembly committee to introduce oneself to the committee’s leadership team prior to the convening of that committee for business. At that time, ACC members will request a moment of time on the committee’s agenda to state briefly the role of the ACC. Comments from the survey underscore the importance of an early working relationship between the leadership team and the ACC member(s). In those committees with controversial business items, it is not uncommon for the ACC representatives to be called upon multiple times by the committee leadership, as well as by individual members of the committee. Members of the ACC, in preparation for the General Assembly, are trained to utilize those times in GA committees when questions arise for the ACC as “teaching moments” about our polity and Constitution.

Perhaps the best indicator of ACC effectiveness at the General Assembly meetings, whether it is regarding the written recommendations on business items or the oral interpretations in GA committees, is the relative absence of complaints or criticisms of the ACC. One of the most meaningful experiences for ACC members is to hear, during the GA plenary discussion, a commissioner echoing verbatim written recommendations/advice of the ACC. Surely the most important indicator of GA effectiveness is the esteem and appreciation of the ACC by the GA commissioners, and at each assembly there is considerable praise for the ACC.

B. The ACC as Communicator

The ACC’s constitutional responsibilities require it to be primarily reactive, not proactive in its communications. It is an advisory committee and should not initiate discussion of issues before the PC(USA). The constraints of the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly have successfully prevented the ACC from becoming tainted by or accused of having any political agenda. The ACC, therefore, is not charged with or expected to communicate to the church at large directly, and it has scrupulously avoided doing so.

Although the opportunities for communications are limited, the ACC’s primary communications with the church-at-large is through its advice to proposed actions of each assembly, which are posted on the denomination’s website prior to the assembly. The ACC has sought to bring its reports earlier each year to the assembly, and to structure them when they were posted to make them as clear as possible to anyone reviewing an assembly’s business online.

In addition, the ACC is literally on the record regarding constitutional issues that have come to the General Assembly for action. Not only do the Minutes contain the ACC recommendations but also the electronic version of each GA’s Annotated Book of Order contains ACC advice on overtures that sought to amend the Book of Order. At each meeting of the General Assembly, the ACC makes a formal entity report that is also included in the Minutes. Typically, the ACC report provides general information about the nature of the ACC and its constitutional mandate of service to the General Assembly and the church; and it also renders specific comments on the nature of the business before the assembly that has constitutional implications.

The ACC occasionally communicates in unseen and yet important ways typically within the context of General Assembly entities. “When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters.” The ACC sees itself as having a small, yet significant role as being servant to the General Assembly and the church as well as being in partnership with various key GA entities. There is a strong “comfort zone” for the ACC members in its role as communicator because of the power and wisdom of the Constitution and the Scriptures, “Your decrees are my delight, they are my counselors” (Ps. 119:24).

C. Fidelity to Mission

The ACC has always strived to complete its work in a timely, but thorough and comprehensive manner. Of more significance is the ACC’s awareness of its responsibility in providing a high-quality of performance in every venue. Individually and corporately, the ACC has a strong sense of call and faithfulness to Jesus Christ in the fulfillment of its required work.

Conscious of its mission, the ACC is careful to function within the limits of the powers granted to it by the Constitution and the processes outlined in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly. The ACC often works closely with task forces and commissions of the assembly that have been charged with addressing matters impinging on the Constitution to provide timely advice in matters that require constitutional interpretation. While ACC advice to the assembly on proposed amendments is transmitted through the Office of the General Assembly, the ACC on occasion has requested that some of its advice be released sooner than planned to provide increased understanding and transparency of its work.

In addition, the ACC’s work often attracts observers from interested parties or groups in the church. Provision for their observation is facilitated during both face-to-face meetings and on conference calls, except on the rare occasion when it is necessary for the ACC to meet in executive session. Lastly, while the newly adopted revision to the Form of Government no longer specifies that ACC members must be present whenever the assembly is in session, it has been the practice of the ACC that the full complement of ACC members is ordinarily present, rather than only the three whose presence was previously required.

IV: STRENGTHS AND AREAS FOR GROWTH

A. Strengths

The primary source for information about the strengths of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) was from current and former members of the ACC and the comments of those who responded to the surveys, including mid council executives and stated clerks, as well as commissioners.

An extremely large number of survey respondents mentioned the people that populate the ACC as an enormous strength. Specifically, the caliber and wide diversity of persons was a key factor; the knowledge, skills, and unique credentials create a powerful dynamic when the committee is in action together, in particular. Another major strength is in the ability of the ACC to provide informed helpful advice without advocacy for a particular cause.

The following represent survey comments about the ACC:

- “[A person] from the ACC, was very helpful to the committee I was on most recently.”
- “Absolutely necessary. Should also be in middle governing bodies and others.”
- “I think the ACC has a thankless job and handles their duties very well. I think it is important to have people on the committee who will be fair, who do not have personal agendas, or who do not let their personal opinions get in the way of what is best for all in the Church. It is also crucial to have committee members who are comfortable with technology, and equally comfortable with critical thinking and discourse, as well as comfortable with criticism.”
- “In general, I think the ACC does excellent work. I know several people who have served on the ACC and it is primarily through knowing them that I understand the work of the ACC.”

Standards of performance for the ACC, especially in regard to the written recommendations of the ACC to the General Assembly, are both a daunting and challenging dimension of the scholarship expected and tacitly required. The history and continuity of ACC achievements are unquestionably of major significance. Whereas many would expect the ACC to perform in a rather orthodox, even wooden, manner because laws are perceived as rigid and conventional, in many situations the ACC purposely has endeavored to pursue creative solutions to complex issues. On every overture or issue that the ACC addresses, it is the ACC’s practice to point out the “upside” and “downside” for approving an amendment to the Constitution, for instance. It is the responsibility of the ACC to educate and elucidate the General Assembly with its recommendations.

B. Weaknesses and Areas for Growth

There was no clear consensus amongst active committee members as to actual or perceived weaknesses in the work of the committee. Everyone would likely agree that time devoted to discussing issues and ability to staff all of the General Assembly (GA) committees effectively were challenges with which the committee struggles. The occasional failure of members of the ACC to prepare drafts of advice in a sufficiently timely manner to allow adequate review was also noted as a weakness. Representation on the committee that balances diversity of the church as to racial minorities, women, theology, age, and constitutional underpinnings through attention in the nominating process was another issue raised. The following represent other survey comments:

- “Advisory Com on the Constitution gave confused comments when the AI on marriage came to the floor.”
- “It would be wonderful if somehow the ACC advice could be dispensed to the presbyteries as they are in the process of constructing their overtures. It's a shame when overtures are crafted and endorsed, and then when GA meets, we discover that they are not consistent with the constitution.”
- “The Advisory Committee on the Constitution presented one interpretation in the resources and verbally completely flipped at plenary. Showing the individuals bias not the committee’s advice.”
“The booklets on the Overtures were not sent to our Presbytery in time for being able to use them at our March meeting, and since we did not meet again until June, we did not get to vote until the day before the deadline for reporting.”

V: SURVEY LEARNINGS

A. Scope of the Surveys

The surveys utilized were intentionally designed to meet the criteria suggested in the self-study survey guide published by the Office of the General Assembly. Therefore, the scope was broad and yet specific. In the spirit of the criteria, the surveys endeavored to provoke in-depth, thoughtful, and candid responses. The scope of the surveys pinpointed key aspects of our life together as Presbyterians:

- PC(USA) Constitution
- Faith
- Polity
- Mission
- Theology
- Dedication to the PC(USA)
- Meetings of the General Assembly
- Welfare of the church

The intent of the surveys was to measure the ACC against these hallmarks. The ACC is at its best when its Christian humanness shines through when writing, presenting, and meeting; and the surveys tried to establish this with a somewhat clinical means.

B. Participation

Research Services uses Survey Gizmo, an online survey software for all surveys including the Presbyterian Panel. Commissioners and mid council leaders were surveyed separately; however, both received the survey followed by two reminders and an immediate thank you for their response. The online survey was sent via Survey Gizmo to 1,935 commissioners for the 220th, 221st, and 222nd General Assemblies (2012, 2014, and 2016), and it was also sent to 289 mid council leaders. The total response rate was 42 percent (932 of 2,224 surveyed), with 43 percent of commissioners (829 of 1935) and 35 percent (102 of 289) of mid council leaders responding.

The key findings of the survey are summarized as follows:

- Commissioners’ awareness of the ACC increased as a result of attending a General Assembly. This is evidenced by the 21 percent increase in familiarity from prior to, then following the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

- Commissioners report the quality of advice received on overtures for proposed changes to the Book of Order to be good (40 percent) or very good (28 percent).

- The ACC consistently receives good to excellent ratings on the quality of their work, advice offered in plenaries, fairness in their findings, knowledge of the Book of Order, and professionalism.

- Mid council leaders acknowledged that the ACC exhibits comprehensive knowledge of issues, is consistent in their interpretation of the Book of Order, and offers helpful interpretations and explanations.

- Forty-eight percent rated the ACC’s responses to questions raised during General Assembly plenary sessions as “good,” and another 30 percent rated the ACC as “excellent,” with only 18 percent rating the responses as “fair” or “poor.” The following graphically illustrates the overall positive view of the ACC from survey respondents:
G-6.02 INTERPRETING THE CONSTITUTION

The General Assembly may provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order, which shall be binding on the councils of the church when rendered in the manner described in this section or through a decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case.

The General Assembly shall elect an Advisory Committee on the Constitution composed of nine persons, ministers of the Word and Sacrament and ruling elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be a member ex officio without vote. No person who has served on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for a full term of six years shall be eligible for reelection until four years have elapsed after the expired six-year term. The General Assembly shall provide by its own rule for the qualifications of members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.
All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall communicate its report and recommendations to the next session of the General Assembly, no less than sixty days prior to the General Assembly.

G-6.04 AMENDING THE BOOK OF ORDER

Amendments to the Book of Order shall be made only if all the following steps are completed:

a. All proposals requesting amendment of the Book of Order are communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposals to amend the Book of Order to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-6.02), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At least sixty days prior to the meeting of the General Assembly, the advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendations from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

c. The same General Assembly approves the proposal to amend and transmits the proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their vote.

d. Presbyteries shall transmit their votes to the Stated Clerk no later than one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendments.

e. The Stated Clerk receives written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority of all the presbyteries. The proposed amendment so approved shall become effective one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.

2. The Office of Constitutional Services makes an initial judgment as to whether the request “requires an interpretation” by the General Assembly.

   a. If Constitutional Services believes that the provision is adequately interpreted by other provisions of the Constitution or past authoritative interpretations, it will respond to the request, with a copy to the moderator, vice moderator and secretary of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

      (1) If the moderator, vice moderator and secretary agree that the request needs no further response, they will recommend to ACC that the reply of Constitutional Services be affirmed. When ACC agrees, this is an ACC determination that the provision does not “require interpretation.” The requesting entity is informed of this action and the request does not appear in the record of the General Assembly. If ACC does not agree, the request will be assigned to a writing team.

(2) If the moderator, vice moderator, and secretary do not agree with the judgment of Constitutional Services or its response, the request will be assigned to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly’s consideration.

b. If Constitutional Services believes that the request requires an ACC response, the moderator and secretary will assign it to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly’s consideration.

3. Once ACC approves a recommended response, it is included in its report to the General Assembly. Upon action by the General Assembly the provision will have been authoritatively interpreted.

GENERAL RULES FOR MEMBERS

1. All members are expected to be in attendance throughout each and every meeting of the committee.

5. Members of the committee are not authorized to speak for the committee and thus are expected to show restraint in responding to any request for constitutional interpretation.

6. The actions of the committee have no authority until acted upon by the General Assembly. It is therefore improper for any committee member to disseminate any actions taken by the committee before they have been made public by the Office of the General Assembly.

7. In preparing responses to communications to the committee, those members assigned responsibility for review and recommendations should use the document identification number assigned to that document.

8. When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters. The only authoritative interpretations of the Constitution are those recommended by the committee as a whole and approved by the General Assembly.

D. General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) Self-Study 2012–2017

Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) continues to serve well in its call to facilitate work for full inclusion and wide participation across issues of race, age, ability, geography, gender, equity, power, privilege/advantage, oppressions/disadvantages, and impactful biases at the General Assembly level, with its constituent entities, agencies, committees, and councils. Through education and support, advocacy and data analysis, GACOR builds up the community of God so that reconciliation is made manifest and the principles of inclusiveness and diversity are implemented.

In preparing for review by the assembly, the GACOR has reflected upon our work since January 1, 2012, and produced this self-study. We have considered our faithfulness to our role and mandate to serve the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). During this review period (January 1, 2012 to December 31, 2017), there have been many accomplishments and much progress in the work of GACOR. There remain challenges as we have been set with generational work to assist the whole church in accomplishing. We completed this self-study with excitement and hope, as we consider the future of the GACOR and the PC(USA).
Supporting the Church’s Mission

The General Assembly Committee on Representation, a permanent standing committee of the General Assembly, seeks to uphold the denomination’s dedication to diversity and inclusion nationally and to influence all levels of the church. Never has the work of the committee been more apparent and important than in these difficult times of racial tension and deepened divisions in American society. The Book of Order declares at G-3.0103 in committing to this work that “the councils of the church shall give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall provide for full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices (F-1.0403). In fulfilling this commitment, councils shall give due consideration to both the gifts and requirements for ministry (G-2.0104) and the right of people in congregations and councils to elect their officers.” The GACOR seeks to serve in the fulfillment of this mission at the assembly level.

The GACOR seeks to dismantle the hold of systemic racism and all forms of oppression on, and in the structure of the denomination while provoking members and councils to ridding ourselves of biased attitudes and tendencies so we can faithfully share the full stories in our community and lift up the talents of those silenced in our midst, those missing in decision-making, the overlooked gifts available to serve God together. We experience it at the communion table, in the pews, at the meeting tables, in council gatherings, and in conference calls. We seek strategic partners in the agencies, councils, and caucuses to join us in this critical work to ensure diversity, equity and inclusion of all persons within the PC(USA).

Membership

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) is comprised of fourteen persons elected by the General Assembly (GA) through nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), in accordance with the principles of unity in diversity in F-1.0403, distributed as equally as possible in the four regions described in SR I.1.d., each residing in a different presbytery. The regions provide means for geographic distribution.

All members are nominated at-large and elected by the General Assembly in as nearly equal classes as possible, taking into consideration: age, race, gender, physical ability, teaching or ruling elder or church member, and theological diversity so that GACOR is equipped to represent the diversity of the PC (USA). Terms are four years and there are two classes of seven persons serving at any one time.

As directed by the Organization for Mission, every member “shall be an active member of a congregation, or a continuing member of a presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” within the geographical boundary of the region and a synod therein.

On December 31, 2017, members of GACOR ranged in age from under 25 to over 75. Members described their race identities as African-American, Hispanic/Latino/a, White, Asian, Middle Eastern, Native American, and Multiracial. Three members self-identify as living with disability. Four members are under 35. Four members are church members, 6 are ruling elders and 4 are teaching elders.

Staffing and Resourcing of GACOR

The Reverend Molly Casteel, manager, equity and representation, is the assigned staff person to the committee (her work is located in Mid Council Ministries in the Office of the General Assembly). Rev. Casteel brings a wealth of antiracism work and training, as well as experience in staffing GA committees. As a pastor, she has many excellent contacts with professionals in the areas of theology, antiracism work, committee functioning and support, etc. She brings these resources to the committee when appropriate and requested and this benefits the work. Rev. Casteel has developed good working relationships among the GA staff, which enables the work of GACOR to function smoothly. She provides seamless organizational guidance to the entire committee. Rev. Casteel faithfully serves the mission and values of GACOR.

Accomplishments

There have been many accomplishments in the review period that we want to share, in brief here are some:

● GACOR held training events in 2013 (Chicago, 67 persons) and 2015 (Portland, 51 persons) to equip members of synod CORs (and included proximate presbytery CORs). Funding from the GACOR budget provided registration costs, travel, room and board expenses for these designated participants.

● When possible, the location of a physical meeting also meant the GACOR consulted with local mid council committees on representation. These dialogues provided GACOR with opportunities to become informed of the contexts and practices of those synods and presbyteries in relation to COR work. We also heard their specific concerns and challenges. The GACOR consulted and advised CORs on ways that can continue to progress our goal of true representation and equity in the PC(USA). This approach became the norm after 2015. Highlights include:
  ○ March 2015—Presbytery of Grace and Synod of the Sun, committees on representation
○ January 2016—Meeting with the Presbytery of Santa Fe leader and Synod of the Southwest executive/stated clerk.

○ March 2017—Spending a day in consultation with the committees on representation from the Synod of Boriquén, the Noroeste Presbytery, the Presbytery of San Juan, and the Suroeste Presbytery.

○ October 2017—Meeting with the presbytery executive leader and members of the Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy, committee on representation and nominations (CORN).

● In compliance with Standing Rule K.1.c, GACOR consulted with the GA Moderator/Co-Moderators on the principles of participation and inclusiveness and the great diversity of the church’s constituencies as these pertain to appointments made by the GA Moderator(s). The committee met with the Moderators of GA220 and GA221 consulting on appointments for special bodies created by those assemblies. The GACOR met three times with the GA223 Co-Moderators. We have brought a wish list of dreams for greater equity and inclusivity to the Moderators, along with strategies to implement on their part. We have emphasized the need to work with the racial ethnic caucuses and councils to improve the diversity of nomination applications to GANC. We have had positive responses and conversations with the Co-Moderators.

● In the review time, GACOR sent a liaison to the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), which improved relations on collaborative work from the assembly. In 2017, ACREC reciprocated by adding a liaison to GACOR. These liaisons helped the committees consult on the six-year cultural proficiency plans of the six General Assembly agencies and other referred work.

● Synod COR report forms are now submitted online through a web portal, streamlining the process and making documents available to a wider audience. In 2016, we had enough data in the system to provide trending data on synods. We shared it with synods so they could compare their performance against themselves over time and will be presenting some data on the web going forward.

● Convened the Supplier Diversity Definition Table with representatives of the six PC(USA) agencies and developed a standard definition for supplier diversity (Item 03-12) approved by the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

● Since 2012, the committee has engaged the six agencies in regular conversation regarding their employment practices. The 220th General Assembly (2012) restored this work to GACOR by approving the report, Privilege, Power and Policy: The Church as Employer (Item 11-17), and its recommendations.

● The GACOR leadership and committee met regularly with the Stated Clerk to advise him and to receive advice on issues of concern before the assembly.

● In the preparation for the Way Forward Committee at GA222 and Way Forward Commission of 2017–2018, committee members participated in PC(USA) Identity conversations led by COGA and surveys distributed by the GA221 Moderator.

● The GACOR moderator attended meetings of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board regularly (2012 to present) as an observer and provided advice on issues before that body, as requested.

● A member of GACOR has attended and advised meetings of the COGA at least annually since 2012.

● Corresponded with the manager of assembly nominations and the designated liaison from the GANC, regarding GACOR needs and concerns.

● Communicated with the designated liaison from the GANC (changes every two years) to advise regarding the candidates needed by GACOR, to request reports on candidate pools and scheduling for consultation on slates for GA election.

● In accordance with Standing Rules, GACOR participated in the Leader Selection process, advising the Moderators of the 220th General Assembly (2012), the 221st General Assembly (2014) and the 222nd General Assembly (2016) as they selected GA committee leadership.

● The GACOR members read and discussed several books for its continuing education:
The book discussions opened committee members to share stories with one another. Members shared, and were listened to, and then engaged in substantive discussions. Reading and reflecting as a committee allowed participants to express experiences and thoughts about racial tensions, current events, and how racism and white supremacy are built into the denomination. Training events held in 2013 and 2015 were continuing education for the members.

One learning from the multiple experiences and dialogues with mid councils, caucuses, other committees, agencies, and committees on representation across the denomination, has been that there are new incarnations and realities of the work since constitutional reform in 2011. There is no longer one definition of how to do the work. The practices vary, in response to contexts and councils’ will. We decided after two years of consideration that we needed to look at the theology of why we do the work. We collected ideas and insights from members and then referred the work to designated members to write a theology on representation for reflection and further study. Committee members, Dr. Raj Nadella (assistant professor of new testament at Columbia Seminary) and the Reverend Eric Thomas (pastor Siloam Presbyterian Church, NYC and Ph.D. candidate (ABD) in New Testament at Drew University), were assigned the drafting task. The document was approved by GACOR in late 2017 and directed that it be supplemented with a study guide and other materials and included in this self-study.

The October 2017 meeting was in the same location as the Mid Council Leaders Gathering (what has replaced the Polity Conference of OGA and Regional Benefits Conferences of the BOP). The writers presented a workshop previewing this theology work, which was well received. The document is included in the appendix of this report (Appendix A).

Cooperation with Other Agencies & Committees

Councils

The Organization for Mission (last updated 2018) describes assigned work of the General Assembly Committee on Representation in IV.C.5. The scope of its partnerships spans all assembly entities [IV.C.5.b(1)] and committees on representation or functions at councils below the assembly [IV.C.5.b(7)] (synods at this reporting). The committee regularly reaches out to synods, communicates regarding reports, shares data analysis, and consults on effective ways to utilize reporting tools. After completing five years of data in the web reporting tool, GACOR approached all sixteen synods in 2017 to demonstrate the new trending data capacity and to review the annual Synod Committee on Representation (SCOR) report itself. The assigned subcommittee held five zoom calls hosting fifteen synod’s executives and/or stated clerks where they discussed the trending data from their synods and ways to implement the report in the council’s life and operations. Of primary importance to GACOR was moving the report from being an accounting tool to one that can assess the diversity and representation within the council; when utilized effectively, the tool reflects underrepresented voices and perspectives and points to actions to remedy concerns raised. These communications are a regular part of the committee’s work and allow GACOR to highlight the deep resources it provides.

Committees & Agencies

The committee continues to liaise with various denominational entities including, but not limited to: the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), Middle Eastern Caucus, Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC), Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB), and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA). In these relations, it is our intention to serve as a partner and collaborator throughout the denomination by extending our work outside of the members of our committee. Through strong partnerships, GACOR supports the denomination’s goal to maintain, “[a] new openness in its own membership, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions, made one in Christ by the power of the Spirit as a visible sign of the new humanity.” Reflecting this strategy, the GACOR Manual of Operations highlights the roles of the liaison relationship in detail.

The GACOR advised the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) concerning revision to the Session Annual Statistical Report (SASR). At the 222nd General Assembly (2016), a referral with comment from Item 03-02 requested that the COGA work with the GACOR to determine the best way “to revise the survey instrument used in the Racial Ethnic Composition Component of the Sessions’ Annual Report of Church Statistics to more clearly reflect the racial, ethnic and cultural diversity in our churches.” Three GACOR members met in 2017 on video conference calls with a COGA subcommittee on statistics to explore options, advise regarding possible changes, and engage in conversation around the SASR.

The GACOR received reports from and talked with human resources staff of the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) regarding hiring practices and nomination processes. This work related to GA actions on benchmarks and the resulting shifts in practices for the agencies. In the review period the committee prepared for benchmark reviews in the next term of two additional agencies.

Responding to the General Assembly

As a standing committee of the assembly, GACOR reviews adjusted work or new work referred to it after every assembly. The following are examples of this work in the review period:
At the 222nd General Assembly (2016), GACOR presented recommendations for changes to employment and supplier diversity benchmarks for OGA and PMA. These were the first two agencies reviewed in the multiple year cycle that will see all agencies reviewed by GACOR (timelines adjusted in 2014). The 220th General Assembly (2012) approved the report, “Privilege, Power and Policy: The Church as Employer” (Item 11-17) whose recommendations include the larger referrals to the committee.

Promoted a new assessment of assembly business by experimenting with process observation to measure participation during committee business of the assembly and if there were affects when processes for decision-making changed. Constitutional reform allowed for different processes to be used.

The GACOR supported the development of the new measuring tool: in 2012, it used paper forms; in 2014, it used Google (web based) documents; and in 2016 there was a beta test for a fully online web application. Process observation records what happens in committee, who talks, who doesn’t and how that changes related to decisions made about process. It gives feedback about patterns of silence or participation.

The GACOR helped present an abbreviated version of process observation added to observer reports the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures used during assemblies 2012 to 2016, establishing the practice to today.

Committee members recruited volunteers, promoted the opportunities, and, when possible, participated in process observation during the assemblies. In 2016 when there was a training session on the use of the application, members led portions of the orientation and served as additional resources.

In 2012, GACOR advised the assembly about its constituent groups by leading in voter training by running the body through some demographic questions. Disability was reported significantly more in this way than it is in General Assembly registrations, which emphasize accommodation needs.

Since 2014, GACOR has supported the production of Assembly Representation Profiles of Commissioners and Advisory Delegates (describing the whole assembly and each constituent General Assembly committee) to advise the body about itself using self-identified social identity data (from registration) to show who is making decisions in each setting. In 2016, these were available to all via the resources tab of www.pc-biz.org for the assembly. This educational piece had the assembly’s profiles broken out by commissioner and advisory delegates. Graphs showed commissioners by race, gender and role, and age distribution.

The GACOR increased its using access to the assembly to comment on items of business to advise the body regarding representation, participation, diversity, and inclusiveness. In 2012, the committee commented on items regarding roles and responsibilities of various entities as they adjusted after constitutional reform in 2010 and new work referred by reports. In 2014, comments centered on synods. In 2016, structural considerations for church and council before the assembly attracted GACOR’s comments.

The GACOR advised the Moderator/Co-Moderators regarding the Leader Selection process for the General Assembly in 2012, 2014, and 2016, according to its role as outlined by Standing Rule C.1.c.

In October 2017 in St. Louis, GACOR met with the GA222 Co-Moderator and the Committee on Local Arrangements (COLA) co-chairs of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to discuss concerns around worship at General Assembly regarding diversity and inclusion, additional plans for GA223, and how the COLA was reflecting diversity in its leadership and membership. The GACOR also shared its work of advising the assembly about who is present as commissioners and advisory delegates in the business meeting and in committees and described the process observation work.

Organization and Methods for the Work

Revisions to Manual

Since the last review by General Assembly in 2012, we evaluate our work regularly. We enacted a major structural adjustment in late 2013 to prepare for the 2014-2016 term. At that time the number of subcommittees decreased from three to two. Staff support changed in 2013 and the committee needed to take on its own minute recording beginning with the term starting after GA in 2014. The manual changes showed the shift in subcommittees and the addition of the new office of recording clerk/secretary to the executive committee. The executive committee changed from five members (moderator, vice moderator and three subcommittee chairs) to a five-person executive committee (moderator, vice moderator, clerk/secretary, two subcommittee chairs). The most recent revision to the Manual was in 2015. We added a member covenant (in 2013) that is recited at every meeting. The covenant helps us state our purpose and reminds us of our work and recommit us to our common purpose and its pursuit and practice. The Member Covenant is Appendix B to this report.
Executive Committee

The executive committee serves as the leadership body of the committee. The moderator, vice moderator, clerk/secretary, and both subcommittee chairs make up the membership of the executive committee. The executive committee acts on behalf of the full committee on those matters that require immediate action between meetings.

The executive committee met regularly via video call (Zoom). The executive committee monitored the work, related to other bodies, referred correspondence, received and assigned new business and made adjustments between meetings of the committee. It received reports from the moderator, staff, and subcommittee chairs at each meeting. Functions of the executive committee are in the manual.

Subcommittees

All members of GACOR are assigned to a subcommittee for specific work between meetings. The committee reviews the division of labor every two years. Midterm adjustments are made by the executive committee and sometimes the committee appoints smaller groups to do specific tasks (an example is the writing of this report). During the term of review the committee moved from three very small subcommittees, who did not prove to have enough members to accomplish the assigned work, to two larger subcommittees able to do the work more easily. Both subcommittees meet monthly via video call (Zoom).

Subcommittee A—Gather, Analyze, Translate and Export or “GATE” as it is known internally. GATE manages the data collection and analysis functions for the committee and provides interpretation of the data internally and externally, on request. They provided synod trending data for web interpretation, this work will post in 2018. They relate to synods and receive the synod representation reports. They consult the full committee on determining timing and frequency of changes to reports, data requests, and analyses. When the Supplier Diversity definition table was active, a member of GATE participated in it. GATE writes the General Assembly reports from GACOR on six agencies regarding employment and supplier diversity.

Subcommittee B—Advise, Review, Report, and Recommend, also known as ARRR within GACOR, primarily manages the “review and recommend” functions of the committee. Any relationship of the committee requiring reports or advice, providing written feedback to entities beyond GACOR are tasks of this subcommittee. They led the self-study process and report writing for the review of GACOR by the assembly. ARRR drafted comments to COGA, PMAB, ACREC, ACWC, ACSWP, the Stated Clerk, synod executives and stated clerks, among others during this reviewed period. Advice resulted in actions reflecting the advice in many cases. Meetings happened to clarify perspectives. They review all business before an assembly to determine items for comment of the committee and make recommendations.

Meetings

The full GACOR meets in person twice yearly, generally in the late winter/early spring and fall.

- In 2012, February and October in Louisville, Ky.
- In 2013, March in Louisville, KY, and October in Chicago, Ill.
- In 2014, February and October in Louisville, Ky.
- In 2015, February in Dallas/Ft. Worth, TX, and October in Portland, Oreg.
- In 2016, February in Albuquerque, N.Mex., and October at Ferncliff Conference Center in Little Rock, Ark.
- In 2017, March in San Juan, P.R., and October in St. Louis, Mo.

In meetings after an assembly, new members are oriented and new work is reviewed and assigned. Subcommittees are assigned, structures and plans are reviewed for fit and service, and the committee has opportunity to review the manual and its practices. In 2012 and 2104, new members spent an additional day to the first meeting being oriented by the executive committee. In 2016, the committee shifted this orientation meeting in style and made time for full committee training on topics of antiracism and racial justice.

Since 2013, the covenant (Appendix B) is read by the body at the beginning of every meeting. For most of the review period the committee has used Robert’s Rules of Order in decision making, but an emphasis is made to choose other processes to support greater participation and practice equity in our meetings. Most frequently, the alternative method preferred is consensus. Alternates in decision-making processes are selected by a majority vote of the body.

Meeting Evaluations for Internal Accountability

After each in-person meeting all GACOR members are invited to evaluate the meeting. Using Survey Monkey, the committee receives a quantitative and qualitative report. Logistical details concerning the meeting are assessed i.e. location, transportation, meals, and length. The evaluation permits members to provide their feedback regarding more meaningful aspects of the meeting such as worship, opportunities for fellowship, and whether or not the meeting was effective in accomplishing the ongoing work of GACOR. Moreover, GACOR members are asked to respond as to whether or not their contributions were respected and valued. These questions ensure that the whole committee intentionally practices and demonstrates the principles of equity, representation, and inclusion in all that we do as committee. The purpose of the meeting evaluations is accountability of the committee to each other according to its covenant.

GA Research Services Survey Data

An evaluative research and data analysis was conducted with five groups who received the survey from the Presbyterian Research Services concerning GACOR, per Assembly Review of Standing Committee practice. The groups selected were: General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates from assemblies within the review period, permanent committee members, members of the boards of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly, mid council leaders, and National Racial Ethnic Caucus leaders. Angie Androit, Ph.D. of Research Services, PC(USA), led the research surveys and process. Learnings from the data are described below.

There were 843 responses and the overall feedback was exceedingly positive. The response results are noteworthy because it reflects a strong percentage of participation in the survey. We are heartened because it looks like responding to the survey reflects an increase in awareness of GACOR as a committee, and of the mission of GACOR.

Given that the “larger church” surveyed was primarily the denomination’s agencies and mid councils, the result of this survey must be acknowledged twofold. First, impacting the institutional church through the work of its agencies and mid councils provides a model that represents the mission of GACOR. The second result reflects unprecedented participation by the agency board members and mid councils. Impacting the agencies and mid councils demonstrates the denomination’s commitment to be inclusive and sets a real-life example of how to move beyond words into action. The GACOR does help the denomination live out “the kingdom to come.” The historical and social context for many individuals has perpetuated discrimination. Changing dynamics of participation for groups and individuals will raise awareness and encourage a change that moves the church from mere tolerance to true inclusion and increase desire to experience diversity throughout the denomination.

Broader issues considered regarding the mission of the GACOR included fidelity and effectiveness to its stated mission. There were six main findings from the survey data:

1. Of those responding 83 percent are familiar with GACOR. Members on permanent committees and boards are more familiar with GACOR than members of mid councils or General Assembly commissioners. This makes sense as they would have more regular interaction with the committee.

2. The most common way respondents encounter GACOR is through General Assembly. Mid council members are more likely than members of boards to encounter GACOR through General Assembly, and board members are more likely to encounter GACOR in every other situation listed.

3. Only 2 percent think GACOR is unimportant, and 3 percent feel it is not faithful to its mission. Thus, respondents felt GACOR is important. Ninety-one percent state that diversity is an important goal. Some quotes were notable:
   a. “Diversity could be what saves the church”;
   b. Seventy-one percent agreed that “Diversity is an important goal for PC(USA) governance, and a General Assembly Committee on Representation is an important part of achieving that goal.”
   c. Seventy-two percent of respondents “believe GACOR helps the General Assembly follow this instruction at least somewhat faithfully.”

4. An important note from the survey is “the responses do not differ by age, gender, race-ethnicity, or ability.”

5. Eighty-four percent of respondents said it was important to be intentional about including persons based on theological orientation. This category was not included in the survey but was the most frequent written-in “other” category (sexual orientation was second).

6. Reports of experiences of bias or discrimination were relatively low, but there were statistically relevant. Discrimination showed patterns by age, race, and gender. Some respondents felt comfortable expressing their opinions in meetings, some felt pressured to go along with decisions. Some were satisfied with the way decisions were made, and those who feel their participation makes a difference.

In conclusion, the survey results reflect that GACOR is highly effective in its current and missional commitment. The results also reflect the slow but steady progress that has been made to become a church where not only is ‘there is room at the table for everyone’, but one’s voice will now be welcome and heard.

Effective Communication

The GACOR has historically maintained a web page that shares information regarding the work of the committee as well as broader issues regarding representation. The website is a place to show historical materials and information. The committee has raised concerns about challenges with the PC(USA) website that have impacted updates and communication from the committee. The committee held conversations and gained commitments for more regular updating and better maintenance moving forward. The limitations of the system are still a challenge. Work completed during the review period will lead to expanding how the website is used, which will include sharing synod level data. GACOR hopes to better use the website to engage the larger church in the work of representation, equity, and diversity. As online training continues developing, GACOR hopes to expand what it can contribute to mid councils. It is the hope that the website will be a place to host conversations, trainings, include blog posts and reflections, and provide a fertile ground for learning and resources. Subcommittees have met with communications staff over the review period to explore options within the constraints of the pcusa.org website.

In 2012, GACOR debuted a new logo to reflect the new expression of the work and the larger areas of concern. The previous logo dated from reunion in 1983 and emphasized the original racial justice focus and de-emphasized gender. Disability concerns, while added in the early 1990s, did not show in the logo used at the time. The new logo promotes the committee and provides a more attractive and accurate presentation getting away from presenting each difference and allowing for future changes the assembly may make (for example in F-1.0403). To respect councils below General Assembly that also have this work, it was designed so that mid councils would be able to use it if they retained committees on representation. The committee shares its logo in the form of temporary tattoos for continued promotion and designed giveaway rulers with the logo on them to highlight parity of ruling elders to help raise awareness of GACOR. Those items have been distributed since 2012. A blog, In Spirit and Truth, was maintained by the committee from 2012–2015 to highlight issues of concern. It proved too much to maintain as an elected committee. The GACOR may contribute to it at any time.

The GACOR has been more intentional about getting its work covered by denominational journalists. Multiple stories were published by the Presbyterian News Service, and other outlets, on the work of GACOR in the review period. Examples include:

- The 2013 Synod COR Training Event was covered in three articles, one in particular, highlighting the opening, contextual Bible study led by the Reverend Dr. Margaret Aymer (now of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary).
- In July and August of 2016, news stories featured the Process Observation Web Application first utilized during the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

Utilizing Technology

In 2012, the committee primarily met in person and had phone conferences. In the review period, GACOR transitioned smaller meetings previously held by conference call or in person to Zoom, an online video conference meeting tool. The committee preferred it to GoToMeeting. Zoom has provided “face-to-face” discussions options allowing a greater continuity of work. The executive committee and two subcommittees meet monthly via Zoom. Any working groups to complete particular tasks also take advantage of Zoom to meet and do their work. The capacities for the technology allow for small group discussions, document sharing, video playback, and more. We used Zoom to facilitate our book discussions. GATE hosts meetings with synod execs regarding the synod COR reports via Zoom. When Zoom is not available, phone conferences are the alternate method used.

In 2012, the committee still used some paper in its meetings but was looking for solutions that were good for the environments and accessible for the members. Dropbox is now used for all documents, meeting packets, and communications. This has drastically reduced paper waste, increased availability of documents, and reduced the time spent sending reports and comments between committee members. Google Docs is also frequently used as the committee, particularly subcommittees, co-author and edit documents and reports. These tools are useful and foster collaboration and cooperation as tasks are completed.

Vision, Plans, & Emerging Issues

1. Since 2014, minutes have proven challenging to maintain. As records of the General Assembly, they are submitted for review by assemblies and deposited into the archives in Philadelphia. Maintaining current and accurate minutes of all meetings of the committee and its executive committee has been a challenge, particularly in the last two-year term. Minutes are often not ready to be voted on and approved at the subsequent meetings. This delay in sharing records further complicates the work of GACOR. Only one member has limited experience and this task is different in kind. Due to the workload for this person, effectively one member has to be recruited for this skill. This task reduces the membership able to do work by one.

2. Racial ethnic caucuses, councils, and consulting committees have the potential to be invaluable resources. Not all underrepresented groups and communities have these bodies. They do provide leadership and voice to historically marginalized communities in the denomination. We seek to strengthen our relationships with racial ethnic caucuses, councils, and consulting committees. The GACOR will benefit because it can better utilize the networks of the councils and caucuses to expand the diversity of nominating pools. Collaboration and open dialogue will lead to new understandings and reinforced effort towards our goals of true representation and equity throughout the PC(USA). Expanding the GACOR membership will allow more liaisons to be identified for caucuses and councils. This effort will positively impact the denomination’s work by increasing the diversity within the nomination pools, employment searches, suppliers, and more.
3. The GACOR wants to expand its impact and raise its visibility. We realize that many throughout the denomination are not familiar with the work and impact of GACOR. Going forward, we will continue to seek out opportunities to increase our visibility and opportunities for education. Communications efforts will include submitting articles to the Presbyterian News Service, Presbyterian Outlook, and/or Presbyterians Today. The GACOR is employing creative means to highlight the missing voices within our church, while we continuously raises issues of diversity, inclusion, and equity as a deep need in the denomination. We seek more visible presence and conspicuous voice as we help the PC(USA) eradicate systems of power and privilege at work in the denomination.

We will continue to expand on ways we educate about the important roles of representation and equity work in all councils of the church. With goals to equip the mid councils and presbyteries, exploring new media for sharing tools and resources, we hope to lead by example and impact. Collaborating strengthens the bodies, sharing work and training one another reinforcing and building on the ministries.

4. Worshiping communities are expanding and infusing their councils with energy and vitality throughout the PC(USA). However, new worshipping communities are not given opportunity to share power in councils to have a presence and voice with vote in the church. The GACOR seeks to add its voice to dialogues regarding representation, polity, and power with worshipping communities. The GACOR wants to ensure that all worshipping communities are fully integrated into the life of the PC(USA), not deprived of representation and access to decision-making tables. Those communities are mostly absent in the halls of power and they must be heard. We cannot presume to know their expression, experiences, and wishes.

5. The GACOR seeks to improve the relationship we hold with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC). The GACOR sees possibilities for collaboration that provides helpful assistance to the GANC from the beginning of the process and ensuring leadership positions within the church are filled by qualified and diverse candidates. Consulting with adequate time on slates of nominees from GANC would go a long way in improving relations. The GACOR does not feel it has had adequate access to give advice and counsel in the process in the review period. The GACOR works with all its partners to increase the candidate pools, when they are aware of a concern. Over the last four years, our coordination with GANC has been too limited. The GACOR has not been able to advise the nomination committee in a timely manner. We did not have access to the slates until very late, 24–48 hours ahead of submission to the assembly (and did not get candidate pool information). We are not able to target our recruiting to diversify applicant pools in this time so we recruited generically and in response to constituent concerns. When this is the case, we cannot adequately advise the nominating committee. We recognize that GACOR must be more intentional with GANC as both committees seek for more diversity and representation in the leadership of the denomination. In this light, we have made a recommendation to this assembly for action.

6. The GACOR wants to give its attention to broader cultural work in line with the Organization for Mission description at IV.C.5.b.(8) and “assist the church to build an ethos of inclusion and involvement of all persons” in this church. We seek to be a force within the PC(USA) that works for the dismantling of systemic racism (sexism, ableism, ageism, etc.), rooting out harmful biases, making plain how power and privilege operate throughout our denomination. We seek to equip the church to contest the powers of these evils. We seek to dispel the notion that committees on representation simply count the level of apparent diversity. We want to work for the transformation of this church in all its settings. Through its work, GACOR hopes to nudge the whole church to adopt a culture of deep inclusion and wide participation.

Our goal is to be a body that pushes the church towards a new reality of navigating difference without discrimination, affirming diversity, finding unity and connection. The work of GACOR should not be mere accessory, but a central point of transformation. Transformation is required for the PC(USA) if the unity of the people of God is to ever be made evident throughout the denomination. We realize that such a pursuit will be difficult, but this is where we are called to go. We endeavor to hold the church accountable as we journey together towards full participation and representation.

The GACOR seeks to explore various ways that the denomination can approach its work while lifting up the variety of voices, both those at the table as well as those seeking a seat. We acknowledge that this may mean that the approaches to accomplishing work and supporting councils, congregations, and new worshipping committees will look very different than what has always been. We have hope, rooted in an experience of the Divine we touch when we are in diverse and complex community. We believe this will allow the PC(USA) to be a more complete reflection of the kindom of God here on earth.

GACOR Theology of Representation

[For the text of this appendix, see GACOR 02a-appendix-a-COR-summary-report-theology-of-representation.pdf. See p. 224.]
Introduction

The GACOR thanks the six agencies of the PC(USA) for providing annual Diverse Suppliers reports in the reviewed period. This new reporting is informed by the establishment of the Standard Definition of Supplier Diversity (Item 03-12), and the benchmarks for OGA and PMA (Item 03-10), passed by action of the 222nd General Assembly (2016). The data was analyzed through a lens of anticipation for the agencies’ witness to God’s abundance demonstrated by the stewardship of representation becoming manifest in our denomination. Just as the diverse array of nations participated in Pentecost (Acts 2, pericopes in appendix), a diverse array of suppliers can participate in executing the work of the PC(USA). The early Christ-following communities who “distributed their proceeds to all, as any had needed,” have modeled the Spirit in which our denomination can share its resources among a varied array of suppliers This approach moves efforts for diversity beyond “bean counting” and “box checking” toward more fiscal parity with agency resources as expressions of doxology.

The assembly set benchmark (all agencies) for Diverse Suppliers is 10 percent.

Summary Across 6 Agencies

- Generally, the agencies are achieving the 10 percent benchmark: four out of six agencies met or exceeded the 10 percent goal of total expenditures to diverse suppliers, with the exception of PMA and OGA (who report together).
- Women-Owned Suppliers were the highest contributor to supplier diversity (especially in BOP) followed by Black/African American/African Suppliers. Opportunities for contracting with other racial ethnic and persons with disabilities abound. Businesses owned by women of minoritized racial groups is a statistic lost in the individual women-owned and minoritized racial group categories. Women of Color suppliers is a category of opportunity for stewardship of representation.
- Considerations for further conversation:
  - Given that the 10 percent benchmark is easily possible, raising the goal to 20 percent can both more realistically represent actual results based on 2014–2016 reports, and create opportunity to find additional diverse suppliers to fill empty categories.
  - Several agencies have increased expenditures to diverse suppliers while lowering the number of diverse suppliers. An optimal balance should be found to maximize both dollars spent and number of diverse suppliers relative to the needs and goals of the agencies.
  - More conversation is indicated when reviews of these benchmarks happen with agencies.

After a decrease in 2015, the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [BOP] significantly increased the total expended with diverse suppliers, raising its percentage from 8.49 percent to 13.53 percent (2015 to 2016). Over three years, the agency average is 12.6 percent. The increase in expenditure also occurs with a decrease in the number of total diverse suppliers (from 20 to 13). The categorical array of diverse suppliers as a percentage of total suppliers for the agency has potential to expand. Women-owned business contributes 98 percent of the reported 13.53 percent of Diverse Suppliers.
The Presbyterian Foundation [FDN] has decreased its total expended by agency from 2015 to 2016. However, the percentage of funds spent with diverse suppliers has increased from 11.09 percent to 12.25 percent as the agency increased the total number of suppliers year over year. Black/African American/African Suppliers (10) and Women-Owned Business (16) comprise the entire group of diverse suppliers (26).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. [ILP], showed an increase in percentage expended with diverse suppliers that is attributed to an increase in total expended by agency. There is also a decrease in the total number of suppliers for agency. This may create a “false increase” by virtue of an increased budget for a decreased supplier pool. The constraints of this smaller agency may require more creativity in supporting supplier diversity.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency [PMA] and the Office of the General Assembly [OGA] submit a joint report that reflects their shared services and record-keeping. Based on data from 2015 and 2016, PMA/OGA did not reach the 10 percent benchmark of funds spent with diverse suppliers (the percentage decreased in 2016). While the benchmark is based on percentage of expenditures, it is of note that PMA/OGA accomplishes the largest array of diverse suppliers across all categories (with opportunities for the Multi-Racial and Persons with Disabilities). Women-Owned Business represents 75 percent of Diverse Suppliers (314 of 424 in total).

The Presbyterian Mission Agency [PMA] and the Office of the General Assembly [OGA] submit a joint report that reflects their shared services and record-keeping. Based on data from 2015 and 2016, PMA/OGA did not reach the 10 percent benchmark of funds spent with diverse suppliers (the percentage decreased in 2016). While the benchmark is based on percentage of expenditures, it is of note that PMA/OGA accomplishes the largest array of diverse suppliers across all categories (with opportunities for the Multi-Racial and Persons with Disabilities). Women-Owned Business represents 75 percent of Diverse Suppliers (314 of 424 in total).
The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation [PPC] shows the strongest percentages of all agencies in Total Expended. It is important to note that PPC includes authors in their reported suppliers. These numbers from PPC demonstrate that certain factors prevent “apples to apples” comparison between and among agencies. Women-owned businesses represent 85.6 percent of diverse suppliers. It is encouraging that the number of total diverse suppliers increases from 2014–2016 (especially from 2014 to 2015) with minoritized racial groups presence in the array. Suppliers owned by minoritized racial groups remain the growing edge of supplier diversity across all agencies.

Conclusion

With the exception of PMA/OGA, which submitted a combined report, the remaining four agencies demonstrate reaching the benchmark in this reporting period. GACOR will continue to review the benchmarks and consider recommendations to increase the Supplier Diversity during agency reviews.

APPENDIX

F-1.0403 Unity in Diversity

“As many of you as were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s offspring, heirs according to the promise” (Gal. 3:27–29).

The unity of believers in Christ is reflected in the rich diversity of the Church’s membership. In Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God unites persons through baptism regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, or theological conviction. There is therefore no place in the life of the Church for discrimination against any person. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall guarantee full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership. No member shall be denied participation or representation for any reason other than those stated in this Constitution.

God has poured out the Holy Spirit on all flesh; Scripture promises that everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved. The book of Acts and the New Testament epistles record the challenges and controversies of an emerging Church that would be “no longer Jew or Greek” (Gal. 3:28), but one in Jesus Christ. As the Church has grown and spread over two thousand years, it has taken root and flourished in cultures and lands all around the globe—bearing witness to the love of God for all the world and Christ’s sovereignty in every place. Finally, from the book of Revelation, we know that the company of the redeemed will be a great multitude from every nation, tribe, and people, singing praise to the Lamb of God.

Christian worship is contextual—emerging from a particular community and incorporating the words, images, symbols, and actions that best convey the good news of Jesus Christ in that gathering of God’s people. It is also cross-cultural—reflecting the diversity of traditions and cultures within and beyond the community of faith. Christian worship is transcultural—proclaiming the universal message of God’s grace in Jesus Christ and rooted in common elements of human life that transcend all cultures. It is also countercultural—asserting the scandal of the gospel and anticipating God’s reign of righteousness, justice, and peace. Finally, faithful worship should be an intercultural event—fostering mutuality, dialogue, and equality among all people.

Whenever and wherever we gather in Jesus’ name, we join the praise and prayer of the people of God in every time and place. Therefore, it is fitting that we share stories and sing songs from cultures other than our own as we pray for and with the Church throughout the world.

Acts 2:5–13, NSRV

Now there were devout Jews from every nation under heaven living in Jerusalem. And at this sound the crowd gathered and was bewildered, because each one heard them speaking in the native language of each. Amazed and astonished, they asked, “Are not all these who are speaking Galileans? And how is it that we hear, each of us, in our own native language? Parthians, Medes, Elamites, and residents of Mesopotamia, Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, Phrygia and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya belonging to Cyrene, and visitors from Rome, both Jews and proselytes, Cretans and Arabs—in our own languages we hear them speaking about God’s deeds of power.” All were amazed and perplexed, saying to one another, “What does this mean?” But others sneered and said, “They are filled with new wine.”

Acts 2:43–47, NSRV

Awe came upon everyone, because many wonders and signs were being done by the apostles. All who believed were together and had all things in common; they would sell their possessions and goods and distribute the proceeds to all, as any had need. Day by day, as they spent much time together in the temple, they broke bread at home and ate their food with glad and generous hearts, praising God and having the goodwill of all the people. And day by day the Lord added to their number those who were being saved.

1. Benchmark of 10 percent diverse suppliers spend, approved in the 222nd General Assembly (2016) for OGA and PMA (Item 03-10), unchanged from previous assembly action for all agencies. Standard Definition of Supplier Diversity, Item 03-12, approved by action of the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

F. GACOR Report on Six Agencies: Employment (AAEEO)

Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) is thankful to the agencies of the PC(USA) for their timeliness of reporting employment data to the committee.

The GACOR reports to the General Assembly on agencies regarding their employment in response to the report and recommendations from “Privilege, Power and Policy: The Church as Employer,” as approved by the 220th General Assembly (2012) as Item 11-17 (Minutes, 2012, Part I, pp. 45, 1103–05 of the CD; pp. 33, 250–251, 1091–93 of the print copy). The 221st General Assembly (2014) revised the action by requiring the six agencies to report annually to GACOR. This report contains an overview of achievements by each of the six agencies in the 2015 and 2016 fiscal years.

The GACOR performs an annual review of data received from all six agencies regarding the employment of personnel and supplier diversity. The six agencies are the (1) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (ILP), (2) Presbyterian Foundation (FDN), (3) Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), (4) Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (BOP), (5) Office of the General Assembly (OGA), (6) the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA). That 2012 action can be found in Item 11-17, Privilege, Power and Policy: The Church as Employer, Recommendation 2 (Minutes, 2012, Part I, p. 1091).

Investment and Loan Program

The Investment and Loan Program (ILP) reported in a timely manner. The GACOR made the following observations:

The ILP reported a total of thirteen employees. Employment by gender was 15 percent male, 85 percent female. This is a change since 2015 where the ratio was 31 percent male and 69 percent female, which exceeds the benchmark requirement of 40 percent female employment.

There was an improvement of racial ethnic employment since the last review, with this category moving from 23 percent racial ethnic employees to 31 percent racial ethnic employees in 2017, which meets the requirement of 20 percent or better for racial ethnic employment.
In reviewing salaries, for female employees (11), 45 percent were at or above $75,000 while 45 percent were below the $65,000 mark. In comparison, 100 percent of salaries for male employees (2) were above $65,000.

Presbyterian Foundation

The Presbyterian Foundation (FDN) reported in a timely manner. The GACOR made the following observations:

The FDN reported a total of sixty-four employees. Employment by gender was 36 percent male, 64 percent female. There has been no change since the last review in 2015 and continues to exceed the benchmark of 40 percent female employment.

The racial ethnic employment since the last review with this category has shifted from 24 percent racial ethnic employees to 20 percent racial ethnic employees in 2017. While this is a reduction, it continues to meet the 20 percent benchmark for racial ethnic employment.
In reviewing salaries, the top third of earning employees are comprised of nine women and thirteen men, while the bottom two-thirds of earning employees are comprised of 32 women and 10 men. While the agency employs significantly more women, the majority of these are in lesser earning roles.

Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) reported in a timely manner. The GACOR made the following observations:

The PPC reported a total of twenty-seven employees. Employment by gender was 30 percent male, 70 percent female. This is a change since 2015 where the ratio was 39 percent male and 61 percent female. The benchmark for employment of 40 percent female has been met. The PPC has reported that this number includes authors.

There was a change in racial ethnic employment since the last review with this category moving from 26 percent racial ethnic employees to 22 percent racial ethnic employees in 2017. While this is a reduction, it continues to meet the benchmark for racial ethnic employment of 20 percent.
In reviewing salaries, for female employees (11), 45 percent were at or above $75,000 while 45 percent were below the $65,000 mark. In comparison, 100 percent of salaries for male employees (2) were above $65,000.

In reviewing salaries, it is noted that while females comprise 70 percent of total employees, they make up 77 percent of those in lesser earning pay scales. Of those earning $90,000 or more, two are female (40 percent) with the top tier at $105,001–$125,000 while three are male (60 percent) with the lowest tier also at $105,001–$125,000.

Board of Pensions

The BOP employment is 35 percent male and 65 percent are female. The benchmark of employing 40 percent females has been exceeded. Whites have the largest exempt status, 72 percent, white African American/Blacks have the largest nonexempt status, 59 percent. There were no identified people with disabilities employed.

When looking at employees by race: African American/Black 21 percent, Asian/Pacific Islanders 6 percent, Hispanic/LatinX 4 percent, Native American/Alaskan Native 1 percent, White 66 percent, Multiracial 3 percent, there were no Middle Eastern people employed. The benchmark of employing 20 percent racial ethnic people has been met.
In reviewing salaries, females represent 65 percent overall (127 of 196), with the largest group earning $45–$75,000 annually (68 of 127). While there are fewer males, 30 percent of males peak in the same salary range (21 of 69). Females (21 percent) also see a spike again in the $75–105,000 range (27 of 127) while males (28 percent) spike again in the $105,000 to 165,000 range.

The Office of General Assembly (OGA) completed and submitted their reports. The GACOR recognized the following observations.

The gender is comprised of 71 percent female and 29 percent male. Of the seventy employees, 69 percent are in an exempt position, and of that 69 percent, females represent 40 percent. With a female employee population of 71 percent, OGA exceeds the 50 percent benchmark established by GA222, with 48 percent of these females holding an exempt position. The percentage of females in exempt positions more than doubled from 22 percent in 2015 to 48 percent in 2017.

Of the seventy employees, 66 percent identify as white. The remainder of the employee pool is represented in African American/Black at 14 percent; Asian/Pacific Islander at 14 percent; Hispanic/LatinX at 3 percent, and Multiracial at 3 percent. In total of racial ethnic representation measured at 34 percent, which is nearly at the 40 percent benchmark.
While the number of females exceeds the number of males employed by OGA, there is a disparity in salary ranges. It is of note that 96 percent of females earn less than $95,000 and 80 percent of males earn under $95,000.

Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA)

Of the 311 PMA employees, 64 percent are female while 36 percent are male. This exceeds the 50 percent established benchmark. Females account for 59 percent of the exempt positions and males account for 41 percent of the exempt positions. In the nonexempt categories, females account for 75 percent and males account for 25 percent.
Of employees reported by PMA, 72 percent identified as white. The racial ethnic percentage observed at 28 percent in 2017 is a one-point increase from 2015, which does not meet the benchmark of 40 percent. The racial ethnic spread among exempt employees showed at 26 percent while 74 percent of the exempt positions were filled by white employees. In the nonexempt position, the racial ethnic breakdown measured at 31 percent and 68 percent white.

Most females employed by PMA are compensated at levels below $55,000 (59 percent), while the largest percentage of males (54 percent) are compensated in the $55–85,000 range. At the highest end of the salary scale, $85,000–195,000, 10 percent of those employed are female and 16 percent are male.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the analysis by GACOR found increases in female employment in three agencies (ILP, BOP, OGA), decreases in two agencies (PPC, PMA), and flat movement at FDN. Each agency did meet or exceed this benchmark. Additionally, GACOR found increases in employment of racial ethnic persons in four agencies (ILP, BOP, OGA, PMA) and decreases in two agencies (FDN, PPC). Each agency did meet or exceed this benchmark. The GACOR is encouraged by the efforts of the agencies of the PC(USA) to provide data in a timely manner and positively engage in the process.

G. General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) Agency Summary 2018

“This is the heart of the church’s connectionalism!”—A member of a General Assembly entity responds to a question about how their service on the elected body has impacted their faith.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to the full participation and representation of the rich diversity of the church in its governance. Through the General Assembly Nominating Committee’s comprehensive nominations process, all Presbyterians have the ability and access to be considered for elected service on more than thirty General Assembly boards, commissions, committees, and councils. The nominations process ensures that the General Assembly is afforded the opportunity to select, from the varied gifts and services of Presbyterians, the most qualified persons to serve on General Assembly entities with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love.
The General Assembly nomination process is application based and is open and accessible to the broad membership of the church. Persons who wish to be considered for nomination must complete and submit an application form and solicit personal references. In addition to providing a way to gather consistent demographic data, the application form allows for personal and creative narrative responses to a variety of questions about the applicant’s sense of call to service, qualifications, and experience. Applicants can be confident every application is reviewed during the nomination process.

Accomplishments

The General Assembly Nominating Committee had the benefit of using for the first time its new online nominations portal for all application forms submitted during the 2018 nominations cycle. Although the nominations portal was operational during the 2016 nominations cycle, it was not fully functional and many of the application forms were still submitted electronically via Word document in addition to those submitted through the portal. The General Assembly Nominating Committee celebrates this movement and looks forward to continued work in the months ahead. Work has begun to enhance the database interface and provide reliable reporting functionality and output.

Because this is the first cycle where information about all applicants has been entered into the nominations database, reliable reports cannot yet be generated. Thus, some of this information must be analyzed and processed manually. The General Assembly Nominating Committee looks forward to the next cycle of nominations when the nominations database will be fully functional and data and statistical analysis, other simple queries, and reporting functions will be fully automated.

Like our siblings in presbyteries, synods, and secular organizations, the General Assembly Nominating Committee is aware of the changing tide of volunteerism and the impact on the pool of applicants who feel called to serve in elected service. At the close of the initial nomination deadline, only sixty-eight persons had applied to be considered for service. With continued active recruiting by the affected entities, the General Assembly Nominating Committee increased the number of new applicants it has received to just under 100 applications as of February 16, 2018. That is down from approximately 230 at the same time in the last nomination cycle. The General Assembly Nominating Committee continues to work with the entities to which it makes nominations to find ways to invite Presbyterians to be involved in the governance of the church through the ministry of elected leadership.

The GANC continues to connect with Presbyterians corporately and individually—through meetings of presbytery and synod nominating committees, participation and attendance at national and regional conferences, engagement and correspondence with leaders at all councils of the church, and other official Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) groups—in order to inform Presbyterians of the many and diverse opportunities for service.

In addition to face-to-face engagements, individuals, congregations, presbyteries, and synods can find a listing of positions open for election on the General Assembly Nomination website www.pcusa.org/nominations.

In the Fall of 2017, the GANC emailed to each presbytery and synod the list of vacancies to be filled. Additionally, the GANC website (pcusa.org/nominations) provides instructions, information about the nominations process, and committee descriptions. These descriptions contain information on the skills and expertise needed and time requirements for service. The descriptions are a useful tool for candidates as they determine whether or not their particular gifts and abilities are a match with the identified needs of a specific entity.

Persons interested in being considered for service on a General Assembly level committee must do so by submitting an application for nomination form via the General Assembly Nominating Committee online application system. In the 2018 nomination cycle, applications remain active for one cycle. This is a change from past cycles where applications were valid for two cycles—four years. This change was made recognizing many applicants have changed calls or occupations, locations, and developed their sense of call in new ways. Applicants who applied to a particular entity in Cycle A might have a different interest or developed skills that point to service elsewhere in Cycle B. Therefore, all applicants who were not nominated in 2016 were required to update their application form and resubmit it if they wished to be considered for nomination beginning with the General Assembly 2018 cycle.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee continues to further its efforts to deepen cultural competence and proficiency by providing educational opportunities for its members. Its March 15–17, 2017, meeting included a two-day seminar on “Interrupting the Impact of White Cultural Dominance in the PC(USA),” led by Jessica Vazquez of Crossroads Antiracism and Organizing and Training.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee works in concert with the General Assembly Committee on Representation to ensure that membership on all General Assembly entities is broadly representative of the membership of the whole church.
The General Assembly Nominating Committee notes that many applicants do not identify themselves as persons with disabilities even when a disability does exist. Thus, we believe that the number of persons with disabilities serving the church on committees at the General Assembly level is actually higher than reported. In an effort to encourage persons to self-identify, the GANC sought the advice of Presbyterians for Disability Concerns in 2013. As a result, the GANC revised a question on its form from, “Are you a person living with a disability?” to “Are you living with a disability? If yes, please describe the accommodations needed for your participation on this entity.” The General Assembly Nominating Committee will continue to seek ways to encourage persons living with disabilities to make this information available including adding an introductory sentence, “The General Assembly Nominating Committee encourages persons living with disabilities to apply” as an invitation for persons with disability to identify themselves.

Through participation at conferences, conversations, and engagement with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, racial ethnic caucuses, affinity groups, individual contact at all mid council levels, as well as with pastors and ruling elders across the denomination, the General Assembly Nominating Committee strives to increase the number of racial ethnic persons and persons with differing theological perspectives in its pool of applicants.

The application form includes the following question to its nomination form: “Which of the following terms best describes your theological perspective?” Applicants are provided with the following categories (listed in alphabetical order on the form): Conservative, Evangelical, Liberal, Moderate, Orthodox, Progressive, and prefer not to answer. Applicants are encouraged to check all that apply and a space is provided for comments. In addition, the GANC has removed a question on its form, “To assist the General Assembly Nominating Committee in addressing the Presbyterian Church’s commitment to theological diversity, please briefly describe your theological perspective,” replacing it with, “Please name one key theological/faith issue facing our church today and explain your perspective on this issue.”

For the 2018 nominations cycle, the GANC added the question, “Please describe a key issue of the community from which you come.”

The General Assembly Nominating Committee form has been expanded so that applicants may select “self-describe” for their gender identify and/or self-identify outside the gender binary. Applicants may now share their preferred personal pronouns.

Members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee relate actively to mid councils and General Assembly entities throughout the year. Each General Assembly Nominating Committee member serves as a liaison to the nominating committee of the synod in which the member resides. Each member attends at least one synod or synod nominating committee meeting every other year to explain the nominations process.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee invites all General Assembly entities to send a written report biennially concerning the specific needs of the entity regarding nominees presented to the General Assembly. In addition, the General Assembly Nominating Committee’s liaison member is available to meet with the entity or be in contact by telephone or mail at the entity’s invitation, so that the nominating process may be explained and that the skills and expertise needed by the entity are identified. This information, along with advice and counsel received from the General Assembly Committee on Representation, assists the General Assembly Nominating Committee in its work.

Since the 222nd General Assembly (2016), there have been three meetings of the General Assembly Nominating Committee: March 15–17, 2017, in Prairie Village, Kansas; November 4, 2017, via video-conference call; and February 28–March 3, 2018, in Chicago, Illinois. An orientation for new members was held on September 28–29, 2016, in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

There are sixteen members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee—one member residing in each of the sixteen synods. The General Assembly, upon the nomination of the General Assembly Moderator, elects the members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee; members serve a six-year term. The following officers were elected and served from June 2016 to June 2018: Danny C. Murphy Sr. (teaching elder), Synod of the South Atlantic, moderator; Yena Hwang (teaching elder), Synod of Mid-Atlantic, vice-moderator; and Lindsey Anderson (teaching elder), Synod of the Covenant. Other members of the committee are: Steven Aeschbacher (ruling elder later ordained a teaching elder), Synod of Alaska-Northwest who tendered resignation July 2016 upon his move to a different synod; Greg Bolt (teaching elder), Synod of Lakes and Prairies; Eva O. Carter (ruling elder), Synod of Living Waters; Douglas Howard (ruling elder), Synod of the Northeast; Judy Lussie, (ruling elder), Synod of the Pacific; Mary Paik (teaching elder), Synod of Southern California and Hawaii; Marta Rodriguez-Fonseca (ruling elder), Presbiteriano Boriñiquen en Puerto Rico; vacant Synod of Mid-America; Judith Trabue (ruling elder), Synod of Lincoln Trails; John M. Willingham (teaching elder); Synod of the Trinity; Mary Lynn Walters, (ruling elder), Synod of the Southwest; Gene Wilson (teaching elder) Synod of the Sun; and Will Zandler (ruling elder), Synod of the Rocky Mountains. The synod of the Mid-Atlantic remains vacant.
The office of the General Assembly Nominating Committee is located in the Office of the General Assembly, 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, KY 40202-1396. Assistant Stated Clerk Valerie Kiriishi Small, ruling elder, serves as the manager for General Assembly Nominations.

Appendix A – GACOR Theology of Representation

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) agreed that in the spirit of G-3.0103 and F-1.0403, there needed to be extended reflection on a theology of representation. We have a lot of well-meaning Presbyterians that get the need to be diverse and inclusive but do not possess the language or tool kit to do it effectively. A theology of representation creates a foundation for why we must do this work.

Beyond diversity, a theology of representation decentralizes systems of whiteness that historically normalize power structures in church and society based on the mythical norm “usually defined as white, thin, male, young, heterosexual, Christian, and financially secure.”¹ To this list we add: American-born, able-bodied, and cis-gendered privileges that must be recognized, mitigated, and dismantled to honor the multiplicity of God’s creation. A theology of representation is inspired by the God who calls us to do justice and is enacted in and embodied through the work of God’s people.

Toward a theology of representation

Remembering that God’s blessed people are as numerous as the stars in heaven and as the sand that is on the seashore,² we believe that God’s promises are compelling and effective upon a vast array of persons whom God calls and God loves. God’s promises surpass human differences of race, ethnicity, gender, ability, sexuality, and the multiple identities shaped by those differences. This is the work of God, and it is marvelous in our sight.³ God’s spirit is poured out on all flesh, empowering daughters and sons to prophesy, empowering our elders to dream dreams and our youth to see visions; God’s spirit is poured out on all flesh, including the most marginalized and subjugated among us – even and especially those who are to us like female and male slaves.⁴

The same Spirit that calls us to do justice, love kindness, and walk humbly with our God,⁵ is the Spirit that equips us with unique gifts and talents, making us the body of Christ, and each of us its members⁶ - in all of our particularities and variabilities. Therefore, we cannot say to any of our members “I have no use for you.”⁷ Rather, we are empowered, like the many people from the many nations who were together on the day of Pentecost, to speak with each other in our own languages and to be understood.

In the story of Pentecost, Luke is recalling the image of wind and fire in the context of multiple languages being spoken and, more importantly, understood by everyone that was present in Jerusalem. A possible implication of this story is that Luke is associating communication in multiple languages with the presence of the divine. It is interesting that Luke is comparing the presence of multiple languages and ethnicities to fire and violent wind. This image takes on a new meaning in light of the extreme devastation caused by the recent wild fires in California and the destructive winds during recent hurricanes.

Luke’s readers would have known that fire and wind are two vital elements of nature that are powerful and crucial to sustaining life. But that fire and wind can also be deeply destructive when they are not put to good use and nurtured carefully. Luke’s point in using the imagery of fire and wind to characterize heteroglossia—multiple languages—might be that diversity—whether in terms of languages or race and ethnicities—can work either way too. Diversity can be put to good use with care and attention but can also be dysfunctional when not celebrated and appreciated fully.

The Roman empire learned it hard way. It was Rome’s mishandling and a superficial celebration of diversity that, in part, brought the empire down. Rome invested a great deal of time and resources promoting a monolithic culture. It undertook an extensive propaganda to insist that smooth and efficient functioning of the empire necessitated promotion of linguistic and cultural homogeneity at the expense of marginal languages and identities. The story of Pentecost showcases a seemingly impossible phenomenon in which communication across disparate languages happens smoothly and people(s) of diverse nationalities share a space—literally and figuratively— with little difficulty. In doing so, Pentecost undermines Rome’s case for cultural and linguistic homogeneity.

One of the central ideas that underlie Pentecost, one that was also at the center of vernacularization during Reformation, is that God can be expressed in multiple languages (2:11). And that precisely because God is often expressed in multiple languages, no single language can articulate the divine fully. Similarly, no single identity can capture or express the fullness of humanness. Luther recognized vernacularization as a necessary precondition for a fuller realization of life in the spirit. For him, accessibility was an essential aspect of democratization of the Church and for dismantling spiritual elitism. In this way, both Pentecost and Reformation decenter and deprivilege the dominant language and identity and affirm humanity in its various expressions.

Prior to reformation, the Church’s approach to vernacular languages was influenced by the story of Babel that saw multiple languages as a manifestation of God’s judgment. Reformation allowed people to move past that paradigm and embrace vernacular languages in the spirit of Pentecost. Just as Pentecost reversed Babel, Reformation took theology and scriptures to marginal languages. But it also brought those marginal languages to the center of theological discourses, with the result that the vernacular languages and identities are no longer tokens at the table but essential elements in theological discourse.
Luke tells us that when the unlettered Galileans spoke, everyone heard them in their own language. When did these Galileans learn so many languages? The Greek word Luke uses for multiple languages is heteroglossia: Heteroglossia is about each seeking and acquiring an ability to speak the language of the other. It is also about making an effort to enter the spaces of the other. It is equally about seeking and acquiring an ability to understand the other. In enabling people to speak in other tongues (2:4), the spirit makes them cross linguistic boundaries and learn, on a deeper level, languages whose presence and worth they would not have acknowledged hitherto. The Spirit equips us to work together, share resources in common, and demonstrate our witness as followers of Jesus Christ who is God’s love enfleshed deeply abiding with-in-through us, all the way to the ends of the earth.

Indeed, it is to the ends of the earth and to all nations that Jesus Christ, our Savior and our friend, entrusted us with the commission to spread the gospel and model discipleship, baptizing in the name of the Creator, the Christ, and the Comforter, teaching by our own examples the love of God and of each other. In the sacrament of baptism, we are claimed by the Holy Spirit into the priesthood of all believers, descending into the waters as Jesus Christ descended into death, rising into new life as Jesus Christ was raised by God on the day of his resurrection. We practice this worshipful remembrance in anticipation of God raising us on the day of Christ’s return. In the sacrament of Communion, we give thanks (eucharistō) for Jesus Christ’s willingness to allow himself be given over to the Empire that his resurrection would be proof that the forces of evil hegemony will never prevail. We give thanks that our Savior and our friend trusted us with the memory of his body broken and his blood shed, that we would recognize his death, in the broken bodies and shed blood of other human beings. We do the work he entrusted to us, looking forward to the great heavenly feast where all are welcome at the table, when Jesus is its host.

We believe that by God’s divine pleasure, we are intentionally and uniquely called, gifted, prepared, and ready to participate in holy reconciliation with a broken and fearful world. Jesus Christ, our Savior and our friend, modeled compassion for the marginalized, courage to challenge imperial powers on behalf of the least of these, and love toward one another. The yet-still-speaking-and-moving Spirit continually indictus and inspires us to recognize the intrinsic value of those who are different from us, and to respect our many members who co-create the body of Christ.

Glory be to the Creator, to the Christ, and to the Comforter. Amen.

Appendix – Relevant Excerpts from the Book of Confessions of the PCUSA

Confessions: The committee’s work is one way the PCUSA lives its confessions of faith...

I. God’s Work of Reconciliation, A. The Grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ, 1. Jesus Christ

9.12 The reconciling act of God in Jesus Christ exposes the evil in men as sin in the sight of God. ...

I. God’s Work of Reconciliation, B. The Communion of the Holy Spirit

9.25 The members of the church are emissaries of peace and seek the good of man in cooperation with powers and authorities in politics, culture, and economics. But they have to fight against pretensions and injustices when these same powers endanger human welfare. Their strength is in their confidence that God’s purpose rather than man’s schemes will finally prevail.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, A. The Mission of the Church, 2. Forms and Orders

9.34 The institutions of the people of God change and vary as their mission requires in different times and places. The unity of the church is compatible with a wide variety of forms, but it is hidden and distorted when variant forms are allowed to harden into sectarian divisions, exclusive denominations, and rival factions.

9.37 ...[Members’] daily action in the world is the church in mission to the world. The quality of their relation with other persons is the measure of the church’s fidelity.

9.40 ...A presbyterian polity recognizes the responsibility of all members for ministry and maintains the organic relation of all congregations in the church. It seeks to protect the church from exploitation by ecclesiastical or secular power and ambition. Every church order must be open to such reformation as may be required to make it a more effective instrument of the mission of reconciliation.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, A. The Mission of the Church, 4. Reconciliation in Society

9.43 In each time and place there are particular problems and crises through which God calls the church to act. The church, guided by the Spirit, humbled by its own complicity and instructed by all attainable knowledge, seeks to discern the will of God and learn how to obey in these concrete situations. ...

9.44 a. God has created the peoples of the earth to be one universal family. In his reconciling love, he overcomes the barriers between brothers and breaks down every form of discrimination based on racial or ethnic difference, real or imaginary. ...the church labors for the abolition of all racial discrimination and ministers to those injured by it. Congregations, individuals, or groups of Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize their fellowmen, however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess.
9.46  c. The reconciliation of man through Jesus Christ makes it plain that enslaving poverty in a world of abundance is an intolerable violation of God’s good creation. Because Jesus identified himself with the needy and exploited, the cause of the world’s poor is the cause of his disciples. ...A church that is indifferent to poverty, or evades responsibility in economic affairs, or is open to one social class only, or expects gratitude for its beneficence makes a mockery of reconciliation and offers no acceptable worship to God.

9.47  d. ...The church, as the household of God, is called to lead men out of this alienation into the responsible freedom of the new life in Christ. Reconciled to God, each person has joy in and respect for his own humanity and that of other persons; ... The church comes under the judgment of God and invites rejection by man when it fails to lead men and women into the full meaning of life together, or withholds the compassion of Christ from those caught in the moral confusion of our time.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, B. The Equipment of the Church

9.48  ...the church is obliged to change the forms of its service in ways appropriate to different generations and cultures.

III. The Fulfillment of Reconciliation

9.53  God’s redeeming work in Jesus Christ embraces the whole of man’s life: social and cultural, economic and political, scientific and technological, individual and corporate. It includes man’s natural environment as exploited and despoiled by sin. It is the will of God that his purpose for human life shall be fulfilled under the rule of Christ and all evil be banished from his creation.

9.54  Biblical visions and images of the rule of Christ, such as a heavenly city, a father’s house, a new heaven and earth, a marriage feast, and an unending day culminate in the image of the kingdom. The kingdom represents the triumph of God over all that resists his will and disrupts his creation. Already God’s reign is present as a ferment in the world, stirring hope in men and preparing the world to receive its ultimate judgment and redemption.

9.55  With an urgency born of this hope, the church applies itself to present tasks and strives for a better world. It does not identify limited progress with the kingdom of God on earth, nor does it despair in the face of disappointment and defeat. In steadfast hope, the church looks beyond all partial achievement to the final triumph of God.

A Brief Statement of Faith: 11.4 (lines 65-71, excerpted)

In a broken and fearful world
The Spirit gives us courage...
...to unmask idolatries in Church and culture,
to hear the voices of peoples long silenced,
and to work for justice, freedom and peace.
Confession of Belhar: 10.3 – 10.8 (excerpted)

10.3 We believe

• that Christ’s work of reconciliation is made manifest in the church as the community of believers who have been reconciled with God and with one another;
• that unity is, therefore, both a gift and an obligation for the church of Jesus Christ; that through the working of God’s Spirit it is a binding force, yet simultaneously a reality which must be earnestly pursued and sought: one which the people of God must continually be built up to attain;
• that this unity must become visible so that the world may believe that separation, enmity and hatred between people and groups is sin which Christ has already conquered, and accordingly that anything which threatens this unity may have no place in the church and must be resisted;...

10.4 Therefore, we reject any doctrine

• which absolutizes either natural diversity or the sinful separation of people in such a way that this absolutization hinders or breaks the visible and active unity of the church, ...
• which professes that this spiritual unity is truly being maintained in the bond of peace while believers of the same confession are in effect alienated from one another for the sake of diversity and in despair of reconciliation;
• which denies that a refusal earnestly to pursue this visible unity as a priceless gift is sin;
• which explicitly or implicitly maintains that descent or any other human or social factor should be a consideration in determining membership of the church.

10.5 We believe...

• that God’s lifegiving Word and Spirit has conquered the powers of sin and death, and ... will enable the church to live in a new obedience which can open new possibilities of life for society and the world; ...

10.7 We believe ...

• that the church as the possession of God must stand where the Lord stands, namely against injustice and with the wronged; that in following Christ the church must witness against all the powerful and privileged who selfishly seek their own interests and thus control and harm others.

10.8 Therefore, we reject any ideology

• which would legitimate forms of injustice and any doctrine which is unwilling to resist such an ideology in the name of the gospel.

I. God’s Work of Reconciliation, A. The Grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ, 1. Jesus Christ
9.12 The reconciling act of God in Jesus Christ exposes the evil in men as sin in the sight of God. ...

I. God’s Work of Reconciliation, B. The Communion of the Holy Spirit

9.25 The members of the church are emissaries of peace and seek the good of man in cooperation with powers and authorities in politics, culture, and economics. But they have to fight against pretensions and injustices when these same powers endanger human welfare. Their strength is in their confidence that God’s purpose rather than man’s schemes will finally prevail.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, A. The Mission of the Church, 2. Forms and Orders

9.34 The institutions of the people of God change and vary as their mission requires in different times and places. The unity of the church is compatible with a wide variety of forms, but it is hidden and distorted when variant forms are allowed to harden into sectarian divisions, exclusive denominations, and rival factions.

9.37 ...[Members’] daily action in the world is the church in mission to the world. The quality of their relation with other persons is the measure of the church’s fidelity.

9.40 ...A presbyterian polity recognizes the responsibility of all members for ministry and maintains the organic relation of all congregations in the church. It seeks to protect the church from exploitation by ecclesiastical or secular power and ambition. Every church order must be open to such reformation as may be required to make it a more effective instrument of the mission of reconciliation.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, A. The Mission of the Church, 4. Reconciliation in Society

9.43 In each time and place there are particular problems and crises through which God calls the church to act. The church, guided by the Spirit, humbled by its own complicity and instructed by all attainable knowledge, seeks to discern the will of God and learn how to obey in these concrete situations. ...

9.44 a. God has created the peoples of the earth to be one universal family. In his reconciling love, he overcomes the barriers between brothers and breaks down every form of discrimination based on racial or ethnic difference, real or imaginary. ...the church labors for the abolition of all racial discrimination and ministers to those injured by it. Congregations, individuals, or groups of Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize their fellowmen, however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess.

9.46 c. The reconciliation of man through Jesus Christ makes it plain that enslaving poverty in a world of abundance is an intolerable violation of God’s good creation. Because Jesus identified himself with the needy and exploited, the cause of the world’s poor is the cause of his disciples. ...A church that is indifferent to poverty, or evades responsibility in economic affairs, or is open to one social class only, or expects gratitude for its beneficence makes a mockery of reconciliation and offers no acceptable worship to God.
9.47  d. ...The church, as the household of God, is called to lead men out of this alienation into the responsible freedom of the new life in Christ. Reconciled to God, each person has joy in and respect for his own humanity and that of other persons; ... The church comes under the judgment of God and invites rejection by man when it fails to lead men and women into the full meaning of life together, or withholds the compassion of Christ from those caught in the moral confusion of our time.

II. The Ministry of Reconciliation, B. The Equipment of the Church

9.48  ...the church is obliged to change the forms of its service in ways appropriate to different generations and cultures.

III. The Fulfillment of Reconciliation

9.53  God’s redeeming work in Jesus Christ embraces the whole of man’s life: social and cultural, economic and political, scientific and technological, individual and corporate. It includes man’s natural environment as exploited and despoiled by sin. It is the will of God that his purpose for human life shall be fulfilled under the rule of Christ and all evil be banished from his creation.

9.54  Biblical visions and images of the rule of Christ, such as a heavenly city, a father’s house, a new heaven and earth, a marriage feast, and an unending day culminate in the image of the kingdom. The kingdom represents the triumph of God over all that resists his will and disrupts his creation. Already God’s reign is present as a ferment in the world, stirring hope in men and preparing the world to receive its ultimate judgment and redemption.

9.55  With an urgency born of this hope, the church applies itself to present tasks and strives for a better world. It does not identify limited progress with the kingdom of God on earth, nor does it despair in the face of disappointment and defeat. In steadfast hope, the church looks beyond all partial achievement to the final triumph of God.
General Assembly Advisory Committee on the Constitution Permanent Committee Review 2017

Susan Barnett, PhD
October 9, 2017
Every six years, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) must undergo a review.

This review includes a self-study, undertaken by the committee itself. As part of the review, ACC and the General Assembly committee that will review ACC have asked Research Services staff to assist by conducting evaluative research and data analysis.
Interpreting the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is a permanent committee of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It is an elected body that advises the General Assembly on matters related to interpretation and amendment of The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
Process

The Office of Constitutional Interpretation provided the names and contact information of the Commissioners to the three most recent General Assemblies. Research Services maintains a Mid Council contact database.

Research Services uses Survey Gizmo, an online survey software for all surveys including the Presbyterian Panel. Commissioners and Mid Council leaders were surveyed separately; however, both received the survey followed by two reminders and an immediate thank you for their response. The online survey was sent via Survey Gizmo to:

1935 Commissioners for the 220th, 221st, and 222nd General Assemblies
289 Mid Council leaders

Response

43% (829 of 1935) Commissioners
35% (102 of 289) Mid Council leaders
42% (932 of 2224) Total response rate Findings...

✓ Commissioners’ awareness of the ACC increases as a result of attending a General Assembly. This is evidenced by the 21% increase in familiarity from prior to, then following the 222\textsuperscript{nd} General Assembly.

✓ Commissioners report the quality of advice received on overtures for proposed changes to the Book of Order to be good (40%) or very good (28%).

✓ The ACC consistently receives good to excellent ratings on the quality of their work, advice offered in plenaries, fairness in their findings, knowledge of the Book of Order, and professionalism.

How many responding Commissioners attended each of the last three General Assemblies

Respondents were asked which of the last three General Assemblies they had both attended and served as a commissioner.

Not all responding commissioners (111) reported the GA that they attended.

269 Commissioners Attended the 220\textsuperscript{th} General Assembly

192 Commissioners Attended the 221\textsuperscript{st} General Assembly

257 Commissioners* Attended the 222\textsuperscript{nd} General Assembly

*Of those respondents who attended the 222\textsuperscript{nd} General Assembly, 142 (37\%) were Elder Commissioners and 135 (35\%) were Minister Commissioners. This information was not gathered for the 220 and 221 General Assembly Commissioners.
Commissioners were asked to recall the 222\textsuperscript{nd} General Assembly then to indicate their degree of familiarity with the ACC’s work and purpose prior to and after the assembly. Following the 222\textsuperscript{nd} GA, the Commissioners report a significant increase of 21\% in familiarity with the ACC’s work and purpose. Most of this change is reflected with those who were unfamiliar prior to the General Assembly becoming familiar as a result of attending the meeting.

Individual comments about the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Strengths...

➢ [a person] from the ACC, was very helpful to the committee I was on most recently

➢ Absolutely necessary. Should also be in middle governing bodies and others.

➢ I think the ACC has a thankless job and handles their duties very well. I think it is important to have people on the committee who will be fair, who do not have personal agendas, or who do not let their personal opinions get in the way of what is best for all in the Church. It is also crucial to have committee members who are comfortable with technology, and equally comfortable with critical thinking and discourse, as well as comfortable with criticism.

➢ In general, I think the ACC does excellent work. I know several people who have served on the ACC and it is primarily through knowing them that I understand the work of the ACC

Areas for growth...

➢ Advisory Com on the Constitution gave confused comments when the AI on marriage came to the floor.

➢ It would be wonderful if somehow the ACC advice could be dispensed to the presbyteries as they are in the process of constructing their overtures. It’s a shame when overtures are crafted and endorsed, and then when GA meets, we discover that they are not consistent with the constitution.

➢ The Advisory Committee on the Constitution presented one interpretation in the resources and verbally completely flipped at plenary. Showing the individuals bias not the committees advice.

➢ The booklets on the Overtures were not sent to our Presbytery in time for being able to use them at our March meeting, and since we did not meet again until June, we did not get to vote until the day before the deadline for reporting.

➢ While often helpful... there were a few cases ...where the advice was “well we have never done it that way before” which is never helpful.

Member Covenant of the General Assembly Committee on Representation

As members of the General Assembly Committee on Representation called to this ministry of advocacy in the name of Jesus Christ, we covenant with one another to:

Worship and pray together to seek God’s direction for our work, being open to the movement of the Holy Spirit and the direction of our leadership to fulfill GACOR’s mission “to assist the church to move, to transform, and to support full participation and representation to include all people to enjoy the gifts of God as a community.”

Remain mindful that our work is difficult, to respect each other’s insights, to listen when another is speaking, to work diligently, with kindness and humility.

Open ourselves to transformation personally, as a committee, and as a church, always looking for what God may be teaching us. Respect one another’s viewpoint and worldview, and seek to find common ground and connection.

Work for a fully inclusive and whole church in partnership with a variety of liaisons and councils, using new technologies when possible to meet efficiently, ensuring that all persons have equal access to materials and tools.

Focus on the issue under discussion in our meetings and deliberations and support the moderator to bring us back to the topic if we stray away.

Seek the advice and or guidance of the GACOR Moderator or GA Staff during our face-to-face meetings.

Respect and acknowledge the planning process, be active participants before and during our meetings and trainings so that the work of GACOR is advanced.

Agree that equity pertains to all people with NO exceptions.

1 GACOR Mission Statement
GACOR Permanent Committee Review 2017

Angie Andriot, PhD
Research Services
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

September 19, 2017
Every six years, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) must undergo a review. This review includes a self-study, undertaken by the committee itself. As part of the review, GACOR and the General Assembly committee that will review GACOR have asked the Research Services team to assist by conducting evaluative research and data analysis.

The two main areas covered are: (1) fidelity to mission, and (2) effectiveness of service.

In order to examine these areas, five groups were surveyed:

1. GA Commissioners and Advisory Delegates
2. Permanent Committee Members
3. Members of the boards of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly
4. Mid Council Leaders
5. National Racial-Ethnic Caucus Leaders
31% of respondents completed the survey (843 total)

Below are the response rates and number of respondents for each group

Since the Racial Ethnic Caucus Response rate is so low, they are not included as a separate group when comparisons of groups are done in the report. Their answers are, however, included in any report of overall responses (provided they were asked the question).
Demographics of respondents

Below are some demographic details for the respondents overall. For more details regarding respondent demographics by respondent group, see Appendices A-D.

- Has disability: 7%

Since there are not enough responses from respondents of color to do detailed comparisons by race-ethnicity, as such all racial-ethnic analyses in the report use a binary comparison of white respondents and respondents of color.
What are the views of GACOR?

In this section, we examine:
(1) Familiarity with GACOR
(2) Perceptions of GACOR’s importance
(3) Beliefs regarding GACOR’s fidelity to its mission
fidelity to Mission

83% are at least somewhat familiar with GACOR

Members on permanent committees and boards are more familiar with GACOR than members of mid councils or GA commissioners.
The most common way respondents encounter GACOR is regarding GA

Whereas mid council members are more likely than members of the boards to encounter GACOR during or regarding GA, board members are more likely to encounter GACOR in every other situation listed.
most consider it important to be intentional about including people based on:

The only differences by group are that board members are less interested in being inclusive regarding ordination status, and mid councils are more interested in being inclusive regarding place of residence.
In addition, 3% have no opinion, and 4% provide an “other” opinion. Other opinions include the belief that diversity should happen naturally, that focusing on diversity distracts us from other goals, and that seeking diversity comes at the expense of “finding the best people.”
fidelity to mission

The Book of Order instructs that each Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) council, including the General Assembly...

“shall give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall provide for full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices. . . . Councils shall establish committees on representation to fulfill the following functions: to advise the council regarding the implementation of principles of unity and diversity, to advocate for diversity in leadership, and to consult with the council on the employment of personnel, in accordance with principles of unity and diversity.”

72% believe GACOR helps the GA follow this instruction at least somewhat faithfully

Responses do not differ by age, gender, race-ethnicity, or ability

In addition, 25% have no opinion.
Is GACOR effective in its mission?
We examine this by measuring levels of representation, participation, and access to decision-making. In addition, a few other outcomes of interest to GACOR are assessed.
effectiveness of mission

Attempts are being made to increase diversity

Individuals from underrepresented groups are 5% more likely to have been recruited to their position.

Here are the specific percentages of each group that reports having been recruited to their position:

- Men: 50%
- Women: 55%
- White: 52%
- People of Color: 57%
- No disability: 53%
- Has disability: 60%

Also, the average age of those recruited is 4 years younger than those who were not recruited (not shown).

GA commissioners have the greatest percentage of recruited individuals from underrepresented groups.

Responses differ by demographics, which will be covered later in the report. Percentages will not add up to 100 because not all response options are shown.
65% feel that their opinions are just as valued as the opinions of others.

Responses do not differ based on race ethnicity, age, or ability or disability. However, they do differ by gender. Men are more likely than women to feel their opinions are valued about the same or more (see page 19 for more).
19% report having witnessed bias or discrimination based on one or more of the following:

- Age: 9%
- Sex or gender: 8%
- Race or ethnicity: 8%
- Ordination (minister or elder): 7%
- Sexual orientation: 6%
- Fluency in English: 5%
- Marital status: 2%
- Ability or disability: 2%

People were most likely to witness age-based bias or discrimination.
8% report having experienced bias or discrimination based on one or more of the following:

- Age: 4%
- Sex or gender: 3%
- Ordination (minister or elder): 3%
- Race or ethnicity: 2%
- Fluency in English: 2%
- Marital status: 1%
- Sexual orientation: <1%
- Ability or disability: <1%

Peasants were most likely to experience age-based bias or discrimination.

It is important to note that ALL respondents were asked this question; so, 3% of all respondents report having experienced bias or discrimination based on gender—including men. Subsequent slides report experiences of bias or discrimination specifically felt by members of traditionally marginalized groups (for those categories in which we have the relevant information.).
20% of those under 40 have experienced age-based bias or discrimination

In addition, those under 40 are less comfortable expressing their perspective in meetings, are more likely to feel pressure to go along with decisions, and are less likely to be satisfied with the way the committee deals with problems.

- I felt comfortable expressing my own perspective in meetings
  - under 40: 81%
  - 40-74: 84%
  - 75+: 89%

- I sometimes felt pressure to go along with decisions

effectiveness of mission

6% of people of color have experienced race-based discrimination

In addition, respondents of color are less likely to feel their participation affected decisions, are more likely to feel pressure to go along with decisions, and are less satisfied with their level of access to the moderator.

People of color are:

- 4% less likely than white individuals to feel that their participation affected decisions made in committee
- 4% more likely to say they sometimes felt pressure to go along with committee decisions, and
- 9% less likely to say they had sufficient access to the moderator

Witnessed Discrimination

Respondents who report witnessing race-based bias or discrimination by other members of the committee

Respondents of color who report experiencing race-based bias or discrimination by other members of the committee
6% of those with a disability have experienced ability-based bias

31 of the 50 respondents had a disability which affected their ability to travel to meetings at GA

81% (27 of the 31) communicated their needs. They are most likely to communicate their needs to the committee or board leadership.

Of these, 82% say adequate steps were taken to ensure they were able to fully participate in meetings.

Witnessed Discrimination
Respondents who report witnessing ability-based bias or discrimination by other members of the committee

Experienced Discrimination
People with disabilities who report experiencing ability-based bias or discrimination by other members of the committee

5% of women have experienced gender-based discrimination

Men are 6% more likely than women to feel that other committee members value their opinions about the same as or more than those of others.

Women are also 4% less likely than men to agree that their participation affected decisions made in committee (not shown).

Also, this differs by age: 21% of women under 40 report experiencing gender-based discrimination, compared to 3% of women 40 and over.
Main findings

On interpreting findings

This research makes the use of tests for statistical significance.

- If a difference between groups is reported, this means that a significance test (e.g., t-test, ANOVA, chi-square) shows that it was significantly different (p<.05).

- If no breakdown by group is shown, it means there were no significant differences to show.

For further details about how each group responded to all survey questions, see Appendices A-D.

1. 83% of respondents are familiar with GACOR. Members on permanent committees and boards are more familiar with GACOR than members of mid councils or GA commissioners.

2. The most common way respondents encounter GACOR is regarding GA. Whereas mid council members are more likely than members of the boards to encounter GACOR during or regarding GA, board members are more likely to encounter GACOR in every other situation listed.

3. Only 2% think GACOR is unimportant, and 3% feel it is not faithful to its mission. The fact that responses do not differ by gender, race, age, or ability indicate that those groups GACOR is trying to help are just as satisfied with the work of GACOR as majority group members. In addition, the more a person is familiar with GACOR, the more likely they are to say GACOR is very faithful to its mission.

4. Although most consider it important to be intentional about including people based on all the categories we asked about, the most important categories to respondents were gender, race, and ordination.

5. Theological orientation requires more attention. Although 84% said it was important to be intentional about including people based on theological orientation, this was not one of the categories we asked about regarding experiences of discrimination in the survey. This was the most frequent written-in “other” category (sexual orientation was second).

6. Although overall reports of experiences of bias or discrimination are relatively low, there are still reports. In addition, there are patterns by age, race, and gender in who feels comfortable expressing their opinions in meetings, who feels pressured to go along with decisions, who is satisfied with the way decisions are made, and who feels their participation makes a difference.

[The assembly approved Item 04-01 as amended. See pp. 12, 45.]

On Appointing a Team to Review the Current Per Capita Based System of Funding the Ministry of Councils Higher Than the Session—From the Presbytery of Newton.

The Presbytery of Newton respectfully overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to do the following:

1. Direct the Moderator(s) of the General Assembly, in consultation with the Office of the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Committee on Representation, to appoint a team of no less than [six] [twelve] and no more than* [ten] [fifteen] elders and ministers to review the current per capita based system of funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, for financial sustainability into the next ten years. The team will accomplish this by identifying the adaptive and technical challenges of sustainability in funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, consulting and receiving feedback/input from the leadership of the presbyteries, synods, and the Office of the General Assembly, as well as the Presbyterian Foundation.

2. Direct the team to make a final report of their work, along with recommendations and suggestions of potential experiments for changes to the system that funds the ministry of councils higher than the session, to the 224th General Assembly (2020). [If the work requires more time, the team is directed to report to 225th General Assembly (2022), with an interim report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).]

[Financial Implications: Per Capita Annual $38,240. Total—$76,480]

Rationale

Super Brief History

The earliest use of per capita was 1734. In 1857, the General Assembly adopted a plan to help defray the cost of travel and hosting the annual General Assembly. Each presbytery would contribute 5 cents per member of their presbytery to assist with the overall costs. Over the decades this basic structure has been our means of sharing the cost of being a community of missional ministry together.

Originally, per capita only funded the costs of the General Assembly meeting—particularly, providing a commissioners’ travel fund, so presbyters of modest means could afford the sometimes weeks-long trip on horseback to serve as General Assembly commissioners.

Over the decades, since that time, the use of the per capita has funded administrative costs of the General Assembly, the Office of the General Assembly, and synod and presbytery work. Per capita (literally each head) has been based on the number of members per church so that all paid an equal proportional share of the cost of ministry together.

Through various authoritative interpretations and PJC rulings*, per capita apportionment has been seen as a voluntary benevolence for congregations. Yet, as faith communities, there is an ethical and high moral obligation to participate fully in the community.

Present Situation

Over the last few decades, the overall membership of our congregations/presbyteries has declined. Recently, with the loss of congregations to other denominations, the decline of membership is very steep. The cost of doing ministry has not decreased even though presbyteries may have fewer congregations and members. Presbyteries have had to make, and are continuing to make, difficult and challenging choices of doing ministry together.

The Per Capita System of Funding Is Not Flexible Nor Adaptive

The Book of Order allows presbyteries to make their own determination of funding and methods of raising funds. However, because many of the synods and the OGA financial structure is based on per capita assessments, it is awkward, clunky, and difficult for a presbytery not to utilize the same structure. The per capita apportionment funding system, alone, is antiquated, and a financially defeating way to fund our ministry together through our higher councils.

The per capita system was a specific tool, with roots from a time when technical solutions, on their own, worked. We need to take a serious look at the adaptive challenges that face the future financial sustainability of our higher councils. The financial sustainability landscape of mid councils in our current context is multilevel and complex. We live in a time that calls us to address adaptive challenges with both adaptive and technical solutions.
Technical problems are those that have a clear cause as well as a clear process or procedure for “fixing” the problem. Adaptive problems or challenges are not clear. New learning or understanding of the context is required to address adaptive challenges. In such cases, many issues lie behind the presenting problems. Therefore, it takes consideration of many different possibilities to adjust, reframe, or shift the challenge.

Values and Ideals Reflected in Per Capita

We recognize and celebrate that the congregations and worshipping communities are, and should be, the leading edge in our missional ministry of announcing the Kingdom of God. We value the community nature of the per capita apportionment because all share in both the cost and the support of missional work. Sharing the cost of being the church is part of being a community. We appreciate having the different mid councils that provide support to the congregations and presbyteries in a variety of ways. We also understand that dismantling, changing, or supplementing the system of per capita apportionment is not a simple nor linear process but one that will take time, conversation, experimentation, and diverse recommendations. It is our hope that the team convened to study this issue can engage councils at all levels in a robust discussion of the challenges they face in achieving financial stability. From that conversation, we hope that a pathway will emerge that upholds the values of shared missional ministry, strong support for congregations and higher councils, and addresses broadly the sustainability challenges beyond the one tool that has historically been used.

ACSWP ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-01

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recommends that in response to Item 04-01, the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve the following alternate resolution:

“The 223rd General Assembly (2018):

1. Directs the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) to review the current per capita based system of funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, for financial sustainability into the next ten years. A team of elected members and staff will accomplish this by identifying the adaptive and technical challenges of sustainability in funding the ministry of councils higher than the session, consulting and receiving feedback/input from the presbyteries and synods, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Presbyterian Foundation, and ecumenical partners, utilizing Research Services as appropriate.

2. Directs COGA to make a final report of their work, along with recommendations and suggestions of potential experiments for changes to the system that funds the ministry of councils higher than the session, to the 224th General Assembly (2020). If the work requires more time, they are directed to report to 225th General Assembly (2022) and provide an interim report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).”

Like the proponent presbyteries, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) sees the per capita system as an important form of solidarity and loyalty among all the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Thus, it makes a social witness, and when withheld for non-financial reasons, sends a clear message. The use of per capita also signals an understanding of the structural or institutional aspect of the church’s “embodiedness.” Hence ACSWP supports per capita as a voluntary system and believes that it needs to be strengthened at all levels of the church.

Likewise, ACSWP appreciates the brief historical background provided in the overture. More can be found in Clinton A. McCoy Jr.’s “How This Mustard Seed Grew: The Origin and Impact of the Per Capita Apportionment as a Means of Financing the General Assembly,” American Presbyterians 66:1 (Spring 1988). More options for flexibility and adaptability may be found in the traditions of other churches, with our Full Communion partners’ traditions most comparable.

While recognizing that the Office of the General Assembly is almost entirely dependent on General per capita (as are some mid councils), ACSWP nonetheless believes COGA is the most appropriate body to do the consulting and exploring new thinking desired by the proponents. Their work might also be shared in draft form for comment prior to submission to the General Assembly. Overall, this would also save the church the expense of creating a separate study team. The problems of per capita are inextricably bound to the viability of our current presbytery and synod structure, even if the issue comes to a head when (after a surprising period of no increases) a catch-up in GA per capita is proposed. Thus, ACSWP holds that an ecumenical dimension to the study is important for comparison not only of giving traditions, but of coordination and organization in the face of changing demographic and cultural trends.
Advice & Counsel on Item 04-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-01.

Churches with majority people of color, whether immigrant or black churches, may not have the funds to support an increase of per capita, yet need the monies to sustain their churches. As the church of Jesus Christ, we are called to support one another and reiterate the rationale of this overture: “Sharing the cost of being the church is part of being a community. … We also understand that dismantling, changing, or supplementing the system of per capita apportionment is not a simple nor linear process but one that will take time, conversation, experimentation, and diverse recommendations.”

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-01.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns agrees that the current per capita system is neither flexible nor adaptive, and there is therefore a great need to begin a conversation regarding the challenges and future financial sustainability of our shared missional ministries. ACWC also lifts up the reality that women are too often left out of conversations regarding financial concerns. Indeed, the suggested leadership list for consultation may already reflect a gender imbalance. ACWC therefore advises that the two advocacy committees, ACWC and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), also be included as consultants in the conversation.

Comment on Item 04-01—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of General Assembly (COGA) respectfully urges the assembly to approve Item 04-01.

As the Rationale for the overture states, the Per Capita funding source has been in place since the earliest form of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Through our understanding of being a “connectional church,” we realize a shared responsibility for the vitality of our beloved denomination, as has been the case for nearly 300 years. While the requirements of how to function as a denomination have changed in those 300 years, very little about the apportionment nature of our shared responsibilities, per capita, has been altered.

COGA believes now is the time for a new age of Presbyterians to discern the Spirit’s guidance to fund the work of the denomination for the next several generations. It seems underwhelming to note that we still are funding aspects of the work of the church similarly to the 18th century Presbyterian church when it comes to the work of the General Assembly, while so much around us has evolved in many nuanced and streamlined ways surely there is another way for us to finance the ministry of the 21st century church.

Ergo, COGA believes that there is merit in exploring other ways of funding the necessary work of the OGA, and commends the formation of a task force to look into that possibility.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consists of fifteen elected members and was created “to carry out the assembly’s oversight of the Stated Clerk …” (Organization for Mission, IV.C.2.). COGA regularly reviews the work of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly.

Comment on Item 04-01—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) advises that commissioners consider that a team of “no less than six and no greater than ten elders and ministers” is a very small sample of the rich diversity of the church. It is important that the team represent a breadth and depth of the church while acknowledging that a six- to ten-member team cannot fully embody such diversity on its own.

Per capita funding is an issue of participation, representation, and equity. It is a crucial aspect of our connection as a denomination. To ensure that the review is fully representational of the denomination, including underrepresented communities, GACOR encourages the team to capture voices and perspectives from as wide of a spectrum within the denomination as possible. The committee encourages the team to be intentional and effective in seeking many voices from across the church.
04 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON THE WAY FORWARD

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

PMA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-01

Comment on Item 04-01—From the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA).

The Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA), along with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), is a recipient of General Assembly per capita revenue. Over the years, our agencies have operated with a shared understanding of what General Assembly per capita is and how it may be used, reflected in a joint agreement (see Appendix 10 in PMA’s Manual of Operations at http://www.presbyterianmission.org/wp-content/uploads/PMA-Manual-Of-Operations-September-2016.pdf).

Item 04-02

[The assembly approved Item 04-02 as amended. See pp. 44, 45–46.]

A Resolution on Prioritizing Translation and Accessibility in the PC(USA)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

1. Direct all six of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) agencies to be intentional and proactive in prioritizing the hiring and retaining of people from Presbyterian communities and other historic Presbyterian “Communities of Color,” preferably with theological training and fluency in languages other than English, in [every one] [each] of their program areas or departments so that resources, as well as theological, ecclesiological, and other pertinent documents, if applicable, will be written from the cultural, methodological, and linguistic worldviews of those communities. The agencies will report back on their progress to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

2. Direct all the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to create an “Office of Translation and Interpretation” that will develop and share resources with other agencies and mid councils to create a systematic approach to language accessibility for the entire church. The translators should have direct interaction with the associates in the Racial/Ethnic and Women’s Intercultural Ministries as well as the Racial Ethnic Caucuses and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (proposed recommendation to change name to Racial Equity Advocacy Committee) to ascertain the actual needs of their constituencies and prioritize the documents, articles, and new items that are important and relevant to these communities.

3. [2.] Encourage all councils of the church to conduct all meetings related to the ministry of the church in their respective jurisdiction in languages common to their constituencies and to offer simultaneous interpretation in those languages as well as American Sign Language (ASL) [and provide captioning services for the deaf and hard of hearing community]. All pertinent documents should be sent ahead of time in the proper languages in a format accessible to [the blind and vision impaired] [people who are blind and vision impaired]. [This will allow those church members and leaders of immigrant, deaf, and blind communities who are not proficient in the English language or are unable to hear or see to participate and have a “place at the table.”]

Rationale

Our reformed theological and constitutional affirmations of the creation of a community of all languages and tongues has biblical foundations:

“And I am coming to gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come and see my glory,” (Isa. 66:18b); “After this I looked, and there was a great multitude that no one could count, from every nation, from all tribes and peoples and languages ...” (Rev.7:9); “all together were in one place ...” (Acts:2:1) [as] “...a house of prayer for all peoples...” (Isa. 56:7).

Demographers predict that by the middle of this century, or even before, there will not be a racial or ethnic majority in this country, due mostly to immigration from the Global South and birth rates amongst communities of color.

Many immigrants desire to affiliate with our church, since some are indeed Presbyterians, the product of our missionary activities in their countries of origin. They are ready to share with the United States’ church their unique gifts of culture, music, and language, as well as their faith and commitment to the gospel of Jesus Christ.
Contrasting with the way things are going around us in society, our church presently is mostly homogeneous: white Anglo and English-speaking. If the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is going to fulfill her calling to be a reflection of the kingdom of God and God’s creation in all of its colorful glory, then the new immigrants and their descendants present a wonderful challenge as well as an opportunity for ministry.

In an article and commentary on Acts 2:1–31, the Reverend Jill Duffield, editor of The Presbyterian Outlook, wrote the following:

Translation requires careful attention to context, both that of the speaker and the hearer. The implication, the tone, and even pauses and filler words must be considered and translated if the meaning is to be correctly conveyed. Confusion abounds when a literal word-for-word transcript is given and, as the phrase goes, something important is “lost in translation.”

Translation from one language to another is more of an art than anything else, especially in the church context. It involves knowledge of “terms of art” and of the theology, ecclesiology, and ministry of the church, as well as the context in which the “target” communities live and minister. It requires paid, trained professionals in the field so that the translations are both faithful to the spirit of the message as well as contextual to each language community. Furthermore, the translators must work closely with the constituency, who are the ones who should prioritize the documents to be translated and not some rule, guidelines or mandate from someone who may not understand intercultural dynamics. Simply translating documents from a white, middle class cultural context contributes to the colonization and forced assimilation of other cultures. English as a language and worldview would then continue to be the “normative” or dominant way of thinking and acting.

Recently, General Assembly commissions and committees, such as the Way Forward Commission, have challenged our denomination to be more intentional about hiring multilingual and culturally proficient staff at all levels that will develop resources in the native tongues of new immigrants and publish important statements and documents in languages other than English.

If the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) really seeks to become a multicultural/intercultural/cross cultural denomination, as publicly announced and prioritized, it needs to invest major resources in providing culturally sensitive materials for its Global South constituency as well as making outreach more effective to the “emerging majorities” we still hope to welcome into our denomination.

Endnotes
1. “Global South” is a term that has been emerging in transnational and postcolonial studies to refer to what may also be called the “Third World” (i.e. Africa, Latin America, and the developing counties in Asia), “developing countries,” “less developed countries,” and “less developed regions” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Global_South.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-02

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-02.

Accessibility “to the table” has always been a concern of women. Language accessibility can/has limited the access of women, especially women of immigrant communities as they navigate the structures within the PC(USA), as well as members of the deaf and blind communities.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-02

Comment on Item 4-02—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation supports the full inclusion of diverse persons at all levels of the denomination. This openness requires a commitment to effective translations, ideally written by native speakers of each language so that documents are accurate and culturally sensitive.

The Book of Order, F-1.0404 states: “… As it participates in God’s mission, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seeks: … a new openness in its own membership, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions, made one in Christ by the power of the Spirit, as a visible sign of the new humanity.”

Translation and interpretation are significant ways that the denomination ensures equitable access across, and participation in, the whole body.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).
Item 04-03

[The assembly approved Item 04-03, Recommendation 1., as amended and with comment. See pp. 44, 46.]

[Comments:

We believe that there is potential for equity and inclusion that is not fully realized by the current configuration and lack of organizational clarity regarding Shared Services.

We believe that by engaging all agencies in determining the constitution of Shared Services and how services are administered, in a transparent and holistic process, that greater buy-in will be accomplished across the six agencies and Presbyterian Women, giving the General Assembly as a whole greater bargaining power, opportunities for cross-agency collaboration, and shared accountability.

We believe that areas identified in “Ongoing Commission Administrative Action”: Partnership of six agencies to identify solutions for the cultural, cost, and efficiency issues within Shared Services, property usage, institutional culture, communications, and equity all directly have great potential to be addressed through improved collaboration and shared establishment of a pool of resources that benefit our whole body.

1. There is lack of clarity around what is meant by Shared Services—these should be readily defined with a clear understanding of who is delivering the services. Additionally, it is possible that an agency separate from A. Corp might be more equipped to deliver particular services with greater quality and cost benefit than the Office of Shared Services. We should explore how we can best leverage the skills of our different agencies for the good of the whole.

2. In order for agencies to commit to participation in Shared Services, they must be given enough data to comparison shop and to know and trust that their fees are paying for the services they receive. Currently there is a lack of transparency regarding how service fees are calculated, which leads to distrust and desire to pursue other options.

3. Is the A. Corp Board, as established at the 223rd General Assembly (2018), constituted in a way that encourages all agencies to engage enthusiastically in the opportunity to participate in Shared Services? Trusting that we will learn a lot about what is actually needed for governance of this body during its first two years of implementation, the Moving Forward Commission may realize a different configuration benefits the whole.

4. How might we further partner to create cohesive messaging and bargaining power through Shared Services? Would we benefit from housing some other services such as communications, Human Resources Support, IT, etc. within Shared Services?

5. It seems that there is potential for Shared Services to benefit our denomination beyond the General Assembly level. How can we better resource our congregations and mid council bodies and their work on the ground?

1. Composition of the Board of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (“A Corp.”)

The Way Forward Commission and the All Agency Review Committee jointly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):

a. Approve the joint recommendations of the Way Forward Commission and All Agency Review Committee to restructure the governance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, (“A Corp.”) as outlined in their reports and below and, consistent therewith, direct that the following actions be taken within thirty days after the adjournment of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) so that the newly constituted board of directors can hold its initial organizational meeting within ninety days of this action:

(1) That the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, consistent with Section 6.06 of the current Amended Bylaws of “A Corp.,” approve the amendments of such bylaws as indicated in the attached Appendix 10 (see p. 487).

(2) That the Board of Directors of “A Corp.” adopt the amendments to the Amended Bylaws of “A Corp.” as indicated in the attached Appendix 10.

(3) That the current Board of Directors of “A Corp.” upon adoption of such amendments, tender their resignations as directors to be effective at the [conclusion of the meeting, or upon execution of the unanimous consent] [constituting of the new board], adopting such amendments.

b. In the expectation that the actions in Recommendations 1.a. above and 1.c. below will be carried out in a timely fashion, elect eleven nominees, selected as described in Recommendation 1.c. below, to the Board of Directors of “A Corp.” to fill the vacancies to be created by the resignations of the then-current Board of “A Corp.” as described in Recommendation 1.a.(3) above.
c. Direct the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation ("A Corp.") to amend the current Amended Bylaws of "A Corp." to change the number and composition of the board, beginning as of the day following the conclusion of the 223rd General Assembly (2018), as indicated in the attached Appendix 10. (see p. 487) [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

d. Direct the respective governing board of directors, trustees, or committee of the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Foundation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Corporation, Inc., and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to change their respective bylaws or standing rules, as appropriate, to provide that the president of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, or such president’s designee pro tem, shall have voice but no vote at the meetings of such boards or committee of each of such agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and such additional or successor agencies as may be created by the General Assembly.

e. Direct the governing board of directors, trustees, or committee of the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Foundation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Corporation, Inc., and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to make all such changes as may be necessary and permitted in their governing documents and policies to recognize the changes in the structure and composition of the Board of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation.

f. Appoint to an existing or special committee or commission of the General Assembly, or delegate to the proposed Moving Forward Implementation Commission in Recommendation 5, the task of reviewing and ensuring the effectiveness of the changes to the Amended Bylaws of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, revising the membership of its board of directors and selection of president, with a direction (1) that such committee report to the current “A Corp.” board any additional recommended changes to such Amended Bylaws within one year, and (2) that the committee described above make itself available for a year following the conclusion of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to consult with such governance committees, standing rules committees, and other committees and councils of the church as may wish for advice in conforming their bylaws or manuals of operations as necessary to the changes in board governance of “A Corp.” If any member of this committee or commission is a representative of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or of the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall ensure that both such agencies are represented among the committee or commission members.

g. Request the appointment, in each of the two General Assemblies following the election of the new board of directors of “A Corp.,” a committee for review of “A Corp.” and that the 225th General Assembly (2022) determine, after the second such review, if additional separate reviews are needed and, if so, the schedule and method for such ongoing review of “A Corp.”

h. Amend Chapters V, VI, and X of the portion of the Manual of the General Assembly known as the Organization for Mission, as indicated in the attached Appendix 11 (see p. 515), to confirm the scope of authority and relationships between the Presbyterian Mission Agency and The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, and to recognize the changes in governance of “A Corp.” [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

i. [Rescission of prior inconsistent action.] Declare that all prior enactments inconsistent with these recommendations, including enactments of the General Assemblies of either of the reuniting churches, are hereby rescinded to the extent of such inconsistency.

[The assembly approved Item 04-03, Recommendation 2., as amended and with comment. See pp. 44, 46–47.]

2. Role of the Stated Clerk

The Way Forward Commission and the All Agency Review Committee jointly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):

a. Amend the Manual of the General Assembly called the Organization for Mission, Chapter IV.B.2. with a new section “a” and renumber the current a–p as b–q. The new section IV.B.2.a. shall read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “a. In partial fulfillment of his/her role as the continuing ecclesial officer and Head of Communion for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Stated Clerk will offer constitutional and spiritual leadership for the life and witness of the church and exercise pastoral authority over concerns of the church in times of crisis. The Stated Clerk is the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.’s) chief ecumenical officer and its primary representative in national and international interchurch and interfaith organizations and speaks to and for the church in matters of faith and practice [except as the General Assembly directs otherwise] [in accord with the beliefs, policies, and actions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).]”
b. Amend the Organization for Mission, Chapter IV.B.2.n., as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Stated Clerk shall promote the harmony and efficiency of the General Assembly and its agencies in cooperation with the Presbyterian Mission Agency and its Executive Director, with special attention to relationships between General Assembly entities, and with synods, presbyteries, and sessions. The Stated Clerk shall have membership on or relationship to appropriate committees, and commissions, and agencies of the General Assembly as it shall determine from time to time. The Stated Clerk shall serve ex-officio on the Board of Directors for the Presbyterian Mission Agency and other agencies (identified in Chapter VIII of the Organization for Mission) including voice but not vote at all meetings while in either open or closed session. Furthermore, the Stated Clerk shall be consulted about any candidate before the candidate’s name is brought to a board for election as the agency executive (chief officer) or interim agency executive (other than for a replacement for the Stated Clerk position).”

c. Amend the Organization for Mission, Chapter IV.D.1., so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Way Forward Commission recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a twelve-person committee (to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, the General Assembly will elect two committees, each to review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly. Each committee will be composed of twelve members: four commissioners from the previous three General Assemblies, four who have served on the board of a General Assembly entity other than the one being reviewed, and four at large. The at-large members may include ecumenical partners. The committee will use the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies in the Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly. The committee will report to the Stated Clerk who will present the report, along with any additional recommendations from the Stated Clerk, to the next General Assembly following its election the results of the review and make recommendations based on its findings.”

d. Instruct the Board of Directors for the Presbyterian Mission Board, Board of Pensions, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Presbyterian Foundation, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to amend their by-laws and manuals to be in compliance with the provisions of paragraphs 3.02 and 3.03 above. These agencies may continue to speak within their own realm of responsibility pursuant to already existing policies that will remain unchanged.

[The assembly approved Item 04-03, Recommendation 3., with comment. See pp. 44, 47.]

3. Financial Sustainability of the National Denomination

The Way Forward Commission recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a twelve-person committee (to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and to include two presbytery executives and one synod executive) with a deadline of 12/31/2019, to provide a comprehensive resource projection analysis and summary assessment—in conjunction with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation and representatives of all other agencies—of national church assets and income for financial sustainability review. Such analysis/report will be forwarded to each of the six agencies, the 2020 Vision Team, and the ongoing Moving Forward Implementation Commission proposed in Recommendation 5 below.

[The assembly approved Item 04-03, Recommendation 4., as amended and with comment. See pp. 44, 47–48.]

4. Inclusion and Equity

The Way Forward Commission recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):

a. [Diversity and Reconciliation.] Require that all six agencies participate [and invite Presbyterian Women to participate] in the Diverse Voices Table being established (described under Ongoing Commission Administrative Actions below); and similar to what has been undertaken by the PMA’s Office on Diversity and Reconciliation, create a process to examine issues of equity and inclusion particular to their own agencies.

b. [(Completion of Audits.)] [Require that the prior 222nd General Assembly (2016) mandate for personnel audits from each agency be completed by January 1, 2019, and to recur every four years (see Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 788, GA 222 Item 11-24 (Recommendation 1.b., “Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism and Ethnocentricity Report”)).] [Require that the previous mandate originating from the 222nd General Assembly (2016) for personnel audits from each agency must be completed by January 1, 2019. Further, direct that all agencies incorporate “race audits” occurring at least every four years, utilizing an external professional auditor, who can objectively report systemic bias and prejudice, as well as suggesting actions to becoming more racially just and equitable employers. The same external auditor shall be utilized by all agencies in order that the same standards are applied. The results of these] audits will be reported to respective agency boards and committees and to the next General Assembly. We further recommend that the members of the Diverse Voices Table and the ‘Chairs & Chiefs’ group of agency executives and board chairs collaborate to select the external auditor. (See Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 788, GA 222 Item 11-24 (Recommendation 1.б., “Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism and Ethnocentricity Report”).]

c. [Translation Services.] [Require that all translation services of the six agencies be moved to shared services under “A Corp,” and be staffed appropriately in order to provide translation services to all six agencies for translation of all materials going forward and historical/existing records upon request. Prioritization and exceptions of translation services is to be discerned and directed by an inclusive group, such as the Diverse Voices Table being established (described under Ongoing Commission Administrative Action below). Translations services shall include websites and the translation into English of materials originally written in other languages. Translations services will be one more service residing within Shared Services in “A Corp.” The total cost of these services shall be allocated to and paid for by each agency as a percentage of work completed. Global [Communications] [Resources] would translate all materials going forward and historical/existing records upon request.

[Prioritization and exceptions of translation services is to be discerned and directed by an inclusive group, such as the Diverse Voices Table, in consultation with associates in Racial Ethnic and Women’s Intercultural Ministries, as well as the racial ethnic caucuses and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

5. Moving Forward Implementation Commission

The Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee jointly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a “Moving Forward Implementation Commission” [to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and to include four members of the 2016 Way Forward Commission, four members of the 2016 All-Agency Review Committee, and four members to be appointed from the commissioners of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) (including one young adult advisory delegate)], for a term ending at the 224th General Assembly (2020), with the mandate and authority to (1) ensure compliance and implementation of 2018 assembly action on recommendations from the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee, (2) ensure continued implementation of collaborations and commission administrative actions underway as outlined in this report and the report of the All-Agency Review Committee, (3) coordinate with the 2020 Vision Team, (4) report findings and make recommendations to the 224th General Assembly (2020). [5] working together with the Stated Clerk and the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, may secure an outside consultant to address the issues raised in the June 12, 2018, Administrative Action Regarding Trust and Transparency, (6) direct an evaluation of Shared Services and report to the 224th General Assembly (2020). The report is to include:

(a) An itemized list of all services shared through the Office of Shared Services and services that might be contracted with other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) agencies to provide.

(b) Assessment of transparency by which rent and all other fees are calculated and charged.

(c) Commission may direct appropriate denominational agencies or corporations to provide financial documents, billing data, fees lists, etc.

(d) A Corp Board Composition.

(e) Recommendations, in consultation with the A Corp board, of additional services that should or could be shared by the agencies and Presbyterian Women.

(f) Recommendations regarding potential for mid councils, congregations, and other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) organizations to contract for any or all Shared Services.
Take any and all administrative action necessary to accomplish the Moving Forward Implementation Commission vision with respect to the Way Forward Commission initiatives and the June 5, 2018 Administrative Supplement.

If any of the four members to be appointed from the 223rd General Assembly (2018) is a representative of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or of the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall ensure that both such agencies are represented among those four members. The Moving Forward Implementation Commission is to be appointed by October 1, 2018.

6. [Note from the Way Forward Commission: The Way Forward Commission concurs with and urges approval of the recommendations of the All-Agency Review Committee with respect to agency reviews.]

Rationale

Introduction

The Way Forward Commission was created by the 222nd General Assembly (2016). We celebrate that our birth occurred in the same assembly that ratified The Confession of Belhar and remembered the 50th anniversary of The Confession of 1967. We acknowledge the Holy Spirit at work and we believe it is our task to live into the promise and hope these confessions proclaim.

Living into that promise requires that we act boldly and collaboratively. We capitalize on this unique opportunity to assist the church in living out its call to Christian witness and service in and for the world. We are, by God’s grace, ever reforming. We claim that truth with a spirit of openness and possibility.

The commission began its work by

- reviewing in detail all historical documents and recent resources,
- understanding the current context, and
- declaring a set of values that would guide us.

Appendix 1 sets forth our meeting schedule. Appendix 6 sets forth the commission’s Affirmation of Approach outlining the values that informed our work. Appendix 7 sets forth the commission’s Mid-Term Report that details our process of discernment.

We then talked with and heard from people all across the denomination. We engaged ecumenical partners. We partnered with the All Agency Review Committee and the 2020 Vision Team, and although we were given distinct mandates, we discovered significant commonalities and discernments as we embarked in our work. We are grateful for the encouragement we received and for the honest, thoughtful, faithful, and creative feedback provided. And that reinforced our discernment that indeed we were a denomination ready for change. Appendix 2 lists some of those groups with whom we have collectively conducted thousands of hours of conversations across the church.

We give thanks for those who labor within the structures of our church—for their ongoing commitment to the church and their work during this time of questioning and scrutiny, and for their collaborative spirit in moving us forward. Appendix 4 illustrates the embodiment of this willingness to change in a summary of the initiatives, both internal and collaborative, for improvement in each of our agencies.

Within our denomination we believe there is

- a willingness to let go of things that no longer serve the mission and vision of the church;
- a commitment to inclusion and equity as a key part of who we are;
- a new energy, enthusiasm, liveliness, and vitality;
- an openness to change, collaboration, and partnership, acting together as one body;
- an understanding that we must be responsive and nimble; and
- a renewed sense that God is present and active in our midst.

Thanks be to God.

We work with confidence that our triune God gathers, protects and cares for the church through Word and Spirit as our God has done since the beginning of the world and will do to the end. (Confession of Belhar, 10.1)
The rationale for our recommendations follow along with additional context and information regarding work that will continue. The appendices include more detailed information. We encourage you to review this document in its entirety to better understand the process and recommendations of the Way Forward Commission.

Themes of Change

We have not understood our charge to be one of finding ways to manage decline, or to tinker with existing structures in the hope of assuring institutional survival. Rather, encouraged by our calling through the voice of the General Assembly, the counsel of the Stated Clerk, and words of admonition and encouragement from thousands of Presbyterians, we have set a bolder course.

We believe we are a changing church in a changing world and that our ways of work and witness must reflect the dynamism of our contemporary lives.

We strongly affirm the good work happening in our church, and the dedication and hard work of those in ministry at the local, regional, and national level. The lack of clarity as to how we as a denomination see ourselves in the changed and changing world of the 21st century, both in terms of how we intersect with the world and how we act together as one body in Christ, has forced us to face the realities of falling short of being all we can be. This is a time for radical improvement, collaborative creativity, and dramatic innovation. We are all invited to ask ourselves and one another: What are our strengths as a denomination? What does the present moment call us to do and to be? How can we better help congregations and local ministries thrive and grow? What are we not doing or able to do differently?

Three broad themes emerged from our conversations throughout the denomination, and reflect the “why” behind our recommendations and our collaborative work:

1. the core of who we see ourselves as “church”;
2. our unity in our diversity; and
3. embodying relationships as we live our calling together as Presbyterians.

We believe that, taken together, the recommendations we are making and the administrative actions we are taking weave together a new way of functioning together as one body in Christ that will strengthen our internal life, our external witness, our inclusiveness, and our nimbleness.

For background and context, we have included a summary of the current structure of our national denomination in Appendix 8.

Functioning as Church

Rationale for Recommendation 1

Ecclesial and Missional Focus. At the core of who we are as “church” lie the two primary and unique functions of ecclesial and missional work. Yet a common theme in our conversations and analysis is that it is critical to shake off the 20th century forms, eschewing the corporate structure, model, and mindset that often allow the support functions to drive decision-making rather than the ecclesial or missional visions. Our recommendations, with respect to the role of the Stated Clerk (Recommendation 2) and the composition of the board of the church corporation (Recommendation 1), are designed to return our focus to our ecclesial and our missional core—that is, our unique witness and service to the world.

It has become clear that the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of General Assembly need to be freed from administrative burdens to fully define the role of the church in ecclesial and missional work. In strengthening the missional aspect of that call, innovative models of mission delivery, not corporate or administrative responsibilities, should be the central, critical role of the national agencies. We believe that the Presbyterian Mission Agency, especially, has been saddled for far too long with corporate responsibilities that create barriers for gifted staff and hinder their full focus on mission and coordination with congregations, mid councils, and global ecumenical partners. Recognizing the importance of these requirements as well as the stewardship obligations inherent in the funding and work of the national church, we are striving for the most transformative methods of mission engagement.

As a result of our recommendation on the composition of the “A Corp.” Board, the Board of PMA and COGA would—as they do now—determine the priorities and directions of the church, how we witness the Gospel in the world, yet would be newly liberated from the support tasks that have given rise to the tensions, distractions, and dysfunctions that gave rise to the creation of our commission. Our proposals do not add any new powers to “A Corp.” or change its deliverance from the General Assembly. Nor do they change the existing powers of the Board of PMA or Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. Our proposed amendments to denominational documents such as the Organization for Mission are designed to make it clearer that the purpose of PMA, for example, is to make and carry out the mission decisions of the church, and that the role of “A Corp.” is to assist and support those decisions.

Fundamental to our approach is the concept that the decision-making role about what our national ecclesial and missional work is, and how best to do it, resides in COGA and the Board of PMA, exercising authority derived from the General Assembly. Those entities are not, nor should they be, corporate in nature. In contrast, “A Corp.,” as we view it under our recommendations, functions like a corporate “utility” to assist and support the decisions of these ecclesial and missional agencies (and other parts of the church); its role is not to second-guess or change such decisions.

And to promote a church culture reflective of our vision to live as “one body in Christ,” we also make it clear in changes in our Organization for Mission, our ecclesial document—which takes priority over our corporate ones—that even when acting in our corporate or individual agency contexts, all officers, directors and employees must consider in all matters the church as a whole ahead of any individual benefit or detriment to an individual agency. We recognize that Jesus Christ is Lord, and that none of our organizations has any authority but in Him, and they are charged to work together to realize the mission and great ends of his church in all respects.

The creation of our commission was due to significant and longstanding issues involving the agencies of the church, particularly PMA. We are recommending these changes because they are the least intrusive way to encourage people to work together as one body in Christ, to lift a heavy burden off one agency that has distracted it from its primary task, and to provide greater equity in our structure among our agencies.

Recommendation 1.a. and Recommendation 1.b. set forth the process for implementation of the change in composition of the “A Corp.” board.

Recommendation 1.c. amends the Bylaws of “A Corp.” to reflect the rationales outlined above. To ensure diversity in the “A Corp.” board, nominations and filling of vacancies will be done in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation—the current standard used by the General Assembly for ensuring diversity and inclusion.

Recommendation 1.d. allows the president of “A Corp.” to have voice but not vote at the board meetings of the six national agencies. This recommendation would help emphasize the cooperative nature of the relationship between “A Corp.” and the church’s six current agencies, while also underscoring (by the absence of vote) that “A Corp.” does not control those agencies.

Recommendation 1.e. directs the boards of the six agencies to make conforming changes to their own governing documents. This implementing resolution would simply require the existing agencies of the church to recognize the new governance structure for “A Corp.” The agencies are in the best position to define the particular language they may need to manage their own recommendations for who should serve on the Board of “A Corp.,” for example.

Recommendation 1.f. provides for a General Assembly committee or commission to oversee and assist in implementing the “A Corp.” transition. To the extent the General Assembly believes that it would be useful to ensure on a comprehensive basis that any changes in form necessary to implement the substance of its changes in the governance of “A Corp.” are accomplished prior to the selection of a new board, this recommendation would accomplish that.

Recommendation 1.g. provides for a General Assembly review in each of the 2020 and 2022 General Assemblies of the effectiveness of the “A Corp.” changes. While “A Corp.” already exists, is not an agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and already provides audit information to the General Assembly, it would be appropriate to make sure that the changes proposed for its governance receive review to determine their effectiveness. This recommendation would accomplish this consistent with the practices used by the General Assembly in other contexts.

Recommendation 1.h. amends the Organization for Mission to better reflect the roles of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and “A Corp.” to reflect the rationales outlined above. This includes the fundamental concept in Section VI., critically important, that all officers, directors, and employees must consider in all matters the church as a whole ahead of any individual benefit or detriment to an individual agency, recognizing that Jesus Christ is Lord, and that none of our organizations has any authority but in Him, and they are charged to work together to realize the mission and great ends of his church in all respects.

Appendix 5 outlines some important considerations and additional rationales that went into this joint recommendation by the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee, as well as answers to some frequently asked questions. The Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee plan to work further on the logistics and implications of our recommendations over the months ahead so we can provide June’s assembly with the benefit of the best transition thinking, and have invited the Board of PMA and COGA to participate in that process (Ongoing Commission Administrative Action 9 below).
In addition, our continuing work in the area of shared services reflects our conviction that there can and should be better and more cost-effective ways to deliver corporate and administrative services that positions the functions as supportive to the missional components of the national agencies (Ongoing Commission Administrative Action 1 below).

Rationale for Recommendation 2

Stated Clerk. The church is called to speak Gospel truth to the world today; indeed, it is critical to both mission, evangelism, and worship. Nonetheless, we grew to believe we could strengthen the voice of the church by clarifying who represents the church in public witness on behalf of the denomination and who serves as a central voice within the denomination. The present ambiguity is not an issue about an individual but rather an issue of structure, roles, and responsibilities.

Our constitutional documents make it clear that the Stated Clerk has a unique role on behalf of the denomination, articulating the hope, ministry, and direction both internally for us and externally on behalf of us, bound in all cases by the General Assembly, while maintaining our Reformed polity of “shared power ... exercised jointly” (Book of Order, F- 3.0208). Our recommendation with respect to the Stated Clerk recognizes the uniqueness of his/her leadership role within the church and will serve to assure greater institutional coherence making explicit the role of the Stated Clerk in interpreting and fulfilling the will and policies of the General Assembly.

Recommendation 2.a. provides further clarity that the Stated Clerk speaks for and on behalf of the church in times of crisis. At the same time, we acknowledge the appropriate role of each agency to speak to the issues under its purview, and leave existing policies with respect to such statements in place. We also continue to encourage collaborative conversations to ensure coordinated messaging.

Recommendation 2.b. provides for the Stated Clerk to be present ex officio at the boards of the national agencies and to be consulted when changing agency executives.

Recommendation 2.c. provides for the Stated Clerk to serve as the conduit for the General Assembly for agency reviews.

Recommendation 2.d. directs the boards of the six agencies to make conforming changes to their own governing documents.

Rationale for Recommendation 3

Financial Sustainability. The financial sustainability of our national church funding patterns continues to be a central source of anxiety for churches, mid councils, and the six agencies, and has been the subject of an overture to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) from the Presbytery of Newton. Our recommendation to create a committee to provide a comprehensive projection and analysis of the financial realities will assist the church in understanding and planning for any changes that may be required to ensure financial sustainability.

Unity in Diversity

Rationale for Recommendation 4

Inclusion and Equity. As Presbyterians we value the gift of the richness of our diversity, recognize that the Good News belongs to all of God’s creation, and that inclusion and equity are central to our identity, our mission, and our growth. In order to be authentically the church, we also recognize that this work cannot be compartmentalized to one office or group, but instead should be an organized effort that permeates the entire denominational structure. Our recommendation on inclusion and equity is designed to improve the way we live our values in these critical areas.

Recommendation 4.a. Our denomination’s commitment to antiracism and inclusion places us in an ideal position to engage in conversation to prevent the perpetuation of practices that are unjust and prejudiced. We believe that we, as a church, now have the capacity to address these issues with honesty and grace. Each agency is invited to identify within themselves best practices for equity and inclusion—whether it be employment practices, curriculum selection, or leadership development. The formation of the Diverse Voices Table with representation from all agencies will allow for coordination and collaboration around these efforts to take place on a wider, denominational level, and serve as a model for mid councils and congregations.

Recommendation 4.b. directs that the personnel audits mandated by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) be completed by January 1, 2019, and that they recur every four years.

Recommendation 4.c. directs that the translation services of the denomination be centralized and staffed appropriately, and that prioritization of translation services be discerned and directed by an inclusive group. The work of translation is an underused portal to being the diverse body we claim to be. It provides us with the fullness of our faith and identity and a cross-cultural vehicle. Full translation services will also provide the church with resources written in their original non-English language. Access to resources that equip and enable the church to do its work is also a matter of justice, provides the church to speak to each other, and firmly states our commitment to full inclusion.
Because of the centrality of inclusion and equity for the identity, mission, and growth of our denomination, the commission continues work in the following areas (Ongoing Commission Administrative Action 5 below):

- Leadership Development for Underrepresented Populations. Greater effort needs to be made to coordinate opportunities for leadership development for underrepresented groups in our denomination. We urge the consolidation of all denominational efforts around leadership inclusion with clear communication and networking with various representative and advocacy groups to tap into new leaders. This will require both the Office of General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency to comply with regular communication with racial ethnic caucus leaders as delineated in the Covenant of Understanding Regarding the Role and Relationship of Racial Ethnic Caucuses within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [Appendix 9]. We need to prepare leaders for the church we will be, and consider innovative ways of providing leadership development events, programs, and training. This includes nurturing leaders—ordained ministers, ruling elders, and commissioned ruling elders—of emerging minorities. It also includes a willingness to encourage and support alternative pastoral leadership patterns best suited to the church we are becoming.

- Shared Standards & Expectations. We need a fuller understanding of our current intercultural realities in order to establish future goals for greater inclusion. Rather than meeting the current racial ethnic presence in our churches, we should be addressing the social reality of changing demographics of our world. Not only would this be an expression of our hopefulness in God’s creative fullness, but also help us live into our commitment to diversity and hospitality. This would include, but not be limited to, race audits of all agencies in our concerned effort to be one church, intentional inclusion of resources created by people of color and in original languages other than English.

The Way Forward Commission commends the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s Office on Diversity and Reconciliation and encourages the other five agencies to also make self-studies on equity and inclusion a priority.

Embodying Relationships

Rationale for Recommendation 5

Moving Forward Implementation Commission. This recommendation reflects the desire to maintain the hopeful momentum of the collaborative spirit that has been moving throughout the six agencies of the denomination, and to ensure follow-up on actions approved by the 223rd General Assembly (2018) and the ongoing commission administrative action already in process. The commission, with both finite mandate and lifespan, has been able to put into place significant collaborative dynamics these past two years, overcoming usual inertia that frustrates needed change. For these reasons, an implementation commission will be far more effective at moving forward continuing work than would an implementation committee.

Rationale for Recommendation 6

Concurrence with All-Agency Review Recommendation on Reviews. The recommendations of the All-Agency Review Committee regarding the timing and scope of the periodic reviews of the six national agencies and the denomination as a whole are welcome refinements to a process for improvement that has been very effective over the past decade.

Additional critical themes in this area of embodying relationships that have emerged during the commission’s discernment have included the following:

- Congregational Focus. The vitality of our congregations is of high importance to the church. With the strong conviction that the local church is the locus of ministry for the PC(USA) but “... is not of itself a sufficient form of the church” (Book of Order, G-1.0101), yet congregational support is an essential priority of the national church, we believe all agencies of the denomination are presently considering innovative ways to collaborate both with each other and with mid councils to provide local churches with adequate, contextual support that is nimble and responsive. Although this can take many forms, what is central and should be central to our national structure is to continually view our activities through the lens of congregational focus and how to be responsive to the question: How can we best partner with churches in order for them to fully live into their missional call in their communities?

- Mid Council Relationships. Presbyteries have been described as the linchpins of our denomination. They partner directly with congregations, particularly in times of transition, redevelopment, or crisis. And yet we are witnessing a sea change in the structure, staffing, funding, and responsibilities of these councils, as these bodies have borne the brunt of the significant changes within the church such as congregations departing the denomination, aging properties, and dwindling resources. The role of synods is also in transition. There is a lack of resources affecting paid staff at the presbytery level and a reconfigured mid council ministry department within the Office of General Assembly. The national church must find additional tangible ways to partner with presbyteries and synods in support of congregations. This can be best accomplished by closer and more intentional connections between the national staff and mid councils to together explore best practices and mutual resourcing. Our ongoing commission administrative action with respect to mid councils (Ongoing Commission Administrative Action 6 below) strives to build, maintain, and foster strong relationships with mid councils so that a nation-wide support community may be formed. The creative, lifegiving work already ongoing in many congregations and mid councils need to be lifted up and shared by the national church, allowing for greater fellowship, sharing of best practices and experiences, and growing together as church.

- Communications. Great communication flows from strong vision and good strategic planning, and is the central mechanism for relationship. Each of the six PC(USA) agencies has a vision and strategy for communicating its vision to its constituents in the Church and in the world; however, the national church as a whole lacks a clear, coherent vision and comprehensive strategy for communication at the denominational level. We have observed a lack of unity in branding, voice, and consistency among the myriad of communication channels, the most obvious example are the denominational websites and their many iterations. We have clearly heard a desire for clear, user-friendly, and varied platforms, including everything from print to social media, to effectively communicate the work the church is doing locally and around the world. The continuing collaborative work of the commission in the area of communications, described below and already producing results, shows great promise for working together as one body (Ongoing Commission Administrative Action 4 below).

ONGOING COMMISSION ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION

Under its authority granted by the 222nd General Assembly (2016), the Way Forward Commission continues to work in the following areas that we hope will be generative and provide insights that will be reported in an update at the 224th General Assembly (2020).

1. Shared Services (joint activity with the All-Agency Review [AAR] Committee). The commission has partnered with AAR to engage with all six agencies to identify solutions for the cultural, cost, and efficiency issues within Shared Services. Goals for change include prioritization of program activities, proper policies and procedures, cost savings, and efficiency gains. In its continued work, the commission will use its administrative authority to clarify authority, responsibility, and delivery of shared services by (i) conducting a review of policies and procedures with program directors and Shared Services leadership to refine, simplify, and amend procedures and policies to enable more nimble and responsive action and to affirm the decision-making power at the ministry/program level; (ii) convene work groups to complete a thorough cost and efficiency analysis to prepare recommendations for the insourcing, outsourcing, or sharing of payroll processing, legal, information technology, and mail/printing/distribution services; (iii) identify other areas of partnership and cost-sharing as they may present themselves; and (iv) explore the logistics of integration of Translation Services under the Shared Services umbrella.

2. Property and facilities usage. Executives and selected board leadership from all six agencies have gathered for a series of meetings regarding the building at 100 Witherspoon Street and all other facilities of the national church. Topics under continued discussion include the costs and feasibility of remaining within the building at 100 Witherspoon Street, possible use of facilities to promote mission, and hospitality within each denominational building.

3. Institutional Culture. The commission continues to engage in ways to improve institutional culture within and among the Presbyterian Mission Agency and all six agencies. Specific areas of engagement include: (i) engaging in conversation with the PMA Executive Director search committee to assist full understanding of the vision for function and structure of the agencies as developed by the Way Forward Commission, (ii) refining the scope of work and engaging a consultant on implementing institutional culture changes, including strategies to incorporate institutional identity into training and ongoing staff development, (iii) convening conversations with PMA’s Leadership Cabinet regarding changes to policies and procedures that interfere with healthy institutional culture, and (iv) convening conversations with PMA’s Leadership Cabinet regarding HR policies and whether any particular positions must be filled by a person with one of the following requirements: by a person of faith, by a Presbyterian, or by a ruling elder or teaching elder.

4. Communications (joint activity with the All-Agency Review Committee). The commission continues to engage with communication staff and agency executives to refine a process to guide changes to denominational communication plans and vehicles. Related projects include (i) agency-wide communication plan, (ii) unified style/brand guide, (iii) unified and updated web-presence and use of social media, (iv) clarification and definition of roles, responsibility, and authority within the communication departments.

5. Inclusion & Equity. The commission continues conversations with OGA and PMA to create and seat a Diverse Voices Table group with equal staff representation from all agencies. This group will convene to meet regularly to review and update each other on the work of denominational inclusion and equity, including translation services. This group will consult with caucuses and networks in accordance with the existing agreements, including annual consultations (see Appendix 9).

6. Mid Council Ministries. In ongoing collaboration and partnership with the Stated Clerk, the commission will continue efforts to (i) restructure the Office of the General Assembly’s Mid Council Ministries organizational chart to establish the position of associate clerk for mid council ministries and adjust the mid council ministry areas under the new position, (ii) create a Mid Council Visioning Team to help explore the considerations, possibilities, and opportunities of mid councils in order to maintain a robust relationship among and between presbyteries, synods, and the national church, (iii) explore a pilot program for two deployed mid council staff in partnership with mid councils in selected regions.
7. Seminary Relations. In a series of conversations with the presidents and board chairs of our twelve PC(USA)-affiliated theological seminaries and with the Committee on Theological Education, it has become clear in our changing times that further discernment is needed with respect to the nature, scope, and opportunities in the relationships among and between our seminaries and our denomination. These collaborative conversations are continuing with enthusiasm and openness.

8. Financial Development Analysis. The commission will convene a working group of stewardship/fundraising staff from all six agencies to engage in conversation about stewardship activities, including fundraising and identify areas for further collaboration and cooperation. Specific topics of engagement will include (i) clarification of what stewardship (fundraising/funds development) activities are occurring within each agency currently including cultivation, solicitation, receipt, and acknowledgment of gifts, (ii) identification of duplicated efforts and develop a strategy for cohesive and/or centralized stewardship activities, (iii) review of the policies, use, and budget impacts of specific giving opportunities across the agencies, (iv) review communication and interpretation of administrative costs and use of funds received, (v) review events and activities that engage mid councils and congregations (i.e. Kaleidoscope), (vi) review of dedicated funds held at the Foundation and collaborative refinement of strategies, including cy-pres actions, to free-up available funds.

9. “A Corp.” Transition Logistics (joint activity with the All-Agency Review Committee). The commission and the All-Agency Review Committee will continue their collaborative conversations, in consultation with representatives from the board of PMA and from COGA, regarding an implementation and transition plan to assist the 223rd General Assembly (2018) if the “A Corp.” recommendation is approved, in an effort to discern and resolve as many unintended consequences as possible, including any possible further refinements to the proposals contained in Appendixes 10 and 11.

Conclusion

We give thanks for the commitment and heart of the General Assembly and for all of those we have engaged as they express a call for change, growth, and increasing faithfulness. We give thanks for the collaborative spirit and energy we encountered throughout the denomination, especially our national staff, as we went about our work. We give thanks for God’s steadfast love and guidance as we have approached this task with faith and hope. In this same faith and hope, we remain open to the Spirit’s prompting through the wisdom of the wider church. We give thanks to the General Assembly and the PC(USA) for this tremendous opportunity to serve the church as the Way Forward Commission.

Cliff Lyda (Presbytery of St. Augustine) has recently retired as a teaching elder and has relocated from greater Chicago to Gainesville, Fla. While in the Presbytery of Chicago he served as moderator, and as a leader in renewal and restructuring efforts in the presbytery. Most recently he served as moderator of the Review Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Adan A. Mairena (Presbytery of Philadelphia) serves as the pastor of the West Kensington Ministry and the Yeardon Presbyterian Church. Adan is also a member of the P.C.U.S.A. Eliana Maxim (Presbytery of Seattle) has served as the associate executive presbyter for the Presbytery of Seattle for the past seven years. Her primary focus areas include church redevelopment and revitalization, new and immigrant worshiping communities, and mission partnerships. Eliana serves on the PC(USA) Hispanic/Latino National Caucus as vice moderator. She has previously served on the 220th General Assembly (2012)’s Committee on the Belhar Confession; the Committee on Church Wide Conversation on Race, Racism, Ethnicity, and Ethnocentrism; and the 221st General Assembly’s (2014) Review Committee for the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

Patricia Rarumangkay (Presbytery of National Capital) is a ruling elder at Emmanuel Indonesian Presbyterian Church in Rockville, Maryland, where she has served as the Mission Committee coordinator and currently serves as co-coordinator of the Education Committee. She is part of her presbytery’s Immigrant Ministry Network (IMN), and she is passionate about helping to develop programs and initiatives that will further empower the young adult and new immigrant groups. Patricia currently works at an international financial institution based in Washington D.C. Patricia was very involved and provided important insights at early portions of the commission’s work. However, an unexpected illness prevented her from continuing her work on the commission. She resigned from the commission in early July 2017. She remains in our prayers.

Jo Stewart (Presbytery of Charlotte) is a member of Myers Park Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, where she has served in numerous roles over the years—including chair of the Global Relations Team. She just ended a four-year term on the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB) and was vice-chair for the last two years; as vice-chair, she also served as the PMAB representative for the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. Jo is currently a member of the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Board. She is retired from Towers Perrin (now Willis Towers Watson) where she was a principal and senior consultant.

Emily Marie Williams (Presbytery of Grace) is a junior intercultural communications major at Schreiner University in Kerrville, Texas. She has served on a plethora of committees and planning teams at her church, presbytery, and synod level. ### APPENDIX 3
Mandate of the Commission

“The 222nd General Assembly (2016) recommends that the Co-Moderators of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), together with the Moderator and Vice Moderator of the 221st General Assembly (2014), name a Way Forward Commission to study and identify a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA). That vision shall take into account the ministries of the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), but shall not be bound by the current configuration of those ministries, except where mandated by the church’s Constitution. The mandate of the commission is to engage_contract a qualified, examination team that may include some or all of the All Agency Review team, with the requisite skills and abilities to assess institutional performance, both internally among the agencies and externally as they interface with the congregations. This examination team is charged with conducting a comprehensive, detailed analysis that will provide clearly detailed, measurable recommendations for improvements to the commission for implementation by the agencies. The commission shall further describe and implement a General-Assembly level staffing pattern that will accomplish its vision. The commission shall be guided in its development and articulation of this vision and structure by Reformed ecclesiology as expressed in our Constitution.

“In the discharge of its responsibilities, the commission shall:

1. Integrate the recommendations provided by the All Agency Review Committee, the Committee to Review the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and the Committee to Review the Office of the General Assembly.

   a. All recommendations should be reviewed by the commission to determine which should be implemented by the appropriate agencies.

   b. The commission will monitor implementation across the agencies

2. Visit with and explore

   a. the best practices of other national church bodies,

   b. the best practices of corporations and nonprofits, as deemed helpful.

3. Consult with

   a. seminary faculty and presidents,

   b. presbytery and synod leaders.

4. Explore other resources they deem helpful and prudent

   And shall be empowered to

   1. take such administrative actions in both OGA and PMA as may move the General Assembly staff in the direction of its vision;

   2. recommend to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) such changes in Standing Rules as may move the church in the direction of its vision;

   3. recommend to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) any amendments to the Book of Order as may move the church in the direction of its vision.

   4. explore the best way for Shared Services to serve these agencies.

The commission shall be comprised of no more than twelve voting members (with a quorum to be a simple majority of seven) at least two of whom should be members of the 2016 Assembly Committee on the Way Forward, with every effort made to include an advisory delegate from that committee. The commission membership will include a representative from both the PMA Review Committee and the OGA Review Committee, a representative from both the current Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB) and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), and at least one mid council staff person.

“We agree with the PMA Review Committee that the commission consist of the following:

1. The commission shall be made up of ruling and teaching elders with broad geographic, racial, ethnic, and gender diversity, a total of at most twelve commissioners.

2. The PMA and OGA will each appoint a staff person to serve as staff support for the commission.

3. The commission’s work will be informed by other churchwide conversations on the future of the church and its structure.

4. The assembly will allocate sufficient resources so that this commission can meet regularly and consult with other PC(USA) constituents, as well as others who could provide insight into the process. There should be at least two face-to-face meetings in one year and with as many electronic meetings as deemed necessary.

5. Recommendations for any missional and structural changes will be brought to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) in compliance with all Standing Rules of the General Assembly.

Rationale for Alternative Resolution

“The business before this committee consistently called for study of our current structure, expressed concern for the culture and administration of the PMA and OGA bodies, and posited a hope for change that will make us a more efficient, inclusive, culturally sensitive, and visionary denomination.

“We appreciate the substantial work of the PMA and OGA review committees and those who developed and concurred with the amendments that have been brought to our committee. As we pursued responses to what was proposed, we recognized that it would be better to first identify the purposes and immediate foci that will govern our next steps and then address issues of structure and staffing.

“We have limited the size of the commission in response to studies, and in consideration of our own process, which indicate that the decision-making abilities of committees is diminished as size increases. The inclusion of a young adult advisory delegate (YAAD) is a direct response to the insightful, articulate input our committee has received from its YAAD participants. We believe their involvement is an important component in achieving greater inclusivity and broadened perspective as we make our way forward.” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 38–40, 226–27)

Agency Collaborative Initiatives

Through collaborative conversations and internal initiatives, many opportunities for improvement have been undertaken by the national agencies and encouraged by the commission, living into the commission’s affirmation that we as a church must live into a sense of urgency that we must move to a new openness, a new way, and in words and actions promote a sense that we are one body in Christ, collaborating not only for the benefit of one agency alone, but for the whole church and its ministries.

Presbyterian Foundation

• With its financial support to the church of approximately $60 million per year and its experienced staff, the Foundation is exploring how their financial counsel, better amplified, could provide substantially more support to the denomination.
• Project Regeneration—working with churches and presbyteries on sale of excess property, to use the proceeds from such sales to better fund mission that the congregation or presbytery believes is worthwhile. The Foundation, in conjunction with PILP, is working to develop a more robust collaborative infrastructure to expand this project to support mid council challenges regarding real estate.
• Work together with the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., to complete the transfer of the remaining areas of the Church Loan Program to PILP for purposes of streamlining the loan process, reducing duplicative efforts, reducing costs, and improving response time, including implementation of any needed logistical changes involving loan funding sources.
• Continued work with all agencies to discern a way to ensure a comprehensive, clearly defined communication, contact, and interaction objectives with the denomination’s mid councils, based on periodic planning sessions with mid councils and documented assessment of needs and risks. Assist mid councils in developing critical funding objectives based on mid council identified financial needs, and encourage mechanisms to promote “one body in Christ” collaboration, cooperation and joint approaches.
• Continued collaborative conversation to clarify the several agencies’ activities in fundraising, and to develop additional efficiencies resulting in a streamlined process that reduces duplication, improves responsiveness, and leads to expanded ministry.
• Continued collaborative conversation regarding the opportunities for coordination of information on constituents currently maintained separately by each agency (recognizing that there exists legal and regulatory limitations, particularly in the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation).

Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP)

• As PILP has been servicing and administering the Church Loan Program for seventeen years, for purposes of streamlining the loan process, reducing duplicative efforts, reducing costs, and improving response time, the remaining areas of this ministry (mainly board oversight and policy determination and all loan and building grant approval) will be transferred to PILP. PILP will work together with the Presbyterian Foundation to complete this transfer of mission, including implementation of any needed logistical changes involving loan funding sources.
• Continued work with all agencies to discern a way to ensure a comprehensive, clearly defined communication, contact, and interaction objectives with the denomination’s mid councils, based on periodic planning sessions with mid councils and documented assessment of needs and risks. Assist mid councils in developing critical funding objectives based on mid council identified financial needs, and encourage mechanisms to promote “one body in Christ” collaboration, cooperation and joint approaches.
• Explore developing a unit able to assist mid councils as they work to manage their physical assets.
• Continued collaborative conversation concerning the opportunities for coordination of information on constituents currently maintained separately by each agency (recognizing that there exists legal and regulatory limitations, particularly in the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation).

Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

• Complete the consolidation of Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP), currently housed in PMA, into PPC, as recommended by the 2009 CMP Study and encouraged by the General Assembly, with the goal of CMP becoming a self-sustaining part of the publishing enterprise within three years. This also includes the Spanish and Korean curriculum publishing programs that will continue to receive funding indefinitely as the General Assembly mandates.
• Explore the consolidation of marketing, ordering, and publishing processes currently in multiple agencies offering publishing services.
• Explore establishing formal, periodic meetings with mid councils for the express purpose of providing publishing/communications assistance responsive to the needs of the denomination.

The Board of Pensions

• Continue follow-up analysis of the 2017 initiative (offering more “a la carte” benefit packages) for effectiveness and further possibilities, reflecting the importance of this issue to congregations and mid councils who reflect the concern that existing packages/policies may be problematic for encouraging new worshipping communities.
• Continued work with all agencies to discern a way to ensure a comprehensive, clearly defined communication, contact, and interaction objectives with the denomination’s mid councils, based on periodic planning sessions with mid councils and documented assessment of needs and risks. Assist mid councils in developing critical funding objectives based on mid council identified financial needs, and encourage mechanisms to promote “one body in Christ” collaboration, cooperation, and joint approaches.

- Continued collaborative conversation to clarify the several agencies’ activities in fundraising, and to develop additional efficiencies resulting in a streamlined process that reduces duplication, improves responsiveness, and leads to expanded ministry.
- Continued collaborative conversation regarding the opportunities for coordination of information on constituents currently maintained separately by each agency (recognizing that there exists legal and regulatory limitations, particularly in the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation).

Presbyterian Mission Agency

- Complete the consolidation of Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP), currently housed in PMA, into PPC, as recommended by the 2009 CMP Study and encouraged by the General Assembly, with the goal of CMP becoming a self-sustaining part of the publishing enterprise within three years. This also includes the Spanish and Korean curriculum publishing programs that will continue to receive funding indefinitely as the General Assembly mandates.
- Encourage and affirm the work of the Governance Task Force and the PMA board to analyze and improve PMA effectiveness through proposed changes to the PMA board composition and PMA board organization.
- Continue work with all agencies to discern a way to ensure a comprehensive, clearly defined communication, contact, and interaction objectives with denomination’s mid councils, based on periodic planning sessions with mid councils and documented assessment of needs and risks. Assist mid councils in developing critical funding objectives based on mid council identified financial needs, and encourage mechanisms to promote “one body in Christ” collaboration, cooperation, and joint approaches.
- Continued collaborative conversation to clarify the several agencies’ activities in fundraising, and to develop additional efficiencies resulting in a streamlined process that reduces duplication, improves responsiveness, and leads to expanded ministry.
- Continued collaborative conversation regarding the opportunities for coordination of information on constituents currently maintained separately by each agency (recognizing that there exists legal and regulatory limitations, particularly in the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation).
- Continued collaborative conversation with all six agencies regarding the missional use and hospitality at the Presbyterian Center, 100 Witherspoon Street in Louisville.

Office of General Assembly

- See Recommendations.
- Continued work with all agencies to discern a way to ensure a comprehensive, clearly defined communication, contact, and interaction objectives with denomination’s mid councils, based on periodic planning sessions with mid councils and documented assessment of needs and risks. APPENDIX 5

Recommendation on Changes to the Composition of Board of “A Corp.”

Additional Considerations and Rationales for Recommendations from the Report of the All-Agency Review Committee

Section F-1.0404 [of the Form of Government] reminds our denomination that “[a]s it participates in God’s mission,” the church should seek “a new openness to see both the possibilities and the perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activities in the world.” This openness to the work of the Spirit has inspired this recommendation concerning “A Corp.”

In every generation, Presbyterians have wondered whether the church was becoming too corporate. As we addressed the concerns lifted up by previous reviews and as we did our own analysis regarding “A Corp,” we also heard this concern. The Book of Order, at G-4.0101, requires each council above the congregation, to incorporate if it is legally possible. Indeed, as discussed below, the denomination has had a corpora tion to support its work since the 18th century. In evaluating the faithful operation of the denomination and its agencies, therefore, it is simply not possible to act as if the corporate form of the General Assembly does not exist. Rather, the focus must be on whether the form of the corporation is faithfully serving the church. We concluded that the current form of the corporation, and particularly its complete control by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, is not serving the work of the whole church, and in fact is one of the sources of inefficiencies and at times problematic functioning within the PMA.

The Review Committee for the PMA in 2016 summarized its findings as follows: “Though the PMA has produced good work, it is evident that there are significant weaknesses in a number of areas, including: strategic decision-making and priority-setting; organizational culture and work environment; and collaborative efforts with other General Assembly agencies.” We found that these significant weaknesses remain. We have observed that one of the sources of these significant weaknesses is a board that is not effective at handling corporate governance functions and that focuses far more of its energy on corporate matters than on implementing the mission direction of the church. Many of the distractions that have directly hindered the mission work of the denomination—the lack of transparency regarding the termination of employees involved with 1001 Worshiping Communities, the long absence of a permanent executive director, the opaque use of reserve funds, and disputes regarding shared services—have arisen because of the collision between the role members of PMAB as directors of the corporation and their more important function of implementing the mission directives of the General Assembly.

We have been transparent in our work regarding “A Corp.” Discussions of “A Corp.” in open session began at our meeting on May 2nd and were publicly reported. Representatives of our committee and the WFC reached out to representatives of the Governance Task Force of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board in October 2017 to discuss “A Corp.” with them. We had several subsequent discussions with PMAB representatives exclusively focused on “A Corp.” issues. The moderator and vice moderator of our committee met with and discussed “A Corp.” issues both with the chair of PMAB and with other PMAB representatives as well. In addition, we discussed “A Corp.” issues with COGA and its leadership several times in 2017, as we did with the leadership of each of the other agencies of the church—and others, both in 2017 and at the beginning of 2018. We reviewed a large number of documents, including the history of “A Corp.” (which dates to the late 18th century), its formation and governance documents and the changes in them from 1983 forward, the audited financials of “A Corp.” for multiple years, the budgets submitted by PMA, minutes of PMAB and “A Corp.” meetings and committee meetings for a number of years, to the extent they existed. We retained independent legal counsel to help us with Pennsylvania law issues and to advise us on issues such as whether a “deliverance” was needed to change the board of directors of the corporation (we have not proposed one) and whether “A Corp.” could delegate to PMA daily control of its own functions, such as personnel activities (we proposed such delegation).

From all of this, our conclusion is clear: the best way to move past a corporate mentality in the mission agency is to free the mission agency to do mission, and reconstitute the board of “A Corp.” with broad agency representation to ensure sound oversight of the existing corporate entity.

In this role, “A Corp.” holds almost all of the property and assets of the denomination not held by the Foundation. (Assets held by the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (the “Board of Pensions”) are not denominational assets, but assets for the benefit of members of the benefit plans offered by that Board). In general, the Foundation holds long-term assets. “A Corp.” holds beneficial interests in some Foundation assets, handles the denomination’s current operating funds, and owns the denomination’s operating assets (such as 100 Witherspoon Street in Louisville, Kentucky). “A Corp.” provides the secular support—such as employment, contracting, and handling of funds—needed by the Presbyterian Mission Agency (“PMA”) and the Office of the General Assembly (“OGA”), which are unincorporated ecclesiastical entities (as is the General Assembly). “A Corp.” also works with the four other PC(USA) agencies: the Foundation, the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Corporation, Inc., and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

There is a great deal of history behind “A Corp.” But we believe its appropriate role is clear. The General Assembly, directly representing all the people and councils of the church, should discern and announce theological positions, define mission, set mission priorities, and approve targets (both of income and expense) to accomplish those things. The six agencies of the General Assembly should implement these high-level decisions and support the people and councils of the church in carrying them out. “A Corp.” should help support the agencies in these efforts, particularly the two most ecclesiastical of them, PMA and OGA.

We believe the governance of “A Corp.” should reflect this role. Its governance structure—its board of directors and officers—currently does not.

- The “A Corp.” board currently has 40 voting members. Although its own governance task force has recommended reducing that number over time, even if that occurs, the number would remain 20 or more, perhaps reflecting the multiplicity of PMA mission roles.
- All 40 are from the PMA board of directors—in effect, the boards are the same.
- The Executive Director of PMA is automatically the President of “A Corp.”
- There is confusion between PMA’s mission role and the operation of “A Corp.” by PMA’s board members.
- There is distrust over whether services provided by “A Corp.” are provided fairly for the benefit of other agencies, particularly OGA, because of this confusion.
- The opportunity for coordination of agency activity through “A Corp.” has not been realized.
- The “A Corp.” board is far too large to carry out its duties effectively.

Our joint recommendation with the WFC represents a better way to govern “A Corp.” It would allow “A Corp.” to carry out its corporate functions to support the agencies of the church, not to control those agencies’ own missions, or favor only one agency’s preferences. “A Corp.” would receive no additional powers from these changes in board composition and selection of president. (“A Corp.” would, for example, still have no authority to prescribe mission for PMA.) Importantly, however, these changes would eliminate the confusion between “A Corp.” and PMA. They would allow PMA to focus on mission. They would allow “A Corp.” to manage itself efficiently. They would reduce mistrust over the fair provision of “A Corp.” services to agencies, particularly as between OGA and PMA. They would provide a better platform for inter-agency cooperation.

Finally, we have sought to ensure that the smaller board of “A Corp.” will still be broadly representative of the diversity of our denomination. We recommend the following three steps to achieve this goal: (1) nominating members by existing, already diverse agencies assuring not only expertise, but diversity; (2) provide seats nominated by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns; and (3) provide for three, at-large seats selected with input from the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

These changes would also not be unduly disruptive. They would not require any change in the ownership of any assets or liabilities. They would not require—although they could lead to—any personnel changes other than a new determination of who should be the President of “A Corp.” They would not preclude other changes that this committee or the Way Forward Commission might want to recommend or pursue in other areas.

Frequently Asked Questions

1. If you had to write a “problem statement” for “A Corp.,” what would it be?
We did not approach “A Corp.” with the preconceived notion that it was a problem or embodied a problem. In listening to different perspectives across the denomination (and particularly from its six principal agencies), however, it became clear that a central question is “how can the agencies (and the General Assembly) work together better to accomplish the ends of the church”? Viewing “A Corp.” as an entity with a designated role in disbursing money, managing personnel, and providing services in implementing the mission not just of PMA, but of OGA and the denomination as a whole—sort of a “utility” for some of that work—the logical next question was to ask “how can ‘A Corp.’ reflect and carry out the desire that we work better together”? The current recommendation is one answer to that question.

2. Why not create an entity separate from PMA?

“A Corp.” is separate from PMA. Neither PMA nor OGA has a corporate form: PMA is an ecclesiastical mission entity and OGA is an ecclesiastical governance support entity. To the extent PMA or OGA needs to do something secular (such as enter into a contract), “A Corp.” does that for them.

3. Would this proposal change the ownership of any funds or property?

No. The funds and property owned by “A Corp.” (or any other agency or entity) would still be owned by them. This proposal would not change that.

4. Would this proposal require the expenditure of additional money for staff for “A Corp.”?

No. Whether the board of directors of “A Corp.” believes the corporation needs more or less staff would remain a question for that board, as it is today.

5. Would this proposal mean that the Executive Director of PMA would no longer be the president of “A Corp.”?

Maybe, but not necessarily. The proposal envisions that the Executive Director of “A Corp.” would no longer automatically be the president of “A Corp.” He or she could be elected to that position by the board of directors of “A Corp.,” but would not be required to seek that role. Nor would the board of directors of “A Corp.” be required to elect the Executive Director of PMA the president of “A Corp.,” even if that person wanted to be considered for the job.

6. Wouldn’t this proposal lead to fights between “A Corp.” and the Foundation?

No. Disputes arise from time to time with respect to gifts made by donors to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in which there can be disagreement about where the donor wanted the gift to go, or for what purpose. These problems (for which there are now good processes for resolution) do not occur because of how the board of any agency (or “A Corp.”) is structured. Because this proposal would not change any of the current ownership of funds and property as between “A Corp.” and the Foundation, there is no reason to believe it would lead to new disputes of this kind.

7. To whom would the Executive Director of PMA report—the A Corp. board or the PMA board?

The proposed changes would not change the reporting structure inside any other agency. The Executive Director of PMA would continue to report to the PMA board.

8. Would the current PMA board remain a board, or become a committee (similar to COGA)?

The proposed changes would not change the PMA board, or its current responsibilities. We expect that the PMA board would continue to propose budgets for the work of PMA, for example. It is important to understand that the “A Corp.” board today is not the PMA board. It is—and should act as, whether it always does—a different board than the PMA board. At the moment the two boards just happen to have, by rule embodied in the bylaws of “A Corp.,” exactly the same members. This proposal would change the membership of the “A Corp.” board and eliminate the automatic appointment of the Executive Director of PMA as the president of “A Corp.” While we believe this can have great benefits, and does require care in the details, it is not fundamentally a complex idea.

9. Won’t the new Executive Director of PMA feel like he or she has “lost power” by not automatically being the president of “A Corp.”

We seriously doubt it. Persons involved in the current Executive Director search have told us that candidates are more concerned about being able to focus more intensely on mission, rather than having to split their focus across a mission agency and the details of a corporation managing funds and support services.

10. Why not just make the informal “Chairs and Chiefs” meetings of the agencies into the board of “A Corp.”?

We think that it is not good governance (and inconsistent with our polity) to make employees of the agencies (the “chiefs”) automatically board members of “A Corp.” We also think that, while it may well make sense for the heads of the other agency governing boards (the “chiefs”) to serve on the “A Corp.” board, that decision should be left to the governing boards of those agencies. They may prefer to focus the efforts of their own chairs differently. In addition, we think it is a good idea to provide for a few “at large” members on any board.

11. Doesn’t this recommendation add another layer of complexity to an already complex system?

We think not. It would reduce the size of the “A Corp.” board. It would decrease the barriers to coordination among all the agencies. It would also not (for example) add any new agency to the denomination.

12. Who would fund “A Corp.” under the new proposed governance structure?

The source of funding of “A Corp.” would be the same under the proposed structure as it is today.

13. Why is “A Corp.” more important than the other national entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?

It is not more important—it is just important. We are focusing it on it in this proposal, but others are focusing equally hard on the other agencies and entities of the denomination.
14. How does this proposal fit with the other proposals that will be made by the Way Forward Commission and the All Agency Review Committee?

To the extent we know right now what those proposals are likely to be, we do not see any conflict between this proposal and any of them. The All Agency Review Committee believes that this is a time for the church to remember the directive in Section F-1.0404 of the Book of Order, Form of Government, that, “[a]s it participates in God’s mission”, the church should seek “a new openness to see both the possibilities and the perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activities in the world.” The committee also believes that, as its 2010 predecessor noted, “collaboration among agencies is a priority ... ” Similarly, the Way Forward Commission is committed to “identify[ing] a vision for the structure and function of the church’s agencies, as it was directed to do by the General Assembly, and not to “be bound by the current configuration of those ministries, except where mandated by the church’s Constitution” in “provid[ing] clearly detailed, measurable recommendations for improvements ... for implementation by the agencies.”

Commission Affirmation of Approach—March 2017

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.)
GENERAL ASSEMBLY WAY FORWARD COMMISSION
AFFIRMATION OF APPROACH
MARCH 2017

Greetings in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We are twelve servants of the church established by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) of the PC(USA) to discern the way forward for the PC(USA) in the 21st century, in collaboration with the All-Agency Review Committee and the 2020 Vision Team.

The Way Forward Commission strives to model the change it seeks, in collaboration and communication with both elected representatives and staff throughout the denomination. The commission intends to act swiftly, creatively, and boldly in the desire to take advantage of this unique God-given opportunity to help the church once again return its full focus to the work of the church in the world. The time is now.

We are not starting from scratch in this task. Most recently, resources, such as the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) survey, the Moderators’ and NEXT Church Conversations, the periodic agency reviews, and the agency strategic plans, have all pointed to societal realities that confront the church.

We also reflect the belief that this work of identity and structure, although important, must not distract or divert us from our call for Christian witness and service.

The commission unanimously adopts this affirmation in the hope of engaging the church in conversation about a common set of underlying assumptions and values. It is intended to provide insight into the approach and values of the commission as we engage with the church in our continuing discernment to study and identify a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA).

CALL TO ACTION AND INVITATION TO COLLABORATION

We strongly affirm the good work happening in our church, and the dedication and hard work of all those in ministry at the national level. We firmly believe that the values reflected in this affirmation might well apply to all national agencies and staff and recommend consideration for their adoption and application. We recognize that we stand at a Kairos moment both in our church and in the world and are called to be both bold and creative in this next season of Christian witness and service.

This is a time for radical improvement, collaborative creativity, and dramatic innovation. We are all invited to ask ourselves and one another:

- What are our strengths as a denomination?
- What does the present moment call us to do and to be?
- How can we better help congregations and local ministries thrive and grow?
- What are we not doing or able to do differently?

We have engaged the agencies and groups within the church and encouraged them to collaborate with us about how to best utilize the time-limited opportunity that the General Assembly’s empowerment of the Way Forward Commission uniquely provides.

For consideration:

- What can the commission help you accomplish that you cannot implement on your own?
- How can the spirit of urgency reflected in the General Assembly’s action creating the commission be harnessed to assist you to overcome inertia that hampers helpful change?
- As the commission discerns its recommendations for structural change in the national denomination, what might be some approaches that help to ensure our acting as one body in Christ even as we start off from the perspectives and bias inherent to our individual roles?

OUR CURRENT CONTEXT

- Now more than ever, the church must continue to play an important prophetic role for justice and service to the marginalized.
- The growing diversity of our denomination presents a vital new landscape for ministry and witness.
- At least for the present, overall PC(USA) membership—like all mainline denominations—is declining.
● Funding sources increasingly prefer designated giving to particular ministries.
● Unrestricted funding for the national church will continue to decrease, with resulting complications for administrative costs.
● National staff will continue to decrease under status quo.
● Planning for financial sustainability for ministries will need to be a higher priority.

VALUES THAT GUIDE OUR WORK

● Our Reformed theology and heritage offers us gifts—among other things, we are connectional, ever-reforming, and committed to engagement with the world.
● What we do and how we do it must reflect on the realities of our context, culture, and societal needs.
● We are committed to a denominational structure that nurtures and empowers all voices to Christian witness and action.
● We recognize that our fundamental core is rooted in our identity as a church; it is our ecclesial identity that informs what we do, how we do it, and how we speak of our work.
● We undertake our work with a posture of humility and invite the same of all working with our national agencies. Understanding our roles, listening with an open mind, and maintaining trust are central to our call.
● We support integrated inclusiveness and support for nontraditional voices—the growing center of our church.
● We believe in the value of hospitality as a means of extending welcome to all.
● We welcome an openness to change and a willingness to try new things.
● We invite all to live into our connectional church polity, avoiding compartmentalization and modeling (in our actions and in our recommendations) the collaborative working approach we want to see within and among our national agencies. We are one body in Christ, and our loyalty is to Christ and the PC(USA) rather than to a particular agency.
● We commit to frequent and real-time communication delivered in multiple languages.
● We promise to be available and to respond promptly (within a day or two) to questions and concerns. We may not always agree or have the resources to satisfactorily address individual concerns, but we will listen and answer.
● We recognize local ministry level is most qualified and informed about ministry, and must be empowered and included from the outset in all decision-making while affirming the significant role of witness in the national and regional structures of the church.
● Ministry and mission must drive decision-making. The role of support services is to help get it done, not to serve as a stumbling block.
● We seek evaluations based on how much we help, not on how much we do.
● We approach all suggestions with the belief that there is always a kernel of truth that can lead to improvement.
● We are committed to a structure that provides flexibility and non-rigidity.
● We seek to outsource functions where the church does not uniquely have expertise.

God calls the PC(USA) to a faithful and exciting future. In the bold, confident hope of God’s grace, we journey together toward that future. We solicit your prayers for this movement of the Spirit.

APPENDIX 7
Commission Mid-Term Report—July 2017
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
General Assembly Way Forward Commission
Mid-Term Report
June 27, 2017

I thank my God every time I remember you; Constantly praying with joy in every one of my prayers for all of you, Because of your sharing in the gospel from the first day until now.
Philippians 1:3–5

These words of the Epistle to the church at Philippi might well have been spoken by each of us, the members of the Way Forward Commission. Individually and corporately we hold deep and abiding affection for the faithfulness of all the members and congregations of the PC(USA).

As we have taken up our responsibilities, we have had before us the urgent calling of our church under the Lordship of Christ to proclaim the Good News in a weary world. With great joy, hope, and confidence in God’s steadfast grace, we have begun to dream of the 21st century church we see emerging.

We have not understood our charge to be one of finding ways to manage decline, or to tinker with existing structures in the hope of assuring institutional survival. Rather, encouraged by our calling through the voice of the General Assembly, the counsel of the Stated Clerk, and words of admonition and encouragement from hundreds of Presbyterians, we have set a bolder course.
We believe we are a changing church in a changing world and that our ways of work and witness must reflect the dynamism of our contemporary lives. Midway into our task we are eager to share our thoughts and progress with Presbyterians throughout the church. We covet your thoughtful reflection, feedback, and prayer for our continued effort.

For we believe “… the One who began a good work among you will bring it to completion … in the defense and confirmation of the gospel.” (Phil. 1:6–7)

Coordination with Agencies and Committees

We continue to gather, review, and incorporate the abundant information available from agencies and ministries throughout the church. Recognizing that we have been given a unique opportunity to reform our church for more effective service, and reflecting our desire to act as one body in Christ in common mission, the Way Forward Commission has taken the following steps:

- Affirmation of Approach. How we relate to each other within our church and the attitudes of our corporate “culture” is critical in setting the tone, approach, and common underlying values of the national church as we go about our work. The commission has issued its discernment in an “Affirmation of Approach” that can be found at http://www.pcusa.org/resource/way-forward-commission-affirmation-approach/.

- Agency Initiatives. We have established ongoing conversations with all six national agencies to mutually identify and implement recommended improvements. A summary of these initiatives is being compiled and will be released as soon as it is available.

- Coordination with All-Agency Review and 2020 Vision. We continue our work in conjunction and conversation with the two committees established by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to examine the identity, function, and structure of our denomination for our current reality.

Major Themes Emerging

“Our primary mission as church is to transform the world for the good in the name of Jesus Christ.”

Jan Edmiston, Co-Moderator of the 222nd General Assembly (2016)

In our work of discernment, these seven areas are the first identified in need of attention and revisioning as we think about an adaptive and effective structural change for the agencies of the General Assembly.

1. Congregational Focus. With the strong conviction that the local church is the locus of ministry for the PC(USA) but “is not of itself a sufficient form of church” (Book of Order, G-1.0101) (yet congregational support is an essential priority of the national church), we believe all six agencies of the denomination are presently considering innovative ways to collaborate both with each other and with mid councils to provide local churches with adequate, contextual support that is nimble and responsive. Although this can take many forms, what is central and should be central to our denomination is to respond to the question: How can we best partner with churches in order for them to fully live into their missional call in their communities?

2. Mission Priority. At the forefront of our discernment is an appreciation for the faithfulness and hard work of our national staff in our common service to Jesus Christ and the PC(USA), making a profound difference in the church and the world. In strengthening the missional aspect of that call, innovative models of mission delivery, not corporate or administrative responsibilities, should be the central, critical role of the national agencies. We believe that the Presbyterian Mission Agency, especially, has been saddled for far too long with corporate responsibilities that create barriers for gifted staff and hinder their full focus on mission and coordination with congregations, mid councils, and global ecumenical partners. Recognizing the importance of these requirements as well as the stewardship obligations inherent in the funding and work of the national church, we are striving for the most transformative methods of mission engagement.

3. Diversity and Leadership. While denominational demographics continue to reflect the traditional majorities of our past, the full diversity represented in our culture is central to who we are as a church. With regard to identity, mission, and growth, we must incorporate that diversity into our function and structure. We need to prepare leaders for the church we will be, and consider innovative ways of providing leadership development events, programs, and training. This includes nurturing leaders—ordained ministers, ruling elders, and commissioned ruling elders—of emerging minorities. It also includes a willingness to encourage and support alternative pastoral leadership patterns best suited to the church we are becoming.

4. Mid Council Relationships. Presbyteries have been described as the linchpins of our denomination. They partner directly with congregations particularly in times of transition, redevelopment, or crisis. And yet we are witnessing a sea change in the structure, staffing, funding, and responsibilities of these councils. The role of synods is also in transition. There is a lack of resources affecting paid staff at the presbytery level and a reconfigured mid council ministry department within the Office of General Assembly. The national church must find additional tangible ways to partner with presbyteries and synods in support of congregations.

5. Functioning as “Church.” The church is called to speak Gospel truth to the world today. Nonetheless, we perceive a lack of clarity in both who represents the church in public witness on behalf of the denomination and in who serves as a central voice within the denomination. The present ambiguity is not an issue about an individual but rather an issue of structure, roles, and responsibilities. We are reviewing the Stated Clerk’s responsibilities and clarification of how this office, the highest elected office required by our Book of Order, speaks on behalf of the denomination, and also examining the roles of the voices of the General Assembly Moderator(s) and various agency executives. Additionally, the lack of accountability of all parts of the church to our ecclesiastical center and the need to affirm the primacy of the church as “church” (above functions, operations, executive, support, etc.) is leading us to further examine the potential role of the Stated Clerk. We seek to strengthen this function while still maintaining our reformed polity of “shared power ... exercised jointly” (Book of Order, F-3.0208).

6. Reconceptualized Administrative Support. We believe, as noted in the second theme, that there can and should be better ways to deliver corporate and administrative services that positions the functions as supportive to the missional components of the national agencies. In moving forward in our discernment, there are questions that need to be examined. For instance: What administrative services can and should be centralized across all agencies; what is the most efficient and effective way of delivering corporate and administrative services; should some functions be outsourced; and how can we make these services accountable to the end user?

7. Effective Communication. We have observed a lack of cohesion in branding, voice, and consistency among the myriad of communication channels throughout the denomination. The most obvious example is the denominational websites and their many iterations. There exists a desire for clear, user-friendly, and varied platforms, including everything from print to social media, to communicate the work the PC(USA) is doing locally and around the world.

Feedback Invitation

And, now we would like to hear from you to determine if we are on the right track.

- What rings true for you in the themes we’ve identified?
- What is missing in these themes?
- We’ve presented the themes in one order, attempting some prioritization; what changes would you make? What theme or themes should take priority?
- If you could give the commission one piece of advice as we continue our work, what would it be?

You can respond to these questions and provide other comments at the following link: [link no longer active]. The link will be open from July 1–15, 2017.

We hope to hear from you!

In closing, we share a few verses from a poem that provided inspiration to the commission at our May meeting, and we hope it also resonates with you.

> This is no time to reminisce of the past.
> It is a time to reflect on the present.
> This is no time to think of what could have been.
> It’s a time to plan what is to be.
> This is no time to be haunted by doubt.
> It is a time to be uplifted by hope.

—Martin L. Yonts, “A Meditation on Life”

With great hope, we will continue to move forward. We ask for your continued prayers that we can all see the new thing God is doing.

APPENDIX 8

Current Structure of PC(USA)

Current Structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as Outlined in the Organization for Mission

Chart provided by Presbyterian Mission Agency
The 2nd page of this appendix is the All Agency Report to the 222nd General Assembly (2016)
Office of the General Assembly

Empowered by the Holy Spirit, the Office of the General Assembly encourages the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be a people of hope — seeking together the mind of Christ, working for justice and mercy, and participating in God’s continual reformation of the Church. Under the leadership of the Stated Clerk, the Office of the General Assembly carries out its mission through three ministry areas: Churchwide Ministries, Ecclesial and Ecumenical Ministries, and Mid Council Ministries.

The duties of staff include supporting and interpreting the PCUSA Constitution; publishing the GA Minutes, the Book of Order, and the Book of Confessions; keeping annual PCUSA statistics; serving as the PCUSA archivist through the Presbyterian Historical Society; organizing and managing Assembly Assemblies; and other national meetings; overseeing mid councils and the ministries of teaching and ruling elders; preparing, administering, and grading ordination exams; communicating with the larger Church on immigration issues; and partnering with ecumenical bodies worldwide.

Presbyterian Mission Agency

The Presbyterian Mission Agency serves as the mission and ministry arm of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The agency coordinates and leads the mission program of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), working in partnership with synods, presbyteries, and sessions. It also advises and responds to the General Assembly on priorities, programs, and strategies for addressing matters of concern for PCUSA ministries.

Governed by a Board of Directors whose members are elected by the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency has four ministry areas:

- Compassion, Peace and Justice
- Racial Ethnic & Women's Ministries
- Theology, Formation and Evangelism
- World Mission

Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

With a publishing heritage spanning more than 175 years, the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation is the denominational publisher of the PCUSA. It contributes to the spiritual and intellectual vitality of the Church by publishing approximately 60 to 75 new titles each year and selling more than 2,000 titles throughout the world. Its Geneva Press imprint is for a specifically Presbyterian audience.

The agency also issues materials under the Westminster John Knox Press imprint. These works, which cover the spectrum of modern religious thought, are by scholars and popular authors of various religious affiliations. In addition, the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation operates three online marketplaces: TheThoughtfulChristian.com, PCUSAStore.com, and FeastingWithTheHost.net.

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation is self-sustaining: it receives no funding from the denomination.

The Board of Pensions

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) upholds the commitment made by congregations of the Church — to care for those who nurture the understanding of what it means to follow Christ. To that end, the Board administers the church benefits plan, including pension, medical, and death and disability programs, and provides financial assistance to PCUSA church workers in need through the Assistance Program. It also manages the funds needed to support these programs. A not-for-profit corporation, the agency is governed by an independent Board of Directors, elected by the General Assembly.

The Board traces its roots to the Fund for Pious Uses, established by Presbyterians at the inaugural meeting of the first synod in the American colonies in 1717. The agency will celebrate 300 years of caring for ministers, other church workers, and their families in 2017. As the Board enters the next 300 years, it does so with optimism to ensure, serve better, and serve the Church.

The Presbyterian Foundation

Established by the General Assembly in 1799, the Presbyterian Foundation gathers, stewards, and distributes funds for mission. It strengthens congregations and related mission and ministry efforts by developing gifts and managing funds on their behalf. The agency helps churches develop online giving systems, conducts stewardship and generosity training seminars, administers planned giving programs, and provides a full range of trust services for Presbyterian churches and other institutions.

The agency is governed by an independent Board of Trustees elected by the General Assembly. It manages more than 7,000 permanent endowment funds, which provide ongoing funding to thousands of congregations and related mission and ministry organizations.

As it provides charitable expertise and services to the Church, the Foundation strives to do so in a trustworthy, clear, and accessible manner, reflecting the rich faith tradition of the PCUSA.

Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program

A nonprofit corporation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program provides low-cost loans to congregations and church entities for the construction or purchase of buildings, renovations, and refinancing of existing debt. Loans are available for a variety of capital projects — to reshape a space to meet the needs of a changing congregation, install energy-efficient products and renewable energy sources, or expand mission and outreach efforts by reducing the amount of funds necessary for debt service.

The Program raises the funds for lending through its annual giving campaign. The agency is governed by a Board of Directors independent of the church corporation, although the work and mission of the Program are affiliated with the PCUSA.
Covenant of Understanding Regarding the Role and Relationship of Racial Ethnic Caucuses within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Racial Ethnic Caucuses, in varying forms, have been a significant part of the history and ethos of the Presbyterian Church at least since the 1800s. The first known recorded caucus was organized in New York City by black clergy in 1856. The caucus was organized to advocate for racial justice in the church and community, and to maximize black participation in the life and mission of the Presbyterian Church, along with other goals. (Adapted from a paper by Dr. Gayraud S. Wilmore, entitled The Black Presbyterian Caucuses-Passing on the Heritage—1998)

As our church and society became more racially diverse, the development of racial ethnic caucuses increased in the church during the early 1970s to include Asian, Hispanic, Native American, and more recently Middle-Eastern Presbyterians. These caucuses had an advocacy and programmatic role, strengthened by a working relationship with the General Assembly, through its Racial Ethnic Office, as well as other judicatories (now mid councils). In many instances, the Synod was a primary link for the caucuses in relating to and working with their constituencies at the congregational level.

With the continuing changes taking place within the life of the denomination, the racial ethnic caucuses are experiencing a serious sense of having lost both their relationship and a clear role within the church. While the caucuses are related to the General Assembly through the Presbyterian Mission Agency and its Office on Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries, there is no clear understanding of what that relationship means and the expectations of that relationship.

Since the reunion in 1983, which created the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), there has been a lack of clarity about both the advocacy and missional role of the caucuses and their relationship to the denomination at all levels.

PURPOSE OF “THE COVENANT OF UNDERSTANDING”

This “Covenant of Understanding” is an attempt to reestablish a proactive, trusting relationship built upon collaboration, shared beliefs, complementary visions, and mutual respect. It is also the intent of the Covenant to bring clarity to the appropriate role and relationship of racial ethnic caucuses within the PC(USA), particularly with the General Assembly, the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and Mid Councils at this time in our changing life together.

It is the desire of the racial ethnic caucuses to partner with the PC(USA) in its commitment to “guarantee full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership. No member shall be denied participation or representation for any reason other than those stated in this Constitution.” (F-1.0403).

BOOK OF ORDER REFERENCES RE: RACIAL ETHNIC CAUCUSES SINCE REUNION

1. ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT (Book of Order 2013-2015) – Article 8.2 – 8.3 Racial Ethnic Representation, Participation and Organizations – includes the following statement: “Racial ethnic members in the United States (Presbyterians of African, Hispanic, Asian descent and Native Americans) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision-making of the church, and SHALL BE ABLE TO FORM CAUCUSES.” 8.2 “Consistent with the principles of diversity and inclusiveness as set forth in 8.2, The General Assembly Council (now the Presbyterian Mission Agency) shall consult with and receive input from the racial ethnic caucuses of the church, and shall make provision for the expenses necessary to such consultations. The purpose of such consultation shall include:

• determining the priorities for assisting racial ethnic churches and ministries,
• developing a denominational strategy for racial ethnic church development,
• finding ways to assure the funding and operational needs of schools and other institutions which historically have served Black Americans and other racial ethnic groups.” 8.3

CLARIFYING THE ROLE OF RACIAL ETHNIC CAUCUSES

A Definition:

The word caucus comes from a Native American verb in the language of the Algonquin nations, which means, “to gather”. Caucuses are entities where people of similar characteristics or concerns come together to affirm their identity and to pursue collective goals.

Racial Ethnic Caucuses in the PC(USA) are support communities seeking to overcome inequalities, injustices, paternalism, and racism while vying for full partnership in the mission of the church. They assume the risk of challenging the church when it fails to heed to the “voices of peoples once silenced” including the poor and oppressed. Racial Ethnic Caucuses are self-determining fellowships, ordinarily created not by official ecclesiastical action but by their own constituencies to whom they are primarily accountable. (Adapted from the article, The Purpose of Caucuses by Rev. Helen Locklear, 2003).

Historic Role of National Caucuses:

The following are historic roles undertaken by racial ethnic caucuses within the Presbyterian Church. Many of these roles continue today though altered based on denominational changes that have occurred since reunion.

1. Monitoring—Acting as a conscience of the church, working for racial ethnic / and multi-cultural congregational transformation, and racial justice.

2. Advocacy—Acting as an advocate for program development and funding on behalf of related congregations and communities across the denomination which includes: mid councils and other decision making bodies at all levels of the church; matters related to new congregational development and congregational transformation; racial ethnic women, youth, young adults, and matters of justice for all ages; as well as concerns of emerging countries.

3. Programmatic—Working with congregations, mid councils and appropriate General Assembly agencies to address congregational concerns, historical research, assisting appropriate entities at all levels of the church regarding recruitment and enlistment of racial ethnic persons interested in ministry vocations, and equipping persons for leadership roles in program areas, councils, and staff positions. (Adapted from article by Rev. Helen Locklear)

4. Educational—Serving as a primary resource for enabling all members of the PC(USA), and racial ethnic persons in particular, to better understand and relate to the unique cultural nuances of racial ethnic Presbyterians and their communities in order to be more effective partners in the mission of Jesus Christ.

The caucuses relate to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the General Assembly through the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), which has direct access to the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. ACREC’s primary responsibility is to advocate for policies that impact racial ethnic individuals. ACREC’s mandate does not include programmatic ministries. However, ACREC may advocate for policies related to racial ethnic congregations and communities, which are of major interest and focus for racial ethnic caucuses.

It is understood that the General Assembly’s “Shape and Form” process, approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993), officially assigned to ACREC the advocacy role of the caucuses, as well as the role of monitoring, at the General Assembly level. However, there continues to be an appropriate advocacy role for the caucuses at the mid council level relative to programmatic and community issues which are of concern to constituent congregations related to the caucuses. Some of these issues may not require the advocacy of ACREC because of their local focus.

The five current racial ethnic caucuses (African American, Asian, Hispanic, Middle Eastern, and Native American) select one member from each caucus to be elected to ACREC through the General Assembly Nominating process to serve a four-year term with eligibility for one additional term.

The racial ethnic caucuses are committed and prepared to assist the General Assembly in its constitutional responsibility to “Nurture the covenant community of disciples (G-3.0501c)” which includes the racially diverse congregations who relate to the caucuses.

PROPOSED RELATIONSHIP OF RACIAL ETHNIC CAUCUSES WITHIN THE PC (USA)

1. Racial Ethnic Caucuses will relate to the General Assembly through the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA), and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) in matters related to policies that impact racial ethnic individuals.

2. The Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly may consult and receive input from the Racial Ethnic Caucuses in matters such as:
   - determining the priorities for assisting racial ethnic churches and ministries,
   - developing a denominational strategy for racial ethnic church development / transformation,
   - determining the future financial support and operational needs of schools and other institutions which historically have served Black Americans and other racial ethnic groups. (Adapted from Articles of Agreement, Article 8.2-8.3) By action of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board on September 19, 2014, “may” is to be interpreted as “will” by the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

   The Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA), in consultation with the Office of Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries, is requested to develop a process that will enable recommendations from caucuses regarding programmatic ministries to be considered by the PMA Board, as appropriate.

3. Mid councils of the church will be encouraged to utilize the consultative resources of racial ethnic caucuses in developing and implementing strategies for mission with racial ethnic congregations and communities, and the recruitment of persons for ministry vocations, with a particular focus on racial ethnic clergywomen.

4. Racial Ethnic Caucuses will continue to be related to the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) in matters of advocacy.

5. Racial Ethnic Caucuses will continue to be related to Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries through the respective Congregational Support Offices in matters consistent with the role of these offices.

   In order to help facilitate the assigned task of the Congregational Support Office, it is recommended that allCongregational Support Offices have a functioning Advisory Committee. Each Advisory Committee should consist of at least two members appointed by the respective caucus.

6. In order to develop an ongoing relationship with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the leaders of the five caucuses (chair/moderator/president) will convene for at least two (2) scheduled conference calls with the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director each year. The scheduling of these calls should be held at such times to provide input from the racial ethnic caucus leadership regarding appropriate items going to the General Assembly, or as needed by the caucus leadership or the Stated Clerk / Executive Director.

7. Racial Ethnic Caucus leadership may hold telephone conference calls at least twice each year to maintain good lines of communication between the caucuses. It is encouraged that these calls include the caucus representatives from ACREC to broaden the sharing of information and input. The calls could also serve a preparatory purpose for planning and developing agendas for the conference calls with the Stated Clerk and Executive Director. Staff may be invited to participate on these calls, as appropriate, with the caucus representatives given the prerogative of meeting without staff.

SUGGESTED FUNDING FOR CONSULTATIONS

1. Funding for consultations requested by an agency of the General Assembly will be provided by the agency.
2. Funding for conference calls with the Stated Clerk and Executive Director will be provided by these offices.
3. Funding for conference calls between the Racial Ethnic Caucuses will be funded by the caucuses.

CONCLUSION

The Apostle Paul, writing to the church in Ephesus said, in the words of The Message, “(God) handed out gifts . . . to train Christ’s followers in skilled servant work, working within Christ’s body, the church, until we’re all moving rhythmically and easily with each other, efficient and graceful in response to God’s Son . . .” (Ephesians 4:11-12)

We believe this proposed Covenant of Understanding will enable racial ethnic caucuses in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

- to be full contributing partners with the General Assembly and Mid Councils,
- to enrich the life, ministry, and mission of our racial ethnic / multi-cultural congregations and communities, and
- to share our rich gifts, cultures, and commitment to Jesus Christ with the whole church, as together we seek to be “fully mature adults, fully developed within and without, fully alive like Christ”, while faithfully serving God in this time and place. (Ephesians 4:13)

At every regular meeting, the Board of Directors shall transact such business as may properly be brought before the meeting. Notice of regular meetings need not be given unless otherwise required by law or these bylaws.

Section 2.09. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the Board of Directors shall be held whenever called by the Chair of the Board or by three or more Directors. Notice of each such meeting shall be given in person, by telephone, by email, or by mail to each Director at least 24 hours (in the case of notice in person, by telephone, or by email), or 48 hours (in the case of notice by telephone or email with respect to any Ohio corporation), or five days (in the case of notice by mail) before the time at which the meeting is to be held. In the absence of a quorum, a majority of the Directors present and voting may adjourn the meeting from time to time until a quorum is present. The Directors shall act only as a Board and the individual Directors shall have no power as such, except that any action which may be taken at a meeting of the Directors may be taken without a meeting by unanimous written consent, if a consent or consents in writing setting forth the action so taken shall be signed by all of the Directors in office and shall be filed with the Secretary in person, by mail, or by electronic communication.
Section 2.11. Executive and Other Committees.

(a) The Board of Directors shall, by resolution adopted by a majority of the Directors then in office, establish an Executive Committee of not less than five members, one of whom shall be the Chair of the Board. C.S. §§ 5103 and 5721, with each such other committee or other body to consist of two or more Directors. The Chair of the Board may be, ex officio, a voting member of each such other committee or other body except a nominating committee, and shall designate or appoint the chair of each particular committee or other body. The Board of Directors may designate one or more Directors as alternate members of any such committee or other body, who may replace any absent or disqualified member at any meeting of the committee or other body. In the absence or disqualification of a member and the alternate or alternates, if any, designated for such member of any such committee or other body, the member or members thereof present at any meeting and not disqualified from voting, whether or not the member or members constitute a quorum, may unanimously appoint another Director to act at the meeting in the place of any such absent or disqualified member. Each committee or other body of the Board of Directors shall serve at the pleasure of the Board of Directors. Any member of such committee or other body may be removed, either for or without cause, by the Board of Directors.

(b) The Executive Committee of the Board of Directors shall have and exercise all of the powers and authority of the Board of Directors in the management of the business and affairs of the Corporation, except that the Executive Committee shall not have any power or authority as to the following:

1. The adoption, amendment or repeal of these bylaws, or the adoption of any amendment of articles or plan of merger, division or consolidation or the approving of the sale, lease or exchange of all or substantially all of the assets of the Corporation or of the dissolution of the Corporation.

2. The amendment or repeal of any resolutions of the Board.

3. The filling of vacancies in the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

(c) No committee of the Board of Directors, other than the Executive Committee, shall, pursuant to resolution of the Board of Directors or otherwise, exercise any of the powers or authority vested by these bylaws, or other applicable law in the Board of Directors as such, but any other committee of the Board of Directors may make recommendations to the Board of Directors or Executive Committee concerning the exercise of such powers and authority.

(d) A majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee, or Directors designated to replace them as provided in this section, shall be present at each meeting to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business and the acts of a majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee or their replacements shall be the acts of the committee.

(e) Each committee shall keep regular minutes of its proceedings and report such proceedings periodically to the Board of Directors. Sections 2.07, 2.08 and 2.09 shall be applicable to committees of the Board of Directors.

(f) One half (50%) of the Directors of the Corporation in office assigned to a committee shall be present at each committee meeting in order to constitute a quorum for the doing of business.

Section 2.12. Compensation and Expenses. Except as permitted by Section 4.15 of these bylaws, no compensation of any kind shall be paid directly or indirectly by the Corporation to, and no loan or other extension of credit shall be made for the benefit of, any Director, as such, or as an officer or employee of the Corporation. Directors may be reimbursed for expenses in a manner consistent with any applicable policy approved by the General Assembly for the Corporation or any other agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and thereafter adopted for such purpose by the Board of Directors.

Section 2.13. Authority to Delegate Powers to Other Body. The Board of Directors shall have the authority to appoint a specific person or persons, agency, or entity other than of the Board of Directors to act on its behalf as an “other body”, as such term is defined and used in 15 Pa. C.S. §§ 5103 and 5721, and to assume such governing body powers and responsibilities, and such other duties and responsibilities, as may be delegated to such other body by resolution of the Board of Directors, provided that such delegation shall be consistent with the directions from time to time of the General Assembly. Such delegation of governing body powers and responsibilities shall not be exclusive and the Board of Directors shall continue to have the authority and power to act in lieu of such other body or to remove or limit the powers and authority granted to such other body, as necessary to fulfill the Board of Director’s fiduciary duties to the Corporation. Unless otherwise provided in the delegation by the Board of Directors, when acting on behalf of the Corporation, such other body shall be governed by and subject to the applicable provisions of these bylaws, including without limitation provisions relating to fiduciary duties and conflicts of interest. Such other body shall report to the Board of Directors upon request and the report shall be recorded in the minutes of meetings of the Board of Directors.
ARTICLE III
Notice - Waivers - Meetings

Section 3.01. Notice, What Constitutes. Whenever written notice is required to be given to any person under the provisions of the articles, these bylaws, or applicable law, it may be given to such person, either personally or by sending a copy thereof by first class mail, postage prepaid, or by email, to his or her address appearing on the books of the Corporation, or in the case of Directors of the Corporation, supplied by the Director to the Corporation for the purpose of notice. If the notice is sent by mail or by email, it shall be deemed to have been given to the person entitled thereto when deposited in the United States mail or upon transmission to such person. A notice of meeting shall specify the place, day and hour of the meeting and any other information required by law or these bylaws. When a meeting is adjourned, it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement, recorded in the minutes, at the meeting at which such adjournment is taken.

Section 3.02. Waivers of Notice. Whenever any written notice is required to be given under the provisions of the articles, these bylaws, or applicable law, a waiver thereof in writing, signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, whether before or after the time stated therein, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice. Except as otherwise required by this section and by Section 6.06 of these bylaws, neither the business to be transacted at nor the purpose of a meeting need be specified in the waiver of notice of such meeting. Attendance of a person at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a person attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting, at the beginning of the meeting, to the transaction of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened.

Section 3.03. Modification of Proposal Contained in Notice. Whenever the language of a proposed resolution is included in a written notice of a meeting, the meeting considering the resolution may without further notice adopt it with such clarifying or other amendments as do not enlarge its original purpose.

Section 3.04. Conference Telephone Meetings. One or more persons may participate in a meeting of the Board of Directors or of a committee of the Board by means of conference telephone or other electronic communications equipment by means of which all persons participating in the meeting can hear each other. Participation in the meeting pursuant to this section shall constitute presence in person at such meeting. Conference and electronic meetings will follow procedures approved by Board of Directors from time to time.

ARTICLE IV
Officers

Section 4.01. Number, Qualifications and Designation. The officers of the Corporation shall be a President, a Chief Financial Officer, one or more Vice Presidents, (including but not limited to Executive Vice Presidents and Senior Vice Presidents), a Secretary, a Treasurer, a Controller, and such other officers as may be elected in accordance with the provisions of Section 4.02 of this Article. Any number of the offices may be held by the same person. Officers may, but need not be Directors, and shall be natural persons of full age. The Chair of the Board elected under Section 2.05 shall also be an officer of the Corporation.

Section 4.02. Selection and Term of Office. The officers of the Corporation shall be selected and their terms of office shall be determined as follows:

(a) The President shall be elected by the Board of Directors for a term of four years subject to confirmation by the General Assembly and shall be eligible for reelection. Other officers of the Corporation shall be nominated by a nominating committee of the Board of Directors in consultation with the President and elected by the Board annually.

(b) The Board of Directors may from time to time elect such other officers as the business of the Corporation may require, including a Secretary and one or more Assistant Secretaries, each of whom has such authority, and perform such duties as are provided in these bylaws, or as the Board of Directors may from time to time determine. The Board of Directors may delegate to any officer or committee of the Corporation the power to elect subordinate or other officers and to retain or appoint employees or other agents, or committees thereof, and to prescribe the authority and duties of such subordinate or other officers, committees, employees or other agents.

Section 4.03. Resignations. Any officer or agent may resign at any time by giving written notice to the Board of Directors, or to the President or the Secretary of the Corporation. Any such resignation shall take effect at the date of the receipt of such notice, or at any later time specified therein, and, unless otherwise specified therein, the acceptance of such resignation shall not be necessary to make it effective.

Section 4.04. Removal. Any elected or appointed officer may be removed, either for or without cause, by the Board of Directors or other authority which elected or appointed such officer. The term of any offices held by an employee ends the earlier of the employee’s last day of employment or last day in the office.
Section 4.05. Vacancies. A vacancy in any elective office because of death, resignation, removal, disqualification, or any other cause, shall be filled by the Board of Directors (where appropriate, subject to confirmation by the General Assembly) or by the authority to which the power to fill such office has been delegated, pursuant to Section 4.02 of this Article, as the case may be, and if the office is one for which a term is prescribed by or pursuant to these bylaws, shall be filled for the unexpired portion of the term. The refusal of the General Assembly to confirm an election, where such confirmation is required by these bylaws, shall result in the creation of a vacancy in the office affected.

Section 4.06. General Powers. All officers of the Corporation, as between themselves and the Corporation, shall respectively have such authority and perform such duties in the management of the property and affairs of the Corporation as may be determined by resolutions or orders of the Board of Directors, or, in the absence of controlling provisions in resolutions or orders of the Board of Directors, as may be provided in these bylaws.

Section 4.07. The Chair of the Board. Generally, the Chair of the Board shall preside at all meetings of the members of the Board of Directors, and shall perform such other duties as may from time to time be requested by the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee.

Section 4.08. The President. The President shall be the chief executive officer of the Corporation and shall have general supervision over the activities and operations of the Corporation, subject, however, to the control of the Board of Directors. The President shall be accountable to the Board of Directors. In the event of an extended absence of the President and the Chief Financial Officer, the President shall assign one of the other senior officers of the Corporation to fulfill the duties of the office during the absence of the President. The President shall not, while holding such office, be a Director recommended pursuant to Section 2.01(b) or (c) above from any of the six current national agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), or the president, executive director, stated clerk, or similar principal leader of any of those agencies.

Section 4.09. Chief Financial Officer. The Chief Financial Officer shall be the chief financial officer of the Corporation responsible for corporate, financial and accounting functions. The Chief Financial Officer shall perform the duties of the President in the absence of the President or as otherwise assigned by the Board of Directors or the President. The Chief Financial Officer shall sign, execute, and acknowledge, in the name of the Corporation, all deeds, mortgages, bonds, contracts, and other instruments authorized by the Board of Directors or by these bylaws. The Chief Financial Officer shall be accountable to the President.

Section 4.10. The Vice Presidents. The Vice Presidents shall perform the duties of the Chief Financial Officer in the absence of the Chief Financial Officer and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to them by the Board of Directors, the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Board of Directors of the Corporation shall cause the Vice Presidents to be accountable to the Chief Financial Officer or to such other person as may succeed the functions of that position.

Section 4.11. The Secretary. The Secretary or an Assistant Secretary shall attend all meetings of the Board of Directors and shall cause to be recorded personally or by an Assistant Secretary, or by the person designated by the chair of the Board as secretary pro tem or secretary of the meeting, all votes of the Directors and the minutes of the meetings of the Board of Directors and of committees of the Board in a book or books to be kept for that purpose. The Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall ensure that notices are given and records and reports properly kept and filed by the Corporation as required by law. The Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall be the custodian of the seal of the Corporation and see that it is affixed to all documents to be executed on behalf of the Corporation under its seal. In general, the Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall perform all duties incident to the office of secretary, and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to the Secretary by the Board of Directors, or the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Board of Directors of the Corporation shall cause the Secretary to be accountable to the Chief Financial Officer or to such other person as may succeed the functions of that position.

Section 4.12. The Treasurer. The Treasurer shall have or provide for the custody of the funds or other property of the Corporation and shall keep a separate book account of the same to his or her credit as Treasurer. The Treasurer shall collect and receive, or provide for the collection and receipt of, moneys earned by or in any manner due to or received by the Corporation; shall deposit all funds in his or her custody as Treasurer in such banks or other places of deposit (including the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (hereinafter the “Fiduciary Corporation”) as the Board of Directors may from time to time designate; shall, whenever so required by the Board of Directors, render an account showing his or her transactions as Treasurer, and, in general shall discharge such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to the Treasurer by the Board of Directors, the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Board of Directors of the Corporation shall cause the Treasurer to be accountable to the Chief Financial Officer or to such other person as may succeed to the functions of that position.

Section 4.13. The Controller. The Controller of the corporation shall be responsible for maintaining the chart of accounts, accounting records, and accounting procedures of the Corporation; shall, whenever so required by the Board of Directors, render an accounting of the results of operations and financial condition of the Corporation (at least annually) and, in general shall discharge such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to the Controller by the Board of Directors, the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Board of Directors of the Corporation shall cause the Controller to be accountable to the Chief Financial Officer or to such other person as may succeed to the functions of that position.

Section 4.14. Officers’ Bonds. Any officer shall give a bond for the faithful discharge of the duties of the office held by such officer in such sum, if any, and with such surety or sureties as the Board of Directors shall require, the cost thereof to be paid by the Corporation.

Section 4.15. Compensation. The compensation of the officers, employees and other agents shall be determined from time to time by the Board of Directors, a committee of such Board, or any other body to which power to retain or appoint such employees or other agents has been assigned or delegated pursuant to Sections 2.3, 2.11, or 4.02 of this Article. The establishment and annual review of a consistent compensation structure for all such officers, employees, and other agents shall be the responsibility of the Board of Directors, or a committee of such Board (in either instance, in consultation with any other body or bodies to which a delegation of authority for retention or appointment of employees and agents has been made), which shall also annually review and approve the specific compensation of the five most highly-compensated such officers and employees. No full-time officer shall be prevented from receiving compensation by reason of the fact that he or she is also a Director of the Corporation. Section 4.16. Personnel Policies. All employees, including officer employees, shall be covered by personnel policies reviewed and approved by the Board of Directors, or any committee of such Board, or any other body or bodies to which a delegation of such authority has been made, which policies shall be set forth in an Employee Handbook.

ARTICLE V
Indemnification of Directors, Officers, etc.

Section 5.01. Scope of Indemnification. (a) The Corporation shall indemnify an indemnified representative against any liability incurred in connection with any proceeding in which the indemnified representative may be involved as a party or otherwise, by reason of the fact that such person is or was serving in an indemnified capacity, including without limitation any liability resulting from any actual or alleged breach or neglect of duty, error, misstatement or misleading statement, negligence, gross negligence or act giving rise to strict or products liability, except:

(1) Where such indemnification is expressly prohibited by applicable law;

(2) Where the conduct of the indemnified representative has been finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to constitute willful misconduct or recklessness as may be defined by applicable law or any other conduct sufficient in the circumstances to bar indemnification against liabilities arising from the conduct;

(3) To the extent the liability is finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to be based upon or attributable to the indemnified representative gaining any personal pecuniary profit to which such indemnified representative was not legally entitled; or

(4) To the extent such indemnification has been finally determined in a final adjudication pursuant to Section 5.06(d) to be otherwise unlawful.

(a) If an indemnified representative is entitled to indemnification in respect of a portion, but not all, of any liabilities to which such person may be subject, the Corporation shall indemnify such indemnified representative to the maximum extent for such portion of the liabilities.

(b) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the indemnified representative is not entitled to indemnification.

(c) For purposes of this Article:

(1) “Indemnified capacity” means any and all past, present and future service by an indemnified representative in one or more capacities as a Director, officer, employee or agent of the Corporation or a Constituent Corporation, or, at the request of the Corporation, as a Director, officer, employee, agent, fiduciary or trustee of another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan or other entity or enterprise;

(2) “Indemnified representative” means any and all Directors and officers of the Corporation, including any and all officers elected or committee members, employees or other agents appointed under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” also means any and all officers, committee members, employees and other agents elected or appointed under the power delegated to the General Assembly, or to any General Assembly agency...
under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” shall include any other person so designated by the Board of Directors.

(3) “Liability” means any damage, judgment, amount paid in settlement (provided, in the case of settlements, that the Corporation shall have given its consent to such settlement in advance of the payment thereof), fine, penalty, punitive damages, excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or cost or expense of any nature (including, without limitation, attorneys’ fees, costs, and disbursements); and

(4) “Proceeding” means any threatened, pending or completed action, suit, appeal or other proceeding of any nature, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative, whether formal or informal, and whether brought by or in the right of the Corporation, a class of its security holders, if any, or otherwise.

Section 5.02. Proceedings Initiated by Indemnified Representatives. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, the Corporation shall not indemnify under this Article an indemnified representative for any liability incurred in a proceeding initiated (which shall not be deemed to include counter-claims or affirmative defenses) or participated in as an intervenor or amicus curiae by the person seeking indemnification unless such initiation of or participation in the proceeding is authorized, either before or after its commencement, by the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of the Directors of the Corporation. This section does not apply to reimbursement of expenses incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending an arbitration under Section 5.06(d) or otherwise successfully prosecuting or defending the rights of an indemnified representative granted by or pursuant to this Article.

Section 5.03. Advancing Expenses. The Corporation shall pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by a Director or officer and may, by act of the Board of Directors (including the votes or consents of interested Directors), pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by any other indemnified representative in advance of the final disposition of a proceeding, described in Section 5.01 upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the indemnified representative to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise that such person is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation pursuant to this Article. The financial ability of an indemnified representative to repay an advance shall not be a prerequisite to the making of such advance.

Section 5.04. Securing of Indemnification Obligations. To further effect, satisfy or secure the indemnification obligations provided herein or otherwise, the Corporation may maintain insurance, obtain a letter of credit, act as self-insurer, create a reserve, trust, escrow, cash collateral or other fund or account, enter into indemnification agreements, pledge or grant a security interest in any assets or properties of the Corporation, or use any other mechanism or arrangement whatsoever in such amounts, at such costs, and upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors shall deem appropriate. Absent fraud, the determination of the Board of Directors with respect to such amounts, costs, terms and conditions shall be conclusive against all security holders, if any, officers, and Directors, and shall not be subject to voidability.

Section 5.05. Payment of Indemnification. An indemnified representative who is entitled to indemnification shall be entitled thereto within 30 days after a written request for such indemnification has been delivered to the Secretary.

Section 5.06. Indemnification Procedure.

(a) An indemnified representative shall use such indemnified representatives’ best efforts to notify promptly the Secretary of the commencement of any proceeding or the occurrence of any event which might give rise to a liability under this Article, but the failure so to notify the Corporation shall not relieve the Corporation of any liability which it may have to the indemnified representative under this Article or otherwise.

(b) The Corporation shall be entitled, upon notice to any such indemnified representative, to assume the defense of any proceeding with counsel reasonably satisfactory to the indemnified representative, or a majority of the indemnified representatives involved in such proceeding if there be more than one. If the Corporation notifies the indemnified representative of its election to defend the proceeding, the Corporation shall have no liability for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) of the indemnified representative incurred in connection with the defense of such proceeding subsequent to such notice, unless (i) such expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) have been authorized by the Corporation, (ii) the Corporation shall not in fact have employed counsel reasonably satisfactory to such indemnified representative or indemnified representatives to assume the defense of such proceeding, or (iii) it shall have been determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) that the indemnified representative was entitled to indemnification for such expenses under this Article or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the indemnified representative may elect to retain counsel at the indemnified representative’s own cost and expense to participate in the defense of such proceeding.

(c) The Corporation shall not be required to obtain the consent of the indemnified representative to the settlement of any proceeding which the Corporation has undertaken to defend if the Corporation assumes full and sole responsibility for such settlement and the settlement grants the indemnified representative an unqualified release in respect of all liabilities at issue in the proceeding. Whether or not the Corporation has elected to assume the defense of any proceeding, no indemnified representative shall have any right to enter into any full or partial settlement of the proceeding without the prior written consent of the Corporation (which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld), nor shall the Corporation be liable for any amount paid by an indemnified representative pursuant to any settlement to which the Corporation has not so consented.

(d) Any dispute related to the right to indemnification as provided under this Article shall be decided only by arbitration in the metropolitan area in which the principal executive offices of the Corporation are located at the time, in accordance with the commercial arbitration rules then in effect of the American Arbitration Association, before a panel of three arbitrators, one of whom shall be selected by the Corporation, the second of whom shall be selected by the indemnified representative and the third of whom shall be selected by the other two arbitrators. In the absence of the American Arbitration Association, or if for any reason arbitration under the arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association cannot be initiated, and if one of the parties fails or refuses to select an arbitrator, or the arbitrators selected by the Corporation and the indemnified representative cannot agree on the selection of the third arbitrator within 30 days after such time as the corporation and the indemnified representative have each been notified of the selection of the other’s arbitrator, the necessary arbitrator or arbitrators shall be selected by the presiding judge of the court of general jurisdiction in such metropolitan area. The party or parties challenging the right of an indemnified representative to the benefits of this Article shall have the burden of proof. The Corporation shall reimburse an indemnified representative for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending such arbitration. Any award entered by the arbitrators shall be final, binding and nonappealable and judgment may be entered thereon by any party in accordance with applicable law in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that the corporation shall be entitled to interpose as a defense in any such judicial enforcement proceeding any prior final judicial determination adverse to the indemnified representative under Section 5.01(a)(2) or(3) in a proceeding not directly involving indemnification under this Article. This arbitration provision shall be specifically enforceable.

(e) Upon a payment to any indemnified representative under this Article, the Corporation shall be subrogated to the extent of such payment to all of the rights of the indemnified representative to recover against any person for such liability, and the indemnified representative shall execute all documents and instruments required and shall take such other action as may be necessary to secure such rights, including the execution of such documents as may be necessary for the Corporation to bring suit to enforce such rights.

Section 5.07. Discharge of Duty. An indemnified representative shall be deemed to have discharged such person’s duty to the Corporation if he or she has relied in good faith on information, advice or an opinion, report or statement prepared by:

(a) One or more officers or employees of the Corporation whom such indemnified representative reasonably believes to be reliable and competent with respect to the matter presented;

(b) Legal counsel, public accountants or other persons as to matters that the indemnified representative reasonably believes are within the person’s professional or expert competence; or

(c) A committee of the Board of Directors on which he or she does not serve as to matters within its area of designated authority, which committee he or she reasonably believes to merit confidence.

Section 5.08. Contract Rights; Amendment or Repeal. All rights to indemnification under this Article shall be deed a contract between the Corporation and the indemnified representatives pursuant to which the Corporation and each indemnified representative intend to be legally bound. Any repeal, amendment or modification hereof shall be prospective only and shall not affect any rights or obligations then existing.

Section 5.09. Scope of Article. The indemnification of indemnified representatives, as authorized by this Article, shall not be deemed exclusive of any other rights to which those seeking indemnification or advancement of expenses may be entitled under any statute, agreement, vote of the General Assembly or disinterested Directors or otherwise, both as to action in an official capacity and as to action in any other capacity. The indemnification provided by or granted pursuant to this Article shall continue as to a person who has ceased to be an indemnified representative in respect of matters arising prior to such time, and shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, and personal representatives of such a person.

Section 5.10. Reliance on Provisions. Each person who shall act as an indemnified representative of the Corporation shall be deemed to be doing so in reliance upon the rights of indemnification provided by this Article.

V. The Presbyterian Mission Agency

Mission, God’s mission, is at the heart of the work to which God calls us. As the Book of Order reminds us:

“In Christ, the Church participates in God’s mission for the transformation of creation and humanity by proclaiming to all people the good news of God’s love, offering to all people the grace of God at font and table, calling all people to discipleship in Christ.” (F.101)

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is the body of the General Assembly in which are lodged the following responsibilities to implement the mission of the General Assembly domestically and internationally:¹

a. to cultivate and promote the spiritual welfare of the whole church;

b. to provide resources to support equal employment opportunity and affirmative action for members of racial ethnic groups, for women, for various age groups, for persons regardless of marital condition (married, single, widowed, or divorced), and for persons with disabilities;

c. to develop and propose a Mission Work Plan for the Presbyterian Mission Agency consisting of the mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities of the Presbyterian Mission Agency; doing so by taking into account the mission work being done by sessions, presbyteries, and synods, and to propose for General Assembly approval a comprehensive Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and program, including a budget to implement the Mission Work Plan;

d. to act in those specific matters assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency by the General Assembly or the Constitution, acting always according to previously enacted General Assembly policies, reporting fully to each subsequent General Assembly its actions;

e. to perform such additional responsibilities and duties as may be assigned by the General Assembly.

In service to the Presbyterian Mission Agency as it fulfills its place in this, the Church’s calling, the primary purpose of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is to lead and coordinate the mission program of the General Assembly. In order to steward this function, the Board and the Agency shall understand this mission based on the Constitution and General Assembly actions, an accounting of denominational resources, and the interpretation of our times and national context.

Standing between the General Assembly and the staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Board’s work is to advise the General Assembly regarding mission priorities, programs and strategies; to lead the Agency in implementing the directives of the General Assembly; and then to report back to the General Assembly with results and additional advice. It is the Board’s responsibility to make the vision for mission become reality, helping to manage the practical problems those visions and dreams might face.

The Board’s work will move in a flow from General Assembly to General Assembly. It begins by advising the General Assembly on mission priorities, programs, and strategies. At a General Assembly, the Board receives guidance and direction. The Board then leads staff in the agency to fulfill those General Assembly directives. The Board oversees and aligns assets toward the fulfillment of those directives in the context for mission, discerning potential shifts in God’s calling. The Board then responds to General Assembly directives, providing advice on revised priorities at the next General Assembly. This process is inclusive, multi-layered and cyclical, continuing from each General Assembly to the next. The Board should engage a broad array of stakeholders to strengthen the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s ability to respond faithfully to the Holy Spirit and align its life with God’s mission. Setting strategy and guiding policy in this way necessitates that the Board employ theological, intercultural, corporate, and legal knowledge all enveloped in prayer.

In performing this role, the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall report directly to the General Assembly. (See also Rule A.2 of the Standing Rules of the General Assembly.)

A. Policy Responsibility

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board may recommend churchwide policies to the General Assembly and is responsible for implementing policies established by the General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall establish overall procedures for the mission and ministry of the Presbyterian Mission Agency to implement the policies established by the General Assembly.

B. Planning and Priority Setting

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for carrying out planning and priority-setting processes. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for instituting ongoing review processes.

C. General Assembly Budget

It is the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to recommend to the General Assembly a comprehensive Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and program. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board develops the Mission Agency Budget, which includes a budget to implement the Mission Work Plan as well as a budget for all other costs and expenses of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. In preparing these budgets, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has the responsibility for developing its own revenue and expense projections, but shall consult with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and the Foundation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in doing so. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly jointly have responsibility for developing a Per Capita Budget and apportionment.

All income received by the Presbyterian Mission Agency from sales, bequests, gifts, or from any other source, shall be transmitted to the Treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, as is income received by the Office of the General Assembly pursuant to Section IV.B.3.d. of this Organization for Mission. These funds shall be separately accounted for by the Treasurer. All payments related to the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall be made by the Treasurer only upon the receipt of regular vouchered requests, or other adequate documentation, consistent with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and bearing the authorization of the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or a person designated by the President/Executive Director.

D. Personnel Responsibilities

Regarding the staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, shall, subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, delegate to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board responsibility for the following:

1. Approval of personnel procedures.

2. Approval, annually, of a staff rationale that determines staff commitments for the year. Any staff deployed regionally must be approved as part of the annual staff rationale.

3. Election of the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency subject to confirmation by the General Assembly.

4. Annual performance reviews of the President/Executive Director as specified in the Presbyterian Mission Agency Manual of Operations, and in concurrence with the Presbyterian Mission Agency personnel policies.

6. Approval of compensation guidelines recommended by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, within which salaries may be administered by the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

Members of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board are not eligible for election or selection as staff during the period of their term of service.

E. Reporting

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for submitting a report to the General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency will report regularly to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, keeping the Board fully informed about its work. Matters that involve an exception or a proposed change in Presbyterian Mission Agency procedures, a major shift in program emphasis, or a major budget adjustment require action by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. Issues of social witness policy, advocacy for racial ethnic and women’s concerns, and those related to Presbyterian theological institutions are reported to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and General Assembly. To support this reporting requirement, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has the right to full access to all information related to the Presbyterian Mission Agency maintained for it by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, including the accounting and financial records of the Presbyterian Mission Agency; information about donors, funds, and fund restrictions for funds that have been designated to support the programs or functions for which the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible; external audit reports with respect to such funds and the Presbyterian Mission Agency itself; and, to the same extent as any other agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), access to the corporate minutes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation.

F. Elected Leadership

1. Organization of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board

The work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency is a direct expression of the planning and mission understanding of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, which is accountable to the General Assembly in this regard. Direction and oversight of the Presbyterian Mission Agency is accomplished by Presbyterian Mission Agency Board members serving as members of Program and Administrative Committees. The number and makeup of the committees and assignments are adjustable to accomplish the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency in its mission and to allow flexibility to meet changing emphases in Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) mission. The committees are to be policy, strategy, and planning committees.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board ensures advocacy functions for women and racial ethnic persons, and advisory functions for social witness policy by providing direct access to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board also provides for the development of social witness policy.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board ensures the continuation of a committee that includes representatives of each Presbyterian theological institution, and that will review the effectiveness and stewardship of the schools on behalf of the church, will exercise the governance responsibilities of the church to the schools, and will encourage and enhance cooperation among the church’s theological schools. The committee will be provided direct access to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the General Assembly.

2. Membership of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board

The membership, terms of office, and officers of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall be provided for in the Manual of Operations of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and approved by the General Assembly.

G. Staff Leadership

1. President/Executive Director

Election and Review—The President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency is elected by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, subject to confirmation by the General Assembly. The President/Executive Director is accountable to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. Upon election, the President/Executive Director serves with the full authority of the office until confirmed by the next General Assembly following election. Should the General Assembly refuse to confirm any President/Executive Director, the position becomes vacant immediately. Periodic in-depth reviews of the Executive Director are the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. The President/Executive Director is elected for a term of four years and may be reelected for additional terms. Initial four-year terms start on the date that work commences following election. Subsequent four-year terms commence on the day following expiration of the prior term. The President/Executive Director may be dismissed upon the recommendation of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board in conformity with the relevant Employee Handbook and then-current personnel policies and procedures.

Responsibilities—The responsibilities of the President/Executive Director include:
1) Enabling the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to fulfill its responsibilities to the General Assembly;

2) Nurturing relationships between the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the other General Assembly agencies, midcouncils, and racial ethnic caucuses (see Covenant of Understanding);

3) Directing the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency;

4) Providing leadership to, and administrative oversight of, the staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency;

5) Leading the personnel decision-making processes of the Presbyterian Mission Agency delegated by the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, including but not limited to implementing policies and procedures related to inclusiveness, affirmative action, and equal employment opportunity;

6) Coordinating, with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, the budget planning process of the Presbyterian Mission Agency;

7) Serving a major role in all Presbyterian Mission Agency efforts, including funds development; and

8) Serving as primary spokesperson for Presbyterian Mission Agency program and policies.

9) When resolution of a particular legal dispute has been delegated by the Board of Directors of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, the President/Executive Director may, after consulting with appropriate persons or bodies, may retain legal counsel and institute or participate in legal proceedings in civil and criminal courts.

2. Staff

All staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency are accountable to the President/Executive Director. Mission personnel have shared accountability both to the overseas partner church to which they are assigned and to the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, shall delegate to the President/Executive Director, subject to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget; subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; in consultation with the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; and consistent with the scope of any similar delegation to the Stated Clerk for staff assigned to the Office of the General Assembly, authority: (i) to create, implement, and enforce personnel policies and procedures for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (ii) to prepare, maintain, and amend an Employee Handbook for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (iii) to retain and dismiss staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; and (iv) to promote, demote, review, increase or decrease compensation, and otherwise manage staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency. The President/Executive Director shall, in exercising such authority, make use of any human resources recordkeeping and expertise provided by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. The Board of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) A Corporation shall coordinate with the Presbyterian Mission Agency to ensure that an adequate number of staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency have or are delegated appropriate signature authority for relevant contracts and bank accounts related to the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

3. Board Meetings

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board holds regular meetings (no less than one per quarter) with the appropriate and invited Presbyterian Mission Agency staff in order to build collaboration, collegiality, coordination, and trust, while also discussing finances, investment results, and any pertinent legal matters.

VI. Presbyterian Mission Agency Relationships

The Presbyterian Mission Agency works in partnership with synods, presbyteries, and sessions to enable the various councils to join together in churchwide expression of the life and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This means that, as is the case with all agencies of the church, that the Presbyterian Mission Agency, its officers, directors, and its staff, must consider in all matters the church as a whole ahead of any individual benefit or detriment to the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency shares responsibility with the Office of the General Assembly for the joint office of Mid Council Relations. In addition, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will cooperate in the preparation and presentation of the Per Capita Budget and apportionment and other opportunities for joint endeavors.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible for carrying out the mission program for the General Assembly. The ministries of the Presbyterian Mission Agency are linked together and with the church on behalf of that part of the mission entrusted by God to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
The principal legal corporation that provides direct support to the Presbyterian Mission Agency is the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, which receives, holds, and transfers property, and facilitates the management of the church’s corporate affairs. Its role with respect to the Presbyterian Mission Agency is to work with the Presbyterian Mission Agency in support of its mission as directed by the General Assembly.

Both the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and the Presbyterian Mission Agency are subordinate to the General Assembly. Thus, the Presbyterian Mission Agency is not subordinate to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation with respect to the matters for which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, is not subordinate to the Presbyterian Mission Agency with respect to the matters for which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation is authorized by its Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws. As both organizations and their leaders recognize that Jesus Christ is Lord, and that none of them has any authority but in Him, they are charged to work together to realize the mission and great ends of his church in this and all respects. Consistent with this, the Board of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, delegates specific authority, as set forth in its Bylaws, this Organization for Mission, and resolutions of its Board of Directors, to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board or the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency with respect to personnel, contracting, finance, and legal issues so that the Presbyterian Mission Agency may better accomplish the mission goals of the General Assembly. As the disbursing agent under the 1986 Deliverance of the General Assembly that authorized the Plan of Division for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, it also disburses for the Presbyterian Mission Agency the amounts authorized by the General Assembly in the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and the Per Capita Budget for mission. It therefore defers to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board’s mission decisions to the fullest extent permitted by those budgets, fund restrictions, and applicable law.

Other relationships include the following committees:

1. Advocacy and Advisory Committees

The Executive Director has the responsibility for the advocacy and advisory committees. All three groups have direct access to the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns shall assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give full expression of the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, F-1.0403. The Committee shall be a prophetic voice for involving racial ethnic people in the formation of public policy, particularly where race is a factor that negatively impacts the quality of life of people of color. The committee will also monitor the implementation of policies adopted by the church that impact the quality of life of racial ethnic people in the church and in the world.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns shall assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give full expression of the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, F-1.0403. The committee shall monitor and evaluate policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church and the world; and shall advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society as a whole.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in consultation with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, is responsible for the process of developing and recommending social witness policy to the General Assembly. The term “social witness policy” refers to the positions adopted by the General Assembly to express its stance on and guide response to issues in the public order, including their relation to the church’s own life and mission. These positions may take the form of policy statements, resolutions, study papers, or social involvement reports, as defined in the Manual of the General Assembly, p. 65, Forming Social Policy, 2.a.

2. Committee on Theological Education

The Committee on Theological Education has direct access to the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and their work is coordinated through the Theology, Formation, and Evangelism Ministry with staff accountability to the director of the Theology, Formation, and Evangelism Ministry. The purpose of the Committee on Theological Education is to provide an effective linkage between the General Assembly and the theological seminaries of the PC(USA) by: providing a forum through which the church-at-large can express its concerns to the seminaries; interpreting the mission of the denomination’s theological seminaries to the whole church; overseeing the interpretation and administration of the Theological Education Fund (1% Plan); serving as a means for cooperation among the church’s theological seminaries; implementing suggestions made by the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions as approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993); serving as an agency of the denomination for relating to theological seminaries other than those of the PC(USA); and working in partnership with mid councils and agencies of the General Assembly to provide for leadership in local congregations, the denomination, and the world.

VII. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, is a corporate entity of the General Assembly. It holds funds and title to property in accordance with the 1986 Deliverance of the General Assembly, its Articles of Incorporation, and its Bylaws.
Among other things, it provides accounting, reporting, and financial services for the General Assembly and its entities, and employs the staff assigned to the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. It is funded, subject to overall budget approval by the General Assembly, from unrestricted funds held by it; from restricted funds designated to it; from the portion of the various budgets of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly needed for employees, facilities, and services provided by it; from management fees; and from other fees with respect to its activities and services. Pending revision of the budgeting process in Appendix A to reflect the new governance structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, in 2018, its expenditures for the fiscal years 2018 through 2020 are limited to no more than the amount expended by the corporation in fiscal years 2016 through 2018.

No agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), unless otherwise directed by the General Assembly, is obligated to purchase or use any facilities or services provided by or through the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, other than those for which they have contracted or, with respect to the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency for a transition period through 2022, those that as of December 31, 2017 had been provided to such agencies, including but not limited to office space and facilities services. The Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, shall work together and with the other agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to help determine what facilities and services the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, may best offer or cease to offer to the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Office of General Assembly and other agencies of the church in the future.

The officers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, their terms, and their election are defined in its By-laws. The Treasurer of the corporation shall commission the preparation of an audit report or reports by an independent public accountant of the financial position and operations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and, to the extent not otherwise separately commissioned and prepared, the financial position and operations of the General Assembly and its other entities.

X. Amendments

Proposed amendments to the Organization for Mission that are submitted by overture shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Except as provided in Section IV.E., proposed amendments to the Organization for Mission from related bodies or from the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall be submitted to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall review these proposed changes and forward those it approves as part of its report to the General Assembly. All changes to Section VI or to provisions concerning the relationship between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and any agency or entity shall also be submitted to the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, for review and approval, amendment, or rejection before any such changes are forwarded to the General Assembly.

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-03—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 04-03, the report of the Way Forward Commission, joined by the All-Agency Review Committee, proposes a restructuring of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (“A Corp”), for the stated purpose of enabling the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA) to better focus on mission when its board members are no longer directors of the corporation, and further proposes changes in the provision of shared services to other agencies and in some ongoing PMA and Stated Clerk responsibilities.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises the approval Item 04-03 with amendments as follows:

1. Amend 1. as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

   “1. Composition[, structure, and leadership] of the Board of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation ("A Corp")."

2. Strike the current text of a.–h. and replace it with new text; re-letter 1.i. as 1.f.:

   “[a. “Approve the phased-in reduction in the size of the current Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB) from forty to twenty members, sixteen of whom are at-large nominees for four-year terms, and one each of whom are nominated from Presbyterian Women, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC, possibly re-named, Racial Equity Advisory Committee, REAC), the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP). (This set of designations follows the formula agreed upon by the Governance Task Force...としたものに従って、組織の統合化が行われることを許可するものである。] of the currently existing PMAB.) These twenty individuals constitute the majority of the Board of A-Corp as the ministries they are elected to oversee derive much of their funding from the investments, property, and other income, restricted and unrestricted, that constitute the assets of A Corp. These twenty persons are the successors to members of the more than twenty-three more specialized mission boards of predecessor churches now joined in one corporate entity.

“[b. Approve the addition to those twenty persons of four persons from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and one (1) each from the Boards of the Presbyterian Publishing Company (Westminster/John Knox Press, or WJK) and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), for a total of six persons whose agencies share in administrative services with the Presbyterian Mission Agency, currently located in Louisville, Kentucky. This addition shall be done with the assistance of the General Assembly Nominating Committee and in consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation within thirty days after the adjournment of the 223rd General Assembly (2018), and these added members shall be immediately invited and incorporated into the scheduled meetings and all other functions of the existing A Corp.

“(c. Direct the resulting twenty-six-member board to adopt a streamlined governance structure that corresponds to the mission emphases of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and contains no more than one committee devoted to matters of property, finance, audit, law, and risk management.

“(d. Direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to designate one member each (possibly, but not necessarily, the treasurer) to work with a joint fiduciary coordinating committee appointed by the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, with liaisons from WJK and PILP, to oversee the provision of shared services with a maximum of transparency in joint reporting to all three boards and one committee.

“(e. Authorize the PMAB to modify the election and confirmation process for the Executive Director to include in the presentation of any nominee(s) to the General Assembly the inclusion of a statement of faith and a strategic plan or vision for the Agency, and to consider limiting any Executive Director to two terms of four years each. “Executive Director” would be the sole title for the position.

“[i.] [f.] Text remains unchanged.”

3. Amend Recommendation 2.c. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“1. Based on a six-year schedule, the agencies of the General Assembly will be reviewed to evaluate the relationship of their individual ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), On nomination of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, the General Assembly will elect two committees, each to review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly. Each committee will be composed of twelve members: four commissioners from the previous three General Assemblies, four who have served on the board of a General Assembly entity other than the one being reviewed, [two who have served on the board of the entity under review] and [four] [two] at large. The at-large members may include ecumenical partners. The committee will use the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies in the Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly. The committee will report to the Stated Clerk who will present the report, along with any additional recommendations from the Stated Clerk, to the next General Assembly following its election the results of the review and make recommendations based on its findings.”

4. Amend Recommendation 5. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“The Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee jointly recommend that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) create a “Moving Forward Implementation Commission” [to be appointed by the Moderator/Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) after consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and to include [four] [two] members of the 2016 Way Forward Commission, [four] [two] members of the 2016 All-Agency Review Committee, [two past or present members each from the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and Committee on the Office of the General Assembly,] and four members to be appointed from the commissioners of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) (including one young adult advisory delegate), for a term ending at the 224th General Assembly (2020), with the mandate and authority to (1) ensure compliance and implementation of 2018 assembly action on recommendations of the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee, (2) ensure continued implementation of collaborations and commission administrative actions underway as outlined in this report and the report of the All-Agency Review Committee, (3) coordinate with the 2020 Vision Team, (4) report findings and make recommendations to the 224th General Assembly (2020). [If any of the four members to be appointed from the 223rd General Assembly (2018) is a representative of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or of the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall ensure that both such agencies are represented among those four members.]”

402  223rd General Assembly (2018)
Because social witness capacity is part of the mission of the church, ACSWP is concerned with the diagnosis and prescription developed by the Way Forward Commission. This Advice & Counsel memorandum begins (A) with an organizational and theological critique of the Way Forward and All-Agency Review Committee efforts. We then (B) explain our fairly straightforward proposal, presented above. Most of our members do not like “inside baseball,” so we will try to be frank. We also (C) do not agree with the Presbyterian Mission Agency’s “deliverance” idea (Item 4-06), and have been critical of aspects of the PMA for a long time. So, let’s hope we can help you, the commissioners, make sense of this complicated but important material. ACSWP requested a perspective on the basic issue with the Way Forward proposal from the Theology & Worship area of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and have added that perspective as Appendix A: A Theological Note on the Place of Administration in the Ministry of the Church (May 2018).

A. Critical Analysis of Way Forward/All Agency Proposal

Overall, we agree with the Way Forward Commission (WFC) diagnosis that mission has been too often subordinate to “trustee” kinds of functions (accounting, legal, etc.). This was part of the findings of the Review of the Presbyterian Mission Agency at the 222nd General Assembly (2016). In the words of an economist on our committee, “the front office has too often been switched with the back office,” putting vision, mission, and theology in the back seat and management, finance, and administration in the front.

Yet the Way Forward Commission prescription is even more “corporate” and less theological. The commission has designed what is basically an unaccountable board of trustees, their restructured A Corp board, which is to be comprised primarily of institutional representatives of other agencies that retain their own boards. In other words, despite complicated legal delegations and assurances of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board’s independence, a small group of powerful people will be making decisions that other people will have to live with.

One does not need to be too much of a Calvinist—or a pastor who has both session and trustees—to know that this added layer of administration will be tempted to control via the purse strings, especially if there is a bit of unrestricted or undesignated funding available. In fact, while language of “utility” or even servant has been used, the A Corp. board they propose is also designed to monitor the PMA, and the changes in review process proposed also reflect that outside supervision emphasis. There are good Reformed reasons for checks and balances, even among the well-intentioned, and mutual accountability—keeping each other honest—has been a good reason to keep the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency separate. There are concerns and the authority of the General Assembly again behind somebody else’s ideas of fiduciary responsibility. Are we being too critical, or just realistic about the concentration of power being proposed? Putting aside the corporate law for a moment, the simpler mistake in this well-meaning morass is confusing a leadership and vision problem with a structural one. The virtues of competing institutional self-interest, though, do not justify adding another institutional structure—at whatever unknown cost. (The costs of staffing and meetings for the new group have not been publicly estimated as of April 2018.)

The idea of separating the church’s mission from its money is itself theologically wrong, however, and giving 9 or 11 mainly institutional nominees authority to oversee millions of dollars disinterestedly is theologically naïve. It puts mission concerns and the authority of the General Assembly again behind somebody else’s ideas of fiduciary responsibility. Are we being too critical, or just realistic about the concentration of power being proposed? Putting aside the corporate law for a moment, the simpler mistake in this well-meaning morass is confusing a leadership and vision problem with a structural one. The Way Forward/All Agency proposal would only worsen this leadership problem by adding another “president” to the mix, and a seventh national body that would probably need to be reconsolidated at a later date.

The PMA has, in fact, had leadership problems and the effects of Executive Director turnover are serious. There are significant debates over whether senior staff (and officers of the corporation) need to be Presbyterian (we have been calling for this for years). We have also been concerned that the transition from “council of the church” to “nonprofit institutional board” has made for less discernment and public deliberation, and hence to less accountable leadership. Councils of elected persons debating freely are a hallmark of Protestantism; corporate and nonprofit boards are usually more focused and staff-driven.

Sidebar: The turnover in PMA Executive Directors has sometimes required real leadership by elected board members, necessarily exercised in executive session, and it is a mistake to criticize the PMA Board for some of its efforts to have interim work performed. The Way Forward Commission made the right decision in not urging a merging of the PMA and the OGA precisely because when there are top level leadership problems, it is wise not to have all such eggs in one organizational basket.

B. Why the Short ACSWP Compromise Proposal?

The amendments we propose is based on one fundamental Reformed idea (reflected in all our congregations), that people should elect the leaders and shape the institutions that affect their lives. This means including representatives of other agencies on a board that impacts their work, based on the amount of shared services they receive. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has already voted to reduce its number by half, from 40 to 20, so adding the 6 we propose will not be unduly burdensome. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) at times already meets alongside the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB), so additional travel for the four from that group would not be needed.

In terms of overall size and resource use, it should be noted that the Office of the General Assembly is funded by per capita, not the endowments given for mission purposes, and so giving that committee more than four board members with responsibility “over” those assets seems inappropriate. The publishing house, Westminster/JohnKnox Press, has focused needs... from the PMA Board but was set up with its own board precisely to oversee the business aspects of that Christian mission. Similarly, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., has a staff of eleven persons skilled in supporting the building needs of congregations, and has its own reserves, and does not need significant presence on the A Corp board, though some presence would still be helpful.

Further restructuring of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (A Corp) would be unnecessary and costly. Neither the 2016 nor 2008 Reviews of the Presbyterian Mission Agency focused on the Board functioning. The only piece of written research used by the Way Forward Commission of which we are aware, a member survey by COGA and Research Services of “what does it mean to be Presbyterian?,” published in May 2016, based on 2015 data, does not deal with governance matters. It is a good survey report, but it was completed before the Way Forward Commission was put together. There is no discussion or documentation provided of the experience of other denominations on board structure or, for that matter, on what relationships or boundaries are needed between governing councils and finance boards like the Foundation and Board of Pensions.

Our recommendation 1.d., a joint fiduciary coordinating committee appointed by the Stated Clerk and the PMA Executive Director, is a practical way to raise the accountability of those in charge of “shared services” without, again, elevating these functions into a major institutional raison d’être. Yes, there have been complaints about the operation of some PMA administrative departments and even claims that other agencies are overcharged for some shared services. At times other parts of the PMA itself make similar complaints. There are arguments about what functions or capacities should be outsourced. Generally, these are based in sincere questions about how best to serve the church, but as operational matters they should not occupy serious amounts of board time.

The joint fiduciary coordinating committee concept includes liaisons from the publishing house and the investment and loan program, and would have oversight by representatives from both primary parent agency boards, but the emphasis is on strengthening staff competence via transparency and accountability, and by respecting all institutional interests. Providing solid services at reasonable cost is, of course, the basic form of respect. But again, the functioning of shared services is an executive director responsibility, as is the proper staffing of the A Corp board. It is not enough of a reason for separating out a set of primarily “trustee” board functions for what would, in effect, become a board of trustees.

Our Recommendation 1.e., regarding the executive director, has two elements: a desire to lift up the MISSION this person should represent before the assembly and before the whole church, and the VISION needed by any candidate for this office. ACSWP (and the Theology and Worship area on the staff level) have sometimes despaired of serious missiology being represented in the leadership of the agency. Requiring evidence of a vision for mission to be shown at the assembly would underline this aspect of leadership—not only management capacity—and would strengthen the complementary roles of the assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency as servants of Jesus Christ.

With regard to the title, “president,” it is true that corporations and many boards have presidents as well as chairpersons. Some of the other General Assembly agencies have presidents. But in light of the serious criticism the Presbyterian MISSION Agency has received for “corporate” thinking and for hierarchical pretentions undermining ministry and solidarity among staff, we wonder why this unnecessary title was not discussed by the whole PMA Board? Let it be noted that this change of title did not originate with the Way Forward Commission or All Agency Review Committee. ACSWP made its views known only after we had seen a redone position profile.

C. Why Setting Up a Separate A Corp. for the Mission Agency Is Not Needed

Many of the same arguments we have given above apply to separating the A Corp. into two parts, one for PMA and one for OGA. We understand some of the motivation for the PMA, as it would in fact be difficult to operate overseas especially without a corporate structure and countless inefficiencies would be introduced by a separate body. But we do not see a call from the COGA for its own board and regret they were not consulted, apparently for reasons of time. Our proposal, by expanding the A Corp board in a logical way, would deliver us from the need for a Deliverance as our friends propose (smile).

We believe that the changes that Way Forward Commission and All-Agency Review Committee have proposed for the Stated Clerk’s role may help at some points in increasing the incentives for cooperative work between the Office of the Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. On the other hand, however, it is crucial that the head of the Presbyterian Mission Agency be able to speak and have sufficient standing to do so on matters of MISSION. If MISSION (evangelism, church growth, disaster relief, public witness; the whole Gospel for the whole person!) is important, it needs articulation and expertise.

D. Conclusion

In evaluating what the Way Forward Commission report presents, it may be helpful for commissioners to look at the commission’s own mandate:

- study and identify a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA);
- engage/contract a qualified, examination team that may include some or all of the All Agency Review team, with the requisite skills and abilities to assess institutional performance;
• conducting a comprehensive, detailed analysis that will provide clearly detailed, measurable recommendations for improvements to the commission for implementation by the agencies;

• Visit with and explore
  a. the best practices of other national church bodies,
  b. the best practices of corporations and nonprofits, as deemed helpful;

• take such administrative actions in both OGA and PMA as may move the General Assembly staff in the direction of its vision;

• recommend to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) such changes in Standing Rules as may move the church in the direction of its vision;

• explore the best way for Shared Services to serve these agencies.

From our standpoint, the weaknesses of the Way Forward Commission report are most evident with regard to the first concern: “a vision….” We do not see much theology in the report, though perhaps there is a hope that 2020 Vision may provide some, even after the fact.

Arguably various of the other tasks have been performed, and we are sympathetic to the general limitations of lack of resources. The Way Forward Commission is, in fact, to be commended for their energy in making all the contacts they have, even if their almost exclusive focus was on the Mission Agency and not the larger church systems. We speak more to that in our A&C on the All Agency Review Committee.

Endnote for Comment on Item 04-03
1. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) is authorized by the General Assembly (“Why and How the Church Makes a Social Witness,” 1993) to communicate formally by Advice & Counsel memoranda with the assembly itself and with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB). The existing PMA Manual incorporates the several functions of ACSWP including: “Identify facets of the church’s social witness that enable or obstruct effective action. Analyze, in cooperation with the General Assembly Ministries, the effectiveness of social witness in councils, institutions, and the Presbyterian Mission Agency.”

Appendix A
A Theological Note on the Place of Administration in the Ministry of the Church
From the Theology & Worship Unit, Presbyterian Mission Agency, May 2018

As commissioners consider the reports before them, and seek to discern how this denomination can best structure its ministry at the denominational level for shared faithfulness to Jesus Christ and God’s mission, it will be helpful to remember that administration is integral to ministry in the life of the church, and vice versa. Administration and ministry are not separable. While they can be distinguished, they cannot be separated. The church joins the mission of God in specific forms of ministry, forms shaped by the contextual realities that administration addresses.

Administration is integral to ministry. Every session and mid council of this denomination knows and lives this reality. Our ministries are shaped by the specific, concrete settings in which we minister. Sessions make decisions about what specific ministries to engage in and how to do so. They evaluate the particular gifts and skills God has brought together in the congregation they lead. They weigh the resources they have available to support specific forms of ministry. Which ministries shall we support, using what resources, involving which people? These are questions of ministry—questions about discerning the will of God, the call of Christ, and the gifts of the Spirit. Answering them requires the work of administration. Similar discernment happens in presbyteries and synods. In each case, administrative structures are integral to ministry.

We see the interdependence of ministry and administration across Scripture. Consider a few examples from the Old Testament. Moses appoints seventy to share in resolving issues that arise among the people of God on their journey to the promised land (Ex. 18:13–26). The first five books of the Bible embody profound concern for the role of administration in faithful living (e.g. Num. 27, 35, 36). The prophets reveal God’s concern for administrative malpractice, malpractice that betrays the mission of God and malforms the ministry of the people to the world (e.g. Is. 9:13–6, 10:1–4).

In the life and ministry of Jesus Christ we see that administration is integral to ministry. Jesus sets up a staffing structure for his ministry, calling particular people to become disciples and follow him, welcoming women and men to such a role. He chooses twelve from among them to take on a particular role in the community (e.g. Mt. 4:18–22, 10:1–4; Mk. 1:16–20, 3:13–9; Lk. 5:1–11, 6:12–6; Acts 1:6–11). Administrative matters play a key role in Jesus’ miraculous feedings. Jesus asks the disciples what resources they have—one of the most basic administrative questions (“How many loaves have you? Go and see” Mk. 6:38). Having answered that question, Jesus goes about organizing for the feeding: “And [Jesus] said to his disciples, ‘Make them sit down in groups of about fifty each’” (Lk. 9:14b).

In his healings Jesus regularly acknowledges administrative matters, instructing the newly healed to (for example) “Go and show yourselves to the priests.” (Lk. 17:14) In a particularly clear example, Jesus attends carefully to administrative matters in the last supper. “Jesus sent Peter and John, saying ‘Go and prepare the Passover meal for us … when you have entered the city, a man carrying a jar of water will meet you; follow him into the house he enters and say to the owner of the house, ‘The teacher asks you, ‘Where is the guest room, where I may eat the Passover with my disciples?’ He will show you a large room upstairs, already furnished. Make preparations for us there” (Lk. 22:8–13). In these ways and more Jesus’ ministry always involved the work of administration.

The interrelationship of administration and ministry has deep theological roots. As creatures of the creator God we are limited, finite. We are shaped by the particulars of our context. That we are limited, finite, context-shaped is inherent to being creatures. It is part of the good gift of creaturely life that God has graciously given to us. Our limitedness provides opportunity for us to engage in ministry in this place, or these few places, without the need to engage in all ministry in all places. Our finitude leads us to engage in ministry with specific people, whom God has brought into our life, without the need to engage in ministry with all people. Our limited resources require us to rely on what God provides, encouraging us to be confident that in the hands of Jesus five loaves and two fish are enough to feed thousands; calling us to steadfast assurance that God is at work in and through sisters and brothers in each place, carrying out the mission of God beyond what we can do ourselves.

Finally, our Reformed tradition has consistently identified administration as one of the “notes of the church”—reliable means by which the presence of Jesus Christ may be known in the world. Alongside the proclamation of the Word and the celebration of the sacraments, the Scots Confession includes “ecclesiastical discipline uprightly [ad]ministered, as God’s Word prescribes, whereby vice is repressed and virtue nourished” (Book of Confessions, 3.18). Our Foundations of Presbyterian Polity explain that, through this gift of administration, the church “nurture a covenant community of disciples of Christ, living in the strength of God’s promise and giving itself in service to God’s mission” (Book of Order, F-1.0303). Indeed, the concept of “administration as ministry” is written into the very name of our denomination. We are Presbyterians, one part of the people of God particularly known for our deep convictions about polity and ordered ministry—the administration of the church’s work and worship.

Administration is integral to ministry in the life of the church. We will best shape structures that nurture faithful ministry at the denominational level of the PC(USA) when we bear in mind the mutually shaping relationship between administration and ministry.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-03

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-03 with the following amendments:

- A reconstituted A-Corp that includes equal representation of OGA and PMA, the advocacy committees, users of Shared Services, and at-large representation.
- A theologian-in-residence representative who is intentionally attentive to maintaining the importance of biblical, theological, and ecclesiological imperatives in practice, form, and substance of the A-Corp.
- A revised nominating process for at-large members that is consistent with the nomination process for COGA and PMAB and allows and trusts the General Assembly with ultimate selection authority, as well as the assurance that any entities or agencies designating members to the A Corp propose at least three names to the General Assembly Nominating Committee for the standard nominating process.
- Inclusion of Presbyterian Women (PW) representation in the A Corp.

In partnership with our sibling committee, the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC), ACREC:

- Affirms the Reformed theological understanding that money and mission are tied together. We reject the idea that money is only a utilitarian function. We believe that this witness is affirmed throughout the denomination and notable examples include the Mission Responsibility through Investment and Washington Office advocacy for moral budgets and funding.
- Notes that PW is the second largest user of Shared Services and has significant missional and fiscal expertise, yet the original proposal disregards the potential expertise of women’s voices in favor of culturally assumed norms.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-03

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-03 with amendment.

ACWC is grateful for the dedication of the Way Forward Commission (WFC) and the All Agency Review Committee (AARC) engaging in critical work and attempting to move the PC(USA) forward in a new direction. As a critical voice of accountability in the PC(USA), ACWC has significant insight into the ongoing dysfunction that exists in various corners of the denomination. We agree with WFC/AARC that the make-up of the A. Corp must include more diversity than currently represented. For years, ACWC has pushed against a corporate culture that exacerbates the imbalance of power, perspective, and privilege that exists within the PC(USA) and subsequently perpetuates a culture of patriarchy, misogyny, racism, and paternalism. With that in mind, we wish that the WFC would have sought our council before February 2018.

As such, this proposal, as it stands, misses the mark and separates money and mission, centralizing financial power and offers limited regard for the ecclesiastical mutual responsibility and accountability that is assured in Presbyterianism. This concentration will not address the underlying cultural concerns that the church is too corporate in its function. This proposal diverges from the substance of Reformed theology in delineating between the sacred and the secular, mission and money. Foundationally, Presbyterians have understood that God’s sovereignty exists in all spheres of life and, as such, our missional and theological responsibility is reflected in all of our actions, including how to allocate our funds.

Further, without amendment we are concerned that it adds a layer of bureaucracy that fails to aid the church in doing mission and instead concentrates power with limited regard or process for accountability. We acknowledge the tireless labor that has gone into formulating this proposal, and we applaud the inclusion of the advocacy committees as representatives on a reconstituted A. Corp board. However, without amendment, ACWC believes significant concerns go unaddressed.

Specifically, ACWC:

- Affirms the Reformed theological understanding that money and mission are tied together. We reject the idea that money is only a utilitarian function. We believe that this witness is affirmed throughout the denomination and notable examples include the Mission Responsibility through Investment and Washington Office advocacy for moral budgets and funding.
- Notes that having just celebrated the 500th anniversary of the Reformation, ACWC is cognizant that the primary impetus of the radical birth of Protestantism was a rebuke of corruption in the Roman Church. ACWC is concerned that the reconstituted A Corp is not sufficiently attentive to issues of inclusion and this proposal is reliant on a troubling dominant cultural narrative that efficient and responsible expertise emerges from corporate entities.
- Is concerned that a more deliberate consideration of all of the users of Shared Services has not occurred. Specifically, Presbyterian Women (PW) is incorporated as an integrated auxiliary of the PC(USA) and its corporate identity is tied to A. Corp, yet PW is not provided a seat on the A. Corp Board in this proposal.
- Has noted that representatives from the Presbyterian Foundation and the Board of Pensions are provided seats at the table, while there are no reciprocal “missional expertise” seats on their boards.
- Opposes seats for any entity that is not a user of Shared Services.
- Draws attention to the fact that PW is the second largest user of Shared Service and has significant missional and fiscal expertise, yet the original proposal disregards the potential expertise of women’s voices in favor of culturally assumed norms.

Amendments ACWC advocates for include:

- A reconstituted A. Corp that includes equal representation of OGA and PMA, the advocacy committees, users of Shared Services, and at-large representation.
- A theologian-in-residence representative who is intentionally attentive to maintaining the importance of biblical, theological, and ecclesiological imperatives in practice, form, and substance of the A. Corp.
- A revised nominating process for at-large members that is consistent with the nomination process for COGA and PMAB and allows and trusts the General Assembly with ultimate selection authority, as well as the assurance that any entities or agencies designating members to the A. Corp propose at least three names the General Assembly Nominating Committee for the standard nominating process.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 04-03—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of General Assembly respectfully urges the assembly to approve Item 04-03. The Office of the General Assembly is one of two agencies that are served by the corporate expression of the General Assembly, known as Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a Corporation, or “A Corp.”

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly thanks the appointed and elected members and staff of the Way Forward Commission and All Agency Review Committee for their innumerable hours of work, prayerful discernment, and humble dedication to the PC(USA). COGA advises the assembly to approve all recommendations in Items 04-03 and 04-04 with the amendments to the composition of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation Board of Directors approved by the Way Forward Commission on April 23, 2018. Further, COGA strongly urges disapproval of any action that would require the Office of the General Assembly to create a new or separate corporation.

By amending the proposed membership of the board of directors of A Corp to remove a representative from the Board of Pensions, the Way Forward Commission partially addressed the concerns that COGA communicated to the Way Forward Commission and All Agency Review Committee. COGA has been concerned that including representatives from the Presbyterian Foundation and Board of Pensions would detract from the proposed core focus of the “A Corp.” as a utility to serve those who are constituents of Shared Services, currently the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and Presbyterian Women, Inc. COGA supports the proposed addition to the A Corp board of directors of a representative from Presbyterian Women, as this organization is currently one of the largest Shared Services contracted users.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consists of fifteen elected members and was created “to carry out the assembly’s oversight of the Stated Clerk …” (Organization for Mission, IV.C.2.). COGA regularly reviews the work of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly.

FOUNDATION COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 04-03—From the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (Foundation).

The Presbyterian Foundation welcomes new possibilities that might make more efficient and effective the collective work of the Presbyterian Church (USA) national agencies. The Foundation believes in an approach to Shared Services, which is helpful to the mission of all participating agencies while harming none of them.

The Foundation also believes it has an interest in having representation and leadership of a reconfigured “A Corp” board, as the “A Corp” is granted a beneficial interest in funds titled to and held by the Foundation.

The Foundation underscores, for the good of the whole church, certain essential, long-held parameters and Presbyterian values underlying the Deliverance. These include, among others, that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to acknowledge the Presbyterian Foundation in its role and responsibilities as Fiduciary and Trustee for donors—past, present, and future—in order to assure those donors that their funds will be used for the mission of Jesus Christ, in accordance with their intended purposes.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 04-03—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation commends to the assembly Standing Rule K.1.c, which lists GACOR with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) as consulting partners to the General Assembly Moderator(s) in appointing special committees and bodies created by General Assembly action.

The GACOR stands ready to advise new bodies and advocate to ensure the widest participation, diversity, and representation so that God's diversity is seen throughout the process and within the resulting nominating pools and finalized slates. The GACOR reminds the assembly that the GANC and the GACOR work together to fulfill F-1.0403 and that relationship is reflected in the Standing Rules and the Organization for Mission.

The GACOR reminds the assembly of the required review it does of the yearly AAEEQ and Supplier Diversity data of the six agencies that is reported on an annual basis. The GACOR advises that this work be aligned cooperatively within the new evaluation cycle.

The GACOR commends the creation of a Diverse Voices table and recommends an assessment of each agency’s appointment process for membership at the table and suggests that the table incorporate regular opportunities to do process observation and power analysis within the group once it is formed. The process observation tool created for the General Assembly could be of use along with representation from the GACOR to submit and analyze the data. This tool may require adaptation for use in other settings, which may include committee meetings and tables. Such change would require additional financial resources. The GACOR is committed to serving as a resource to create and support a culture of inclusion and equity in its work.

In Recommendation 5, the Moving Forward Implementation Commission, the GACOR stands ready to partner with and assist the continuing commission. GACOR evaluates the impact of inclusion practices and advises and consults with bodies and agencies to ensure the widest participation of all persons in our denomination.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).
ILP COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 4-03—From the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (ILP).

Item 04-03, Way Forward Commission Report to the 223rd General Assembly (2018), Recommendation 1, to restructure the governance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, (“A Corp”). ILP believes the recommended new A Corp structure provides significant value for all agencies and other entities utilizing the shared services currently provided through the Presbyterian Mission Agency (“PMA”). In addition to the economies of scale afforded through increased coordination of these services, the expanded representation on the board and intrinsic collaboration would better serve the church as a whole. We believe this value could best be realized by shifting oversight of the current PMA shared services area to the restructured A Corp and that the A Corp be seen as a “service” corporation to assist the agencies in advancing their mission. We feel increased accommodation to the time schedules that have been put forth in the recommendation may provide for a more graceful transition.

Item 04-03, Way Forward Commission Report to the 223rd General Assembly (2018), Recommendation 5, creation of a Moving Forward Implementation Commission. ILP supports this opportunity for review and recommendation by an independent body during the transition. We believe this would provide more value than a review occurring at the end of the transition or at the 224th General Assembly (2020).

PMA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 04-03—From the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA).

Introduction

In forming the Way Forward Commission, the 222nd General Assembly (2016) gave a clear mandate for its work: “study and identify a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA)” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 38, 226). Unfortunately, the work and recommendations of the commission fall short of this mandate. Rather than paint a picture of a new structure that models a vision of how the work of the national agencies cohere, relate to congregations, and further the mission of the church, Way Forward focused on specific technical changes that:

- Move us toward a more corporate model of church governance that is less inclusive;
- Add complexity to a system that is in need of simplification (more boards, more commissions, more committees);
- Lack a church-wide perspective for ensuring all General Assembly agencies act in unison as one church;
- Fail to address a critical issue—how can our national structure and programs meet the changing needs of congregations (while congregational focus was highlighted by Way Forward in their interim report—it is mostly missing in the final recommendations).

We believe better models are available, but developing new solutions first requires development of an overarching vision. Corporate forms would naturally flow from this vision.

The comments that follow address the recommendations made by Way Forward (of which only one recommendation addresses the structure of the national church).

Recommendation 1: Changes to Presbyterian Mission Agency Governance

This recommendation was made jointly by the Way Forward Commission (WFC) and the All Agency Review Committee (AARC). In short, the recommendation separates mission and administration—establishing a separate board to govern administration and other corporate functions.

We cannot support this proposal in its entirety in current form until vital questions are answered. We affirm this proposal in two respects: (1) we believe that the PMA should step away from the role of providing common administrative services; (2) We believe that A Corp board membership would benefit from the inclusion of additional non-PMA voices. While the PMAB has worked imperfectly in the past, we do have some experience in managing the complexities of mission and administration that we hope to contribute in order to address implementation concerns and possible unanticipated consequences of this proposed structure.

We have significant concerns about the overall viability of the proposal. In many ways, it harkens back to a governance model that existed between reunion and 1993 and resulted in conflicts over funding and control. In a 1993 restructure, the denomination moved to a unicameral model to minimize the divide between mission and corporate decisions. The predecessor to PMAB, the General Assembly Council, was given overall responsibility for governance, bringing mission, money, and administration to a common table. While issues remain, they are largely around finding the right balance between corporate/administrative functions and missional priorities; separating oversight and governance will further complicate finding that balance. It will also add bureaucracy and additional expense to the current system. This approach has been tried before and it did not work.

Since the 1993 restructure, the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), which is part of the same corporation as PMA, has gained increasing independence and is now seen as a separate agency (in 1993, OGA was a part of the General Assembly Council). Any new or revised governance model must acknowledge that reality and determine how (or if) a shared corporate identity can be jointly governed by two independent organizations. The recommendation by the WFC and the AARC is partially in response to this reality.

Aside from broad concerns about the viability of this recommendation, the details (or lack of details) are even more problematic.

1. Nature and Role of New Entity—What Is It?

We have been assured that this new entity is not a 7th agency. It has been described in different ways, but primarily as a “utility” that will provide administrative services for PMA, OGA, and any other General Assembly agency that chooses to participate. Only PMA and OGA are mandated to use the services of this utility—it is an option for other agencies.

But, based on language in Appendices 10 (Corporate bylaws) and 11 (Organization for Mission), and further conversations with representatives from the WFC and AARC, it is increasingly clear that this is more than a utility as it relates to oversight responsibilities for PMA and OGA.

The level of control appears to be extensive. Section 2.13 of Appendix 10 allows the corporation to delegate powers to other bodies but does not require it—and the delegation is not permanent. This belies the fact that power must be delegated from the corporation to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)/OGA and PMAB/PMA in order for them to operate. This is a radical change in church governance structures. Previously the General Assembly delegated authority directly to COGA/OGA and PMAB/PMA. The agencies then used a corporation, with PMAB as its board, to carry out necessary secular functions. In the proposal, much of PMAB/COGA’s authority will be delegated to it, not by the General Assembly, but rather by the corporation. At any time, the corporation can remove or limit the powers granted to other bodies. As such, the authority to delegate, limit, or remove powers is exclusive to the corporate board. It should be clear to all that this is not a mission-focused enterprise. It increases the corporate control over the church, and the work of OGA and PMA, which will be subject to the approval of those elected from other agencies/committees.

Appendix 11 reflects changes originally approved by the Presbyterian Mission Agency (related to the work done by its Governance Task Force in addressing governance changes; work that was encouraged by Way Forward) and recommended for General Assembly approval as Item 04-08. However, Appendix 11 was then further edited to reflect the changes required by this recommendation. Of fundamental concern is the flow of mission-related funds from congregations, individuals, and mid councils to the General Assembly, where they are disbursed. Current receipts range from Shared Mission Support (undesignated gifts for General Assembly mission) to restricted gifts for various purposes (Special Offerings, designated giving, etc.). Mission is also funded through endowments and bequests. Currently administrative functions are funded through cost recovery, which distributes a fair share of all revenue for the administrative expenses undergirding mission (or through a separate schedule of the per capita budget in the case of the Office of the General Assembly).

In the proposal (Appendix 11, Section VII), the corporation “is funded subject to overall budget approval by the General Assembly, from unrestricted funds held by it, from restricted funds designated to it, from the portion of the various budgets of PMA and OGA needed for employees, facilities and services provided by it; from management fees; and from other fees with respect to its activities and services.” There has been no conversation on how this will impact PMA or churchwide giving. It also raises the question—if this new entity is indeed a utility, why does their budget need to be approved by General Assembly? Shouldn’t they be funded from fees received for services provided? And shouldn’t the budgets of PMA and OGA continue to reflect the true cost of mission inclusive of the cost of delivering mission? Even though the Corporation “holds” funds for PMA and OGA, that doesn’t mean that the Corporation has the authority to use the funds for its own purposes apart from the donor’s intent in giving those funds.

We believe that the nature of this new entity and its relationship to PMA, OGA, and the other General Assembly agencies remains unclear.

2. Nature and Role of PMA and PMAB

The role of PMAB is equally unclear in this model. Since all authority is vested in the corporation with some of it delegated back to PMA/PMAB, it would help to be very clear on just what will remain within the scope of PMAB. Beyond generic comments such as “focus on mission” and “lead and coordinate the mission program of the General Assembly” the recommendation does not describe its vision for a future PMA/PMAB. Taking away or severely limiting the ability of PMA to “do” mission by separating the “what” from the “how” does not liberate PMA; it makes the work of PMA more difficult to navigate—likely resulting in fewer missional opportunities, delivered more slowly at an increased cost.
3. Board Composition

The recommendation places one representative of PMAB and one representative of COGA on a new eleven-member board—minimizing the voices of the two agencies most impacted by the recommendation. Eight of the other nine seats are allocated to specific representative voices:

- Four from the other agencies (one each from the Board of Pensions, the Foundation, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and PC(USA) Investment and Loan Program)—even if they choose not to purchase services from this new “utility.”
- One each from the advocacy committees (Advocacy Committee on Women’s Concerns and Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns).
- One each from the WFC and AARC (for the first term).

As written, the 223rd General Assembly (2018) will only have full discretion over the choice of one member of the board who will be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. This recommendation fails to take our collective white, male, middle-to-older age privilege into account. Ten of eleven specified nominations, limited by the discretion of the various representative agencies, will not produce a diverse board. While we understand there may be changes recommended by Way Forward to the agency nomination process designed to provide a broader slate of potential board members with additional involvement from the General Assembly Nominating Committee, these changes are not currently in the posted materials. We are unsure if or when these changes will be made.

Furthermore, the corporation’s anticipated executive committee (five members) with a quorum of 50 percent, places control of the corporation, PMA, and OGA in the hands of two individuals (a majority of the quorum of three).

4. Lack of Due Diligence

We have not seen any detailed financial or operational due diligence and this should be done prior to finalizing the recommendation, so that a determination may be made as to whether this governance model is workable.

Financially, the proposal commits to keeping administrative expenditures in 2018–2020 to levels expended in 2016-2018. We do not believe there is a basis for this commitment. To our knowledge:

- Funds have not been reviewed; no analysis has been completed.
- There has been much conversation about outsourcing, without consideration of the financial impact of severance packages for existing staff.
- There have been no discussions about how to fund the Office of the President (of this new entity), or the new Office of Translation, which will be housed in this entity.
- There has been no conversation regarding which staff will operate out of the new entity versus PMA or OGA; no work has been done to sustain the financial viability of any of the organizations in light of these changes.

The following questions are examples of the kind of operational due diligence that is still required prior to implementation of the recommendation (and that should have been considered in advance of the proposal):

- Who will serve as the Board of Directors of the A Corp between the 30th day following the adjournment of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) when the existing forty Presbyterians from across the church are required to resign and the initial meeting of the newly constituted A Corp Board of Directors? (Recommendation 1.a)
- Does the church want a “super-board” made up of board members from other boards and committees? This is unprecedented in our Presbyterian organization. (Recommendation 1.b)
- In our current system, the General Assembly Nominating Committee makes nominations to General Assembly that meet the desire of the church for equality, diversity, and parity. The General Assembly Committee on Representation is charged with ensuring inclusion, participation, and representation at all levels of church leadership and decision-making. This check and balance is effective because the pool of prospective nominees is churchwide and balanced for diversity. Why is this system being replaced for this new A Corp board? (Recommendation 1.c)
- Why is it necessary for the A Corp president, or his/her designee, to sit on the board with voice on the other six “boards or committees”? What is the purpose of this linkage? (Recommendation 1.d)
- Why is an additional commission necessary? Is this an indication that there is a lack of confidence in the new A Corp board being able to fulfill its role and function? (Recommendation 1.f)
Why is this oversight permissive rather than required? Shouldn’t a review of the A Corp on an established schedule and method of review be the same as it for the other six agencies of the church? (Recommendation 1.g.)

It is our understanding that under the provision shown below the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall have broad authority over the employees ASSIGNED to it by the A Corp Board? Can we have clarity how that staffing is identified and then assigned by the A Corp? Do these provisions apply to OGA?

A Corporation shall delegate to the President/Executive Director, subject to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget; subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; in consultation with the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; and consistent with the scope of any similar delegation to the Stated Clerk for staff assigned to the Office of the General Assembly, authority:

(i) to create, implement, and enforce personnel policies and procedures for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (ii) to prepare, maintain, and amend an Employee Handbook for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (iii) to retain and dismiss staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; and (iv) to promote, demote, review, increase or decrease compensation, and otherwise manage staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency. “Emphasis Added.” (Recommendation 1.h. (Appendix 11))

It is our understanding that the A Corp shall utilize unrestricted funds, currently used to fund important ministries of the PMA (e.g. Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministry), to cover its own expenses? Has anyone reviewed the current PMA Budget to correctly understand how administrative expenses now borne by PMA come from allocations from restricted funds from particular PMA programs? Has an analysis been made of the effect of keeping unrestricted funds for the exclusive use of A Corp expenditures?

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation…is funded, subject to overall budget approval by the General Assembly, from unrestricted funds held by it; from restricted funds designated to it; from the portion of the various budgets of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly needed for employees, facilities, and services provided by it; from management fees; and from other fees with respect to its activities and services. (Recommendation 1.h. (Appendix 11))

What will the rescission of the declaration of prior enactments of the General Assembly, particularly the documents of Deliverance, means in the application of secular law to disputes within the church that are adjudicated in secular courts? Documents such as the Deliverances are canon law in most states, certainly in Pennsylvania, and have primacy over secular law (i.e. corporate bylaws). Has anyone considered what the declaration of canon law as being secondary to secular law may mean to the Trust Clause of the PC(USA) Constitution? Can WFC/AARC explain and assure the General Assembly that this action will not have unintended consequences? (Recommendation 1.i.)

5. Timing

If approved by the General Assembly, the transition to the new model will be quick.

Recommendation 1.a. calls for actions to be taken within thirty days of the close of General Assembly. Current corporate members are to resign as of the close of that meeting. Recommendation 1.c. calls for the change even sooner … the day after the 223rd General Assembly (2018) adjourns. A new board is convened within ninety days. Governance between that thirty-day window and the ninety-day meeting is left unclear.

In light of this uncertainty, and the lack of due diligence on both operational and financial matters, the PMAB asks that the details of the proposal, along with the vision called for earlier in this comment, be vetted over the next two years, so that a more comprehensive and sustainable recommendation can be brought to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

6. Acting as “One Church”

Rather than solving conflict between church agencies, this proposal exacerbates it. Four General Assembly agencies have boards that serves both their mission-related purposes and their corporate needs. The other two, PMA and OGA, will have to work through a corporate board controlled by others. This hasn’t worked for the Office of the General Assembly over the past thirty years, leading to many of today’s issues. Members of COGA have described this period as one of “tyranny.” The proposed new corporation board looks no more viable. Minimally, it will at least be a different form of tyranny, but collectively, we should aim higher. Better solutions are available (separate corporate identity for each agency within the context of one overall church corporation board or a joint OGA/PMA corporate board), but neither can be fully evaluated in the absence of an overarching vision. Rather than create upheaval within the agencies without a clear guiding vision, PMAB suggests that the assembly first establish a vision for the structure and function of General Assembly agencies, then allow corporate forms to follow this vision.

7. Conclusion

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is grateful for many voices seeking to correct flaws in the current structure and function of General Assembly agencies. A portion of those flaws are the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and we join with others in a commitment to work wholeheartedly to improve and correct these flaws. We commend the Way Forward Commission for its call for a renewed focus on mission as the heart of all we do, and believe this is best accomplished not by removing corporate responsibilities from the Presbyterian Mission Agency, but by addressing the imbalance of OGA’s relationship to the PMA and the A Corp board. This should be done deliberately, carefully, and above all, be rooted in reformed theological principles driven by a shared vision for the ecclesiastical direction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
Recommendation 2.: Role of the Stated Clerk

We leave the debate and comment on the role of the Stated Clerk to others within the church.

Recommendation 3: Financial Sustainability of the National Denomination

We support this recommendation. We believe it is so important that sustainability should be determined prior to the implementation of changes to the national church proposed by Way Forward and All Agency Review. The report should be submitted to the 224th General Assembly (2020) and should include consideration of the efficacy and continuation of the Per Capita System now used by the national denomination and many of the mid councils. A good beginning resource should be a review of the Strategy for Funding Christ’s Mission as approved by the General Assembly in 2008.

Recommendation 4.a.: Diversity and Reconciliation

We support the creation of this table. It would be helpful to know how this table will be implemented and the scope of its authority.

Recommendation 4.b.: Completion of Audits

We support this recommendation.

Recommendation 4.c.: Translation Services

We support Item 04-02, Recommendation 2, from the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns as the best approach to implementing this recommendation. We further suggest that an analysis of the cost of such a program and a means of supporting it be undertaken immediately following approval of this recommendation so that it may be implemented expeditiously.

Recommendation 6.: Concurrence with AARC on Agency Reviews

We support this recommendation.

PPC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-03

Comment on Item 04-03—From the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC).

Item 04-03, Way Forward Commission Report, Recommendation 1, and Item 04-04, Report of the All Agency Review Committee to the 223rd General Assembly (2018), Recommendation 6, seek a new structure for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). PPC believes that this new structure would represent positive change for providing shared services to PC(USA) entities that are located in the Presbyterian Center in Louisville, and offer the promise of more efficient, effective, and affordable shared services.

Item 04-04

[The assembly approved Item 04-04 as amended. See pp. 44, 49.]

Report of the All-Agency Review Committee to the 223rd General Assembly (2018)

The All-Agency Review Committee recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):

1. Direct the six agencies of the General Assembly, in implementing the General Assembly’s mission, to focus on the call to a new openness in Book of Order, F-1.0404, and to consider the following questions in establishing work plans and budgets:

   • What are the agencies’ views, collectively and individually, as to what radical obedience to Christ looks like both in times of possibility as well as in times of peril?
   • What commitment to transparency in process and resources exists in each agency and in their collaborative work?
   • What does it mean to say yes to some opportunities and say no to others? What do we need to celebrate and release? What do we need to celebrate and support?
   • How does the agency grieve what once was beautiful, but now is no longer possible?
   • What does it mean to be faithful and useful?
2. In order to strengthen the review process:

   a. Recommend that the next All-Agency Review Committee focus its review on the effectiveness of the agencies in implementing the General Assembly’s mission directives on their response to the call to a new openness in Book of Order, F-1.0404, and address the questions set forth in Recommendation 1. in that review.

   b. Approve the revisions to the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies, attached as Appendix A, and direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to prepare revisions to Section IV.D.1. of the Organization for Mission consistent with the revision to the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies.

   c. Direct that the review schedule required by the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies be delayed, to recommence with the schedule contained in the proposed revisions to the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies, with the election of a review committee for the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., by the 224th General Assembly (2020), reporting to the 225th General Assembly (2022).

3. [Note from the All-Agency Review Committee: The All-Agency Review Committee concurs with and urges approval of Recommendation 5. of the Way Forward Commission in creation of a “Moving Forward Implementation Commission,” to be appointed by the Moderator or Co-Moderators of the 223rd General Assembly (2018).]

4. Amend the Organization for Mission by including the following statement regarding the value of Shared Services as a new bulleted subpart to Section I.G.: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “The value of shared services in the PC(USA) exists when all agencies, carrying out their respective missions as directed by the General Assembly, collectively best serve the church with excellence, transparency, and efficiency. Simultaneously, sharing any service must be accomplished without harming the safety, soundness, well-being, or missional goals of any individual agency.”

5. Instruct the six agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to engage in a collaborative self-study of the per capita model and its’ ability to adequately fund the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency in the immediate and longer-term future and to explore alternative and creative funding resources for both.

6. [Note from the All-Agency Review Committee: The All-Agency Review Committee concurs with and urges approval of Recommendations 1.a. through 1.i. of the Way Forward Commission to free the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to focus on setting and executing the mission direction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by changing the bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, and taking the other steps recommended by the Way Forward Commission in its recommendations.]

7. Amend the Standing Rules of the General Assembly as follows:

   a. Add new sections to the Standing Rules as Section E.2.i. and E.2.j. as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “i. A representative of any agency affected by an overture or commissioners’ resolution, either with respect to the use of its financial resources or its mission priorities, shall be entitled to speak to the item of business immediately after the presenter of the overture or the commissioners’ resolution, and shall be allocated reasonable time to speak.

   “j. The financial effect of each recommendation on any agency or entity of the denomination that would be affected by the action shall be clearly presented at the time that an overture or commissioners’ resolution is considered by the committee.”

   b. Amend Standing Rule E.5.a. as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   c. Amend Standing Rule E.5.c. as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “c. Any person who wishes to be heard in a public hearing shall sign up on a hearing form, posted in a public place in the building in which the assembly is being held, no later than the close of business on the second day of the General Assembly or one hour noon of the day after the subsequent referral of business to the committee by the General Assembly. The location of hearing forms shall be announced during the first session of the assembly. In the event that an issue is expected to be controversial, those wishing to speak shall be asked to indicate whether they wish to speak for or against the recommendation.”

8. Continue providing support for the vision process in the following ways:
   a. Receive the mid-term report of the Vision 2020 Committee and encourage them as they continue to discern over the next two years.
   b. Establish a representative Vision Team as part of the denominational structure that is tasked with shepherding ongoing vision discernment work, including engaging in discernment practices in collaboration with the six agencies and the mid councils; bringing recommendations about that discernment to the agencies and/or General Assembly; and communicating the unified, dynamic vision to the broader church.

Rationale

Introduction

Ten years ago, the General Assembly created a committee to “review the service of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its six agencies in implementing the General Assembly’s mission directives” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 727.) This was a response to concerns about “overall effectiveness” beyond the individual agency reviews, and directed a focus on cooperation of work and duplication of services. The first “All-Agency Review” prepared for the 218th General Assembly (2010) noted that a limitation of their mandate was that “there is no formal or consolidated specification of mission directives of the GA” (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1320) and that no standards were provided for the review, “such as those that exist for the individual agency reviews” (Ibid. p. 1321). In the context of that time, the All-Agency Review Committee lifted up the need for collaboration between the agencies.

The state of the PC(USA) in the time period 2016–18 is different and rapidly changing. We claim the conviction and cling to the hope that God is doing a new thing, and we’re trying to perceive it. Who are we now and what is our calling as a Church of Jesus Christ? As Presbyterian Christians? What is our mission and what are the “mission directives” that should be directing and inspiring our faithful work? These questions loomed so large at the 222nd General Assembly (2016) that it created three separate entities to pursue them: the Way Forward Commission (“WFC”), the 20-20 Vision Committee, and the All-Agency Review Committee (“AARC”).

One of the challenges in our work was to parse the mandates and try to identify where we might work together and share resources, and where we might risk redundancy. Before the groups convened, their leaders met to discuss the whole and the parts and to commit to collaboration and communication.

We early on felt the pain of our predecessor review committee. The absence of criteria for review brought our attention to the process itself, and our hope that developing a framework would be helpful to both present and future reviews. Our process took us to the heart of our affirmations about the mission of the church. Each agency has a particular mission within the larger mission of the church, and we are called to align that work to a larger calling. There are “Great Ends of the Church” and we felt drawn to lift up great beginnings. Our Reformed and Presbyterian ethos affirms an “openness to the guidance of the Holy Spirit”—continuity and change, ecumenicity, unity in diversity, and openness. The last chapter on “The Mission of the Church” (Chapter One) ends with “a new openness.” It is our hope that our work helps us to move into the next chapter of the life of the PC(USA).

“As it participates in God’s mission, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seeks … a new openness to see both the possibilities and the perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activities in the world” (Book of Order, F-1.0404). We believe that the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) need to be supported and encouraged in living into these words of promise and challenge.

These views represented the unanimous conclusions of the AARC, which was elected by the 222nd General Assembly (2016), and has been made up of the following individuals: Deborah A. Block (moderator), Debra Avery, Eric Beene, David A. Davis, Marco A. Grimaldo, Christopher M. Mason, Claire J. Rhodes, Kelly Boubel Shriver, James N. Tse, Madison VanVeelen, and James A. Wilson. (Two other members elected to the AARC resigned before they were able to complete their service, Rachel Mihee Kim-Kort and James Rea.) In reaching these views, we held five in-person meetings and met by conference call nine times. As indicated by several joint recommendations contained in this report and in the report of the WFC, we engaged in extensive efforts to coordinate its work. We have also been in regular communication with the Vision 2020 Committee.

II. Overview of the Agencies

At the beginning of its review process, we received verbal and written summaries from the executives of each of the agencies about their specific missions and unique function in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). A few months later, to encourage reflection within the agencies about God’s call to “a new openness,” we prepared a set of questions based on the Book of Order, F-1.0404, and asked each agency to respond in writing to those questions. Following are our summaries of the functions and the responses from the agencies to our questions about “a new openness”:

The Board of Pensions (“BOP”) traces its roots back to the year 1717. According to the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the BOP is the legally responsible corporate body established under a civil charter for the purpose of administering the pension and benefits program of the PC(USA). The functions assigned by the General Assembly for the BOP include: to design and administer pension and benefits; to design and administer a program of financial assistance to help meet needs beyond the scope of pension and benefits; to receive, invest, and disburse the funds required to support the plans; and to sponsor programs for the sole benefit of the members and beneficiaries of the BOP.

- In recent years, the BOP has heard and acted on a call in the church for flexibility and affordability for benefits in multiple contexts of ministry along with a continued commitment to ministers. As a result of their new programs, there is a 19 percent increase in active members using the BOP’s plans and services.

- The BOP is committed to cooperative work with the other agencies as well as participation in ecumenical efforts to share best practices, form buying coalitions, advocacy and lobbying around faith-based benefit plans, and similar common interests.

- The BOP is exploring the possibilities of providing additional new products and programs to meet the needs of ministers and other church workers in new ministry contexts and other settings who currently are not being served. They also seek to find partners in the other agencies to engage together in bold and comprehensive strategic thinking.

The tasks of the Office of the General Assembly (“OGA”) fall under three primary ministry areas: Ecclesial and Ecumenical Ministries, Mid Council Ministries, and Church Wide Ministries. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) oversees and supports the ministry of the Stated Clerk and staff and partners with OGA in carrying out work assigned by the General Assembly. The OGA is directed by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, who is the highest ecclesial officer of the denomination, elected by the assembly to a four-year term.

- The OGA has gone through significant changes, with a major reorganization and loss of several staff positions in 2013 and the election of a new Stated Clerk in 2016. They remain committed to being faithful, accountable, transparent, present, and loving as they engage with the church.

- Listening to and learning about the hopes and struggles of mid councils has been a major focus of OGA’s work since the last General Assembly. The OGA plans to continue that work with recently hired staff charged with supporting and strengthening mid councils. They are also developing new proposals to support mid councils more fully.

- Based on its listening throughout the church, OGA is seeking to be flexible in meeting unmet needs. Examples include the initiative to address context of the St. Louis community as we prepare to hold our General Assembly there; laying out a vision to make the Presbyterian Center a place where we engage in ministry, service, and fun for the Louisville community; and challenging the church to grapple with its own racism and fear of sharing power, which impedes revival and future growth of our denomination.

Established in 1799, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (Foundation) is charged by the General Assembly with the responsibility and accountability of raising, stewarding, and distributing funds to support the mission and ministry of the PC(USA). The Foundation is understood to be the national entity specifically called to offer charitable expertise that unites and empowers Presbyterians in the work of the church. The Foundation’s umbrella includes a number of historic corporations like The Presbyterian Board of Home Mission (1862) and The Board of National Missions (1923). In addition, the Foundation operates a fully owned subsidiary called The New Covenant Trust Company established in 1998 and chartered to operate in all fifty states.

- In engaging congregations, pastors, lay leaders, mid councils, and donors in conversations about what the church needs in order to fund the mission and ministry to which God calls them, the Foundation has found it critical to emphasize God’s abundance as a counterpoint to voices in the church fearing scarcity—focusing on what we don’t have rather than what God has given us.

- The Foundation has created new areas of service and greater flexibility to meet the needs of the church and donors, such as developing their online giving system, expanding their Donor Advised Funds products, outsourcing their investment functions, and preparing church financial literacy resources. As a result of these initiatives, the Foundation is growing in its total assets and serving more people, including smaller, more diverse congregations.

- The Foundation is engaged in common projects with each of the other agencies. The Foundation still sometimes encounters challenges related to donor intent, beneficiary interest, and agency processes and policies.

The Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program (“PILP”) was established by the General Assembly in 1995. It is a non-profit member corporation empowered to sell notes or other financial instruments in order to raise capital for PC(USA) mission and to establish standards of underwriting and loan criteria that enable PC(USA) institutions to acquire or improve real property.
The PILP offers investments that provide a competitive return while participating in the growth, development, and support of congregations within the PC(USA).

- In addition to continuing its traditional products and services to provide loans for construction and capital improvements for church buildings, PILP has introduced new loan products to respond to changing needs and creative initiatives by congregations for energy efficiency, accessibility, and leasehold improvements for congregations leasing space rather than owning it.

- In the course of their work, PILP spends considerable time working with congregations to determine readiness to assume a loan and the appropriateness of proposed construction or improvements. PILP would like to deepen these consultative functions to include mentoring and guidance for all matters related to church finances.

- In the future, PILP looks to further share the stories of churches whose ministries are transformed by the investment PILP makes in them with investors. They also would like to build greater awareness of their products to enable them to serve more congregations.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency (“PMA”) serves as the mission and ministry arm of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This agency coordinates and leads the mission program of the PC(USA), working in partnership with synods, presbyteries, and sessions. It also advises and responds to the General Assembly on priorities, programs, and strategies for addressing matters of concern of the PC(USA).

- The PMA is committed to listening and responding to the whole church as it receives directives from the General Assembly, engaging in consultation with mid councils and church leaders, and partnering and consultation with mission partners. The PMA seeks to become even more inclusive, expanding translation ministries, examining practices and policies for their impact on people of color and racial diversity, and possibly bringing a single focal point for their work for the next four years on structural racism and white supremacy.

- New initiatives in the past two years to build trust and improve morale among PMA staff include the creation of a Community Life Team, all-staff events, regular all-staff meetings to share information and solicit questions, weekly worship services, mission projects, and mutual support for staff members facing hardship. The PMA Board has also engaged in a significant restructuring, resulting in a much smaller board.

- The PMA sees mission as a means to unite the whole church. They seek to bring even greater focus to their work as they balance corporate accountability with their identity as a church agency. Overcoming a scarcity mindset and creating new ways to be faithful in the ways the church is alive will reduce a feeling of competition among agency departments and staff.

The current corporate identity of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (“PPC”) was established by the 205th General Assembly (1993). PPC’s purpose is Christian nurture through the development and publishing of resources. PPC receives no mission funding and is a legally independent, self-supporting corporation dedicated to the mission of the PC(USA).

- In recent years, PPC has faced radical changes in mainline churches, decline in the number of students of religion in colleges and seminaries, and fundamental changes in the bookelling industry. It has maintained itself as a self-sustaining agency through increased operational efficiency, new technology to reduce costs, new initiatives such as children’s book publishing, new partnerships with seminaries, and ongoing assessment of the needs of their core market. More than half of the resources they publish are used by people outside the PC(USA).

- As a denominational publisher, PPC frequently publishes materials that they know will not provide them a return on their investment but provide value for the church.

- Recently, PPC has developed the PC(USA) Store as a single source website for PC(USA) resources. They have also assumed responsibility for congregational ministry publishing from PMA, which they see as an opportunity to better serve congregations looking for Christian education curricula and other resources.

In addition to these responses directly from the leadership of the agencies about their openness to God’s call, we gathered reflections from mid council leaders about the work of the agencies and their interactions with mid councils and congregations. Some leaders gave specific examples about very positive interactions with the agencies. For instance, a presbytery executive from Florida reported that all six of the agencies took the initiative to contact the presbytery within days of Hurricane Irma. All of the agencies offered specific forms of help to the presbytery and its congregations related to their unique mission and work.

Other mid council leaders shared different perceptions of the agencies. Some still shared their perception of siloing among the agencies, with little coordination of communications, projects, and programs. Similarly, some spoke of branding confusion and the difficulty for mid council and congregation leaders to understand the distinctiveness of the agencies. Some mid council leaders spoke of not enough direct communication with agencies: for instance, they had examples of times when agencies hosted events in their geographic bounds without notifying the mid council, or of fundraising activities that circumvent the mid council leadership to go directly to congregations and individual members of those congregations. Some mid council leaders also spoke of inefficient communication, with a constant need for reporting and data sharing with multiple agencies.

While we decided not to do a survey, we received the Moderator’s report as well as the OGA report, both of which were before the Way Forward Committee at the 222nd General Assembly (2016). Throughout our process, we have valued and sought input from people connected with the church and the groups who are not a part of the agencies. Not all of the groups to which we reached out responded. We sought the advice of the various racial ethnic caucus leaders related to their engagement with the PMA, the OGA, and the other four agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We heard from the Reverend Tony Aja of the National Hispanic/Latino Caucus and the Reverend Takako Terino of the National Asian Presbyterian Council. While these two responses are far from representative of all of the racial ethnic caucuses, they nonetheless inform our thinking.

- Both interviews highlighted concerns about language, communications, and translations. They expressed the challenge faced by clergy and lay leaders in communicating with agency staff in their own language. The Hispanic caucus highlights the need for more Spanish speakers in church agencies and the Asian Council expressed a need for helping clergy gain or strengthen their English skills.

- Both interviews commented on what they perceived as a lack of connection with some or several of the Presbyterian agencies.

We heard similar responses in conversations with some staff of the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministry areas. We take these responses as reminders that there is still much work to be done within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and commend to the whole church, a commitment to apply a racial equity lens as we each do our part in service to Christ.

In our interactions with the agencies during the process of review, it has found the agency staff to be helpful and responsive. We want to give special attention and affirmation of the work and hope of agencies to lead the church in addressing white privilege and racism.

III. Merging the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Would Not Serve the Denomination

Our initial reviews of all six agencies revealed that the relationship between the PMA and the OGA surfaced as a dominant theme to be addressed. Particularly, there were recurring questions about the possibilities, feasibility, and/or desirability of a merger between the two agencies.

We looked in-depth into the issues concerning the PMA and the OGA, their mission and mandates. Both agencies are staffed by dedicated people who have demonstrated faithfulness in their work over the years, but also acknowledged their frustrations, tensions, and uncertainties in carrying out their duties because of the recurring conversations about a possible merger.

We, however, have seen convincing evidence that the PMA and the OGA have distinctly different mandates and as such, do their work differently, reflecting the message in 1 Corinthians 12:4–5, “Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit and there are varieties of service, but the same Lord.”

We concluded that any merger of the PMA and OGA would not be in the best interest of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at this time. With this in mind, we supported a “no merger” recommendation in conjunction with the Way Forward Committee (WFC). It was felt that this decision would

- help clear up the uncertainties and tensions of staff in the two agencies;
- give the two agencies the freedom to concentrate on working on important tasks within their mandate without having to put out efforts to constantly address issues concerning a possible merger between the OGA and PMA;
- provide the members of the General Assembly with essential information to better guide future decisions for the church as a whole.

IV. Continuing Conversations

This review process identified concerns and issues beyond the scope of its work that need to be addressed in ongoing processes:

Communications. We and the WFC continue to engage with communication staff and agency executives to refine a process to guide changes to denominational communication plans and vehicles. Related projects include (1) an agency-wide communication plan; (2) a unified style/brand guide; (3) a unified and updated web presence and use of social media; (4) clarification and definition of roles, responsibility, and authority within the communication departments.
Property and facilities usage. All six agencies are engaged in discussions about the use of the building at 100 Witherspoon Street and other PC(USA) properties. How can our buildings be used as instruments of our mission? How do the locations of our agencies contribute to or detract from collaborative work, cooperative culture, and common service to the PC(USA)?

V. Rationale for Specific Recommendations

A. Recommendation 1

Recommendation 1. of this report urges that the agencies consider six questions arising from the Book of Order, F-1.0404, in setting their budgets and work plans in the coming years. As all of the recommendations in this report reflect, we believe deeply that the call to a new openness set forth in F-1.0404 speaks to the particular needs and calling of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in this time and place. In our discernment, it became clear that we should center our assessments and focus our recommendations around the following:

- A new openness to the sovereign activity of God in the Church and in the world.
- A new openness in its own membership.
- A new openness to see both the possibilities and perils of institutional forms.
- A new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the church.”

- We believe that this provides significant focus while at the same time offering enough flexibility and adaptability as the Spirit continues to shape our shared future.

We recognize, however, that the focus on F-1.0404 may not always be the appropriate focus of the denomination and its agencies. Accordingly, it has communicated to the 2020 Task Force its recommendation that their final report suggests a process for regular and ongoing discernment for the denomination and its agencies.

B. Recommendation 2

1. Recommendation 2.a. Focus of Next All-Agency Review. In the course of its work, we concluded that the call to a new openness in Book of Order, F-1.0404, provided a useful framework for review of the agencies in light of the challenges that they currently face. We have used this lens as it has sought to discern the meaning of its charge to review the agencies with respect to their effectiveness in implementing the General Assembly’s mission directives. We believe that continuity in the application of this focus of the all-agency review will lead to continuity in the review process and a useful framework for assessing the agencies in light of the current recommendation of ourselves and the WFC.

2. Recommendation 2.b. Revision of the agency review policy. In the course of its work, we observed that the current process for individual agency review could be streamlined and improved. In particular, we concluded that mandating a self-study in the course of agency review often does not create a benefit to the review process commensurate with the financial and other cost of such self-studies. If an agency or review committee determines such a self-study justifies the cost, they remain free to incorporate such a process in the review, but mandating such a self-study does not seem appropriate to us. We also concluded that the review cycle should be streamlined and made more efficient by a new pattern for review. Thus, instead of two agencies being reviewed each General Assembly over a six-year cycle, with a potential hiatus at the end of that cycle for an all-agency review (leading in effect to an eight-year cycle), we propose that three agencies be reviewed in each of the first two General Assemblies in a six-year cycle, and then in the final assembly of the cycle an all-agency review would occur. We further propose that a single committee (perhaps divided into subgroups) conduct the review in order to reduce costs and increase consistency in the process. Because the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., all require significant review of financial structures and fiduciary and regulatory duties, we believe it would also increase the effectiveness of reviews to group these three agencies together for review. Finally, the proposed amendments to the policy include the all-agency review process in the policy, given our view that an integrated review process would benefit the church.

Further, we concluded that the criteria for the review of individual agencies should be revised and that clear criteria for the future all-agency review be developed. The lack of clear standards for the all-agency review process was not helpful to us, and caused us to struggle with its charge as it set out to complete its work. At the same time, we believe that the standards for both individual agency review and for the all-agency review process would benefit greatly from the input of the members of the WFC. Therefore, we are recommending that the task of revising and clarifying these criteria be assigned to the Moving Forward Implementation Commission that both the WFC and we recommend be created by the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

3. Recommendation 2.c.: A “Sabbatical” in the Review Process. The engagement required of staff in simultaneously responding to and interacting with the WFC and us has been immense. Moreover, the Moving Forward Implementation Commission that both the WFC and we recommend be created by the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to assist in implementing these recommendations, as well as the internal work of the agencies required by such implementation efforts, will demand significant resources of the agencies. Accordingly, we are recommending that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) delay the beginning of the next cycle of review of the agencies to allow the agencies to focus on implementation of these recommendations as well as the work already assigned them.

C. Recommendation 3

Along with the Way Forward Commission, we believe that the changes we have proposed in our review are complex enough, and the need for them is serious enough, that the General Assembly would benefit from appointing a group to provide support and accountability to the agencies in implementing the recommendations.

D. Recommendation 4

It is in the interest of good stewardship that the PC(USA) and its agencies make use of shared services as appropriate. We worked with members of the WFC in exploring better ways of sharing services between agencies. That work continues. We believe that the principle set forth in Recommendation 4 should guide that process, now and in the future.

We have not found that that the most effective delivery of shared services is achieved by having all shared services under the control of one agency or entity. Even when a service is shared, involvement and expertise from within each agency is required for the services to meet expectations and needs.

We recommend that this perspective on the nature of shared services inform the work of future agency reviews when considering the effectiveness of services that cut across departments within an agency and across agencies as well.

E. Recommendation 5

We have significant concern regarding the long-term sustainability of the per capita funding model, especially as it impacts the work of the OGA as the only agency primarily dependent on per capita funds. With the exception of some fundraising by the Presbyterian Historical Society to support its work, the constitutional office and services of OGA are completely dependent on diminishing per capita dollars. The preservation and future of such services should be the concern of the whole church and of all the agencies. We affirm the creativity, skill, and thought of staff members throughout all of the agencies and seek to engage those collective resources on this pressing issue confronting the church. It recommends a self-study by all the agencies to address this issue.

F. Recommendation 6

As highlighted above, F-1.0404 reminds our denomination that “[a]s it participates in God’s mission,” the church should seek “a new openness to see both the possibilities and the perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activities in the world.” This openness to the work of the Spirit has inspired this recommendation concerning “A Corp.”

In every generation, Presbyterians have wondered whether the church was becoming too corporate. As we addressed the concerns lifted up by previous reviews and as we did our own analysis regarding “A Corp,” we also heard this concern. The Book of Order, at G-4.0101, requires each council above the congregation to incorporate if it is legally possible. Indeed, as discussed below, the denomination has had a corporation to support its work since the 18th century. In evaluating the faithful operation of the denomination and its agencies, therefore, it is simply not possible to act as if the corporate form of the General Assembly does not exist. Rather, the focus must be on whether the form of the corporation is faithfully serving the church. We concluded that the current form of governance of the corporation, and particularly its complete control by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (“PMAB”), is not serving well the work of the whole church. In fact, it is one of the sources of inefficiencies and, at times, problematic functioning within the PMA.

The Review Committee for the PMA in 2016 summarized its findings as follows: “Though the PMA has produced good work, it is evident that there are significant weaknesses in a number of areas, including: strategic decision-making and priority-setting; organizational culture and work environment; and collaborative efforts with other General Assembly agencies” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 239). We found that these significant weaknesses remain. We have observed that one of the sources of these significant weaknesses is a board that is not effective at handling corporate governance functions and that focuses far more of its energy on corporate matters than on implementing the mission direction of the church. Many of the distractions that have directly hindered the mission work of the denomination—the lack of transparency regarding the termination of employees involved with 1001 Worshiping Communities, the long absence of a permanent executive director, the opaque use of reserve funds, and disputes regarding shared services—have arisen because of the collision between the role members of PMAB as directors of the corporation and their more important function of implementing the mission directives of the General Assembly.

We have been transparent in our work regarding “A Corp.” Discussions of “A Corp.” in open session began at our meeting on May 2nd and were publicly reported. Representatives of our committee and the WFC reached out to representatives of the Governance Task Force of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board in October 2017 to discuss “A Corp.” with them. We had several subsequent discussions with PMAB representatives exclusively focused on “A Corp.” issues. The moderator and vice moderator of our committee met with and discussed “A Corp.” issues both with the chair of PMAB and with other PMAB representatives as well. In addition, we discussed “A Corp.” issues with COGA and its leadership several times in 2017, as we did with the leadership of each of the other agencies of the church—and others, both in 2017 and at the beginning of 2018. We reviewed a large number of documents, including the history of “A Corp.” (which dates to the late 18th century), its formation and governance documents and the changes in them from 1983 forward, the audited financials of “A Corp.” for multiple years, the budgets submitted by PMA, minutes of PMAB and “A Corp.” meetings and committee meetings for a number of years, to the extent they existed. We retained independent legal counsel to help us with Pennsylvania law issues and advise us on issues such as whether a “deliverance” was needed to change the board of directors of the corporation (we have not proposed one) and whether “A Corp.” could delegate to PMA daily control of its own functions, such as personnel activities (we proposed such delegation).

From all of this, our conclusion is clear: the best way to move past a corporate mentality in the mission agency is to free the mission agency to do mission, and reconstitute the board of “A Corp.” with broad agency representation to ensure sound oversight of the existing corporate entity.

“A Corp.” itself is a direct successor (along with the Foundation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [the “Foundation”]) to the original 18th century corporation of our denomination. Its articles of incorporation direct “A Corp.” “[t]o be an integrated auxiliary and a part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and to act as the principal corporation which the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has caused to be formed pursuant to ... the Form of Government of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to receive, hold, and transfer property and to facilitate the management of its corporate affairs, as affirmed and declared by the 198th General Assembly (1986) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

In this role, “A Corp.” holds almost all of the property and assets of the denomination not held by the Foundation. (Assets held by the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [the “Board of Pensions”]) are not denominational assets, but assets for the benefit of members of the benefit plans offered by that board.) In general, the Foundation holds long-term assets. “A Corp.” holds beneficial interests in some Foundation assets, handles the denomination’s current operating funds, and owns the denomination’s operating assets (such as 100 Witherspoon Street in Louisville, Kentucky). “A Corp.” provides the secular support—such as employment, contracting, and handling of funds—needed by the Presbyterian Mission Agency (“PMA”) and the Office of the General Assembly (“OGA”), which are unincorporated ecclesiastical entities (as is the General Assembly). “A Corp.” also works with the four other PC(USA) agencies: the Foundation, the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

There is a great deal of history behind “A Corp.,” but we believe its appropriate role is clear. The General Assembly, directly representing all the people and councils of the church, should discern and announce theological positions, define mission, set mission priorities, and approve targets (both of income and expense) to accomplish those things. The six agencies of the General Assembly should implement these high-level decisions and support the people and councils of the church in carrying them out. “A Corp.” should help support the agencies in these efforts, particularly the two most ecclesiastical of them, PMA and OGA.

We believe the governance of “A Corp.” should reflect this role. Its governance structure—its board of directors and officers—currently does not.

• The “A Corp.” board currently has forty voting members. Although its own governance task force has recommended reducing that number over time, even if that occurs, the number would remain twenty or more, perhaps reflecting the multiplicity of PMA mission roles.

• All forty are from the PMA board of directors—in effect, the boards are the same.

• The Executive Director of PMA is automatically the President of “A Corp.”

• There is confusion between PMA’s mission role and the operation of “A Corp.” by PMA’s board members.

• There is distrust over whether services provided by “A Corp.” are provided fairly for the benefit of other agencies, particularly OGA, because of this confusion.

• The opportunity for coordination of agency activity through “A Corp.” has not been realized.

• The “A Corp.” board is far too large to carry out its duties effectively.

Our joint recommendation with the WFC represents a better way to govern “A Corp.” It would allow “A Corp.” to carry out its corporate functions to support the agencies of the church, not to control those agencies’ own missions, or favor only one agency’s preferences. “A Corp.” would receive no additional powers from these changes in board composition and selection of the President. (“A Corp.” would, for example, still have no authority to prescribe mission for PMA.) Importantly, however, these changes would eliminate the confusion between “A Corp.” and PMA. They would allow PMA to focus on mission. They would allow “A Corp.” to manage itself efficiently. They would reduce mistrust over the fair provision of “A Corp.” services to agencies, particularly as between OGA and PMA. They would provide a better platform for interagency cooperation.

Finally, we have sought to ensure that the smaller board of “A Corp.” will still be broadly representative of the diversity of our denomination. We recommend the following three steps to achieve this goal: (1) Nominating members by existing, already diverse agencies assuring not only expertise, but diversity; (2) provide seats nominated by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns; and (3) provide for three, at-large seats, selected with input from the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

These changes would also not be unduly disruptive. They would not require any change in the ownership of any assets or liabilities. They would not require—although they could lead to—any personnel changes other than a new determination of who should be the president of “A Corp.” They would not preclude other changes that this committee or the Way Forward Commission might want to recommend or pursue in other areas.

We further urge the General Assembly to support the change in the composition of the “A Corp.” board with several additional actions to support the function of the new composition:

Timing of the process (Way Forward Recommendations 1.a. and 1.b.): These recommendations are to effect the changes of governance specified in the Way Forward Commission’s Recommendation 1.c. in good order in the time frames provided.

Changes to the Bylaws of “A Corp.” (Way Forward Recommendation 1.c.) This is the principal recommendation to accomplish the changes to the governance of “A Corp.” that both we and the Way Forward Commission recommend.

Making the President of “A Corp.” an ex officio member of each agency’s board (Way Forward Recommendation 1.d.): This recommendation would help emphasize the cooperative nature of the relationship between “A Corp.” and the church’s six current agencies while also underscoring (by the absence of vote) that “A Corp.” does not control those agencies.

Implementing Resolutions by the Agencies (Way Forward Recommendation 1.e.): The implementing resolutions directed by this recommendation would simply require the existing agencies of the church to recognize the new governance structure for “A Corp.” The agencies are in the best position to define the particular language they may need to manage their own recommendations for who should serve on the Board of “A Corp.,” for example.

Further Implementing Recommendation (Way Forward Recommendation 1.f.): This recommendation is to assist in implementation in the short term of the changes recommended elsewhere in the Way Forward Commission’s Recommendations 1. through 1.g. It is designed to fit with the Way Forward Commission’s Recommendation 3. if the General Assembly so desires.

Review of “A Corp.” (Way Forward Recommendation 1.g.): This recommendation is to ensure initial review by the General Assembly of “A Corp.” following the governance changes in “A Corp.” recommended by the Way Forward Commission in which we concur and then for the General Assembly to determine how often in the future separate review of “A Corp.” is needed.

G. Recommendation 7

In their reports to us, several of the six agencies shared their concern that recent General Assemblies have discussed and approved overtures that directly impact their work without sufficient consultation with those agencies. For example, at the 222nd General Assembly (2016), the cost of the proposed change back to the language of “ministers of the Word and Sacrament” from “teaching elders” in the Book of Order was reported to the commissioners before they voted. However, that cost did not factor in the significant cost of changing documents, forms, and other printed materials at the other agencies. The Board of Pensions alone had almost $100,000 in costs to make the change. As the General Assemblies considered policies about investments in companies profiting from the conflict in Israel and Palestine, several agencies had to devote significant resources without those impacts on their work being reported to the General Assembly. They were very willing to undertake the work, but the costs were not factored into the overall costs of those policy decisions.

We believe that the amendments to the Standing Rules of the General Assembly proposed will allow assembly committees to better understand the impact of business they consider, particularly when presented with commissioners’ resolutions, while still allowing assembly committees full freedom in its consideration of such business.

H. Recommendation 8

We believe a vision should

- bring unity and purpose;
- provide direction and focus;
- establish a basis for trust;
undergird strategic decision-making processes;

• offer a path for alignment of staffing and programmatic choices; and

• inspire people to get involved.

Because we are in a time when contextual dynamics are continually changing, attending to vision implementation and engaging in ongoing vision discernment and strategic alignment is essential if we are to live fully into the new openness to which we are called.

We propose adding a broadly representative team with specific expertise in vision and strategy work, which would serve as the “resident experts” related to the vision of the church and which would be given the authority to do the following:

1. Ensure that the vision is a constant focal point of the work of the church.

2. Ground in the theological themes of “A New Openness” (Book of Order, F-1.0404).

3. Share the vision with the larger church and gather “success stories” that connect the church’s work to the vision.

4. Lead discernment processes throughout the church that not only test the current vision for clarity and relevance but also provide opportunities to listen more broadly in the different ministry contexts of the PC(USA).

5. Provide advice to the agencies regarding continuity of vision and the connection between vision, mission directives, and new programming proposals.

Appendix A

STANDARDS FOR REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY AGENCIES

PURPOSE

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to the understanding that ‘the unity of the Church is a gift of its Lord and finds expression in its faithfulness to the mission to which Christ calls it’ (G-4.0201). The basic principles of Presbyterian polity include the responsibility of a higher governing body to review those ministries for which it is accountable (G.-4.0301f). The purpose of the review process is to provide an equitable evaluation of the ministry of the agencies of the General Assembly. The review will focus on the quality of the relationship of the agencies’ ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the agencies’ collaborative efforts with other agencies, and the quality of the agencies’ program based on the standards for review.

THE ROLE, TIMING OF THE PROCESS AND FORMATION OF THE REVIEW COMMITTEES

The review process for General Assembly agencies occurs over the cycle of three General Assemblies. In the first assembly of the cycle, a committee will report its review of the work of the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. In the second assembly of the cycle, a committee will report its review of the work of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of the General Assembly, and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. In the third assembly of the cycle, a committee will report its review of the effectiveness of the six agencies and other governing bodies in working collaboratively to implement the General Assembly’s mission directives.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee will nominate to each meeting of the General Assembly for election two appropriate committees and a moderators for each committee to conduct the review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly assigned based on the six-year schedule described above. The agency review committee’s responsibility is to provide an objective report to the General Assembly as to the agency’s compliance to the standards of review. The agency review committee may provide advice on areas of program improvement. The agency review committee’s role will be to examine the agency’s church relations, its policies and practice, history of collaboration with other agencies, and its program effectiveness. The agency review committee will review the agency’s self-study report and other documents. It will visit the agency and talk personally with leadership staff and the governing board or committee. The agency review committee is to conduct its work within the context of the General Assembly’s concern for the strong vital connections within the agencies of the General Assembly and the whole church. The governing board of the agency is responsible for the internal management of the agency and its operational details. The agency review committee’s role is to strengthen the bonds of the agencies to the General Assembly, the essential mission of the church, and the basic accountability of the governing board and executive leadership of the agency to the PC(USA). The agency review committee should celebrate with the whole church the successful ministries of the agency it is reviewing, and to consult with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding representation of employees. The agency review committee will report to the General Assembly through the General Assembly committee to which the agency reports.

STAFFING AND FUNDING

The Office of the General Assembly will provide adequate staffing for the agency review committee to complete its task. Staffing will be provided by the Presbyterian Mission Agency in the year the Office of the General Assembly an agency that is not being reviewed. The funding for the review process will be paid from per capita income.
A manual will be maintained to provide guidance in the review process to the agency review committee and the agencies. The manual will contain information on the process for review self-study by the agency, the visit with the agency, and the report format for the agency review committee. The format will outline the opportunities for dialogue between the agency review committee and the agency in preparation of the final report. The manual will provide guidance for the whole agency review committee on its organization and the role of individual members in the review process.

STANDARDS CRITERIA FOR REVIEW OF INDIVIDUAL AGENCIES

A. Church Relatedness

1. Each agency was created by the church, and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. The agency is expected to have the expertise necessary to accomplish the work it has been assigned, and is also expected to exhibit a constant awareness of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

2. The basic work, programs, and services of the agency demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The agency should exhibit leadership in guiding the church in its engagement with the work and resources in which the agency acts as the church’s expert.

3. When appropriate, printed materials of the agency clearly identify the agency as a part of the PC(USA).

4. The agency honors the policy statements of the General Assembly of the PC(USA) and the Constitution.

5. The agency includes in its administrative officers, and in its governing board in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, persons who understand and respect the relationship with the PC(USA).

6. The agency provides responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

7. The agency is actively working to open wide the doors of the church to God’s amazing diversity, welcoming all ages and all expressions of race, class, gender, and sexual orientation in striving to increase the membership of our denomination and achieve the great ends of the church.

B. Policies and Program Effectiveness

1. The agency understands that its responsibility is to manage its assets for the good of the whole of the PC(USA).

2. The governing board is properly constituted, clearly identified, and fully conversant with (a) the mission of the agency, (b) the current overall condition of the agency, (c) its specific responsibilities as directors, (d) the legal relationship of the agency to the church, and (e) its relationship to the president or chief officer.

3. The agency exhibits full compliance with all appropriate external regulatory and accrediting agencies, including consultation and review with the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding principles of participation and representation in the employment of personnel, and conformity with ‘A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action’ or subsequent guidelines.

4. An annual audit of the financial affairs of the agency is conducted by qualified and disinterested parties.

5. The governing board of the agency has a process for the selection and review of its chief officer or president.

6. The president or chief officer and the governing board have policies and procedures by which they assure that the agency staff hold the necessary and appropriate skills, licenses, and experience to make it reasonable to anticipate that they can perform their work satisfactorily and a functioning policy with expectations of staff development.

7. The agency has in place and operating a long-range and short-range planning process and a process for measuring its delivery of services and of monitoring the effectiveness of those services with its constituencies.

8. The agency exhibits an effective strategy for producing high-quality communication with its constituencies.

9. The agency is currently structured to face effectively the challenges of the future and demonstrates appropriate attention to current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

C. Collaboration

1. The agency presses beyond communication and consultation to genuine collaboration and, where appropriate and/or directed by General Assembly, shares agendas and work with other agencies toward fulfillment of shared goals.

2. The agency maintains open and regular communication with, and provides timely and appropriate access to information to, other agencies and PC(USA) constituencies, including mid council bodies.

3. The agency has conducted an evaluation of the potential gains and risks associated with collaborative endeavors with other agencies whenever new programs are initiated.
4. The agency seeks pragmatic solutions to operational challenges by relying on the assets, resources, and strengths of other agencies.

CRITERIA FOR REVIEW OF THE COLLECTIVE WORK OF THE AGENCIES

The review of the whole of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its six agencies shall focus broadly on the effectiveness of the six agencies and other councils in working collaboratively to implement the General Assembly’s mission directives.

The focus in reviewing the effectiveness of the agencies and other councils with respect to their effectiveness in implementing the General Assembly’s mission directives shall be on the following areas:

1. The effectiveness of and obstacles to collaboration between the agencies;
2. The accountability of the agencies to the General Assembly and to one another;
3. The agencies’ responses to the General Assembly’s mission directives, individually and collectively, in light of the call to a new openness in Book of Order, F-1.0404;
4. The stewardship and effective use of resources by the agencies, individually and collectively;
5. Their work to open wide the doors of the church to God’s amazing diversity, welcoming all ages and all expressions of race, class, gender, and sexual orientation in striving to increase the membership of our denomination and achieve the great ends of the church.

ACSWP ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-04

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-04—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 4-04 from the All Agency Review Committee supports the Way Forward Commission recommendation that the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board’s corporate functions be set within a new “A Corporation” and proposes changes in the review process for agencies that reduce the role of self-study.

The ACSWP advises approval of Item 4-04 as amended:

1. Amend Recommendation 2.b. as follows: [Text to be added is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

   “b. Approve the revisions to the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies attached as Appendix A and direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to prepare revisions to Section IV.D.1. of the Organization for Mission consistent with the revision to the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies. [Authorize the board of each agency reviewed to respond to its review to the General Assembly at which its review is presented and to the all agency review on the third General Assembly of the cycle.]”

2. Strike Recommendation 6. [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets.]

   “[6. [Note from the All-Agency Review Committee: The All-Agency Review Committee concurs with and urges approval of Recommendations 1.a. through 1.i. of the Way Forward Commission to free the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to focus on setting and executing the mission direction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by changing the bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, and taking the other steps recommended by the Way Forward Commission in its recommendations.]]”

3. Amend Recommendation 8.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

   “b. [Establish a representative Vision Team as part of the denominational structure that is tasked with shepherding] [Direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to focus] ongoing vision discernment work, including engaging in [public theological consultations and] discernment practices in collaboration with the [six] [ten seminaries, four other] agencies and the mid councils; bringing recommendations about that discernment to the agencies and/or General Assembly; and communicating the unified, dynamic vision to the broader church.”

The All Agency Review Committee has worked hard and sought “a new openness” as a guiding principle for their work. Here we comment first on their Recommendation 6, which we advise be deleted entirely, and then provide explanation for the amendments we recommend to Recommendations 2.b and 8.b.

Regarding Recommendation 6, for the theological and practical reasons expressed in our Advice & Counsel memorandum on Item 4-03, (the Report of the Way Forward Commission), we believe that establishing a new and separate corporate configuration does not solve the problem of an overly corporate emphasis in the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA). The main problems have been in the area of leadership; adding a layer of administration, and one not covered by the review amendments the All Agency Review Committee proposes, does not seem wise or warranted.
Regarding Recommendation 2.b. The All Agency Review Committee recommends down playing or making optional the “self-study” approach that marked previous reviews, which were staffed on a procedural basis by the Office of the General Assembly. Their proposals recommend using staff of other agencies and to some degree combining the reviews of three agencies at a time; the Board of Pensions, Foundation, and Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., one General Assembly; the Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Mission Agency, and Westminster/JohnKnox publishing the next; and on the third looking at all six together. The idea of the cycle has merit. Yet if one is to be reviewed by persons appointed (by whom?) from other agencies (which?) when three agencies of either finance or mission are grouped together, the provision we recommend is to help ensure that no single agency has aspects of its work misinterpreted or even missed by persons unfamiliar with the work under review. As for the seventh corporate entity proposed by Way Forward Commission, the nine- to eleven-member separate board for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (the “A Corp”), it appears to be exempt from review; another reason to spare the expense of creating it.

To some degree, the paired reports of the Way Forward Commission and All Agency Review Committee illustrate the difficulties in reviewing the six agencies at once, especially when one is in leadership transition. The All Agency Review Committee appears to have focused much of its attention on the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA), based in part on the PMA’s critical agency review to the 222nd General Assembly (2016). Thus, the PMA is uniquely to be stripped of its board and put under effective oversight of an entity (“A Corp”) comprised largely of representatives from other agencies, whose operations are not affected by the decisions they make. In “Family Systems” therapy terms, the PMA is the “sick patient,” while any sickness of the overall system goes largely undiagnosed.

Recommendation 8.b. To the extent that lack of vision for the church’s mission is a diagnosed problem shared by the agencies, the All-Agency Review Committee is right to pick up on it. They do not strengthen or help renew our agencies, however, by adding a new and undefined body with an extremely broad mandate. Both the Office of the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency have management issues, but vision is a particular strength of the Stated Clerk and we hope will also be present in a new PMA leader. In our view, as a committee and staff elected from across the church, what the All-Agency Review Committee proposes should be a challenge to the ecclesial and mission bodies that already exist and to their leadership. Both have trained staff and gifted and dedicated board members. The four other agencies have specialized roles that will also be present in a new PMA leader. In our view, as a committee and staff elected from across the church, what the All-Agency Review Committee proposes should be a challenge to the ecclesial and mission bodies that already exist and to their leadership. Both have trained staff and gifted and dedicated board members. The four other agencies have specialized roles that should be taken into account, but mission will not be helped by another body on top of 2020 Vision. Further, we believe that the churchwide conversation and discernment needed would benefit greatly from the seminars being present in consultations at COGA and PMAB meetings, adding depth to the deliberations. Thus, the work the All-Agency Review Committee identifies is larger than the vehicle they (loosely) propose, and is properly the task of COGA and PMA.

Among the topics not addressed by the All-Agency Review Committee are the considerable differences between the “rich” and “poor” agencies of the assembly. Clearly security of funding streams affects compensation levels and internal cultures, as can be seen in the General Assembly Minutes, Part II, Section VIII, which lists the salaries and benefits of all General Assembly, synod, and presbytery staff. (We challenge those synods and presbyteries withholding their information from the larger church). There is also the usual, virtual silence about possible ecumenical cooperation and learning from the Full Communion relationships we have (with the United Church of Christ, the Reformed Church in America, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America).

Commissioners have complex material to sift through. A sermon by retired presbytery executive, Gary Skinner, may apply. He spoke of the church over time inventing many new institutional bodies, and while being less able to make existing ones work well or phase out the outdated. Was the church concentrating too much on imagining “new wineskins” and not focusing on the wine itself? May Christ forgive us if we tithe mint and cumin and forget the weightier matters of the law.

It may be the changes proposed by the All-Agency Review Committee will help our church sort out the wineskins. Genuine newness, however, often cannot be measured in institutional or even movement terms.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-04

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-04—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 04-04.

ACREC appreciates the call to the six agencies to be open to new ways of supporting and imagining ministry. However, the parameters need to be distilled and clarified, as they are too broad. ACREC also has concerns that there is appropriate representation when determining parameters.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-04

Comment on Item 04-04—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

COGA affirms with great thanks to the All Agency Review Committee’s hard and faithful work, the recommendations within Item 04-04. We are grateful for their dedication, thoughtful questions, and helpful recommendations. In particular, we are excited by the new way in which the General Assembly might engage with commissioners’ resolutions through an open and transparent process and find this recommendation to be transformative for the ways business is transacted at the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consists of fifteen elected members and was created “to carry out the assembly’s oversight of the Stated Clerk . . . ” (Organization for Mission, IV.C.2.). COGA regularly reviews the work of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly.

FOUNDATION COMMENT ON ITEM 04-04

Comment on Item 04-04—From the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (Foundation).

The Presbyterian Foundation welcomes new possibilities that might make more efficient and effective the collective work of the Presbyterian Church (USA) national agencies. The Foundation believes in an approach to Shared Services, which is helpful to the mission of all participating agencies while harming none of them.

The Foundation also believes it has an interest in having representation and leadership of a reconfigured “A Corp” board, as the “A Corp” is granted a beneficial interest in funds titled to and held by the Foundation.

The Foundation underscores, for the good of the whole church, certain essential, long-held parameters and Presbyterian values underlying the Deliverance. These include, among others, that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to acknowledge the Presbyterian Foundation in its role and responsibilities as Fiduciary and Trustee for donors—past, present, and future—in order to assure those donors that their funds will be used for the mission of Jesus Christ, in accordance with their intended purposes.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-04

Comment on Item 04-04—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) advises amending the last bulleted item of Recommendation 1 to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

• What will the PC(USA) do to open wide the doors of the church to God’s amazing diversity, welcoming all ages and abilities, all expressions of race, class, gender, and sexual orientation in striving to increase the membership of our denomination and achieve the great ends of the church?”

The GACOR receives data reports annually from every agency, reports to General Assembly in summary, and does a deep analysis of employment and supplier diversity benchmarks and the individual agency contexts when assembly reviews of an agency are scheduled. The GACOR regularly consults with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) on slates selected through their nomination, elected by the assembly. The GACOR is not yet consulted on each agency board’s slates.
Only those who have at-large members elected through the GA Nominating Committee are reviewed at this time. It would be helpful to have access to review all board slates and have opportunity to give advice into those processes.

The changes to the schedule for review impact GACOR in its own reviews of agencies. As the initial review of benchmarks and evaluating labor pool, workforce, and supplier context require more work and the first round has not yet been completed, GACOR is concerned about completing three agency reviews (first round) in an assembly cycle. The committee was not consulted on the change in review schedule until after the business item was submitted. The GACOR will need to adjust its plan to accomplish this additional work, suggesting that there will be financial implications to relate with an additional agency each cycle as well as sufficient meeting time to accomplish these tasks along with the other work assigned.

In its own self-study preparing for review by this assembly, the GACOR requested being restored to the sixteen members it had for most of its existence. In addition to that shift, the number of meetings of the committee in years it is reviewing agencies may also need to adjust. It is hoped these concerns are supported adequately so the reviews can happen as the assembly is considering.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

PMA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-04, Recommendation 6.

Comment on Item 04-04, Recommendation 6.—From the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA).

Introduction

In forming the Way Forward Commission, the 222nd General Assembly (2016) gave a clear mandate for its work: “study and identify a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA)” (Minutes, 2016, Part I,
Unfortunately, the work and recommendations of the commission fall short of this mandate. Rather than paint a picture of a new structure that models a vision of how the work of the national agencies cohere, relate to congregations, and further the mission of the church, Way Forward focused on specific technical changes that:

- Move us toward a more corporate model of church governance that is less inclusive;
- Add complexity to a system that is in need of simplification (more boards, more commissions, more committees);
- Lack a church-wide perspective for ensuring all General Assembly agencies act in unison as one church;
- Fail to address a critical issue—how can our national structure and programs meet the changing needs of congregations (while congregational focus was highlighted by Way Forward in their interim report—it is mostly missing in the final recommendations).

We believe better models are available, but developing new solutions first requires development of an overarching vision. Corporate forms would naturally flow from this vision.

The comments that follow address the recommendations made by Way Forward (of which only one recommendation addresses the structure of the national church).

Recommendation 1: Changes to Presbyterian Mission Agency Governance

This recommendation was made jointly by the Way Forward Commission (WFC) and the All Agency Review Committee (AARC). In short, the recommendation separates mission and administration—establishing a separate board to govern administration and other corporate functions.

We cannot support this proposal in its entirety in current form until vital questions are answered. We affirm this proposal in two respects: (1) we believe that the PMA should step away from the role of providing common administrative services; (2) we believe that A Corp board membership would benefit from the inclusion of additional non-PMA voices. While the PMAB has worked imperfectly in the past, we do have some experience in managing the complexities of mission and administration that we hope to contribute in order to address implementation concerns and possible unanticipated consequences of this proposed structure.

We have significant concerns about the overall viability of the proposal. In many ways, it harkens back to a governance model that existed between reunion and 1993 and resulted in conflicts over funding and control. In a 1993 restructure, the denomination moved to a unicameral model to minimize the divide between mission and corporate decisions. The predecessor to PMAB, the General Assembly Council, was given overall responsibility for governance, bringing mission, money, and administration to a common table. While issues remain, they are largely around finding the right balance between corporate/administrative functions and missional priorities; separating oversight and governance will further complicate finding that balance. It will also add bureaucracy and additional expense to the current system. This approach has been tried before and it did not work.

Since the 1993 restructure, the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), which is part of the same corporation as PMA, has gained increasing independence and is now seen as a separate agency (in 1993, OGA was a part of the General Assembly Council). Any new or revised governance model must acknowledge that reality and determine how (or if) a shared corporate identity can be jointly governed by two independent organizations. The recommendation by the WFC and the AARC is partially in response to this reality.

Aside from broad concerns about the viability of this recommendation, the details (or lack of details) are even more problematic.

1. Nature and Role of New Entity—What Is It?

We have been assured that this new entity is not a 7th agency. It has been described in different ways, but primarily as a “utility” that will provide administrative services for PMA, OGA, and any other General Assembly agency that chooses to participate. Only PMA and OGA are mandated to use the services of this utility—it is an option for other agencies.

But, based on language in Appendices 10 (Corporate bylaws) and 11 (Organization for Mission), and further conversations with representatives from the WFC and AARC, it is increasingly clear that this is more than a utility as it relates to oversight responsibilities for PMA and OGA.

The level of control appears to be extensive. Section 2.13 of Appendix 10 allows the corporation to delegate powers to other bodies but does not require it—and the delegation is not permanent. This belies the fact that power must be delegated from the corporation to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)/OGA and PMAB/PMA in order for them to operate. This is a radical change in church governance structures. Previously the General Assembly delegated authority directly to COGA/OGA and PMAB/PMA. The agencies then used a corporation, with PMAB as its board, to carry out necessary secular functions. In the proposal, much of PMAB/COGA’s authority will be delegated to it, not by the General Assembly, but rather by the corporation. At any time, the corporation can remove or limit the powers granted to other bodies. As such, the authority to delegate, limit, or remove powers is exclusive to the corporate board. It should be clear to all that this is not a mission-focused enterprise. It increases the corporate control over the church, and the work of OGA and PMA, which will be subject to the approval of those elected from other agencies/committees.

Appendix 11 reflects changes originally approved by the Presbyterian Mission Agency (related to the work done by its Governance Task Force in addressing governance changes; work that was encouraged by Way Forward) and recommended for General Assembly approval as Item 04-08. However, Appendix 11 was then further edited to reflect the changes required by this recommendation. Of fundamental concern is the flow of mission-related funds from congregations, individuals, and mid councils to the General Assembly, where they are disbursed. Current receipts range from Shared Mission Support (undesignated gifts for General Assembly mission) to restricted gifts for various purposes (Special Offerings, designating giving, etc.). Mission is also funded through endowments and bequests. Currently administrative functions are funded through cost recovery, which distributes a fair share of all revenue for the administrative expenses undergirding mission (or through a separate schedule of the per capita budget in the case of the Office of the General Assembly).

In the proposal (Appendix 11, Section VII), the corporation “is funded subject to overall budget approval by the General Assembly, from unrestricted funds held by it, from restricted funds designated to it, from the portion of the various budgets of PMA and OGA needed for employees, facilities and services provided by it; from management fees; and from other fees with respect to its activities and services.” There has been no conversation on how this will impact PMA or churchwide giving. It also raises the question—if this new entity is indeed a utility, why does their budget need to be approved by General Assembly?
Shouldn’t they be funded from fees received for services provided? And shouldn’t the budgets of PMA and OGA continue to reflect the true cost of mission inclusive of the cost of delivering mission? Even though the Corporation “holds” funds for PMA and OGA, that doesn’t mean that the Corporation has the authority to use the funds for its own purposes apart from the donor’s intent in giving those funds.

We believe that the nature of this new entity and its relationship to PMA, OGA, and the other General Assembly agencies remains unclear.

2. Nature and Role of PMA and PMAB

The role of PMAB is equally unclear in this model. Since all authority is vested in the corporation with some of it delegated back to PMA/PMAB, it would help to be very clear on just what will remain within the scope of PMAB. Beyond generic comments such as “focus on mission” and “lead and coordinate the mission program of the General Assembly” the recommendation does not describe its vision for a future PMA/PMAB. Taking away or severely limiting the ability of PMA to “do” mission by separating the “what” from the “how” does not liberate PMA; it makes the work of PMA more difficult to navigate—likely resulting in fewer missional opportunities, delivered more slowly at an increased cost.

3. Board Composition

The recommendation places one representative of PMAB and one representative of COGA on a new eleven-member board—minimizing the voices of the two agencies most impacted by the recommendation. Eight of the other nine seats are allocated to specific representative voices:

- Four from the other agencies (one each from the Board of Pensions, the Foundation, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and PC(USA) Investment and Loan Program)—even if they choose not to purchase services from this new “utility.”

- One each from the advocacy committees (Advocacy Committee on Women’s Concerns and Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns).

- One each from the WFC and AARC (for the first term).

As written, the 223rd General Assembly (2018) will only have full discretion over the choice of one member of the board who will be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. This recommendation fails to take our collective white, male, middle-to-older age privilege into account. Ten of eleven specified nominations, limited by the discretion of the various representative agencies, will not produce a diverse board. While we understand there may be changes recommended by Way Forward to the agency nomination process designed to provide a broader slate of potential board members with additional involvement from the General Assembly Nominating Committee, these changes are not currently in the posted materials.
We are unsure if or when these changes will be made.

Furthermore, the corporation’s anticipated executive committee (five members) with a quorum of 50 percent, places control of the corporation, PMA, and OGA in the hands of two individuals (a majority of the quorum of three).

4. Lack of Due Diligence

We have not seen any detailed financial or operational due diligence and this should be done prior to finalizing the recommendation, so that a determination may be made as to whether this governance model is workable.
Financially, the proposal commits to keeping administrative expenditures in 2018–2020 to levels expended in 2016-2018. We do not believe there is a basis for this commitment. To our knowledge:

- Funds have not been reviewed; no analysis has been completed.
- There has been much conversation about outsourcing, without consideration of the financial impact of severance packages for existing staff.
- There have been no discussions about how to fund the Office of the President (of this new entity), or the new Office of Translation, which will be housed in this entity.
- There has been no conversation regarding which staff will operate out of the new entity versus PMA or OGA; no work has been done to sustain the financial viability of any of the organizations in light of these changes.

The following questions are examples of the kind of operational due diligence that is still required prior to implementation of the recommendation (and that should have been considered in advance of the proposal):

- Who will serve as the Board of Directors of the A Corp between the 30th day following the adjournment of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) when the existing forty Presbyterians from across the church are required to resign and the initial meeting of the newly constituted A Corp Board of Directors? (Recommendation 1.a)
- Does the church want a “super-board” made up of board members from other boards and committees? This is unprecedented in our Presbyterian organization. (Recommendation 1.b.)
- In our current system, the General Assembly Nominating Committee makes nominations to General Assembly that meet the desire of the church for equality, diversity, and parity. The General Assembly Committee on Representation is charged with ensuring inclusion, participation, and representation at all levels of church leadership and decision-making. This check and balance is effective because the pool of prospective nominees is churchwide and balanced for diversity. Why is this system being replaced for this new A Corp board? (Recommendation 1.c.)
- Why is it necessary for the A Corp president, or his/her designee, to sit on the board with voice on the other six “boards or committees”? What is the purpose of this linkage? (Recommendation 1.d.)
- Why is an additional commission necessary? Is this an indication that there is a lack of confidence in the new A Corp board being able to fulfill its role and function? (Recommendation 1.f.)
- Why is this oversight permissive rather than required? Shouldn’t a review of the A Corp on an established schedule and method of review be the same as it for the other six agencies of the church? (Recommendation 1.g.)
- It is our understanding that under the provision shown below the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall have broad authority over the employees ASSIGNED to it by the A Corp Board? Can we have clarity how that staffing is identified and then assigned by the A Corp? Do these provisions apply to OGA?

A Corporation shall delegate to the President/Executive Director, subject to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget; subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; in consultation with the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; and consistent with the scope of any similar delegation to the Stated Clerk for staff assigned to the Office of the General Assembly, authority: (i) to create, implement, and enforce personnel policies and procedures for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (ii) to prepare, maintain, and amend an Employee Handbook for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (iii) to retain and dismiss staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; and (iv) to promote, demote, review, increase or decrease compensation, and otherwise manage staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency.” Emphasis Added. (Recommendation 1.h. (Appendix 11))

- It is our understanding that the A Corp shall utilize unrestricted funds, currently used to fund important ministries of the PMA (e.g. Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministry), to cover its own expenses? Has anyone reviewed the current PMA Budget to correctly understand how administrative expenses now borne by PMA come from allocations from restricted funds from particular PMA programs? Has an analysis been made of the effect of keeping unrestricted funds for the exclusive use of A Corp expenditures?

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation… is funded, subject to overall budget approval by the General Assembly, from unrestricted funds held by it; from restricted funds designated to it; from the portion of the various budgets of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly needed for employees, facilities, and services provided by it; from management fees; and from other fees with respect to its activities and services. (Recommendation 1.h. (Appendix 11))

- What will the rescission of the declaration of prior enactments of the General Assembly, particularly the documents of Deliverance, means in the application of secular law to disputes within the church that are adjudicated in secular courts? Documents such as the Deliverances are canon law in most states, certainly in Pennsylvania, and have primacy over secular law (i.e. corporate bylaws). Has anyone considered what the declaration of canon law as being secondary to secular law may mean to the Trust Clause of the PC(USA) Constitution? Can WFC/AARC explain and assure the General Assembly that this action will not have unintended consequences? (Recommendation 1.i.)
5. Timing

If approved by the General Assembly, the transition to the new model will be quick.

Recommendation 1.a. calls for actions to be taken within thirty days of the close of General Assembly. Current corporate members are to resign as of the close of that meeting. Recommendation 1.c. calls for the change even sooner … the day after the 223rd General Assembly (2018) adjourns. A new board is convened within ninety days. Governance between that thirty-day window and the ninety-day meeting is left unclear.

In light of this uncertainty, and the lack of due diligence on both operational and financial matters, the PMAB asks that the details of the proposal, along with the vision called for earlier in this comment, be vetted over the next two years, so that a more comprehensive and sustainable recommendation can be brought to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

6. Acting as “One Church”

Rather than solving conflict between church agencies, this proposal exacerbates it. Four General Assembly agencies have boards that serve both their mission-related purposes and their corporate needs. The other two, PMA and OGA, will have to work through a corporate board controlled by others. This hasn’t worked for the Office of the General Assembly over the past thirty years, leading to many of today’s issues. Members of COGA have described this period as one of “tyranny.” The proposed new corporation board looks no more viable. Minimally, it will at least be a different form of tyranny, but collectively, we should aim higher. Better solutions are available (separate corporate identity for each agency within the context of one overall church corporation board or a joint OGA/PMA corporate board), but neither can be fully evaluated in the absence of an overarching vision. Rather than create upheaval within the agencies without a clear guiding vision, PMAB suggests that the assembly first establish a vision for the structure and function of General Assembly agencies, then allow corporate forms to follow this vision.

7. Conclusion

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is grateful for many voices seeking to correct flaws in the current structure and function of General Assembly agencies. A portion of those flaws are the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and we join with others in a commitment to work wholeheartedly to improve and correct these flaws. We commend the Way Forward Commission for its call for a renewed focus on mission as the heart of all we do, and believe this is best accomplished not by removing corporate responsibilities from the Presbyterian Mission Agency, but from addressing the imbalance of OGA’s relationship to the PMA and the A Corp board. This should be done deliberately, carefully, and above all, be rooted in reformed theological principles driven by a shared vision for the ecclesiastical direction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Recommendation 2.: Role of the Stated Clerk

We leave the debate and comment on the role of the Stated Clerk to others within the church.

Recommendation 3: Financial Sustainability of the National Denomination

We support this recommendation. We believe it is so important that sustainability should be determined prior to the implementation of changes to the national church proposed by Way Forward and All Agency Review. The report should be submitted to the 224th General Assembly (2020) and should include consideration of the efficacy and continuation of the Per Capita System now used by the national denomination and many of the mid councils. A good beginning resource should be a review of the Strategy for Funding Christ’s Mission as approved by the General Assembly in 2008.

Recommendation 4.a.: Diversity and Reconciliation

We support the creation of this table. It would be helpful to know how this table will be implemented and the scope of its authority.

Recommendation 4.b.: Completion of Audits

We support this recommendation.

Recommendation 4.c.: Translation Services

We support Item 04-02, Recommendation 2, from the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns as the best approach to implementing this recommendation. We further suggest that an analysis of the cost of such a program and a means of supporting it be undertaken immediately following approval of this recommendation so that it may be implemented expeditiously.
We support this recommendation.

Item 04-05

[The assembly approved Item 04-05 with comment. See pp. 44, 49.]

[Comment: We commend the 2020 Vision Team for their work. We desire to hear explicit examples of what this would look like in different contexts and how to get there. We would like to hear more inclusion of grace, joy, and the Great Ends of the Church. We encourage the 2020 Vision Team to make the guiding statement more succinct.]

2020 Vision Team—Interim Report

The 2020 Vision Team recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) forward the proposed draft of the Guiding Statement to the church for study and comment in consideration of submitting it to the 224th General Assembly (2020) for approval. All comments should be directed to the Office of General Assembly by June 1, 2019.

Draft Guiding Statement

Our Reformed heritage understands the power of words and we humbly offer this guiding statement as speaking truth and declaring life.

The 2020 Vision Team was mandated by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) and charged with developing a guiding statement for the denomination as it moves into the future (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 40, 257).

In the faithful desire to discern the will of God, we listened throughout the denomination and beyond, hearing hope and frustration, expectation and anxiety.

Along our journey, even when it is hard to see the way forward, God has spoken and continues to speak to us in these times and places.

Therefore, God calls the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be:

Prayerful

• Confessing our sin before God and to those we have wronged, we accept our responsibility for the brokenness in the world and in ourselves. In Christ we are assured of forgiveness and freed to forgive others.

• We ask the Holy Spirit to direct and guide us as we actively listen to Scripture and fully engage in the joys and challenges of life in this present world.

• In Christ we are bound together by grace, cleansed in the waters of baptism, nourished at the Lord’s table, and sent out to share the Good News.

Courageous

• Reformed and always being reformed, we follow the Holy Spirit in new and imaginative ways to places we have not yet been.

• We foster the hope of reconciliation in Christ that brings healing to individuals and communities, which transforms the world.

• We work for God’s justice and peace for all people in every land, prioritizing the vulnerable, the marginalized, and the abused.

United

• As members of the Church universal, we are Christ’s disciples, called by God and empowered by the Holy Spirit.

• Against forces that seek to divide, Christ compels us to bear witness to a love that sustains community across great differences.
• Striving to love all our neighbors as ourselves, we approach others in a spirit of openness and trust as we follow Jesus Christ in respecting the freedom of other religions, worldviews, and traditions.

Serving
• As followers of the One who washed his disciples’ feet, we listen to and serve our neighbors, working to meet their practical needs.
• We partner with others to become the hands and feet of God in the world, showing compassion and generosity to all creation.
• We venture beyond the familiar, meeting people where they are as we share Christ’s transformative love.

Alive
• We are a people of the resurrection: though death surrounds us, we are not afraid because we follow the One who was raised from the tomb.
• The Holy Spirit gives us courage to build a community that reflects the fullness of God’s image in humanity: beautifully diverse and no longer divided by age, race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, gender identity, sexuality, physical and mental ability, geography, or theological conviction.
• In the sure and certain hope of resurrection, we testify that the church and its members are called to follow Christ’s model by risking all, even life itself, for the sake of the Gospel.

And so, God calls the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be: Prayerful, Courageous, United, Serving, Alive.

Thanks be to God.

The Draft Guiding Statement was created by braiding together several guiding sources: passages from Holy Scripture, foundational documents from our denomination, reports from previous General Assemblies, listening sessions across the nation, organic ideas from members of the Vision 2020 Team, and above all—the Holy Spirit. Through all of our work, we engaged in and were surrounded with prayer. Prayers for guidance, for openness, and for humility were offered by and to the Vision 2020 Team.

Heath Rada, Moderator of the 221st General Assembly (2014), compiled and presented “When We Gather at the Table” at the 222nd General Assembly (2016). This report gave the team an overview of who we are as a denomination and some of the dreams, challenges, and hopes he had heard from denominational voices during his tenure as Moderator.

Upon reflecting on “When We Gather at the Table,” the Vision 2020 Team found it valuable to continue listening, hearing voices and reflections from various locations within the Church. In addition to hearing voices from within the denomination (churches, presbyteries, synods, agencies, etc.), the 2020 Vision Team thought it necessary to listen to voices adjacent to the church (mission partners, other denominations, etc.) and voices outside the church (other faiths, non-believers, etc.) to get a broader picture of what the world around us thinks of the PC(USA). A list of listening sessions conducted by the 2020 Vision Team members can be found in Appendix B and a list of the standard questions asked can be found in Appendix C.

Several themes emerged through these listening sessions:
• Continuing commitment to and appreciation of the PC(USA) emphasis on thoughtful, disciplined engagement with scripture;
• A sense of urgent need to address issues such as racism, poverty, income inequality, climate change, domestic violence, and human rights;
• Growing excitement about new ways of doing and being church;
• A longing for connectionalism based in community rather than bureaucracy;
• A desire to maintain, deepen, and expand ties to the global church;
• Fear about what shifts in religious culture and decline in church attendance and participation will mean for the future of the PC(USA);
• Frustration with systemic and structural barriers to adaptive change that will enable us to meet the challenges ahead;
• Anxiety about finances at the congregational, mid council, and General Assembly level;
A sense that we need to name this moment and articulate a vision for moving forward.

While developing and compiling new content, the 2020 Vision Team recognized the previous work of the church and visioning. The 2020 Vision Team studied the “Six Great Ends of the Church” from the Book of Order, F-1.0304. The team also studied and reflected on several biblical passages, including Haggai, Proverbs 19:21, Habakkuk 1-2:3 and Mark 8: 27-29, etc.

The draft guiding statement is a product of its time, much like the “Six Great Ends of the Church.” The 2020 Vision Team recognizes the PC(USA) is at a turning point and offers this draft guiding statement to sessions, presbyteries, synods, PC(USA) agencies, and other bodies in the church as an evaluative framework: What can we celebrate? What areas need additional work? What efforts might we need to abandon? How might the Draft Guiding Statement be used within the church and beyond? We envision this draft Guiding Statement as a challenge for moving the PC(USA) at all levels forward in new, imaginative, and Spirit-filled ways.

The 2020 Vision Team will continue to build on this groundwork over the next two years, as this draft guiding statement is a living document. The team will be focused on study, focus on study, prayer, and discernment of the Draft Guiding Statement including an invitation for feedback. Feedback will be received in numerous ways including electronic surveys, open communication via email, and structured listening sessions led by 2020 Vision Team members. Some of these focus groups listening sessions will be conducted at large events such as Triennium and Big Tent 2019 as well as smaller events upon request.

The 2020 Vision Team will also develop materials to help agencies, sessions, congregations, and other bodies of the church interact with the statement. Materials will be available that can help assess the vibrancy of their mission and how the new guiding statement may be integrated, enhancing their established work while inspiring new ministries. We pray these supplemental materials will help the fullness of the denomination live into the Guiding Statement in their mission work and birthing new ministries, and will be a resource in deepening the intimacy of their relationship with God. The Guiding Statement invites us as individuals to internalize an identity as prayerful, courageous, united, serving, and alive!

The remaining work of the 2020 Vision Team will focus on ensuring the new vision be accessible and available to all those in the denomination and beyond. To this end, if there are resources to be allocated to the Way Forward Commission and/or the All-Agency Review Committee that include work with a branding consultant, we will dedicate our time with said consultant to work on an implementation plan. Finally, we raise our voices in naming the need to make sure the current Draft Guiding Statement, the supplemental materials to be developed, and the Guiding Statement to be produced for the 224th General Assembly (2020) be accessible to the fullness of the body through translation into as many of our worshipping languages as possible.

By the 224th General Assembly (2020), the 2020 Vision Team will complete the mandate given by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to produce a Guiding Statement for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and a plan for its implementation.

Rationale

The proposed Draft Guiding Statement directly responds to the mandate (see Appendix A) created at the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

Appendix A

Recommendation Creating the 2020 Vision Team

Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 40–41, 257ff

The Assembly Committee on the Way Forward recommends that the 222nd General Assembly (2016) direct the Co-Moderators, in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR), to name a “2020 Vision Team” of fifteen people to develop a guiding statement for the denomination and make a plan for its implementation with all deliberate speed. The process of developing such a guiding statement will help us to name and claim our denominational identity as we seek to follow the Spirit into the future.

1. The committee shall be made up of the following:
   a. At least six teaching elders and at least six ruling elders.
   b. The following demographic traits should be considered when naming members of the committee: gender identity; geographic location; inclusion of people under the age of forty (with special attention paid to young adult advisory delegates (YAADs) serving on the Assembly Committee on “The Way Forward” of the 222nd General Assembly (2016)); racial ethnic minorities; those engaged in both parish and validated ministries; theological diversity (people representative of all the “clusters” identified in “When We Gather at the Table”).
   c. The following skill sets should be considered when naming members of the committee: strategic planning, visioning, experience on administrative commissions.
   d. The Co-Moderators of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall serve as additional, ex officio, members of this committee.
2. The committee shall build upon the work begun in “When We Gather at the Table” as well as Moderator Heath Rada’s report made to the 222nd General Assembly (2016).

3. The committee should conduct targeted listening exercises with various constituencies throughout the PC(USA) in an effort to discern where the Spirit is leading the church in the future. These may include, but are not limited to: congregations, presbyteries, synods, and seminaries. Such conversations should center on the calling of the church (Book of Order, F-1.03) as well as the vision these constituencies have of how God is calling them to respond to “what breaks God’s heart” in their communities.

4. The committee should also look outside the walls of the church to seek best practices and resources for being relevant to the changing landscapes of local, national, and international communities.

5. The committee will develop recommendations that shall be the only business for the Assembly Committee on The Way Forward to review at the 223rd General Assembly (2018). The only exception would be overtures that respond directly to any reports from the 2020 Vision Team. The intention is that there will be a new vision for the denomination by the 224th General Assembly (2020).

6. The assembly shall allocate sufficient resources for this committee to effectively accomplish its work.

We developed three sets of questions to target different groups of people from whom we wanted to hear. The first survey was shared with members of the PC(USA). The second survey was shared with groups of individuals that are connected with Church but may not be members of the denomination. This group includes our ecumenical partners, campus ministries, etc. Our third survey focused on connecting with those outside of the Church such as nonprofit organizations, social justice groups, the nones and dones, and those with no affiliation to any church.

Survey 1:
1. What do you think breaks God’s heart in your local community?
2. What do you think God might be calling us as Christians to do about this, and to do in general?
3. What do you feel lifts up God's heart in your local community?
4. How could our denomination do things even more effectively than we have been doing?
5. How is the PC(USA) engaging you, and also not engaging you?
6. What else would you like to share with us?

Survey 2:
1. How are you connected with the PC(USA), if at all?
2. What do you think breaks God’s heart in your local community?
3. What do you think God might be calling us as Christians to do about this, and to do in general?
4. What do you feel lifts up God's heart in your area?
5. What, if anything, do you see as PC(USA)’s unique calling?
6. What else would you like to share with us?

Survey 3:
1. How do you find meaning and purpose in your life?
2. What do you think of when you hear the words “Christian churches” and “Presbyterian”?
3. What lifts your heart in your local community?
4. What breaks your heart in your local community?
5. What might people do about this?
6. How might a religious community be involved in this?
7. What else would you like to share with us?

ACSWP ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-05

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 04-05 presents the 223rd General Assembly (2018) with a draft of the Guiding Statement to the church.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 04-05 be received as information and that the following comments be communicated to the group.

Even as a Way Forward Commission proposes reorganizing part of our national structure, it is still appropriate to search for new vision for the whole church that might guide this reorganization or even reformation. We need clarity about God’s calling and purpose for the church. We need clarity of vision for how the church may respond to the challenges and opportunities it faces. We also need clarity of vision regarding the structural changes the church must make that will allow it to adapt and organize for mission in a changing world.

We thank the Vision 2020 Team for its work. We are interested in the themes identified in the listening sessions. Some themes point to internal weaknesses, “anxiety about finances,” “frustration with systemic and structural barriers to adaptive change that will enable us to meet the challenges ahead.” Other themes reflect a mixture of internal weaknesses and external threats, “racism, poverty, income inequality, etc.” and “fear about what shifts and religious culture and decline in church attendance and participation will mean for the future of the PC(USA).” Still other themes suggest opportunities: “a desire to … expand ties to the global church” and “growing excitement about new ways to doing and being church.

These are important themes to investigate, but we are concerned that the draft guiding statement does not adequately address them. To fix this, we advise that the Vision 2020 team go deeper in exploring these themes in order to identify the challenges and opportunities our church must address for effective ministry in a changing world. For example, what “shifts in religious culture and decline in church attendance” ought a vision for the future address?

Let us be clear: the challenges and opportunities before our church are too diverse and complicated for any single Visioning Team to address. Having said that, if the Vision 2020 Team identified adaptive questions the church must address for it to re- vision ministry, it would constitute a significant contribution to denominational health.

To pick up on our example, among the “shifts in culture” are declines in a Sabbath-keeping culture and an erosion of the ecology of church-related institutions (denominationally related colleges, camps, Sunday school, etc.). These shifts call us to discover new ways to do basic tasks. How will we do Christian formation in THIS culture? There are many other adaptive questions we hope the Vision 2020 team would lift up for the church. One of our members published a take on these questions here.¹

In addition to these questions, it would be helpful if the Vision 2020 Team explored the frustration many feel concerning “barriers to adaptive change.” Why is there insufficient focus on the General Assembly level bringing together responses to the questions that are prompted by the themes you identify? Are there ways we need to reorganize our work so that our church is able to identify a shared, compelling vision for the future of effective ministry in a changing world? The All Agency Review saw some of this need; we try to improve upon their approach in our A&C 4-04, on Recommendation 8.b.

The promise of a national church body is that it can gather experts, and representatives of the church from across the country, and do an in-depth study of challenges and opportunities before us. If properly organized, such study teams could cast a vision for a new future of effective ministry.

To reiterate, we hope the Vision 2020 Team goes deeper into the themes they have discovered to identify the underlying questions they present to the church. These questions and perhaps some directional implications could be shared with the church for comment in the place of/along with the acronym-framed affirmation they have developed. We hope that they will explore and make practical recommendations concerning the vision drift and dearth our denomination has experienced for the last forty years. Why have we not responded to the challenges and opportunities before us?

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-06. See pp. 44, 50.]

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board recommends that if the 223rd General Assembly (2018) determines that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (A Corp.), become a utility and service corporation, as recommended by the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee, that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) also provide for the division of the A Corp., creating an independent General Assembly Mission Corporation for the purpose of carrying out the mission and direction of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as set forth in the attached documents of division.

DELIVERANCE DIVIDING THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.), A CORPORATION, INTO TWO CORPORATIONS

WHEREAS, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (“A Corporation” or “Mission Corporation”) was created by the division of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, A Corporation (“UPCUSA”) into (i) itself (a Pennsylvania nonprofit corporation renamed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation [the “Foundation”]) and (ii) A Corporation (a Pennsylvania nonprofit corporation), with A Corporation holding the sole, nonvoting membership of the Foundation; and

WHEREAS, it was the intent of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (“General Assembly”) that both the A Corporation and the Foundation would continue as surviving corporations of the UPCUSA, the original corporation from which the division and separation occurred; that the history and origin of each would be from the origin of UPCUSA, namely, March 28, 1799; that the titles and interests in property allocated to each at the time of the division and separation be deemed to be continuations of the same from the time originally acquired; that the trusteeship and other fiduciary relationships, licenses, rulings, and privileges of and issued to UPCUSA be deemed to continue in the Foundation and in A Corporation, to the extent relevant to its purposes and activities as contemplated in the Deliverance Implementing a Design for the Corporate Structure of Certain Agencies of the General Assembly adopted by the 198th General Assembly (1986); and

WHEREAS, the General Assembly affirmed and declared each of A Corporation and the Foundation as integrated auxiliaries of and as part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) denomination; and

223rd General Assembly (2018)
WHEREAS, To assist both the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to more efficiently provide services on behalf of the General Assembly, the General Assembly has determined to divide A Corporation into two corporations, one to focus on the General Assembly’s mission and to serve as the General Assembly’s mission agency; and one to primarily serve the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (the “Stated Clerk”) in collaboration with the other General Assembly agencies in the areas of administrative services; and

WHEREAS, Except expressly provided below, there are no other changes to the Deliverance Implementing a Design for the Corporate Structure of Certain Agencies of the General Assembly [adopted by the 198th General Assembly (1986), modified by the 199th General Assembly (1987) and the 214th General Assembly (2002)], which remains in full force and effect as to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation and the successor to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, specifically the General Assembly Mission Corporation;

THEREFORE, BE IT enacted by the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as follows:

PLAN OF DIVISION:
ESTABLISHMENT OF THE OFFICE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY CORPORATION

Section 1.

(a) Plan of Division. There will be adopted by A Corporation a plan of division under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (the “Plan of Division”) pursuant to which A Corporation shall be divided into (i) itself (a Pennsylvania nonprofit corporation to be renamed the General Assembly Mission Corporation) and (ii) a newly organized Pennsylvania nonprofit corporation named Office of the General Assembly Corporation (“Assembly Corporation”). The Plan of Division will be effective as of 11:59 p.m. on December 31, 2018 (the “Effective Time”).

(b) Office of the General Assembly Corporation established. At the Effective Time, Assembly Corporation shall be established by the Plan of Division as a separate corporate agency of the General Assembly, with the history and origin of the UPCUSA dating back to March 28, 1799.

(c) Continuity and status. It is the intent and understanding of the General Assembly that both corporations resulting from the Plan of Division, the Mission Corporation and the Assembly Corporation, shall continue as surviving corporations of A Corporation; that the history and origin of each of Mission Corporation and Assembly Corporation is from the origin of A Corporation, namely March 28, 1799; that the titles and interests in property allocated to each at the Effective Time through the Plan of Division shall be deemed to be continuations of the same from the time originally acquired by A Corporation and its predecessors; that the roles and responsibilities given to A Corporation under the 1986 Deliverance Implementing a Design for the Corporate Structure of Certain Agencies of the General Assembly, adopted by the 198th General Assembly (1986), modified by the 199th General Assembly (1987) and the 214th General Assembly (2002), as further amended by the 206th General Assembly (1994) and the Joint Report of the General Assembly Council and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation as approved by the 208th General Assembly (1996) (collectively “the 1986 Deliverance”); licenses, rulings, gifts and bequests to A Corporation and/or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and privileges of and issued to A Corporation shall be deemed to continue in Mission Corporation. The 1986 Deliverance will only be modified to the extent certain specified functions set forth herein will be delegated to Assembly Corporation by the General Assembly through a corporate division and an approved Plan of Division. The General Assembly affirms and declares that each of the resulting corporations, Assembly Corporation and Mission Corporation, is and shall be an integrated auxiliary of and a part of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Mission Corporation will continue as the principal corporation of the General Assembly and the sole member of the Foundation and of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. Assembly Corporation shall be the principal administration agency of the General Assembly, primarily responsible for coordinating the biennial meetings of the General Assembly, supporting the work of the Stated Clerk and the Moderator of the General Assembly, and providing such administrative services to the General Assembly and other General Assembly entities as those agencies may request.

(d) Transitional arrangements. ARTICLE V

Indemnification of Directors, Officers, etc.

Section 5.01. Scope of Indemnification (a) The Corporation shall indemnify an indemnified representative against any liability incurred in connection with any proceeding in which the indemnified representative may be involved as a party or otherwise, by reason of the fact that such person is or was serving in an indemnified capacity, including without limitation any liability resulting from any actual or alleged breach or neglect of duty, error, misstatement or misleading statement, negligence, gross negligence or act giving rise to strict or products liability, except:

(1) where such indemnification is expressly prohibited by applicable law;

(2) where the conduct of the indemnified representative has been finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to constitute willful misconduct or recklessness as may be defined by applicable law or any other conduct sufficient in the circumstances to bar indemnification against liabilities arising from the conduct;

(3) to the extent the liability is finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to be based upon or attributable to the indemnified representative gaining any personal pecuniary profit to which such indemnified representative was not legally entitled; or

(4) to the extent such indemnification has been finally determined in a final adjudication pursuant to Section 5.06(d) to be otherwise unlawful.

(b) If an indemnified representative is entitled to indemnification in respect of a portion, but not all, of any liabilities to which such person may be subject, the Corporation shall indemnify such indemnified representative to the maximum extent for such portion of the liabilities.

(c) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction, or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the indemnified representative is not entitled to indemnification.

(d) For purposes of this Article:

(1) “indemnified capacity” means any and all past, present, and future service by an indemnified representative in one or more capacities as a Director, officer, employee, or agent of the Corporation or a Constituent Corporation, or, at the request of the Corporation, as a Director, officer, employee, agent, fiduciary, or trustee of another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan, or other entity or enterprise;

(2) “indemnified representative” means any and all Directors and officers of the Corporation, including any and all officers elected or committee members, employees, or other agents appointed under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” also means any and all officers, committee members, employees, and other agents elected or appointed under the power delegated to the General Assembly, or to any General Assembly agency under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” shall include any other person so designated by the Board of Directors.

(3) “liability” means any damage, judgment, amount paid in settlement (provided, in the case of settlements, that (i) the settlement is effected with the Corporation’s consent; and (ii) the settlement is in the best interests of the Corporation), fine, penalty, punitive damages, excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or cost or expense of any nature (including, without limitation, attorneys’ fees and disbursements); and

(4) “proceeding” means any threatened, pending, or completed action, suit, appeal, or other proceeding of any nature, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative, whether formal or informal, and whether brought by or in the right of the Corporation, a class of its security holders, if any, or otherwise.

Section 5.02. Proceedings Initiated by Indemnified Representatives. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, the Corporation shall not indemnify under this Article an indemnified representative for any liability incurred in a proceeding initiated (which shall not be deemed to include counter-claims or affirmative defenses) or participated in as an intervenor or amicus curiae by the person seeking indemnification unless such initiation of or participation in the proceeding is authorized, either before or after its commencement, by the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of the Directors of the Corporation.

This section does not apply to reimbursement of expenses incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending an arbitration under Section 5.06(d) or otherwise successfully prosecuting or defending the rights of an indemnified representative granted by or pursuant to this Article.

Section 5.03. Advancing Expenses. The Corporation shall pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by a Director or officer and may, by act of the Board of Directors (including the votes or consents of interested Directors), pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by any other indemnified representative in advance of the final disposition of a proceeding, described in Section 5.01 upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the indemnified representative to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise that such person is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation pursuant to this Article. The financial ability of an indemnified representative to repay an advance shall not be a prerequisite to the making of such advance.

Section 5.04. Securing of Indemnification Obligations. To further effect, satisfy, or secure the indemnification obligations provided herein or otherwise, the Corporation may maintain insurance, obtain a letter of credit, act as self-insurer, create a reserve, trust, escrow, cash collateral, or other fund or account, enter into indemnification agreements, pledge or grant a security interest in any assets or properties of the Corporation, or use any other mechanism or arrangement whatsoever in such amounts, at such costs, and upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors shall deem appropriate. Absent fraud, the determination of the Board of Directors with respect to such amounts, costs, terms, and conditions shall be conclusive against all security holders, if any, officers, and Directors and shall not be subject to voidability.

Section 5.05. Payment of Indemnification. An indemnified representative who is entitled to indemnification shall be entitled thereto within 30 days after a written request for such indemnification has been delivered to the Secretary of the Corporation.

Section 5.06. Indemnification Procedure.

(a) An indemnified representative shall use such indemnified representative’s best efforts to notify promptly the Secretary of the Corporation of the commencement of any proceeding or the occurrence of any event which might give rise to a liability under this Article, but the failure so to notify the Corporation shall not relieve the Corporation of any liability which it may have to the indemnified representative under this Article or otherwise.

(b) The Corporation shall be entitled, upon notice to any such indemnified representative, to assume the defense of any proceeding with counsel reasonably satisfactory to the indemnified representative, or a majority of the indemnified representatives involved in such proceeding if there be more than one. If the Corporation notifies the indemnified representative of its election to defend the proceeding, the Corporation shall have no liability for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) of the indemnified representative incurred in connection with the defense of such proceeding subsequent to such notice, unless (i) such expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) have been authorized by the Corporation, (ii) the Corporation shall not in fact have employed counsel reasonably satisfactory to such indemnified representative or indemnified representatives to assume the defense of such proceeding, or (iii) it shall have been determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) that the indemnified representative was entitled to indemnification for such expenses under this Article or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the indemnified representative may elect to retain counsel at the indemnified representative’s own cost and expense to participate in the defense of such proceeding.

(c) The Corporation shall not be required to obtain the consent of the indemnified representative to the settlement of any proceeding which the Corporation has undertaken to defend if the Corporation assumes full and sole responsibility for such settlement and the settlement grants the indemnified representative an unqualified release in respect of all liabilities at issue in the proceeding. Whether or not the Corporation has elected to assume the defense of any proceeding, no indemnified representative shall have any right to enter into any full or partial settlement of the proceeding without the prior written consent of the Corporation (which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld), nor shall the Corporation be liable for any amount paid by an indemnified representative pursuant to any settlement to which the Corporation has not so consented.

(d) Any dispute related to the right to indemnification as provided under this Article shall be decided only by arbitration in the metropolitan area in which the principal executive offices of the Corporation are located at the time, in accordance with the commercial arbitration rules then in effect of the American Arbitration Association, before a panel of three arbitrators, one of whom shall be selected by the Corporation, the second of whom shall be selected by the indemnified representative, and the third of whom shall be selected by the other two arbitrators. In the absence of the American Arbitration Association, or if for any reason arbitration under the arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association cannot be initiated, and if one of the parties fails or refuses to select an arbitrator, or the arbitrators selected by the Corporation and the indemnified representative cannot agree on the selection of the third arbitrator within 30 days after such time as the corporation and the indemnified representative have each been notified of the selection of the other’s arbitrator, the necessary arbitrator or arbitrators shall be selected by the presiding judge of the court of general jurisdiction in such metropolitan area. The party or parties challenging the right of an indemnified representative to the benefits of this Article shall have the burden of proof. The Corporation shall reimburse an indemnified representative for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending such arbitration. Any award entered by the arbitrators shall be final, binding and nonappealable and judgment may be entered thereon by any party in accordance with applicable law in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that the corporation shall be entitled to interpose as a defense in any such judicial enforcement proceeding any prior final judicial determination adverse to the indemnified representative under Section 5.01(a)(2) or(3) in a proceeding not directly involving indemnification under this Article. This arbitration provision shall be specifically enforceable.

(e) Upon a payment to any indemnified representative under this Article, the Corporation shall be subrogated to the extent of such payment to all of the rights of the indemnified representative to recover against any person for such liability, and the indemnified representative shall execute all documents and instruments required and shall take such other action as may be necessary to secure such rights, including the execution of such documents as may be necessary for the Corporation to bring suit to enforce such rights.

Section 5.07. Discharge of Duty. An indemnified representative shall be deemed to have discharged such person’s duty to the Corporation if he or she has relied in good faith on information, advice or an opinion, report or statement prepared by:

(a) one or more officers or employees of the Corporation whom such indemnified representative reasonably believes to be reliable and competent with respect to the matter presented;
(b) legal counsel, public accountants, or other persons as to matters that the indemnified representative reasonably believes are within the person’s professional or expert competence; or

(c) a committee of the Board of Directors on which he or she does not serve as to matters within its area of designated authority, which committee he or she reasonably believes to merit confidence.

Section 5.08. Contract Rights: Amendment or Repeal. All rights to indemnification under this Article shall be deemed a contract between the Corporation and the indemnified representatives pursuant to which the Corporation and each indemnified representative intend to be legally bound. Any repeal, amendment or modification hereof shall be prospective only and shall not affect any rights or obligations then existing.

Section 5.09. Scope of Article. The indemnification of indemnified representatives, as authorized by this Article, shall not be deemed exclusive of any other rights to which those seeking indemnification or advancement of expenses may be entitled under any statute, agreement, vote of the General Assembly or disinterested Directors or otherwise, both as to action in an official capacity and as to action in any other capacity. The indemnification provided by or granted pursuant to this Article shall continue as to a person who has ceased to be an indemnified representative in respect of matters arising prior to such time, and shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators and personal representatives of such a person.

Section 5.10. Reliance on Provisions. Each person who shall act as an indemnified representative of the Corporation shall be deemed to be doing so in reliance upon the rights of indemnification provided by this Article.

The Board may designate one or more Directors as alternate members of any committee or body, who may replace any absent or disqualified member at any meeting of the committee or body. In the absence or disqualification of a member and the alternate or alternates, if any, designated for such member, of any committee or body, the member or members thereof present at any meeting and not disqualified from voting, whether or not the member or members constitute a quorum, may unanimously appoint another Director to act at the meeting in the place of any such absent or disqualified member. Each committee, or body of the Board shall serve at the pleasure of the Board. Any committee member may be removed, either for or without cause, by the Board of Directors.

(b) The Executive Committee shall have and exercise all of the powers and authority of the Board of Directors in the management of the business and affairs of the Corporation, except that the Executive Committee shall not have any power or authority as to the following:

(1) The adoption, amendment, or repeal of the articles of incorporation and these bylaws, or the adoption of any amendment of articles or plan of merger, division or consolidation or the approving of the sale, lease or exchange of all or substantially all of the assets of the Corporation or of the dissolution of the Corporation.

(c) No committee of the Board of Directors, other than the Executive Committee, shall, pursuant to resolution of the Board of Directors or otherwise, exercise any of the powers or authority vested by these bylaws, or other applicable law in the Board of Directors as such, but any other committee of the Board of Directors may make recommendations to the Board of Directors or Executive Committee concerning the exercise of such powers and authority.

(d) A majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee, or Directors designated to replace them as provided in this section, shall be present at each meeting to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business and the acts of a majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee or their replacements shall be the acts of the committee.

(e) Each committee shall keep regular minutes of its proceedings and report such proceedings periodically to the Board of Directors. Sections 2.08, 2.09, and 2.10 shall be applicable to committees of the Board of Directors, except as to quorum (2.11(d)).

A notice of meeting shall specify the place, day, and hour of the meeting and any other information required by law or these bylaws. When a meeting is adjourned pursuant to Section 2.09 of these bylaws for lack of a quorum, it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement at the meeting at which such adjournment is taken.

Section 3.02. Waivers of Notice. Whenever any written notice is required to be given under the provisions of the articles, these bylaws, or applicable law, a waiver thereof in writing, signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, whether before or after the time stated therein, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice. Except as otherwise required by this section and by Section 6.06 of these bylaws, neither the business to be transacted at nor the purpose of a meeting need be specified in the waiver of notice of such meeting. Attendance of a person at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a person attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting, at the beginning of the meeting, to the transacting of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened.

Section 3.03. Modification of Proposal Contained in Notice. Whenever the language of a proposed resolution is included in a written notice of a meeting, the meeting considering the resolution may without further notice adopt it with such clarifying or other amendments as do not enlarge its original purpose.

Section 3.04. Conference Telephone Meetings. One or more persons may participate in a meeting of the Board or of a committee of the Board by means of conference telephone or similar communications equipment, including but not limited to electronic meetings providing video conferencing utilizing telephone or other audio methods, by means of which all persons participating in the meeting can hear each other. Indemnification of Directors, Officers, etc.

Section 5.01. Scope of Indemnification.

(a) The Corporation shall indemnify an indemnified representative against any liability incurred in connection with any proceeding in which the indemnified representative may be involved as a party or otherwise, by reason of the fact that such person is or was serving in an indemnified capacity, including without limitation any liability resulting from any actual or alleged breach or neglect of duty, error, misstatement or misleading statement, negligence, gross negligence or act giving rise to strict or products liability, except:

1. where such indemnification is expressly prohibited by applicable law;
2. where the conduct of the indemnified representative has been finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to constitute willful misconduct or recklessness as may be defined by applicable law or any other conduct sufficient in the circumstances to bar indemnification against liabilities arising from the conduct;
3. to the extent the liability is finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to be based upon or attributable to the indemnified representative gaining any personal pecuniary profit to which such indemnified representative was not legally entitled; or
4. to the extent such indemnification has been finally determined in a final adjudication pursuant to Section 5.06(d) to be otherwise unlawful.

(b) If an indemnified representative is entitled to indemnification in respect of a portion, but not all, of any liabilities to which such person may be subject, the Corporation shall indemnify such indemnified representative to the maximum extent for such portion of the liabilities.

(c) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction, or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the indemnified representative is not entitled to indemnification.

(d) For purposes of this Article:

1. “indemnified capacity” means any and all past, present and future service by an indemnified representative in one or more capacities as a Director, officer, employee or agent of the Corporation or a Constituent Corporation, or, at the request of the Corporation, as a Director, officer, employee, agent, fiduciary or trustee of another Corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan or other entity or enterprise;
2. “indemnified representative” means any and all Directors and officers of the Corporation, including any and all officers elected or committee members, employees, or other agents appointed under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” also means any and all officers, committee members, employees, and other agents elected or appointed under the power delegated to the General Assembly, or to any General Assembly agency under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” shall include any other person so designated by the Board of Directors.
3. “liability” means any damage, judgment, amount paid in settlement (provided, in the case of settlements, that the Corporation shall have given its consent to such settlement in advance of the payment thereof), fine, penalty, punitive damages, excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or cost or expense of any nature (including, without limitation, attorneys’ fees and disbursements); and
4. “proceeding” means any threatened, pending, or completed action, suit, appeal, or other proceeding of any nature, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigatory, whether formal or informal, and whether brought by or in the right of the Corporation, a class of its security holders, if any, or otherwise.

Section 5.02. Proceedings Initiated by Indemnified Representatives. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, the Corporation shall not indemnify under this Article an indemnified representative for any liability incurred in a proceeding initiated (which shall not be deemed to include counter-claims or affirmative defenses) or participated in as an intervenor or amicus curiae by the person seeking indemnification unless such initiation of or participation in the proceeding is authorized, either before or after its commencement, by the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of the Directors of the Corporation. This section does not apply to reimbursement of expenses incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending an arbitration under Section 5.06(d) or otherwise successfully prosecuting or defending the rights of an indemnified representative granted by or pursuant to this Article.

Section 5.03. Advancing Expenses. The Corporation shall pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by a Director or officer and may, by act of the Board of Directors (including the votes or consents of interested Directors), pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by any other indemnified representative in advance of the final disposition of a proceeding, described in Section 5.01 upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the indemnified representative to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise that such person is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation pursuant to this Article. The financial ability of an indemnified representative to repay an advance shall not be a prerequisite to the making of such advance.

Section 5.04. Securing of Indemnification Obligations. To further effect, satisfy, or secure the indemnification obligations provided herein or otherwise, the Corporation may maintain insurance, obtain a letter of credit, act as self-insurer, create a reserve, trust, escrow, cash collateral or other fund or account, enter into indemnification agreements, pledge or grant a security interest in any assets or properties of the Corporation, or use any other mechanism or arrangement whatsoever in such amounts, at such costs, and upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors shall deem appropriate. Absent fraud, the determination of the Board of Directors with respect to such amounts, costs, terms, and conditions shall be conclusive against all security holders, if any, officers and Directors and shall not be subject to voidability.

Section 5.05. Payment of Indemnification. An indemnified representative who is entitled to indemnification shall be entitled thereto within 30 days after a written request for such indemnification has been delivered to the Secretary of the Corporation.

Section 5.06. Indemnification Procedure.

(a) An indemnified representative shall use such indemnified representative’s best efforts to notify promptly the Secretary of the Corporation of the commencement of any proceeding or the occurrence of any event which might give rise to a liability under this Article, but the failure so to notify the Corporation shall not relieve the Corporation of any liability which it may have to the indemnified representative under this Article or otherwise.

(b) The Corporation shall be entitled, upon notice to any such indemnified representative, to assume the defense of any proceeding with counsel reasonably satisfactory to the indemnified representative, or a majority of the indemnified representatives involved in such proceeding if there be more than one. If the Corporation notifies the indemnified representative of its election to defend the proceeding, the Corporation shall have no liability for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) of the indemnified representative incurred in connection with the defense of such proceeding subsequent to such notice, unless (i) such expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) have been authorized by the Corporation, (ii) the Corporation shall not in fact have employed counsel reasonably satisfactory to such indemnified representative or indemnified representatives to assume the defense of such proceeding, or (iii) it shall have been determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) that the indemnified representative was entitled to indemnification for such expenses under this Article or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the indemnified representative may elect to retain counsel at the indemnified representative’s own cost and expense to participate in the defense of such proceeding.

(c) The Corporation shall not be required to obtain the consent of the indemnified representative to the settlement of any proceeding which the Corporation has undertaken to defend if the Corporation assumes full and sole responsibility for such settlement and the settlement grants the indemnified representative an unqualified release in respect of all liabilities at issue in the proceeding. Whether or not the Corporation has elected to assume the defense of any proceeding, no indemnified representative shall have any right to enter into any full or partial settlement of the proceeding without the prior written consent of the Corporation (which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld), nor shall the Corporation be liable for any amount paid by an indemnified representative pursuant to any settlement to which the Corporation has not so consented.

(d) Any dispute related to the right to indemnification as provided under this Article shall be decided only by arbitration in the metropolitan area in which the principal executive offices of the Corporation are located at the time, in accordance with the commercial arbitration rules then in effect of the American Arbitration Association, before a panel of three arbitrators, one of whom shall be selected by the Corporation, the second of whom shall be selected by the indemnified representative, and the third of whom shall be selected by the other two arbitrators. In the absence of the American Arbitration Association, or if for any reason arbitration under the arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association cannot be initiated, and if one of the parties fails or refuses to select an arbitrator, or the arbitrators selected by the Corporation and the indemnified representative cannot agree on the selection of the third arbitrator within 30 days after such time as the Corporation and the indemnified representative have each been notified of the selection of the other’s arbitrator, the necessary arbitrator or arbitrators shall be selected by the presiding judge of the court of general jurisdiction in such metropolitan area. The party or parties challenging the right of an indemnified representative to the benefits of this Article shall have the burden of proof. The Corporation shall reimburse an indemnified representative for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending such arbitration. Any award entered by the arbitrators shall be final, binding, and non-appealable, and judgment may be entered thereon by any party in accordance with applicable law in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that the Corporation shall be entitled to interpose as a defense in any such judicial enforcement proceeding any prior final judicial determination adverse to the indemnified representative under Section 5.01(a)(2) or(3) in a proceeding not directly involving indemnification under this Article. This arbitration provision shall be specifically enforceable.

(e) Upon a payment to any indemnified representative under this Article, the Corporation shall be subrogated to the extent of such payment to all of the rights of the indemnified representative to recover against any person for such liability, and the indemnified representative shall execute all documents and instruments required and shall take such other action as may be necessary to secure such rights, including the execution of such documents as may be necessary for the Corporation to bring suit to enforce such rights.

Section 5.07. Discharge of Duty. An indemnified representative shall be deemed to have discharged such person’s duty to the Corporation if he or she has relied in good faith on information, advice or an opinion, report or statement prepared by:

(a) one or more officers or employees of the Corporation whom such indemnified representative reasonably believes to be reliable and competent with respect to the matter presented;

(b) legal counsel, public accountants, or other persons as to matters that the indemnified representative reasonably believes are within the person’s professional or expert competence; or

(c) a committee of the Board of Directors on which he or she does not serve as to matters within its area of designated authority, which committee he or she reasonably believes to merit confidence.

Section 5.08. Contract Rights: Amendment or Repeal. All rights to indemnification under this Article shall be deemed a contract between the Corporation and the indemnified representatives pursuant to which the Corporation and each indemnified representative intend to be legally bound. Any repeal, amendment, or modification hereof shall be prospective only and shall not affect any rights or obligations then existing.

Section 5.09. Scope of Article. The indemnification of indemnified representatives, as authorized by this Article, shall not be deemed exclusive of any other rights to which those seeking indemnification or advancement of expenses may be entitled under any statute, agreement, vote of the General Assembly, or disinterested Directors or otherwise, both as to action in an official capacity and as to action in any other capacity. The indemnification provided by or granted pursuant to this Article shall continue as to a person who has ceased to be an indemnified representative in respect of matters arising prior to such time, and shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, and personal representatives of such a person.

Section 5.10. Reliance on Provisions. Each person who shall act as an indemnified representative of the Corporation shall be deemed to be doing so in reliance upon the rights of indemnification provided by this Article.

Rationale

The church and all of its boards, whether ecclesiastical, corporate, or both, must represent the diversity of people who are within and without it. Power and authority should never be separated from action or mission, and actions are more important than intent. Therefore, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board believes that it must offer the General Assembly the opportunity to consider a division of the corporate structure in order to ensure that the General Assembly’s mandates and directives for mission are honored and carried out.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has demonstrated relentlessly, since February of 2016, its commitment to reforming itself and the Presbyterian Mission Agency. The Board recognizes that its work is not done, but it believes that it has shown great diligence in working to find new ways to be more effective and efficient without sacrificing inclusion and diversity.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has had a Governance Task Force in place since receiving the report of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Review Committee in early 2016. The task force was charged with reviewing:

- the size of the Board;
- the composition of the Board, including the process for selection;
- the length of service of Board members, including the ability to serve consecutive terms;
- the roles and responsibilities of Board members;
- the committee structure of the Board;
- the relationship of the Board to and with PC(USA) Agencies, Advisory Committees, Advocacy Committees, and other committees and organizations affiliated with PMA;
- best practices for peer groups, including governance models, board, and committee structures.

The results of the board’s focused work in this area may be seen in revisions to the bylaws of PC(USA), A Corporation, the Organization for Mission, and the PMA Manual of Operations … documents that are being presented to the General Assembly through other business items. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board believes that it has embraced the crucial work of reform that was called for by the review committee, evaluating every component of our structural work and seeking to be faithful.

In the process of doing this work, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has become very familiar with the foundational documents on which the work of Presbyterian Mission rests, including the ones listed above, but also lesser known documents such as the appendices to the Organization for Mission—a collection of General Assembly directives, known as “deliverances,” and memoranda that lay out the interconnected, interdependent, and collaborative principles that govern the work of all six General Assembly agencies.

The proposal of the Way Forward Commission and the All Agency Review Committee regarding Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, as of March 1, 2018, seeks to create a body of oversight for the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Office of the General Assembly, with respect to financial, legal, personnel, and corporate matters, so that the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly might focus solely on missional or ecclesiastical matters. This separation of responsibilities is at odds with the holistic view of Reformed Theology that sees the sovereignty of God over all of life. The Confession of 1967 states:

> The church thus orders its life as an institution with a constitution, government, officers, finances, and administrative rules. These are instruments of mission, not ends in themselves. Different orders have served the gospel, and none can claim exclusive validity. A presbyterian polity recognizes the responsibility of all members for ministry and maintains the organic relation of all congregations in the church. It seeks to protect the church from exploitation by ecclesiastical or secular power and ambition. Every church order must be open to such reformation as may be required to make it a more effective instrument of the mission of reconciliation. (Book of Confessions, 9:40)

By moving this body of oversight from the body charged with implementing General Assembly mission to an eleven-member body, with only one member representing the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Way Forward Commission and All Agency Review Committees have increased the likelihood not only of separating mission from administration, but also of creating an additional corporate layer with supervisory powers over mission implementation.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board sees value in a collective approach to providing shared services and agrees with Way Forward and All Agency Review that these functions are not at the core of what it means to be the Presbyterian Mission Agency. However, the creation of such a function should not become an end, in and of itself, divorced from faithful mission practices. To appropriately share services, each Assembly agency first must have its own corporate expression so that it can be viable on its own, then each is free to engage in services with others on an equal footing, and corporate expressions do not determine mission functions. This approach is consistent with Presbyterian polity as established in Book of Order, G-4.0101: “The powers and duties of the trustees shall not infringe upon the powers and duties of the session or the board of deacons.” As an agency of the General Assembly, the duties of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board should not be infringed upon by a separate service corporation.

The Way Forward Commission and the All Agency Review Committee are proposing a structure that effectively sets aside the foundational documents that created the A Corp., gave separate expression to the Foundation, and set forth the responsibilities of the Presbyterian Mission Agency (formerly referred to in these documents as the General Assembly Council). These foundational documents govern the work of the General Assembly through its agencies, not including the Board of Pensions, which was created independently and is separately incorporated.

Under Pennsylvania law, these ecclesial documents are given deference (primacy over secular law); an important component for the separation of church and state.

§ 5107. Subordination of subpart to canon law.

If and to the extent canon law or similar principles applicable to a corporation incorporated for religious purposes sets forth provisions relating to the government and regulation of the affairs of the corporation that are inconsistent with the provisions of this subpart on the same subject, the canon law or similar principles shall control except to the extent prohibited by the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Pennsylvania.”

The division proposed by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board ensures the linkage of the General Assembly Mission Corporation to its origins and its relationship to ecclesial “law.” Without this division, the changes to Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, run risk of losing the vital connection between Presbyterian mission and congregational life, as separating mission from governance, only furthers the corporatization of the church.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-06

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 04-06. See ACREC’s rationale for Item 04-03, p. 426.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-06

Comment on Item 04-06—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of General Assembly respectfully urges the assembly to disapprove Item 04-06. COGA affirms and supports the comment of the All Agency Review Committee and the Way Forward Commission on Item 04-06.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consists of fifteen elected members and was created “to carry out the assembly’s oversight of the Stated Clerk …” (Organization for Mission, IV.C.2.). COGA regularly reviews the work of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly.

WFC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-06

Comment on Item 04-06—From the Way Forward Commission (WFC) with the Concurrence of the All-Agency Review Committee.

The Way Forward Commission (“WFC”), with the concurrence of the All Agency Review Committee (“AARC”), advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to answer Item 04-06 with its action on Recommendation 1. of Item 04-03.
“But speaking the truth in love, we must grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ, from whom the whole body, joined and knit together by every ligament with which it is equipped, as each part is working properly, promotes the body’s growth in building itself up in love.” (Eph. 4:15–16)

Created by the 222nd General Assembly, the WFC was charged to examine and find a new structure paradigm that would address the challenges identified by previous review committees. The commission was aware of the significant struggles our friends and colleagues on the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (“PMAB”) have endured, and their deep desire to find a better way forward. And although we appreciate the significant amount of work they have dedicated, we believe their recommendations do not promote the entire body of Christ or build up the whole of our denomination.

As discussed below, the specific recommendation of the PMAB would reinforce existing issues of control and accountability with respect to the PMAB, are contrary to G-4.0101, and are unwise. More broadly, a new deliverance of corporate authority by the General Assembly is not the answer to the lack of focus on implementing the General Assembly’s mission directives that has plagued the PMAB for a number of years. Instead, these concerns should be addressed by the proposals contained in Recommendation 1 of the Way Forward Commission report, Item 04-03.

A. What “A Corp.” Is

“A Corp.” is shorthand for the corporate entity whose official name is “Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation,” which can trace its existence back to 1799. A Corp. exists by virtue of the requirement of G-4.0101, which requires “the General Assembly shall cause a corporation to be formed and maintained and shall determine a method to constitute the board of trustees by its own rule. The corporation so formed, or individual trustees, shall have the following powers: to receive, hold, encumber, manage, and transfer property, real or personal, for and at the direction of the [General Assembly].” The A Corp allows the General Assembly (including the OGA and PMA) to conduct its business. The current authority of A Corp. was established by a “deliverance” of the 1986 General Assembly, which delivered these powers to A Corp., which at the time was called Central Treasury Corporation. (A “deliverance” is an action of the General Assembly that delivers powers from the General Assembly to a corporation. While the General Assembly can withdraw powers given by a deliverance, to do so it has to specifically act to withdraw the powers “delivered” before it can reassert its own authority over those matters.)

After the reunion of the northern and southern churches, after an initial period when the board of Central Treasury Corporation was elected directly by the General Assembly, membership on the board of the newly named A Corp. was assigned to the General Assembly Council, which was originally conceived to act as an assembly between General Assemblies. The General Assembly Council, after several name changes, has become the PMAB. It no longer acts as an assembly between General Assemblies, but has been reformed in the hope that it would focus on implementing the mission directives set by the General Assembly. However, the members of the PMAB have remained the only members of the A Corp. board of directors—there is no representation on the A Corp board from the ecclesial arm of the corporation, the Office of General Assembly.

B. The Context of Item 04-06

The WFC, together with the AARC, at the direction of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), has been engaged in the process of studying and identifying a vision for the structure and function of the General Assembly agencies of the PC(USA). This mandate arose in the context of the 2016 review of the PMAB, which found: “Though the PMA has produced good work, it is evident that there are significant weaknesses in a number of areas, including: strategic decision-making and priority-setting; organizational culture and work environment; and collaborative efforts with other General Assembly agencies.” After nearly two years of detailed examination, thousands of hours of intensive engagement with staff at all levels, elected leadership, mid councils, and conversation throughout the denomination, both groups tasked by the 222nd General Assembly (2016) have found that these significant weaknesses remain. Both the WFC and AARC have observed that one of the sources of these significant weaknesses is a board that is not effective at handling corporate governance functions and that focuses far more of its energy on corporate matters than on implementing the mission direction of the church and assisting the General Assembly in determining what mission directions are now needed in our changing world. Just one example of this concern is addressed in our comments to Item 10-04, the PMAB “Work Plan,” which in our view fails to give the General Assembly meaningful insight into how the PMAB intends to accomplish its work over the next two years.

The WFC and AARC, in the context of a broad set of recommendations designed to help our national church to make the space for discernment, to work together as one body in Christ, and to change the way we think and the way we act, recommend to this General Assembly a change in the A Corp board of directors. We do so in the belief that to change the focus of our national church, and particularly the PMAB, we must change its culture.

C. Specific Concerns with a Deliverance to Divide A Corp. into Two Corporations

Item 04-06 arose from the WFC and AARC recommendation (Item 04-03, Recommendation 1) that A Corp. retain its current delegation of powers from the General Assembly, but that the PMAB members be replaced as the board of A Corp. by a diverse board nominated by agencies impacted by the work of A Corp. together with nominees from advocacy committees and at large members. The PMAB’s counterproposal was described at the time by the co-moderator of the PMAB’s Governance Task Force as a “nuclear option” in opposition to the proposal to replace PMAB members as the board of A Corp. In effect, the PMAB proposal would divide the existing A Corp. into two corporations, and place most of the property now held by A Corp. into a corporation that continues to be controlled by the board of the PMAB. It is unclear whether the PMAB still recommends this multiplication of corporate entities to the General Assembly: while in public statements members of the PMAB have stated that the proposal is intended to put the PMAB in a position to negotiate issues of corporate control, the proposal as of the date of this comment remains business the PMAB is placing before the General Assembly. To the extent that the PMAB does not withdraw this proposal, the WFC, with the concurrence of the AARC, recommends its disapproval for the following reasons:

- Proposing a new corporation for the exclusive use of the PMAB would take the church in the opposite direction from what the 2016 review and our committees’ work have concluded is needed. For many years the PMAB has retained exclusive control of A Corp., which has resulted in the issues identified by the 2016 review, as well as the additional work our two groups have done over the last two years. The separate incorporation proposal does not free the PMAB to focus on mission, but rather would perpetuate those issues of control and accountability.

- The proposal would leave the Office of the General Assembly with a shell corporation to provide for the delivery of shared services and accountability to the General Assembly. This puts the Office of the General Assembly in an even more precarious position than it is now. Further, the Office of General Assembly itself has strongly rejected the proposal to be severed corporately from the missional arm of the PC(USA).

- Serious questions exist as to whether the proposal is constitutional. The Book of Order, G-4.0101, directs the General Assembly for “a corporation” to “receive, hold, encumber, manage, and transfer property, real or personal …,” not to create a new entity or entities and divide the assets of “A Corp.” to carry out this task.

- The proposal is contrary to the PMAB’s own policy regarding the creation of new corporate entities. In 2007, the predecessor to the PMAB adopted “Criteria and Standards” (attached as Appendix 1) for considering whether a new corporation should be created by the General Assembly. Among other criteria, the PMAB’s own Criteria and Standards require consideration of: (a) whether a separate corporation is needed to accomplish a new mission of the church; (b) whether the existing A Corp. can accomplish the mission objective; and (c) the impact on existing church structures (such as OGA, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc.) that rely on A Corp. to provide services and financial transparency for their work. In advancing its proposal, PMAB has made no effort to address these criteria.

- A Corp. provides services to the General Assembly, and through it, to the entire denomination. It is a mistake to view it as a narrow “shared service” bureau only for PMA and OGA. The money and property it holds is not held solely for PMA and OGA—it is the property of the General Assembly held for the whole church. A Corp. is the denomination’s corporation. It should be managed for the denomination. It should not be divided to create even deeper divisions between agencies that should have a common purpose of serving the whole church.

Apart from its constitutional and practical shortcomings, the proposal to divide A Corp. into two corporations, one of which the PMAB continues to control, is not simply just keeping options open for the PMAB, but rather demonstrates the PMAB has a fundamentally different view than the WFC and AARC of the broader themes that have emerged from our discernment throughout the church and are reflected in our recommendations and administrative actions.

D. Broader Concerns with Any New Deliverance

In the light of critiques of the proposal to divide A Corp., some members of the PMAB have suggested that they may pursue an alternative proposal, presumably by suggesting a substitute for Item 04-06, that creates a new deliverance. Such a new deliverance would not create two corporations, but instead would deliver corporate powers to PMAB without a new incorporation. The WFC, with the concurrence of the AARC, urges the General Assembly that such an action would be both unprecedented and unwise.

In light of statements by PMAB members claiming a deliverance is necessary to accomplish the change in board membership proposed by the WFC and AARC, we received a legal opinion (attached as Appendix 2) from Pennsylvania counsel regarding the issue. To summarize, under Pennsylvania law:

1. There is no legal requirement for a deliverance.
2. There is no requirement in the Book of Order for a deliverance to change the membership of the A Corp. board.
3. There is no requirement in the case law for a deliverance.
4. The Criteria and Standards (attached as Appendix 1) as to creation of new corporations indicate that a deliverance is not actually appropriate here, because no corporation is being created.
The last point is particularly important. As discussed above, PMAB is not, and should not be, a separate corporation. Therefore, it can only create confusion, and potentially a deeper lack of accountability, to give PMAB corporate powers without corporate accountability.

The General Assembly has a different mechanism for delegating authority to the PMAB as an agency of the denomination—amendment of the Organization for Mission. Authority has never been given by the General Assembly to the PMAB through a deliverance. It has been given through the Organization for Mission. Claims that the Organization for Mission is somehow less authoritative than corporate documents ignores our polity and replaces our Presbyterian system of decision-making with the corporate mindset that has created dysfunction at the PMAB.

A Corp. already has, through the 1986 Deliverance, the powers appropriate to the General Assembly’s corporate form, consistent with G-4.0101. No proposal that expands those powers, or that gives PMAB corporate powers without corporate responsibilities is appropriate. Item 04-3, Recommendation 1., allows PMAB to continue to set its budget, control its funds, and to supervise its staff, without the risk and confusion of a new deliverance. Accordingly, the WFC, with the concurrence of the AARC, recommends against approval of any new deliverance as a response to Item 04-06, and instead recommends that the General Assembly answer Item 04-06 with its action on Recommendation 1. of Item 04-03.

Item 04-07

[The assembly answered Item 04-07 by the action taken on Item 04-03, Recommendation 4. See pp. 44, 50.]

* A Resolution to Require Race Audits of the Six PC(USA) Agencies—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018):

1. Direct the agencies of the PC(USA) to utilize an external, professional race auditor outside the PC(USA) agencies who can best expose systemic bias and prejudice and suggest actions toward becoming racially just and equitable employers. Each agency shall engage with the same outside source in order that all are audited by the same standard.

2. Direct that the agencies of the PC(USA) incorporate this process into their regular six-year General Assembly Agency Review processes.

Rationale

The 222nd General Assembly (2016), at the direction of the Churchwide Conversation on Race, Ethnicity, Racism, and Ethnocentrism Report (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 787ff, Item 11-24, Recommendation 1.b.), directed the six agencies of the PC(USA) to “complete organizational reviews of their practices and policies as they impact people of color and racial diversity (known as a ‘race audit’), and to evaluate the potential impacts of future initiatives on people of color and racial diversity.”

In mid-December of 2017, ACREC contacted each of the agencies to see what the agencies could share from their race audit processes and to offer partnership and assistance to them as they worked toward their final reports (due in February of 2018).

The ACREC heard back from four of the six agencies by the time of the submission of this resolution. While grateful for the work that these agencies have done to self-reflect, the responses displayed preliminary work at best (as even acknowledged by one agency). Even when approached with the best of intentions, ACREC notes the inherent inability of any organization to entirely accurately assess and expose its own bias. Fortunately, as Presbyterians, our theology and policy1 undergirds and leads us to this recognition of systemic sin and has been the impetus for the creation of systems of accountability throughout the PC(USA).

Racism is one systemic sin this denomination has committed to working against actively, and that work is one for which the denomination has created clear points of accountability and monitoring, such as the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns. This kind of accountability gives us a more honest perception of ourselves and allows us to make changes and choices necessary to more accurately reflect the realm that God intends.

For these reasons, ACREC sees the necessity of continuing the essential process of exposing racial bias and injustice within our six agencies by engaging outside professionals who are better equipped to uncover those places where systemic and policy biases and injustices exist.

Given the momentum that has already been created by the initial, internal race audit work, now the church has the opportunity to be a leader and model in holding itself accountable to the highest standards of just employment by taking this action and making corrections where necessary.
In God’s mercy, however, work and economic responsibility remain gifts that God bestows on us for the maintenance of our life and that of other creatures. In the Good News of Jesus and in the power of the Spirit, we experience God’s great deliverance of the world from the power of sin, including in economic systems and workplaces of the world. Our workplaces are filled with the struggle between God’s intentions and human corruptions. We are called, as followers of Jesus, to join in this struggle, to seek justice in the midst of injustice, to overcome sin in which we too are complicit. The Reformed tradition supports the view that humans should be fully engaged in service to God and to each other (“God’s Work in Our Hands,” Minutes, 1995, Part I, pp. 424–42).

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 04-07

Comment on Item 04-07—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) supports efforts to increase awareness and understand the impacts of racism within the bodies of the PC(USA). The 222nd General Assembly (2016) approved Item 11-24, which included resources on race audits and power analysis: https://www.pc-biz.org/-/search/3000155. Other items of business before this assembly lift up race audits and personnel audits for action of agencies of the assembly.

The GACOR is charged to advise and provide counsel to General Assembly entities, including the six agencies to ensure fair and effective access to decision-making and full representation/participation in employment. Race audits are important tools to give feedback on equity and inclusion of an employer. The committee welcomes the opportunity to serve as a partner by sharing its own data analysis to address the emerging areas of growth in the agencies once the race audits are complete.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

Item 04-08

[The assembly answered Item 04-08 by the action taken on Item 04-03. See pp. 44, 50.]

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018)

1. Amend Sections V.–VII of the Organization for Mission as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

V. The Presbyterian Mission Agency

Mission, God’s mission, is at the heart of the work to which God calls us. As the Book of Order reminds us:

“In Christ, the Church participates in God’s mission for the transformation of creation and humanity by proclaiming to all people the good news of God’s love, offering to all people the grace of God at font and table, and calling all people to discipleship in Christ.” (F-1.01)

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is the body of the General Assembly in which are lodged the following responsibilities:

a. to cultivate and promote the spiritual welfare of the whole church;

b. to provide resources to support equal employment opportunity and affirmative action for members of racial ethnic groups, for women, for various age groups, for persons regardless of marital condition (married, single, widowed, or divorced), and for persons with disabilities;

c. to develop and propose, for General Assembly approval, the mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities of the Presbyterian Mission Agency; doing so by taking into account the mission work being done by sessions, presbyteries, and synods, and to propose for General Assembly approval an accompanying budget that will implement the mission work plan of the Presbyterian Mission Agency;

d. to act in those specific matters assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency by the General Assembly or the Constitution, acting always according to previously enacted General Assembly policies, reporting fully to each subsequent General Assembly its actions;

e. to perform such additional responsibilities and duties as may be assigned by the General Assembly.
steward this function, the Board and the Agency shall understand this mission based on the Constitution and General Assembly actions, an accounting of denominational resources, and the interpretation of our times and national context.

Standing between the General Assembly and the staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Board’s work is to advise the General Assembly regarding mission priorities, programs, and strategies; lead the Agency in implementing the directives of the General Assembly; and then reporting back to the General Assembly with results and additional advice. It is the Board’s responsibility to make the vision for mission become reality, helping to manage the practical problems those visions and dreams might face.

The Board’s work will move in a flow from General Assembly to General Assembly. It begins by advising the General Assembly on mission priorities, programs, and strategies. At a General Assembly, the Board receives guidance and direction. The Board then leads staff in the agency to fulfill those General Assembly directives. The Board oversees and aligns assets toward the fulfillment of those directives in the context for mission, discerning potential shifts in God’s calling. The Board then responds to General Assembly directives, providing advice on revised priorities at the next General Assembly. This process is inclusive, multilayered and cyclical, continuing from each General Assembly to the next. The Board should engage a broad array of stakeholders to strengthen the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s ability to faithfully respond to the Holy Spirit and align its life with God’s mission. Setting strategy and guiding policy in this way necessitates that the Board employ theological, intercultural, corporate, and legal knowledge all enveloped in prayer.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall advise and respond to the General Assembly on priorities, programs, and strategies for addressing matters of concern for the mission of our church. The primary purpose of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is to lead and coordinate the total mission program. It will cultivate a style of work that emphasizes

- coordination among ministries;
- flexible deployment of resources to match changing needs;
- allocation of funding to reflect stated goals;
- attention to the needs and gifts of congregations;
- effective relationships with all mid councils; and
- holding the vision described without reverting to old patterns.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly jointly have responsibility for developing a per capita budget and apportionment.

All restricted and unrestricted funds (principal or income) that support the programs or functions for which the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible are allocated by the Presbyterian Mission Agency and distributed in accordance with procedures approved by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. In every case the instructions of the donors are carefully followed. Such resources presently include contributions from individuals, congregations, and related organizations; proceeds from wills and bequests; and sales of property and other assets. All funds administered by the Board of Pensions, including dues and earnings on investments, are specifically excluded.\(^1\)

D. Personnel Responsibilities

Regarding the Presbyterian Mission Agency staff, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for the following:

6. Approval of compensation guidelines within which salaries are administered.

Members of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board are not eligible for election or selection as staff during the period of their term of service.

E. Reporting

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for submitting a report to the General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency will report regularly to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, keeping the Board fully informed about its work. Matters that involve an exception or a proposed change in Presbyterian Mission Agency procedures, a major shift in program emphasis, or a major budget adjustment, require action by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. Issues of social witness policy, advocacy for racial ethnic and women’s concerns, and those related to Presbyterian theological institutions are reported to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and General Assembly.

VALUES STATEMENT FOR FINANCIAL ISSUES

The funding of the mission and ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) rests on the following principles:

Faithfulness to Jesus Christ—because God loves the world and Christ gave his life, we are called, as individuals and groups, to respond with our lives and resources.

Flexibility—because we believe that the Holy Spirit informs the missional instincts of all God’s people honoring the promises of the past and preparing the promise of the future, we will accommodate regional differences, historical practices, and changing realities.

Respect—because we seek to have the same mind in us that was in Christ Jesus, who looked not to his own interests but to the interest of others (Phil. 2:4–5), we will acknowledge the passion of donors through accountable systems and transparently open, informed and inclusive decision-making, acknowledging the many views of mission designed and enacted in every part of the church. We recognize the tension that exists between respecting the passions of donors and encouraging support of our connectional nature, but confess that “the earth is the Lord’s and all that is in it” (Ps. 24:1–2).

Communication—because we are servants of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God (1 Cor. 4:1); we will commit ourselves to frequent interaction with mid councils and individuals, for the purpose of mutual clarification and unity of experience and hope across diverse boundaries.

Therefore, a design for funding Christ’s work throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will be consistent with the following core values:

1. A design for funding Christ’s work will recognize stewardship as integral to Christian discipleship:
   ● promoting the biblical concept of tithing,
   ● encouraging stewardship education that is understood as the faithful response of discipleship to God’s gifts in all of life,
   ● requiring the development of stewardship education materials that are creative, attractive, clear, and affordable.

2. A design for funding Christ’s work will appeal to the passions and values of members, pastors, mid councils, and benefactors:
   ● communicating to the head and heart of the people of God
   ● engaging the donor in the mission of the church
   ● recognizing that everyone is a beneficiary of God’s grace, and everyone benefits from joyful stewardship.

3. A design for funding Christ’s work will be transparent and accountable:
   ● honoring donor intent,
   ● offering easily understood opportunities for giving,
meeting clear standards of accountability for pastors, sessions, and potential donors.

4. A design for funding Christ’s work will utilize our connectionalism, recognize our interdependence, and demonstrate our partnership in mission:
   ● emphasizing the value of interpersonal relationships,
   ● encouraging the more inclusive council to facilitate the mission of its constituent members,
   ● encouraging the less inclusive council to participate in the mission of the church beyond its bounds,
   ● encouraging mutual investment of time and resources among mid councils and constituent members recognizing that Presbyterians are the primary base of support for Presbyterian missions, and affirming the importance and priority of funding Presbyterian validated mission.

5. A design for funding Christ’s work will emphasize information sharing between mid councils leading to a dynamic mission and vision:
   ● placing mid councils in structural and interactive relationships,
   ● valuing the wisdom of other mid councils,
   ● recognizing the need for consultation prior to engaging in ministries beyond one’s bounds.

6. A design for funding Christ’s work will encourage two-way communications:
   ● welcoming and encouraging a flow of information and feedback,
   ● recognizing that information sharing benefits the whole church,
   ● encouraging face-to-face communication when possible.

7. A design for funding Christ’s work will honor historic relationships:
   ● recognizing that previous funding systems had value and may continue to inform the development of new funding systems,
   ● requiring careful investigation of current funding partnerships before altering or eliminating those partnerships.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY BUDGET DEVELOPMENT

A. Mission Budget Cycle

The Mission Budget will be developed in budget cycles. Each budget cycle will consist of two consecutive calendar years, where the first year is the year following a biennial General Assembly meeting (e.g., 2008 General Assembly, 2009/2010 budget cycle). A separate budget will be developed for each year within the cycle.

B. Basic Mission Direction

1. The Mission Work Plan is adopted by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and provides the framework for the two-year budget cycle.

2. The Presbyterian Mission Agency will develop proposals that will advance the Mission Work Plan.

3. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will recommend a budget to the General Assembly that will provide the funding to fulfill the goals in the Mission Work Plan for the budget cycle.

C. The Proposed Budget

1. At the second Presbyterian Mission Agency Board meeting of the year prior to the budget cycle, (e.g., May of 2008 for the 2009/2010 budget cycle), the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will review the budget presented by the Deputy Executive Director for Shared Services Chief Financial Officer and recommend to the General Assembly a proposed budget for the budget cycle that embodies the Mission Work Plan and describing the work to be added or deleted as part of the recommendation. The Executive Committee will recommend a budget if, for any reason, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board does not make a recommendation.
2. At the General Assembly during the year before the budget cycle (e.g., 2008 General Assembly for the 2009/2010 budget cycle), the appropriate assembly committee of the General Assembly will receive the report of the Mission Work Plan and the proposed budget for approval and recommendation to the full assembly.

3. The appropriate assembly committee of the General Assembly will recommend a balanced budget for each year in the budget cycle, incorporating work from the proposed budget and overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, and other actions of the General Assembly, for approval as the outline of work for the budget cycle. The General Assembly may make decisions to add or subtract any element to or from proposed budgets. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will then make appropriate adjustments.

D. The Detailed Budget

1. Detailed Budget Development
   a. Following the General Assembly, the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency will review the changes made by the assembly and adjust the budget accordingly. Further, in the second year of the budget cycle, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will develop the budget for the subsequent assembly as outlined in the Manual of Operations and under the leadership of the Executive Committee, detailed implementation of the Mission Work Plan as approved by the General Assembly will be outlined, and work responsibility assigned.
   b. Under the management of Shared Services and with specific involvement by the ministry areas, a detailed budget proposal that encompasses the work approved by the General Assembly will be developed for each year in the budget cycle.

2. Approval of the Detailed Budget

At its third meeting of the year prior to each budget cycle (e.g., September 2008 for the 2009/2010 budget cycle), the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will review both the detailed budget for the following year and the most up-to-date financial information. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will review the adequacy of the Executive Committee’s response to the General Assembly directives in the adopted budget and, after any necessary changes, approve the detailed budget for the following year with particular expenditures by organizational entity displaying both budget offices and relatedness to the basic Mission Work Plan.

E. Budget Monitoring

1. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will monitor the accomplishment of the Mission Work Plan and the appropriate expenditure of funds throughout the budget cycle.

2. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board will report to each biennial General Assembly on the results of the work undertaken during the previous two budget years (e.g., 2008 General Assembly for budget years 2006 and 2007), including full disclosure of the financial results of each year and other information related to the financial condition of the church. These two budget years will not be within the same budget cycle.

F. Roles and Responsibilities in Developing Budgets

1. The General Assembly does the following:
   a. Determines churchwide mission goals upon which budget development will be based.
   b. Has the authority to institute and terminate programmatic emphases and activity.
   c. Upon recommendation from the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, approves both the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and the Per Capita Budget.

2. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board does the following:
   a. Implements General Assembly decisions regarding (1) Mission Work Plan goals and objectives and (2) programmatic activity.
   b. Recommends a Mission Work Plan for each budget year to the General Assembly, after appropriate consultation.
   c. Presents the budget to the General Assembly.
   d. Approves detailed budgets based upon General Assembly action.
   e. Oversees programmatic activity funded through the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and Presbyterian Mission Agency Board related work from the Per Capita Budget.
3. The Deputy Executive Director for Shared Chief Financial Officer is responsible for the following:
   a. Manages the process for budget development, in consultation with the Board.
   b. Prepares budget presentations for both the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the General Assembly.

4. The Deputy Executive Director for Mission is responsible for the following:
   a. Prepare descriptions of programmatic activities in appropriate form for budget consideration, reflecting the adopted Mission Work Plan goals.
   b. Develop detailed budgets based on budget allocations made by the General Assembly and as instructed by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board.

G. Per Capita Budget

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) jointly have responsibility for developing a per capita budget and apportionment for recommendation to the General Assembly. The per capita budget will be prepared using timelines similar to those for the General Assembly mission budget.

SHARED SERVICES

Shared Services is accountable to the Executive Director and carries out the following responsibilities.

A. To provide accounting and reporting services for
   1. the Presbyterian Mission Agency, its ministry areas, and certain related bodies and committees;
   2. the Office of the General Assembly;
   3. other entities as requested on a fee-for-service basis; and

   1. controller/financial accounting controls, general ledger maintenance, general accounting, financial reporting, accounts payable, accounts receivable, church and student loans, payroll, budgeting, fixed asset management, overseas accounting, inventory control, and project accounting;
   2. treasury/central receiving service, bank relations and services, overseas treasury service (as appropriate), foreign exchange, short-term investments, working capital/cash management, and endowment and revenue accounting;

Ultimately, it is the responsibility of each Deputy Executive Director to ensure that expenditures for their respective areas are within the approved budget before commitments are made.

D. To maintain all financial records and prepare quarterly reports to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and monthly reports to the executive staff leadership of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

E. To prepare and present the annual report of the Statement of Financial Position, Statement of Activities and Changes in Net Assets, and Statement of Cash Flows of the General Assembly that will be audited by a certified public accountant and presented to the General Assembly.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has been in an extended season of discernment and re-shaping following the 2016 work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Review Committee and related actions of the 222nd General Assembly (2016). We have had dozens of conversations with stakeholders regarding the work of the agency. The major result has been an overhaul of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board’s Manual of Operations. The Organization for Mission is one part of the Manual of the General Assembly. Chapter IV of the Organization for Mission deals with “General Assembly Officers and Committees and the Office of the General Assembly.” As such, the responsibility for recommending revisions rests with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. For other chapters it is the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to recommend revisions.

The PMA Board is recommending changes to Chapter V ("The Presbyterian Mission Agency"), Chapter VII (“Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation”) and Appendix A (“Financial Issues”) in order to bring them into line with proposals adopted by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board relative to governance matters and in some cases to update them to be consistent with current staffing practices of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

Item 04-09

[The assembly approved Item 04-09 with amendment. See pp. 44, 50–51.]

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board recommends that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve the revised Sections I. and V. of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board Manual of Operations as follows: [Current text is to be deleted in Sections I. and V. and the new text below would be inserted.]

PRESBYTERIAN MISSION AGENCY BOARD

MANUAL OF OPERATIONS

I. Manual

A. Authoritative Documents

This Manual of Operations shall be in compliance with and subordinate to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), General Assembly Deliverances, the Organization for Mission, the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, and General Assembly actions directing and guiding the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

B. Role and Responsibilities

Mission, God’s mission, is at the heart of the work to which God calls us. As the Book of Order reminds us:

“... In Christ, the Church participates in God’s mission for the transformation of creation and humanity by proclaiming to all people the good news of God’s love, offering to all people the grace of God at font and table, and calling all people to discipleship in Christ.” (F.101)

In service to the agency as it fulfills its place in this, the Church’s calling, the primary purpose of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (Board) is to lead and coordinate the mission program of the General Assembly. In order to steward this function, the Board and the Presbyterian Mission Agency (Agency) shall understand this mission based on the authoritative documents, an accounting of denominational resources, and the interpretation of our times and national context.

Standing between the General Assembly and the staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Board’s work is to advise the General Assembly regarding mission priorities, programs and strategies; lead the Agency in implementing the directives of the General Assembly; and then reporting back to the General Assembly with results and additional advice. It is the Board’s responsibility to make the vision for mission become reality, helping to manage the practical problems those visions and dreams might face.

The Board’s work will move in a flow from General Assembly to General Assembly. It begins by advising the General Assembly on mission priorities, programs and strategies. At a General Assembly, the Board receives guidance and direction. The Board then leads staff in the agency to fulfill those General Assembly directives. The Board oversees and aligns assets toward the fulfillment of those directives in the context for mission, discerning potential shifts in God’s calling. The Board then responds to General Assembly directives, providing advice on revised priorities at the next General Assembly. This process is inclusive, multilayered, and cyclical, continuing from each General Assembly to the next. The Board should engage a broad array of stakeholders to strengthen the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s ability to faithfully respond to the Holy Spirit and align its life with God’s mission. Setting strategy and guiding policy in this way necessitates that the Board employ theological, intercultural, corporate, and legal knowledge all enveloped in prayer.

V. Amendment Process

A. Amendments to the Manual of Operations

1. Individual Presbyterian Mission Agency Board members or members of the Executive Director’s Office staff may submit proposed changes to the Manual of Operations in writing to the Board Chair a minimum of one month prior to a Presbyterian Mission Agency Board meeting.

2. The Board Chair shall respond to submissions a minimum of two weeks prior to a Presbyterian Mission Agency Board meeting.

3. Approval by the Coordinating Committee is necessary prior to consideration by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board.

5. Changes to Sections II–IV of the Manual of Operations require approval by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. A written report of changes to Sections II–IV shall be submitted to the General Assembly as an information item.

6. Documents included in this Manual on the basis of General Assembly action, such as the Open Meeting Policy, may not be amended without General Assembly approval.

B. Amendments to other Manuals

1. The manuals of several other committees (Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), Committee on Theological Education, Mission Responsibility through Investment Committee, Mission Development Resources Committee, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Advisory Committee, Presbyterian Hunger Program Advisory Committee, Presbyterian Committee on the Self-Development of People, and the United States Advisory Committee for the Jinishian Memorial Program) must be consistent with this Manual of Operations.
2. Proposed changes to their manual of operations shall be submitted to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, through the Coordinating Committee, following customary procedures, for adoption or rejection.

3. By action of the General Assembly in 2016 and 2014 respectively, changes to the operating manuals for the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, are reviewed and approved by the General Assembly Review Committee, which oversees their work on a six-year cycle, rather than the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board.

Endnotes

1. Transitional Elements—(this footnote will be deleted following the 224th General Assembly (2020)). In order to affect a gradual transition in the size of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board:
   a. The reduction of Board size (from 40 voting and 17 non-voting to 20 voting and 9 non-voting) will be accomplished by a process of attrition overseen by the General Assembly Nominating Committee with respect to elected members. Other changes, regarding ex-officio and corresponding members, will take place immediately.
   b. Individuals, including at-large members of committees, elected to Board service prior to action of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) regarding this Manual of Operations, may continue to be eligible for election in their current roles until their original eligibility has been exhausted.
   c. Any members elected prior to the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to fill unexpired terms shall be eligible for nomination to an additional four-year term.

2. “As long as the Board of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, remains the same as the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, five voting members will be from the following: (a) Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, (b) Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, (c) Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, (d) Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, (e) Presbyterian Women, Inc.” (Action of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (September 2017).

3. Presbyterian Women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Inc. (“PW”), a Delaware corporation, was incorporated in 2009 as an entity related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Inc., as an integrated auxiliary. The covenant-based Institutional Relationship Agreement between PW and the Presbyterian Mission Agency provides this ex-officio membership with voice and vote on the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. A member of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board also serves on the PW corporate Board with voice and vote.

4. “Attorney-in-fact” means authorized agent, and the Corporation is given this authority by the 1986 Deliverance and by a Limited Power of Attorney from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board approved the above changes. Changes to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Manual of Operations must be approved by the General Assembly.

In February of 2016, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board created the Governance Task Force:

to complete a comprehensive review of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (PMAB) governance model and bring final recommendations to the Board’s September 2017 meeting, for submission to the 223rd General Assembly (2018), regarding:

1. the size of the Board;
2. the composition of the Board, including the process for selection;
3. the length of service of Board members, including the ability to serve consecutive terms;
4. the roles and responsibilities of Board members;
5. the committee structure of the Board;
6. the relationship of the Board to and with PC(USA) agencies, advisory committees, advocacy committees, and other committees and organizations affiliated with PMA; and
7. best practices for peer groups, including governance models, board and committee structures.

Methodology

In conducting its work over the past twenty-three months, the task force held dozens of telephonic and in-person meetings. In addition, members of the task force engaged in numerous conversations with the leaders of the Way Forward Commission, All Agency Review, the other PC(USA) agencies, the advisory and advocacy committees, and other committees and organizations affiliated with the Presbyterian Mission Agency (PMA).
In September of 2017, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board approved in concept a raft of proposals, and directed that they be codified into a new Manual of Operations. In February of 2018, a new Manual of Operations was presented to the Board for approval, and recommendation to the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

Proposal Overview

The driving purpose of each of these changes is to advance PMA’s ministry and mission, indeed the ministry and mission of the whole church, and to ensure that it is more effective and efficient, focused on being the body of Christ in the world. The directional goals of the Mission Work Plan help lead us toward that outcome:

- Evangelism and Discipleship
- Servant Leader Formation
- Justice and Reconciliation

Subject areas include:

1. Size of Board

Our research suggests that the current Board size (40 voting members + 15 corresponding members + 2 ecumenical advisory members + 4 at-large committee members) is too large for effective collective discernment and governance. The current differentiation of membership categories creates confusion for participants regarding who has a vote and builds a hierarchical system that challenges the equality of members. This is often seen when the Executive Committee needs to convene for decision-making between full Board meetings. The large size also creates the impression that individual choices do not matter—that someone else on the Board will pick up the task or will represent diversity.

Best practices indicate that a smaller Board will produce a more engaged process of discernment and oversight. In September of 2017, the Board voted to recommend that as long as the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board also serves as the Board of Directors for Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, that Board have fifteen at-large members, one member each from four related committees, and an ex-officio member from Presbyterian Women. Non-voting members would include the senior staff position from each of the General Assembly Agencies and the General Assembly Moderator.

2. Composition of Board (Including Process for Selection)

The current model for acquiring Board members relies first on nominations based on geography and membership in groups within the church and is not concerned with diversity of qualifications. This restricts the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and a few members are added as at-large committee members, without concern for diversity, in order to gain the needed skills. The Board believes that the General Assembly Nominating Committee process is capable of ensuring inclusivity and geographic representation without additional restrictions being placed by the Manual of Operations, so that sufficient social, ecclesial, and skill diversity may be present on the Board.

3. Length of Service (and Multiple Terms)

Currently Board members are elected to serve one, nonrenewable six-year term. Our research shows that in today’s mobile society, individuals often have difficulty making a six-year commitment to a Board. At each General Assembly, multiple members have been elected to fill unexpired terms. At the same time, it does take a few years of experience for new members to learn the scope of the ministries of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

Our proposal calls for members to be elected to a four-year term, with the opportunity of election for one additional four-year term. We believe this will help address the needs of a mobile society, while also allowing individuals to develop long-term expertise with the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

4. Relationship of the Board to and with PC(USA) Agencies, Advisory Committees, Advocacy Committees, and Other Committees and Organizations Affiliated with PMA

Currently the Board maintains these relationships through a combination of receiving corresponding members and sending members to serve on other bodies in a variety of capacities. These two categories will be addressed separately: Corresponding Members and Deployments.

- Corresponding Members—The Board currently has fifteen corresponding members: two from each of the other agencies (chair and executive), one each from the three advocacy and advisory committees, one rotating seat from the Committee on Theological Education, and our own Executive Director. The current model has not been effective at ensuring a relationship between the other entities and the Board. It has not facilitated communication to and with the full Board. In addition, several of the corresponding members have not made Board meeting attendance a priority.
Our proposal calls for reducing the number of corresponding members to seven: one from each of the six General Assembly agencies (including our own Executive Director) and the General Assembly Moderator.

- Ecumenical Advisory and Committee At-Large Members

Currently, the Board has two ecumenical advisory members (with voice in plenary and voice/vote in committee), two at-large Finance Committee members (with voice/vote in committee, and voice in plenary on financial matters), and two at-large Audit Committee members (with voice/vote in committee and voice in plenary on matters relating to the audit function). The members serve a two-year term, and may be reelected for two additional two-year terms.

Our proposal is to allow the current members serving in these roles to finish their terms and any remaining future eligibility, but then not to continue with these forms of membership in the new governance structure.

Ecumenical collaboration will be continued through the ecumenical advisory members.

Committee at-large members have brought needed professional experience to the work of the Board, but in the new model, the primary qualifier for Board service would be professional expertise. Therefore, these positions will not be needed.

5. Organization of the Manual of Operations

The former Manual of Operations contained multiple appendices in addition to the Manual. The Manual section required General Assembly approval. Appendices were authoritative upon Board approval, but were not well-organized, making it difficult for Board members to have a comprehensive understanding of their responsibilities.

In this revision, the organization of the Manual has changed.

- Section I is the traditional Manual.
- Section II combined all items related to Board Operations.
- Section III focuses on Staff Operations.
- Section IV deals with relationships with other organizations
- Section V describes the amendment process, and maintains the General Assembly’s oversight of Section I and authorizes the Board to approve Sections II–IV.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-09

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-09.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) supports this item and recommends its approval. ACREC acknowledges the need for diverse voices representing persons of color participating in the decision-making of the PMA. The recommended change in board size and membership is a proactive change and acknowledges the critical importance of the partnership with and the work of ACREC and ACWC.

Grateful for the partnership that has grown between the Board and ACREC, our hope is that even if the A Corp is separated from the board, ACREC would still have a seat at the table as a full member of the PMA Board.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-09

Advice & Counsel on Item 04-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 04-09 with the following amendment:

In the Endnotes section: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

2. [As long as the Board of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, remains the same as the Board of the Presbyterian Mission Agency,] [five] [Five] voting members will be from the following: (a) Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, (b) Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, (c) Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, (d) Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, (e) Presbyterian Women, Inc. (Action of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (September 2017).]
The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns has faithfully sent a member to serve as corresponding member to the Presbyterian Mission Agency for many years. As corresponding members, we contributed to conversations and advised the board, but could not vote.

After many conversations and the building of a healthy ministry partnership, ACWC and the Governance Task Force members agreed that in the newly proposed iteration of the board, the advocacy committees should have a seat at the table as voting members. ACWC is grateful for both this partnership and the opportunity to continue to work closely with the PMA Board.

Unfortunately, this partnership was quickly overshadowed by the struggles that have continued to this day with the proposals made by the Way Forward Commission and the All-Agency Review Committee regarding the A. Corp and its separation from the PMA Board. ACWC has drafted our own Advice and Counsel on this proposal, but what is of concern here regarding the PMA Manual of Operations is the language that still remains in the Endnotes, as cited above.

Via further conversation with members of the Governance Task Force of the PMA Board, it is ACWC’s understanding that regardless of whether or not the A. Corp remains the same as the PMA Board, ACWC will have a seat at the table of the board as a full, voting member. That said, we would prefer that the language as written in the endnote be removed from the official document in order to avoid confusion in the future.

Item 04-Info

“God alone is Lord of conscience....”

There has long been a fundamental principle in our denomination for transparency and openness in process, information, and discernment in order to engender trust, to allow for the work of the Holy Spirit to flow freely, and to reflect respect for the talent and perspectives of all members of our community. Our open meetings policies are just one manifestation of this underlying philosophy.

We acknowledge that the scriptures and our Reformed Christian tradition urges us to speak in love, tact, kindness, care, and with proper decorum, being sensitive as Jesus was to the privacy and feelings of others. However, scripture and our Reformed tradition also urges us to speak the truth of our convictions. Over the past decades, becoming particularly acute in recent years, there has been an unwritten practice in some of our denominational agencies—perhaps put into place with the best intentions from experience in non-ecclesial or corporate contexts—that has resulted in an unhealthy institutional culture in our denomination at the staff and board levels of fear and intimidation with respect to limitations on free speech, freedom of conscience, and disclosure of information, unwarranted suspicion and claims of disloyalty, and noncompliance with the spirit of our denomination’s open meeting policies. This action does not alter or replace these open meeting policies.

Such restrictions on free and candid speech, claims of insubordination or demands for “loyalty” when speaking one’s truth privately or publicly, even informal pressure that weighs on an individual’s willingness to speak their truth and exercise freedom of conscience—especially when accompanied by intimidation or threats of termination or legal action—are all unconscionable at the Lord’s Table. Our ultimate loyalty lies with Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior and to His church as a whole, not to any particular agency or individual.

THEREFORE, in order to further the vision for the healthy functioning of the agencies of the national denomination in terms of institutional culture, transparency and openness; and because this vision is important enough to be lifted up in administrative action, the General Assembly Way Forward Commission hereby takes the following administrative action, effective immediately:

Limits on Confidentiality. With respect to matters discussed in public, private, or in executive or confidential sessions of staff or governing entities (including committees of staff or governing entities), only such information shall be required to be kept confidential that directly relates to

(a) personnel matters regarding a particular employee or position,

(b) pending sale, disposition or acquisition of property, or

(c) pending or threatened litigation (but not litigation that is merely possible),

(d) confidentiality obligations imposed by law or regulation,
(e) matters that may unjustifiably embarrass, humiliate, or defame another or invade another’s privacy, with no legally allowable or constructive purpose; in each case if specifically designated as confidential; and all other conversation and matters, including those related to process and application of confidentiality, shall not be subject to such confidentiality restrictions.

Excepting the information listed above and under “Limitations” below, all individuals, including denominational staff and members of governing entities (boards, committees), shall be free to discuss and express their personal opinions both publicly and privately on any and all matters that fall outside those restrictions, consistent with their role in assuring fair deliberation of issues within the church, even if the underlying information was made known in executive or confidential session. They shall be free to do so without real or implied threat against their status, employment, or reputation, so long as they are not using their position to boost their personal opinions. Moreover, no investigatory or disciplinary action may be taken in response to the exercise or purported exercise of these rights made in good faith.

Transparency of Financial Information. These principles also apply with respect to disclosure of accurate and verifiable financial information, including without limitation conversations and financial information with respect to budgets and sources/uses of funds. There has evolved a practice within certain denominational entities of restricting access to the full detail of financial information, even among staff who are responsible for a particular area. The guiding principle should always be towards full and complete disclosure of all accurate and verifiable information, with exceptions made sparingly, due to overwhelmingly clear and appropriate reasons, and determined collectively by leadership and the line-users of such information.

This principle of full disclosure is not intended as a license to allow those seeking information to burden or harass staff or board members of a church entity or agency by demanding such information in excessive or repeated ways. Though church agencies must provide clear financial reports and information regarding their ministries, it is also understood that certain items may not be disclosed if deemed to be privileged or confidential information as described above. It is also understood that the staff or board members of agencies shall refer inquirers to information when it is readily available through public records, the records of the Presbyterian Historical Society, General Assembly records, the records of the Office of the General Assembly, or the like.

Interagency Relationships. This transparency, openness, and full disclosure extends to relationships between and among agencies and other entities within the denomination as well. We are all part of the same body in Christ. Interagency exchanges, relationships, and arrangements are not arms-length, third party transactions, and they must not be treated as such.

Limitations. This action does not alter any specific restrictions that are placed upon disclosure of information due to explicit requirements of (i) law or regulation, such as HIPAA, HITECH, and other federal and state regulations; nor (ii) binding third-party contractual provisions in effect, such as donor-specified or third-party confidentiality restrictions; nor (iii) personal information of pensioners, donors, beneficiaries, investors, borrowers, or others whose information must remain protected for purposes of cyber security or customer confidentiality (which for data security might in some instances preclude the sharing of certain IT information); nor (iv) competitive market advantage, such as draft strategic plans or proprietary software; in each case only to the minimum restriction required. This action does not alter any existing arrangements in place between an agency or entity (including its governing board) and the General Assembly.

In speaking our truths and expressing our opinions, individuals should also act with prudence, respect, humility, discretion, love, and an acknowledgement that authority for decision-making for particular matters is placed in particular individuals or entities. Individuals that have taken on specific roles at the General Assembly—resource people, platform and committee assistants, parliamentarians—by taking on that task have in effect chosen to limit their right of conscience in order to assist the assembly in its tasks, and therefore have a separate duty to refrain from attempting to influence the opinions of commissioners during the assembly. Further, agency employees attending an assembly should not use their presence to attempt to revisit internal agency decisions with which they disagree. For example, a staff member who lost the internal debate on agency priorities should not instigate a commissioners’ resolution to have the General Assembly direct PMA to reverse its priorities and reinstate the staff member’s priority. However, these examples are exceptions to the general rule that staff members should be allowed to honestly express their views and concerns without fear of sanction or retaliation.

The commission directs staff and governing entities of all six denominational agencies to review their policies and procedures, both formal and informal, to comply with the spirit of this administrative action, subject to any existing agreements between General Assembly and the agencies; and directs that, in all interpretation of the requirements of this administrative action, the minimal restriction on disclosure and/or speech required be put into effect.

The Chair of the Board may be, ex officio, a voting member of each such other committee or other body except a nominating committee, and shall designate or appoint the chair of each particular committee or other body. The Board of Directors may designate one or more Directors as alternate members of any such committee or other body, who may replace any absent or disqualified member at any meeting of the committee or other body. In the absence or disqualification of a member and the alternate or alternates, if any, designated for such member of any such committee or other body, the member or members thereof present at any meeting and not disqualified from voting, whether or not the member or members constitute a quorum, may unanimously appoint another Director to act at the meeting in the place of any such absent or disqualified member. 2. The amendment or repeal of any resolutions of the Board.
3. The filling of vacancies in the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

(c) No committee of the Board of Directors, other than the Executive Committee, shall, pursuant to resolution of the Board of Directors or otherwise, exercise any of the powers or authority vested by these bylaws, or other applicable law in the Board of Directors as such, but any other committee of the Board of Directors may make recommendations to the Board of Directors or Executive Committee concerning the exercise of such powers and authority.

(d) A majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee, or Directors designated to replace them as provided in this section, shall be present at each meeting to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business and the acts of a majority of the Directors in office designated to a committee or their replacements shall be the acts of the committee.

Unless otherwise provided in the delegation by the Board of Directors, when acting on behalf of the Corporation, such other body shall be governed by and subject to the applicable provisions of these bylaws, including without limitation provisions relating to fiduciary duties and conflicts of interest. Such other body shall report to the Board of Directors upon request and the report shall be recorded in the minutes of meetings of the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE III

Section 3.01. Notice. Whenever written notice is required to be given to any person under the provisions of the articles, these bylaws, or applicable law, it may be given to such person, either personally or by sending a copy thereof by first class mail, postage prepaid, or by email, to his or her address appearing on the books of the Corporation, or in the case of Directors of the Corporation, supplied by the Director to the Corporation for the purpose of notice. If the notice is sent by mail or by email, it shall be deemed to have been given to the person entitled thereto when deposited in the United States mail or upon transmission to such person. A notice of meeting shall specify the place, day and hour of the meeting and any other information required by law or these bylaws. When a meeting is adjourned, it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement, recorded in the minutes, at the meeting at which such adjournment is taken.

Section 3.02. Waivers of Notice. Whenever any written notice is required to be given under the provisions of the articles, these bylaws, or applicable law, a waiver thereof in writing, signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, whether before or after the time stated therein, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice. Except as otherwise required by this section and by Section 6.06 of these bylaws, neither the business to be transacted at nor the purpose of a meeting need be specified in the waiver of notice of such meeting. Attendance of a person at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a person attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting, at the beginning of the meeting, to the transaction of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened.

Section 3.03. Modification of Proposal Contained in Notice. Whenever the language of a proposed resolution is included in a written notice of a meeting, the meeting considering the resolution may without further notice adopt it with such clarifying or other amendments as do not enlarge its original purpose.

Section 3.04. Conference Telephone Meetings. One or more persons may participate in a meeting of the Board of Directors or of a committee of the Board by means of conference telephone or other electronic communications equipment by means of which all persons participating in the meeting can hear each other. The Board of Directors may from time to time elect such other officers as the business of the Corporation may require, including a Secretary and one or more Assistant Secretaries, each of whom has such authority, and perform such duties as are provided in these bylaws, or as the Board of Directors may from time to time determine. The Vice Presidents shall perform the duties of the Chief Financial Officer in the absence of the Chief Financial Officer and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to them by the Board of Directors, the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall ensure that notices are given and records and reports properly kept and filed by the Corporation as required by law. The Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall be the custodian of the seal of the Corporation and see that it is affixed to all documents to be executed on behalf of the Corporation under its seal. In general, the Secretary or Assistant Secretary shall perform all duties incident to the office of secretary, and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to the Secretary by the Board of Directors, or the President, or the Chief Financial Officer. The Board of Directors of the Corporation shall cause the Secretary to be accountable to the Chief Financial Officer or to such other person as may succeed the functions of that position.

Section 4.12. The Treasurer. The Treasurer shall have or provide for the custody of the funds or other property of the Corporation and shall keep a separate book account of the same to his or her credit as Treasurer. The Treasurer shall collect and receive, or provide for the collection and receipt of, moneys earned by or in any manner due to or received by the Corporation; shall deposit all funds in his or her custody as Treasurer in such banks or other places of deposit (including the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (hereinafter the “Fiduciary Corporation”) as the Board of Directors may from time to

Section 4.15. Compensation. The compensation of the officers, employees and other agents shall be determined from time to time by the Board of Directors, a committee of such Board, or any other body to which power to retain or appoint such employees or other agents has been assigned or delegated pursuant to Sections 2.3, 2.11, or 4.02 of this Article. The establishment and annual review of a consistent compensation structure for all such officers, employees, and other agents shall be the responsibility of the Board of Directors, or a committee of such Board (in either instance, in consultation with any other body or bodies to which a delegation of authority for retention or appointment of employees and agents has been made), which shall also annually review and approve the specific compensation of the five most highly-compensated such officers and employees. All employees, including officer employees, shall be covered by personnel policies reviewed and approved by the Board of Directors, or any committee of such Board, or any other body or bodies to which a delegation of such authority has been made, which policies shall be set forth in an Employee Handbook.

ARTICLE V

Indemnification of Directors, Officers, etc.

Section 5.01. Scope of Indemnification. (a) The Corporation shall indemnify an indemnified representative against any liability incurred in connection with any proceeding in which the indemnified representative may be involved as a party or otherwise, by reason of the fact that such person is or was serving in an indemnified capacity, including without limitation any liability resulting from any actual or alleged breach or neglect of duty, error, misstatement or misleading statement, negligence, gross negligence or act giving rise to strict or products liability, except:

1. Where such indemnification is expressly prohibited by applicable law;
2. Where the conduct of the indemnified representative has been finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to constitute willful misconduct or recklessness as may be defined by applicable law or any other conduct sufficient in the circumstances to bar indemnification against liabilities arising from the conduct;
3. To the extent the liability is finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to be based upon or attributable to the indemnified representative gaining any personal pecuniary profit to which such indemnified representative was not legally entitled; or
4. To the extent such indemnification has been finally determined in a final adjudication pursuant to Section 5.06(d) to be otherwise unlawful.

(a) If an indemnified representative is entitled to indemnification in respect of a portion, but not all, of any liabilities to which such person may be subject, the Corporation shall indemnify such indemnified representative to the maximum extent for such portion of the liabilities.

(b) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the indemnified representative is not entitled to indemnification.

(c) For purposes of this Article:

1. “Indemnified capacity” means any and all past, present and future service by an indemnified representative in one or more capacities as a Director, officer, employee or agent of the Corporation or a Constituent Corporation, or, at the request of the Corporation, as a Director, officer, employee, agent, fiduciary or trustee of another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan or other entity or enterprise;
2. “Indemnified representative” means any and all Directors and officers of the Corporation, including any and all officers elected or committee members, employees or other agents appointed under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” also means any and all officers, committee members, employees and other agents elected or appointed under the power delegated to the General Assembly, or to any General Assembly agency under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; “indemnified representative” shall include any other person so designated by the Board of Directors.

(3) “Liability” means any damage, judgment, amount paid in settlement (provided, in the case of settlements, that the Corporation shall have given its consent to such settlement in advance of the payment thereof), fine, penalty, punitive damages, excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or cost or expense of any nature (including, without limitation, attorneys’ fees, costs, and disbursements); and

(4) “Proceeding” means any threatened, pending or completed action, suit, appeal or other proceeding of any nature, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative, whether formal or informal, and whether brought by or in the right of the Corporation, a class of its security holders, if any, or otherwise.

Section 5.02. Proceedings Initiated by Indemnified Representatives. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, the Corporation shall not indemnify under this Article an indemnified representative for any liability incurred in a proceeding initiated (which shall not be deemed to include counter-claims or affirmative defenses) or participated in as an intervenor or amicus curiae by the person seeking indemnification unless such initiation of or participation in the proceeding is authorized, either before or after its commencement, by the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of the Directors of the Corporation. This section does not apply to reimbursement of expenses incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending an arbitration under Section 5.06(d) or otherwise successfully prosecuting or defending the rights of an indemnified representative granted by or pursuant to this Article.

Section 5.03. Advancing Expenses. The Corporation shall pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by a Director or officer and may, by act of the Board of Directors (including the votes or consents of interested Directors), pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by any other indemnified representative in advance of the final disposition of a proceeding, described in Section 5.01 upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the indemnified representative to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise that such person is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation pursuant to this Article. The financial ability of an indemnified representative to repay an advance shall not be a prerequisite to the making of such advance.

Section 5.04. Securing of Indemnification Obligations. To further effect, satisfy or secure the indemnification obligations provided herein or otherwise, the Corporation may maintain insurance, obtain a letter of credit, act as self-insurer, create a reserve, trust, escrow, cash collateral or other fund or account, enter into indemnification agreements, pledge or grant a security interest in any assets or properties of the Corporation, or use any other mechanism or arrangement whatsoever in such amounts, at such costs, and upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors shall deem appropriate. Absent fraud, the determination of the Board of Directors with respect to such amounts, costs, terms and conditions shall be conclusive against all security holders, if any, officers, and Directors, and shall not be subject to voidability.

Section 5.05. Payment of Indemnification. An indemnified representative who is entitled to indemnification shall be entitled thereto within 30 days after a written request for such indemnification has been delivered to the Secretary.

Section 5.06. Indemnification Procedure.

(a) An indemnified representative shall use such indemnified representatives’ best efforts to notify promptly the Secretary of the commencement of any proceeding or the occurrence of any event which might give rise to a liability under this Article, but the failure so to notify the Corporation shall not relieve the Corporation of any liability which it may have to the indemnified representative under this Article or otherwise.

(b) The Corporation shall be entitled, upon notice to any such indemnified representative, to assume the defense of any proceeding with counsel reasonably satisfactory to the indemnified representative, or a majority of the indemnified representatives involved in such proceeding if there be more than one. If the Corporation notifies the indemnified representative of its election to defend the proceeding, the Corporation shall have no liability for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) of the indemnified representative incurred in connection with the defense of such proceeding subsequent to such notice, unless (i) such expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) have been authorized by the Corporation, (ii) the Corporation shall not in fact have employed counsel reasonably satisfactory to such indemnified representative or indemnified representatives to assume the defense of such proceeding, or (iii) it shall have been determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) that the indemnified representative was entitled to indemnification for such expenses under this Article or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the indemnified representative may elect to retain counsel at the indemnified representative’s own cost and expense to participate in the defense of such proceeding.

(c) The Corporation shall not be required to obtain the consent of the indemnified representative to the settlement of any proceeding which the Corporation has undertaken to defend if the Corporation assumes full and sole responsibility for such settlement and the settlement grants the indemnified representative an unqualified release in respect of all liabilities at issue in the proceeding. Whether or not the Corporation has elected to assume the defense of any proceeding, no indemnified representative shall have any right to enter into any full or partial settlement of the proceeding without the prior written consent of the Corporation (which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld), nor shall the Corporation be liable for any amount paid by an indemnified representative pursuant to any settlement to which the Corporation has not so consented.

(d) Any dispute related to the right to indemnification as provided under this Article shall be decided only by arbitration in the metropolitan area in which the principal executive offices of the Corporation are located at the time, in accordance with the commercial arbitration rules then in effect of the American Arbitration Association, before a panel of three arbitrators, one of whom shall be selected by the Corporation, the second of whom shall be selected by the indemnified representative and the third of whom shall be selected by the other two arbitrators. In the absence of the American Arbitration called or convened.

ARTICLE V
Indemnification of Directors, Officers, etc.

Section 5.01. Scope of Indemnification. (a) The Corporation shall indemnify an indemnified representative against any liability incurred in connection with any proceeding in which the indemnified representative may be involved as a party or otherwise, by reason of the fact that such person is or was serving in an indemnified capacity, including without limitation any liability resulting from any actual or alleged breach or neglect of duty, error, misstatement or misleading statement, negligence, gross negligence or act giving rise to strict or products liability, except:

1. Where such indemnification is expressly prohibited by applicable law;

2. Where the conduct of the indemnified representative has been finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to constitute willful misconduct or recklessness as may be defined by applicable law or any other conduct sufficient in the circumstances to bar indemnification against liabilities arising from the conduct;

3. To the extent the liability is finally determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise to be based upon or attributable to the indemnified representative gaining any personal pecuniary profit to which such indemnified representative was not legally entitled; or

4. To the extent such indemnification has been finally determined in a final adjudication pursuant to Section 5.06(d) to be otherwise unlawful.

(b) If an indemnified representative is entitled to indemnification in respect of a portion, but not all, of any liabilities to which such person may be subject, the Corporation shall indemnify such indemnified representative to the maximum extent for such portion of the liabilities.

(c) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the indemnified representative is not entitled to indemnification.

(d) For purposes of this Article:

1. "Indemnified capacity" means any and all past, present and future service by an indemnified representative in one or more capacities as a Director, officer, employee or agent of the Corporation or a Constituent Corporation, or, at the request of the Corporation, as a Director, officer, employee, agent, fiduciary or trustee of another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan or other entity or enterprise;

2. "Indemnified representative" means any and all Directors and officers of the Corporation, including any and all officers elected or committee members, employees or other agents appointed under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; "indemnified representative" also means any and all officers, committee members, employees and other agents elected or appointed under the power delegated to the General Assembly, or to any General Assembly agency under Section 4.02(2) of these bylaws; "indemnified representative" shall include any other person so designated by the Board of Directors.
(3) “liability” means any damage, judgment, amount paid in settlement (provided, in the case of settlements, that the Corporation shall have given its consent to such settlement in advance of the payment thereof), fine, penalty, punitive damages, excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or cost or expense of any nature (including, without limitation, attorneys’ fees, costs, and disbursements); and

(4) “proceeding” means any threatened, pending or completed action, suit, appeal or other proceeding of any nature, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigatory, whether formal or informal, and whether brought by or in the right of the Corporation, a class of its security holders, if any, or otherwise.

Section 5.02. Proceedings Initiated by Indemnified Representatives. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, the Corporation shall not indemnify under this Article an indemnified representative for any liability incurred in a proceeding initiated (which shall not be deemed to include counter-claims or affirmative defenses) or participated in as an intervene or amicus curiae by the person seeking indemnification unless such initiation or participation in the proceeding is authorized, either before or after its commencement, by the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of the Directors of the Corporation. This section does not apply to reimbursement of expenses incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending an arbitration under Section 5.06(d) or otherwise successfully prosecuting or defending the rights of an indemnified representative granted by or pursuant to this Article.

Section 5.03. Advancing Expenses. The Corporation shall pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by a Director or officer and may, by act of the Board of Directors (including the votes or consents of interested Directors), pay the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) incurred in good faith by any other indemnified representative in advance of the final disposition of a proceeding, described in Section 5.01 upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the indemnified representative to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) or otherwise that such person is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation pursuant to this Article. The financial ability of an indemnified representative to repay an advance shall not be a prerequisite to the making of such advance.

Section 5.04. Securing of Indemnification Obligations. To further effect, satisfy or secure the indemnification obligations provided herein or otherwise, the Corporation may maintain insurance, obtain a letter of credit, act as self-insurer, create a reserve, trust, escrow, cash collateral or other fund or account, enter into indemnification agreements, pledge or grant a security interest in any assets or properties of the Corporation, or use any other mechanism or arrangement whatsoever in such amounts, at such costs, and upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors shall deem appropriate. Absent fraud, the determination of the Board of Directors with respect to such amounts, costs, terms and conditions shall be conclusive against all security holders, if any, officers, and Directors, and shall not be subject to voidability.
Section 5.05. Payment of Indemnification. An indemnified representative who is entitled to indemnification shall be entitled thereto within 30 days after a written request for such indemnification has been delivered to the Secretary of the Corporation.

Section 5.06. Indemnification Procedure. (a) An indemnified representative shall use such indemnified representative’s best efforts to notify promptly the Secretary of the Corporation of the commencement of any proceeding or the occurrence of any event which might give rise to a liability under this Article, but the failure so to notify the Corporation shall not relieve the Corporation of any liability which it may have to the indemnified representative under this Article or otherwise.

(b) The Corporation shall be entitled, upon notice to any such indemnified representative, to assume the defense of any proceeding with counsel reasonably satisfactory to the indemnified representative, or a majority of the indemnified representatives involved in such proceeding if there be more than one. If the Corporation notifies the indemnified representative of its election to defend the proceeding, the Corporation shall have no liability for the expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) of the indemnified representative incurred in connection with the defense of such proceeding subsequent to such notice, unless (i) such expenses (including attorneys’ fees and disbursements) have been authorized by the Corporation, (ii) the Corporation shall not in fact have employed counsel reasonably satisfactory to such indemnified representative or indemnified representatives to assume the defense of such proceeding, or (iii) it shall have been determined pursuant to Section 5.06(d) that the indemnified representative was entitled to indemnification for such expenses under this Article or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the indemnified representative may elect to retain counsel at the indemnified representative’s own cost and expense to participate in the defense of such proceeding.

(c) The Corporation shall not be required to obtain the consent of the indemnified representative to the settlement of any proceeding which the Corporation has undertaken to defend if the Corporation assumes full and sole responsibility for such settlement and the settlement grants the indemnified representative an unqualified release in respect of all liabilities at issue in the proceeding. Whether or not the Corporation has elected to assume the defense of any proceeding, no indemnified representative shall have any right to enter into any full or partial settlement of the proceeding without the prior written consent of the Corporation (which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld), nor shall the Corporation be liable for any amount paid by an indemnified representative pursuant to any settlement to which the Corporation has not so consented.

(d) Any dispute related to the right to indemnification as provided under this Article shall be decided only by arbitration in the metropolitan area in which the principal executive offices of the Corporation are located at the time, in accordance with the commercial arbitration rules then in effect of the American Arbitration Association, before a panel of three arbitrators, one of whom shall be selected by the Corporation, the second of whom shall be selected by the indemnified representative and the third of whom shall be selected by the other two arbitrators. In the absence of the American Arbitration Association, or if for any reason arbitration under the arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association cannot be initiated, and if one of the parties fails or refuses to select an arbitrator, or the arbitrators selected by the Corporation and the indemnified representative cannot agree on the selection of the third arbitrator within 30 days after such time as the corporation and the indemnified representative have each been notified of the selection of the other’s arbitrator, the necessary arbitrator or arbitrators shall be selected by the presiding judge of the court of general jurisdiction in such metropolitan area. The party or parties challenging the right of an indemnified representative to the benefits of this Article shall have the burden of proof. The Corporation shall reimburse an indemnified representative for the expenses (including attorneys' fees and disbursements) incurred in successfully prosecuting or defending such arbitration. Any award entered by the arbitrators shall be final, binding and nonappealable and judgment may be entered thereon by any party in accordance with applicable law in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that the corporation shall be entitled to interpose as a defense in any such judicial enforcement proceeding any prior final judicial determination adverse to the indemnified representative under Section 5.01(a)(2) or(3) in a proceeding not directly involving indemnification under this Article. This arbitration provision shall be specifically enforceable.

V. The Presbyterian Mission Agency

Mission, God’s mission, is at the heart of the work to which God calls us. As the Book of Order reminds us:

“In Christ, the Church participates in God’s mission for the transformation of creation and humanity by proclaiming to all people the good news of God’s love, offering to all people the grace of God at font and table, calling all people to discipleship in Christ.” (F.101)

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is the body of the General Assembly in which are lodged the following responsibilities to implement the mission of the General Assembly domestically and internationally:¹

a. to cultivate and promote the spiritual welfare of the whole church;

b. to provide resources to support equal employment opportunity and affirmative action for members of racial ethnic groups, for women, for various age groups, for persons regardless of marital condition (married, single, widowed, or divorced), and for persons with disabilities;

c. to develop and propose, for General Assembly approval, a Mission Work Plan for the Presbyterian Mission Agency consisting of the mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities of the Presbyterian Mission Agency; doing so by taking into account the mission work being done by sessions, presbyteries, and synods, and to propose for General Assembly approval an accompanying budget that will implement the mission work plan of the comprehensive Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and program, including a budget to implement the Mission Work Plan;

d. to act in those specific matters assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency by the General Assembly or the Constitution, acting always according to previously enacted General Assembly policies, reporting fully to each subsequent General Assembly its actions;

e. to perform such additional responsibilities and duties as may be assigned by the General Assembly.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall advise and respond to the General Assembly on priorities, programs, and strategies for addressing matters of concern for the mission of our church. The primary purpose of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is to lead and coordinate the total mission program. It will cultivate a style of work that emphasizes

1 These responsibilities were part of the Book of Order until 2011, when the new Form of Government was approved, and they were moved to the Organization for Mission.
• coordination among ministries;
• flexible deployments of resources to match changing needs;
• allocation of funding to reflect stated goals;
• attention to the needs and gifts of congregations;
• effective relationships with all mid councils; and
• holding the vision described without reverting to old patterns.

Standing between the General Assembly and the staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, the Board’s work is to advise the General Assembly regarding mission priorities, programs and strategies; to lead the Agency in implementing the directives of the General Assembly; and then to report back to the General Assembly with results and additional advice. It is the Board’s responsibility to make the vision for mission become reality, helping to manage the practical problems those visions and dreams might face.

The Board’s work will move in a flow from General Assembly to General Assembly. It begins by advising the General Assembly on mission priorities, programs, and strategies. At a General Assembly, the Board receives guidance and direction. The Board then leads staff in the agency to fulfill those General Assembly directives. The Board oversees and aligns assets toward the fulfillment of those directives in the context for mission, discerning potential shifts in God’s calling. The Board then responds to General Assembly directives, providing advice on revised priorities at the next General Assembly. This process is inclusive, multi-layered and cyclical, continuing from each General Assembly to the next. The Board should engage a broad array of stakeholders to strengthen the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s ability to respond faithfully to the Holy Spirit and align its life with God’s mission. Setting strategy and guiding policy in this way necessitates that the Board employ theological, intercultural, corporate, and legal knowledge all enveloped in prayer.

In performing this role, the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall report directly to the General Assembly. (See also Rule A.2 of the Standing Rules of the General Assembly.)

A. Policy Responsibility

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board may recommend churchwide policies to the General Assembly and is responsible for implementing policies established by the General Assembly and for establishing. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board shall establish overall procedures for the mission and ministry of the Presbyterian Mission Agency to implement the policies established by the General Assembly.

B. Planning and Priority Setting

516
The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for carrying out planning and priority-setting processes. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for instituting ongoing review processes.

C. General Assembly Budget

It is the responsibility of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board to recommend to the General Assembly a comprehensive Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and Program and a Per Capita Budget program. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board develops the Mission Budget Agency Budget, which includes a budget to implement the Mission Work Plan as well as a budget for all other costs and expenses of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. In preparing these budgets, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has the responsibility for developing its own revenue and expense projections, but shall consult with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and the Foundation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in doing so. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly jointly have responsibility for developing a per capita budget and apportionment.

All restricted and unrestricted funds (principal or income) that support the programs or functions for which the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible are allocated by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. In every case the instructions of the donors are carefully followed. Such resources presently include contributions from individuals, congregations, and related organizations; proceeds from wills and bequests; and sales of property and other assets. All funds administered by the Board of Pensions, including dues and earnings on property and other assets. All funds administered by the Board of Pensions, including dues and earnings on investments, are specifically excluded. Income received by the Presbyterian Mission Agency from sales, bequests, gifts, or from any other source, shall be transmitted to the Treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, as is income received by the Office of the General Assembly pursuant to Section IV.B.3.d. of this Organization for Mission. These funds shall be separately accounted for by the Treasurer. All payments related to the Presbyterian Mission Agency shall be made by the Treasurer only upon the receipt of regular vouchered requests, or other adequate documentation, consistent with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and bearing the authorization of the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency or a person designated by the President/Executive Director. [All restricted and unrestricted funds (principal or income) that support the programs or functions for which the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible, are allocated by the Presbyterian Mission Agency pursuant to budget and other procedures established by the General Assembly including those arrangements with respect to funds held by the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation.]

D. Personnel Responsibilities

Regarding the staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency staff, the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, shall, subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, delegate to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board responsibility for the following:
1. Approval of personnel procedures.

2. Approval, annually, of a staff rationale that determines staff commitments for the year. Any staff deployed regionally must be approved as part of the annual staff rationale.

3. Election of the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency subject to confirmation by the General Assembly.

4. Annual performance reviews of the President/Executive Director as specified in the Presbyterian Mission Agency Manual of Operations (Appendix 8), and in concurrence with the Presbyterian Mission Agency personnel policies.

6. Approval of compensation guidelines recommended by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, within which salaries may be administered by the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

Members of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board are not eligible for election or selection as staff during the period of their term of service.

E. Reporting

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board is responsible for submitting a report to the General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency will report regularly to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, keeping the Board fully informed about its work. Matters that involve an exception or a proposed change in Presbyterian Mission Agency procedures, a major shift in program emphasis, or a major budget adjustment require action by the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board. Issues of social witness policy, advocacy for racial ethnic and women’s concerns, and those related to Presbyterian theological institutions are reported to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and General Assembly. To support this reporting requirement, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board has the right to full access to all information related to the Presbyterian Mission Agency maintained for it by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, including the accounting and financial records of the Presbyterian Mission Agency; information about donors, funds, and fund restrictions for funds that have been designated to support the programs or functions for which the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible; external audit reports with respect to such funds and the Presbyterian Mission Agency itself; and, to the same extent as any other agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), access to the corporate minutes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation.

F. Elected Leadership

1. Organization of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board

Direction and oversight of Presbyterian Mission Agency entities deploys a majority of Presbyterian Mission Agency Board members as members of Mission Committees and Audit Committee. The work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency is a direct expression of the planning and mission understanding of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, which is accountable to the General Assembly in this regard. Direction and oversight of the Presbyterian Mission Agency is accomplished by Presbyterian Mission Agency Board members serving as members of Program and Administrative Committees. The number and makeup of the committees and assignments are adjustable to accomplish the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency in its mission and to allow flexibility to meet changing emphases in Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) mission. The Mission Committees committees are to be policy, strategy, and planning committees.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board determines the need for area program committees, how many are to be established (specifying the expertise and/or experience needed), the terms of service for members, and the duration of the committees’ existence.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board ensures advocacy functions for women and racial ethnic persons, and advisory functions for social witness policy by providing direct access to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and General Assembly. The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board also provides for the development of social witness policy.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board ensures the continuation of a committee that includes representatives of each Presbyterian theological institution, and that will review the effectiveness and stewardship of the schools on behalf of the church, will exercise the governance responsibilities of the church to the schools, and will encourage and enhance cooperation among the church’s theological schools. The committee will be provided direct access to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the General Assembly.

The principal legal corporation is the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, which receives, holds, and transfers property, and facilitates the management of the church’s corporate affairs. All voting members of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board serve as members of the board of directors of this corporation.

3. Staff All staff are staff of the Presbyterian Mission Agency and are accountable to the Executive Director. Mission personnel have shared accountability both to the overseas partner church to which they are assigned and to the Presbyterian Mission Agency through the Deputy Executive Director for Mission. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, shall delegate to the President/Executive Director, subject to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget; subject to Section 2.13 of the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; in consultation with the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation; and consistent with the scope of any similar delegation to the Stated Clerk for staff assigned to the Office of the General Assembly, authority: (i) to create, implement, and enforce personnel policies and procedures for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (ii) to prepare, maintain, and amend an Employee Handbook for staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; (iii) to retain and dismiss staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency; and (iv) to promote, demote, review, increase or decrease compensation, and otherwise manage staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency. The President/Executive Director shall, in exercising such authority, make use of any human resources recordkeeping and expertise provided by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. The Board of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) A Corporation shall coordinate with the Presbyterian Mission Agency to ensure that an adequate number of staff assigned to the Presbyterian Mission Agency have or are delegated appropriate signature authority for relevant contracts and bank accounts related to the work of the Presbyterian Mission Agency.
3. Board Meetings

The Presbyterian Mission Agency Board holds regular meetings (no less than one per quarter) with the appropriate and invited Presbyterian Mission Agency staff in order to build collaboration, collegiality, coordination, and trust, while also discussing finances, investment results, and any pertinent legal matters.

VI. Presbyterian Mission Agency Relationships

The Presbyterian Mission Agency works in partnership with synods, presbyteries, and sessions to enable the various councils to join together in churchwide expression of the life and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This means that, as is the case with all agencies of the church, that the Presbyterian Mission Agency, its officers, directors, and its staff, must consider in all matters the church as a whole ahead of any individual benefit or detriment to the Presbyterian Mission Agency.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency shares responsibility with the Office of the General Assembly for the joint office of Mid Council Relations. In addition, the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will cooperate in the preparation and presentation of the Per Capita Budget and apportionment and other opportunities for joint endeavors.

The Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible for carrying out the mission program for the General Assembly. The ministries of the Presbyterian Mission Agency are linked together and with the church on behalf of that part of the mission entrusted by God to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The principal legal corporation that provides direct support to the Presbyterian Mission Agency is the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, which receives, holds, and transfers property, and facilitates the management of the church’s corporate affairs. Its role with respect to the Presbyterian Mission Agency is responsible for financial and corporate services supporting the work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Mission Agency in support of its mission as directed by the General Assembly.

Both the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation and the Presbyterian Mission Agency are subordinate to the General Assembly. Thus, the Presbyterian Mission Agency is not subordinate to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation with regard to the mission directives of the General Assembly to the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, is not subordinate to the Presbyterian Mission Agency with respect to the matters for which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation is authorized by its Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws. As both organizations and their leaders recognize that Jesus Christ is Lord, and that none of them has any authority but in Him, they are charged to work together to realize the mission and great ends of his church in this and all respects. Consistent with this, the Board of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, delegates specific authority, as set forth in its Bylaws, this Organization for Mission, and resolutions of its Board of Directors, to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board or the President/Executive Director of the Presbyterian Mission Agency with respect to personnel, contracting, finance, and legal issues so that the Presbyterian Mission Agency may better accomplish the mission goals of the General Assembly. As the disbursing agent under the 1986 Deliverance of the General Assembly that authorized the Plan of Division for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, it also disburses for the Presbyterian Mission Agency the amounts authorized by the General Assembly in the Presbyterian Mission Agency Budget and the Per Capita Budget for mission. It therefore defers to the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board’s mission decisions to the fullest extent permitted by those budgets, fund restrictions, and applicable law.

Other relationships include the following committees:

1. Advocacy and Advisory Committees

The Executive Director has the responsibility for the advocacy and advisory committees. All three groups have direct access to the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns shall assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give full expression of the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, F-1.0403. The Committee shall be a prophetic voice for involving racial ethnic people in the formation of public policy, particularly where race is a factor that negatively impacts the quality of life of people of color. The committee will also monitor the implementation of policies adopted by the church that impact the quality of life of racial ethnic people in the church and in the world.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns shall assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give full expression of the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, F-1.0403. The committee shall monitor and evaluate policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church and the world; and shall advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society as a whole.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in consultation with the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, is responsible for the process of developing and recommending social witness policy to the General Assembly. The term “social witness policy” refers to the positions adopted by the General Assembly to express its stance on and guide response to issues in the public order, including their relation to the church’s own life and mission. These positions may take the form of policy statements, resolutions, study papers, or social involvement reports, as defined in the Manual of the General Assembly, p. 65, Forming Social Policy, 2.a.

2. Committee on Theological Education

The Committee on Theological Education has direct access to the General Assembly and the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and their work is coordinated through the Theology, Formation, and Evangelism Ministry with staff accountability to the director of the Theology, Formation, and Evangelism Ministry. The purpose of the Committee on Theological Education is to provide an effective linkage between the General Assembly and the theological seminaries of the PC(USA) by: providing a forum through which the church-at-large can express its concerns to the seminaries; interpreting the mission of the denomination’s theological seminaries to the whole church; overseeing the interpretation and administration of the Theological Education Fund (1% Plan); serving as a means for cooperation among the church’s theological seminaries; implementing suggestions made by the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions as approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993); serving as an agency of the denomination for relating to theological seminaries other than those of the PC(USA); and working in partnership with mid councils and agencies of the General Assembly to provide for leadership in local congregations, the denomination, and the world.

Pending revision of the budgeting process in Appendix A to reflect the new governance structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, in 2018, its expenditures for the fiscal years 2018 through 2020 are limited to no more than the amount expended by the corporation in fiscal years 2016 through 2018.

The Presbytery of Susquehanna Valley and the Presbytery of Lackawanna overture the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to realign the border between the Synod of the Northeast and Synod of the Trinity so that the Village of Waverly, New York, of the Town of Barton, both political subdivisions of Tioga County, New York, shall be within the boundary of the Synod of the Trinity and the Presbytery of Lackawanna, thus transferring the First Presbyterian Church of Waverly, New York, to the Presbytery of Lackawanna.

Rationale

The larger community that residents refer to as “The Valley” consists of the Village of Waverly, New York, and the Boroughs of South Waverly, Sayre, and Athens, Pennsylvania, as well as the immediate surrounding area. The total population of the area is approximately 30,000. Were it not for signage, no person would ever think that there were multiple municipalities in our community based on our physical location and layout.

Although divided into four small communities and separated by a state line, the area functions in many respects as one entity. Examples are Waverly being the only locality in New York that has electric and natural gas utilities supplied by Pennsylvania public utilities. Interstate Highway 86, although built and maintained by New York, is located in Pennsylvania for both “Waverly” exits. In many ways, Waverly is more a part of Pennsylvania than New York.

Historically there were three Presbyterian congregations, one each in Athens, Sayre, and Waverly. These churches had cooperated in many endeavors throughout their existence and, in fact, one was formed as a mission of the oldest, that taking place in 1847. The state line resulted in these churches being separated into separate presbyteries and synods in spite of being only four miles apart at the furthest point. In fact, these churches sit at the corner juncture of four presbyteries.

In 2012 the sessions of the three churches agreed to begin talks concerning their future. This activity was begun with the full support of both presbyteries having jurisdiction. Following these initial talks, all three congregations participated in the New Beginnings process. During this time, the congregations began worshipping jointly. None of the churches had an installed minister of Word and Sacrament at this point in time. As a result of this work, in the summer of 2013 all three congregations voted to consolidate effective the first day of 2014. In November 2013, both presbyteries approved the same motion and plan that would see the combined church at some point joining one of the two presbyteries. At the same time, a PNC was searching for a pastor to be called to the new church; this effort was completed in August 2014.

The congregations joined as one on 1 January 2014, forming Valley United Presbyterian Church. A new corporation was formed that consolidates the previous churches into one; it is a Pennsylvania corporation recognized as a church that is also recognized by the State of New York, under the applicable religious law, to function as a church in the State of New York. It should be noted that this is the only known church recognized by both states in this manner. Effective 1 January 2014 all financial assets of the three churches were combined.

Although one organization from a secular standpoint, ecclesiastically the church is currently considered a “Greater Parish” by the PC(USA). This requires maintenance of a “shadow” set of records in order to properly submit required reports annually. As per the agreement adopted by both presbyteries, the congregation is considered a member of the Presbytery of Lackawanna and the pastor a member of the Presbytery of Susquehanna; however, both have voice and vote in both presbyteries. Care has been taken to only vote once on General Assembly matters and the congregation has fully paid all per capita to all jurisdictions in accordance with the initial agreement.

The congregation has worked hard on the consolidation and decided to sell both church buildings in Pennsylvania and renovate the one in New York. This was in spite of the majority of membership being from the Pennsylvania churches. Under the initial agreement that all three congregations and both presbyteries adopted at the start of this process, the consolidated church would be able to select the presbytery of membership regardless of physical location. The congregation, after careful and prayerful deliberation, has decided to remain a member of the Presbytery of Lackawanna. However, the PC(USA) is unable to accomplish this without a modification of the synod boundaries. As far as the congregation is concerned, we are one church, regardless of bureaucratic matters.

Although Valley United has a historical relationship with both presbyteries and synods, we need to have full affiliation with only one to continue our ministry to our community in the most efficient manner.

On Changing the Name of Eastern Korean Presbytery—From the Synod of the Northeast.

The Synod of the Northeast overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC (USA) to approve changing the official name of “Eastern Korean Presbytery” to “Eastern Korean American Presbytery.”

Rationale

At its 78th stated meeting on June 7, 2017, the Eastern Korean Presbytery approved a resolution to change their official name to Eastern Korean American Presbytery. In early February 2018, the presbytery sent a request to the Synod of the Northeast to approve their action and to overture the General Assembly concerning this change. On February 10, 2018, the Synod of the Northeast Mission and Ministries Commission, the council that conducts synod business between synod assemblies, voted to concur with the presbytery’s request. Therefore, the Synod of the Northeast sends forward this overture.

Item 05-03

[In response to Item 05-03, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 23.]

Alternate Resolution:

That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) form an administrative commission to address disorder in the Synod of the Covenant as provided in G-3.0109(b)(5) and in accordance with Standing Rule K.2.(a). The commission shall consist of not fewer than seven (7) persons appointed by the Co-Moderators and shall:

1. Honor the principles of Seeking to Be Faithful Together with the intent to restore trust and mutuality between the synod and its staff with its constituent presbyteries and their staff and elected leadership. All will:
   a. Treat each other respectfully so as to build trust, believing that all desire to be faithful to Jesus Christ.
   b. Share concerns directly with individuals or groups with whom there are disagreements in a spirit of love and respect in keeping with Jesus’ teachings.
   c. Seek to stay in community though the discussion may be vigorous and full of tension.

2. Conduct a Special Administrative Review (G-3.0108(b)) for the purpose of inquiring into and settling allegations of disorder:
   a. To review and recommend revisions to synod procedures, to institute changes that are necessary to ensure the fulfillment of the PC(USA) principles of participation and representation as outlined in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. This will include but is not limited to a review of records, bylaws, procedures, policies, and manuals of the synod.
   b. To assure effective consultation with the synod committees and commissioners, synod staff, racial ethnic caucuses, Presbyterian Women, presbyteries, presbytery executives, and others as it may determine helpful to its tasks.
   c. To assure adequate support for the ministry and mission of its presbyteries as they seek to support the witness of congregations (G-3.0401).
   d. To assure adequate communication with and among its presbyteries, G-3.0401(a), through commissioners to synod, presbytery leadership, staff, and others as it may determine helpful to its task.
   e. To assure pastoral care among its presbyteries in order that the synod may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments, G-3.0401(b).
f. To address conflicts in a pastoral manner that promotes reconciliation, healing, and restores unity between synod and its presbyteries using professional mediation services if necessary. They may use processes of D-1.0103 Conciliate and Mediate as needed.

g. To assume original jurisdiction if deemed necessary by the commission.

h. To have full authority to enforce the findings and recommendations with due process, granting fair notice and an opportunity to be heard by all parties.

This commission shall report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

On Establishing an Administrative Commission to Address Issues in the Synod of the Covenant—From the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

The Presbytery of Cincinnati overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to establish an administrative commission to address disorder in the Synod of the Covenant, as provided in G-3.0109b(5) of the Book of Order and Standing Rule K.2. of the Manual of the General Assembly. The commission, which shall consist of not fewer than seven (7) persons appointed by the Moderator (or Co-Moderators), shall:

1. Conduct Special Administrative Review (G-3.0108b; Standing Rule K.2.) for the purpose of inquiring into and settling the following allegations of disorder:

a. Failure to determine a satisfactory method to fulfill the principles of participation and representation found in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103 in proposed amendments to the bylaws of the synod, or adequately to consult with the presbyteries and racial ethnic caucuses of the synod in the preparation of said bylaws.

b. Failure to adequately support the ministry and mission of its presbyteries as they seek to support the witness of congregations (G-3.0401).

c. Failure to adequately facilitate communication with and among its presbyteries (G-3.0401a).

d. Failure to adequately exercise pastoral care among its presbyteries in order that the synod may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments (G-3.0401b).

e. Conflict between the synod executive and the racial ethnic caucuses of the synod, and with the Cabinet on Ethnic Church Affairs of the synod.

f. Loss of trust and mutuality between the synod and its constituent presbyteries.

g. Loss of trust and mutuality between the synod executive and multiple presbyteries of the synod;

h. Loss of trust and mutuality between the synod executive and the elected and/or administrative leadership of multiple presbyteries of the synod.

2. In its exercise of Special Administrative Review, and in consultation with the Personnel Services Committee of the synod, conduct a comprehensive performance review of the synod executive, including feedback from commissioners, synod staff, racial ethnic caucuses, presbyteries, presbytery executives, and others as it may determine helpful to its task; and to direct the synod regarding the remediation of performance deficiencies, which may include recommendation to terminate employment if it deems the mission of the synod imperatively demands it.

3. Have full authority to enforce the findings and recommendations of its special administrative review, granting fair notice and an opportunity to be heard to all parties. The process for termination of employment, if recommended, shall conform to the personnel policies of the synod in effect at the time the request for special administrative review was initially filed.

4. Refer to judicial process any irregularities or offenses it may discover in the conduct of its review that cannot be remedied through administrative review.

Rationale

The Synod of the Covenant is experiencing serious conflict and dysfunction. At its August 2017 synod assembly, amendments to the synod bylaws were introduced that would have the effect of disempowering and marginalizing the racial ethnic caucuses of the synod from the decision-making processes of the synod. These bylaws were constructed and presented with little, if any, consultation with the persons directly affected, and with no consultation with the presbyteries of the synod. The given rationale was that “When a synod meets, it shall be composed of commissioners elected by the presbyteries” (Book of Order). of Order, G-3.0401), disregarding the synod’s obligation stated in the very same paragraph, “[to] determine a plan for the election of commissioners to the synod, as well as the method to fulfill the principles of participation and representation found in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103; both plans shall be subject to approval by a majority of the presbyteries in the synod” [emphasis added]. The proposed bylaws have never been distributed to the presbyteries, nor are they available on the synod website. The process seems set up to exclude the very voices synods are charged to protect. The proposed bylaws remove racial ethnic voices from the council commissioned to make decisions for the body between assemblies, on which persons elected by the synod (as opposed to the presbyteries) may legally serve (see Request 90-1, Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 254).

The process for the proposed amendments to the bylaws reinforces perceptions that they are a response to ongoing conflict between the synod executive and the racial ethnic caucuses of the synod that comprise the Cabinet for Ethnic Church Affairs (CECA). In defending the proposed bylaws at the August 2017 meeting, the synod executive allegedly accused those registering objections as being “greedy for power.”

In addition, the qualities of trust and mutuality in the relationships between the presbyteries and the synod, and presbytery leaders and the synod executive, have strained to the point of breaking. The Presbytery of Mackinac was recently blindsided by a request for a called meeting of the synod to appoint an administrative commission to take original jurisdiction of the presbytery without any prior consultation or inquiry. Only threatened ecclesiastical suits alleging a violation of due process prompted the presentation of a substitute motion limiting the commission’s powers to inquiry only. No rationale, other than the receipt of four anonymous letters—the contents of which were withheld—were presented for the motion in the call.

Several presbyteries, including Maumee Valley, Scioto Valley, and Detroit have withdrawn some or all of their participation in the life of the synod. Serious conflicts exist between several presbytery executives and the synod executive. Recently, all five female presbytery executives refused to participate in an executive forum because of conflicts or concerns involving the synod executive.

There are serious, chronic problems in the dissemination of information from the synod to presbyteries and their leaders. Some presbytery executives have been told directly that they are not permitted at synod assemblies. Information regarding the timing and location of upcoming assemblies, as well as agendas and supporting documents, are neither sent to the executives nor posted on the synod website.

At the November 2017 meeting of the synod, the Personnel Services Committee indicated they had conducted a job performance review of the synod executive and a pay raise was being recommended to the synod on the basis of that review. Email correspondence documentation indicates that the Personnel Services Committee did not meet in 2017, in direct contrast to their report filed in November 2017.

In November 2017, a question was publicly posed to the chair of the Personnel Services Committee during a synod meeting, inquiring if that committee would be willing to meet with the presbytery executives of the Synod of the Covenant. A direct response was deferred. The question was presented on additional occasions in email communication subsequent to the November 2017 synod meeting, and the response from a synod officer indicated it was inappropriate to make such a request. In addition, in December 2017, a presbytery executive requested a meeting between presbytery executives and the synod executive, and that direct invitation was refused by the synod executive.

Due to the severity of the issues involved, we believe time is of the essence in conducting this review.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-03

Advice & Counsel on Item 05-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 05-03.

This overture requests the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to establish an administrative commission to address disorder in the Synod of the Covenant and bases their request on G-3.0109b(5) of the Book of Order and Standing Rule K.2. of the Manual of the General Assembly.

ACREC is concerned about assuring polity and proper procedures. As ACREC understands Standing Rule K.2 of the Manual of the General Assembly, a request for an administrative commission to address disorder in a synod can come to the General Assembly in one of three ways as outlined in K.2.a. One of these ways, K.2.a (1), is by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-3.0303d; G-3.0402; Standing Rule A.3.) Furthermore, Standing Rule K.2.b. specifies the orderly manner in which this request is to be submitted. Rule K.2.b. states:

b. Special administrative review of an alleged synod irregularity or delinquency may occur when a written request for such review is received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly from another synod or a presbytery within the synod of the alleged irregularity or delinquency. If the request relates to an alleged delinquency, the request can only be filed with the Stated Clerk after the failure or refusal of the synod to cure the alleged delinquency at its next meeting, having been requested to do so in writing prior to the meeting. When the request for special administrative review is received, the Stated Clerk shall convene a meeting of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. If the request is in order and all the moderators agree that for the good of the church the special administrative review needs to be undertaken before the next meeting of the General Assembly (when the request could be considered by the whole General Assembly), the Moderator of the General Assembly shall appoint a special committee (Standing Rule K.1.) to conduct a special administrative review in accordance with G-3.0108b and report its findings and recommendations to the next General Assembly.

The rationale of Item 05-03 does not satisfy the requirements stated in K.2.b and is, therefore, out of order.

Furthermore, it is troubling to see personnel matters brought out publicly without giving the individuals concerned due process to defend themselves.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 05-03

Comment on Item 05-03—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

Section K.2.a. of the Standing Rules, Special Administrative Review of Synods, provides three ways that the General Assembly might be requested to initiate such review: “(1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-3.0302d; G-3.0402; Standing Rule A.3.; (2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule A.2.); or (3) By a commissioners’ resolution (Standing Rule A.6.). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake Special Administrative Review (G-3.0108b) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule K.1. and G-3.0109.”

Section K.2.b., Written Request for Review, states a second process for requesting special administrative review, which is appropriate between meetings of the General Assembly and would be considered by the Stated Clerk along with the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

While it is not appropriate for personnel matters to be decided by the General Assembly, it is appropriate for the General Assembly, if it discerns the need, to establish an administrative commission to inquire into and settle such issues.

On Changing the Boundaries within the Synod of Lakes and Prairies—From the Synod of Lakes and Prairies.

The Synod of Lakes and Prairies overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to change the geographic boundaries of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area and of the Presbytery of North Central Iowa by moving the Township of LeRoy, County of Mower, Minnesota, from the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area to the Presbytery of North Central Iowa; and by this action, to require the transfer of First Presbyterian Church in LeRoy, Minnesota, from membership in the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area to the Presbytery of North Central Iowa.

Rationale

The session of First Presbyterian Church in LeRoy, Minnesota, first initiated conversation with the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area about a possible transfer of membership to the Presbytery of North Central Iowa in 2017. With the full knowledge of its current presbytery, it also initiated conversation with the Presbytery North Central Iowa and observed a stated presbytery meeting there. On January 11, 2018, the session of the First Presbyterian Church in LeRoy unanimously approved a motion to request the transfer. The congregation received and approved the same motion at its annual meeting on January 21, 2018.

On March 30, 1868, the First Presbyterian Church was organized in the far southern Minnesota farming community of LeRoy. The church has continuously served residents of this small town (2010 census population: 929) and those who farm the rich lands around it for 150 years.
Through a series of presbytery mergers and realignments over its history, First Presbyterian Church in LeRoy became a current member of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area (PTCA). Its status in the PTCA is often seen as “remote,” both geographically and in focus of ministry. First Presbyterian Church of LeRoy sits but a mile from the Minnesota-Iowa border, and more than 100 miles from the geographic center of the presbytery, further than any other congregation. Its focus on rural ministry is also a more remote fit with the increasingly urban-and-suburban ministry focus of the presbytery. “After a period of prayer and discernment,” the session wrote, “in which we have engaged in dialogue with representatives of our presbytery and the Presbytery of North Central Iowa, we have discerned that the culture and ministries of North Central Iowa are of much greater similarity to our own. We believe that the support and encouragement that they offer would be much more helpful to our church. We would be among churches and members who understand our way of life to a far greater degree.”

Presbyterian churches located in the state of Minnesota hold membership across five different presbyteries, including in two presbyteries whose churches are primarily in other states. Likewise, the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Areas includes five congregations from neighboring Wisconsin. The question of state lines as concurrent with presbytery lines is not an abiding one here.

Therefore, both presbyteries have agreed that, with the goal of supporting our congregations in the particular ministries to which they have been called by God, this transfer is in accordance with the history, the vision, and the needs of First Presbyterian Church in LeRoy, Minnesota.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area approved the transfer of the church to the Presbytery of North Central Iowa at its stated meeting on March 10, 2018. The Presbytery of North Central Iowa, having consulted with the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area, approved the admission of the First Presbyterian Church of LeRoy, Minnesota, at its stated meeting on March 6, 2018, pending the vote of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

Item 05-06

[Item 05-06 was answered by the action taken on Item 05-03. See pp. 23, 24.]

Response to Item 05-03—From the Synod of the Covenant.

The Synod of the Covenant overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to answer Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Cincinnati with this overture:

2. The 223rd General Assembly (2018) hereby affirms the due process rights of all Presbyterians and church staff granted in the constitution and policies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

3. The 223rd General Assembly (2018) directs the Stated Clerk to encourage the Presbytery of Cincinnati and concurring presbyteries to adhere to the principals found in Seeking to Be Faithful Together: Guidelines for Presbyterians During Times of Disagreement (approved by the 204th General Assembly (1992) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

   “Treat each other respectfully so as to build trust, believing that we all desire to be faithful to Jesus Christ” (Manual of the General Assembly, 2018, p. 63).

   “Share our concerns directly with individuals or groups with whom we have disagreements in a spirit of love and respect in keeping with Jesus’ teachings” (Ibid).

   “Seek to stay in community with each other though the discussion may be vigorous and full of tension” (Ibid).

4. That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) reject Item 05-03 because the synod can demonstrate that it asserts false claims and misleading conclusions based upon misinformation, and because there are no outstanding written or filed complaints or accusations against any policy of, or action by, the synod, or against any synod staff.

5. The 223rd General Assembly (2018) rejects Item 05-03 and similar efforts that subvert the judicial process.

6. That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) answer Item 05-03 (from the Presbytery of Cincinnati) with this overture of the Synod of the Covenant.
The Synod of the Covenant has petitioned the Stated Clerk to rule out of order Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Cincinnati because it violates Standing Rule K. Standing Rule K.2.b. in the General Assembly Manual states:

b. Special administrative review of an alleged synod irregularity or delinquency may occur when a written request for such review is received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly from another synod or a presbytery within the synod of the alleged irregularity or delinquency. If the request relates to an alleged delinquency, the request can only be filed with the Stated Clerk after the failure or refusal of the synod to cure the alleged delinquency at its next meeting, having been requested to do so in writing prior to the meeting. When the request for special administrative review is received, the Stated Clerk shall convene a meeting of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the Presbyterian Mission Agency, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. If the request is in order and all the moderators agree that for the good of the church the special administrative review needs to be undertaken before the next meeting of the General Assembly (when the request could be considered by the whole General Assembly), the Moderator of the General Assembly shall appoint a special committee (Standing Rule K.1.) to conduct a special administrative review in accordance with G-3.0108b and report its findings and recommendations to the next General Assembly. (Manual of the General Assembly 2018, Standing Rule K.2.b.)

The Presbytery of Cincinnati did not comply with the above quoted Standing Rule (K. 2. b.) and in the process has defamed the synod executive and violated his rights to due process.

Item 05-03 does not follow the constitutional mandates that promote peaceable partnerships between church councils and safeguard the civil and ecclesial rights to due process. The overture defames, bullies, and harasses the character of the synod executive, church leaders, and synod staff, and serves to hinder collaboration and mutuality among colleagues.

There was no advance correspondence from any of the presbytery or presbytery coordinating councils, and no written requests to address concerns or provide input to this overture prior to the recommendation by coordinating councils and action by presbyteries. The synod did not receive any related correspondence. In fact, the Presbytery of Mackinac did not vote on concurring with the overture. Rather, the Coordinating Council of the Presbytery of Mackinac acted on its own without the vote of the presbytery, without specific authorization of its bylaws, and without advance notice to the members of the coordinating council. The Synod of the Covenant learned of Item 05-03 from Cincinnati after the fact from a member of the Presbytery of Mackinac who received a letter from the chair of the coordinating council dated 3/8/2018 regarding the action taken by the coordinating council at their meeting on 3/6/2018. The letter, which was written by the Reverend Jessica L. Paulsen, council chair, stated “The Presbytery of Cincinnati, through their General Presbyter the Reverend Doctor Nancy Kahaian, reached out to the Presbytery of Mackinac to request concurrence on an overture to General Assembly.”

The presbytery coordinating councils sent this action to presbyteries prior to giving the Synod of the Covenant an opportunity to respond. The opportunity to respond would have provided essential information and corrected misinformation.

In accordance with Standing Rule K.2.b. of the Manual of the General Assembly 2018, the Synod of the Covenant should have received a written request on all of these matters from a presbytery action. The Synod of the Covenant has not received a written request from any presbytery about any of the items mentioned.

Furthermore, the Synod of the Covenant has not been informed that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly has, in fact, received such a request and complied by the same mandate.

Inclusion of personnel matters in Item 05-03 has already resulted in the improper discussion of personnel matters at presbytery coordinating councils and on the floor of presbyteries without affording due process to the synod executive, who was accused and therefore defamed and without an opportunity for defense. Placing these assertions in Item 05-03 (Cincinnati overture) publicly subverts due process and the rights and protections that are built into our disciplinary parliamentary procedures. These items should not be part of the business of the Mid-Council Committee 05 and may not be made public without due process.

Since the Synod of the Covenant has not received from any presbytery a request upon which a determination could be made that the synod took an action or whether any other action by the synod was an irregularity or a delinquency, we urge the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve this overture and reject Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Further, in direct response to some of the allegations and/or rationale contained in Item 05-03, the synod states:

1. In regard to the process for the amendment of the bylaws, the Synod Bylaws Task Force proposal was an attempt to correct the bylaws to comply with the Book of Order (G-3.0401) and was disapproved by the November 2017 assembly. The process followed by the synod for reviewing, recommending, and voting on proposed bylaws changes was communicated to all commissioners and the eleven presbyteries. It involved all commissioners including consultation with all eleven presbytery stated clerks. Documentation is available.

2. Synod assembly meetings, agenda, and documents have always been circulated to commissioners and all eleven presbytery stated clerks. Documentation is available.
3. The Presbytery of Mackinac Administrative Commission was approved at a duly called special meeting with a unanimous roll call vote after consultation with the Presbytery of Mackinac Coordinating Council and giving appropriate hearing and representation from the presbytery stated clerk, presbytery moderator, and moderator of the coordinating council. The commissioners from the Presbytery of Mackinac were included in unanimous vote. Documentation is available.

4. The statement that three presbyteries “have withdrawn some or all of their participation in the life of the synod” is both misleading and divisive. The statement that “all five female presbytery executives refused to participate in an executive forum because of conflicts or concerns involving the synod executive” has proven to be a misleading and defamatory statement.

5. The synod has always made every effort to communicate and act with integrity and transparency. The synod assembly and synod committees continue to account for various responsibilities and all functions of the synod. The synod continues to affirm unity in diversity, equal protection under the law, and the right to due process.

Advice & Counsel on Item 05-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 05-06.

Item 05-03 requested the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to establish an administrative commission to address alleged disorder in the Synod of the Covenant. The response of the Synod of the Covenant embodied in this overture premises its request of the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to reject Item 05-03 based on the lack of compliance of the complainants, Cincinnati Presbytery and concurring presbyteries, with the principles found in Seeking to Be Faithful Together: Guidelines for Presbyterians During Times of Disagreement [Approved by the 204th General Assembly (1992) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).]

Furthermore, it appears that Item 05-03 fails to demonstrate that complainants adhered to Standing Rule K.2.b. in the General Assembly Manual. See the ACREC’s advice and counsel statement for Item 05-03 for further comments.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM OVT 05-06

Comment on Item 05-06—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

Section K.2.a. of the Standing Rules, Special Administrative Review of Synods, provides three ways that the General Assembly might be requested to initiate such review: “(1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-3.0302d; G-3.0402; Standing Rule A.3.; (2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule A.2.); or (3) By a commissioners’ resolution (Standing Rule A.6.). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake Special Administrative Review (G-3.0108b) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule K.1. and G-3.0109.”

Section K.2.b., Written Request for Review, states a second process for requesting special administrative review, which is appropriate between meetings of the General Assembly and would be considered by the Stated Clerk along with the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

While it is not appropriate for personnel matters to be decided by the General Assembly, it is appropriate for the General Assembly, if it discerns the need, to establish an administrative commission to inquire into and settle such issues.

On Changing the Name of Midwest Hanmi Presbytery—From the Synod of Lincoln Trails.

The Synod of Lincoln Trails overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA) to approve changing the official name of Midwest Hanmi Presbytery to Midwest Korean American Presbytery.

Rationale

In 2017, Midwest Hanmi Presbytery approved a resolution to change its official name to Midwest Korean American Presbytery. The presbytery then submitted a request to the Synod of Lincoln Trails to approve that action and to overture the General Assembly concerning the name change. At its 105th Stated Meeting on October 21, 2017, the Synod of Lincoln Trails approved the presbytery’s action. During its 106th Stated Meeting on April 21, 2018, the synod voted to submit the overture. Therefore, the Synod of Lincoln Trails submits this overture and recommends its approval by the General Assembly.

Commissioners’ Resolution: On Transferring Fruitland Presbyterian Church from the Presbytery of Olympia to the Presbytery of the Northwest Coast.

That the 223rd General Assembly (2018), upon request of the Synod of Alaska-Northwest and with the concurrence of both presbyteries, approve the transfer of Fruitland Presbyterian Church from the Presbytery of Olympia to the Presbytery of the Northwest Coast. This would result in changing the boundaries of the presbyteries.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Olympia approved the transfer on November 17, 2017. The Presbytery of the Northwest Coast approved the transfer on February 15, 2018.

The membership of the Presbytery of the Northwest Coast is approximately one-third Korean, and the presbytery has a Korean associate executive presbyter. The session, both presbyteries, and the synod believe that the active Korean community in Northwest Coast, as well as the personnel and language resources offered by the presbytery, will significantly strengthen the ministry of the congregation.

Commissioners’ Resolution. On the Challenges of Being Black in the PC (USA).

That the 223rd General Assembly (2018) do the following:

1. [Direct mid councils to recommit to] [Reaffirm the] committee on representation requirements for inclusiveness as stated in the constitution (G-3.0103), paying careful attention to issues of inclusiveness and fair practices by the pastor nominating committees and committees on preparation for ministry.

2. [Direct] [Advise] mid councils to [raise] [follow the lead of the National Black Presbyterian Caucus in raising] awareness of the declining nature of black congregations throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the lack of pastoral leadership, both current and future, for those congregations.

3. Direct the Office of the Stated Clerk to respond to the presbyteries that the National Black Presbyterian Caucus has identified as not abiding by Committee on Representation Guidelines.

4. The Office of the General Assembly is to report within one year to presbyteries and synods concerning the progress on this resolution and a full report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

5. Advise the Board of Pensions to analyze and report on the viability of African American Presbyterian Churches and the challenges of supporting installed pastoral leadership.

Rationale

This is a call to action for the PC(USA) regarding issues and concerns of the black constituency of this denomination. As the church, we have stated the obvious, repeatedly, in reference to our perspective on racism and injustice. However, the time has come for the denomination to take some action beyond developing resources, writing reports, and passing rules and regulations that are disregarded, or in some cases, outright ignored by a seemingly biased system that tends to favor those in power and control. While many of the same issues are relevant to most ethnic congregations, this paper will address “black” congregations specifically.

As black Presbyterians, we have been on a continuing pilgrimage with this denomination long before the beginning of the First African Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia in May of 1807.

Over the years, black Presbyterians have organized and reorganized in order to meet the challenges that emerge out of the awkward movement of history for black Presbyterians. African American Presbyterians helped shape the direction of a reunited church in 1983, with a commitment to racial justice and inclusiveness, as part of our confession of faith and rules of government. Yet, even today, we feel the church continues to struggle to effectively comply with this commitment, embrace the history and rich contributions of black people, and move swiftly toward change.

The time for stating the obvious and setting new goals is no longer an acceptable strategy without a plan of action that can be implemented immediately.

The National Black Presbyterian Caucus (NBPC) has noted the following concerns that could lead to some action and resolution of the majority of the issues raised:

1. Research completed in twelve presbyteries indicate that presbyteries are not abiding by the Committee on Representation guidelines, as stated in the Constitution (Book of Order, G-3.0103).

2. Currently of the 400+ black congregations, approximately 80 percent are without a pastor, mainly because they are unable to support one. Many of these congregations are less than fifty members.

3. Many pastors currently providing pastoral leadership are not Presbyterian and, therefore, lack a sufficient knowledge of the Presbyterian and Reformed tradition. Therefore, the status of the diminishment of the “black” church appears obvious. Without intervention, they will certainly continue to be closed or merged, one by one. The appearance is that presbyteries do not pay much attention to the decline or the issues causing the decline, until it is too late. A goal would be that the number of vacant congregations become a priority and that we address this issue so that we increase the number of vacant pulpits by 40 percent before the 224th General Assembly (2020). Further, presbyteries are encouraged to consider ways to address issues in black congregations before a church reaches the point of no return and an administrative commission is formed as an after-thought. Attention to mentoring and training for elders, similar to the pilot program in the Synod of Lakes and Prairies, may be one feasible alternative to providing pastoral leadership to small churches under fifty members.

4. A study of the impact of the ordination exams and the grueling process have caused many to drop out of the process.

5. The failure of seasoned elders on sessions, in some cases, has discouraged youth and young adults from participating. Providing opportunities and mentoring for youth and young adults may help with the desired results.

6. Encourage black persons who choose to serve on committees to speak out and speak up on issues that need to be addressed rather than feeling like their voices will not be heard.

7. Monitor the progress of African American women serving in leadership positions, particularly, senior pastor positions. Notable are the number of PNC’s who are still reluctant to consider and call women despite the representation guidelines and the latest Status of Women Report.

8. Begin conversations around our own prejudices within the black church, particularly, as we look at the whole issue of inclusiveness in our particular context.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-09

Advice and Council on Item 05-09—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 05-09 with the following amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. Direct mid councils to recommit to [Reaffirm the] Committee on Representation requirements for inclusiveness as stated in the constitution (G-3.0103), paying careful attention to issues of inclusiveness and fair practices by the pastor nominating committees and committees on preparation for ministry.

“[3. Direct the Office of the Stated Clerk to respond to the presbyteries that the National Black Presbyterian Caucus has identified as not abiding by Committee of Representation Guidelines.]

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) appreciates the resolution’s call for the PC(USA) to follow through with its stated commitments to representation and creating just church structure. In doing so, it is critical to listen
ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-09

Advice and Council on Item 05-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 05-09.

This resolution supports the work of ACREC as it advocates and addresses issues of racial justice and equity of people of color in the church and society.

ACREC supports this resolution as it brings awareness again of the need to take action to address the continuing problem of the lack of representation of people of color, specifically black members of the PC(USA) in decisions affecting pastoral leadership and representation in the emerging life of the PC(USA).

ACREC believes a lack of action by the PC(USA) will directly and negatively impact the participation and membership of its black members and thereby the entire church.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-09

Advice and Council on Item 05-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 05-09.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns identifies the need for more intentionality in unmasking the idolatries of racism and gender bias. The intersectionality of each is intrinsically embedded in church and in culture. “Racism is the opposite of what God intends for humanity. It is the rejection of the other, which is entirely contrary to the Word of God incarnate in Jesus Christ. Racism is a lie about our fellow human beings, for it says that some are less than others. Because of our biblical understanding of who God is and what God intends for humanity, the PC(USA) must stand against, speak against, and work against racism.”

At this critical moment in history, when racism, sexism, and misogyny explicitly abound throughout the current culture, causing significant spiritual and emotional violence against women, it imperative for the church to hear the voices of those long silenced. The commitment of the PC(USA)’s decade of “Hearing and Singing New Songs to God” supports the attempts to address gender concerns for women clergy.

There is currently no integrated plan to address declining black congregations, with enough bandwidth to adapt to the changing needs of black congregations in the 21st century. And while the General Assembly cannot direct mid councils, we feel a sense of urgency to study the listed implications via a task force to direct all agencies to engage in the sacred practice of strengthening our black congregations.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 05-09

Comment on Item 05-09—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation commends the authors of this commissioners’ resolution. We are in full support of the premise and substance of the document. GACOR stands ready to assist and advise the committees on representation of mid councils in their work regarding African American pastors and the 400+ African American PC(USA) congregations.

Committees on representation (CORs) of the mid councils of the church have the potential to be impactful agents of change in the PC(USA). Empowered and resourced CORs can lift up the voices and challenges of those that have been long silenced or ignored. GACOR works to increase diversity and equity at all levels of the church. We will assist and support efforts to make the PC(USA) more just, diverse, and equitable.

_Synod Reports in Response to Item 05-01 from the 222nd General Assembly (2016)_

In approving Item 05-01 in 2016, the General Assembly stated the following:

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) would like to recommend to synods that they continue conversation and collaboration of ministry and mission between and among synods. This includes encouraging synods to offer assistance to struggling synods, including the possibility of changing boundaries to increase the vitality and viability of synods. Further, the assembly urges synods to undertake an intentional system of review and self-study and to report to General Assembly on a biannual basis.

In the spirit of that recommendation, the following synods submitted reports:

- Synod of the Covenant—07-Info-Synod of the Covenant report.pdf (See p. 542.)
- Synod of Lakes and Prairies—07-Info-synod-of-lakes-and-prairies-report.pdf (See p. 544.)

SYNOD OF THE COVENANT RESPONSE TO
ITEM 05-01 FROM THE 222nd GENERAL ASSEMBLY 2016

In 2014, the Synod of the Covenant initiated a discernment process in response to the 221st General Assembly 2014 action and reported the 222nd GA 2016 as follows:

Synod of the Covenant Response to the 221st GA (2014) item 05-04

In response to the 221st GA (2014) item 05-04, the Synod of the Covenant invited all eleven of its presbyteries and neighboring synods into conversation to discuss possible boundary changes and/or new partnerships. Regretfully, we were unable to fulfill the 221st (2014) GA item 05-04 as issued. However, what did emerge from our contextual discernment process was a renewed purpose and sense of call as A Just-Peace church.

Recommendations:

1. That the Synod of the Covenant maintain its current geographic boundaries.
2. That the Synod of the Covenant be permitted to affirm its calling as A Just-Peace church.
3. That the Synod of the Covenant invite the presbyteries and congregations that lie within its bounds to adopt The Five Peacemaking Affirmations.

Since then, the Synod continued the discernment to live out the calling of A Just-Peace church. This is evident in our continuous self-evaluation and organizational redevelopment. The Synod Assembly convenes trice annually. In spring, the Synod welcomes new and returning commissioners with a three-day retreat, which includes faith nurture, education and reflection, and orientation, preceded or followed by a brief business meeting of the Assembly. In the summer, the one-day Assembly is focused on conversations with and receiving reports from the 11 presbyteries, which are presented by presbytery/coordinating council moderators. The context of mission, challenges and opportunities, is the focus of these community conversations. The Annual Assembly is a two-day in November and begins with a seminar led by the International Mission Partners from the Synod’s Mission to the USA program as they conclude their itineration with congregations. The seminar is followed by worship and often a visit by the GA Moderator. The next day is designated as the annual assembly business.

We continue to conduct the Mobile Health Fair Ministry program, the Mission to the USA program, and the Welcome Refugee initiative. The Synod continues to resources presbyteries as invited, and especially during transitions in leadership, and other constitutional requirements in presbytery minutes review, consultations, referrals, and PJC. The synod is in process of renewing the covenant agreements with PCUSA related institutions within the bounds and maintain ecumenical and interfaith relations. We have recently concluded a deliberate and lengthy process to review and update the Synod Bylaws and Manual of Operations.

The Synod continues to support various new and continued initiatives generously, reduce the cost, and refrain from increasing per capita apportionment. The Synod conducts its mission within the bounds in partnership with presbyteries and congregations, and with GA entities, in order to effect change in church and society. Through the Welcome Refugees initiative, the Synod allocates resources to help support congregations in order to demonstrate the love and teachings of Jesus through genuine hospitality, as well as with the three-year focus on Christian-Muslim relations through the Mission to the USA program. Synod also deploys six young adults to organize and conduct free health fairs through the Mobile Health Fair ministry. Synod funding also include the ecumenical mission of the Ohio Council of Churches, in addition to other engagements in the local and regional communities.
Support for Campus Ministry programs continues in public universities and colleges. The Synod maintains a focus on multicultural and diversity, which include the Cabinet of Racial Ethnic Affairs, Black Clergy Pastoral Care Retreats, and Korean Pastors and Spouses retreats. In addition, the Synod continues to administer R/E Program grants, New Covenant Grants, Higher Education and Seminary Scholarships, and Peacemaking Scholarships. Synod also maintains vibrant partnerships with the Synod Presbyterian Women, and the Covenant Gathering (former Synod School in partnership with Synod of Lincoln Trails), and PCUSA related mission networks, and international partnerships.

Since the 222nd GA 2016, through the efforts of the Moderators’ Committee, there was an added effort to improve the committee structure of the Synod of the Covenant. The Synod Assembly established a task group of diverse commissioners to review the Bylaws and Manual of Administrative Operations. Those proposals were voted on at the November 3-4, 2017 Synod Assembly. This effort was the result of the evaluation of the Synod’s Moderators Committee, which also follow up on the process of implementation.

The Synod’s Moderators Committee will continue to evaluate the work of the synod as mandated by synod policy to “Guide the synod in its review of the vision and mission directions of its life and work” which include reviewing the organizational structure, policies, and mission focus of the Synod of the Covenant annually, and report to the General Assembly biennially.
SYNOD OF LAKES AND PRAIRIES

Report to the 223rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
June 2018

The 222nd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) urged synods “to undertake an intentional system of review and self-study and to report to General Assembly on a biannual basis.”

However, the General Assembly provided no guidance for submitting reports or outline of the format of such reports. In keeping with the spirit of the recommendation, the Synod of Lakes and Prairies submits the following summary of some of its activities during the past two years.

The Synod of Lakes and Prairies, with more than 750 churches across six states of the upper Midwest, partners with its 16 presbyteries in the ministry and mission of its congregations across the wide region. To do so, the synod concentrates much of its effort within the framework of a covenant adopted nearly three years ago with the synods of Lincoln Trails and Mid-America. The covenant calls for an effort to support the ministry and mission small and rural churches, and for the commitment to fight against oppression, racism and disenfranchisement of the marginalized and communities of color.

With that broad scope, the Synod of Lakes and Prairies offers this summer its 65th annual Synod School, which serves as a learning and personal enrichment experience for people of all ages, and also serves as a leadership development program for small and rural churches. The weeklong program typically draws about 600 participants, but in the summer of 2017 that number set a record at 686 when the Rev. J. Herbert Nelson II, stated clerk of the General Assembly, served through the week as its convocation speaker.

The synod is also a sponsor and one of the developers, along with participating presbyteries, in The Academy, a series of 11 courses “designed to develop well equipped, thoughtful people to better serve councils in a variety of capacities.” The Academy opened its series of classes at Synod School 2017, and a new series of classes will open again this year at the midsummer ministry. For some participants, classes through The Academy will lead to becoming commissioned pastors, but others may use the education to become stronger leaders in their churches and presbytery.

Developing leaders for the presbyteries and congregations across the synod continues to evolve. What the synod once called the COM/CPM Conference is now the Leadership Summit, an annual conference designed for presbytery leadership in a new world. Participation has been expanded beyond members of committees on ministry and committees on the preparation for ministry to reach leaders in a variety of roles. In the 2017 event the theme centered on bi-vocational ministry, a key to many leadership positions in small and rural churches, and the 2018 event concentrated on mental health.
The synod subsidizes a number of participants from each of its presbyteries.

The synod continues to support members and institutions of racial ethnic communities through scholarships, grants, presence and activities. Over the past two years, the synod has contributed nearly $20,000 in scholarships to racial-ethnic students. A recent recipient, the Rev. Ekram Kachu, became the second ordained Sudanese woman in the synod, and was installed this June as pastor of First Arabic Presbyterian Church in Des Moines. The Rev. Kachu is also the executive director of the Arabic Outreach Center of Des Moines, a recipient of grant from the synod’s Self Development of People Committee. That synod committee continues to support initiatives among racial-ethnic and immigrant communities in their efforts to provide social, economic, educational and legal resources to their members. The Committee on Racial Ethnic Ministry also provides grants to 12 Native American tribal colleges in its bounds.

Being present is an important part of the synod’s ministry and mission. Beginning the fall of 2016 the synod participated in the Dakota Access Pipeline protests near the Standing Rock Indian Reservation in North Dakota. More than 4,000 people gathered as “water protectors” to prevent the pipeline from being placed beneath the Missouri River. Although the pipeline now runs beneath the river, the opportunity for ministry and mission was clear. In addition to being present and visible at the protest campsite, the synod accepted nearly $25,000 from across the church in donations that were subsequently used for fuel, food, medical care, legal services, sustainable energy projects, native-led stewardship organizations and interfaith advocacy.

Believing that dialogue and conversations around the issues of white privilege and systemic racism are an integral part of the church’s effort to move forward, the synod invited Jennifer Harvey, author of “Dear White Christians: For Those Still Longing for Reconciliation,” to address its assembly in the spring of 2017. Harvey, a professor of religion at Drake University, led three educational sessions that addressed white privilege, racism and reparations. “We cannot have paradise in a world full of theme parks if at first we do not lament,” Harvey said. The synod also purchased and distributed Debby Irving’s

While staff and other leadership positions within the synod change and evolve, we continue to value the relationships that have been established. The synod maintains covenant relationships with each of the seven Presbyterian-related institutions of higher education within its bounds. A member of the synod staff serves on the Council of Advisors of the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary.
The synod has continued to support a variety of ministries through emerging mission, and ecclesiastical and ecumenical grants. Those grants have supported programs addressing youth homelessness, leadership development, innovative collegiate ministries, youth and family services, and housing for young adults engaged in public services like AmeriCorps. More specifically, one $10,000 grant supported Iowa presbyteries who are working together to assist those who suffer from mental illness. Iowa has substantial shortages in both facilities and providers for mental-health care. An emerging mission grant supports the Table of Grace community, a new congregation in South Dakota organized by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. The Presbyterian Student Center Foundation – more commonly known as Pres House – in Madison, Wisconsin, received a synod grant to support an experimental young-adult community, a program receiving substantial support from the Lilly Foundation.

Pres House has a particularly strong relationship with the synod. Speaking at the most recent gathering of NEXT Church, the Rev. Mark Elsdon, executive director and campus co-pastor of Pres House, told those who attended his Ignite presentation, "I'm going to tell you about the incredible impact that leveraging assets within the church can have in our mission and ministry. It's a story of hope and one that just might give us some ideas for today." Elsdon told the story of the successful Pres House Student Apartments, and how the synod -- "one of the most helpful partners," Elsdon said -- used $2.5 million to enable Pres House to obtain "favorable financing" on its debt. The complete presentation is at https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=13&v=GhqXd1BTT0A.

A strong spirit of sharing gifts and resources exists within the Synod of Lakes and Prairies. In the last two years the synod has shared more than $450,000 in Comprehensive Presbytery Support with 15 of the synod's 16 presbyteries. An additional $36,000 has been shared with Dakota Presbytery, a non-geographic presbytery, and the oldest presbytery west of the Mississippi River. The synod also provides payroll and accounting services for a number of presbyteries, and maintains partnership access to Leaderwise, a regional counseling and consulting organization for church leaders.

The Synod of Lakes and Prairies is thankful for this opportunity to report to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Through prayer, careful discernment, and trust in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we look forward to continued fruitful service in our broad region of the upper Midwest.

REPORT TO THE 223RD GENERAL ASSEMBLY

In approving Item 05-01 in 2016, the General Assembly stated the following:

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) would like to recommend to synods that they continue conversation and collaboration of ministry and mission between and among synods. This includes encouraging synods to offer assistance to struggling synods, including the possibility of changing boundaries to increase the vitality and viability of synods. Further, the assembly urges synods to undertake an intentional system of review and self-study and to report to General Assembly on a biannual basis.

In the spirit of that recommendation, the Synod of Lincoln Trails submits the following report:

The Mission of the Synod of Lincoln Trails of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is to develop, nurture, and support leaders in partnership with our presbyteries and congregations, and to coordinate Presbyterian mission strategy within the Synod.

Historically, this mission has been carried out in a programmatic structure of providing innovative teaching, training, and skills development for leaders within the Synod, both lay persons and clergy. Examples include Synod School, forging a cooperative program with the Synod of Mid-America to train potential interim pastors, creating an academy to provide the necessary training for ruling elders wanting to serve as commissioned pastors, and developing a New Pastors formation program to support newly ordained clergy in their first three years. Believing with John Calvin that the “human mind and conscience are freed for obedience to God through learning”, we continue to use a variety of educational modalities developing, nurturing, and supporting leaders to be sent out as a primary form of Christian witness to where and how God acts in Illinois and Indiana.

In 2010, in recognition of the need to shift from our historic programmatic model, the Synod began a deliberate process of discernment around leadership for these times. In proactive response to the possibility of action by the 220th General Assembly about synods in 2012, Lincoln Trails led in gathering as many executive presbyters as possible from the upper Midwest, from within the synods of Mid-America, Lakes and Prairies, and Lincoln Trails. Geographically representing the heartland of America as well as 15% of the membership of the denomination, we anticipated that synods might be asked to do governance while programming would shift to networks. We imagined a Heartland Resource Network which would consider three areas of partnership: efficiency through shared administrative function, shared leadership development, training opportunities, and a common mission initiative.

Moving with the ambiguities created through the decision of the General Assembly to send the questions about synods back out for further study and action in 2014, we simultaneously worked with the internal shifts caused by the 2014 retirement of the Reverend Carol McDonald, who had served as our Synod Executive for 25 years and embodied the best of our qualities. We completed divesting ourselves of physical properties, streamlined our operations and asked where God is calling us to be now. In the time of transitional leadership from 2014-2017, we examined all that we value from our history, retained our significant legacy programs, eliminated support for programs whose time has passed, and solidified our understanding of our finances. Embracing a generous spirit related to all the blessings God provides to us, we are already acting in new ways.

Installing the Reverend Sara Dingman as our Synod Executive in October 2017 is a sign of our renewed enthusiasm, passion for ministry, and readiness to explore how we can continue to provide generative, relevant, timely, and nourishing leadership within the Synod of Lincoln Trails for years to come. It is Reverend Dingman's capacity to teach adaptive behaviors that led the Synod to discern the fitness of extending a call to her while she was yet our Transitional Executive.

During our time of transition and beyond, the Synod has engaged in numerous activities to serve presbyteries and congregations with enthusiasm, imagination, and love. Examples include the following:

- New Pastors cohorts – a three-year program for new pastors that meets twice per year for professional development and networking.

- Utilization of Financial Resources – allocating a percentage from the Synod’s investments within unrestricted funds to provide investments within our eight presbyteries for transformational ministries.

- Professional Education - contracting with LeaderWise for Synod-wide training in behavioral boundaries and ethics.

- Synod Collegium – gatherings taking place three times per year for mid-council leaders, networking, and professional development.

- Partnerships – expanding ministries to include collaboration with Creation Lab in Chicago, planning a Synod Sankofa, facilitating #MeToo events, hosting trainings for committees on ministry and preparation for ministry, providing a Synod Legal Roundtable, and being a resource for four of our presbyteries in their searches for new executive leadership.

- Build-up of Virtual Community – the Synod has used platforms such as Facebook and the online meeting service Zoom. The number of followers on the Synod’s Facebook page has increased from 100 to 1,000. Zoom has been particularly helpful in facilitating special meetings of the Synod and work among committees.

In 2016, the Synod convened a Dream Team summit, which consisted of individuals representing a variety of constituencies. The Dream Team was charged with casting a vision for the Synod and looking to new directions for ministry. Emerging from these discussions was a proposal to create a Synod Council, which was approved by the Synod in 2017. Possessing an imaginative and nimble spirit, the Synod Council’s responsibilities will include proposing a vision for the Synod’s life and work, as well as providing a mechanism for conversation and coordination in implementing the Synod’s vision.

This opportunity to report to the General Assembly is appreciated. Through God’s love and abundant grace, the Synod will prayerfully continue its work for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A).
Report from the Synod of Mid-America to the 223rd General Assembly of the PC(USA)

When acting to approve item 05-01, the 222nd General Assembly made the following comment:

_The Mid Councils Committee would like to recommend to synods that they continue conversation and collaboration of ministry and mission between and among synods. This includes encouraging synods to offer assistance to struggling synods, including the possibility of changing boundaries to increase the vitality and viability of synods. Further, the Committee urges synods to undertake an intentional system of review and self-study and to report to General Assembly on a bi-annual basis._

In lieu of an official, standard method of reporting outlined by the General Assembly, the Synod of Mid-America commends to the Mid Councils Committee a close reading of our minutes, wherein the committee will find our annual activities of intentional review and self-study (2016 Minutes, pgs 6-10, 22-30; 2017 Minutes, pgs 8-11, 40-47).

In particular, we advise the Committee to direct its attention to the annual “Approval and Ranking of Missional Priorities” during each Fall Assembly meeting. This process of reviewing and prioritizing our missional goals is undertaken each year, and serves as the basis for the next year’s operational and missional activity on the part of the Executive and staff. Connected to this process (and equally as important) are the subsequent progress reports from the Executive to the Assembly (during both spring and fall meetings) concerning the strategic goals established in collaboration with the Committee on Governance.

The Synod of Mid-America has not undertaken any further conversation with sister synods about changing boundaries after engaging in such conversations intensively between 2014-2016 (at the direction of the 221st General Assembly).

The Synod has instituted a joint process with our member presbyteries of entering a season of discernment to answer the question: “What is the future of Presbyterian ministry in the Synod of Mid-America?” On pgs 12-15 of our 2017 Minutes, the Mid Council Committee can find an approved proposal for a “Presbytery Futures Task Force.” In short, the charge to this task force from both the Synod and our six member presbyteries is to undergo comprehensive look at the totality of our region, and to recommend any and all changes they deem necessary to increase our collective ability to serve our region given the nuances and complexities associated with a changing religious and social landscape. We look forward to making a report to the 224th General Assembly about the progress that we have made.

Conversations of collaborative mission and ministry have continued to blossom. As noted in the progress reports from our Executive, we continue to work with our sister synod, the Synod of Lincoln Trails, to provide education and training in Interim/Transitional Ministry. MALT (Mid-America/Lincoln Trails) continues to be a well-attended program, held twice annually in St. Louis and for those wishing to receive training at both the Week 1 and Week 2 pastoral level. We have also added an additional week focusing on executive training for those interested in serving mid-councils.

Further, our Theocademy program continues to be blessed by the financial support of the Synods of the Southwest, Lincoln Trails, and Sun. The recent releases of our complete Spanish Language reshoot of our core educational series (titled Teocademia) has been received well by congregations both domestically and abroad and was made possible only due to the partnership of other synods.

The Synod of the Trinity Review

RE: In response to Item 05-01 from the 222nd General Assembly (2016), urging Synods "to undertake an intentional system of review and self-study and to report to General Assembly on a bi-annual basis".

The Synod of the Trinity has recently adopted John and Miriam Carvers’ Policy Governance approach to assist in maintaining appropriate relationships with the 16 presbyteries¹ of the Synod and to guide it in enacting relevant regional ministries together.

We are still learning this new way of being but have felt comfortable enough with it for the past 18 months to conclude that we are moving over the hurdle of initial implementation.

Policy Governance requires us to understand presbyteries as owners of the Synod as well as primary beneficiaries of its work and ministry. Life for us is a constant conversation between the presbyteries (and through the presbyteries, the congregations) and the synod commissioners, leadership and staff as we listen for ministry wants, needs and future.

Our commissioners and Governing Commission have the responsibility to take their listening and develop primary and secondary ends that guide the work of staff, advisory teams and task groups. In October 2017 the Synod Assembly reviewed and confirmed the continuation of our current ends (purposes), and in November 2017 the governing commission designated three of the ends for special emphasis in the coming year. (insert ends)

In addition to reviewing and affirming, changing or replacing the secondary ends, the Assembly and Governing Commission review the work of the transitional synod executive each year to determine whether or not the executive has maintained the fiscal and administrative responsibilities required, and to see if the executive has pursued implementation of the ends through the work of staff, task groups etc. We are still refining what this regular monitoring will look like but in general are pleased with the way that the ends are being used to develop the work of the Synod.

What we learned at the end of the first full year, October 2016 to October 2017:

1. We are doing a good job of training the 10 members of the Governing Commission for their work. At each of its four yearly meetings, moderator and staff configure a meeting that allows time for necessary governance tasks, deep conversation about an aspect of culture and ministry in our region, and consideration of how we continue to enhance the ongoing conversation with the presbyteries, both in their role as owners and as beneficiaries of our work. GC members express their own personal growth through this process and their deepening ability to see what might be across a broad region. They articulate how their time spent to understand and serve the broader church has helped them in their congregations back home as well as in their connection to their presbyteries.

2. Supporting the full complement of commissioners into their new roles has not been easy. There are two aspects of the commissioner role – governor and liaison – and the two are not completely separate. For our work of governance to be as rich as possible, commissioners must come into service with an awareness of their own presbytery, its ministry context, its strengths and places of needs. They must then be able to engage in discerning conversations that consider the larger region, including but not limited to their own. As a liaison, they are to continually be alert for local information that would benefit the work of the Synod, Synod/regional information that needs to be shared back home, and an eye towards their colleague commissioners for possible networking and partnership. We struggle to deal with folks who do not have sufficient internet skills to stay in helpful connection and those for whom these expectations may feel like too much work. We are testing the kind of training and ongoing conversations/gatherings that will help commissioners embrace their role and the possibilities in it, but we are not yet where we want to be. We continue to share our commissioner job description with the presbyteries in order to help them select those who might best serve. In addition, we have asked presbyteries to make room for Synod Commissioners at their leadership tables in order for commissioner awareness to be raised and that is beginning to happen more frequently.

3. The executive has taken significant steps with the staff to shift from work simply being done because it always has been done, to work being done because of the ends and in ways that meet the ends. Initially this felt like turning the proverbial battleship, but as staff have learned to breathe the ends, new strategies and possibilities for implementation are emerging.

4. The Synod of the Trinity embraced virtual meeting possibilities beginning in 2010 and began to experiment with that using WebEx and encouraged the presbyteries to borrow and test the synod service. With the advent and ease of Zoom, virtual work is a regular occurrence across the Synod and even some of our most technologically timid can see the benefit. Recently during the month of snow storms in the Northeast, an entire Governing Commission meeting was successfully spread over the course of two days using Zoom. Leadership carefully reworked the meeting for the online modality and the GC members were delighted. All of the work got done and everyone actively participated.

Some key work completed/in process includes:

- Partnering with the Community Responders Network in Harrisburg to video three skits around bias that will be put out on YouTube with brief study guides for use by anyone.
- Special support during our 300th anniversary year for global mission and mission partnerships. Grants to presbyteries served:
  - As seed money for matching funds to South Sudan in the face of the food crises.
  - To develop CRE resources in a partnership with a Dakota presbytery.
  - To enhance a medical clinic in Ghana.
  - To rebuild homes in Haiti.
- Special support during our 300th anniversary year for Freedom Grants to congregations in small cities for ministry with predominately African American male populations.
- Renewed and revised process for grants supporting the next generation through campus ministry. Instead of funding campus ministry directly, the Synod will fund presbyteries to fund a particular ministry. The desire is to develop relationship and partnership between the presbytery and the campus, potentially increasing funds and those who will enact the ministry.

- Several presbyteries who have moved beyond traditional leadership models have received grants for process consultation as well as ongoing Synod leadership presence to enhance their work and help them to be mindful that they do not do this change work alone. For many this is a first awareness that their future may be in a different kind of connection to and with others than they have had in the past.

- Renewed and expanded emphasis on Synod-wide communications, telling the stories of our presbyteries and congregations, seeking the unique and life-changing experiences of faithfulness and balancing our press to include the whole region and not just those who are the loudest and most active. This area of continuing growth was set in motion in 2014 with the hiring of a fulltime communications staff person. This role is now moving out to include training for presbyteries when desired and the expansion of synod ears to intentionally include others who will participate in listening for stories and information and developing stories and resources to share across the region.

Even at more than 300 years old, the Synod of the Trinity is reinventing itself to be a faithful, 21st Century expression of the connectional church, building on a strong foundation created at the beginnings of American Presbyterianism but remaining cognizant of the challenges of a world where organized religion – especially Christianity – is viewed with suspicion in many corners, including those where future growth must originate.

The Synod is not “rearranging deck chairs on the Titanic,” but turning to new technologies, new expressions of mission, new structures and organization, to fulfill its calling as a part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Synod leadership is confident in its future, even while not being entirely sure what it will look like.

In 2016, the Coordinating Team of The Synod of the Sun spent time and prayer asking themselves the question: WHY? Why do we matter? WHY? Why do we do what we do?

Out of this question, the following WHY Statement was created:

We believe when we work together across boundaries,
We make visible the Good News and find wholeness as the Body of Christ.
In our common calling, we impact lives together.
Connecting, Equipping and Empowering.

In more depth, we gather because we are a connectional people; we gather to be equipped for ministry because we believe we are stronger together, and when we connect and are equipped, we become empowered to do the work God has called each of us to do - within our Synod, Presbytery, Congregation, our personal Calling.
The Synod of the Sun encompasses 11 Presbyteries from the States of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas. The majority of our Presbyteries are in some form of transition and there is currently one Administrative Commission in place who is charged with walking along side and supporting/encouraging the Presbytery and has been given no original jurisdiction.

We are the only Synod that does not assess a per capita.

How do we live out our WHY statement?

Connects - The Synod connects Presbyterians for mission through a variety of formal relationships

Associated organizations -
- Presbyterian Women
- Synod of the Sun Presbyterian Foundation
- Presbyterian Historical Society of the SouthWest.

Networks -
A Synod of the Sun Network is formed around a specific and creative purpose, mission, or ministry project enabling relationships and mission opportunities not possible within a single presbytery. Each network chooses its priorities, leaders, and implements its own activities. Each network requires a covenant relationship with the synod whereby the synod becomes a partner in ministry and mission. The Synod of the Sun offers its resources of connection, consultation, and communication along with limited funding and administrative support. Current Networks include:
- Solar Under the Sun
- Synod Youth Workshop
- Synod Multicultural Youth Workshop
- Faithful Action on Climate Change
- Hispanic Ministries Mission Network (HMMN)
- Oklahoma Presbyterian Network (OPN)

Covenant Partners -
Consist of 9 education institutions:
- Austin Presbyterian Theological Society
- Trinity University
- Schreiner University
- Austin College
- Goodland Academy
- Lyon College
- Presbyterian Pan American School
- University of Tulsa
- University of the Ozarks
Six Covenant Partners are social service or ministry organizations:
- Presbyterian Children’s Homes & Services
- Presbyterian Mo-Ranch Assembly
- Ferncliff Camp and Conference Center
- Texas Presbyterian Foundation
- Evergreen Life Services
- Vera Lloyd Presbyterian Home & Family Services, Inc.

Equips - The Synod equips Presbyterians for God’s Call through a variety of programs and opportunities:

- Training provided by Solar Under the Sun
- Synod Youth Workshop
- Synod Multicultural Youth Workshop
- Imagine – 2018 Theme, “Moving Into the Neighborhood”
- Grants and Scholarships for Congregations, Partnering Congregations, Presbyteries, Institutions related to the Synod, and individuals who meet the criteria for Mission or other specified purposes. Scholarships also available for Candidates and Inquirers attending a PC(USA) Seminary.
- Communication Services Plan with very reasonable pricing available for all Presbyteries.

Empowers - The Synod equips Presbyterians to be the hands and feet of Christ. Here are but a few examples:

Standing side-by-side with teachers, the Rev. Tracy Evans, Rev. Michael East, Rev. Jessica Dixon and Rev. Josh Kerr, and their congregations heard the call of the Spirit to speak truth to power during the Oklahoma City Teacher’s Walk Out.

Over 10 years ago, Divine Redeemer Presbyterian Church in San Antonio started doing “Family Decompression Retreats”. Over 100 people came to the first solo retreat. In 2017, the director of John Knox Ranch contacted Divine Redeemer about doing a Spanish language camp. Thanks to this new collaboration, the Family Decompression Camp has moved to John Knox Ranch, a camp run by Mission Presbytery.

The Hispanic Ministry Mission Network (HMMN), having recently elected their Leadership Team, has the vision and determination to help presbyteries and the Synod of the Sun develop sorely needed Hispanic ministries.
The Synod Coordinating Team recently asked Commissioners and Attendees of the Synod's Spring Assembly Meeting to complete a Survey, using the story of Mary and Martha, in order to self-evaluate the balance between our Management and Maintenance with our Spiritual Development and Transformation. Questions asked included how well we collaborated in our work; how well we treated each other with respect and cared for our relationships; how well we listened to each other in an effort to seek understanding; and if our work focused more on the future of our ministries rather than the past. The results were overwhelming positive, with comments ranging from “the value of love and respect that was shown, even with differing opinions” to the statement, “We are definitely on a forward path.”

Synod of the Sun Communications Services Plan

Seizing the unique opportunity to tell your exceptional story of feeding the seeds of ministry and mission to the broader culture.

Churches, faith-based entities, and innovative events who are not using web and social media resources effectively are understood as literally “silent”, particularly to younger people.

We can speak into multiculturalism, peace and justice, diversity, equality, and disaster relief. When the larger community can see this, they see the Gospel. They see grace, mercy, gratitude and unconditional love. They see the church being the church.

Our message of hope, inclusion and service beyond our walls and borders is one that we can share on multiple platforms, engaging our communities in a cost-effective manner.

Item 06-01

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-01. See pp. 69, 70.]

On Amending G-4.0203 to Resolve a Conflict Between the Book of Order and the Laws of Some States—From the Presbytery of New Covenant.

The Presbytery of New Covenant respectfully overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-4.0203 (Church Property Held in Trust) of the Form of Government be amended by adding text at the end of that section as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]:

“All property held by or for a congregation, a presbytery, a synod, the General Assembly, or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), whether legal title is lodged in a corporation, a trustee or trustees, or an unincorporated association, and whether the property is used in programs of a congregation or of a higher council or retained for the production of income, is held in trust nevertheless for the use and benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.): unless state law requires otherwise.”

Rationale

This proposed amendment seeks to resolve a conflict that exists between the Book of Order and the laws of some states. The conflict exists clearly when ecclesiastical law requires the presbytery to defend the property interests of the PC(USA) and civil law, either through judicial rulings or legislative actions, have rendered G-4.0203 to no force or effect.

For example, in some states it may be permissible for a congregation to ask to clarify its property rights. This request might take the form of a congregation, acting properly through its trustees, asking the presbytery to execute a Quitclaim Deed in favor of the congregation. Regardless of the requirements of state law, the Book of Order arguably prohibits the presbytery from granting the congregation’s request and requires the presbytery to defend the property interests of the PC(USA).

In similar circumstances, some congregations have filed lawsuits against a presbytery, synod, and the PC(USA). This litigation has been costly and counterproductive. Some presbyteries have suffered significant financial losses related to the litigation. In these lawsuits, congregations routinely request and courts routinely issue restraining orders against the higher governing bodies. These restraining orders limit a presbytery’s ability to fulfill its ordinary ecclesiastical responsibilities.

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) received a commissioners’ resolution (Item 06-17) seeking to raise the issue of this conflict between the Book of Order and the laws of some jurisdictions and seeking prayer for affected presbyteries. In its response, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) provided important guidance.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) sees the trust clause to embody the solidarity of the church and the conviction that the church cannot be “owned.” The Heidelberg Catechism states, “That I am not my own, but belong—body and soul, in life and in death—to my faithful Savior, Jesus Christ” (Book of Confessions, 4.001). The trust clause puts this in both communal and concrete terms, so that we “are not [our] own ….”

In practical terms, it separates us from congregational polities, and throughout our history there have been various ways funds have circulated and been used to support each other. It is part of our social witness as a community to maintain that shared trust that points to the larger whole.

In a context where our church’s beliefs are challenged and efforts made to weaken our connectionalism, ACSWP would encourage conversation on how to strengthen our bonds of mutual accountability and our ability to resist legal and other efforts to weaken our church. It is not clear that this measure would add much to the discussions that regularly occur in many of our congregations and presbyteries. (Minutes, 2016, Part I, pp. 381–82)

This overture and the proposed amendment to the Book of Order honors the importance and power of our shared connection and support the responsibility of each presbytery to confront difficult circumstances to the best of its ability.

BACKGROUND: The Book of Order and Church Property

The Book of Order reflects wisdom received from our predecessor denominations, including the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) and the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS). An example of this is the shared value reflected in the principle that church property is held in trust for the larger denomination. In the circumstances of congregational dissolutions and church closures, this principle has allowed for the church property to be used to carry the work of the church to successive generations. However, recent state court rulings and other legislative actions have created circumstances where the requirements of the Book of Order are in conflict with the requirements of state law. This situation is unproductive and unsustainable for affected presbyteries. The proposed amendment to G-4.0203 will resolve the conflict with state law and, at the same time, allow presbyteries to uphold our historic principles and shared values.

In principle and in practice each congregation is simultaneously an expression of the Body of Christ and an institution of the state in which it is located. This is to say that each congregation, as a part of the Body of Christ, bears witness to Jesus Christ in the fullness of our biblical and theological traditions; and, that each congregation, as an institution of the world, is also subject to the ordering and responsibilities required by civil authorities. When addressing issues of church property ownership and possession, the language of the Book of Order reflects the richness of our heritage, the complex nature of the church, and our commitment to the ongoing work of the church.

1. The Book of Order recognizes civil law and requires compliance with it. For example, our Form of Government establishes, “Where permitted by civil law, each congregation shall cause a corporation to be formed and maintained” (G-4.0101). Furthermore, the Form of Government grants certain civil responsibilities to the congregation:

   The corporation so formed, or the individual trustees, shall have the following powers: to receive, hold, encumber, manage, and transfer property, real or personal, for the congregation, provided that in buying, selling, and mortgaging real property, the trustees shall act only after the approval of the congregation, granted in a duly constituted meeting; to accept and execute deeds of title to such property; to hold and defend title to such property; to manage any permanent special funds for the furtherance of the purposes of the congregation, all subject to the authority of the session and under the provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The powers and duties of the trustees shall not infringe upon the powers and duties of the session or the board of deacons. (G-4.0101)

2. The Book of Order also recognizes the connectional nature of the church and its continuation throughout the ages. Such is the wisdom that grants certain property rights to higher governing authorities—that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is to continue beyond the lifespan of any particular congregation. As there was in the constitutions of the PCUS and the UPCUSA, the current Book of Order includes a provision that the property is held in trust for the denomination. “All property held by or for a congregation, a presbytery, a synod, the General Assembly, or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) … is held in trust nevertheless for the use and benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (G-4.0203).

3. The language of the Book of Order, recognizes that each congregation has authority and responsibility for the property owned by the congregation. However, the language of G-4.0203, G-4.0204, and G-4.0205 creates a property interest in favor of the PC(USA). A presbytery is required to take action in any of three possible situations: (1) when property “ceases to be used by that congregation as a congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in accordance with this Constitution” (G-4.0204), (2) when “a congregation is formally dissolved by the presbytery” (G-4.0205), and (3) when a congregation “has become extinct by reason of the dispersal of its members, the abandonment of its work, or other cause” (G-4.0205).

BACKGROUND: Conflicting Requirements of State Law

This overture has its origins in the State of Texas. The circumstances described in this rationale are rooted in a decision of the Texas Supreme Court. These same issues are likely to apply to other states and to other Presbyteries as well.

In 2013, the Texas Supreme Court issued a widely publicized ruling regarding a property dispute between a congregation and The Episcopal Church of the United States (Masterson v. Diocese of Northwest Texas, 2013). At issue was a property dispute between a congregation and the denomination; and, like the PC(USA)’s Book of Order, the constitution of The Episcopal Church includes a property trust clause.

Among the issues addressed by the Texas Supreme Court was the legal methodology to be applied when considering issues related to the ownership and possession of church property. The court decided in favor of using a standard known as “neutral principals of law.” The court concluded:

Under the neutral principles methodology, courts decide non-ecclesiastical issues such as property ownership based on the same neutral principles of law applicable to other entities, Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 603–04 (1979), while deferring to religious entities’ decisions on ecclesiastical and church polity questions. See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708 (1976). (http://caselaw.findlaw.com/tx-supreme-court/1643315.html)

and

Properly exercising jurisdiction requires courts to apply neutral principles of law to non-ecclesiastical issues involving religious entities in the same manner as they apply those principles to other entities and issues. Thus, courts are to apply neutral principles of law to issues such as land titles, trusts, and corporate formation, governance, and dissolution, even when religious entities are involved. (http://caselaw.findlaw.com/tx-supreme-court/1643315.html)

The methodology of “neutral principles of law” does not simply or immediately wipe-away the property interests of the PC(USA). This methodology introduces a new and complex set of issues to be considered. The specifics are likely to vary from state to state; but, some of the matters to be considered are foreign to the language used in the Book of Order.

In Masterson, the Texas Supreme Court listed some of these considerations.

Under the neutral principles methodology, ownership of disputed property is determined by applying generally applicable law and legal principles. That application will usually include considering evidence such as deeds to the properties, terms of the local church charter (including articles of incorporation and by laws, if any), and relevant provisions of governing documents of the general church. (http://caselaw.findlaw.com/tx-supreme-court/1643315.html)

As it currently reads, the Book of Order does not allow for a presbytery to consider the information required by the neutral principles of law and then to act in a manner that is inconsistent with G-4.0203.
Advice on Item 06-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-01.

The proposed language is inconsistent with the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and specifically conflicts with F-3.0102, F-3.0201, F-3.0203, F-3.0206, and F-3.0209. The proposed language is also inconsistent with G-4.0203, G-4.0206, G-4.207, and G-4.0208 and is likely to add further confusion and conflict to resolution of church property disputes.

Section F-3.0102 specifically provides that every “Christian Church … is entitled to declare … the whole system of its internal government….” The proposed language fails to recognize this core fundamental principle of our Presbytery polity and form of government. Section F-3.0201 states that “the particular congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) wherever they are, taken collectively, constitute one church, called the church.” We are one church over time and space. Particular congregations, governed by sessions at a specific point in time, are not free to act independently of these connectional principles, but must act within these connectional bounds, “not simply to reflect the will of the people, but rather to seek together to find and represent the will of Christ” (F-3.0204).

Section F-3.0206 provides that “A higher council shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal.” Section F-3.0209 states: “Councils possess whatever administrative authority is necessary to give effect to duties and powers assigned by the Constitution of the church. The jurisdiction of each council is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries.” This language is a foundation for the express powers and authority set forth in G-4.01 and G-4.02. This language controls the relationships and respective spheres of authority of presbyteries and sessions in the midst of church property disputes.

The overture’s stated rationale that a presbytery must “defend the property interests of the PC(USA)” does not reflect the wide range of discernment and discretion granted to presbyteries by G-4.02. The presbytery’s obligations, like those of a session or other council, with respect to church property are to hold and use property for the benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and when there is a question or change regarding how “property shall be held, used, applied, transferred, or sold,” it is the presbytery’s obligation to act in conformity with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including G-4.0203. A proposal to require presbyteries to act in a manner consistent with state law, even where such law is not clear, subject to change or in conflict, and contrary to the church’s Constitution would not likely make things easier for presbyteries facing church property disputes, and may embroil them in civil litigation. For example, there could be remedial cases brought alleging that a presbytery failed to follow specific provisions of state property or trust law.

Any amendment of G-4.0203 (sometimes referred to as the "trust clause") should address the obligations and fiduciary responsibilities of sessions and particular congregations to adhere to G-4.02 even where title to specific property is held in the name of a particular congregation. The proposed change does not do this, and the ACC advises that it be disapproved. Any revision or amendment of G-4.0203 and other parts of Chapter 4 will have significant implications for the life and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and must be carefully considered prior to approval.

Item 06-02

[The assembly approved Item 06-02. See pp. 69, 70.]

On Amending G-3.0307 to Clarify the Responsibility of the Presbytery—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe.

The Presbytery of Santa Fe respectfully overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the PC(USA) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-3.0307 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-3.0307 Pastor, Counselor, and Advisor to Its Ministers of the Word and Sacrament and Congregations “Presbyteries shall be open at all times to communication regarding the life and ministry of their congregations.

“Each presbytery shall develop and maintain mechanisms and processes to serve as pastor and counselor to its pastors, both ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and ruling elders commissioned to pastoral service (also called commissioned pastors (also known as commissioned ruling elders)), as well as the and certified Christian educators of the presbytery; to facilitate the relations between the presbytery and its congregations, pastors ministers of the Word and Sacrament, commissioned pastors, and certified Christian educators; and to settle difficulties on behalf of the presbytery where possible and expedient.”

Rationale

The Presbytery of Santa Fe was one of the concurring presbyteries on the 2016 overture that became Amendment 16-C, Recommendations C.1 through C.8, ratified by a majority of the presbyteries. We are mindful of the valid criticism of Recommendation 16-C.6 (G-3.0307) raised by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as well as other concerns about repetitive wording. We believe this can be easily remedied by our proposed amendment.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-02

Advice on Item 06-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve Item 06-02.

The rationale for Item 06-02 focuses on the issue of repetitive wording in this section, but there is a more important issue that is corrected by this amendment.

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) approved Item 06-08 on amending the Book of Order to clarify titles to Ordered Ministry. Item 06-08 (2016) was a large amendment with seven recommendations, most which dealt with switching the default term for the ordered ministry of “teaching elder” to “minister of the Word and Sacrament.” In the process of approval, the 222nd General Assembly (2016) approved an amendment to G-3.0307 (sixth recommendation) to strike out the term “teaching elder” and insert not “minister of the Word and Sacrament,” but “pastor.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution called the attention of the assembly to an unintended consequence of this amendment, that by inserting the word “pastor” into the action defining who had access to the committee on ministry or its equivalent, the amendment was cutting off all ministers of the Word and Sacrament not serving as installed or temporary pastors from access to this committee or entity. Item 06-08 (2016) was approved and referred to the presbyteries without addressing this concern.

Item 06-02, if approved, will restore constitutional access to the committee on ministry or its equivalent to all minister members of the presbytery. It also deals with the issue of repetitive wording in this section with language that is clear and concise.

Item 06-03

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-03. See pp. 70, 71.]

On Adding G-2.1104, Administrative Personnel Association (APA)—From the Presbytery of Central Nebraska.

The Presbytery of Central Nebraska overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall a new section, G.211 Certified Church Service, be added to read as follows:

“G. 2.1104 Administrative Personnel Association (APA)

“Administrative Personnel Association (APA) certified persons have been called to service within particular churches, councils, and church-related entities. These individuals endeavor to reflect their faith through their work and to strengthen the church through their dedication with the purpose to improve the quality of professionalism and to affirm the ministry of the lay church professional.

“Members of the Administrative Personnel Association (APA) include secretaries, administrative assistants, bookkeepers, and support staff in church-related settings.

“Certification is overseen and granted by the Administrative Personnel Association; the requirements for certification are reported to the appropriate body of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. A formal liaison relationship will be developed between the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Administrative Personnel Association.
“a. Skills and Training

“Certified Administrative Personnel Assistants are persons certified and called to service in the ministry of church administration in congregations and councils. They shall have skills and training in church polity, church history, reformed theology, spiritual growth and discipline, office administration, Directory for Worship, Book of Confessions, General Assembly entities, and other areas of professional development beneficial to the church.

“b. Councils Responsibility

“The presbytery shall affirm the skill and dedication of these certified persons by providing for recognition at presbytery at the time of their certification and by inviting certified employees to presbytery meetings, granting them the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified APA members who are ruling elders, the privilege of voice and vote at all its meetings.

“Names of those who have earned certification through APA shall be transmitted to the Presbyterian Mission Agency, which will forward them to the Office of the General Assembly and to the stated clerk of the presbyteries in which those persons labor.”

Rationale

A request from twelve women attending a business administration course at the Presbyterian School of Christian Education in Richmond, Virginia, laid the groundwork for a professional organization to be created. In 1976, the Administrative Personnel Association was founded by Joyce Bauer and in almost forty-two years APA has expanded to eight regions, which include all fifty states with a membership of 254 representing churches of all sizes, including those denominations with whom we are in communion, presbyteries, synods, and the different agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The APA defines its active members as all persons engaged in administrative work in any local church or church-related institution, councils or agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), or those denominations with which we have communion.

The APA is ruled by the body but leads by the executive board and council. The executive board is made up of elected officials to include the president, president-elect, immediate past-president, certification chair, membership chair, secretary, and treasurer. The council is composed of the following: The National Executive Board, all regional presidents, and National Conference Planning chair.

The mission of APA is to offer the opportunity for professional development and personal growth for those called by God to serve as support staff of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and those denominations with whom we are in communion. The mission is accomplished by providing continuing education events for certification and occasions for fellowship, worship, and spiritual nurture and prayer at both national and regional meetings, as well as, APA-sponsored training events.

The APA offers three levels of certification with the opportunity to receive recognition for every fifty hours of continuing education beyond Level 3. Our members may also receive an additional certificate in concentrated studies in polity, communications, administration and facilities management, theology, church history, and finance after completing another twenty-five hours in each of these areas of studies. Approved instructors are required to teach the requested amount of time for the class. Approval is given by the certification chair. The Council on Accreditation and Standards reviews the levels to ensure the classes being taught are current with what is happening in the church and office administration. Elective hours include conflict management, designing for communication, technology classes, financial matters, and other classes that provide professional growth and understanding of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Below explains the breakdown for each level.

The current reading of the Book of Order is too vague and places APA in a category of “other.” Before the changes made to the Form of Government, APA had been recognized previously by General Assembly, and under the former section G-14.0740 APA had been affiliated with the Office of Vocation and had a PC(USA) staff liaison. The APA had also been listed in the Minutes, Part III, Directory, and the Minutes, Part II, Statistics. However, after NFOG was approved, APA was lost in translation and have struggled since to be specifically identified by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for its service and dedication to the larger church.

The Administrative Personnel Association continues to struggle with being identified as a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) organization because there is no defined line connecting APA to the larger church. Even though APA is currently recognized as a certified body by the larger church, it still does not identify APA as PC(USA). As a result, this continues to put into question the status of APA’s 501c3 designation (nonprofit).

The lack of support and recognition from our leaders within the larger church that do not know or choose not to recognize APA’s existence has also impacted the long-lasting relationship between APA and the PC(USA) church.

Therefore, the Presbytery of Central Nebraska is asking that after APA’s forty-two years of service to the church that it again be specifically named and recognized in the Book of Order for its support and commitment to belonging to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-03

Advice on Item 06-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-03.

Item 06-03 is substantially similar to Item 06-10. Both propose to grant standing in the Form of Government to a particular professional association, some of whose members are also members of congregations in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The committee recognizes the vital services that the association’s members provide throughout the church and appreciates the value of the association to its work. The introduction of an Administrative Personnel Association into the Form of Government would seem to be consistent with the Constitution’s recognition of Certified Christian Educators (G-2.1103).

The certification of Christian educators, however, has its origins in John Calvin's fourth office of ministry (the “Doctor”). Administrative service has no similar origin. Moreover, including the item's proposed language in the Form of Government would contradict several fundamental principles of Presbyterian governance:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at all levels is governed through the deliberative work of presbyters (F-3.0203). Those presbyters, both ruling elders and Ministers of the Word and Sacrament, are selected by the process of ordination (F-3.0202).
Item 06-03, however, would establish professional certification neither connected to an office of ministry nor conducted by a council of the church as a basis for participation in the deliberations of church governance.

Presbyters arise from within particular congregations (G-2.0602; G-3.0303). Item 06-03, however, would grant formal standing to members of an association without regard to their membership in any particular congregation.

Presbyters are elected by the people (F-3.0106). Item 06-03, however, would mandate granting voice and vote to all members of the association who are also ruling elders, even if those elders had not been elected for service to their respective mid councils. Doing so would undermine individual presbyteries’ authority to determine their own membership (F-3.0102, G-3.0303, G-3.0306).

Presbyters by their ordination are under the authority of the wider Church. They have covenanted “[t]o be governed by [the] church’s polity, and … [t]o abide by its discipline” (W-4.0404e). Item 06-03 would grant certain individuals permanent influence upon presbytery proceedings without clearly defined accountability. It does not provide constitutional provisions either for overseeing the certification process or for monitoring the members’ service to the church.

Furthermore, passage of Item 06-03 would reintroduce the use of the Form of Government as an operations manual with standardized practices across mid councils. Introduction of one professional association with mid council standing would potentially lead to future overtures on behalf of similar associations.

The Form of Government already allows a presbytery to “grant the privilege of voice at all its meetings to persons in certified church service” (G-2.1102). It further allows presbyteries to specify forms of certified church service in their manuals of administrative operations (G-2.1101).

Item 06-03, then, proposes changes to the Form of Government which are neither necessary nor advisable. As it did in response to a similar overture presented to the 222nd General Assembly (2016), and for similar reasons, the ACC advises disapproval.

If the assembly believes that the intent of these overtures is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the language of 06-10 is preferable to that of 06-03 for two reasons: (1) It specifies the responsibility of the General Assembly to receive and transmit names of certified administrative professionals (noting that the proper avenue for transmission should be through the Office of the General Assembly); and (2) it specifies that those individuals’ names be placed upon the registers of presbyteries.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-03

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 06-03.

The membership of the Administrative Personal Association (APA) are people committed to the administrative work of the PC(USA) who are willing to do the course work required to achieve certification. The required course work is dependent on the level of certification sought:

- Level I requires 20 hours of Core courses plus 20 hours of elective courses.
- Level II requires 17.5 hours of Core courses plus 27.5 hours of elective courses.
- Level III requires 12.5 hours of Core courses plus 37.5 hours of elective courses.

Core courses include but are not limited to PC(USA) History, Polity, Theology, Spiritual Growth and Discipline. Elective courses include but are not limited to Biblical Interpretation, Christology, and Sexual Harassment (Administrative Personnel Association Council on Accreditation and Standards Handbook, revised 11-9-2016, pp.7–8).

As of May 2017, a polity course must be taken once every three years to maintain current certification (pcusa-apa.org).

According to information provided by APA, their membership is 98.1 percent female. By approving this overture, the General Assembly is acknowledging the commitment of the APA membership to their work along with granting them the privilege of voice on the floor of presbytery. This is the same privilege granted to Certified Christian Educators per G-3.0307.

ACWC hopes that in the future the General Assembly will ensure that Certified Church Administrators will be compensated to make sure they are receiving a living wage.
Item 06-04

[The assembly approved Item 06-04 as amended. See pp. 70, 71.]

On Amending D-2.0203b Regarding the Definition of ‘‘Offense’’—From the Presbytery of North Alabama.

The Presbytery of North Alabama overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-2.0203b be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. An offense is any act or omission by a member or a person in an ordered ministry of the church that is contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). [An act or omission prohibited by the council of authority’s duly adopted sexual misconduct policy and/or child and youth protection policy] [Sexual abuse as defined in Section D-10.0401c] shall be considered contrary to the Scriptures or Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and therefore an offense for purposes of these rules.”

Rationale

A recent ruling by a synod permanent judicial commission effectively indicated that actions in violation of a council’s sexual misconduct policy are not under the jurisdiction of the Rules of Discipline unless those actions are explicitly specified as contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution. The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) requires “all councils shall adopt and implement a sexual misconduct policy and a child and youth protection policy” (Book of Order, G-3.0106). In order to meet this requirement, actions or omissions in violation of these policies must have the capacity to be addressed through our disciplinary process; otherwise the policies are unenforceable. Furthermore, it should be implicit that actions that violate constitutionally required policies are by their very nature contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution. Decisions in prior disciplinary cases have supported this concept.

Sexual misconduct is both an injustice and a sin against God and our neighbor. The church is called to denounce sin and stand against injustice in the world, and has a specific responsibility to protect the victims and discipline unrighteousness. In addition, the church has had to discipline some of its members in this regard, and has come under the scrutiny of society and been subjected to litigation for failing to properly discipline its members. A person who engages in sexual misconduct is violating the scriptural imperative to “love your neighbor as yourself” (Mt. 22:39) and a person in ordered ministry who engages in sexual misconduct is violating their constitutional ordination vows to act as a friend among their colleagues in ministry; promote the peace, unity, and purity of the church; and show the love and justice of Jesus Christ (Book of Order, W-4.0404).

The members and congregations of the Presbytery of North Alabama wish to stringently affirm that sexual misconduct is sin. We believe past failure to confront this behavior has led to injustice and discord within the church, and scrutiny and litigation from without. We humbly ask the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to take an unequivocal stand for justice by equating this sin as an implicit violation of scriptural norms and constitutional ordination vows.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-04

Advice on Item 06-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-04 with the following comment.

“While sexual misconduct is not condoned by Scriptures or the Constitution of the PC(USA), adding this language to the Book of Order is unnecessary. All councils and judicial commissions are admonished to consider sexual misconduct as contrary to the Scriptures and the Constitution of the PC(USA).”

Scriptures and the Constitution do not condone sexual misconduct or the abuse and endangerment of children and youth. Many acts involve impermissible sexual overtures, force, and misconduct. The assembly is reminded that the Constitution is not an enumeration of specific permitted or prohibited conduct, but rather a guide for all councils in administering their mission. Each council should be mindful that any act of sexual misconduct or child abuse is in violation of the Constitution. By singling out a particular violation of a particular policy, an inference might be made that violations of other policies are not contrary to the Scriptures and the Constitution.

Councils have the authority to establish and enforce their policies. Not all violations of a particular policy may be found to be contrary to Scripture or the Constitution. Violation of a council's sexual misconduct and/or child and youth protection policy may be procedural and may not rise to the level of a constitutional offense. The Rules of Discipline set forth the process for determining proof of an alleged offense, including sexual misconduct.

The assembly may consider admonishing all councils and judicial commissions that sexual misconduct is contrary to the Scriptures and the Constitution and that all councils are required to adopt and implement a sexual misconduct policy and/or child/youth protection policy (G-3.0106).

Alternatively, the assembly may consider referral of this item to the Task Force on the Rules of Discipline for report to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-04

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-04—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 06-04.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) agrees that any act or omission prohibited by the council of authority’s duly adopted sexual misconduct policy and/or child and youth protection policy should be considered contrary to the Scriptures or Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and therefore an offense for purposes of these rules. ACWC agrees with this overture that past failure to confront sexual misconduct has led to injustice and discord within the church, and scrutiny and litigation from without.

Because all sexual abuse is, at the core, an abuse of power, certain populations are more vulnerable to such abuse. For instance, children and youth, developmentally disabled adults, and immigrant night shift workers are often the targets of sexual misconduct. Gender inequities rooted in theological misunderstandings based in patriarchy leave women within the church particularly vulnerable to sexual misconduct, not only from other clergy, but also to sexual harassment from male members of their congregations. It is essential that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) take an unequivocal stand for justice by equating sexual misconduct to be an implicit violation of scriptural norms and constitutional ordination vows.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-04

Comment on Item 06-04—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

OGA advises that all items, including Item 06-04, amending the Rules of Discipline, be referred to the Rules of Discipline Task Force, which is currently revising the Rules of Discipline as a whole and will report with suggested changes to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

Item 06-05

[The assembly approved Item 06-05 as amended. See pp. 70, 71.]

On Amending G-2.0503 with Additional Language—From the Presbytery of Tropical Florida.

The Presbytery of Tropical Florida respectfully overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

[Shall G-2.0503 be amended by inserting the following paragraph after G-2.0503(5): [Text to be added is shown as italic.]:

[“When ministers of Word and Sacrament are called to a validated ministry within the bounds of another presbytery, permission to labor outside the bounds of the presbytery of membership and within the bounds of the presbytery where the ministry is located shall be obtained from both presbyteries. Such permission shall be reviewed annually.”]

[Shall the fourth paragraph of G-3.0306 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italics.]:

“Every minister of the Word and Sacrament shall ordinarily be a member of the presbytery where his or her work is situated or of the presbytery where she or he resides. [The presbytery may grant a minister permission to engage in work validated ministry that is outside its geographic bounds or which is not under its jurisdiction, but no presbytery shall permit a minister to engage in work that is within the geographic bounds of another presbytery and which is properly within the responsibility of another presbytery without consent of that presbytery. Such permission shall be obtained from both presbyteries and shall be reviewed and renewed annually.]”]
The current Form of Government lacks clarity with regard to the seeking of and granting of permission for a minister member of a presbytery to labor beyond the geographic boundaries of the presbytery of membership. This overture provides clarity to the seeking of permission to labor within the geographic bounds of a presbytery beyond that of the minister of Word and Sacrament’s membership.

As “the presbytery is the council serving as a corporate expression of the church within a certain district” (G-3.0301), the presbytery needs to have knowledge of and oversight for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) witness within its geographic district. Without the Form of Government making it clear that permission must be granted by the presbytery for all validated ministry taking place within its bounds, the particular corporate witness of a presbytery within a certain district may lack unity of strategy for mission under the Word. The addition of this paragraph to the Form of Government enhances the presbytery’s capacity for unity in its corporate witness as strategy for mission under the Word.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-05

Advice on Item 06-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve Item 06-05 with the following modifications.

- Shall G-2.0503 be amended by inserting the following paragraph after G-2.0503 (5):

  When ministers of Word and Sacrament are called to a validated ministry within the bounds of another presbytery, permission to labor outside the bounds of the presbytery of membership and within the bounds of the presbytery where the ministry is located shall be obtained from both presbyteries. Such permission shall be reviewed annually.

- Shall the fourth paragraph of G-3.0306 be amended as follows:

  Every minister of the Word and Sacrament shall ordinarily be a member of the presbytery where his or her work is situated or of the presbytery where she or he resides. The presbytery may grant a minister permission to engage in work that is outside its geographic bounds or which is not under its jurisdiction, but no presbytery shall permit a minister to engage in work that is within the geographic bounds of another presbytery and which is properly within the responsibility of another presbytery without consent of that presbytery. Such permission shall be obtained from both presbyteries and shall be reviewed and renewed annually.

Item 06-05 seeks to amend G-2.0503, but the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the amendment is more appropriate at G-3.0306, which deals with the membership of a presbytery. Item 06-05 seeks to return to the Book of Order the mechanism for seeking permission to labor beyond the geographic bounds of membership of the minister of the Word and Sacrament. The alternate text suggested by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution is based on the language that was in the 2009–2011 edition of the Book of Order.

The Form of Government (G-3.0306) establishes that each presbytery determines the ministers who are its members and validates the ministries in which they are to be engaged, following the criteria of G-2.0503a(1)–(5) and the policy developed by the presbytery for validating the ministries of its members.

It is the responsibility of the presbytery to maintain its membership rolls, provide oversight for its members, and validate the ministry with which they are engaged. Section G-3.0306 currently says that membership ordinarily is where the work is situated or where the member resides. The proposed text gives direction to those situations that are outside the ordinary and preferred circumstance.

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-06. See pp. 69, 71.]

On Amending G-6.04e to Require Two-Thirds Affirmative Vote to Amend the Constitution—From the Presbytery of the Inland Northwest.

The Presbytery of the Inland Northwest overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
Shall G-6.04e be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Stated Clerk receives written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority two-thirds of all the presbyteries. The proposed amendment so approved shall become effective one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.”

Rationale

A constitution should provide stability and require broad consensus to change. The current practice of requiring only a majority of all presbyteries to vote in the affirmative treats constitutional change as a simple motion. This does not provide stability or require broad consensus, nor does it adequately protect the unity of the body or the rights of the minority. Requiring two-thirds of presbyteries to vote in the affirmative for a change in the Book of Order would:

1. Better balance the tension between the following parliamentary principles:
   a. The unity of the body shall be protected;
   b. The rights of the minority shall be protected;
   c. The will of the majority shall prevail.
2. Restore the threshold for constitutional change to the norms of Robert’s Rules of Order.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-06

Advice on Item 06-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-06.

Item 06-06 would change the requirements for ratification of amendments to the Book of Order from the present (simple) majority of the presbyteries to a two-thirds vote of presbyteries. Approval of this overture would invert the historic constitutional rights of the majority and minority.

Since 1797, the Presbyterian church has understood that while the gathered assembly seek together to find and to represent the will of Christ (F-3.0204), that a majority shall govern (F-3.0205). This overture creates a scenario in which a proposed amendment might receive the affirmative votes of a majority of the presbyteries and fail, thereby substituting the discernment of a minority for that of the whole exercised through majority vote.

The process to amend the Book of Order has a long history of governance by a majority that protects the rights of the minority while enabling the majority to exercise its judgment regarding the will of Christ. While there are a few instances within the Book of Order that require more than a majority vote (such as G-2.0610 “Accommodation to Particular Circumstances”), these are usually for specific exceptions to rules and requirements established by majority vote.

The concerns over minority viewpoints have been considered previously. For example:

1. The Report of the Special Committee on Historic Principles, Conscience and Church Government (adopted by the UPCUSA General Assembly, 1983) states, “The church protects its own minority point of view as if it were protecting its future, recognizing that the dissenter may well represent the will of God. The church makes explicit provisions for the protection of those whose positions are in the minority” (http://oga.pcusa.org/media/uploads/oga/pdf/historic-principles.pdf, p. 8).
2. The 1952 General Assembly (PCUSA) considered the rights of a majority to decide issues, stating, “It is of the very essence of the Presbyterian Church’s faith that a majority of Christians are more likely to understand the will of God a right than are a minority.” The rights of a minority, who are less than a majority, should not block an action of the majority.
3. In 1989, 1993, 1998, and 2000, the General Assembly considered requests to require a supermajority vote for some or all of the steps in the process of amending the Book of Order.
4. Most recently, the concept was considered in Item 03-06 by the 219th General Assembly (2010) and Item 04-03 by the 221st General Assembly (2014), both of which rejected increasing the approval requirements to a two-thirds vote.
The overture also raises a question of procedural justice in that (1) every provision of our current Book of Order, adopted by a simple majority vote of the presbyteries, would be shielded from amendment by a higher standard than that by which they were adopted; and (2) this overture, if approved, would enshrine its own judgment by a simple majority vote.

The rationale for the overture seeks to conform the Book of Order to the standards set by Roberts’ Rules of Order for amending constitutional documents, and by implication raises the issue of why the Constitution holds a different standard for the Book of Order. Roberts’ envisions a constitution that is a single document with a single purpose. We have two documents with different purposes. The Book of Confessions, which contains the theological foundations of our faith and life, has a higher threshold of amendment, similar to Roberts’ standard. The Book of Order, however, contains both foundational and contextual guidance. As such it needs to be more responsive to changing contexts of ministry. The current time frame for amending the Book of Order is from 16 to 28 months. Establishing higher thresholds or longer time frames for the approval of such amendments impedes the church’s ability both to respond to current needs and to correct errors.

Section G-6.01 states that the current procedures for amendment “are understood as a means to faithfulness” to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seeking to be “the church reformed, always to be reformed according to the Word of God” in the power of the Spirit” (F-2.02). Those procedures include the balancing of majority and minority rights by requiring a majority of both the General Assembly and the presbyteries for amendments to the Book of Order. Our Historic Principles of Church Order acknowledge that councils may err (F-3.0107). Providing reasonable opportunity to correct past errors is a means of our collective and evolving faithfulness. One of the principles underlying our polity is that the Spirit speaks authoritatively through the Word in every age, and that the judgment of the church in one age carries no greater weight than any other—as if the Spirit spoke more authoritatively through one assembly than another.

The ACC notes that Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised (pp.400–402) uses the terms “majority” and “two-thirds vote.” These are the terms used throughout the Book of Order and in this rationale.

ACSWP ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-06

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-06—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 06-06.

ACSWP disagrees with this proposal to require a \( \frac{2}{3} \) affirmative vote to amend the Constitution because it limits the denomination from moving at the call of the Holy Spirit to change, as well as prioritizes the minority voices who might hold the denomination hostage to inertia.

We concur with the Advice and Counsel prepared by the Advocacy Committee on Women’s Concerns (ACWC) that demonstrates the extensive history and disapproval of this constitutional change. It is not in the church’s best interests to bind the Holy Spirit in such a way that makes it more difficult for the PC(USA) to adapt to changing times and the urgency of reformation.

Change is always difficult, and institutional change is probably the hardest type of change. When the Holy Spirit calls our denomination to change, it requires the us to take a risk that we might fail. If a majority of presbyteries are willing to venture toward a proposed change, then we should listen to the majority. We see the consequences of minority control at many points in the body politic; our church can set a more creative example, following our motto, “ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda.”

The proponents are rightly concerned for stability and broad consensus, but many aspects of the church’s internal culture contribute to its tilt toward stability. We honor elders and are led by them in many places, and have many small jurisdictions that add to our “decently and in order” caution about process. We are not clear what actual problem this change would solve.

ACREC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-06

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 06-06.

In addition to requiring a supermajority of the presbyteries to approve an amendment, this overture seems to propose requiring a second General Assembly (GA) vote, and the delay of another year—becoming effective not a year after adjournment of the General Assembly that proposes it, but after the close of the General Assembly two years later. (So, it seems that the GA following the General Assembly for Constitutional Change proposed in Item 06-06 will also have to deal with amendments.) Not very nimble or adaptable in a changing world.
Supermajorities are required in Robert’s Rules of Order primarily to protect the rights of minorities to be heard. This would extend the power to a minority to obstruct change that the majority favors, threatening the principle that “a majority shall govern” (Book of Order, F-3.0205).

The Foothills authors have made reference to the few times that the United States Constitution has been amended, in contrast to the fairly regular amendment of the Book of Order; however, this is not an apt analogy. Governing the U.S.A. requires thousands of federal laws and regulations in addition to a Constitution, not to mention fifty state constitutions and thousands more state and local laws.

The proposed “approval process” isn’t entirely clear. Does this mean that presbyteries would vote on the whole Book of Order as it would be amended by the 223rd General Assembly (2018), with the amendment proposed in Item 06-06 and any others coming out of the 222nd General Assembly (2016), and that this approval would have to be made by a 2/3 supermajority and the 224th General Assembly (2020)—in order to establish a baseline Constitution (Part 2) that is forever after harder to amend? Or just that this amendment would need 2/3? It could be pretty challenging to get a 2/3 vote for effectively freezing every single provision in the current Book of Order; and would seem to require a 2/3 vote for every amendment proposed by the 223rd General Assembly (2018). Would they all have to wait until 2020 to take effect? (In response to a question, the Presbytery of Inland Northwest authors were unclear about what they were proposing, but did not seem to be contemplating a vote on the whole Book of Order.)

In either case, the General Assembly does not have the power to set aside the provisions of the current Book of Order in order to do this. At the point of voting on this proposed amendment, it would be subject to the simple majority of the presbyteries.

The 223rd General Assembly (2018) does not have the power to instruct the 224th General Assembly (2020) that it “shall vote to ratify.”

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-06

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 06-06.

The Presbytery of the Foothills brought this same (04-03) and multiple other overtures to the 222nd General Assembly (2016). The Way Forward Committee voted 74-2 to disapprove with comment 04-01, 04-02, 04-03, 04-04, 04-05, 04-06, 04-09, 04-10, and 04-13, which included “… calling on us all to recommit ourselves at the congregational level, the mid council level, and the national levels of our church to advocate with all of our voice for, in the words of Moderator Edmiston to Assembly Committee 4, ‘that which breaks God’s heart in our neighborhoods’ and seek opportunities to take risks for and with the poor, marginalized, and excluded in our communities.” The comment went on to say, “By disapproving these overtures with comment, we can help move toward a more faithful, more just, and more hopeful vision of who we are as Christ’s church … through invitations, education, prayerful consideration, and not through constitutional changes.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to disapprove the overtures named above, including Item 04-03.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advised the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to disapprove the overtures named above, including Item 04-03;

The Committee on the Office of General Assembly advised the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to disapprove the overtures named above, including Item 04-03;

And, the General Assembly Committee on Representation respectfully reminded the 222nd General Assembly (2016) that one General Assembly cannot bind subsequent General Assemblies, and further stating, “Historically, actions that require supermajority of approval of presbyteries have not passed because it limits access to and limits participation in the decision-making process of the church. In effect, it limits the ability of assemblies to discern the will of God. The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching, from across the church in accordance with F-1-0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).”

In plenary, the 222nd General Assembly (2016) voted 505-35 to disapprove the overtures named above, including Item 04-03 regarding required two-thirds majority vote to amend the constitution.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns thereby advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 06-06.
06 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH POLITY AND ORDERED MINISTRY

CÓGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-06

Comment on Item 06-06—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

CÓGA respectfully urges the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-06. The foundational documents of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have always been considered in order of significance: first and foundational is Scripture; secondly, we rely on our Confessions as to what Scripture leads us to believe and do; and, finally, we utilize the Book of Order to assist us to live out our beliefs. A change to the Book of Confessions requires a 2/3 affirmative vote of the presbyteries. To require a 2/3 vote to change the Book of Order would, in essence equate our rules and our theology—thus elevating the rules that should always be subordinate to Scripture and theology.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consists of fifteen elected members and was created “to carry out the assembly’s oversight of the Stated Clerk…” (Organization for Mission, IV.C.2.). CÓGA regularly reviews the work of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 06-06

Comment on Item 06-06—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

This overture asks the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to change the threshold for ratifying changes to the Book of Order from a simple majority of presbyteries (what it is now) to a 2/3 majority of presbyteries. This change would match the higher majority required for changes to the Book of Confessions. In F-2.02, the church says that “the process for changing the confessions of the church is deliberately demanding” reflecting the fact that “confessional statements are subordinate standards [to the Scriptures] in the church” that are used “to instruct, counsel with, and discipline” ordained persons who reject the faith expressed there.

The Book of Order guides how the church navigates power and responsibilities, relations among councils, and orders its life. The GACOR reminds commissioners that the church is called to “a new openness to see both the possibilities and perils of its institutional forms” (F-1.0404). Adding an extra barrier to reform will negatively impact that openness we claim as foundational. Closing opportunity for reform is not Presbyterian. Creating a high approval threshold puts limits on changes and will bind and limit future General Assembly’s decisions.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

[Item 06-07 was answered by the action taken on Item 06-09. See pp. 70, 71.]

On Amending G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d When Former Ministers of the Word and Sacrament Who Renounced Jurisdiction While Being Accused in a Disciplinary Case Wish to Work for the PC(USA) Again—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area respectfully overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall the fourth paragraph of G-2.0509 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

   “Whenever a former minister of the Word and Sacrament has renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding as the accused, that former minister of the Word and Sacrament shall not be permitted to perform any work, paid or volunteer, in any congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) unless and until the person rejoins the church, comes forward and resubmits to the disciplinary process the council governing that congregation or entity has thoroughly inquired into the circumstances surrounding the renunciation of jurisdiction, determined that the person is suited to the work proposed to be undertaken, and received concurrence from the next higher council.”

2. Shall D-10.0401d be amended to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “For instances where a former minister of the Word and Sacrament comes forward in self accusation to undergo a disciplinary process to regain permission to perform work under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (G-2.0509) who renounced jurisdiction while being accused in a disciplinary case rejoins the church, no time limit from the time of the commission of the alleged offense to the filing of charges shall apply. Charges based on all accusations that had been made by the time that the former minister of the Word and Sacrament had renounced jurisdiction may be brought regardless of the date on which any such offense is alleged to have occurred.”

576  223rd General Assembly (2018)
Rationale

Our presbytery’s initial lengthy title for this overture was: “On Amending G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d to Restore Victims’ Rights to the Process for When Former Ministers of Word and Sacrament Who Renounced Jurisdiction While Being Accused in a Disciplinary Case Wish to Work if or for the PC(USA) Again.”

Rationale for Overture and Brief History of Recent Amendments to G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d

What is now G-2.0509 arose initially in response to a disciplinary case. On October 27, 2012, a (former) teaching elder, who is acknowledged to be a very charismatic leader and popular speaker at the Montreat Conference Center about youth ministry, chose to renounce his membership in the PC(USA) while he was formally accused of sexual abuse. As required by the Book of Order, his renunciation caused the entire investigation/judicial process to be shut down (D-3.0106). However, the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta and the Presbytery of Western Reserve formed a joint administrative commission (AC) to make “pastoral inquiry” and “seek to reach a determination of the truth” in this matter, which is permitted when someone accused of sexual abuse renounces jurisdiction [G-3.0109b(6)]. The AC concluded that the accused sexually abused at least five minors between 1984 and 1995, and may have molested more.1 The AC noted how the accused had avoided being held accountable for decades in a variety of congregations and also a synod camp. In response to overtures from these two presbyteries, G-2.0509 was amended in 2014–2015 to prohibit any teaching elder who has been accused in a formal judicial process and subsequently chosen to renounce jurisdiction from being permitted to work for any entity under the PC(USA)’s jurisdiction in either a paid or volunteer capacity, which appeared to be a permanent ban.

In 2016, the Assembly Committee on Church Polity and Ordered Ministry considered overtures from three different presbyteries that all intended to allow such former teaching elders to be able to work in or for the PC(USA) again, by either:

- deleting the permanent ban altogether (Item 06-02),
- requiring the person to rejoin the church (Item 06-07), or
- requiring the person to not only rejoin the church, but to come forward in self-accusation, plead guilty to all charges based on all accusations that had been made by the time that the former teaching elder had renounced jurisdiction, have censure imposed without trial and with no participation from victims required, and complete appropriate rehabilitation (Item 06-10, from the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area).

The assembly committee recommended passing Item 06-07, to require rejoining the church.

The full 222nd General Assembly (2016) in plenary session decided to reject language in Item 06-07. Immediately thereafter, a motion was made from the floor to pass language in Item 06-10 as written. Almost immediately, a motion to amend language in 06-10 was made. At that point during the General Assembly, each speaker was limited to only sixty seconds to speak, and roughly half a dozen commissioners in total spoke, alternating in favor of or in opposition to the amendment. Motion was then made and passed to move all previous motions, which ended all further debate. The General Assembly then passed Item 06-10 as amended. A commissioner then asked if debate could be reopened, saying that neither he nor other commissioners around him understood what the General Assembly had just passed. The General Assembly declined to reconsider the motion, and moved on to debate other matters such as Middle East issues and divestment from fossil fuels. A majority of presbyteries then ratified what had become known as Amendment 16-D, Parts 1 and 2, which are now G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d, respectively.

How the Book of Order’s Currently Mandated Disciplinary Process in G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d Is Inconsistent with the Preamble of the Rules of Discipline

Recently adopted language in the Book of Order may seem to be merely a compassionate response to former ministers of the Word and Sacrament who renounced jurisdiction while being accused in a disciplinary case, who may have done so because of pressing family or medical reasons, for example. The current process allows former teaching elders to rejoin the church, but does not require them to face accusations until sometime in the future when they themselves choose to come forward, in self-accusation, to resume the disciplinary process. However, requiring the disciplinary process to resume only when the accused chooses to come forward in self-accusation is inconsistent with five out of seven of the purposes of discipline stated in the Preamble of the Rules of Discipline (D-1.0101), because such a process (1) tramples on victim’s rights, (2) is not likely to remove causes of suspicion, and (3) is not likely to bring perpetrators of offenses to repentance, especially if many years pass between when the accused renounces jurisdiction and when the accused chooses to resume the disciplinary process.

The Preamble of the Rules of Discipline state that three of the purposes of discipline are:

- “to achieve justice and compassion for all participants involved;”
- “to uphold the dignity of those who have been harmed by disciplinary offenses;”
- “to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings.” (D-1.0101)
When an accusation is made, victims have a right to see a fair and impartial investigation go forward with all deliberate speed (up to and including a trial, if necessary), so that, whatever the outcome of the disciplinary process, victims feel free to put memories of painful events in the past, and move on with their lives. However, under the current process in the Book of Order, victims (and perhaps their families or friends) may feel compelled to have to constantly prepare to testify about abusive events, just in case they ever receive notice from a new investigating committee that the accused wants to resume the disciplinary process, which could be at any time in the future of the accused’s choosing. It is cruel, inhumane, and anything but “speedy,” to expect victims to keep hanging on to evidence of abuse and to relive painful memories for months, years, or even decades in the future, on the perhaps slim chance that the accused might rejoin the church and choose to resubmit to the disciplinary process. In the words of a theological seminary advisory delegate to the 2016 General Assembly (2016), the process in G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d as now written “punishes victims.”

The Preamble of the Rules of Discipline also states that a fourth purpose of discipline is “to restore the unity of the church by removing the causes of discord and division” (Ibid). However, requiring a disciplinary process to go forward at any time in the future only of the accused’s choosing is not likely to remove suspicions about the accused. If charges are not filed against the accused because an investigating committee finds insufficient evidence to prove an accusation “beyond a reasonable doubt” (D-11.0403a), or the accused is found not guilty after a trial, others will likely be divided in their conclusions as to whether the accused was truly innocent, or whether the accused could not be proved guilty because of any number of obstructive issues, such as the following:

- Perhaps the trail of evidence went cold between the time of initial accusation and the time that the accused came forward in self-accusation.
- Perhaps evidence that the initial investigating committee had collected before the disciplinary process was shut down when the accused renounced had gotten lost by the time the accused came forward in self-accusation.
- Perhaps key witnesses were no longer available, able, or alive, to testify.
- Perhaps memories had faded (e.g., a person diagnosed with mild cognitive impairment accused a minister of the Word and Sacrament of elder abuse, and the accused did not come forward to resume the disciplinary process until after the accuser developed full dementia).

A predator could deliberately wait to resume the disciplinary process until after it became public knowledge that a key witness had perhaps just moved overseas to serve in the Peace Corps for a few years, or was about to start a family, or had been killed in a car accident. Allowing the accused to resume the disciplinary process at a distant time in the future of the accused’s choosing is not likely to remove doubts about the accused’s integrity, so causes of discord and division will remain.

The Preamble of the Rules of Discipline also states that a fifth purpose of discipline is “to correct or restrain wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance and restoration” (Ibid). However, the standard of proof in a disciplinary case, “guilt beyond a reasonable doubt,” is a high bar to meet. The more time that elapses between when the accused renounces jurisdiction and when the accused both rejoins the church and comes forward in self-accusation, the more likely that the accused will be found not guilty. Keeping the current process in place would likely mean that those who actually did commit the offenses alleged, and were found not guilty (or not even charged), will not get the help or additional counseling that they need to be able to repent and make meaningful, positive, consistent, and lasting changes to their behavior. A predator could even cite such a verdict of “not guilty” to potential employers as evidence that he or she should be eligible to be hired.

It would be odd to keep the current procedure in the Book of Order in place when the procedure conflicts with most of the purposes of discipline in the Preamble. If the current process is ever used in the future, the contradiction between principles in the Preamble and facts of the process may be quite glaring by the time the moderator is required to read the first two paragraphs of the Preamble of the Rules of Discipline at the beginning of a trial (D-11.0402a).

Why an Accused’s Right to a Trial Cannot Reasonably Be Unlimited

During deliberations of the Assembly Committee on Church Polity and Ordered Ministry, participants expressed concern that one who is accused must maintain the right to a fair trial (citing D-11.0101). The current process in G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d gives former ministers of the Word and Sacrament the right to resume the disciplinary process, up to and including a trial, only when they themselves feel ready to face accusations, at any time in the future they choose, regardless of circumstances that may arise in the meantime. However, this apparent conception of a right without any limit is not consistent with how rights are generally understood in legal communities. In legal communities, a right is something that can always be reasonably exercised by the accused, but the accused is also free to act in ways that waive the right, or make the right impossible to be reasonably recognized. For example, in Book of Order, D-10.0203e:

- The accused has the right to remain silent, because what the accused says (or does not say) is entirely the accused’s choice. However, if the accused says something self-incriminatory, the judicial process has no obligation to ignore what the accused said. Instead, the accused is said to have waived the right to remain silent.
The accused also has the right to be represented by counsel. Within the PC(USA), it is very reasonable to assume that at least one qualified member of the PC(USA) can be found, somewhere, who would be willing to act as counsel for the accused. However, if the accused chooses not to be represented by counsel, and winds up losing the case, the judicial process has no obligation to redo the judicial proceeding with the accused having counsel for a second time around. Instead, the accused is said to have waived the right to be represented by counsel.

The current process that requires the disciplinary process to resume before the accused can do any more work in or for the church has some potential to hold former ministers of the Word and Sacrament accountable in the future for their actions. However, the more time that goes by between when the accused renounces jurisdiction and whenever in the future the accused may choose to both rejoin the church and resume the disciplinary process, the more likely that a subsequent investigation and trial will fail to uphold victims’ rights and achieve reconciliation for all. Such a trial would not be fair to all original participants. Therefore, while it makes sense to create the possibility for reconciliation and redemption through a future disciplinary process, it does not make sense to grant someone who renounced jurisdiction while being accused the right to resume the disciplinary process (and possible subsequent trial) only at any time of the accused’s choosing in the future.

How the PC(USA) Can Maintain the Integrity of Its Professional Ministry and Keep the Public’s Trust

Two back-to-back General Assemblies, along with a majority of presbyteries, have concluded that the church needs to do something more to hold its ministers of the Word and Sacrament, who are professionals, accountable when they are accused of misconduct. (No state licensing board, national organization that credentials professionals, or secular court system we know of allows one who is accused, acting alone, to stop a disciplinary or judicial process merely by quitting, as D-3.0106 does.)

With respect to amending D-10.0401d, which states when the disciplinary process may resume:

- This overture keeps open the possibility of achieving reconciliation through resuming the disciplinary process at a time in the future of the accused’s choosing, if the accused comes forward in self-accusation. However, if the accused waits too long to rejoin the church, there is a possibility that the disciplinary process will not be able to gather all evidence available at the time of the initial accusation and hear from all parties involved to be able to achieve reconciliation.

- This overture also opens the possibility of having the accused resume the disciplinary process whenever the accused rejoins the church, if another member of the PC(USA) re-files the initial accusation. Part of becoming a member of the church should be the willingness to be subject to the church’s discipline. The current process in G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d is strange in that former ministers of the Word and Sacrament are permitted to rejoin the church, but not have to be concerned about the disciplinary process unless and until they themselves feel ready to come forward in self-accusation. Removing the requirement for the accused to have to come forward in self-accusation for the disciplinary process to resume would make it less likely that someone who is accused could freely cross paths with victims as a protected member of the church, which could make victims relive painful memories and feel unsafe in the church.

However, this overture does not require a former minister of the Word and Sacrament to rejoin the church (or even to go through a disciplinary process) to be able to work in or for the PC(USA) again. Section G-2.0509 as amended would only require that “the council governing that congregation or entity has thoroughly inquired into the circumstances surrounding the renunciation of jurisdiction, determined that the person is suited to the work proposed to be undertaken, and received concurrence from the next higher council.”

- With respect to making a thorough inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the renunciation of jurisdiction:
  - One part of doing a thorough background check is to see whether a person was ever a minister of the Word and Sacrament who renounced jurisdiction. At the bottom of the www.pcusa.org website, immediately below the heading for the “Office of the General Assembly (OGA),” is a link to the Minister Directory (http://oga.pcusa.org/section/churchwide-ministries/stats/online-minister-directory/). Clicking on the link at the bottom of this page (“Visit the online Minister Directory,” at: https://ogaapps.pcusa.org/directories/-/minister), you can type in the last and/or first name of a person. A person who has renounced jurisdiction will have their current status listed as “Removed by The ABC Presbytery.” That presbytery should be contacted to find out if the person had renounced jurisdiction while being accused in a disciplinary case, a fact that is supposed to be reported to the presbytery (D-3.0106).
  - A council should ask the accused about the renunciation. However, every council should know that not all people who have been accused are truthful.
  - Knowledgeable personnel of the council where the former minister of the Word and Sacrament renounced jurisdiction should also be asked whatever information is necessary to thoroughly investigate the renunciation of jurisdiction, including perhaps the names and contact information of other people involved. While the investigating committee process is presumed confidential before the accused renounces jurisdiction, there is nothing in the Book of Order that requires a council to either answer questions fully or to withhold any information as confidential after a person renounces jurisdiction.

223rd General Assembly (2018) 579
• With respect to determining whether the person is suited to the work proposed to be undertaken, a council has a variety of options. For example:
  ○ A council may request advice from higher councils that may have greater expertise in matters of clergy misconduct on how they should proceed.
  ○ A council may request the accused to resubmit to the disciplinary process. (A council should make clear to victims that they are welcome to participate, but should not feel compelled to relive painful memories and feel re-victimized again.)
  ○ If an investigating committee decides to file a charge, and a council feels that it itself cannot carry out a trial in a thorough, fair, and impartial way, that council may request a reference from the next higher council to conduct the trial and make a decision on the lower council’s behalf (D-4.0000).
  ○ A council may recognize that a disciplinary process/trial that is fair to all original participants is no longer possible, and request that the accused undergo a psychological evaluation (or forensic psychological evaluation).

• With respect to a lower council seeking a concurrence from the next higher council, we believe this would also be a wise practice.
  ○ Lower councils often do not have as much experience and expertise as higher councils to handle cases of clergy misconduct. In particular, sessions of congregations often do not have resources like a presbytery has, such as a committee on ministry, committee on ethics, or pastoral misconduct response committee; people with experience serving on investigating committees or permanent judicial commissions; or professionally trained executive/general presbyters or stated clerks.
  ○ A higher council would likely provide an independent assessment of the accused’s suitability for a particular position since the higher council would not be hiring the individual. Requiring lower councils to obtain a concurrence from a higher council would prevent lower councils from performing perfunctory investigations to fill a position quickly when a more thorough investigation could reveal “red flags.”

After doing a thorough background check, if a council (or the next higher council) concludes that it cannot determine that the accused is suitable to be hired to work in a particular position, paid or volunteer, in which the accused can be “involved responsibly in the ministry of Christ’s Church” (c.f. G-1.0304), consistently with thoughtful policies for sexual misconduct and child protection (G-3.0106), then that council has a duty to protect the vulnerable, as well as to avoid future civil and criminal liability, and not hire the accused for that particular position.

2. Possible outcomes of a disciplinary case are “guilty” or “not guilty,” or the disciplinary process ends when an investigating committee finds insufficient evidence to prove guilt and does not file charges (D-10.0202k), or the accused renounces jurisdiction (D-3.0106).

3. The Book of Order states that “Proof beyond a reasonable doubt occurs when the comparison and consideration of all the evidence compels an abiding conviction that the material facts necessary to prove the case are true” (D-11.0403a). For comparison, the State of Minnesota defines guilt beyond a reasonable doubt as: “Proof beyond a reasonable doubt is such proof as ordinarily prudent men and women would act upon in their most important affairs. A reasonable doubt is a doubt based upon reason and common sense. It does not mean a fanciful or capricious doubt, nor does it mean beyond all possibility of doubt.”

4. The other two of seven purposes of discipline listed in the Book of Order are “to honor God by making clear the significance of membership in the body of Christ;” and “to preserve the purity of the church by nourishing the individual within the life of the believing community” (Ibid).

5. These same two rights are also recognized in the 5th and 6th amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

6. One could make an argument that all presbyters (both ruling elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament) should have exactly the same standards of accountability since both kinds of presbyters govern the church (F-3.0202, F-3.0208), and “when elected as commissioners to higher councils, ruling elders participate and vote with the same authority as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and they are eligible for any office” (G-2.0301). However, ministers of the Word and Sacrament are required to be trained and examined over many years before they are credentialed by presbyteries G-2.05, G-2.06, after which they have special authorities and responsibilities that ruling elders do not, such as to moderate congregational and session meetings (G-1.0504, G-3.0201), being required to maintain relationships of trust and confidentiality (G-4.0301), and shaping worship services by selecting the Scriptures to be read, preparing the sermons and the prayers to be offered, selecting music to be sung, as well as printed worship aids or media presentations for a given service, and the use of drama, dance, and other art forms in a particular service of worship (W-2.0304). While both ruling elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament serve on sessions, the larger role of a teaching elder is not the same as the role of a ruling elder within a congregation.

7. “Not many of you should become teachers, my brothers and sisters, for you know that we who teach will be judged with greater strictness” (Jas. 3:1); see also Book of Confessions, 5.167.
8. Licensing boards or national credentialing organizations for physicians, nurses, dentists, physical therapists, psychologists, social workers, attorneys, counselors, actuaries, and accountants usually choose to continue to investigate accusations of misconduct, regardless of whether the accused quits or chooses to participate or not, in order for these professions to maintain their integrity and keep the public’s trust.

9. As D-10.0401d is currently written, it is strange that the time limit between when an offense is alleged to have occurred and when a charge may be filed depends upon whether the person making the accusation is the accused coming forward in self-accusation (in which case D-10.0401d states there is no time limit) or whether the person making the accusation is any other member of the PC(USA) (in which case the same restrictions in D-3.0106 and time limits specified in D-10.0401a–c apply). Current language in D-10.0401d doesn’t make sense.

10. If the accuser is under the jurisdiction of a council that is different from the council that has jurisdiction over the accused, “it shall be the duty of the clerk of that session or the stated clerk of that presbytery to submit the written statement to the clerk of session or the stated clerk of the presbytery having jurisdiction over the member. The involved councils shall proceed cooperatively with judicial process” (D-10.0104).

“As the ICI Final Report (p. 85) states: ‘Molesters become very adept at hiding their behavior. Some are less skilled in maintaining secrecy, but most are able to abuse victims known to them for years without being detected. The social skill, charm, and charisma of many perpetrators is used in a dual way, both to gain access to potential victims and to dissuade adults from taking children’s allegations seriously.’”

“The ICI Final Report (pp. 85-86) identifies three predictable ways that the abuser reacts to allegations: denial, minimization, and counter-attack. Research suggests that offenders sometimes ‘minimize their behavior and its impact by admitting to the action but denying the motivation. For example, an abuser might say, “Yes, I did this, but I had no sexual intent.” “Yes, it happened, but I didn’t mean to hurt anyone.”’” (p. 85)

13. On pages A-47, A-51, and A-52 of the administrative commission’s report listed in footnote 2, there is a description of a troubling action by a session in April 1997. In summer 1996, a woman was hired to serve as parish associate serving as minister to middle schoolers for a congregation in Georgia. At the time of her hiring, she sent a letter to the congregation in which she disclosed that her husband was involved in a lawsuit in California alleging “inappropriate behavior with a young person while [her husband] was employed by a church in California.” She also stated: “I have assured the Session that [my husband] will not be involved in the youth ministry programs of the church.” However, when that session was informed that the lawsuit in California had been settled, the session voted unanimously to remove restrictions on [the husband] from participating with his wife in youth activities. Apparently, the session did not ask many questions about the lawsuit, or how many people had accused the individual of misconduct in California.

14. The Archdiocese of St Paul and Minneapolis has been served with public nuisance claims and civil petitions, been charged with criminal child endangerment, and filed for bankruptcy (http://www.mprnews.org/story/2015/06/05/archdiocese-investigation).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-07

Advice on Item 06-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The proposed language of Item 06-07 would amend G-2.0509 and D-10.0401d. These are dealt with below as two separate parts.

Part 1, Recommendation 1 of Item 06-07, proposes to amend the fourth paragraph of G-2.0509. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Recommendation 1 of Item 06-07.

Part 1

The proposed amendment to G-2.0509 addresses the situation where a former minister of the Word and Sacrament wishes to perform work, “whether paid or volunteer, in any congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” but has renounced jurisdiction of the PC(USA) while a disciplinary proceeding was pending against him or her as the accused. This proposed amendment does not address the situation where a former minister renounced jurisdiction and left the PC(USA) when there was not a disciplinary proceeding against the former minister. The amendment also defines a council’s responsibilities to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the renunciation of jurisdiction, determine that the person is suited to the work proposed to be undertaken, and receive concurrence from the next higher council.

223rd General Assembly (2018)
Such a process runs counter to the constitutional understanding of restoration of a member by way of the disciplinary process. The Rules of Discipline are designed as the means, whenever possible, for restoring the relationships between the accuser, the accused, and the wider church community (see D-1.0101, D-12.0000). Renunciation of jurisdiction, by contrast, is self-repudiation of a person’s ordination vows and “carries with it a sense of fracture of relationship and injury to the body of Christ” (218th General Assembly (2008), Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 274, Item 04-21). The language in Recommendation 1 of Item 06-07, however, proposes a path separate from the disciplinary process for the renouncer to be restored to the larger church community. To bypass discipline in pursuit of restoration is to bypass restoration itself.

Further, the proposed language removes the council originally responsible for the disciplinary process from any authority over the path by which the former minister may enter into work. Doing so would place upon the reviewing council (which will likely not be familiar with the prior disciplinary case and may not have access to the case record) an unusually heavy burden of inquiry, assessment, examination, and decision and would in most instances disenfranchise the original council from efforts at restoration. The process is duplicative and cumbersome.

The committee recognizes that the particular circumstances governed by G-2.0509 will vary widely, and offers the following observations for the assembly’s consideration.

A former minister might wish to be engaged in the life of a congregation without becoming a member; might wish to become a member of a congregation; or might seek to restore her or his status in ordered ministry. Each situation poses different issues and each requires a different process and response.

Performing Work Without Becoming a Member or Seeking to Return to Ordered Ministry

All are welcome to participate in the life and worship of this church, (G-1.0403, emphasis added). This statement must be weighed against the seriousness of renouncing jurisdiction of the PC(USA) and refusing to remain subject to church discipline. When a minister of Word and Sacrament has renounced jurisdiction of the PC (USA), that person is no longer subject to the Constitution and, therefore, not subject to church discipline. If a person has renounced jurisdiction, but desires as a nonmember to attend and volunteer within a congregation or other entity subject to the jurisdiction of the PC(USA), that person is not ordinarily subject to church discipline. If the person wishes to serve in a volunteer or paid position that does not have religious qualifications, for example as a groundskeeper, the relationship of the person to the congregation or other entity may and should be handled as a matter of agreement, written contract, and civil employment law. The council or board considering such an agreement or contract should, after a proper investigation, determine whether that person is suited for the proposed work, and specify any conditions that should be imposed on the person in connection with the work.

Becoming a Church Member

When a former minister renounced jurisdiction while a disciplinary case against him or her was pending, and now desires to join a local congregation and resubmit to the jurisdiction and discipline of the PC(USA), the situation is different. By seeking membership, the former minister is agreeing to be subject to the jurisdiction and discipline of the PC(USA). The session should investigate, consult with, and examine the person, and craft appropriate conditions as necessary. Church membership is a session’s decision and therefore does not require concurrence by the next higher council.

Return to Ordered Ministry

When a former minister renounced jurisdiction while a disciplinary case against him or her was pending, and now desires to return to ordered ministry in the PC(USA), additional process is required. Renunciation is not the removal of a person’s status in ordered ministry, but a voluntary abandonment of it. A minister of the Word and Sacrament who renounced jurisdiction may not be restored to ordered ministry and the office of minister of Word and Sacrament because the person voluntarily acted in a manner to negate that status. This is particularly true where the minister renounced while a disciplinary case was pending against him or her and thus refused to be subject to church discipline.

It is possible for a person who renounced jurisdiction to return to ordered ministry as a minister of the Word and Sacrament through one of two ways:

1. A person who has renounced jurisdiction while subject to a disciplinary process and who is a minister in good standing of another denomination may seek to have those credentials recognized under G-2.0505.

2. A person who has renounced jurisdiction while subject to a disciplinary process and who is not a minister in good standing in another denomination or whose credentials are not recognized by the PC(USA), must do so as a member of a congregation through the process of G-2.06.

In both instances, however, the person who was subject to a disciplinary proceeding as the accused at the time of renunciation shall submit to the disciplinary proceeding that was pending at the time the renunciation occurred. In submitting to the disciplinary process (which could include self-accusation [D-10.0401] as well as resumption of the disciplinary case pending at the time of renunciation), the former minister shall not be allowed to assert any defense or objection based on the passage of time, procedural deadlines, the time for bringing charges, or statutes of limitation. By halting the disciplinary process with renunciation, the accused must be deemed to have waived any argument, defense, or objection based on the passage of time or any procedural deadline.

The person shall be subject to any censure imposed in the disciplinary process, which may include temporary or permanent removal from ordered ministry or membership. A censure removing the person from membership or the exercise of ordained office shall prohibit the person from membership or serving as a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the PC(USA) until and unless the person is restored as provided for in D-12.0200.

Any proposed amendments to the fourth paragraph of G-2.0509 should address all of these situations and issues.

Part 2

Recommendation 2 of Item 06-07 would amend D-10.0401d to add words to make clear the section applies only to a former minister of the Word and Sacrament who renounced jurisdiction of the PC(US.) while a disciplinary proceeding was proceeding against him or her as the accused. There is a task force working on a revision to the Rules of Discipline. The amendment to D-10.0401d (Recommendation 2 of Item 06-7) should be referred to it.

Endnotes

1. Shall the fourth paragraph of G-2.0509 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.] “Whenever a former minister of the Word and Sacrament has renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding as the accused, that former minister of the Word and Sacrament shall not be permitted to perform any work, paid or volunteer, in any congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) unless and until the person rejoins the church, comes forward and resubmits to the disciplinary process in the council governing that congregation or entity has thoroughly inquired into the circumstances surrounding the renunciation of jurisdiction, determined that the person is suited to the work proposed to be undertaken, and received concurrence from the next higher council.”

2. Shall D-10.0401d be amended to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.] “For instances where a former minister of the Word and Sacrament who renounced jurisdiction while being accused in a disciplinary case rejoins the church comes forward in self-accusation to undergo a disciplinary process to regain permission to perform work under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (G-2.0509), no time limit from the time of the commission of the alleged offense to the filing of charges shall apply. Charges based on all accusations that had been made by the time that the former minister of the Word and Sacrament had renounced jurisdiction may be brought regardless of the date on which any such offense is alleged to have occurred.”

ACSWP ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-07

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-07—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 06-07.

Pastors who renounce jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U. S. A.) while under investigation short change the process for justice for those who have been harmed by the pastor’s actions. If a pastor seeks to avoid punishment by renouncing jurisdiction and then wishes to return to ministry within any entity under the authority of the Presbyterian Church (U. S. A.), then the process of return or reentry should include facing the charges, regardless of time limit, especially as the purpose of discipline is to restore the bonds of community that have been broken by the violations.

The Advocacy Committee on Women’s Concerns (ACWC) has done extensive study of the inadequacy of PC(USA) policies regarding sexual misconduct and offers both Items 06-19 and 11-09 as ways to be more effective in the adjudication of these situations. While the changes proposed in this item are an improvement, they are nevertheless inadequate. Approving Item 06-19 by this committee and Item 11-09 by the Social Justice committee will ensure that our denomination’s policies on sexual misconduct—and the process of reentry and return—are strengthened.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-07

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve Item 06-07, Recommendation 1., with the action taken on Item 06-09. The ACWC advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to approve Recommendation 2.

Two resolutions before the 223rd General Assembly (2018), Items 06-07 and 06-09, attempt to rectify problems created by amendments made at the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to G-2.0509 regarding the discipline of former ministers who renounce jurisdiction and later want to come back to serve the church. The 2016 amendments created a situation in which the administration of justice was impossible to carry out since ministers who renounce jurisdiction are no longer members of the PC(USA) and the Rules of Discipline therefore no longer apply to them.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises approval of Item 06-09 for its greater clarity of language in amending the Book of Order, G-2.0509. Additionally, ACWC advises approval of the changes to the Book of Order, D-10.0401d in Recommendation 2 of Item 06-07. ACWC also calls attention to Item 06-19, which amends the Book of Order, D-11.0403, so that, rather than sexual misconduct charges needing to be proven beyond a reasonable doubt (the standard of proof in criminal cases), sexual misconduct charges can instead be brought if proven according to the standard of clear and convincing evidence or evidence that the charge is highly likely, or around 75 percent, to be true).

In reviewing these and other related items of business brought before the assembly, ACWC has found this time-consuming, piecemeal, and confusing approach to Book of Order changes regarding sexual misconduct problematic. ACWC therefore strongly advises the approval of Item 11-09, which speaks to the need for a task force to undertake a comprehensive examination of Presbyterian policy, judicial process, and rules of discipline.

While ACWC supports the above changes, they are inadequate. Unless victims have the right to a fair and impartial investigation with all deliberate speed, they will never feel free to put memories of painful events in the past and move on with their lives. Under the current ruling, however, former teaching elders are allowed to rejoin the church but are not required to face accusations and resume the disciplinary process until a time in the future of their own choosing. Thus, a predator can deliberately wait until after key witnesses have moved on with their lives, perhaps even died, or the original evidence is no longer available.

Often sexual predators have charming, persuasive personality traits that allowed them to manipulate and seduce their victims. According to the PC(USA) Independent Committee of Inquiry investigating the actions of missionaries who molested children between 1945 and 1978 while working under the aegis of the American Presbyterian Congo Mission, “the social skill, charm, and charisma of many perpetrators is used in a dual way, both to gain access to potential victims and to dissuade adults from taking children’s allegations seriously.” Because most perpetrators are skilled in “denial, minimization, and counterattack,” they remain capable of manipulating public opinion many years after renouncing jurisdiction.

All sexual abuse is, at the core, an abuse of power. As an advocacy committee for women, ACWC is concerned about gender inequities that leave women within the church vulnerable to sexual misconduct, not only from other clergy, but also to sexual harassment from male members of their congregations. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns also seeks protection for other vulnerable populations—children and youth, developmentally disabled adults, and immigrant night shift workers, for instance—who are more likely to be targets of sexual misconduct.

Too many questions remain: Should there be a time limit placed on how long a former minister can wait to come forward? Is it required that the accused go back to the original body of jurisdiction or is it possible to reenter through an entirely different presbytery? Should a minister who renounces jurisdiction be tried in absentia as is the case with most other professional organizations where investigation into accusations of misconduct continue, regardless of whether the accused quits or chooses to participate or not, in order for these professions to maintain their integrity and keep the public’s trust? It is time to revisit the Book of Order from the perspective of the victims of sexual misconduct to ensure that its provisions result in justice for victims in cases such as this one regarding ministers who have renounced jurisdiction.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-07

Comment on Item 06-07—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

OGA advises that all items, including Item 06-07, amending the Rules of Discipline, be referred to the Rules of Discipline Task Force, which is currently revising the Rules of Discipline as a whole and will report with suggested changes to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

Item 06-08

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-08. See pp. 70, 71.]

Amending G-1.0304 to Allow Congregations to Elect Individuals as Ruling Elders Without Requiring Them to Assume a Seat on the Session—From the Presbytery of Monmouth.

The Presbytery of Monmouth overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-2.0301 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]
“As there were in Old Testament times elders for the government of the people, so the New Testament church provided persons with particular gifts to share in discernment of God’s Spirit and governance of God’s people. Accordingly, congregations should elect persons of wisdom and maturity of faith, having demonstrated skills in leadership and being compassionate in spirit. Ruling elders are so named not because they ‘lord it over’ the congregation (Matt. 20:25), but because they are chosen by the congregation to discern and measure its fidelity to the Word of God, and to strengthen and nurture its faith and life. Ruling elders, together with ministers of the Word and Sacrament, exercise leadership, government, spiritual discernment, and discipline and have responsibilities for the life of a congregation as well as the whole church, including eccumenical relationships. When elected by the congregation, they shall serve faithfully may be individually commissioned or may serve as members of the session. When elected as commissioners to higher councils, ruling elders participate and vote with the same authority as ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and they are eligible for any office.”

Rationale

The Form of Government allows for a certain flexibility with respect to the election and ordination of deacons that it does not presently extend to the election and ordination of ruling elders. Section G-2.0202 allows congregations to elect individuals as deacons who do not serve on a board of deacons. In some cases, this is because a congregation has no board of deacons. In other cases, a congregation may have such a board, but may discern the need, from time-to-time, for a greater number of deacons to engage in the ministries of “compassion, witness, and service” that are the hallmarks of that order (G-2.0201).

Like deacons, ruling elders typically begin their ministry in term-limited service on an elected board, but their ordination does not end with that term of service. Ordination is for life. Ruling elders who have completed a term on the session often continue to serve their congregations in many and varied ways. They may also serve their presbytery, synod, or General Assembly as commissioners or as members of committees and working groups. They do not need to be in active service on their session in order to serve in such ways.

It sometimes occurs that congregations or councils beyond the session need the services of particular individuals as ruling elders, but those individuals are unable to immediately assume a term on the session. For example, the spouse or child of a pastor may decline to be nominated for a seat on the session that is moderated by their family member—thinking it a conflict of interest to do so—but may have much to offer a committee of their presbytery whose membership is limited to those who are ordained.

Situations also arise in which it may be advantageous for mission workers to be ordained as ruling elders prior to deployment, but whose deployment plans make immediate service on their home church’s session problematic.

As the church continues to explore new forms of mission through efforts such as 1,001 New Worshiping Communities and in new immigrant communities, situations sometimes arise in which it would be useful to designate promising leaders for service in fellowships that are not congregations in the usual sense. If such individuals could be received as members of a neighboring congregation, then elected by that congregation as ruling elders to exercise their ministry in the nontraditional community, the community’s work and witness, as well as the work and witness of the presbytery, would be enhanced.

Sessions may also need the services of a skilled individual to serve as their clerk, but unless there is currently a vacancy on the session, there is no way that person can be elected and ordained.

This proposal would not in any way bypass the ordinary means by which a congregation elects gifted members for ordained service. Those identified for service would still need to be nominated by the congregation’s nominating committee, elected by the congregation, examined by the session, and ordained in a service of worship. This path to ordination is, in fact, identical to the way in which deacons may presently be ordained without immediately assuming a seat on the board of deacons—which is why the language of the proposed amendment is identical to that used in G-2.0202.

It should be noted that, although the phrase “may be individually commissioned” may at first sound similar to the concept of “ruling elders commissioned to particular pastoral service” (G-2.1001), this proposed amendment seeks to accomplish something very different.

The effect of this proposed amendment is permissive rather than restrictive. It does not impose the model of individually commissioned ruling elders on any council, but rather provides flexibility for uncommon situations, allowing them to order their ministries in new and varied ways in service to our Lord Jesus Christ.

Concurrences to Item 06-08 from the Presbyteries of de Cristo and Newton.

Concurrence to Item 06-08 from the Synod of the Northeast (with Additional Rationale):

With Item 06-08, the synod concurred with the language of this overture, but added language to the Rationale, which is shown as italic below in paragraphs 3, 5, and 9 from the original Rationale.
The Form of Government allows for a certain flexibility with respect to the election and ordination of deacons that it does not presently extend to the election and ordination of ruling elders. Section G-2.0202 allows congregations to elect individuals as deacons who do not serve on a board of deacons. In some cases, this is because a congregation has no board of deacons. In other cases, a congregation may have such a board, but may discern the need, from time to time, for a greater number of deacons to engage in the ministries of “compassion, witness and service” that are the hallmarks of that order (G-2.0201).

Like deacons, ruling elders typically begin their ministry in term-limited service on an elected board, but their ordination does not end with that term of service. Ordination is for life. Ruling elders who have completed a term on the session often continue to serve their congregations in many and varied ways. They may also serve their presbytery, synod or General Assembly as commissioners or as members of committees and working groups. They do not need to be in active service on their session in order to serve in such ways.

It sometimes occurs that congregations or councils beyond the session need the services of particular individuals as ruling elders, but those individuals are unable to immediately assume a term on the session. For example, the spouse or child of a pastor may decline to be nominated for a seat on the session that is moderated by their family member—thinking it a conflict of interest to do so or the session bylaws or standing rules do not permit it. However, they may have much to offer a committee of their presbytery or a synod council whose membership is limited to those who are ordained.

Situations also arise in which it may be advantageous for mission workers to be ordained as ruling elders prior to deployment, but whose deployment plans make immediate service on their home church’s session problematic.

As the church continues to explore new forms of mission through efforts such as 1,001 New Worshiping Communities and in new immigrant communities, situations sometimes arise in which it would be useful to designate promising leaders for service in fellowships that are not congregations in the usual sense. If such individuals could be received as members of a neighboring congregation, then elected by that congregation as ruling elders to exercise their ministry in the nontraditional community, the community’s work and witness, as well as the work and witness of the presbytery or synod would be enhanced.

Sessions may also need the services of a skilled individual to serve as their clerk, but unless there is currently a vacancy on the session, there is no way that person can be elected and ordained.

This proposal would not in any way bypass the ordinary means by which a congregation elects gifted members for ordained service. Those identified for service would still need to be nominated by the congregation’s nominating committee, elected by the congregation, examined by the session and ordained in a service of worship. This path to ordination is, in fact, identical to the way in which deacons may presently be ordained without immediately assuming a seat on the board of deacons—which is why the language of the proposed amendment is identical to that used in G-2.0202.

It should be noted that, although the phrase “may be individually commissioned” may at first sound similar to the concept of “ruling elders commissioned to particular pastoral service” (G-2.1001), this proposed amendment seeks to accomplish something very different.

The effect of this proposed amendment is permissive rather than restrictive. It does not impose the model of individually commissioned ruling elders on any council in any presbytery or synod, but rather provides flexibility for uncommon situations, allowing them to order their ministries in new and varied ways in service to our Lord Jesus Christ.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-08

Advice on Item 06-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-08.

The overture seeks to amend G-2.0301 to provide for the election of elders to individual commissions without requiring service on the session. The text of the proposed amendment is identical to Item 06-09 submitted to the 222nd General Assembly (2016). That assembly disapproved the overture.

The essential functions of ruling elders identified in G-2.0301 (exercise leadership, government, spiritual discernment, and discipline) are yoked to the practice of governance in the context of councils. The Constitution assumes such experience as a prerequisite to exercise governance in higher councils. Removing this requirement would deemphasize the essential governance function of ruling elders and incorporate other forms of service.

Within the life of a congregation, the only functions beyond elected service as a member of the session that require ordination as a ruling elder are: the authority to administer sacraments when trained and authorized by the presbytery (G-3.0301b); to exercise limited pastoral service when commissioned by the presbytery (G-2.1003), and to serve as commissioners to councils when elected (G-2.0301) [emphasis added]. Sessions already have the authority to commission members to exercise pastoral care, lead worship, and perform a variety of mission functions, none of which requires ordination as a ruling elder.
The rationale cites G-2.0202 as precedent for individual commissioning of ruling elders. However, the individual commissioning of deacons is not comparable to that of ruling elders. Each ordered ministry has its unique functions and requirements. Deacons do not exercise governing responsibility, and service as a deacon is explicitly under the authority and supervision of the session (G-2.0202). Individual commissions may be necessary and helpful in congregations that do not have a board of deacons. Every particular church must have a session (G-3.0101).

Election to service beyond the session introduces other concerns. Election to individual commissions invites congregations to elect ruling elders without function or accountability. Alternatively, election to functions beyond the congregation may lead to applying a different set of gifts and qualifications in the examination of the elder-elect. A person so examined and ordained might then—perhaps wrongly—be presumed to have gifts for service on a session.

Ordaining ruling elders to service beyond the congregation would constitute a substantive change to long-established Presbyterian polity that persons who serve in ordered ministries are elected to serve the body that elects them and are examined accordingly (F-3.0106). To elect and examine an elder for service within a higher council presents issues related to the roles and powers of sessions and higher councils. A request from a higher council may be seen as a directive to which the congregation and session must accede, pressuring a congregation to elect and a session to approve and ordain a person as an elder they believe is not properly qualified for the office. Conversely, the refusal of a congregation to elect or a session to approve and ordain a member at the higher council's request may be interpreted as obstructing the authority of the higher council.

Finally, the use of the term “individually commissioned” creates confusion with a presbytery’s authority to commission ruling elders to particular, limited, pastoral service (G-2.10). Commissions to pastoral functions such as regular preaching of the Word, administration of the sacraments, moderation of sessions, and performance of weddings are governed by the presbytery, not the session.

ACREC agrees with the advice from the ACC. People of color in majority culture churches are at risk of losing voice and given only a title. The full functions of the ordained office need to be preserved.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-08

_Advice & Counsel on Item 06-08—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns._

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 06-08.

The Office of the General Assembly is being asked to offer support in providing options for sessions to ordain elders even if there are no available positions on the session, or if the fellowship does not qualify to have a session under the current church structure.

During this time of lean resources in financial means and with insufficient numbers of people to do church work, both churches and fellowships need creative ways to utilize the resources that they do have. When there is a member who meets the qualifications of a ruling elder, avenues of ordination should be open to them. This will allow a diversity of voices in the leadership of the local church and throughout the denomination. According to PC(USA) research services, women currently make up approximately 57 percent of elders on sessions. While this is an encouraging number, the data is not inclusive of fellowships such as those in the 1,001 Worshiping Communities, and other categories of fellowships.

Congregations in the PC(USA) number just under 9,500. As the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to seek ways to maintain the membership that we do have and to grow our numbers, we need to exercise methods of inclusiveness and not maintain structural systems of exclusiveness.

This item has an impact on gender justice, and women are disproportionately affected here, because, by observation, women make up the greater percentage smaller congregations, of fellowships, and worshipers in poor and immigrant communities.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 06-08

_Comment on Item 06-08—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR)._

Achieving the widest participation and diversity in representation in councils at all levels of the PC(USA) and denominational committees often rests on the ordination of ruling elders to serve on sessions. Unfortunately, this provides a limited pool of leadership to other councils, committees, task forces, and commissions. When the General Assembly Committee on Repr "sentation (GACOR) reviewed data of synod assembly commissioners, 83 percent are ages 46 and over. There are synods that have more diverse age representation than others, however, most still remain in this higher age range.

Should this overture be approved, it ensures that the responsibility of ordination for ruling elders remains in the local congregation while providing opportunities for greater representation and diversity in higher governing councils, committees, task forces, and commissions.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

[The assembly approved Item 06-09 as amended. See pp. 70, 71–72.]

On Amending G-2.0509 Regarding Renunciation of Jurisdiction—From the Presbytery of Central Florida.

The Presbytery of Central Florida overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

1. Shall G-2.0509 be amended by striking the fourth paragraph and adding two new paragraphs to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

   “Whenever a former minister of the Word and Sacrament has renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding as the accused, that former minister of the Word and Sacrament shall not be permitted to perform any work, paid or volunteer, in any congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) unless and until the person rejoins the church, comes forward and resubmits to the disciplinary process.

   “No congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be permitted to employ, for pay or as a volunteer, a former minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder) who has renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding as the accused.

   “Any former minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder) who has renounced jurisdiction and later wants to be restored to office can be restored only through application to the presbytery in which he or she renounced jurisdiction for restoration to office, in which case the provisions of D-10.0401d and D-12.0200 shall apply.”

2. Shall D-10.0401d be amended to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

   [“For instances where a former minister of the Word and Sacrament comes forward in self-accusation to undergo a disciplinary process to regain permission to perform work under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (G-2.0509) who renounced jurisdiction while being accused in a disciplinary case rejoins the church, no time limit from the time of the commission of the alleged offense to the filing of charges shall apply. Charges based on all accusations that had been made by the time that the former minister of the Word and Sacrament had renounced jurisdiction may be brought regardless of the date on which any such offense is alleged to have occurred.”]

3. Refer the question of permitting trials in absentia for those who have renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding to the Office of the General Assembly and Rules of Discipline Task Force to bring a recommendation to the 224th General Assembly (2020).]

Rationale

The amendments to G-2.0509, while intended to protect the church and its entities from ministers who have left the church without submitting to the constitutional process for establishing guilt or innocence and providing for repentance when repentance is needed, have instead created a situation in which the administration of justice, as defined by the amendment, is impossible to carry out. By definition of the section itself, a person who has renounced jurisdiction no longer holds membership in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The preamble to the Rules of Discipline defines the limits of church discipline as follows:

... The purpose of discipline is to honor God by making clear the significance of membership in the body of Christ; to preserve the purity of the church by nourishing the individual within the life of the believing community; to achieve justice and compassion for all participants involved; to correct or restrain wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance and restoration; to uphold the dignity of those who have been harmed by disciplinary offenses; to restore the unity of the church by removing the causes of discord and division; and to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings. ... (D-1.0101, emphasis added)
Since church discipline exists for the welfare of the believing community and applies to members of that community, a former minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder) who has renounced jurisdiction is no longer a member by action of the presbytery that removes his or her name from its rolls. In any complaint, the Rules of Discipline would apply to the congregation or other entity which employed that former minister. Should a former minister of the Word and Sacrament who has renounced jurisdiction wish to be restored to the ordered ministry of minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder), the process for restoration is spelled out in the Rules of Discipline, D-12.0200.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-09

Advice on Item 06-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to answer Item 06-09 with its response to Item 06-07.

Both Items 06-07 and 06-09 would amend G-2.0509 on renunciation of jurisdiction. Each proposes correcting a perceived flaw in the language of the last paragraph of G-2.0509. The approaches are different and do not achieve the same end. There is a comprehensive description of the issues related to renunciation of jurisdiction in the advice on Item 06-07 that will provide helpful background for consideration of this overture as well.

There are particular issues inherent in Item 06-09. The first sentence of Item 06-09 (Part A) addresses the actions of a congregation. The second sentence of Item 06-09 (Part B), addresses actions of a former minister. Each part is discussed separately below.

Part A: The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the first paragraph would place requirements on the congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the PC(USA), rather than on a former minister who has renounced the jurisdiction of this church and, therefore, is no longer subject to its jurisdiction and discipline. Section G-2.0509 is about ministers of the Word and Sacrament and their actions in renouncing jurisdiction. Insertion of requirements for a congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the PC(USA) interrupts the flow and sense of this section.

Part B: The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the second paragraph presents some matters of concern.

- Having struck the requirement for rejoining the church in the existing text of G-2.0509, if approved, the new language would eliminate any requirement for membership before “application” for restoration.

- It would require “application” to the presbytery. “Application” is not defined, nor are there any criteria for considering such an “application.”

- Most significantly, it assumes that renunciation of jurisdiction is equivalent to removal from ordered ministry in judicial process. A person who seeks to be restored after the censure of removal (D-12.0201) has satisfied him or herself to the discipline of the church and satisfied the requirements for restoration. A person who has renounced jurisdiction of this church in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding has avoided the discipline of this church. A 1989 authoritative interpretation specifies that one who renounces jurisdiction and seeks to return to ministry of the Word and Sacrament “should first come again under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a member of a particular church and then initiate the process and procedures found in G-2.06, Preparation for Ministry (formerly G-14.0300, Preparation for the Office of Minister of the Word and Sacrament).” The proposed language of Item 06-09 conflicts with this and would not require membership in the church.

Endnotes

1. “No congregation or entity under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be permitted to employ, for pay or as a volunteer, a former minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder) who has renounced jurisdiction in the midst of a disciplinary proceeding as the accused.”

2. “Any former minister of the Word and Sacrament (teaching elder) who has renounced jurisdiction and later wants to be restored to office can be restored only through application to the presbytery in which he or she renounced jurisdiction for restoration to office in which case the provisions of D-10.0401d and D-12.0200 shall apply.”

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-09

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises the 223rd General Assembly (2016) to approve Item 06-09.
Two resolutions before the 223rd General Assembly (2018), Items 06-07 and 06-09, attempt to rectify problems created by amendments made at the 222nd General Assembly (2016) to G-2.0509 regarding the discipline of former ministers who renounce jurisdiction and later want to come back to serve the church. The 2016 amendments created a situation in which the administration of justice was impossible to carry out since ministers who renounce jurisdiction are no longer members of the PC(USA) and the Rules of Discipline therefore no longer apply to them.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises approval of Item 06-09 for its greater clarity of language in amending the Book of Order, G-2.0509. Additionally, ACWC advises approval of the changes to the Book of Order, D-10.0401d in Recommendation 2 of Item 06-07. ACWC also calls attention to Item 06-19, which amends the Book of Order, D-11.0403, so that, rather than sexual misconduct charges needing to be proven beyond a reasonable doubt (the standard of proof in criminal cases), sexual misconduct charges can instead be brought if proven according to the standard of clear and convincing evidence or evidence that the charge is highly likely, or around 75 percent, to be true).

In reviewing these and other related items of business brought before the assembly, ACWC has found this time-consuming, piecemeal, and confusing approach to Book of Order changes regarding sexual misconduct problematic. ACWC therefore strongly advises the approval of Item 11-09, which speaks to the need for a task force to undertake a comprehensive examination of Presbyterian policy, judicial process, and rules of discipline.

While ACWC supports the above changes, they are inadequate. Unless victims have the right to a fair and impartial investigation with all deliberate speed, they will never feel free to put memories of painful events in the past and move on with their lives. Under the current ruling, however, former teaching elders are allowed to rejoin the church but are not required to face accusations and resume the disciplinary process until a time in the future of their own choosing. Thus, a predator can deliberately wait until after key witnesses have moved on with their lives, perhaps even died, or the original evidence is no longer available.

Often sexual predators have charming, persuasive personality traits that allowed them to manipulate and seduce their victims. According to the PC(USA) Independent Committee of Inquiry investigating the actions of missionaries who molested children between 1945 and 1978 while working under the aegis of the American Presbyterian Congo Mission, “the social skill, charm, and charisma of many perpetrators is used in a dual way, both to gain access to potential victims and to dissuade adults from taking children’s allegations seriously.” Because most perpetrators are skilled in “denial, minimization, and counterattack,” they remain capable of manipulating public opinion many years after renouncing jurisdiction.

All sexual abuse is, at the core, an abuse of power. As an advocacy committee for women, ACWC is concerned about gender inequities that leave women within the church vulnerable to sexual misconduct, not only from other clergy, but also to sexual harassment from male members of their congregations. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns also seeks protection for other vulnerable populations—children and youth, developmentally disabled adults, and immigrant night shift workers, for instance—who are more likely to be targets of sexual misconduct.

Too many questions remain: Should there be a time limit placed on how long a former minister can wait to come forward? Is it required that the accused go back to the original body of jurisdiction or is it possible to reenter through an entirely different presbytery? Should a minister who renounces jurisdiction be tried in absentia as is the case with most other professional organizations where investigation into accusations of misconduct continue, regardless of whether the accused quits or chooses to participate or not, in order for these professions to maintain their integrity and keep the public’s trust? It is time to revisit the Book of Order from the perspective of the victims of sexual misconduct to ensure that its provisions result in justice for victims in cases such as this one regarding ministers who have renounced jurisdiction.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-09

Comment on Item 06-09—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

OGA advises that all items, including Item 06-09, amending the Rules of Discipline, be referred to the Rules of Discipline Task Force, which is currently revising the Rules of Discipline as a whole and will report with suggested changes to the 224th General Assembly (2020).

Item 06-10

[Item 06-10 was answered by the action taken on Item 06-03. See pp. 70, 72.]

The Presbytery of New Castle overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:
1. Amend G-2.11 by adding a new section, G-2.1104 Administrative Personnel Association, to read as follows: amend G-3.0305, as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“G-2.1104 Administrative Personnel Association

“Administrative Personnel Association (APA) certified persons have been called to service within particular churches, governing bodies, and church-related entities. These individuals endeavor to reflect their faith through their work and to strengthen the church through their dedication with the purpose to improve the quality of professionalism and to affirm the ministry of the lay church professional.

“Members of the Administrative Personnel Association (APA) include secretaries, administrative assistants, bookkeepers, and support staff in church-related settings.

“Certification is overseen and granted by the Administrative Personnel Association; the requirements for certification are reported to the appropriate body of the Presbyterian Mission Agency. A formal liaison relationship will be developed between the Presbyterian Mission Agency and the Administrative Personnel Association.

“a. Skills and Training

“Certified Administrative Personnel Administrators shall have skills and training in presbyterian polity, history, spiritual growth and development, office administration, presbyterian theology, General Assembly entities, and other areas of professional development beneficial to the individual member and the church body.

“b. Presbytery Responsibility

“The presbytery shall support the certification process by encouraging church support staff to seek certification and encouraging church sessions and presbytery councils to make continuing education funds and time available to support staff seeking certification.

“The presbytery shall affirm the skill and dedication of these certified persons by providing for recognition at presbytery at the time of their certification and by inviting certified employees to presbytery meetings, granting them the privilege of the floor with voice only at all presbytery meetings, and in the case of Certified Administrative Personnel Association members who are ruling elders, the privilege of voice and vote at all its meetings.

“c. General Assembly Responsibility

“Names of those who have earned certification through the Administrative Personnel Association shall be transmitted to the Presbyterian Mission Agency, which will forward them to the Office of the General Assembly and to the Stated Clerk of the presbyteries in which those persons labor.”

2. Amend G-3.0305 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

G-3.0305 Minutes and Records

“Minutes and other official records of the presbytery are the property of the presbytery, and are subject to the review specified in G-3.0108. The stated clerk is responsible for the preservation of the presbytery’s minutes and records. These records shall include the rolls of the presbytery’s membership and registers of all Certified Christian Educators, Certified Associate Christian Educators, Certified Administrative Personnel Association members, and ruling elders commissioned to particular pastoral service.”

Rationale

The Administrative Personnel Association (APA) has been a part of the Presbyterian church since 1975. Prior to the changes of the Form of Government, there was a healthy relationship between APA and the larger church. However, since the adoption of the new Form of Government, this forty-two-year-old relationship has changed in the following ways:

1. The Administrative Personnel Association continues to struggle with being identified as a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) organization because there is no clear identified line connecting us to the larger church. Even though we are currently recognized as a certified body by the larger church, it still doesn’t identify that we are PC(USA). As a result, this continues to put into question the status of our 501c3.

2. The lack of support and recognition from our leaders within the larger church that do not know or choose not to recognize our existence has also impacted the long-lasting relationship between APA and the PC(USA) church.
06 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH POLITY AND ORDERED MINISTRY

The current reading of the Book of Order is too vague and places us in a category of “other.” Prior to the change, our organization was named and recognized in the Book of Order. We ask that after forty-two years of service to the church that we are named and recognized again in the Book of Order for our support and commitment to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-10

Advice on Item 06-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to answer Item 06-10 with its response to Item 06-03.

Item 06-10 is substantially similar to Item 06-03. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice on the issues arising from both items can be found at Item 06-03.

If the assembly believes that the intent of these overtures is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the language of Item 06-10 is preferable to that of Item 06-03 for two reasons: (1) It specifies the responsibility of the General Assembly to receive and transmit names of certified administrative professionals (noting that the proper avenue for transmission should be through the Office of the General Assembly); and (2) it specifies that those individuals’ names be placed upon the registers of presbyteries.

Item 06-11

[Item 06-11 was approved as amended. See pp. 69, 72.]

On Amending G-2.0401 Regarding the Composition of a Congregational Nominating Committee—From the Presbytery of Grace.

The Presbytery of Grace overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-2.0401 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-2.0401 Election of Ruling Elders and Deacons

“Ruling elders and deacons are men and women elected by the congregation from among its members. The nomination and election of ruling elders and deacons shall express the rich diversity of the congregation’s membership and shall guarantee participation and inclusiveness (F-1.0403). Ruling elders and deacons shall be nominated by a committee elected by the congregation, drawn from and representative of its membership. [Congregations may provide by their own rule for a congregational nominating committee, provided that the minimum size of the committee shall consist of at least three active members of the congregation, and at least one of those three is a shall include at least one ruling elder who is currently serving on the session, and the voting majority is comprised of those not currently serving on the session (members-at-large).] [Congregations may provide by their own rule for a congregational nominating committee. The rule shall meet the following criteria: (1) the minimum size of the committee as specified in the rule shall be at least three persons; (2) at least one member of the committee shall be an elder currently serving on session; and (3) a majority of those persons on the committee who are eligible to vote shall consist of persons not currently serving on session.] The pastor shall serve ex officio and without vote. When elections are held, full opportunity shall always be given to the congregation for nomination from the floor of the congregational meeting by any active member of the congregation. A majority of all the active members present and voting shall be required to elect.”
Rationale

This proposed amendment clarifies the somewhat ambiguous language regarding the nominating committee membership. Is the minimum size three members plus a ruling elder or three members including a ruling elder serving on the session? Does the statement intend to maintain a voting majority of members-at-large as in previous versions of the Form of Government?

The proposed changes set the minimum size of the nominating committee at three members, not including the pastor. This is ideal for small congregations yet also provides flexibility for churches to add more from this minimum. Churches that have a committee larger than the minimum three (and more than the minimum one session elder) are still required to provide a voting majority for members-at-large (those elected by the congregation but not currently serving on the session). The word “voting” simply means that the majority cannot include the pastor, who is without vote. If the intent is to not mandate that the majority be members-at-large, this phrase can easily be removed.

The goal is to provide clarity while preserving the overall permission-giving nature of the Form of Government.

“Ruling elders and deacons are men and women elected by the congregation from among its members. The nomination and election of ruling elders and deacons shall express the rich diversity of the congregation’s membership and shall guarantee participation and inclusiveness (F-1.0403). Ruling elders and deacons shall be nominated by a committee elected by the congregation, drawn from and representative of its membership. [Congregations may provide by their own rule for a congregational nominating committee, provided that the minimum size of the committee shall be at least three persons; (2) at least one member of the committee shall be an elder currently serving on session; and (3) a majority of those persons on the committee who are eligible to vote shall consist of persons not currently serving on session.] The pastor shall serve ex officio and without vote. When elections are held, full opportunity shall always be given to the congregation for nomination from the floor of the congregational meeting by any active member of the congregation. A majority of all the active members present and voting shall be required to elect.”

The Presbytery of Grace presents proposed language to clarify the minimum size of a congregational nominating committee and the requirement that a majority of the voting members of a congregational nominating committee be members-at-large of the congregation.

The proposed amendment provides helpful clarification to G-2.0401. The minimum size of a congregational nominating committee shall be three members, at least one member of which must be a ruling elder in active service on the session. The minimum size of three is appropriate for smaller congregations. There is no maximum size for a congregational nominating committee.

The proposed amendment adds clarity and is consistent with past practice. The majority of a congregational nominating committee should be members-at-large of the congregation, not ruling elders currently serving on the session.

On Amending G-3.0201, Composition and Responsibilities of the Session—From the Presbytery of Southeastern Illinois.

The Presbytery of Southeastern Illinois overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the first paragraph of G-3.0201 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The session is the council for the congregation. It shall be composed of those persons elected by the congregation to active service as ruling elders, together with all installed pastors and associate pastors. All members of the session are entitled to vote. The pastor shall be the moderator of the session, and the session shall not meet without the pastor or designated moderator. In the case of the sickness or absence of the pastor or designated moderator, the pastor or designated moderator may appoint a member of the session to preside, or the session, after having obtained the approval of the pastor or designated moderator, may convene and elect another of its own members to preside. Such an appointment should not be routine and shall only be for a single meeting. If there is no installed pastor, or if the installed pastor is unable to invite another moderator, the presbytery shall make provisions for a moderator. Presbyteries shall provide by rule for moderators when the session is without a moderator for reasons of vacancy or inconvenience.”

Rationale

In many presbyteries, we have a shortage of ministers. We also have many churches that are not served by a minister. We have numerous ministers who give of their time to moderate sessions that they do not serve as pastor. Many congregations and pastors are having conversations about part-time pastoral leadership, bi-vocational pastors, and temporary pastoral leadership. This results in the need for both moderators and flexibility.

While recent changes to Robert’s Rules of Order and the Book of Order allow the use of technology to allow for meetings to occur when members are physically separated, for many churches these are not viable options. We have hearing issues that make phone conferencing difficult. We have issues with technology and its accessibility in many of our congregations. While these options are good, and a step in the right direction, they aren’t practical or even functional for all congregations.

While good planning may reduce the need for this measure, there are emergencies and special circumstances. It is not always possible to reschedule a meeting, and some business that comes before the session comes on very short notice with a short turnaround needed. In those cases, this measure would allow for the work of the church to continue.

This measure is not intended to allow elders to be appointed to moderate the session of the congregation of which they are a member on a routine basis or for an indefinite period of time.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-12

Advice on Item 06-12—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-12.

The overture seeks to expand the constitution to provide for a session member to moderate in the case of a moderator being sick or absent, allowing for a session to convene and elect one of its own members to preside. The rationale of the overture cites emergency and special circumstances where business is time sensitive and seeking the replacement of a moderator through the presbytery rule may not be practical.

The function of the moderator is to be the presence of presbytery and/or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in that council. The moderator's role is to make certain that the session continues as a council according to the Book of Order (Request 92-10, 21-091). The moderator of session, whether the pastor or moderator appointed by the presbytery, represents the whole church. The ruling elders of a church may not circumvent the moderator’s role by calling meetings in a manner contrary to the Book of Order. Each presbytery may provide by rule for these circumstances and it knows the ministry context of its congregations for which particular rules are needed.

The Constitution provides for a remedy (see G-3.0201) for cases where there is no installed pastor to moderate the session, or if the installed pastor is unable to invite another moderator. Emergencies and special circumstances are often those when the presence of the presbytery through its appointed moderator is particularly important. The cases of the sickness or absence of the pastor or designated moderator are ones where the presbytery needs to be involved and informed.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) disapprove Item 06-12.

ACREC appreciates the connectional nature of the PC(USA). Immigrant churches bring cultural contexts that need to be taken into consideration when interpreting the polity of our denomination.

Item 06-13

[The assembly referred Item 06-13 to the task force created in Item 06-NB. See pp. 70, 72.]

On Instructing the Board of Pensions to Include Twelve Weeks of Parental Leave as Part of the Benefits Package—From the Presbytery of Boston.

The Presbytery of Boston overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to instruct the Board of Pensions to include twelve weeks of paid parental leave as part of the benefits package of all employees covered under their plans. This benefit shall be available to all parents of new children, regardless of how the child came to be in the family (including, but not limited to: birth, adoption, and long-term foster placement).

The Board of Pensions shall include in their paid parental leave policy the following:

- Twelve weeks of paid parental leave required for all members of BOP.
- Short-term disability coverage to meet part of the cost of paid leave.
- Financial assistance to help local congregations pay for a supply pastor during leave period.
- Paid leave to be given in the case of miscarriage, still birth, or infant death, up to the full twelve weeks, as needed.
- Timing of the parental leave may be taken concurrently or consecutively if two parents are present.

Rationale

The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental leave policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay without using other forms of paid leave.¹

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) also voted to encourage the six agencies of the General Assembly (Board of Pensions, Foundation, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Presbyterian Mission Agency, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation) to improve their paid parental leave policies in accordance with the advice of the 221st General Assembly (2014).²

As a denomination, we have affirmed the importance of supporting families. However, in practice, congregations are put in the precarious position of choosing between taking care of a new family, or taking care of the financial well-being of the congregation. Many churches cannot afford paid parental leave for their pastor(s) in addition to the cost of pulpit supply, yet many pastors cannot afford to be unpaid when they welcome a new member into the family. These choices are difficult ones that often lead to solutions that leave either the pastor or the congregation neglected, and lack witness to the love God, Parent of us all, has for the world. With the understanding that the Board of Pensions is well-resourced, this overture accepts responsibility for supporting the BOP, and asks that its financial resources be allocated in a way that supports its pastors in small, struggling, or otherwise financially insecure churches.

Without a paid parental leave policy, the PC(USA) forces parents to make a choice between proper health care for themselves and their children, and adequate income to provide for their families. Without a paid parental leave policy, we uphold false narratives that describe men as “bread-winners” and require them to leave the child-raising to their spouses. Without a paid parental leave policy, we continue to uphold antiquated and unequal traditions that not only reinforce gender stereotypes, bringing harm to families and children, but fail to account for the many different kinds of families our denomination lifts up and celebrates.

However, in our Brief Statement of Faith, we confess as a church, that the Holy Spirit

... calls women and men to all ministries of the Church.
In a broken and fearful world
the Spirit gives us courage
to pray without ceasing,
to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior,
to unmask idolatries in Church and culture,
to hear the voices of peoples long silenced,
and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace.
In gratitude to God, empowered by the Spirit,
we strive to serve Christ in our daily tasks
and to live holy and joyful lives,
even as we watch for God’s new heaven and new earth,
praying, “Come, Lord Jesus! (Book of Confessions, 11.4)

With a paid parental leave policy, we have the opportunity to live into this calling of courage in our ministries as pastors and congregations and in our daily lives as we grow our families and support one another in love. With a paid parental leave policy, we unmask the idolatry of unequal practices and are free to live holy and joyful lives—lives wherein all parents can bond with their children without fear of destitution, and the whole community can grow in love.

Supporting Statistics:

The lack of any kind of paid parental leave creates problems for both parents because, while women are medically cleared to return to work after about at least six weeks (if birth went perfectly), the majority of daycares refuse children before six weeks of age. This puts parents in a lose-lose situation as they must risk their health, their child’s care, and their families’ overall well-being if proper paid leave is unavailable. Elsewhere in creation, we observe that God’s creatures naturally keep their offspring close early in life.3 This policy simply acknowledges the health and financial needs of a new or growing family.

Numerous studies have shown the benefits of paid parental leave for both parents and their children. An increase of 10 weeks paid parental leave has been associated with a 10 percent decrease in neonatal and infant mortality rate,4 and parental leave has been shown to be a cost-effective method for improving child health more generally.5 However, the benefits to child health and the decrease in infant mortality are only seen with an increase in paid parental leave.6 Moreover, studies that have analyzed the long-term benefits of paid parental leave have found benefits to women’s mental health in older age and a decrease in high school dropout rates among their children.7

At least half of the contemporary seminary graduates are women, and a large portion of graduates (male and female) are in their child-bearing years.8 Some of these female colleagues must negotiate lower pay to receive adequate paid maternity leave in their calls, if they can get the maternity leave. Some of our female colleagues are being told they must prove they are worth the maternity leave. Many men have no leave guaranteed at all. This is a matter of gender justice in our denomination.
Because women are the ones giving birth, most studies have focused on the relationship between a mother and her child.
However, increases in paid parental leave continue to be met by increases in use of that leave among all parents, allowing parents of all genders to spend more time on their child’s care, which has demonstrated health benefits for the child. Indeed, it has been shown that when fathers—or non-birthing parents—are offered comparable paid parental leave, the length of leave they take increases and their involvement in a child’s care after the leave period increases.9 It is wholly regrettable that non-birthing parents (historically, men) have been denied such crucial bonding and care time with their families for so long. The need for a just paid parental leave policy at this time is urgent as more and more pastors reach retirement age and more and more younger pastors—those in their prime parenting years—seek and negotiate calls.

Across the United States, a mere 14 percent of people have access to paid family leave.10 As stated above, this justice issue looms large for many workers, and the PC(USA) is not currently acting as a faithful leader. In working toward a solution, it is the profound hope of many young pastors that the denomination will see the opportunity to lead the world to a more faithful, loving approach to family leave. With an awareness that the Board of Pensions is currently in good financial shape, many pastors, young and old, believe they will be good stewards of their resources in offering this benefit.

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-13—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

While the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns supports this overture in principle and recommends its approval, we encourage the Board of Pensions to take into consideration that many Presbyterian staff of Color as well as immigrants serve in smaller and/or financially strapped congregations due to systemic racism and underemployment in communities of color. Thus, it is of the utmost importance that the following two provisions included in the overture be established in a fair and just manner:

- Short-term disability coverage to meet part of the cost of paid leave.
- Financial assistance to help local congregations pay for a supply pastor during leave period.

ACWC ADVICE & COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-13

Advice & Counsel on Item 06-13—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 223rd General Assembly (2018) approve Item 06-13.

Quality family leave policies are a clear gender justice concern, as childcare still falls heavily on women. Parental leave policies encourage all parents to participate as directly as women historically have by offering benefits to all parents employed by the PC(USA). As young women and young couples enter into ministry they need to be certain that they will be able to care for and bond with their child(ren) without causing a financial burden to their congregation. If a presbytery has not adopted a specific parental leave policy, churches and ministers are left scrambling to come to agreement on a leave policy, causing stress for both the church and especially for the parents to be.

Churches are not subject to the Family Medical Leave Act of 2003 (FMLA). Currently, the PC(USA) has no written denomination-wide policy regarding parental leave. Although the presbyteries provide guidance on minimal compensation, the role of negotiation for parental leave typically falls to a minister and their congregation. By leaving out this very important detail, young people, especially young mothers, are left fighting to get even one or two weeks paid leave to spend with their newborn. By the PC(USA) providing twelve weeks paid maternity leave, churches and parents will be unburdened of the stress of negotiations, negotiations that many times do not begin until a person is pregnant.

As Christians we are called to care for God’s creation, including all of God’s children. Most daycares, both in-home and centers, do not accept babies under the age of six weeks. In order to properly care for God’s children, parents need to be able to take time off to care for and bond with their baby without worrying about loss of income.
This overture provides the PC(USA) an opportunity to be a leader in providing support to new parents.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 06-13

Comment on Item 06-13—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

The Board of Pensions (Board) is an agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), established by the church under a separate civil charter as the corporate body legally responsible for designing and administering the Benefits Plan and the Assistance and Education programs for the ministers and lay employees of PC(USA) churches and associated employers. The Board is required by law and its governance and plan documents to administer these programs and invest their funds for the sole and exclusive benefit of the members and their beneficiaries. The Board is exclusively managed and controlled by its board of directors who are elected by the General Assembly. The Board maintains a close cooperative relationship with the other General Assembly agencies.

The Board supports family leave and urges all employers within the PC(USA) family to adopt appropriate family leave policies as defined by the General Assembly. The General Assembly has addressed this issue in two policy statements. The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental leave policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay. The 222nd General Assembly (2016) acted to urge “the six agencies of the General Assembly to evaluate leaves of absence, considering at least six weeks paid leave as a minimum for new parents for the birth or adoption of, or to care for, a child or other family member, such as seniors or those who require health assistance” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 292). In response to the 2016 action, the Board of Pensions reviewed its employment policies and is in full compliance with the General Assembly resolution.

While the Board fully supports the underlying values of Items 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, and 06-17, the Board advises the disapproval of all four items, due to numerous practical and technical concerns. Two previous General Assemblies addressed recommendations on this subject and those actions should be ratified and affirmed.

Comment Specific to Item 06-13, On Instructing the Board of Pensions to Include Twelve Weeks of Parental Leave as Part of the Benefits Package

This overture recommends that the General Assembly instruct the Board of Pensions to provide twelve weeks of paid parental leave to all members of the Benefits Plan.

First, the issue of parental leave is an employer-based decision and must remain so for legal and practical reasons. The Board does not make human resource policy for the church or the church-related employers. The 221st General Assembly (2014) and 222nd General Assembly (2016) addressed the church’s human resource policy on parental and family leave and has defined a position to be urged for all bodies of the church. The Board is not the employer of any church workers other than its own staff and has no mechanism to pay employees of churches and other PC(USA) employers who enroll their ministers and lay employees in the Benefits Plan. Each congregation and other church employer is responsible for salary, wages, benefits, and leave policies.

Second, the concept of mandating benefits for all employees is in direct contradiction to the concept of a menu-based plan that allows each congregation or other employer to structure its employment policies and benefits to best fit its context. The Board is actively working to develop solutions to the affordability of medical and retirement benefits for church employers so that broader coverage will be provided to all church employees. The Board introduced benefit choice flexibility beginning in January 2017, following conversations with thousands of Presbyterians that led to a complete restructuring of the Benefits Plan. This innovation has resulted in 19 percent growth in employees receiving benefits from the Board, the first growth in a generation. Regrettably, and notwithstanding these changes to the Benefits Plan programs, many churches and other church-related employers do not enroll their employees for benefits with the Board of Pensions, so the benefits proposed in the overture does not provide a universal solution to the paid leave concern for many church employees.

Third, earlier General Assembly actions addressed “family leave,” not simply “parental leave.” The former is significantly more expensive across an entire population as it includes care for aging parents and others and not simply birth, adoption, or long-term placement. Current General Assembly policy urges all employers to provide family leave, not merely parental leave, as the standard.

Finally, there is no source of funds within the Board to provide for the payment of this type of family leave. All Board funds have designated purposes, none of which include this use. While the Board does not believe this overture is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the Board decide to implement such a plan based on the request in this Overture, it would require charging dues annually to provide a funding source. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000 and the median lay income of $41,000, the cost of a family leave program would exceed $10 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of employees (ministers and laity) utilized the benefit.
Comment Specific to Item 06-14, On Amending G-2.0804, “Terms of Call,” to Include Paid Family Leave

As written, this overture has no impact on the Board. No mention is made as to source of funding and the Board is not mentioned in implementation. In which case the Board defers to the General Assembly to take whatever action it deems appropriate for congregations’ terms of call for installed pastors.

If the intent of the overture (in contrast to the words) is for the Board to provide a family leave benefit, there is no source of funds held by the Board to provide for the payments this overture contemplates. All Board funds have designated purposes, none of which include this salary replacement benefit.

While the Board does not believe this overture is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the General Assembly request the Board to implement such a plan based on the request in the overture, it would need to charge annual dues to fund the benefit. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000, the cost of such a program would exceed $5 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of ministers utilized the benefit.

Finally, the Board would like to share a practical concern. The Board has seen clearly that economics drive behavior in the congregation. The change to a menu-based plan that allows congregations to structure what is appropriate for their context has led to a substantial increase in participation in the Benefits Plan. Conversely, the number of new minister members in the plan continues to decline. While the Board supports the underlying values of the overture, employing organizations should retain the right of setting terms of call that are better suited for the needs of their situation and employees.

Comment Specific to Item 06-15, On Amending G-3.0303 to Include BOP Participation and Paid Family Leave

This overture recommends an amendment to the Book of Order to mandate minimum compensation terms for Christian educators and associate Christian educators that include participation in the Board of Pensions and paid family leave of at least twelve weeks. The Rationale only discusses the paid family leave part of the proposed amendment to the Book of Order. No mention is made as to what participation in Board of Pensions benefits programs is sought.

The Board’s response to the recommendation to mandate paid family leave of at least twelve weeks is addressed in response to Item 06-14 and the Board’s introductory comments.

While the Board does not believe a paid family leave is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the General Assembly request the Board to implement such a plan based on the request in this overture, it would need to charge annual dues to fund the benefit. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000, the cost of such a program would exceed $5 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of ministers utilized the benefit. Adding certified Christian educators would increase that cost.

With respect to the overture’s recommendation to add “Board of Pensions participation,” the Board fully supports universal medical and retirement benefits coverage of all church workers and is actively working on developing solutions to their affordability with the hope of encouraging broader participation by the church’s employers. Employee benefits are human resource decisions to be determined by each church or other church-related employer based on the financial wherewithal of the employer and the needs of their employees.

The Board introduced benefit choice flexibility beginning in January 2017, following conversations with thousands of Presbyterians that led to a complete restructuring of the Benefits Plan. Since January 2017, the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provides two participation options for churches: Pastor’s Participation, a bundled benefits program consisting of enrollment in the core Benefits Plan programs: the defined benefit pension, PPO medical, death, and disability plan, which is required for installed pastors and voluntary for all other ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and a menu-based program of benefits selected by the employer and subsidized at levels determined by the employer, subject to certain plan minimums. The menu-based participation options allow an employer to offer its non-installed ministers and lay employees a benefits program consisting of as little as elective deferrals to the 403(b)(9) Retirement Savings Plan to full benefits coverage for the defined benefits pension, PPO medical, and death and disability plan coverage equivalent to Pastor’s Participation.

The Board’s flexibility initiative has resulted in 19 percent growth in employees receiving benefits from the Board, the first growth in a generation. This experience leads the Board to conclude that the concept of mandating specific benefits packages for all employees is not realistic for church employers at this time.

If the intent of the overture is to mandate the equivalent of Pastor’s Participation benefits and dues, this must be defined as such and other questions are raised. The Board offers several additional programs for which participation is limited to ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Is the intent of this overture to expand participation in those programs to Christian educators? What other components of ministers’ programs are sought? Would CREDO be included (at a cost of $5,000 per person per conference)? How would median pension minimums and accruals be defined? What about educational debt relief (up to $25,000 per minister)? Would we include access to these benefits in non-parish settings with review by the presbytery? Would this proposal include qualification for Pathways to Renewal at $7,000 per person per year? Who should pay for the dues increase to subsidize this proposal because Christian educators as a group have a lower median effective salary than ministers?
If the intent of the overture is to mandate that certified Christian educators have the privileges and responsibilities of ministers of Word and Sacrament, these questions inevitably shift into ecclesiastical decisions about the roles in ordered ministry.

Without defining what is meant by “Board of Pensions participation” or otherwise specifying the type of participation for Christian educators in the Benefits Plan programs, the projected cost of the overture for employers of Christian educators cannot be ascertained.

The Board supports a response to the overture that encourages all church employers to participate in the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) programs and to consider offering menu-based coverage options, but allows each congregation or other employer to structure its employment policies and benefits to best fit its context.

Comment Specific to Item 06-17, On Establishing Minimum Guidelines for Paid Parental Leave for All Staff Throughout the Presbyterian Church (USA)

As noted in the Board’s other comments on the subject of parental leave, the Board defers to the 221st General Assembly (2014) and 222nd General Assembly (2016) policies, particularly the broader reference to family leave rather than parental leave. Current General Assembly policy urges all employers to provide family leave, not merely parental leave, as the standard. Family leave is significantly more expensive across an entire population as it includes care for aging parents and others and not simply birth, adoption, or long-term placement.

While the Board takes no position on this overture as it relates to the councils of the church, the Board is compelled to comment on the statements in the Rationale that the denomination should ask the Board of Pensions to establish a new benefit for parental leave. The specific comment to Item 06-013 addresses the Board’s concerns. In summary, the Board is not the employer of any church workers other than its own staff and has no mechanism to pay employees of congregations; each congregation is responsible for its own salary, wages, benefits, and leave policies. The Board estimates that fewer than 10 percent of eligible employees are members of the Benefits Plan. If a church or other church-related employer is unable to afford to provide its employees with Benefits Plan coverage under the new flexible menu-based option, it is unlikely that it would also be able to afford a family leave benefit. Thus, a mandate for Plan members would not in any way provide the universal coverage that the overture seeks.

Comment on Item 6-20, A Resolution to Require and Expand Family Leave Policies

The Board of Pensions supports family leave and urges all employers within the PC(USA) family to adopt appropriate family leave policies as defined by the General Assembly. The General Assembly has addressed this issue in two policy statements. The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental level policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay. The 222nd General Assembly (2016), in Item 05-10, acted to urge “the six agencies of the General Assembly to evaluate leaves of absence, considering at least six weeks paid leave as a minimum for new parents for the birth or adoption of, or to care for, a child or other family member, such as seniors or those who require health assistance” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 292). For this 223rd General Assembly (2018), the Board of Pensions responded to Item 05-10 and reported the employment policies were reviewed, and are in full compliance with the General Assembly resolution.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 06-13

Comment on Item 06-13—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) acknowledges that the procedures of employment matter. Unfortunately, in the area of parental and family leave, the denominational instruction is not as clear. The committee continues to support actions from the 221st and 222nd General Assemblies (2014) and (2016) concerning the suggested family leave policies that, due to the PC(USA) governance structure, are often left at the discretion of the governing bodies that are responsible for employment. Often governing bodies and individual congregations do not have parental/family leave policies in place and must do so if and when the case arises (putting the individual requesting the leave in a precarious position). This can result in decision-making that focuses on the financial cost of the leave rather than the care of the leader and family. A PC(USA) policy would provide the framework for individuals needing parental or family leave. Committees on representation at the presbytery and synod levels or the committees tasked with such work should serve as a resource to their governing bodies concerning employment practices.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).
Item 06-14

[The assembly referred Item 06-14 to the task force created in Item 06-NB. See pp. 70, 72.]

The Presbytery of Boston overtures the General Assembly to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Amend the last sentence of G-2.0804 to read as follows: (Text to be added is shown as italics.)

“The call shall include participation in the benefits plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including both pension and medical coverage, or any successor plan approved by the General Assembly, and paid family leave of at least twelve weeks.”

Rationale

The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental leave policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay without using other forms of paid leave.1

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) also voted to encourage the six agencies of the General Assembly (Board of Pensions, Foundation, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Presbyterian Mission Agency, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation) to improve their paid parental leave policies in accordance with the advice of the 221st General Assembly (2014).2

As a denomination, we have affirmed the importance of supporting families. However, in practice, congregations are put in the precarious position of choosing between taking care of a new family, or taking care of the financial well-being of the congregation. Many churches cannot afford paid parental leave for their pastor(s) in addition to the cost of pulpit supply, yet many pastors cannot afford to be unpaid when they welcome a new member into the family. These choices are difficult ones that often lead to solutions which leave either the pastor or the congregation neglected, and lack witness to the love God, Parent of us all, has for the world.

Without a paid parental leave policy, the PC(USA) forces parents to make a choice between proper health-care for themselves and their children, and adequate income to provide for their families. Without a paid parental leave policy, we uphold false narratives that describe men as “bread-winners” and require them to leave the child-raising to their spouses. Without a paid parental leave policy, we continue to uphold antiquated and unequal traditions that not only reinforce gender stereotypes, bringing harm to families and children, but fail to account for the many different kinds of families our denomination lifts up and celebrates.

However, in our Brief Statement of Faith, we confess as a church, that the Holy Spirit...

In a broken and fearful world
the Spirit gives us courage
  to pray without ceasing,
  to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior,
  to unmask idolatries in Church and culture,
  to hear the voices of peoples long silenced,
  and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace.
In gratitude to God, empowered by the Spirit,
we strive to serve Christ in our daily tasks
  and to live holy and joyful lives,
even as we watch for God’s new heaven and new earth,
  praying, “Come, Lord Jesus!” (Book of Confessions, 11.4)

With a paid parental leave policy, we have the opportunity to live into this calling of courage in our ministries as pastors and congregations and in our daily lives as we grow our families and support one another in love. With a paid parental leave policy, we unmask the idolatry of unequal practices and are free to live holy and joyful lives—lives wherein all parents can bond with their children without fear of destitution, and the whole community can grow in love.

Supporting Statistics:

The lack of any kind of paid parental leave creates problems for both parents because, while women are medically cleared to return to work after about at least six weeks (if birth went perfectly), the majority of daycares refuse children before six weeks of age. This puts parents in a lose-lose situation as they must risk their health, their child’s care, and their families’ overall well-being if proper paid leave is unavailable. Elsewhere in creation, we observe that God’s creatures naturally keep their offspring close early in life.3 This policy simply acknowledges the health and financial needs of a new or growing family.
Numerous studies have shown the benefits of paid parental leave for both parents and their children. An increase of 10 weeks paid maternal leave has been associated with a 10 percent decrease in neonatal and infant mortality rate, and parental leave has been shown to be a cost-effective method for improving child health more generally. However, the benefits to child health and the decrease in infant mortality are only seen with an increase in paid parental leave. Moreover, studies that have analyzed the long-term benefits of paid parental leave have found benefits to women’s mental health in older age and a decrease in high school dropout rates among their children.

At least half of the contemporary seminary graduates are women, and a large portion of graduates (male and female) are in their child-bearing years. Some of these female colleagues must negotiate lower pay to receive adequate paid maternity leave in their calls, if they can get the maternity leave. Some of our female colleagues are being told they must prove they are worth the maternity leave. Many men have no leave guaranteed at all. This is a matter of gender justice in our denomination. Because women are the ones giving birth, most studies have focused on the relationship between a mother and her child. However, increases in paid parental leave continue to be met by increases in use of that leave among all parents, allowing parents of all genders to spend more time on their child’s care, which has demonstrated health benefits for the child. Indeed, it has been shown that when fathers—or non-birthing parents—are offered comparable paid parental leave, the length of leave they take increases and their involvement in a child’s care after the leave period increases. It is wholly regrettable that non-birthing parents (historically, men) have been denied such crucial bonding and care time with their families for so long. The need for a just paid parental leave policy at this time is urgent as more and more pastors reach retirement age and more and more younger pastors—those in their prime parenting years—seek and negotiate calls.

Across the United States, a mere 14 percent of people have access to paid family leave. As stated above, this justice issue looms large for many workers, and the PC(USA) is not currently acting as a faithful leader. In working toward a solution, it is the profound hope of many young pastors that the denomination will see the opportunity to lead the world to a more faithful, loving approach to family leave.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-14

Advice on Item 06-14—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to disapprove Item 06-14.

The recommendation for disapproval by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution is not an argument against “paid family leave of at least twelve weeks,” but merely that it is not necessary to write this into the Constitution to accomplish what Item 06-14 desires, that terms of call include this provision.

Inserting this specific requirement into the Constitution reverses the direction of the current Form of Government, which illuminates practices required by the Constitution but leaves to councils their specific implementation. The proposed amendments (Item 06-14 and Item 06-15) are attached to the constitutional requirement for presbyteries to establish minimum terms of call.
The specific implementation of these terms of call has been left to the presbyteries to determine. Presbyteries already have the authority to include paid family leave in their requirements for terms of call. “Councils possess whatever administrative authority is necessary to give effect to duties and powers assigned by the Constitution of the church” (F-3.0209).

The Form of Government requires each council to develop a manual of administrative operations. This manual should include personnel policies, where matters like paid time off are best defined. The Constitution envisions these policies and minimums for terms of call being developed in consultation with sessions, giving attention to any guidance offered by the synod or General Assembly (such as the call by previous General Assemblies to provide paid family leave). Through this process, presbyteries fulfill the expectation of the Constitution “concerning mission, budget, staffing and fair employment practices, and matters of equitable compensation” (G-3.0106, emphasis added).

In previous versions of the Form of Government, a form for terms of call was defined that specifically listed what was to be included. These specifics were removed when Chapter 14 of the old Form of Government was revised in the first decade of the 2000s. The current Form of Government further refined this approach. The only specific requirement about terms of call that remains in the Constitution is the mandate for participation by installed ministers in the benefits plan of the denomination.

Presbyteries have various provisions in terms of call packages beyond basic compensation, benefits, and allowances, such as sabbatical leave and paid time off for service to higher councils. Starting to list specific items in terms of call packages within the Constitution will be an invitation to begin to insert other items that are perceived to be missing from the list, but likewise not necessary to be included for them to be enacted.

The preferred way to accomplish the intent of Item 06-14 and Item 06-15 is for presbyteries, through their established procedures, to include paid family leave in the minimum terms of call that accomplish the above-highlighted constitutional goals.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 06-14

Comment on Item 06-14—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

The Board of Pensions (Board) is an agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), established by the church under a separate civil charter as the corporate body legally responsible for designing and administering the Benefits Plan and the Assistance and Education programs for the ministers and lay employees of PC(USA) churches and associated employers. The Board is required by law and its governance and plan documents to administer these programs and invest their funds for the sole and exclusive benefit of the members and their beneficiaries. The Board is exclusively managed and controlled by its board of directors who are elected by the General Assembly. The Board maintains a close cooperative relationship with the other General Assembly agencies.

The Board supports family leave and urges all employers within the PC(USA) family to adopt appropriate family leave policies as defined by the General Assembly. The General Assembly has addressed this issue in two policy statements. The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental level policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay. The 222nd General Assembly (2016) acted to urge “the six agencies of the General Assembly to evaluate leaves of absence, considering at least six weeks paid leave as a minimum for new parents for the birth or adoption of, or to care for, a child or other family member, such as seniors or those who require health assistance” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 292). In response to the 2016 action, the Board of Pensions reviewed its employment policies and is in full compliance with the General Assembly resolution.

While the Board fully supports the underlying values of Items 06-13, 06-14, 06-15, and 06-17, the Board advises the disapproval of all four items, due to numerous practical and technical concerns. Two previous General Assemblies addressed recommendations on this subject and those actions should be ratified and affirmed.
This overture recommends that the General Assembly instruct the Board of Pensions to provide twelve weeks of paid parental leave to all members of the Benefits Plan.

First, the issue of parental leave is an employer-based decision and must remain so for legal and practical reasons. The Board does not make human resource policy for the church or the church-related employers. The 221st General Assembly (2014) and 222nd General Assembly (2016) addressed the church’s human resource policy on parental and family leave and has defined a position to be urged for all bodies of the church. The Board is not the employer of any church workers other than its own staff and has no mechanism to pay employees of churches and other PC(USA) employers who enroll their ministers and lay employees in the Benefits Plan. Each congregation and other church employer is responsible for salary, wages, benefits, and leave policies.

Second, the concept of mandating benefits for all employees is in direct contradiction to the concept of a menu based plan that allows each congregation or other employer to structure its employment policies and benefits to best fit its context. The Board is actively working to develop solutions to the affordability of medical and retirement benefits for church employers so that broader coverage will be provided to all church employees. The Board introduced benefit choice flexibility beginning in January 2017, following conversations with thousands of Presbyterians that led to a complete restructuring of the Benefits Plan. This innovation has resulted in 19 percent growth in employees receiving benefits from the Board, the first growth in a generation. Regrettably, and notwithstanding these changes to the Benefits Plan programs, many churches and other church-related employers do not enroll their employees for benefits with the Board of Pensions, so the benefits proposed in the overture does not provide a universal solution to the paid leave concern for many church employees.

Third, earlier General Assembly actions addressed “family leave,” not simply “parental leave.” The former is significantly more expensive across an entire population as it includes care for aging parents and others and not simply birth, adoption, or long-term placement. Current General Assembly policy urges all employers to provide family leave, not merely parental leave, as the standard.

Finally, there is no source of funds within the Board to provide for the payment of this type of family leave. All Board funds have designated purposes, none of which include this use. While the Board does not believe this overture is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the Board decide to implement such a plan based on the request in this Overture, it would require charging dues annually to provide a funding source. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000 and the median lay income of $41,000, the cost of a family leave program would exceed $10 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of employees (ministers and laity) utilized the benefit.

Comment Specific to Item 06-14, On Amending G-2.0804, “Terms of Call,” to Include Paid Family Leave

As written, this overture has no impact on the Board. No mention is made as to source of funding and the Board is not mentioned in implementation. In which case the Board defers to the General Assembly to take whatever action it deems appropriate for congregations’ terms of call for installed pastors.

If the intent of the overture (in contrast to the words) is for the Board to provide a family leave benefit, there is no source of funds held by the Board to provide for the payments this overture contemplates. All Board funds have designated purposes, none of which include this salary replacement benefit.

While the Board does not believe this overture is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the General Assembly request the Board to implement such a plan based on the request in the overture, it would need to charge annual due to fund the benefit. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000, the cost of such a program would exceed $5 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of ministers utilized the benefit.

Finally, the Board would like to share a practical concern. The Board has seen clearly that economics drive behavior in the congregation. The change to a menu-based plan that allows congregations to structure what is appropriate for their context has led to a substantial increase in participation in the Benefits Plan. Conversely, the number of new minister members in the plan continues to decline. While the Board supports the underlying values of the overture, employing organizations should retain the right of setting terms of call that are better suited for the needs of their situation and employees.

Comment Specific to Item 06-15, On Amending G-3.0303 to Include BOP Participation and Paid Family Leave

This overture recommends an amendment to the Book of Order to mandate minimum compensation terms for Christian educators and associate Christian educators that include participation in the Board of Pensions and paid family leave of at least twelve weeks. The Rationale only discusses the paid family leave part of the proposed amendment to the Book of Order. No mention is made as to what participation in Board of Pensions benefits programs is sought.
The Board’s response to the recommendation to mandate paid family leave of at least twelve weeks is addressed in response to Item 06-14 and the Board’s introductory comments.

While the Board does not believe a paid family leave is rightly within the scope of its charge, should the General Assembly request the Board to implement such a plan based on the request in this overture, it would need to charge annual dues to fund the benefit. Based on median pastors’ income of $58,000, the cost of such a program would exceed $5 million annually if only between 4–5 percent of ministers utilized the benefit. Adding certified Christian educators would increase that cost.

With respect to the overture’s recommendation to add “Board of Pensions participation,” the Board fully supports universal medical and retirement benefits coverage of all church workers and is actively working on developing solutions to their affordability with the hope of encouraging broader participation by the church’s employers. Employee benefits are human resource decisions to be determined by each church or other church-related employer based on the financial wherewithal of the employer and the needs of their employees.

The Board introduced benefit choice flexibility beginning in January 2017, following conversations with thousands of Presbyterians that led to a complete restructuring of the Benefits Plan. Since January 2017, the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provides two participation options for churches: Pastor’s Participation, a bundled benefits program consisting of enrollment in the core Benefits Plan programs: the defined benefit pension, PPO medical, death, and disability plan, which is required for installed pastors and voluntary for all other ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and a menu-based program of benefits selected by the employer and subsidized at levels determined by the employer, subject to certain plan minimums. The menu-based participation options allow an employer to offer its non-installed ministers and lay employees a benefits program consisting of as little as elective deferrals to the 403(b)(9) Retirement Savings Plan to full benefits coverage for the defined benefits pension, PPO medical, and death and disability plan coverage equivalent to Pastor’s Participation.

The Board’s flexibility initiative has resulted in 19 percent growth in employees receiving benefits from the Board, the first growth in a generation. This experience leads the Board to conclude that the concept of mandating specific benefits packages for all employees is not realistic for church employers at this time.

If the intent of the overture is to mandate the equivalent of Pastor’s Participation benefits and dues, this must be defined as such and other questions are raised. The Board offers several additional programs for which participation is limited to ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Is the intent of this overture to expand participation in those programs to Christian educators? What other components of ministers’ programs are sought? Would CREDO be included (at a cost of $5,000 per person per conference). How would median pension minimums and accruals be defined? What about educational debt relief (up to $25,000 per minister)? Would we include access to these benefits in non-parish settings with review by the presbytery? Would this proposal include qualification for Pathways to Renewal at $7,000 per person per year? Who should pay for the dues increase to subsidize this proposal because Christian educators as a group have a lower median effective salary than ministers? If the intent of the overture is to mandate that certified Christian educators have the privileges and responsibilities of ministers of Word and Sacrament, these questions inevitably shift into ecclesiastical decisions about the roles in ordered ministry.

Without defining what is meant by “Board of Pensions participation” or otherwise specifying the type of participation for Christian educators in the Benefits Plan programs, the projected cost of the overture for employers of Christian educators cannot be ascertained.

The Board supports a response to the overture that encourages all church employers to participate in the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) programs and to consider offering menu-based coverage options, but allows each congregation or other employer to structure its employment policies and benefits to best fit its context.

Comment Specific to Item 06-17, On Establishing Minimum Guidelines for Paid Parental Leave for All Staff Throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

As noted in the Board’s other comments on the subject of parental leave, the Board defers to the 221st General Assembly (2014) and 222nd General Assembly (2016) policies, particularly the broader reference to family leave rather than parental leave. Current General Assembly policy urges all employers to provide family leave, not merely parental leave, as the standard. Family leave is significantly more expensive across an entire population as it includes care for aging parents and others and not simply birth, adoption, or long-term placement.

While the Board takes no position on this overture as it relates to the councils of the church, the Board is compelled to comment on the statements in the Rationale that the denomination should ask the Board of Pensions to establish a new benefit for parental leave. The specific comment to Item 06-013 addresses the Board’s concerns. In summary, the Board is not the employer of any church workers other than its own staff and has no mechanism to pay employees of congregations; each congregation is responsible for its own salary, wages, benefits, and leave policies. The Board estimates that fewer than 10 percent of eligible employees are members of the Benefits Plan. If a church or other church-related employer is unable to afford to provide its employees with Benefits Plan coverage under the new flexible menu-based option, it is unlikely that it would also be able to afford a family leave benefit. Thus, a mandate for Plan members would not in any way provide the universal coverage that the overture seeks.

Comment on Item 6-20, A Resolution to Require and Expand Family Leave Policies

The Board of Pensions supports family leave and urges all employers within the PC(USA) family to adopt appropriate family leave policies as defined by the General Assembly. The General Assembly has addressed this issue in two policy statements. The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental level policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay. The 222nd General Assembly (2016), in Item 05-10, acted to urge “the six agencies of the General Assembly to evaluate leaves of absence, considering at least six weeks paid leave as a minimum for new parents for the birth or adoption of, or to care for, a child or other family member, such as seniors or those who require health assistance” (Minutes, 2016, Part I, p. 292). For this 223rd General Assembly (2018), the Board of Pensions responded to Item 05-10 and reported the employment policies were reviewed, and are in full compliance with the General Assembly resolution.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 06-14

Comment on Item 06-14—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR).

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) acknowledges that the procedures of employment matter. Unfortunately, in the area of parental and family leave, the denominational instruction is not as clear. The committee continues to support actions from the 221st and 222nd General Assemblies (2014) and (2016) concerning the suggested family leave policies that, due to the PC(USA) governance structure, are often left at the discretion of the governing bodies that are responsible for employment. Often governing bodies and individual congregations do not have parental/family leave policies in place and must do so if and when the case arises (putting the individual requesting the leave in a precarious position). This can result in decision-making that focuses on the financial cost of the leave rather than the care of the leader and family. A PC(USA) policy would provide the framework for individuals needing parental or family leave. Committees on representation at the presbytery and synod levels or the committees tasked with such work should serve as a resource to their governing bodies concerning employment practices.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of fourteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from members and elders, ruling and teaching from across the church in accordance with F-1.0403. Its constitutional mandate and central functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

Item 06-15

[The assembly referred Item 06-15 to the task force created in Item 06-NB. See pp. 70, 72.]

On Amending G-3.0303 to Include BOP Participation and Paid Family Leave—From the Presbytery of Boston.

The Presbytery of Boston overtures the 223rd General Assembly (2018) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Amend G-3.0303c to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“c. establish minimum compensation standards for pastoral calls and Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the presbytery, to include Board of Pensions participation and paid family leave of at least twelve weeks;”

Rationale

The 221st General Assembly (2014) encouraged presbyteries and churches to create parental leave policies with the minimum of six weeks and 100 percent pay without using other forms of paid leave.¹

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) also voted to encourage the six agencies of the General Assembly (Board of Pensions, Foundation, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Presbyterian Mission Agency, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation) to improve their paid parental leave policies in accordance with the advice of the 221st General Assembly (2014).²

As a denomination, we have affirmed the importance of supporting families. However, in practice, congregations are put in the precarious position of choosing between taking care of a new family, or taking care of the financial well-being of the congregation. Many churches cannot afford paid parental leave for their pastor(s) in addition to the cost of pulpit supply, yet many pastors cannot afford to be unpaid when they welcome a new member into the family. These choices are difficult ones... that often lead to solutions which leave either the pastor or the congregation neglected, and lack witness to the love God, Parent of us all, has for the world.

Without a paid parental leave policy, the PC(USA) forces parents to make a choice between proper health care for themselves and their children, and adequate income to provide for their families. Without a paid parental leave policy, we uphold false narratives that describe men as “bread-winners” and require them to leave the child-raising to their spouses. Without a paid parental leave policy, we continue to uphold antiquated and unequal traditions that not only reinforce gender stereotypes, bringing harm to families and children, but fail to account for the many different kinds of families our denomination lifts up and celebrates.

However, in our Brief Statement of Faith, we confess as a church, that the Holy Spirit

... calls women and men to all ministries of the Church.

In a broken and fearful world
the Spirit gives us courage
to pray without ceasing,
to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior,
to unmask idolatries in Church and culture,
to hear the voices of peoples long silenced,
and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace.

In gratitude to God, empowered by the Spirit,
we strive to serve Christ in our daily tasks
and to live holy and joyful lives,
even as we watch for God’s new heaven and new earth,
praying, “Come, Lord Jesus! (Book of Confessions, 11.4)

With a paid parental leave policy, we have the opportunity to live into this calling of courage in our ministries as pastors and congregations and in our daily lives as we grow our families and support one another in love. With a paid parental leave policy, we unmask the idolatry of unequal practices and are free to live holy and joyful lives—lives wherein all parents can bond with their children without fear of destitution, and the whole community can grow in love.
